CAPULET: Juliette! . . . ma fille! . . . Ah! . . . morte! . . . juste Dieu!

TOUS: Juste Dieu!
(La toile tombe.)

ACTE CINQUIÈME.

SCÈNE I

Une crypte souterraine; ça et là des tombeaux.

Frère Laurent, Frère Jean, Juliette.

(Au lever du rideau, Frère Laurent est debout prie du tombeau sur lequel est étendue Juliette endormie; une lampe funéraire, placée sur le tombeau, éclaire le théâtre; Frère Jean entre en scène.)

FRÈRE LAURENT: Eh bien? ma lettre à Roméo?

FRÈRE JEAN: Son page,
Attaqué par les Capulets,
Vient d'être ramené blessé dans le palais
De son maître, et n'a pu s'acquitter du message.
(Remettant une lettre à Frère Laurent.)
Voici la lettre!

FRÈRE LAURENT: O funeste hasard!
Qu'un autre messager parte cette nuit même!
Venez! chaque instant de retard
Nous jette en un péril extrême.
(Il sort, suivi de Frère Jean.—On entend une porte de fer se refermer sur eux.—Profond silence.)

SCÈNE II

Juliette, puis Roméo.

(Au bout d'un moment, on entend le bruit d'un levier ébranlant la porte.—la porte cède avec bruit.—Roméo parait.)

ROMÉO: (un levier à la main.)
C'est là! . . .
(Il jette son levier.)
Salut, tombeau sombre et silencieux!
Un tombeau! . . . non!—ô demeure plus belle Que le séjour même des cieux,
Palais splendide et radieux, Salut!
(Apercevant Juliette et s'élançant vers le tombeau.)
Ah! la voila! . . . C'est elle! . . .
Viens, funètre clarté; viens l'offrir

O Heaven—my father!—farwell!
(She falls insensible in his arms.)

CAPULET: My Juliet!
My daughter!—lifeless!—dead!
Just God!

ALL: She is dead!
(Curtain falls.)

ACT V.

SCENE I.

(The Vault of the Capulets)

Friar Lawrence, Friar John, Juliet.

(As the curtain rises, Friar Lawrence is seen near the tomb on which Juliet is asleep—the stage is lighted by a lamp, burning over the tomb.)
(Enter Friar John.)

LAWRENCE: Well! my letter to Romeo!

FRIAR JOHN: His page, Attacked by the Capulets,
Has just now been taken wounded
In his master's palace,
And could not deliver the message.
(Delivering the letter to Friar Lawrence.)
Here is the letter!

LAWRENCE: O fatal doom!
Let another messenger leave this very night!
Come—each minute we lose
Brings us to great dangers.
(Exeunt, an iron door is heard to shut behind them—great silence.)

SCENE II.

Juliet, then Romeo.

(The noise of a crowbar is heard. The door yields. Enter Romeo with the iron bar in his hand.)

ROMEO: (Throws aside his bar.)
Here!
All hail, O tomb, home of the silent dead!
Not a tomb! No! for here Juliet is lying,
Making the grim vault full of light.
All hail! O shrine radiant and bright.
(Perceives and rushes towards her.)
Ah, she is there—my Juliet!
(Takes the lamp to see her more distinctly.)

à mes yeux!
(Prenant la lampe funéraire.)
O ma femme! ô ma bien-aimée!
La mort, en aspirant ton haleine embaumée,
N'a pas altéré ta beauté!
Non! cette beauté que j'adore
Sur ton front calme et pur semble régner encore
Et sourire à l'éternité.
(Il repose la lampe sur le tombeau.)
Pourquoi me la rends-tu si belle, ô mort livide?
Est-ce pour me jeter plus vite dans ses bras?
Va! c'est seul bonheur dont mon coeur soit avide,
Et ta proie aujourd'hui ne t'échappera pas.
(Regardant autour de lui.)
Ah! je te comtemple sans crainte,
Tombe, où je vais enfin près d'elle reposer! . . .
(Se penchant vers Juliette.)
O mes bras, donnez-lui votre dernière étreinte!
Mes lèvres donnez-lui votre dernier baiser!
(Il embrasse Juliette, puis, tirant de son sein un petit flacon en métal et se tournant vers Juliette.)
A toi! . . . ma Juliette!
(Il vide le flacon d'un trait et le jette.)

JULIETTE: (s'éveillant peu à peu).
Où suis-je? . . .

ROMÉO: (tournant les yeux vers Juliette). Dieu! . . . je rêve!
Sa bouche a murmuré! . . .
(Saisissant la main de Juliette.)
Mes doigts, en trémissant,
Ont senti dans les siens la chaleur de son sang!
(Juliette regarde Roméo d'un air égaré.)
Elle me regarde . . . et se lève!

JULIETTE: (soupirant).
Roméo! . . . . . Roméo! . . .

ROMÉO: (avec éclat.) Seigneur Dieu tout-puissant!
(Juliette pose un pied sur les degrés du tombeau.)
Elle vit! elle vit! Juliette est vivante!

JULIETTE: (reprenant peu à peu ses sens). Dieu! quelle est cette voix dont la douceur m'enchante? . . .

ROMÉO: C'est moi! C'est ton époux
Qui, tremblant de bonheur, embrasse tes genoux,
Qui ramène à ton coeur la lumière enivrante,
De l'amour et des cieux!

JULIETTE: (se jetant dans les bras de Roméo). Ah! c'est toi! . . .

ROMÉO: Viens, fuyons tous deux! . . .

JULIETTE: O bonheur!

Burn,
O torch in the gloom! to me show her again!
Wife beloved—Ah! you are not conquered;
For death, though it has drawn from your breath
All the honey, to change you, yet lacked
The power. No, still beauty's ensign is crimson
In your lips, love—and death's pale flag
Is not advanced there.
(Replaces the lamp on the tomb.)
Oh, is it
Unsubstantial death of you is amorous,
And that the lean abhorred monster keeps
You here? for fear of that I'll stay with you,
My beloved, nor again depart from this palace
Of dim night,
Yes, my weary yoke
Offshaking, oh, here I will set up
My everlasting rest. Eyes, O look your last;
Arms, take your last embrace; and kiss her lips,
That are the doors of breath!
(He embraces Juliet, then takes a vial of poison from a pouch.)
My love,
Thus I pledge you!

JULIET: (half awakening). Where am I?

ROMEO: (startled). It was but fancy! Am I dreaming?
Yet surely she did speak!
(Seizes her hand.)
My hands,
Trembling the while, feel in hers
That the life-blood is still running warm!
(She opens her eyes, raises her head slightly, and looks at him.)
Now her eyes open! She arises!

JULIET: (moving). Romeo!
Romeo!

ROMEO: O merciful Heaven!
(Juliet sits up, and puts her feet on the ground.)
She's alive! she's alive!

JULIET: (coming to her senses).
Ah! I thought that I heard Tones that I loved, soft falling!

ROMEO: It is I! Romeo—your own—
Who your slumbers have stirred,
Led by my heart alone,
You, my bride, to love
And the fair world recalling!
(Juliet falls into his arms.)

JULIET: O mine own!

ROMEO: Come, let's fly hence!

JULIET: Happy dawn!

ROMÉO ET JULIETTE: Viens, fuyons au bout du monde!
Viens! soyons heureux,
Fuyons tous deux! Viens!
Dieu de bonté! Dieu de clémence!
Sois béni par deux coeurs heureux!

ROMÉO: (chancellant). Ah! les parents ont tous des entrailles de pierre!

JULIETTE: Roméo, que dis-tu?

ROMÉO: Les larmes, la prière,
Rien, rien ne peut les attendrir!
A la porte des cieux, Juliette . . . —Et mourir! . . .

JULIETTE: Mourir!—Ah! la fièvre t'égare,
De toi quel délire s'empare? . . .
Mon bien-aimé! Rappelle ta raison!

ROMÉO: Ah! je te croyais morte . . . et j'ai bu ce poison!

JULIETTE: Ce poison! . . . Juste Dieu! . . .

ROMÉO: (serrant Juliette dans ses bras). Console-toi, pauvre âme, Le rêve était trop beau!
L'amour, céleste flamme,
Survit, même au tombeau!
Il soulève la pierre,
Et, des anges béni,
Comme un flot de lumière
Se perd dans l'infini! . . .

JULIETTE: (égarée). O douleur! . . . ô torture! . . .

ROMEO and JULIET: Come, the world is all before us!
Come! by joy our own, for woe departs!
Father of love, graciously bending,
You are blessed by two grateful hearts.

ROMEO: (tottering). Ah! hearts of stone—ay, harder than stone,
Have our fathers!

JULIET: (frightened). But your words are so wild!

ROMEO: Nor sorrow, nor entreaty, softened them
To their children's prayer! on the threshold
Of joy we are standing—yet we die!

JULIET: We die! Romeo, surely you wander!
What strange terrors seize on your fancy?
My love—my lord, recall yourself.

ROMEO: Alas! I believed you dead, love, and—
I drank of this drink!
(Shows the vial.)

JULIET: Of that drink?
It is death!
(They embrace.)

ROMEO: Do not yield to sorrow,
Our dream was all too bright,
Now dawns a fairer day, that Shall never set in night!
From a dull slumber waking,
In a fair dawn I rise,
Chains my soul now is breaking,
To heaven dove-like it flies!

JULIET: O my heart—break; break in sorrow!

ROMÉO: (d'une voix plus faible). Ecoute, ô Juliette! . . .
L'alouette déjà nous annonce le jour! . . .
Non . . . ce n'est pas le jour . . .
Ce n'est pas l'alouette,
C'est le doux rossignol, confident de l'amour! . . .
(Il glisse des bras de Juliette et tombe sur les degrés du tombeau.)

JULIETTE: (ramassant le flacon). Cruel époux!—De ce poison funeste Tu ne m'as pas laissé ma part! . . .
(Elle rejette le flacon, et portant la main à son coeur de rencontre le poignard qu'elle avait caché sous ses vitesse et l'en tire d'un geste rapide.)
Ah, fortuné poignard!
Ton secours me reste!
(Elle se frappe.)

ROMÉO: (se relevant à demi). Dieu! . . . qu'as-tu fait?

JULIETTE: (dans les bras de Roméo). Va! ce moment est doux!
(Elle laisse tomber le poignard.)
O joie infinie et suprême
De mourir avec toi . . .
Viens! . . . un baiser!
Je t'aime! . . .

ENSEMBLE: (se relevant tous deux à demi dans un dernier effort)
Seigneur, Seigneur, pardonnez-nous!
(Ils meurent.)

FIN.

ROMEO: (wandering). Yet hark!
Juliet my dearest—it is the lark,
Early herald proclaiming the day!
No, no!
It is not yet near day! It is no lark
You heard, love, but the lone nightingale
On the pomegranate tree!
(He slips from her arms, and falls on the steps of the bier.)

JULIET: (taking the vial). Ah! cruel spouse,
Drink all! no friendly drop you left me,
To help me, so I die with you!
(She flings the vial away, then remembers the dagger, draws it from her breast.)
Ah!
Here's my dagger still! I'd forgotten you,—
Friend: now, happy dagger, behold your sheath!
(She stabs herself.)

ROMEO: (Romeo half raises himself.) Hold! hold your hand!

JULIET: (in his arms). Ah, happy moment,
Stay! My soul with rapture is swelling,
Thus to die, love, with you,
(She lets fall the dagger.)
Yet one embrace!
I love you! (They half rise in each other's arms.)

BOTH: O, Heaven, grant us your grace!
(They die.)

END.

Faust (1859)

MUSIC BY CHARLES GOUNOD ■ LIBRETTO BY JULES BARBIER & MICHEL CARRÉ

Faust, with libretto by Jules Barbier and Michel Carré based on Goethe's infamous novel premiered at the Théâtre-Lyrique in Paris on March 19, 1859. Faust, now an old man, looks back on life bereft of love. He is about to poison himself when the sound of girls singing in the street distracts him. He uses magic to conjure up Méphistophélès, who offers Faust a return to youth and happiness in exchange for his soul. Faust hesitates, but the devil tempts him with a vision of the beautiful young woman Marguérite. Faust signs the pact in his own blood, and he is changed into a handsome young knight. He sets off with the devil in search of earthly pleasures. Valentin, Marguérite's brother, is about to go off to war and he entrusts the care of his sister to Siebel, a young student (a mezzo-soprano) who is in love with her. The devil interrupts a toast being given by another student, Wagner, whose death he predicts. He also pronounces that any flower Siebel picks will fade and that Valentin will be killed by someone he knows. Faust asks Marguérite if he can walk her home while Siebel is detained by the devil. She refuses. Siebel picks flowers for his beloved, but they fade. He sprinkles them with holy water and places them on the porch. The devil and Faust set a jewelry box full of gifts alongside Siebel's humble offering. When Marguérite returns, she bedecks herself with the jewels and shows them to Marthe, her neighbor. Faust tells Marguérite of his love for her, which she returns. Now pregnant by Faust, Marguérite is eternally damned. Valentin returns from war. He challenges Faust to a duel, but is killed by a sword guided by the devil. On Walpurgis Night on the Brocken and Harz Mountains, the devil shows Faust a bacchanal. But Faust wants to be taken to Marguérite, now totally insane, imprisoned and awaiting execution for her son's murder. Faust tries to convince her to run away with him, but she reels from the sight of the devil and dies as she calls for mercy on her soul. An angel choir accompanies her to heaven as Faust prays for her.

■ ACTE I

SCÈNE I

Le Cabinet de Faust.

(Faust, seul. Sa lampe est près de s'eteindre. Il est assis devant une table chargée de parchemins. Un livre est ouvert devant lui.

FAUST: Rien! . . . —En vain j'interroge, en ardente veille,
La nature et le Créateur;
Pas une voix ne glisse à mon oreille
Un mot consolateur!
J'ai langui triste et solitaire,
Sans pouvoir briser le lien
Qui m'attache encore à la terre! . . .
Je ne vois rien!—Je ne sais rien!
(Il ferme le livre et se lève. Le jour commence à naitre)
Le ciel pâlit!—Devant l'aube noveau
La sombre nuit
S'évanouit! . . .
(Avec désepoir.)
Encore un jour!—encore un jour en luit! . . .
O mort, quand viendras-tu m'a sous ton aile?
(Saisissani une fiole sur la table.)
Eh bien! puisque ia mort me fuit
Pourquoi n'irais-je pas vers elle?
Salut! ô mon dernier matin!
J'arrive sans terreur au terme du voyage
Et je suis, avec ce breavage,

■ ACT I

SCENE I

Faust's Study.

(Night. Faust discovered, alone. He is seated at a table covered with books and parchments; an open book lies before him. His lamp is flickering in the socket.)

FAUST: No! In vain my soul has aspired, with ardent longing,
All to know,—all in earth and heaven.
No light illumines the visions, ever thronging
My brain, no peace is given,
And I linger, thus sad and weary,
Without power to sunder the chain
Binding my soul to life always dreary.
No do I see! No do I know!
(He closes the book and rises. Day begins to dawn.)
Again it is light!
Flying on its westward course
The somber night vanishes.
(Despairingly)
Again the light of a new day!
O death! when will your dusky wings
Hover above me and give me—rest?
(Seizing a flask on the table.)
Well, then! Since death thus evades me,
Why should I not go in search of him?

Le seul maître de mon destin!
(Il verse le contenu de la fiole dans une coupe de cristal ment où il va porter la coupe à ses lèvres, des voix de jeunes filles en font entendre au dehors.)

CHOEUR DE JEUNES FILLES: Paresseuse fille
Qui sommeille encor!
Déjà le jour brille
Sous son manteau d'or.
Déjà l'oiseau chante ses folles chansons;
L'aube caressante
Sourit aux moissons;
Le ruisseau murmure,
La fleur s'ouvre au jour,
Toute la nature
S'éveille à l'amour!

FAUST: Vains échos de la joie humaine.
Passez, passex votre chemin! . . .
O coupe des aïeux, qui tant fois fus pleine,
Pourquoi trembles-tu dans ma main? . . .
(Il porte de nouveau la coupe à ses lèvres.)

CHOEUR DES LABOUREURS: (dehors). Aux champs l'aurore nous rappelle;
Le temps est beau, la terre est belle;
Béni soit Dieu!
A peine voit-on l'hirondelle,

Hail, my final day, all hail!
No fears assail my heart,
On earth my days I number;
For this draught immortal slumber
Will secure me, and dispel care!
(Pours liquid from the flask into a crystal goblet. Just as he is about to raise it to his lips, the following chorus is heard, without.)

CHO. OF MAIDENS: Why your eyes so lustrous
Hide you from sight?
Bright Sol now is scattering
Beams of golden light;
The nightingale is warbling
Its carol of love;
Rosy tints of morning
Now gleam from above;
Flowers unfold their beauty
To the scented gale;
Nature all awakens—
Tells its tale of love

FAUST: Hence, empty sounds of human joys
Flee far from me.
O goblet, which my ancestors
Have filled so many times,
Why tremble in my grasp?
(Again raising the goblet to his lips.)

CHO. OF LABORERS: (without)
The morn summons us into the fields,
The swallow hastes away!
Why tarry, then?
To labor let's away! Let's on to

Qui vole et plonge d'un coup d'aile
Dans le profondeur du ciel bleu!

JEUNES FILLES ET LABS: Béni soit Dieu!

FAUST: (reposant la coupe) Dieu!
(Il se laisse retomber dans son fauteuil.)
Mais ce Dieu, que peut-il pour moi!
(se levant.)
Me rendra-t'il l'amour, l'espérance et la foi?
(Avec rage.)
Maudites soyez-vous, ô voluptés humaines!
Maudites soient les chaînes
Qui me font ramper ici-bas!
Maudit soit tout ce qui nous leurre,
Vain espoir qui passe avec l'heure,
Rêves d'amour ou de combats!
Maudit soit le bonheur, maudites la science,
La prière et la foi!
Maudite sois-tu, patience!
A moi, Satan! à moi!

SCÈNE II

Faust, Mephistopheles.

MEP: (apparaissant). Me voici! . . . D'où vient ta surprise!
Ne suis-je pas mis à ta guise?
L'épée au côté, la plume au chapeau
L'escarcelle pleine, un riche manteau
Sur l'épaule;—en somme
Un vrai gentilhomme!
Eh bien! que me veux-tu, docteur!
Parle, voyons! . . . —Te fais-je peur?

FAUST: Non.

MEP: Doutes-tu ma puissance? . . .

FAUST: Peut- tre!

MEP: Mets-la donc à l'épreuve! . . .

FAUST: Va-t'en!

MEP: Fi!—c'est là ta reconnaissance!
Apprends de moi qu'avec Satan
L'on en doit user d'autre sorte,
Et qu'il n'était pas besoin
De l'appeler de si loin
Pour le mettre ensuite à la porte!

FAUST: Et que peux-tu pour moi?

MEP: Tout.—Mais dis-moi d'abord
Ce que tu veux;—est-ce de l'or?

FAUST: Que ferais-je de la richesse?

work,
The sky is bright, the earth is fair,
Our tribute, then, let's pay to heaven.

CHO. OF MAIDENS AND LABORERS: Praises to God!

FAUST: God! God!
(He sinks into a chair.)
But this God, what will he do for me?
(Rising.)
Will he return youth, love, and faith to me?
Cursed be all of man's vile race!
Cursed be the chain's which bind him in his place!
Cursed be visions false, deceiving!
Cursed the folly of believing!
Cursed be dreams of love or hate!
Cursed be souls with joy elate.
Cursed be science, prayer, and faith!
Cursed my fate in life and death! Infernal king, arise!

SCENE II

Faust and Mephistopheles.

MEP: (suddenly appearing) Here am I! So, I surprise you?
SATAN, Sir, at your service!
A sword at my side; on my hat a gay feather;—
A cloak over my shoulder; and altogether,
Why, gotten up quite in the fashion!
(Briskly)
But come, Doctor Faust, what is your will?
Behold! Speak! Are you afraid of me?

FAUST: No.

MEP: Do you doubt my power?

FAUST: Perhaps.

MEP: Prove it, then.

FAUST: Begone!

MEP: Fie! Fie! Is this your politeness!
But learn, my friend, that with Satan
One should conduct in a different way.
I've entered your door with infinite trouble.
Would you kick me out the very same day?

FAUST: Then what will you do for me?

MEP: Anything in the world! All things. But Say first what you would have.
Abundance of gold?

FAUST: And what can I do with riches?

MEP: Bien! je vois où le bât te blesse!
Tu veux la gloire?

FAUST: Plus encor!

MEP: La puissance!

FAUST: Non! je veux un trésor
Qui les contient tous! . . . je veus jeunesse!
A moi les plaisirs,
Les jeunes maîtresses!
A moi leurs caresses!
A moi leurs désirs?
A moi l'énergie
Des instincts puissants,
Et la folle orgie
Du coeur et des sens!
Ardente jeunesse,
A moi tes désirs!
A moi ton ivresse!
A moi tes plaisirs! . . .

MEP: Fort bien! je puis contenter ton caprice

FAUST: Et que te donnerai-je en retour?

MEP: Presque rien:
Ici, je suis à ton service,
Mais là-bas tu seras au mien.

FAUST: Là-bas? . . .

MEP: Là-bas.
(Lui présentant un parchemin.)
Allons, signe.—Eh quoi! ta main tremble!
Que faut-il pour te décider?
La jeunesse t'appelle; ôse la regarder! . . .
(Il fait un gest. Au fond du théâtre s'ouvre et laisse voir Marguerite assise devant son rouet et filant.)

FAUST: O merveille! . . .

MEP: Eh bien! que t'ensemble?
(Prenant le parchemin.)

FAUST: Donne! . . .
(Il signe.)

MEP: Allons donc!
(Prenant la coupe restée sur la table.)
Et maintenant,
Maître, c'est moi qui te convie
A vider cette coupe où fume en bouillonnant
Non plus la mort, non plus le poison;—mais la vie!

FAUST: (prenant la coupe et se tournant vera Marguerite.) A toi, fantôme adorable et charmant! . . .
(Il vide la coupe et se trouve métamorphosé en jeune et élégant seigneur. La vision disparait.)

MEP: Viens!

FAUST: Je la reverrai?

MEP: Sans doute.

FAUST: Quand?

MEP: Aujourd'hui.

FAUST: C'est bien!

MEP: En route!

MEP: Good. I see where the shoe pinches.
You will have glory.

FAUST: Still wrong.

MEP: Power, then.

FAUST: No. I would have a treasure
Which contains all. I wish for youth.
Oh! I would have pleasure,
And love, and caresses,
For youth is the season
When joy most impresses.
One round of enjoyment,
One scene of delight,
Should be my employment
From day-dawn till night.
Oh, I would have pleasure,
And love, and caresses;
If you restore me youth,
I'll renew my joys!

MEP: It is well—I can give you all you desire.

FAUST: Ah! but what must I give in return?

MEP: It is but little:
In this world I will be your slave,
But down below you must be mine.

FAUST: Below!

MEP: Below. (Unfolding a scroll.)
Come, write. What! does your hand tremble?
Where does dire trepidation come from?
It is youth that now awaits you—Behold!
(At a sign from Mephistopheles, the scene opens and discloses Marguerite, spinning.)

FAUST: Oh, wonder!

MEP: Well, how do you like it?
(Taking parchment.)

FAUST: Give me the scroll!
(Signs.)

MEP: Come on then! And now, master, (Taking cup from the table.)
I invite you to empty a cup,
In which there is neither poison nor death,
But young and vigorous life.

FAUST: (Taking cup and turning toward Marguerite.) O beautiful, adorable vision! I drink to you!
(He drinks the contents of the cup, and is transformed into a young and handsome man. The vision disappears.)

MEP: Come, then.

FAUST: Say, shall I again behold her?

MEP: Most surely!

FAUST: When?

MEP: This very day!

FAUST: It is well.

MEP: Then let's away.

FAUST: A moi les plaisirs,
Le jeunes maîtresses!
A moi leurs caresses!
A moi leurs désirs!

MEP: A toi la jeunesse,
A toi ses désirs,
A toi son ivresse,
A toi ses plaisirs!
(Ils sortent.—La telle tombe.)

■ ACTE II

SCÈNE I

La Kermesse.

Une des portes de la ville. A gauche un caborte à l'enseigne de Bacchus.)

Wagner, Etudiants, Bourgeois, Soldats, Jeunes Filles. Matrones.

ETUDS: Vin ou bière,
Bière ou vin,
Que mon verre
Soit plein!
Sans vergogne,
Coup sur coup,
Un ivrogne
Boit tout!

WAG: Jeune adepte
De tonneau
N'en excepte
Que l'eau!
Que ta gloire,
Tes amours,
Soient de boire
Toujours!
(Ils trinquent et boivent.)

SOLDATS: Filles ou forteresses,
C'est tout un, morbleu!
Vieux burgs, jeunes maîtresses
Sont pour nous un jeu!
Celui qui sait s'y prendre
Sans trop de façon,
Les oblige à se rendre
En payant rançon!

BOURGEOIS: Aux jours de dimanche et de fête,
J'aime à parler guerre et combats;
Tandis que les peuples là-bas
Se cassent la tête.
Je vais m'asseoir sur les coteaux
Qui sont voisins de la rivière,
Et je vois passer les bateaux
En vidant mon verre!

FAUST: 'Tis pleasure I covet,
'Tis beauty I crave;
I sigh for its kisses,
I demand its love!
With ardor unwonted
I long now to burn;
I sigh for the rapture
Of heart and of sense.
(Exeunt. The curtain falls.)

■ ACT II

SCENE I

The Kermesse.

One of the city gates. To the left, an Inn, bearing the sign of the god Bacchus.

Wagner, Students, Burghers, Soldiers, Maidens, and Matrons.

STUDS: Wine or beer, now, which you will!
So the glass quick you fill!
And replenish at our need:
At our bouts we drink with speed!

WAG: Now, young tipplers at the cask,
Don't refuse what I ask—
Drink to glory! drink to love!
Drain the sparkling glass!

STUDS: We young tipplers at the cask
Won't refuse what you ask—
Here's to glory! here's to love!
Drain the sparkling glass!
(They drink.)

SOLDIERS: Castles, hearts, or fortresses, are all one to us.
Strong towers, maids with fair tresses,
Are won by the brave;
He, who has the art to take them,
Shows not little skill;
He, who knows the way to keep them, Has more wisdom still.

CITIZENS: On holy-days and feast-days,
I love to talk of war and battles.
While the toiling crowds around
Worry their brains with affairs,
I stroll calmly to this retreat
On the banks of the gliding river,
And behold the boats which pass
While I leisurely empty my glass.

(Bourgeois et Soldats remontent vers le fond du théâtre)
(Un groupe de jeunes filles entre en scène.)

LES JEUNES FILLES: (regardant de côté). Voyez ces hardis compères
Qui viennent làbas;
Ne soyons pas trop sévères,
Retardons le pas.
(Elles gagnent la droite du théâtre. Un second choeur d'etudiants entre à leur suit.)

DEUXIÈME CHO. D'ETUDS: Voyez ces mines gaillardes
Et ces airs vainqueurs!
Amis, soyons sur nos gardes,
Tenons bien nos coeurs!

CHO. DE MATS: (observant les étudiants et les jeunes filles). Voyez après ces donzelles Courir ces messieurs!
Nous sommes aussi bien qu'elles,
Sinon beaucoup mieux!
(Ensemble.)

MATS: (aux jeunes filles). Vous voulez leur plaire
Nous le voyons bien

ETUDS: Vin ou bière,
Bière ou vin,
Que mon verre
Soit plein!

SOLS: Pas be beauté fière!
Nous savons leur plaire
En un tour de main!

BOURG: Vidons un verre
De ce bon vin!

JEUNES FIILES: De votre colère
Nous ne craignons rien!

JEUNES ETUDS: Voyez leur colère,
Voyez leur maintien!
(Les étudiants et les soldats séparent les femmes en riant. Tous les groupes s'éloignent et disparaissent.)

SCÈNE II

Wagner, Siebel, Etudiants, Valentin.

VAL: (paraissant au fond; il tient une petite médaille à la main). O sainte médaille, Qui me viens de ma soeur,
Au jour de la bataille,
Pour écarter la mort, reste là sur mon coeur!

WAG: Ah! voici Valentin qui nous cherche sans doute!

VAL: Un dernier coup, messieurs, et mettre nous en route!

WAG: Qu'as-tu donc? . . . quels regrets attrist er nos adieux?

(Citizens and soldiers go to back of stage.)
(A group of young girls enters.)

GIRLS: Merry fellows come this way,
Yes, they now advance;
Let us, then, our steps delay,
Just to take one glance.
(They go to right of stage. A second chorus of students enters after them.)

STUDS: Sprightly maidens now advance,
Watch their conquering airs;
Friends be guarded, lest a glance
Take you unawares.

MATRONS: (watching the students and young girls). Behold the silly damsels,
And the foolish young men;
We were once as young as they are,
And as pretty again.
(All join in the following chorus, each singing as follows.)

MATS: (to the Maidens). You strive hard to please,
Your object is plain.

STUDS: Beer or wine, wine or beer,
I care nothing, with heart of cheer.

SOLDIERS: On, then, let's on;
Brave soldiers are we,
To conquest we'll on.

CITIZENS: Come, neighbor! In this fine weather
Let us empty a bottle together!

MAIDENS: They wish to please us, but it is in vain!
If you are angry, you'll gain little.

YOUNG STUDENTS: They are bright little maidens, it is plain;
We'll contrive to gain their favor.
(The soldiers and students, laughing, separate the women. All the others depart.)

SCENE II

Wagner, Siebel, Valentine, Students, and afterwards Mephistopheles.

VAL: (Advancing from the back of the stage and holding in his hand a small silver medal). O sacred medallion, Gift of my sister dear To ward off danger and fear,
As I charge with my brave battalion,
Rest upon my heart.

WAG: Here comes Valentine, in search of us, doubtless.

VAL: Let us drain the parting cup, comrades,
It is time we were on the road.

WAG: What say you?
Why this sorrowful farewell?

VAL: Comme vous, pour longtemps, je vais quitter ces lieux;
J'y laisse Marguerite, et, pour veiller sur elle,
Ma mère n'est plus là!

SIE: Plus d'un ami fidèle Saura te remplacer a ses côtés!

VAL: (lui serrant la main). Merci!

SIE: Sur moi tu peux compter!

ETUDS: Compte sur nous aussi.

VAL: Avant de quitter ces lieux,
Sol natal de mes aïeux,
A toi, Seigneur et Roi des Cieux,
Ma soeur je confie.
Daigne de tout danger
Toujours la protéger,
Cette soeur si chérie.
Délivré d'une triste pensée,
J'irais chercher la gloire au sein des ennemis,
Le premier, le plus brave au fort de la mêlée,
J'irai combattre pour mon pays.
Et si vers lui Dieu me rappelle,
Je viellerai sur toi fidèle,
O Marguerite!

WAG: Allons, amis! point de vaines alarmes
A ce bon vin ne mêlons pas de larmes
Buvons, trinquons, et qu'un joyeux refrain
Nous mette en train!

ETUDS: Buvons, trinquons, et qu'un joyeux refrain
Nous mette en train!

WAG: (Montant sur un escabeau)
Un rat plus poltron que brave,
Et plus laid que beau,
Logeait au fond d'une cave,
Sous un vieux tonneau;
Un chat . . .

SCÈNE III

Les mêmes. Mephistopheles.

MEP: (paraissant tout à coup au milieu des étudiants et interrompant Wagner). Pardon!

WAG: Hein?

MEP: Parmi vous, de grâce
Permettez-moi de prendre place!
Que votre ami d'abord achève sa chanson!
Moi, je vous en promets plusieurs de ma façon!

WAG: (descendant de son escabeau). Une seule suffit, pourvu qu'elle soit bonne!

MEP: Je ferai de mon mieux pour n'ennuyer personne!
I.
Le veau d'or est toujours debout;
On encense
Sa puissance
D'un bout du monde à l'autre bout!
Pour fêter l'inflâme idole,

VAL: Like you, I soon must quit these scenes,
Leaving behind me Marguerite.
Alas! my mother no longer lives,
To care for and protect her.

SIE: You have more than one friend
Who faithfully will supply your place.

VAL: My thanks!

SIE: On me you may rely.

STUDS: In us you surely may confide.

VAL: Even bravest heart may swell
In the moment of farewell.
Loving smile of kind sister,
Quiet home I leave behind.
I'll think of you often
Whenever the wine-cup passes round,
When my watch I keep alone.
But when danger to glory shall call me,
I still will be first in the fray,
As blithe as a knight in his bridal array.
Careless what fate shall befall me
When glory shall call me.

WAG: Come on, friends! No tears nor vain alarms;
We quaff good wine, to the success of our arms!
Drink, boys, drink!
In a joyous refrain
Bid farewell, till we meet again.

CHO: We'll drink! Fill high!
Once more in song our voices
Let us raise.

WAG: (mounting on a table). A rat, more coward than brave, And with an exceedingly ugly head, Lodged in a sort of hole or cave, Under an ancient hogshead. A cat—

SCENE III

Mephistopheles and the preceding.

MEP: (appearing suddenly among the students and interrupting Wagner). Good sir!

WAG: What!

MEP: If it please you I should wish
To mingle with you a short time.
If your good friend will kindly end his song,
I'll tell a few things well worth hearing.

WAG: One will suffice, but let that one be good.

MEP: My utmost I will do
Your worships not to bore.
I.
Calf of Gold! Always in the world
To your mightiness they proffer,
Incense at your fane they offer
From end to end of all the world.
And in honor of the idol

Peuples et rois confondus,
Au bruit sombre des écus
Dansent une ronde folle
Autour de son piédestal? . . .
Et Satan conduit le bal!
II.
Le veau d'or est vainqueur des dieux;
Dans son gloire
Dérisoire
Le monstre abjecte insulte aux cieux!
Il contemple, ô rage étrange!
A ses pieds le genre humain
Se ruant, le fer en main,
Dans le sang et dans la fange
Où brille l'ardent métal! . . .
Et Satan conduit le bal!

TOUS: Et Satan conduit le bal!

CHO: Merci de ta chanson!

VAL: (à part). Singulier personnage!

WAG: (Tendant un verre à Mephistopheles). Nous ferez vous l'honneur de trinqueravec nous?

MEP: Volontiers! . . .
(Saisissant la main de Wagner et l'examinant.)
Ah! voici qui m'attriste pour vous!
Vous voyez cette ligne?

WAG: Eh bien?

MEP: Fâcheux présage!
Vous vous ferez tuer en montant à l'assaut!

SIE: Vous êtes donc sorcier?

MEP: Tout juste autant qu'il faut
Pour lire dans ta main que le ciel a condamne
A ne plus toucher une fleur
Sans qu'elle se fane!

SIE: Moi!

MEP: Plus de bouquets à Marguerite!

VAL: Ma soeur! . . .
Qui vous a dit son nom?

MEP: Prenez garde, mon brave!
Vous vous ferez tuer par quel qu'un que je sais!
(Prenant le verre des mains de Wagner.)
A votre santé! . . .
(Jetant le contenu du verre, après y avoir trempé
Peuh! que ton vin est mauvais!
Permettez-moi de vous en offrir de mon cave!
(Frappant sur le tonneau, surmonté d'un Bacchus qui est le seigne au cabaret.)
Holà! seigneur Bacchus! à boire!
(Le vin jaillit du tonneau. Aux étudiants)
Approchez-vous!
Chacun sera servi selon ses goûts.
A la santé que tout à l'heure
Vous portiez, mes amis, à Marguerite!

Kings and peoples everywhere
To the sound of jingling coins
Dance with zeal in festive circle,
Round about the pedestal.
Satan, he conducts the ball.
II.
Calf of Gold, strongest god below!
To his temple overflowing
Crowds before his vile shape bowing,
The monster dares insult the skies.
With contempt he views around him
All the vaunted human race,
As they strive in abject toil,
As they circle with souls debased
Round about the pedestal.
Satan, he conducts the ball.

ALL: Satan, he conducts the ball.

CHO: A strange story this of his.

VAL: (aside.) And stranger still is he who sings it.

WAG: (offering a cup to Mephistopheles). Will you honor us by partaking of wine?

MEP: With pleasure. Ah!
(Taking Wagner by the hand, and scrutinizing his palm.)
Behold what saddens me to view.
See you this line?

WAG: Well!

MEP: A sudden death it presages,—
You will be killed in mounting to the assault!

SIE: You are then a sorcerer!

MEP: Even so. And your own hand shows plainly
To what fate condemns. What flower you would gather Shall wither in the grasp.

SIE: I?

MEP: No more bouquets for Marguerite.

VAL: My sister! How knew you her name?

MEP: Take care, my brave fellow!
Some one I know is destined to kill you.
(Taking the cup.)
Your health, gentlemen!
Pah! What miserable wine!
Allow me to offer you some from my cellar?
(Jumps on the table, and strikes on a little cask, surmounted by the effigy of the god Bacchus, which serves as a sign to the Inn.)
What ho! god of wine, now give us drink!
(Wine gushes forth from cask, and Mephistopheles fills his goblet.)
Approach, my friends!
Each one shall be served to his liking.
To your health, now and hereafter!
To Marguerite!

VAL: (lui arrachant le verre des mains). Assez! . . . . Si je ne te fais taire à l'instant, que je meure! (Le vin s'enflamme dans la vasque placée audessous du tonneau.)	VAL: Enough! If I do not silence him, And that instantly, I will die. (The wine bursts into flame.)
WAG. ET LES ETUDS: Holà! . . . (Ils tirent leurs épées).	WAG: Hola! CHO: Hola! (They draw their swords.)
MEP: Pourquoi trembler, vous qui me menacez? (Il tire un cercle autour de lui avec son épée—Valentin s'avance pour l'attaquer.—Son épée se brise.)	MEP: Ah, ha! Why do you tremble so, you who menace me? (He draws a circle around him with his sword. Valentine attacks; the sword is broken.)
VAL: Mon fer, ô surprise! Dans les airs se brise! . . .	VAL: My sword, O amazement! Is broken asunder.
VAL., WAG., SIE. ET LES ETUDS: (forçant Mephistopheles à reculer et lui présentant la garde de leurs épées). De l'enfer qui vient émousser Nos armes! Nous ne pouvons pas repousser Les charmes! Mais puisque tu brises le fer, Regarde! . . . C'est une croix qui, de l'enfer, Nous garde! (Ils sortent.)	ALL: (Forcing Mephistopheles to retire by holding toward him the cross-shaped handles of their swords.) Gainst the powers of evil our arms assailing, Strongest earthly might is unavailing. But you can not charm us, Look here! While we wear this blest sign You cannot harm us. (Exeunt.)
SCÈNE IV	SCENE IV
Mephistopheles, puis Faust.	Mephistopheles, then Faust.
MEP: (remettant son épée au fourreau). Nous nous retrouverons, mes amis!—Serviteur!	MEP: (replacing his sword). We'll meet anon, good sirs,—adieu!
FAUST: (entrant en scène). Qu'as-tu donc?	FAUST: (enters). Why, what has happened?
MEP: Rien!—A nous deux, cher docteur! Qu'attendez-vous de moi? par où commencarai-je?	MEP: Oh, nothing! let us change the subject! Say, Doctor, what would you of me? With what shall we begin?
FAUST: Où se cache la belle enfant Que ton art m'a fait voir?—Est-ce un vain sortilège?	FAUST: Where bides the beauteous maid your art Did show to me? Or was it mere witchcraft?
MEP: Non pas! mais contre nous sa vertu la protège; Et le ciel même la défend	MEP: No, but her virtue protects her from you. And heaven itself would keep her pure.
FAUST: Qu'importe? je le veux! viens! condui mois vers elle! Ou je me sépare de toi!	FAUST: It matters not! Come, lead me to her, Or I straightway abandon you.
MEP: Il suffit! . . . je tiens trop à mon nouveau emploi Pour vous laisser douter un instant de mon zèle! Attendons! . . . Ici même, à ce signal joyeux, La belle et chaste enfant va paraitre à vos yeux!	MEP: Then I'll comply! It would be a pity should you think So meanly of the magic power which I possess. Have patience! and to this joyous tune. Right sure am I, the maiden will appear.

SCÈNE V	SCENE V
Les étudiants et les jeunes filles, bras dessus, bras dessous, et precédés par des joueurs de violon, envahissent la scène. Ils sont suivant par les bourgeois qui ont paru au commencement de l'acte.	Students, with Maidens on their arms, preceded by Musicians, take possession of the stage. Burghers in the rear, as at the commencement of the act.
Les Mêmes, Etudiants, Jeunes Filles, Bourgeois, plus Siebel et Marguerite.	Students, Maidens, Burghers, etc., afterwards Siebel and Marguerite.
CHO: (marquant la mesure en marchant). Ainsi que la brise légère Soulève en épais tourbillons La poussière Des sillons, Que la valse nous entraîne! Faites retentir la plaine De l'éclat de nos chansons! (Les Musiciens montent sur les bancs; la valse commence.)	CHO: (marking waltz time with their feet). As the wind that sportively plays, At first will light dust only raise, Yet, at last, becomes a gale, So our dancing and our singing, Soft at first, then loudly ringing, Will resound over hill and dale. (The Musicians mount upon the table, and dancing begins.)
MEP: (à Faust). Vois ces filles Gentilles! Ne veux-tu pas Aus plus belles D'entre elles Offrir ton bras?	MEP: (to Faust). See those lovely young maidens. Will you not ask them To accept you?
FAUST: Non! fais trêve A ce ton moqueur! Et laisse mon coeur A son rêve! . . .	FAUST: No! desist from your idle sport, And leave my heart free to reflection.
SIE: (rentrant en scène). C'est par ici que doit passer Marguerite!	SIE: (entering). Marguerite can arrive this way alone.
QUELQUES JEUNES FILLES: (s'approchant de Siebel). Faut-il qu'une fille à danser Vous invite?	SOME OF THE MAIDENS: (approaching Siebel). Pray seek a partner to join in the dance!
SIE: Non! . . . non! je ne veux pas valser!..	SIE: No: it has no charm for me.
CHO: Ainsi que la brise légère Soulève en épais tourbillons La poussière Des sillons, Que la valse nous entraîne! Faites retentir la plaine De l'éclat de nos chansons! . . . (Marguerite parait.)	CHO: As the wind that sportively plays, At first will only raise light dust, Yet, at last, becomes a gale, So our dancing and our singing, Soft at first, then loudly ringing, Will resound over hill and dale. (Marguerite enters.)
FAUST: Ah! . . . la voici . . . c'est elle! . . .	FAUST: It is she! behold her!
MEP: Eh bien, aborde-la!	MEP: It is well! now, then, approach!
SIE: (apercevant Marguerite et faisant un pas vers elle). Marguerite! . . .	SIE: (perceiving Marguerite and approaching her). Marguerite!
MEP: (se retournant et se trouvant face à face avec Siebel). Plaît-il! . . .	MEP: (turning round and finding himself face to face with Siebel). What say you?
SIE: (à part). Maudit homme! encor là! . . .	SIE: (aside). Malediction! here again!
MEP: (d'un ton milleux). Eh quoi! mon ami! vous voilà! . . . (en riant). Ah, vraiment, mon ami! (Siebel recule devant Mephistopheles, qui lui fait faire ainsi un tour du théâtre en passant derrière le groupe des danseurs.)	MEP: (coaxingly). What, here again, dear boy? (laughing). Ha, ha! a right good jest! (Siebel retreats before Mephistopheles, who then compels him to make a circuit of the stage, passing behind the dancers.)

FAUST: (abordant Marguerite qui traverse la scène). Ne permettrez-vous pas, ma belle demoiselle, Qu'on vous offre le bras pour faire le chemin?

MAR: Non, monsieur! je ne suis demoiselle, ni belle,
Et je n'ai pas besoin qu'on me donne la main?
(Elle passe devant Faust et s'éloigne.)

FAUST: (la suivant des yeux). Pas le ciel! que de grâce . . . et quelle modestie! . . .
Ô belle enfant, je t'aime! . . .

SIE: (redescendant en scene sans avoir vu ce qui vient de se passer). Elle est partie!
(Il va pour s'élancer sur la trace de Marguerite; mais, se trouvant de nouveau face à face avec Mephistopheles, il lui tourne le dos e s'èloigne par le fond du théâtre.)

MEP: (à Faust). Eh bien?

FAUST: On me repousse! . . .

MEP: (en riant). Allons! à tes amours
Je vois qu'il-faut prêter secours! . . .
(Il s'éloigne avec Faust du mème côté que Marguerite.)

QUELQUES JEUNES FILLES: (s'adressant à trois ou quatre d'entre elles qui ont observé la rencontre de Faust et de Marguerite). Qu'est-ce donc! . . .

DEUXIÈME GROUPE DE JEUNES FILLES: Marguerite,
Qui de ce beau seigneur refuse la conduite! . . .

ETUDS: (se rapprochant). Valsons encor!

JEUNES FILLES: Valsons toujours!

■ ACTE III

SCÈNE I

Le Jardin de Marguerite.

Au fond, un mur percé d'une petite porte. A gauche, un bosquet. A droite, un pavillon dont la fenêtre fait face au public. Arbres massifs.

SIE: (seul).
(Il est arrêté près d'un massif de roses et de lilas.)
I.
Faites-lui mes aveux, Portez mes voeux,
Fleurs écloses près d'elle,
Dites-lui qu'elle est belle . . .

FAUST: (approaching Marguerite, who crosses the stage). Will you not permit me, my fairest demoiselle,
To offer you my arm, and clear for you the way?

MAR: No, sir. I am no demoiselle, neither am I fair;
And I have no need to accept your offered arm.
(Passes Faust and retires.)

FAUST: (gazing after her). What beauty! What grace! What modesty!
O lovely child, I love you! I love you!

SIE: (coming forward, without having seen what has occurred). She has gone!
(He is about to hurry after Marguerite, when he suddenly finds himself face to face with Mephistopheles—he hastily turns away and leaves the stage.)

MEP: Well, Doctor!

FAUST: Well. She has repulsed me.

MEP: (laughing). Ay, truly, I see, in love,
You know not how to make the first move.
(He retires with Faust, in the direction taken by Marguerite.)

SOME OF THE MAIDENS: (who have noticed the meeting between Faust and Marguerite). What is it?

OTHERS: Marguerite. She has refused the escort
Of yonder elegant gentleman.

STUDS: (approaching). Waltz again!

MAIDENS: Waltz alway!

■ ACT III

SCENE I

Marguerite's Garden.

At the back a wall, with a little door. To the left a bower. On the right a pavilion, with a window facing the audience. Trees, shrubs, etc.

Siebel, alone. He enters through the little door at the back, and stops on the threshold of the pavilion, near a group of roses and lilies.

SIE:
I.
Gently whisper to her of love, dear flower;
Tell her that I adore her,
And for me, oh, implore her,
For my heart feels love's power alone for her.

Que mon coeur nuit et jour Languit d'amour!
Révélez à son âme
Le secret de ma flamme!
Qu'il s'exhale avec vous Parfums plus doux! . . .
(Il cueille une fleur.)
Fanée! . . . hélas!
(Il jette la fleur avec dépit.) Ce sorcier que Dieu damne
M'a porté malheur!
(Il cueille une autre fleur qui s'effeuille encore.)
Je ne puis sans qu'elle se fane
Toucher une fleur! . . .
Si je trempais mes doigts dans l'eau bénite? . . .
(Il s'approche du pavillon et trempe ses doigts dans un bénitier accroché au mur.)
C'est là que chaque soir vient prier Marguerite!
Voyons maintenant! voyons vite! . . .
(Il cueille deux ou trois fleurs.)
Elles se fanent? . . . Non! . . . Satan, je ris du toi . . .
II.
C'est en vous que j'ai foi; Parlez pour moi!
Qu'elle puisse connaître
L'ardeur qu'elle a fait naitre,
Et dont mon coeur troublé N'a point parlé!
Si l'amour l'effarouche.
Que la fleur sur sa bouche
Sache au moins déposer
Un doux baiser! . . .
(Il cueille des fleurs pour former un bouquet et disparait dans les massifs du jardin.)

SCÈNE II

Mephistopheles, Faust, puis Siebel.

FAUST: (entrant doucement en scène). C'est ici?

MEP: Suivez-moi!

FAUST: Que regardes-tu là?

MEP: Siebel, votre rival.

FAUST: Siebel!

MEP: Chut! . . . le voilà!
(Il se cache avec Faust dans un bosquet.)

SIE: (rentrant en scène, avec un bouquet à la main). Mon bouquet n'est-il pas charmant?

MEP: (à part). Charmant!

SIE: Victoire!
Je lui raconterai demain toute l'histoire
Et, si l'on veut savoir le secret de mon coeur,
Un baiser lui dira le reste!

MEP: (à part). Séducteur!
(Siebel attache le bouquet à la porte du pavillon et sort.)

Say in sighing I languish,
That for her, in my anguish,
My aching heart beats alone, dearest flower.
(Plucks flowers.)
Alas! they are withered!
(Throws them away.)
Can the accursed wizard's words be true?
(Picks another flower, which, on touching his hand, immediately withers.)
'You shall never touch flower again
But it shall wither!'
I'll bathe my hand in holy water!
(Approaches the pavilion, and dips his fingers in a little font suspended to the wall.)
When day declines, Marguerite hither
Comes here to pray, so we'll try again.
(Plucks more flowers.)
Are they withered? No!
Satan, you are conquered!
II.
I've faith in these flowers alone,
For they will plead for me;
They will reveal to her
My hapless state.
She is the sole cause of my woe
And yet she knows it not.
But in these flowers I've faith,
For they will plead for me.
(Plucks flowers in order to make a bouquet, and disappears amongst the shrubs.)

SCENE II

Mephistopheles, Faust, and Siebel.

FAUST: (cautiously entering through the garden door). We are here!

MEP: Follow me.

FAUST: Who do you see?

MEP: Siebel, your rival.

FAUST: Siebel?

MEP: Hush! He comes.
(They enter the bower.)

SIE: (entering with a bouquet in his hand). My bouquet is charming indeed?

MEP: (aside). It is indeed!

SIE: Victory! Tomorrow I'll reveal all to her.
I will disclose to her the secret
That lies concealed in my heart:
A kiss will tell the rest.

MEP: (aside, mockingly). Seducer!
(Exit Siebel, after fastening bouquet to the door of the pavilion.)

SCÈNE III

Faust, Mephistopheles.

MEP: Attendez-moi là, cher docteur!
Pour tenir compagnie aux fleurs de votre élève,
Je vais vous chercher un trésor
Plus merveilleux, plus riche encor
Que tous ceux qu'elle voit en rêve!

FAUST: Laisse-moi!

MEP: J'obéis! . . . daignez m'attendre ici?
(Il sort.)

SCÈNE IV

Faust.

FAUST: (seul). Quel trouble inconnu me pénètre!
Je sens l'amour s'emparer de mon étre
O Marguerite! tes pieds me voici!
Salut! demeure chaste et pure, où sa devine
La présence d'une âme innocente et devine! . . .
Que de richesse en cette pauvreté!
En ce réduit, que de félicité! . . .
O nature, c'est là que tu la fis si belle!
C'est là que cette enfant a grandi ton aile,
A dormi sous tes yeux?
Là que, de ton haleine enveloppant une âme,
Tu fis avec amour épanouir la femme
En cet ange des cieux!
Salut! demeure chaste et pure, où se devine!
La prèsence d'une âme innocente et divine! . . .
Que de richesse en cette pauvreté!
En ce réduit, que de félicité! . . .
Salut! demeure chaste et pure, où se devine
La présence d'une âme innocente et divine! . . .

SCÈNE V

Faust, Mephistopheles.

MEP: (Mephistopheles reparait, une cassette sous le bras.) Alerte! la voilà! . . . Si le bouquet l'emporte
Sur l'écrin, je consens à perdre mon pouvoir!
(Il ouvre l'écrin.)

FAUST: Fuyons! . . . je veux ne jamais la revoir!

MEP: Quel scrupule vous prend! . . .
(Plaçant l'écrin sur le seuil du pavillon.)
Sur le seuil de la porte,
Voici l'écrin placé! . . . venez! . . . j'ai bon espoir!
(Il entraine Faust et disparait avec lui dans le jardin. Marguerite entre par la porte du fond et descend en silence jusque sur le devant de la scène.)

SCENE III

Faust and Mephistopheles.

MEP: Now attend, my dear doctor!
To keep company with the flowers of our friend,
I go to bring you a treasure,
Which outshines them beyond measure,
And of beauty past believing.

FAUST: Leave me!

MEP: I obey. Deign to await me here.
(Disappears.)

SCENE IV

Faust.

FAUST: (alone). What new emotion penetrates my soul!
Love, a pure and holy love, pervades my being.
O Marguerite, behold me at your feet!
All hail, dwelling pure and lowly,
Home of an angel fair and holy,
All mortal beauty excelling!
What wealth is here, a wealth outbidding gold,
Of peace, and love, and innocence untold!
Bounteous Nature! it was here by day your love was taught her,
You here with kindly care overshadowed your daughter
Through hours of night!
Here waving tree and flower
Made her an Eden bower
Of beauty and delight,
For one whose very birth
Brought down heaven to our earth.
All hail, dwelling pure and lowly,
Home of an angel fair and holy.

SCENE V

Faust, Mephistopheles.

MEP: (carrying a casket under his arm). What ho! see here!
If flowers are more potent than bright jewels,
Then I consent to lose my power.
(Opens the casket and displays the jewels.)

FAUST: Let us fly; I never will see her again.

MEP: What scruple now assails you?
(Lays the casket on the threshold of the pavilion.)
See on yonder step,
The jewels snugly lie;
We've reason now to hope.

SCÈNE VI

Marguerite.

MAR: (seule). Je voudrais bien savoir quel était ce jeune homme, Si c'est un grand seigneur, et comment il se nomme?
(Elle s'assied dans le bosquet, devant son rouet, et prend son fuseau autour duquel elle prépare de la laine.)
I.
'Il était un roi de Thulé,
Qui, jusqu' à la tombe fidèle,
Eut, en souvenir de sa belle,
Une coupe en or ciselé! . . . '
(S'interrompant.)
Il avait bonne grâce, à ce qu'il m'a en semble.
(Reprenant sa chanson.)
'Nul trésor n'avait plus de charmes!
Dans les grands jours il s'en servait,
Et chaque fois qu'il y buvait,
Ses yeux se remplissaient de larmes! . . . '

II.
(Elle se lève et fait quelques pas.)
'Quand il sentit venir la mort,
Etendu sur sa froide couche,
Pour la porter jusqu'à sa bouche
Sa main fit un suprême effort! . . . '
(S'interrompant.)
Je ne savais que dire, et j'ai rouge d'abord.
(Reprenant sa chanson.)
'Et puis, en l'honneur de sa dame,
Il but un dernière fois;
La coupe trembla dans ses doigts.
Et doucement il rendit l'âme!'
Les grands seigneurs ont seuis des airs résolus,
Avec cette douceur.
(Elle se dirige vers le pavillon.)
Allons! n'y pensons plus!
Cher Valentin, si Dieu m'écoute,
Je te reverrai! . . . me voilà
Toute seule! . . .
(Au moment d'entrer dans la pavillon, elle apercoit la bouquet suspendu à la porte.)
Un bouquet! (Elle prend le bouquet.)
C'est de Siebel, sans doute!
Pauvre garçon! (Apercevant la cassette.)
Que vois-je là?
D'où ce riche coffret peut-il venir de n'ose
Y toucher, et pourtant . . . —
Voici la ciel je crois! . . .
Si je l'ouvrais! . . . ma main tremble! Pourquoi!
Je ne fais, en l'ouvrant, rien de mal je suppose! . . .

(Draws Faust after him, and disappears in the garden. Marguerite enters through the doorway at the back, and advances silently to the front.)

SCENE VI

Marguerite.

MAR: (alone). Fain would I know the name
Of the fair youth I met?
Fain would I also know birth
And station?
(Seats herself at her wheel in the arbor, and arranges the flax upon the spindle.)
I.
'Once there was a king in Thulé,
Who was until death always faithful,
And in memory of his loved one
Caused a cup of gold to be made.'
(Breaking off.)
His manner was so gentle! It was true politeness. (Resuming the song.)
Never treasure prized he so dearly,
Nothing else would use on festive days,
And always when he drank from it,
His eyes with tears would be overflowing.'

II.
(She rises, and takes a few paces.)
'When he knew that death was near,
As he lay on his cold couch smiling,
Once more he raised with greatest effort
The golden vase to his lips.'
(Breaking off.)
I knew not what to say, my face blushes red!
(Resuming the song.)
'And when he, to honor his lady,
Drank from the cup the last, last time,
Soon falling from his trembling grasp,
Then gently passed his soul away.'
Nobles alone can bear them with so bold a mien,
So tender, too, withal!
(She goes toward the pavilion.)
I'll think of him no more! Good Valentine!
If heaven heeds my prayer, we shall meet again.
Meanwhile I am alone!
(Suddenly perceiving the bouquet attached to the door of the pavilion.)
Flowers!
(Unfastens the bouquet.)
They are Siebel's, surely!
Poor faithful boy!
(Perceiving the casket.)
But what is this?
From whom did this splendid casket come?
I dare not touch it—
Yet see, here is the key!—I'll take one look!

(Elle ouvre la cassette et raisse tombre le bouquet.)
O Dieu! que de bijoux! . . . est-ce un rève charmant
Qui m'éblouit, ou si je veille!—
Mes yeux n'ont jamais vu de richesse pareille! . . .
(Elle place la cassette tout ouverte sur une chaise et s'agenouille pour se parer.)
Si j'osais seulement
Me parer un moment
De ces pendants d'oreille!
(Elle tire des boucles d'oreilles de la cassette.)
Voici tout justement,
Au fond de la cassette,
Un miroir! . . . comment
N'être pas coquette?
(Elle se pare des boucles d'oreilles, se lève et se regarde dans le miroir.)
Ah! je ris de me voir
Si belle en ce miroir! . . .
Est-ce toi, Marguerite?
Réponds-moi, réponds vite!—
Non! non!—ce n'est plus toi!
Ce n'est plus ton visage!
C'est la fille d'un roi,
Qu'on salue au passage!
Ah! s'il était ici!
S'il me voyait ainsi! . . .
Comme une demoiselle
Il me trouverait belle! . . .
Achevons la métamorphose!
Il me tarde encor d'essayer
Le bracelet et le collier.
(Elle se pare du collier d'abord, puis du bracelet.—Se levants.)
Dieu! c'est comme une main qui sui mon bras se pose!
Ah! je ris de me voir
Si belle en ce miroir!
Est-ce toi, Marguerite?
Réponds-moi, réponds vit:—
Non! non!—ce n'est plus toi!
Ce n'est plus ton visage!
C'est la fille d'un roi,
Qu'on salue au passage! . . .
Ah! s'il était ici!
S'il me voyait ainsi! . . .
Comme une demoiselle
Il me trouverait belle! . . .
Ah! s'il était ici! . . .

SCÈNE VII

Marguerite, Marthe.

MART: (entrant par le fond). Que vois-je, Seigneur Dieu! . . . comme vous voilà belle,
Mon ange! . . . —D'où vous vient ce riche écrin?

MAR: (avec confusion). On l'aura par mégarde apporté!

How I tremble—yet why?—can it be Much harm just to look in a casket!
(Opens the casket and lets the bouquet fall.)
Oh, heaven! what jewels!
Can I be dreaming?
Or am I really awake?
Never have I seen such costly things before!
(Puts down the casket on a rustic seat, and kneels down in order to adorn herself with the jewels.)
I should just like to see
How they'd look upon me
Those brightly sparkling ear-drops!
(Takes out the ear-rings.)
Ah! at the bottom of the casket is a glass:
I there can see myself!—
But am I not becoming vain?
(Puts on the ear-rings, rises, and looks at herself in the glass.)
Ah! I laugh, as I pass, to look into a glass;
Is it truly Marguerite, then?
Is it you?
Tell me true!
No, no, no, it is not you!
No, no, that bright face there reflected
Must belong to a queen!
It reflects some fair queen, whom I greet as I pass her.
Ah! could he see me now,
Here, decked like this, I vow,
He surely would mistake me,
And take me for a noble lady!
I'll try on the rest.
The necklace and the bracelets
I fain would try!
(She adorns herself with the bracelets and necklace, then rises.)
Heavens! It is like a hand
Thank rests on my arm!
Ah! I laugh, as I pass, to look into a glass;
Is it truly Marguerite, then?
Is it you?
Tell me true!
No, no, no, it is not you!
No, no, that bright face there reflected
Must belong to a queen!
It reflects some fair queen, whom I greet as I pass her.
Oh! could he see me now,
Here, decked like this, I vow,
He surely would mistake me,
And take me for a noble lady!

SCENE VII

Marguerite and Martha.

MART: Just heaven! what is it I see?
How fair you now do seem!
Why, what has happened?
Who gave to you these jewels?

MAR: (confused). Alas! by some mistake
They have been brought here.

MART: Que non pas
Ces bijoux sont á vous, ma chère demoiselle!
Oui! c'est là le cadeau d'un seigneur amoureux!
(Soupirant.)
Mon cher époux jadis était moins généreux!
(Mephistopheles et Faust entrent en scène.)

SCÈNE VIII

Les Mêmes, Mephistopheles, Faust.

MEP: Dame Marthe Schwerlein, s'il vous plait

MART: Qui m'appelle?

MEP: Pardon d'oser ainsi nous présenter chez vous!
(Bas à Faust.)
Vous voyez qu'elle a fait bel accueil son bijoux?
(Haut.)
Dame Marthe Schwerlein?

MART: Me voici!

MEP: La nouvelle
Que j'apporte n'est pas pour vous en gaité:—
Votre mari, madame, est mort et vous salue!

MART: Ah! . . . grand Dieu! . . .

MAR: Qu'est ce donc?

MEP: Rien! . . .
(Marguerite baisse les yeux sous le regard de Mephistopheles se hâte d'ôter le collier, le bracelet et les pendants d'oreilles et de les remettre dans la cassette.)

MART: O calamité! . . .
O nouvelle imprévue! . . .
(Ensemble.)

MAR: (à part). Malgré moi mon coeur tremble et tressaille à sa vue!

FAUST: (à part). La fièvre de mes sens se dissipe à sa vue!

MEP: (à Marthe). Votre mari, madame, est mort et vous salue!

MART: Ne m'apportez-vous rien de lui!

MEP: Rien! . . . et, pour le punit, il faut dès aujourd'hui
Chercher quelqu'un qui le remplace!

FAUST: (à Marguerite). Pourquoi donc quitter ces bijoux?

MAR: Ces bijoux ne sont pas à moi! . . . Laissez de grâce!

MEP: (à Marthe). Que ne serait heureux d'échanger avec vous
La bague d'hyménée?

MART: (à part). Ah, bah!
(Haut.)
Plait-il?

MART: Why so?
No, beauteous maiden,
These jewels are for you;
The gift are they of some enamored lord.
My husband, I must say,
Was of a less generous turn!
(Mephistopheles and Faust enter.)

SCENE VIII

Mephistopheles, Faust, and the before-named.

MEP: (making a profound bow).
Tell me, I pray, are you Martha Schwerlein?

MART: Sir, I am!

MEP: Pray pardon me,
If thus I venture to present myself.
(Aside, to Faust.)
You see your presents
Are right graciously received.
(To Martha.)
Are you, then, Martha Schwerlein?

MART: Sir, I am.

MEP: The news I bring
Is of an unpleasant kind:
Your much-loved spouse is dead,
And sends you greeting.

MART: Great heaven!

MAR: Why, what has happened?

MEP: Nothing!
(Marguerite hastily takes off the jewels, and is about to replace them in the casket.)

MART: Oh woe! oh, unexpected news!

MAR: (aside.) How beats my heart
Now he is near!

FAUST: (aside). The fever of my love
Is lulled when at her side!

MEP: (to Martha). Your much-loved spouse is dead,
And sends you greeting!

MART: (to Mephistopheles). Sent he nothing else to me?

MEP: (to Martha). No. We'll punish him for it;
Upon this very day
We'll find him a successor.

FAUST: (to Marguerite). Wherefore lay aside these jewels?

MAR: (to Faust). Jewels are not made for me;
I'll leave them where they are.

MEP: (to Martha).
Who would not gladly
Present the wedding-ring to you!

MART: (aside). Indeed!
(to Mephistopheles).
You think so?

MEP: (soupirant). Hélas! cruelle destinée! . . .	MEP: (sighing). Ah me! ah, cruel fate!
FAUST: (à Marguerite). Prenez mon bras un moment!	FAUST: (to Marguerite). Pray lean upon my arm:
MAR: (se défendant). Laissez! . . . Je vous en conjure! . . .	MAR: (retiring). Leave me, I humbly pray!
MEP: (de l'autre côté du théâtre, à Marthe). Votre bras! . . .	MEP: (offering his arm to Martha). Take mine!
MART: (à part). Il est charmant!	MART: (aside). In truth, a comely knight! (Taking his arm.)
MEP: (à part). La voisine est un peu mûre! (Marguerite abandonne son bras à Faust et s'éloigne avec Mephistopheles et Marthe restent seuls en scène.)	MEP: (aside). The dame is somewhat tough! (Marguerite yields her arm to Faust, and withdraws with him. Mephistopheles and Martha remain together.)
MART: Ainsi vous voyagez toujours?	MART: And so you are always traveling!
MEP: Dure nécessité, madame! Sans ami, sans parents! . . . sans femme.	MEP: It is a hard necessity, madame! Alone and loveless, Ah!
MART: Cela sied encore aux beaux jours! Mais plus tard, combien il est triste De vieillir seul, en égoïste!	MART: In youth it matters not so much, But in late years it is sad indeed! Right melancholy it is in solitude Our olden age to pass!
MEP: J'ai frémi souvent, j'en conviens, Devant cette horrible pensée!	MEP: The very thought makes me shudder. But still, alas! what can I do?
MART: Avant que l'heure en soit passée! Digne seigneur, songez-y bien!	MART: If I were you, I'd not delay, But think on it seriously at once.
MEP: J'y songerai!	MEP: I'll think on it!
MART: Songez-y bien! (Ils sortent. Entre Faust et Marguerite.)	MART: At once and seriously! (They withdraw. Faust and Marguerite re-enter.)
FAUST: Eh quoi! toujours seule? . . .	FAUST: Are you always alone?
MAR: Mon frère Est soldat; j'ai perdu ma mère; Puis ce fut un autre malheur, Je perdis ma petite soeur! Pauvre ange! . . . Elle m'était bien chere C'était mon unique souci; Que de soins, hélas! . . . que de peines! C'est quand nos âmes en sont pleines Que la mort nous les prend ainsi! . . . Sitôt qu'elle s'éveillait, vite Il fallait que je fusse là! . . . Elle n'aimait que Marguerite! Pour la voir, la pauvre petite, Je reprendrais bien tout cela! . . .	MAR: My brother is at the wars, My mother dear is dead! By misadventure, too, I have lost my dear sister. Dear sister! My greatest happiness was she. Sad sorrows these; When our souls are filled with love, Death tears the loved one from us! At morn, no sooner did she wake, Than I was always at her side! The darling of my life was she! To see her once again. I'd gladly suffer all.
FAUST: Si le ciel, avec un sourire, L'avait faite semblable à toi, C'était un ange! . . . Oui, je le crois	FAUST: If heaven, in joyous mood, Did make her like you, An angel must she indeed have been!
MAR: Vous moquez-vous! . . .	MAR: You mock me!
FAUST: Non! je t'admire!	FAUST: No, I do love you!
MAR: (souriant). Je ne vous crois pas Et de moi tout bas Vous riez sans doute! . . . J'at tort de rester Pour vous ecouter! . . . Et pourtant j'écoute! . . .	MAR: (sighing). Flatterer! You mock me! I don't believe you! You seek to deceive. No longer will I stay, to hear your words
FAUST: Laisse-moi ton bras! . . . Dieu ne m'a t'il pas Conduit sur ta route? . . . Pourquoi redouter, Hélas! d'écouter! . . . Mon coeur parle; écoute! . . . (Mephistopheles et Marthe reparaissent).	FAUST: (to Marguerite). No, I do love you! Stay, oh stay! Heaven has crowned my path with an angel. Why do you fear to listen? It is my heart that speaks. (Re-enter Mephistopheles and Martha.)
MART: Vous n'entendez pas, Ou de moi tout bas Vous riez sans doute! Avant d'écouter, Pourquoi vous hâter De vous mettre en route?	MART: (to Mephistopheles). Of what now are you thinking? You heed me not—perchance you mock me. Now listen to what I say.— You really must not leave us!
MEP: Ne m'accusez pas, Si je dois, hélas! Me remettre en route. Faut-il attester Qu'on voudrait rester Quand on vous écoute? (La nuit commenoc à tomber.)	MEP: (to Martha). Ah, chide me not, if my wanderings I resume. Suspect me not; to roam I am compelled! Need I attest how gladly I remain. I hear but you alone. (Night comes on.)
MAR: (à Faust). Retirez-vous! . . . voici la nuit.	MAR: (to Faust). It grows dark,—you must away.
FAUST: (passant son bras autour de la taille de Marguerite.) Chère âme!	FAUST: (embracing her). My loved one!
MAR: Laissez-moi! (Elle se dégage et s'enfuit.)	MAR: Ah! no more! (Escapes.)
FAUST: (la poursuivant). Quoi! méchante! . . . on me fuit!	FAUST: Ah, cruel one, would you fly? (Pursuing her.)
MEP: (à part, tandis que Marthe, dépitée, lui tourne le dos) L'entretien devient trop tendre! Esquivons nous! (Il se cache derrière un arbre.)	MEP: (aside, whilst Martha angrily turns her back to him). The matter's getting serious, I must away. (Conceals himself behind a tree.)
MART: (À part). Comment m'y prendre? (Se retournant.) Eh bien! il est parti! . . . Seigneur! . . . (Elle s'èloigne.)	MART: (aside). What's to be done? he's gone! What ho, good sir! (Retires.)
MEP: Oui! Cours aprés moi! . . . Ouf! cette vieille impitoyable De force ou de gré, je croi, Allait épouser le diable!	MEP: Yes, look for me—that's right. I really do believe The aged beldame would Actually have married Satan!
FAUST: (dans la coulisse). Marguerite!	FAUST: (without). Marguerite!
MART: (dans la coulisse). Cher seigneur!	MART: (without). Good sir!
MEP: Serviteur!	MEP: Your servant!
SCÈNE IX	SCENE IX
Mephistopheles.	Mephistopheles.
MEP: (seul). Il était temps! sous le feuillage sombre Voici nos amoureux qui reviennent! . . . C'est bien! Gardons nous de trouble un si doleur entretien! O nuit, étends sur eux ton ombre!	MEP: It was high time! By night, protected, In earnest talk of love, They will return! It is well! I'll not disturb Their amorous confabulation! Night, conceal them in your darkest shade.

Amour, ferme leur âme aus remords importuns!
Et voux, fleurs aux subtils parfums,
Epanouissez-vous sous cette main maudite!
Achevez de troubler le coeur de Marguerite! . . .
(Il s'éloigne et disparait dans l'ombre.)

SCÈNE X

Faust, Marguerite.

MAR: Il se fait tard! adieu!

FAUST: (la retenant). Quoi! je t'implore en vain!
Attends! laisse ma main s'oublier dans la tienne!
(S'agenouillant devant Marguerite.)
Laisse-moi, laisse-moi contempler ton visage
Sous la pâle clarté
Dont l'astre de la nuit, comme dans un nuage,
Caresse ta beauté! . . .

MAR: O silence! ô bonheur! ineffable mystère!
Enivrante langueur!
J'écoute!..Et je comprends cette voix solitaire
Qui chante dans mon coeur!
(Dégageant sa main de celle de Faust.)
Laissez un peu, de grâce! . . .
(Elle ese penche et cueille une marguerite.)

FAUST: Qu'est se donc?

MAR: Un simple jeu!
Laissez un peu!
(Elle effeuille la marguerite.)

FAUST: Que dit ta bouche à voix basse! . . .

MAR: Il m'aime!—-Il ne m'aime pas!—
Il m'aime!—pas!—Il m'aime!—pas!
Il m'aime!

FAUST: Oui! . . . crois en cette fleur éclose sous tes pas! . . .
Qu'elle soit pour ton coeur l'oracle du ciel même! . . .
Il t'aime! . . . comprends-tu ce mot sublime et doux? . . .
Aimer! porter en nous
Une ardeur toujours nouvelle! . . .
Nous enivrer sans fin d'une joie éternelle!

FAUST ET MAR: Eternelle! . . .

FAUST: O nuit d'amour . . . ciel radieux!,..
O douces flammes! . . .
Le bonheur silencieux
Verse les cieux
Dans nos deux âmes! . . .

Love, from their fond hearts
Shut out all troublesome remorse.
And you, O flowers of fragrance subtle,
This accursed hand
Causes all to open!
Bewilder the heart of Marguerite!
(Disappears amid the darkness.)

SCENE X

Faust and Marguerite.

MAR: It grows late, farewell!

FAUST: I but implore in vain.
Let me take your hand, and clasp it,
And behold your face once again,
Illumed by that pale light,
That shines from yonder moon.
Shedding
Its faint but golden ray over your beauteous features.

MAR: Oh, what stillness reigns around,
Oh, ineffable mystery!
Sweetest, happiest feeling,
I listen; a secret voice
Now seems to fill my heart.
Still its tone again resounds in my bosom
Leave me awhile, I pray.
(Stoops and picks a daisy.)

FAUST: What are you doing?

MAR: This flower I consult.
(She plucks the petals of the daisy.)

FAUST: (aside). What utters she in tones subdued?

MAR: He loves me!—no, he loves me not!
He loves me!—no!—He loves me!

FAUST: Yes, believe this flower,
The flower of loves.
To your heart let it tell
The truth it would teach,—
He loves you! don't you know
How happy it is to love?
To cherish in the heart a flame that never dies!
To drink forever from the fount of love!

FAUST AND MAR: We'll love for ever!

FAUST: Oh, night of love! oh, radiant night!
The bright stars shine above;
Oh, joy, this is divine!
I love, I do adore you!

MAR: Je veux t'aimer et te chérir!
Parle encore!
Je t'appartiens! . . . je t'adore! . . .
Pour toi je veux mourir! . . .

FAUST: Marguerite! . . .

MAR: (se dégageant des bras de Faust). Ah! . . . partez! . . .

FAUST: Cruelle! . . .
Me séparer do toi! . . .

MAR: Je chancelle! . . .

FAUST: Ah! cruelle! . . .

MAR: (suppliante). Laissez-moi! . . .

FAUST: Tu veux que je te quitte
Hélas! . . . vois ma douleur.
Tu me brises le coeur,
O Marguerite! . . .

MAR: Partez! oui, partez vite!
Je tremble! . . . hélas! . . . J'ai peur!
Ne brisez pas la coeur
De Marguerite!

FAUST: Par pitié! . . .

MAR: Si je vous suis chère,
Par votre amour, par ces aveux
Que je devais taire.
Cédez à ma priére! . . .
Cédez à mes voeux!
(Elle tombe aux pieds de Faust.)

FAUST: (après un silence, la relevant doucement). Divine pureté! . . .
Chaste innocence,
Dont la puissance
Triomphe de ma volonté! . . .
J'obéis! . . . Mais demain!

MAR: Oui, demain! . . . dès l'aurore! . . .
Demain toujours! . . .

FAUST: Un mot encore! . . .
Répète-moi ce doux aveu! . . .
Tu m'aimes! . . .

MAR: Adieu! . . .
(Elle entre dans le pavillon.)

FAUST: Félicité du ciel . . . Ah . . . fuyons . . . .

SCÈNE XI

Faust, Mephistopheles.

MEP: Tête folle! . . .

FAUST: Tu nous écoutais.

MEP: Par bonheur.
Vous auriez grand besoin, docteur,
Qu'on vous renvoyât à l'école.

FAUST: Laisse-moi.

MEP: Daignez seulement
Ecouter un moment
Ce qu'elle va conter aux étoiles, cher maitre.
Tenez; elle ouvre sa fenêtre.

MAR: I want to love and cherish you
Speak, speak again!
Yours, I'll be yours
For you I'll gladly die.

FAUST: Oh, Marguerite!

MAR: (suddenly tearing herself from Faust's arms). Ah, leave me!

FAUST: Cruel one!

MAR: Fly away! alas! I tremble!

FAUST: Cruel one!

MAR: Pray leave me!

FAUST: Would you have me leave you?
Ah! Don't you see my grief?
Ah, Marguerite, you break my heart!

MAR: Go hence! I waver! mercy, pray!
Fly hence! alas! I tremble!
Break not, I pray, your Marguerite's heart!

FAUST: In pity—

MAR: If I'm dear to you,
I conjure you by your love,
By this fond heart,
That too readily has revealed its secret
Yield to my prayer,—
In mercy get (Kneels at the feet of Faust.)

FAUST: (after remaining a few moments silent, gently raising her). O fairest child, Angel so holy,
You shall control me,
Shalt curb my will.
I obey; but at morn—

MAR: Yes, at morn,
Very early,

FAUST: One word at parting.
Repeat thou lovest me.

MAR: Adieu!
(Hastens towards the pavilion.)

FAUST: Adieu! Were it already morn!

SCENE XI

Faust, Mephistopheles.

MEP: Fool!

FAUST: You overheard us?

MEP: Happily. You have great need, learned Doctor,
To be sent again to school.

FAUST: Leave me!

MEP: Deign first to listen for a moment,
To the speech she rehearses to the stars.
Dear master, delay. She opens her

(Marguerite ouvre la fenêtre du pavillon et s'y appule un moment en silence, la tête entre les mains.)

SCÈNE XII

Les mêmes. Marguerite.

MAR: Il m'aime; . . . quel trouble en mon coeur,
L'oiseau chante! . . . le vent murmure! . . .
Toutes les voix de la nature
Semblent me répéter en choeur:
Il t'aime! . . . —Ah! qu'il est doux de vivre! . . .
Le ciel me sourit; . . . l'air m'enivre! . . .
Est-ce de plaisir et d'amour
Que la feuille tremble et palpite? . . .
Demain? . . . —Ah! presse ton retour,
Cher bien-aimé! . . . viens! . . .

FAUST: (s'élançant vers la fenètre et saisissant la main de Marguerite). Marguerite! . . .

MAR: Ah! . . .

MEP: Ho! ho!
(Marguerite rest un moment interdite et laisse tomber sa tête sur l'épaule de Faust; Mephistopheles ouvre la porte du jardin at sort en ricanant. La toile tombe.)

■ ACTE IV

SCÈNE I

La Chambre de Marguerite.

Marguerite, Siebel.

SIE: (s'approchant doucement de Marguerite). Marguerite!

MAR: Siebel! . . .

SIE: Encor des pleurs.

MAR: (se levant). Hélas!
Vous seul ne me maudissez pas.

SIE: Je ne suis qu'un enfant, mais j'ai le coeur d'un homme Et je vous vengerai de son lâche abandon!
Je le tuerai!

MAR: Qui donc?

SIE: Faut-il que je le nomme?
L'ingrat qui vous trahit! . . .

MAR: Non! . . . taisez-vous! . . .

SIE: Pardon!
Vous l'aimez encore?

MAR: Oui! . . . toujours!
Mais ce n'est pas à vous de plaindre mon ennui
J'ai tort, Siebel, de vous parler de lui.

(Marguerite opens the window of the pavilion, and remains with her head resting on her hand.)

SCENE XII

The preceding. Marguerite.

MAR: He loves me! What trouble in my heart.
The night-bird's song,
The evening breeze,
All nature's sounds together say,
'He loves you!'
Ah! sweet, sweet indeed
Now is this life to me!
Another world it seems;
The very ecstacy of love this is!
With tomorrow's dawn,
O dear one, hurry
Hurry to return! Yes, come!

FAUST: (rushing to the window, and grasping her hand). Marguerite!

MAR: Ah!

MEP: (mockingly). Ho! ho!
(Marguerite overcome, allows her head to fall on Faust's shoulder. Mephistopheles opens the door of the garden, and departs, laughing derisively. The curtain falls.)

■ ACT IV

SCENE I

Marguerite's Room.

Siebel and Marguerite.

SIE: (quietly approaching). Marguerite!

MAR: Siebel!

SIE: What, weeping still!

MAR: Alas! You alone are kind to me.

SIE: I am a mere youth
And yet I have a manly heart,
And I will sure avenge you.
The seducer's life shall forfeit pay.

MAR: Whose life?

SIE: Need I name him? The wretch
Who thus has deserted you!

MAR: In mercy, speak not thus!

SIE: Do you love him still, then?

MAR: Ay, I love him still!
But not to you, good Siebel, should I repeat this tale.
I.

SIE:
I.
Si la bonheur à sourire t'invite,
Joyeux alors, je sens un doux émoi;
Si la douleur t'accable, Marguerite,
O Marguerite, je pleure alors,
Je pleure comme toi!
II.
Comme deux fleurs sur une même tige
Notre destin suivant le même cours,
De tes chagrins en fière je m'afflige,
O Marguerite, comme une soeur,
Je t'aimerai toujours!

MAR: Soyez béni, Siebel! votre amitié m'est douce!
Ceus dont la main cruelle me repousse
N'ont pas fermé pour moi la porte de saint lieu;
J'y vais pour mon enfant . . . et pour le prier Dieu!
(Elle sort; Siebel la suit à pas lents.)

SCÈNE II

L'Eglisc.

Marguerite, puis Mephistopheles. (Quelques femmes traversent la scène et entrent dans l'eglise. Marguerite entre après elles et s'agenouille.)

MAR: Seigneur, daignez permettre à votre humble servante
De s'agenouiller devant vous!

FAUST: Non! . . . tu ne prieras pas! . . . Frappez-la d'épouvante!
Esprits du mal, accourez tous!

VOIX DE DÉMONS INVISIBLES: Marguerite!

MAR: Qui m'appelle?

VOIX: Marguerite!

MAR: Je chancelle!
Je meurs!—Dieu bon! Dieu clément!
Est-cd déjà l'heure du châtiment?
(Mephistopheles paraît derrière un pilier et se penche à l'oreille de Marguerite.)

MEP: Souviens-toi du passé, quand sous l'aile des anges, Abritant ton bonheur,
Tu venais dans son temple, enchantant ses louanges, Adorer le Seigneur!
Lorsque tu bégayais une chaste prière
D'une timide boix,
Et portais dans ton coeur les baisers de ta mère,
Et Dieu tout à la fois!
Écoute ces clameurs! c'est l'enfer

SIE: When all was young, and pleasant May was blooming.
I, poor friend, took part with you in play;
Now that the dark cloud of autumn is glooming,
Now is for me, too, mournful the day.
Hope and delight have passed away from life.
II.
We were not born to trifle with true love,
Nor born to part because the wind blows cold.
What though the storm the summer garden rifle,
Oh, Marguerite! oh, Marguerite!
Still on the bough is left a leaf of gold.

MAR: Bless you, my friend, your sympathy is sweet.
The cruel ones who wrong me thus Cannot close
The gates of the holy temple against me.
I'll go there to pray
For him and for our child.
(Exit. Siebel follows slowly after.)

SCENE II

Interior of a Church.

Marguerite, then Mephistopheles. (Women enter the church and cross the stage. Marguerite enters after them, and kneels.)

MAR: O heaven!
Permit your lowly handmaiden
To prostrate herself before your altar.

MEP: No, you shall not pray!
Spirits of evil, hasten at my call,
And drive this woman from here!

CHO. OF DEMONS: Marguerite!

MAR: Who calls me?

CHO: Marguerite!

MAR: I tremble!—oh, heaven!
My last hour is surely near!
(The tomb opens and discloses Mephistopheles, who bends over Marguerite's ear.)

MEP: Remember the glorious days
When an angel's wings
Protected your young heart.
You came to church to worship,
Nor had you then sinned against heaven.
Your prayers then issued
From an unstained heart
And on the wings of faith
Did rise to the Creator.
Do you hear their call?
It is hell that summons you!
Hell claims you for its own!

qui t'appelle! . . .
C'est l'enfer qui te suite!
C'est l'éternel remords et l'angoisse éternelle
Dans l'éternelle nuit!

MAR: Dieu! quelle est cette voix qui me parle dans l'ombre?
Dieu tout puissant!
Quel voile sombre
Sur moi descend! . . .

CHANT RELIGIEUX: (accompagné par les orgues). Quand du Seigneur le jour luira,
Sa croix au ciel resplendira,
Et l'univers s'écroulera . . .

MAR: Hélas! . . . ce chant pieux est plus terrible encore! . . .

MEP: Non!
Dieu pour toi n'a plus de pardon!
Le ciel pour toi n'a plus d'aurore!

CHO. RELIGIEUX: Que dirai-je alors au Seigneur?
Où trouverai-je un protecteur,
Quand l'innocent n'est pas sans peur!

MAR: Ah! ce chant m'ètouffe et m'oppresse!
Je suis dans un cercle de fer!

MEP: Adieu les nuits d'amour et les jours pleins d'ivresse!
A toi malheur! A toi l'enfer!

MAR. ET LE CHO. RELIGIEUX:
Seigneur, accueillex la prière
Des coeurs malheureux!
Qu'un rayon de votre lumière
Descende sur eux!

MEP: Marguerite!
Sois maudite! A toi l'enfer!

MAR: Ah!
(Il disparait.)

SCÈNE III

La Rue.

Valentin, Soldats, puis Siebel.

CHO: Déposons les armes;
Dans nos foyers enfin nous voici revenus
Nos mères en larmes,
Nos mères et nos soeurs ne nous attendront plus.

SCÈNE IV

Valentin, Siebel.

VAL: (apercevant Siebel). Eh! parbleu! c'est Siebel!

SIE: Cher Valentin . . .

VAL: Viens vite!
Viens dans mes bras.
(Il l'embrasse.)
Et Marguerite!

SIE: (avec embarras). Elle est à l'église, je crois.

Eternal pain, and woe, and tribulation,
Will be your portion!

MAR: Heaven! what voice is this
That in the shade speaks to me?
What mysterious tones are these!

RELIGIOUS CHO: When the last day shall have come,
The cross in heaven shall shine forth.
This world shall crumble to dust.

MAR: Ah me! more fearful still becomes their song.

MEP: Heaven has no pardon left for you!
For you even heaven has no more light!

RELIGIOUS CHO: What shall we say to high heaven?
Who shall find protection
When innocence meets such persecution?

MAR: A heavy weight overpowers my breast,
I can no longer breathe!

MEP: Nights of love, farewell!
Days of joy, adieu!
You are lost, lost for always!

MAR. AND CHO: Heaven! hear the prayer
Of a sad, broken heart!
Send a bright ray
From the starry sphere
Her anguish to allay

MEP: Marguerite, you are lost, lost.

MAR: Ah!
(He disappears.)

SCENE III

The Street.

Valentine, Soldiers, then Siebel.

CHO: Our swords we will suspend
Over the paternal hearth;
At length we have returned.
Sorrowing mothers no longer
Will bewail their absent sons.

SCENE IV

Valentine and Siebel.

VAL: (perceiving Siebel, who enters). Ah, Siebel, is it you?

SIE: Dear Valentine!

VAL: Come, then, to my arms!
(Embracing him.)
And Marguerite?

SIE: (confused). Perhaps she's yonder at the church.

VAL: Oui, priant Dieu pour moi . . .
Chère soeur, tremblante et craintive,
Comme elle va prêter une oreille attentive
Au récit de nos combats!

CHO: Gloire immortelle
De nos aïeux,
Sois-nous fidèle
Mourons comme eux!
Et sous ton aile,
Soldats vainqueurs,
Dirige nos pas, enflamme nos coeurs!
Vers nos foyers hâiens le pas!
On nous attend; la paix est faite!
Plus de soupirs! no tardons pas!
Notre pays nous tend les bras!
L'amour nous rit! l'amour nous tête!
Et plus d'un coeur frémit tout bas
Au souvenir de nos combats!
L'amour nous rit! l'amour nous fête!
El plus d'un coeur frémit tout bas
Au souvenir de nos combats!
Gloire immortelle.

VAL: Allons, Siebel! entrons dans la maison!
Le verre en main, tu me feras raison:

SIE: (vivement). Non! n'entre pas!

VAL: Pourquoi?..—tu détournes la tête?
Ton regard fuit le mien?..—Siebel, explique-toi!

SIE: Eh bien!—non, je ne puis!

VAL: Que veux-tu dire?
(Il se dirige vers la maison.)

SIE: (l'arretant). Arrête!
Sois clément, Valentin!

VAL: (furieux). Laisse-moi! laissimoi!
(Il entre dans la maison.)

SIE: Pardonne-lui!
(Seul.)
Mon Dieu! je vous implore!
Mon Dieu, protégez-là.
(Il s'éloigne; Mephistopheles et Faust entrent en scène; Mephistopheles tient une guitare à la main.)

SCÈNE V

Faust, Mephistopheles.

(Faust se dirige vers la maison de Marguerite et s'arrête.)

MEP: Qu'attendez-vous encore?
Entrons dans la maison.

VAL: She doubtless prays for my return.
Dear girl, how pleased
She'll be to hear me tell
My warlike deeds!

CHO: Glory to those who in battle fall,
Their bright deeds we can with pride recall.
May we, then, acquire honor and fame,
Our hearts will inspire their glorious deeds!
For that dear native land where we first drew breath,
Her sons, at her command proudly brave even death.
At their sacred demand who depend on us,
We will draw our swords, their rights to defend.
We now will turn our steps homeward,
Joy and peace await us there!
On, on at once, nor loiter here;
On, then, to embrace our loved ones,— Affection calls, fond love summons us,
Yes, many a heart will beat
When they shall hear our tale.

VAL: Come, Siebel, we'll to my dwelling
And over a flask of wine hold conversation.
(Approaching Marguerite's house.)

SIE: Nay, enter not!

VAL: Why not, I pray?—You turn
away;
Your silent glance seeks the ground—
Speak, Siebel—what has happened?

SIE: (with an effort.) No! I cannot tell you!

VAL: What do you mean
(Rushing toward house.)

SIE: (withholding him.) Hold, good Valentine, take heart!

VAL: What do you mean!
(Enters the house.)

SIE: Forgive her!
Shield her, gracious Heaven!
(Approaches the church. Faust and Mephistopheles enter at the back; Mephistopheles carries a guitar.)

SCENE V

Faust and Mephistopheles.

(Faust goes towards Marguerite's house, but hesitates.)

MEP: Why do you linger?
Let us enter the house.

FAUST: Tais-toi, maudit! . . . j'ai peur
De rapporter ici la honte et le malheur

MEP: A quoi bon la revoir, après l'avoir quitte
Notre présence ailleurs serait bien mieux fêtée!
La sabbat nous attend!

FAUST: Marguerite!

MEP: Je vois
Que mes avis sont vains et que l'amour l'emporte!
Mais, pour vous faire ouvrir la porte,
Vous avez grand besoin du secours de ma voix!
(Faust, pensif, se tient à l'écart. Mephistopheles s'accompagne sur sa guitare.)
I.
'Vous qui faites l'endormie,
N'entendez-vous pas,
O Catherine, ma mie, Ma voix et mes pas . . . ?'
Ainsi ton galant t'appelle, Et ton coeur l'en croit!
N'ouvre ta porte, ma belle,
Que la bague au doigt!
II.
'Catherine que j'adore,
Pourquoi refuser
A l'amant qui vous implore Un si doux baiser? . . . '
Ainsi ton galant supplie, Et ton coeur l'en croit!
Ne donne un baiser, ma mie, Que la bague au doigt!
(Valentine sort de las maison.)

SCÈNE VI

Les mêmes. Valentin.

VAL: Que voulez-vous, messieurs?

MEP: Pardon! mon camarade,
Mais ce n'est pas pour vous qu'était la sérénade!

VAL: Ma soeur l'écouterait mieux que moi, je le sais!
(Il degaine et brise la guitare de Mephistopheles d'un coup d'épée.)

FAUST: Sa soeur!

MEP: (à Valentin). Quelle mouche vous pique?
Vous n'aimez donc pas le musique?

VAL: Assez d'outrage! . . . assez! . . .
A qui de vous dois-je demander compte
De mon malheur et de ma honte? . . .
Qui de vous deux doit tomber sous mes coups? . . .
(Faust tire son épée.)
C'est lui! . . .

MEP: Vous le voulez? . . . —Allons, docteur à vous! . . .

FAUST: Peace! I grieve to think that I Brought shame and sorrow here.

MEP: Why see her again, then, after leaving her?
Some other sight might be more pleasing.
To the sabbath let us on.

FAUST: (sighing). Oh, Marguerite!

MEP: My advice, I know,
Avails little Against your stubborn will.
Doctor, you need my voice!
(Throwing back his mantle, and accompanying himself on the guitar.)
I.
Maiden, now reposing in peace,
Awake from sleep
Hear my voice with love imploring,
Will you take pity?
But beware how you confide
Even in your friend,
Ha! ha! ha!
If he does not have a
Wedding ring for you!
II.
Yes, sweet maiden, I implore you,—
Oh, refuse not this,—
Smile on him who adores you,
Bless him with your kiss.
But beware how you confide,
Even in your friend,
Ha!, Ha! ha!
If he does not have a
Wedding ring for you!
(Valentine rushes from the house.)

SCENE VI

Valentine and the before-named.

VAL: Good sir, what do you want here?

MEP: My worthy fellow, it was not to you
That we addressed our serenade!

VAL: My sister, perhaps, would more gladly hear it!
(Valentine draws his sword, and breaks Mephistopheles' guitar.)

FAUST: His sister!

MEP: (to Valentine). Why this anger?
Do you not like my singing?

VAL: Cease your insults!
From which must I demand of you
Satisfaction for this foul outrage?
Which of you must I now slay?
(Faust draws his sword.)
It is he!

MEP: Your mind's made up, then!
On, then, doctor, at him, pray!

VAL: Redouble, ô Dieu puissant,
Ma force et mon courage!
Permets que dans son sang
Je lave mon outrage!

FAUST: (à part). Terrible et frémissant,
Il glace mon courage!
Dois-je verser le sang
Du frère que j'outrage? . . .

MEP: De son air menaçant,
De son aveugle rage,
Je ris! . . . mon bras puissant
Va détourner l'orage!..

VAL: (tirant de son sein la médaille que lui a donnée Marguerite). Et toi qui préservas mes jours, Toi qui me viens de Marguerite,
Je ne veux plus de ton secours,
Médaille maudite!..
(Il jette la médaille loin de lui.)

MEP: (à part). Tu t'en repentiras!

VAL: En garde! . . . et défends-toi! . . .

MEP: (à Faust). Serrez-vous contre moi! . . .
Et poussez seulement, cher docteur moi, je pare.

VAL: Ah!
(Valentin tombe.)

MEP: Voici notre héros étendu sur le sable!
Au large maintenant! au large! . . .
(Il entraine Faust. Arrivent Marthe et des bourgeois portent des torches.)

SCÈNE VII

Valentin, Marthe, Bourgeois, puis Siebel et Marguerite

MART. ET LES BOURG: Par ici! . . .
Par ici, mes amis! on se bat dans la rue! . . . —
L'un d'eux est tombé là! . . . —
Regarde le voici! . . .
Il n'est pas encore mort! . . . on dire qu'il remue! . . . —
Vite, approchez! . . . il faut le secourir!

VAL: (se soulevant avec effort). Merci!
De vos plaintes, faites-moi grace! . . .
J'ai vu, morbleu! la mort en face.
Trop souvent pour en avoir peur! . . .
(Marguerite parait au fond soutenue par Siebel.)

MAR: Valentin! . . . Valentin! . . .
(Elle écarte la soule e' tombe à genoux près de Valentin.)

VAL: Marguerite! ma soeur! . . .
(Il la repousse.)
Que me veutx-tu? . . . va-t'en

VAL: Oh, heaven, aid afford,
Increase my strength and courage,
That in his blood my sword
May wipe out this fell outrage!

FAUST: What fear is this unnerves my arm?
Why falters now my courage?
Dare I to take his life,
Who but resents an outrage?

MEP: His wrath and his courage
I laugh alike to scorn!
To horse, then, for his last journey
The youth right soon will take!

VAL: (Taking in his hand the medallion suspended round his neck). Oh gift of Marguerite,
Which till now has ever saved me,
I'll no more of you—I cast you away!
Accursed gift, I throw you from me!
(Throws it angrily away.)

MEP: (aside). You'll regret it!

VAL: (to Faust). Come on, defend yourself!

MEP: (to Faust, in a whisper).
Stand near to me, and attack him only;
I'll take care to parry!
(They fight.)

VAL: (falling). Ah!

MEP: Behold our hero, Lifeless on the ground!
Come, we must go—quick, fly!
(Exit, dragging Faust after him.)

SCENE VII

Enter Citizens, with lighted torches; afterwards Siebel and Marguerite.)

CHO: Here, come this way—
They're fighting here hard by!
See, one has fallen;
The unhappy man lies prostrate there.
Ah! he moves—yes, still he breathes;
Quick, then, draw near
To raise and succor him!

VAL: It is useless, cease these vain laments.
I have gazed too often
On death, to heed it
When my own time has come!
(Marguerite appears at the back, supported by Siebel.)

MAR: (advancing, and falling on her knees at Valentine's side).

VAL: Valentine! ah, Valentine!
(thrusting her from him).
Marguerite!
What are you doing here?—away!

MAR: O Dieu! . . .

VAL: Je meurs par elle! . . .
J'ai sottement
Cherché querelle
A son amant!

LA FOULE: (à demi voix, montrant Marguerite). Il meurt, frappé par son amant!

MAR: Douleur cruelle!
O châtiment! . . .

SIE: (À Valentin). Grâce pour elle! . . .
Soyez clément!

VAL: (soutenu par ceux qui l'entourent). Ecoute-moi bien, Marguerite! . . .
Ce qui doit arriver arrive à l'heure dite!
La mort nous frappe quand il faut,
Et chacun obéit aux volontés d'en haut!..
—toi! . . . te voilà dans la mauvaise voie!
Tes blances mains ne travailleront plus!
Tu renîas, pour vivre dans la joie,
Tous les devoirs et toutes les vertus!
Va! la honte t'accable
Le remords suit tes pas!
Mais enfin l'heure sonne!
Meurs! et si Dieu te pardonne,
Soit maudite ici-bas.

LA FOULE: O terreur, ô blasphème
A ton heure suprême, infortuné,
Songe, hélas, a toi-même,
Pardonne, si tu veux tre un jour pardonné!

VAL: Marguerite! Soit maudite!
La mort t'attend sur ton grabat!
Moi je meurs de ta main
Et je tombe en soldat!
(Il meurt.)

LA FOULE: Que le Seigneur ait son âme
Et pardonne au pêcheur.
(La toile tombe.)

■ ACTE V

SCÈNE I

La prison.

Marguerite, endormie, Faust, Mephistopheles.

FAUST: Va t'en!

MEP: Le jour va luire.—On dresse l'échafaud!
Décide sans retard Marguerite à te suivre.
Le geôlier dort.—Voici les clefs.—Il faut
Que ta main d'homme la délivre.

FAUST: Laisse-moi!

MEP: Hâtez-vous.—Moi, je veille au dehors.
(Il sort.)

FAUST: Mon coeur est pénétré d'épouvante!—O torture
O source de regrets et d'éternels remords!
C'est elle!—La voici, la douce créature
Jetée au fond d'une prison
Comme une vile crminelle!
Le desespoir égara sa raison
Son pauvre enfant, ô Dieu! tué par elle!
Marguerite!

MAR: (s'eveillant). Ah! c'est lui!—c'est lui! le bien-aimé!
(Elle se lève.)
A son appel mon coeur s'est ranimé.

FAUST: Marguerite!

MAR: Au mileiu de vos éclats de rire,
Démons qui m'entourez, j'ai reconu sa voix!

FAUST: Marguerite!

MAR: Sa main, sa douce main m'attire!
Je suis libre! Il est là! je l'entends la vois.
Oui, c'est toi, je t'aime,
Les fers, la mort même
Ne me font plus peur!
Tu m'as retrouvé,
Me voilà sauvé!
C'est toi, je suis sur ton coeur!

FAUST: Oui, c'est moi, je t'aime,
Malgré l'effort même
Du démon moquer,
Je t'ai retrouvé,
Te voilà sauvé,
C'est moi, viens sur mon coeur!

MAR: (se dégageant doucement de ses bras). Attends! . . . voici la rue Où tu m'as vue
Pour la première fois! . . .
Où votre main osa presque effleurer mes doigts!
'—Ne permettez-vous pas, ma belle demoiselle,
Qu'on vous offre le bras pour faire le chemin?'
'—Non, monsieur, je ne suis demoiselle ni belle,
Et je n'ai pas besoin qu'on me donne la main!'

FAUST: Oui, mon coeur se souvient!—Mais fuyons! l'heure passe!

MAR: Et voici le jardin charmant,
Perfumé de myrte et de rose,
Où chaque soir discrètement
Tu pénétrais à la nuit close.

FAUST: Viens, Marguerite, fuyons!

MAR: Non, reste encore.

FAUST: O ciel, elle ne m'entends pas!

MAR: O heaven!

VAL: I die for her! Poor fool!
I thought to chastise her seducer!

CHO: (in a low voice, pointing to Marguerite). He dies, slain by her seducer!

MAR: Fresh grief is this! ah, bitter punishment.

SIE: Have pity on her, pray!

VAL: (supported by those around him). Marguerite, give ear awhile;
That which was decreed
Has duly come to pass.
Death comes at its good pleasure:
All mortals must obey its behest.
But for you intervenes an evil life!
Those white hands will never work more;
The labors and sorrows that others employ,
Will be forgotten in hours of joy.
You dare to live, ingrate?
You dare to still exist?
Go! Shame overwhelm you! Remorse follow you!
At length your hour will sound.
Die! And if God pardons you hereafter,
So may this life be a continual curse!

CHO: Terrible wish! Unchristian thought!
In your last sad hour, unfortunate!
Think of your own soul's welfare.
Forgive, if you would be forgiven

VAL: Marguerite; I curse you!
Death awaits me.
I die by your hand; but I die a soldier.
(Dies.)

CHO: God receive your spirit!
God pardon your sins!
(Curtain.)

■ ACT V

SCENE I

A Prison.

Marguerite asleep; Faust and Mephistopheles.

FAUST: Go!

MEP: The morn appears, black night is on the wing.
Quickly prevail upon Marguerite to follow you.
The jailer soundly sleeps—here is the key,
Your own hand now can open the door.

FAUST: Good! Leave me!

MEP: Be sure you do not linger!
I will keep watch without.
(Exit.)

FAUST: My heart is wrung with grief!
O, torture! oh, source of agony
And remorse eternal! Behold her there
The good, the beauteous girl,
Cast like a criminal
Into this vile dungeon;
Grief must her reason have disturbed,
For, with her own hand, alas!
She slew her child!
Oh, Marguerite!

MAR: (waking). His voice did sure Resound unto my heart.
(Rises.)

FAUST: Marguerite!

MAR: At that glad sound it wildly throbs again
Amid the mocking laugh of demons.

FAUST: Marguerite!

MAR: Now am I free. He is here. It is his voice.
Yes, you are the one I love.
Fetters, death, have no terrors for me;
You have found me. You have returned.
Now am I saved! Now I rest on your heart!

FAUST: Yes, I am here, and I love you,
In spite of the efforts of yon mocking demon.
(Faust attempts to draw her with him. She gently disengages herself from his arms.)

MAR: Stay! this is the spot
Where one day you did meet me.
Your hand sought to clasp mine.
'Will you not permit me, my fairest demoiselle,
To offer you my arm, and clear for you the way?'
'No, sir. I am no demoiselle, neither am I fair;
And I have no need to accept your offered arm.'

FAUST: What is it she says? Ah me!
Ah me!

MAR: And the garden I love is here,
Odorous of myrtle and roses,
Where every eve you came in
With careful step, as night was falling.

FAUST: Come, Marguerite, let us fly!

MAR: No! stay a moment!

FAUST: O heaven, she does not understand!

SCÈNE II

Les mêmes. Mephistopheles.

MEP: Alerte! alerte! ou vous êtes perdus!
Si vous tardez encor, je ne m'en mêle plus!

MAR: Le démon! le démon!—Le vois-tu? . . . là..dans l'ombre
Fixant sur nous son oeil de feu!
Que nous veut-il?—Chasse-le du saint lieu!

MEP: L'aube depuis longtemps a percé la nuit sombre,
La jour est levé
De leur pied sonore
J'entends nos chevaus frapper le pavé
(Cherchant à entrainer Faust.)
Viens! sauvons-la. Peut-être il en temps encore!

MAR: Mon Dieu, protégez-moi!—
Mon Dieu je vous implore!
(tombant à genoux.)
Anges purs! anges radieux!
Portez mon âme au sein des cieux!
Dieu juste, à toi je m'abandonne!
Dieu bon, je suis à toi!—pardonne!

FAUST: Viens, suis-moi! je le veux!

SCENE II

Mephistopheles and the preceding.

MEP: Away at once, while yet there's time!
If longer you delay longer,
Not even my power can save you

MAR: Do you see yon demon crouching in the shade?
His deadly glance is fixed on us;
Quick! drive him from these sacred walls.

MEP: Away! we'll leave this spot,
The dawn has appeared;
Do you not hear the fiery chargers,
As with they paw the ground sonorous hoof?
(Endeavoring to drag Faust with him.)
Hurry, then,—perchance there yet
Is time to save her!

MAR: O Heaven, I crave your help!
I do implore your aid alone!
(Kneeling.)
Holy angels, blessed in heaven,
My spirit longs to rest with you!
Great Heaven, grant pardon, I implore you,
For soon shall I appear before you!

FAUST: Marguerite! Follow me, I implore!

MAR: Anges purs, anges radieux!
Portez mon âme au sein des cieux!
Dieu juste, à toi je m'abandonne!
Dieu bon, je suis à toi!—pardonne!
Anges purs, anges radieux!
Portez mon âme au sein des cieux!
(Bruit au dehors.)

FAUST: Marguerite!

MAR: Pourquoi ce regard menaçant?

FAUST: Marguerite!

MAR: Pourquoi ces mains rouges de sang!
(Le repoussant.)
Va! . . . tu me fais horreur!
(Elle tombe sans mouvement.)

MEP: Jugée!

CHO. DES ANGES: Sauvée! Christ est ressuscité!
Christ vient de renaître!
Paix et félicite
Aux disciples du Maître!
Christ vient de renaître.
Christ est ressuscité!.
(Les murs de la prison se sont ouverts. L'âme de Marguerite s'élève dans les cieux. Faust la suit des yeux avec désespoir à genoux et prie. Mephistopheles est à demi renversé par l'épée lumineuse de l'archange.)

FIN.

MAR: Holy angels, in heaven blessed,
My spirit longs to rest with you!
Great Heaven, grant pardon, I implore you.
For soon shall I appear before you.

FAUST: O Marguerite!

MAR: Why that glance fraught with anger?

FAUST: Marguerite!

MAR: What blood is that which stains your hand!
Away! your sight causes me horror!
(Falls.)

MEP: Condemned!

CHO: Saved!
Christ has arisen!
Christ has arisen!
Christ is born again!
Peace and felicity
To all disciples of the Master!
Christ has arisen!
(The prison walls open. The soul of Marguerite rises towards heaven. Faust gazes despairingly after her, then falls on his knees and prays. Mephistopheles turns away, barred by the shining sword of an archangel.)

END OF THE OPERA.

Giulio Cesare (1724)

Julius Caesar

Music by George Frederik Handel ■ Libretto by Nicolò Francesco Haym

This three-act opera, set to a libretto by Nicolò Haym, was first performed in London at the King's Theatre on February 20, 1724. The opera begins with Pompeo, who has been beaten in the battle of Pharsalus, seeking refuge with Tolomeo, the king of Egypt. His wife and son, Cornelia and Sesto, beg for peace from Giulio Cesare, the Roman conqueror. Achillas, captain of the Egyptian king, brings the head of Pompeo to Cesare, who orders that his enemy be honored as a hero for having died so savagely. Cesare extends his kindness to Cornelia and Sesto; meanwhile, Achillas falls in love with Cornelia. Sesto vows to seek vengeance for his father's death. Cleopatra, Tolomeo's sister, seeks Cesare's help in order to secure her succession to the Egyptian throne. Tolomeo arranges with Achillas that Cesare will be assassinated in exchange for Cornelia marrying Achillas. Sesto challenges Tolomeo and is arrested; Cornelia is made prisoner in Tolomeo's harem. Cesare is told of the plot to kill him—he saves himself by leaping off Cleopatra's terrace into the sea. Achillas reports Cesare's death to Tolomeo, but Tolomeo has now fallen in love with Cornelia and thus will not permit Achillas to marry her as promised. The Egyptians and Romans are in battle; the Romans flee as they believe Cesare to be dead. Cesare, who has saved himself from drowning, overhears a conversation between Sesto and Achillas in which Achillas, dying, confesses his culpability in Pompeo's death. He gives Sesto a gold seal which will give him the ability to gather a hundred men to kill Tolomeo. Cesare himself takes the seal, leads the revolt and emerges victoriously. Sesto kills Tolomeo, and Cleopatra is crowned Queen of Egypt. The people and the army are exultant, and Cesare and Cleopatra vow eternal love.

■ ACT I

SCENA I

Una pianura vicino Allessandria

(Cesare, Curio entrano can qualche Egiziano del popolo)

EGYPTIANS: Viva, viva il nostro Alcide!
Goda, goda il Nilo in questo di!
Ogni, spiaggia per lui ride,
ogni affanno giá sparí.

CESARE: Presti omai l'Egizia terra le sue palme al vincitor!
(mentre gli Egiziani escono)
Curio, Cesare venne e vide e vinse; giá sconfitto Pompeo invan ricorre per rinforzar de' suoi guerrier lo stuolo d'Egitto al re.

CURIO: Tu qui, Signor, giungesti a tempo appunto, a prevenir le trame.
(mentre Cornelia e Sesto entrano)
Ma chi ver noi sen viene?

CEASARE: Questa é Cornelia.

CURIO: O sorte—del nemico Pompeo l'alta consorte?

CESARE: (a Cornelia) Da Cesare che chiedi, gran germe de' Scipioni, alta Cornelia?

CORNELIA: Da' pace all'armi!

■ ACT I

SCENE I

A plain near Alexandria

(Caesar, Curio and some of the Egyptian populace enter.)

EGYPTIANS: Long live our Alcides!
May the Nile rejoice today!
Every land smiles for him,
every anguishy disappears.

CAESAR: Let Egypt's land, at last, offer her palms to the victor!
(as the Egyptians leave)
Curio, Caesar came, saw and conquered;
Pompey, already routed, seeks help in vain from Egypt's king to reinforce his army.

CURIO: You, my lord, came here just in time to thwart the plots.
(as Cornelia and Sextus enter)
But who is this who comes toward us?

CAESAR: This is Cornelia.

CURIO: O destiny—
the great consort of Pompey, our foe?

CAESAR: (to Cornelia) What do you seek from Caesar,
O great Cornelia, descendant of the Scipios?

CORNELIA: Give us peace!

SESTO: Dona l'asta la tempio, ozio al fianco, ozio alla destra!

CESARE: Virtú de' grandi é il perdonar le offese, venga Pompeo, Cesare abbracci,
e resti l'ardor di Marte estinto, sia vincitor del vincitore il vinto.

ACHILLE: (entrado, accompagnato da quattro soldati Egiziani portando un elaborato cofano dorato) Sua reggia Tolomeo t'offre in albergo, eccelso eroe, per tuo riposo.
Accio'l'Italia ad adorarti impari, in pegno d'amistrade e di sua fede questa del gran Pompeo superba testa di base al regal trono offre al tuo piede.
(lui apre il cofano, rivelando la testa di Pompey)

CESARE: Giulio, che mira?

SESTO: O Dio! Che veggio?

CORNELIA: Ahi, lassa? Consorte!
Mio tesoro!

CURIO: Grand' ardir!

CORNELIA: To Jomeo, barbar o traditor!
Io manco, io moro—
(Essa sviene.)

SEXTUS: Give your spears to the temple, rest your men's bodies and their weapons.

CAESAR: Great men's virtue lies in their forgiving offense.
Let Pompey come, let him embrace Caesar, let the wrath of Mars be quenched, let the conqueror be conquered by the conquered.

ACHILLAS: (entering, accompanied by four Egyptian soldiers bearing an elaborate golden casket) Ptolemy offers you his palace as a place for your to rest, great hero.
So that all Italy may learn to love you,
as a pledge of friendship and his good faith, this proud head of the great Pompey
he offers as a base on which to build your throne.
(He opens the casket, revealing the head of Pompey.)

CAESAR: Julius, what do you look upon?

SEXTUS: O God, what do I see?

CORNELIA: Alas! My husband! My beloved!

CURIO: How daring!

CORNELIA: Ptolemy, barbarous traitor!
I am fainting, I am dying—
(She faints.)

ACHILLE: (a se stesso) Questa é Cornelia?
Oh, che beltá! Che volto!

SESTO: Padre! Pompeo! Mia genitrice! O Dio!

ACHILLE: Cesare, frena l'ire.

CESARE: Vanne! Verró alla reggia, pria ch' oggi il sole a tramontar si veggia.
(Achille ed i soldati escono)
Empio, diró, tu sei, togliti a gli occhi miei,
sei tutto crudeltá.
(Lui esce)

CURIO: (guardando a Cornelia) Giá torna in sé.

SESTO: Madre!

CURIO: Cornelia!

CORNELIA: O stelle! Ed ancor vivo?
(Lei cerca di portar via la spada di Sesto)

CURIO: (trattenendo Cornelia) Ferma! In van tenti tinger di sangue in quelle nevi il ferro.
Curio, che ancor t'adora, e sposa ti desia, se pur t'aggrada, vendicarti sapra con la sua spada.

CORNELIA: Sposa a te?

CURIO: Si.

CORNELIA: Ammutisci!

SESTO: Madre!

CORNELIA: Viscere mie!

SESTO: Or che farem?

CORNELIA: (mentre Curio se ne va) Priva son d'ogni conforto, e pur speme di morire per me misera non v'é.
Il mio cor. da pene assorto.
é giá stanco di soffrire,
e morir si niega a me.
(Essa eshe)

SESTO: Vani sono lamenti; é tempo, o Sesto, cmai di vendicar il padre;
si svegli alla vendetta l'anima neghittosa,
che offesa da un tiranno in van riposa.
Svegliatevi nel core furie d'un'alma offesa, a far d'un traditor
aspra vendetta!
L'ombra del genitore accorre a mia difesa,
e dice: A te il rigor, figlio, si aspetta.

SCENA 2

La stanza di Cleopatra nel Palazzo di Tolomeo

(Cleopatra entra con und processione di giovani Egiziani)

ACHILLAS: (to himself) Is this Cornelia?
Oh, what beauty! What a face!

SEXTUS: Father! Pompey, Mother! O God!

ACHILLAS: Caesar, restrain your wrath.

CASEAR: Go! I shall come to the palace, today, before the sun has set.
(Achillas and the soldiers leave.) I shall say, "You are a villain, leave my sight—
you are wholly cruel."
(He leaves.)

CURIO: (looking at Cornelia) She is reviving now.

SEXTUS: Mother!

CURIO: Cornelia!

CORNELIA: O stars! And still alive?
(She tries to wrest Sextus' sword away from him.)

CURIO: (restraining Cornelia) Cease! To stain the knife with your blood be piercing this snowy breast would be in vain.
Curio, who loves you still and wants you as his wife,
if you accept, will avenge you with his sword.

CORNELIA: Your wife?

CURIO: Yes.

CORNELIA: Be silent!

SEXTUS: Mother!

CORNELIA: My flesh and blood!

SEXTUS: Now what shall we do?

CORNELIA: (as Curio leaves) I am deprived of all consolation, yet for me, wretched one,
there is no hope of death.
My heart, consumed with sorrow, is already weary of suffering
yet death denies itself to me.
(she leaves)

SEXTUS: It is useless to lament;
now is the time, O Sextus,
to avenge your father;
awaken to revenge your slothful soul which now, offended by a tyrant, cannot rest.
Awaken in my heart
the wrath of an offended soul, so I may wreak upon a traitor
my bitter vengenance!
The ghost of my father
hastens to my defense, saying, "From you,
my son, ferocity is expected."

SCENE II

Cleopatra's Room in Ptolemy's Palace

(Cleopatra enters with a retinue of young Egyptians)

CLEOPATRA: Regni Cleopatra; ed al mio seggio intorno, popola adorator Arabo e Siro, su questo crin la sacra benda adori.

NIRENUS: (entrando) Regina, infausti eventi!

CLEOPATRA: Che fia? Che tardi?

NIRENUS: Troncar fé Tolomeo il capo de gran Pompeo.
(I giovani Egiziani se ne vanno)

CLEOPATRA: Stelle! Tu qui resta; alle Cesaree tende son risolta portarmi.
(Tolomeo appare)

NIRENUS: Che dirá Tolomeo?

CLEOPATRA: Non parventar; in vano aspira al trono;
egli é il germano, ma la regina io sono.

TOLOMEO: Tu di regnar pretendi, donna superba e altera?

CLEOPATRA: Io ció é mio contendo.

TOLOMEO: Vanne, e torna omai, folle, a qual di donna é l'uso di scettro invece
a trattar l'ago e il fuso!

CLEOPATRA: Non disperar; chi sa?
Se al regno non l'avrai,
avrai sorte in amor.
Mirando una beltá in essa troverai
a consolar un cor.
(Essa e Nirenus escono; Achille entra)

ACHILLE: Sire, Signor!

TOLOMEO: Achille! Come fu il capo tronco da Cesare gradito?

ACHILLE: Sdegnó l'opra.

TOLOMEO: Tant' osa un vil Romano?

ACHILLE: Io ti prometto darti estinto il superbo al regio piede, se di Pompeo la moglie in premio a me il tuo voler concede.

TOLOMEO: É costei tanto vaga?

ACHILLE: Lega col crine, e col bel volto impiaga.

TOLOMEO: Amico, il tuo consiglio é la mia stella; vanne, pensa, e poi torna.
(mentre Achille esce) Muora, Cesare, muora, e il capo altero
sia del mio pié sostegno.
L'empio, sleale, indegno, vorria rapirmi il regno,
e disturbar cosí la pace mia.

CLEOPATRA: Long may Cleopatra reign.
And, around my throne,
O adoring Arab and Syrian people, worship the holy band that binds these tresses.

NIRENUS: (entering) O queen, ill-omened happenings!

CLEOPATRA: What can it be? Why do you hesitate?

NIRENUS: Ptolemy has decapitated the great Pompey.
(The young Egyptians leave.)

CLEOPATRA: O stars! You stay here;
I am resolved to go to Caesar's tents.
(Ptolemy appears.)

NIRENUS: What will Ptolemy say?

CLEOPATRA: Fear not; in vain he aspires to the throne;
he is the half brother, but I am the queen.

PTOLEMY: You dare to claim the throne, proud, haughty woman?

CLEOPATRA: I claim only what is mine.

PTOLEMY: Go now, mad woman, return to women's usual things—the needle and the distaff—not the scepter!

CLEOPATRA: Do not despair. Who knows?
Though you shall not have the kingdom, you shall have good fortune in love.
Looking upon your beauty, there you shall find a heart to comfort.
(She and Nirenus go out; Achillas enters)

ACHILLAS: Sire, my lord!

PTOLEMY: Achillas! How did Caesar like the severed head?

ACHILLAS: He loathed the deed

PTOLEMY: Does a vile Roman dare so much?

ACHILLAS: I promise to bring this proud man, dead, to your royal feet, if you will give me
Pompey's wife as a reward.

PTOLEMY: Is she so beautiful?

ACHILLAS: Her tresses ensnare men, her glance wounds them.

PTOLEMY: Friend, your counsel is my star; go now, think about it, then return.
(as Achillas goes out)
Let Casear die, and let his haughty head
serve as my footrest.
The impious one, the unworthy traitor, would take my kingdom from me

Ma perda pur la vita,
prima che in me tradita,
dall'avido suo cor la fede sia!

SCENA 3

Il Campo di Cesare

(In fondo, il cofano di Pompea, con la sua spada sopra)

CESARE: (entrando) Alma del gran Pompeo, fur ombra i tuoi trofei,
ombra la tua grandezza,
e un'ombra sei.
Cosí termina al fine
il fasto umano.
Ieri chi vivo occupó un mondo in guerra oggi risolto in polve un'urna serra.
Tal di ciascuno—ahi, lasso!—
il principio é di terra,
e il fine é un sasso.
Misera vita!
Oh, quanto é fral tuo stato!
Ti forma un soffio,
e ti distrugge un fiato.

CURIO: (entrando, seguito da Cleopatra) Qui nobile donzella chiede chinarsi al Cesare di Roma.

CESARE: Sen vengo pur.

CLEOPATRA: Tra stuol di damigelle io servo a Cleopatra.
Lidia m'appello,
e sotto il ciel d'Egitto di nobil sangue nata;
ma Tolomeo mi toglie,
barbaro usurpator,
la mia fortuna.

CESARE: (a se stesso) Quanta bellezza!

CLEOPATRA: (Inginocchiandosi di fronte a Cesare) Avanti al tuo cospetto, avanti a Roma, mesta, afflitta e piangente chieggio giustizia.

CESARE: (a se stesso) O Dio, come innamora!
(lui aiuta Cleopatra ad alzarsi)

CLEOPATRA: Piangeró sorte mia, si crudele e tanto ria,
finché vita in petto avró.
Ma poi morta d'ogn'intorno il tiranno e notte e giorno fatta spettro agiteró.

CESARE: (mentre Curio se ne va) Sfortunata donzella, in breve d'ora deggio portarmi in corte, oggi cola
stabiliró tua sorte.
(Lui se ne va)

NIRENUS: (entrando) Ferma, Cleopatra, osserva qual femina dolente con grave passo e lacrimoso ciglio quivi si porta.
(Lui e Cleopatra si nascondono mentre Cornelia entra) and thus disturb my peace.

But he shall lose his life before my faith shall be betrayed by his ambitious heart!

SCENE III

Caesar's camp

(Pompey's coffin with his sword upon it is at the rear.)

CAESAR: (entering) Soul of great Pompey, your trophies were but a shadow, your greatness was but a shadow,
you yourself but a shadow.
Thus ends finally the pomp of man.
The man who yesterday occupied a world at war is today reduced to dust, held in an urn.
Thus everyone—alas!—
has his beginning in dust,
and his end is a stone.
Wretched life!
Oh, how frail you are!
A breath forms you,
a breath destroys you.

CURIO: (entering, followed by Cleopatra) Here a noble maiden asks to bow before Rome's Caesar.

CAESAR: Let her approach.

CLEOPATRA: Together with a band of maidens
I serve Cleopatra.
My name is Lydia;
I was born under Egypt's sky of noble blood.
But Ptolemy, a barbarous usurper, is taking from me
my fortune.

CAESAR: (to himself) What beauty!

CLEOPATRA: (kneeling before Caesar) Before your gaze, Before Rome, saddened, distraught and weeping,
I ask for justice.

CAESAR: (to himself) O God, how she awakens love!
(He helps Cleopatra to her feet.)

CLEOPATRA: I shall weep for my fate, so cruel and so evil,
so long as I have life in my breast.
But then in death, from every side, my ghost shall prod the tyrant night and day.

CAESAR: (as Curio leaves) Unfortunate maiden, soon I must go to the court.
There, I shall see that you are treated justly.
(He leaves.)

NIRENUS: (entering) Stop Cleopatra, see how sorrowful a woman comes here, with heavy step and tearful eye.
(He and Cleopatra conceal themselves as Cornelia enters.)

CORNELIA: (Fissando al cofano di Pompeo) Nel tuo seno, amico sasso, sta sepolto il mio tesoro.
(Sesto entra)
Ahimé! Vile e negletta sempre starai Cornelia?
Ah no! Tra questi arnesi un ferro sceglieró;
con mano ardita contro di Tolomeo dentro la reggia—
(Lei prende la spada di Pompeo)

SESTO: Madre, ferma! Che fai?

CORNELIA: Lascia quest'ormi; voglio contro il tiranno,
uccisor del mio sposo, tentar la mia vendetta.

SESTO: (prendendo la spada da Cornelia) Questa vendetta a Sesto sol si aspetta.

CORNELIA: Oh, dolci accenti! Oh, care labra!

SESTO: Ma, o Dio, chi al re fellone ci scorterá?
(Cleopatra e Nirenous emergono dal loro nascondiglio)

CLEOPATRA: Io stessa.

NIRENUS: (a Cleopatra, con un soffio) Non ti scoprir!

CORNELIA: E chi ti sprona, amabile donzella, oggi in nostro soccorso offrir te stessa?

CLEOPATRA: La fellonia d'un re tiranno, il giusto.
Sotto nome di Lidia io servo a Cleopatra; se in virtú del tuo braccio ascende al trano, sari felice.

CORNELIA: Chi a noi sará scorta?

CLEOPATRA: (Indicando Nirenus) Questi, che alla regina é fido servo, saprá canto condurvi all'alta impresa.

SESTO: Figlio non é, chi vendicar non cura del genitor la morte.
Armeró questa destra,
e al suol trafitto cadrá punito
il gran tiran d'Egitto.
(Cleopatra, Nirenous e Cornelia escono)
Cara speme, questo core tu cominci a lusingar.

SCENA 4

Il palazzo di Tolomeo

(Cesare entra con Curie e seguaci Romani; Tolomeo entra con Achille e seguaci Egiziani.)

SEGUACI: Oh, quanto bella gloria é quella del vincitor.

TOLOMEO: Cesare, alla tua destra stende fasci di scettri generosa la sorte.

CORNELIA: (gazing at Pompey's coffin) Within your breast, O friendly stone, is buried my treasure.
(Sextus enters.) Woe to me! Shall Cornelia be forever wretched and alone?
Ah, no! Among these weapons
I shall choose a blade;
with daring hand, against Ptolemy here in the palace—
(She takes Pompey's sword.)

SEXTUS: Mother, stop! What are you doing?

CORNELIA: Leave me this weapon;
I would try my revenge against the tyrant,
slayer of my husband.

SEXTUS: (taking the sword from Cornelia) This revenge must come from Sextus alone.

CORNELIA: Oh, sweet words! Oh, dear lips!

SEXTUS: But, O God, who will lead us to the villainous king?
(Cleopatra and Nirenus emerge from their hiding place.)

CLEOPATRA: I myself.

NIRENUS: (to Cleopatra, softly) Do not reveal yourself!

CORNELIA: Dear maiden, who spurs you on to offer yourself for our help today?

CLEOPATRA: Justice and the villainy of a tyrant king.
Under the name of Lydia, I serve Cleopatra;
if, through the strength of your arm
she ascends the throne, you will be happy.

CORNELIA: Who will be our escort?

CLEOPATRA: (indicating Nirenus) This man, a trusted servant of the queen,
will lead you on your great exploit.

SEXTUS: Unworthy is the son who does not accept to avenge his father's death.
I shall take up arms,
and he shall fall in punishment to earth,
this great tyrant of Egypt.
(Cleopatra, Nirenus and Cornelia leave.)
Dear hope, you begin to give joy to this heart.

SCENE IV

Ptolemy's palace

(Casear enters with Curio and Roman followers; Ptolemy enters with Achillas and Egyptian followers.)

FOLLOWERS: Oh, what a splendid glory is that of the victor.

PTOLEMY: Caesar, generous fate proffers sheaves of scepters to your right hand.

CESARE: Tolomeo, a tante grazie io non so dir, se maggior lume apporti,
il sole in cielo o Tolomeo qui in terra,
Ma sappi, ch'ogni mal opra ogni gran lume oscura.

ACHILLE: (a Tolomeo, con un soffio) Sino al real aspetto egli to'offende, TOLOMEO: (a se stesso) Temerario Latin!

CESARE: (a se stesso) So che m'intende.

TOLOMEO: (a Cesare) Alle stanze reali questi che miri t'apriran le porte, e a te guida saranno.
(a se stesso)
Empio, tu pur venisti in braccio a morte.

CESARE: (a se stessio) Scorgo in quel volto un simulato inganno.
(I seguaci se ne vanno) Va tacito e nascosto, quand' avido é di preda,
l' astuto cacciator.
E chi é a mal far disposto, non brama che si veda
l'inganno del suo cor.
(lui e Curio se ne vanno, Cornelia e Sesto entrano)

ACHILLE: Sire, con Sesto il figlio questa é Cornelia.

TOLOMEO: (a se stesso) Oh, che sembianze, che amore!

CORNELIA: Ingrato, a quel Pompeo, tu recidesti il capo in faccia Roma?

SESTO: Empio, ti sfido a singolar certame.

TOLOMEO: O lá Da vigil stuol
sian custoditi questi Romani arditi.

ACHILLE: Alto Signor, condona il lor cieco furor!

TOLOMEO: Per or mi basta.
(a Achille, con un soffio) Io per te serbo questa dell'alma tua bella tiranna.

ACHILLE: Felice me!

TOLOMEO: (a se stesso) Quanto costui s'inganna.
(lui va furoi)

ACHILLE: Cornelia, se all'amor mio giri sereno il ciglio, ci talami concedi,
sará la madre in libertá col figlio.

CORNELIA: Barbaro, a te consorte?
Ah, no! Pria della morte.

ACHILLE: Tu ferma il piede, e pensa di non trovar piedtade acció che chiedi, se pietade al mio amor pria non concedi.

CAESAR: Ptolemy, I cannot say whether the gracious receive more light from the sun in the sky or from Ptolemy on earth.
But know this: every evil deed darkens every bright light.

ACHILLAS: He offends even your royal presence?

PTOLEMY: (to himself) Rash Roman!

CAESAR: (to himself) I know he understands me.

PTOLEMY: (to Caesar) These men whom you see will open the royal rooms to you, and they will be your guide.
(to himself)
Rascal, you have walked into the arms of death.

CAESAR: (to himself) I see the deceit hidden in his face
(The followers leave.)
Silently, unseen,
Intent on his prey,
the clever huntsman goes.
And the man disposed to evil wants for no one to see the deceit within his heart.
(He and Curio leave; Cornelia and Sextus enter.)

ACHILLAS: Sire, this is Cornelia, with Sextus, her son.

PTOLEMY: (to himself) Oh, what beauty, what love!

CORNELIA: Ungrateful one, you severed the head of Pompey before the Romans?

SEXTUS: Wretch, I challenge you to single combat.

PTOLEMY: Enough! A vigilant band will take care of these brave Romans.

ACHILLAS: Great lord, forgive their blind fury!

PTOLEMY: For now, it's enough for me.
(to Achillas, softly) For you I shall save this lovely mistress of your soul.

ACHILLAS: How happy I am!

PTOLEMY: (to himself) How this man deceives himself.
(he goes out)

ACHILLAS: Cornelia, if you will look upon my love with favor,
if you will permit our marriage,
the mother shall have freedom, with her son.

CORNELIA: Barbarian—your wife?
Ah, no! Rather death.

ACHILLAS: Then stay and expect no mercy for what you ask if you do not show mercy for my love.

Tu sei il cor di questo core, sei il mio ben, non t'adirar!
(lui se ne va)

SESTO: Madre!

CORNELIA: Mia vita!

SESTO: (mentre i soldati lo catturano) Addio.

CORNELIA: (afferandosi al braccio di suo figlio) Dove, dove, inumani, l'anima mia guidate?
Empi, lasciate,
che al mio core, al mio bene io porgo almen gli ultimi baci.
ahi, pene.
Son nato a lagrimar
e il dolce mio conforto,
ah, sempre piangeró.

SESTO: Son nato a sospirar,
e il dolce mio conforto,
ah, sempre piangeró.
Ah, sempre piangeró;
son nato a sospirar, ecc.

CORNELIA: Ah, sempre piangeró; son nato a lagrimar, ecc.

ACT II

SCENA I

"Monte Parnasso"

(Cleopatra, la sua attendente e Nirenus)

CLEOPATRA: E seguisti, o Niren, quanto t'imposi?

NIRENUS: Adempito é il comando.
Ma, che far pensi?

CLEOPATRA: Amore giá suggerí all'idea stravagante pensier;
ho giá risolto sotto finte apparenze far prigionier d'amor ch'il cor m'ha tolto.

NIRENUS: Io che far deggio

CLEOPATRA: Attendi Cesare in quel parte; e lui dirai
che, per dargli contezza di quanto dal suo re gli si contende, pria che tramonti il sol Lidia l'attende.
(essa se ne va)

NIRENUS: Da Cleopatra apprendo chi é seguace d'amor l'astuzie e frodi.

CESARE: (entrando) Dov'é, Niren, dov'é l'anima mia?

NIRENUS: In questo loco in breve verrá Lidia, Signor.
(si sente una bellissima sinfonia)

CESARE: Taci!

NIRENUS: Che fia?

CESARE: Cieli, e qual della sfere scende armonico suon, chi mi rapisce?

You are heart of this heart,
my love, do not be angry!
(He leaves.)

SEXTUS: Mother!

CORNELIA: My life!

SEXTUS: (as soliders take him captive) Farewell.

CORNELIA: (clinging to her son's arm) Where, inhuman wretches, are you taking my soul?
Wretches, grant me at least a last kiss to my son, my heart, my love.
Ah, my suffering
I was born to weep,
and for my sweet comforter
I shall ever weep.

SEXTUS: I was born to sigh,
and for my sweet comforter
I shall ever weep.
Ah, I shall ever weep;
I was born to sigh, etc.

CORNELIA: Ah, I shall ever weep;
I was born to weep, etc.

ACT II

SCENE I

The "Mount Parnassus"

(Cleopatra, her attendants and Nirenus)

CLEOPATRA: Nireno, have you done as I commanded?

NIRENUS: Your command has been carried out.
But, what is your plan?

CLEOPATRA: Love has put a wild thought in my mind.
I have decided, in disguise, to imprison in love
the man who has stolen my heart.

NIRENUS: What must I do?

CLEOPATRA: Wait for Caesar here, and tell him that at sundown Lydia will come to him with news of how she fared with the king.
(She leaves.)

NIRENUS: From Cleopatra he shall learn that cleverness and fraud are love's henchmen.

CAESAR: (entering) Where is she,
Nirenus, where is my love?

NIRENUS: In a little while
Lydia will come, my lord.
(A beautiful symphony is heard.)

CAESAR: Silence!

NIRENUS: What can it be?

CAESAR: Heavens, from which of the spheres comes this music which enchants me?

NIRENUS: Avrá di selce il cor chi non languisce.
(lui se ne va)

CESARE: (mentre Cleopatra diventa visibile) Giulio, che miri?
E quando con abisso di luce scesero i Numi in terra?

CLEOPATRA: V'adoro, pupille, saette d'amore,
le vostre faville son grate nel sen.
Pietose vi brama il mesto mio core, ch'ogn'ora vi chiama l'amato suo ben.

CESARE: Non ha in cielo il Tonante melodia, che pareggi un sí bel canto.

CLEOPATRA: V'adoro, pupille, ecc.

CESARE: (mentre Cleopatra va da lui) Vola, vola, mio cor, al dolce incanto!

CLEOPATRA: Caro!

CESARE: Bella!

CLEOPATRA: Piú amabile beltá mai non si troverá
del tuo bel volto . . .

CESARE: Piú amabile beltá
mai non si troverá
del tuo bel volto.
Piú amabile beltá, ecc.

CLEOPATRA: . . . del tuo bel volto.
Piú amabile beltá, ecc.

NIRENUS: Only a man whose heart is stone would not be moved.
(He leaves.)

CAESAR: (as Cleopatra becomes visible) Julius, what are you gazing on?
When did these gods come to earth in all their radiant glory?

CLEOPATRA: I adore you, O eyes, love's darts,
your sparks are pleasing to my heart.
My sad heart, which never ceases calling you beloved, begs for your mercy.

CAESAR: The Thunderer in heaven lacks a melody to rival so lovely a song.

CLEOPATRA: I adore you, O eyes, etc.

CAESAR: (as Cleopatra comes to him) Fly, my heart to the sweet enchantment!

CLEOPATRA: Dear!

CAESAR: Beautiful!

CLEOPATRA: No more lovable beauty will ever be seen than your handsome face . . .

CAESAR: No more lovable beauty will even be seen than your lovely face.
No more lovable beauty, etc.

CLEOPATRA: . . . than your handsome face.
No more lovable beauty, etc.

SCENA 2

Il giardino serraglio nel Palazzo di Tolomeo)

CORNELIA: (entrando) Deh, piangete, o mesti lumi,
giá per voi non v'é piú speme.

ACHILLE: (entrando) Bella, non lagrimare!
Cangerá il tuo destin le crude tempre.

CORNELIA: Chi nacque a sospirar, piange per sempre.

ACHILLE: Se a me non sei crudele, ogn' or sará fedele
a te questo mio cor.
Ma se spietata sempre,
ver me non cangi tempre,
aspetta sol rigor!
(lui se ne va)

TOLOMEO: (entrando) Bella, placa lo sdegno.

CORNELIA: Lasciami, iniquo re!

TOLOMEO: Tanto rigore?
Ma se un re ti bramasse—

CORNELIA: Freni l'anima insana lo stimolo del senso;
pensa che con romana.

TOLOMEO: Tanto ritrosa a un re?
Perfida donna!
Si spietata, il tuo rigore sveglia l'odio in questo sen.

SCENE II

The seraglio garden in Ptolemy's palace

CORNELIA: (entering) Ah, weep, my saddened eyes,
for you there is no hope.

ACHILLAS: (entering) Beautiful one, do not weep!
Your destiny will change its cruel temper.

CORNELIA: The one born for sighing, forever weeps.

ACHILLAS: If you are not cruel to me, then this heart of mine shall be ever faithful to you.
But if you are forever pitiless, unchanging in your temper,
then expect only severity from me!
(He leaves.)

PTOLEMY: (entering) Beautiful one, quiet your disdain.

CORNELIA: Leave me, evil king!

PTOLEMY: Such harshness?
But if a king desired you—

CORNELIA: Your mad soul must restrain the prodding of your senses.
Remember, I am a Roman.

PTOLEMY: So reluctant toward a king
Treacherous woman!
So pitiless, your harshness awakens hatred in my breast.

(lui se ne va. Sesto entra e trova Cornelia con una daga in mano, cercando di togliersi la vita)

SESTO: Madre! Ferma! Che fai!

CORNELIA: Figlio, Sesto, mio core, come qui ne venisti?

SESTO: Chi alla vendetta aspira, vita non cura, o madre!

NIRENUS: (entrando) Cornelia, infauste nove.
Il re m'impone,
che tra le sue dilette io ti conduca.

CORNELIA: O Dio!

SESTO: Numi, che sento?

NIRENUS: Non vi turbate, no;
unqua sospetto a Tolomeo non fui;
ambi verrete lá dove il re tiranno é in preda alle lascive.
Colá Sesto nascoso in suo potere avrá l'alta vendetta.

CORNELIA: Assista il cielo una si giusta impresa!
Cessa omai di sospirare!
Non é sempre irato il cielo contro i miseri;
suol fare, benché tardo le vendette.
(essa se ne va)

SESTO: Figlio non é, chi vendicar non cura del genitor lo scempio.
Sú dunque alla vendetta ti prepara 'alma forte
e prima di morir altrui da' morte!
(Nirenua se ne va)
L'angue offeso mai riposa se il veleno pria non spande dentro il sangue all'offensor.
Cosí alma mia non osa di mostrarsi altera e grande, se non svelle l'empio cor.

SCENA III

Il "Monte Parnasso"

(Cesare e Cleopatra)

CESARE: Bella Lidia, ben potresti sperar dalla tua sorte d'essermi forse un dí sposa e consorte.

CLEOPATRA: Sposa? T'adoreró fino alla morte.

CURIO: (entrando) Cesare, sei tradito.

CESARE: Io tradito?

CLEOPATRA: Che sento?

VOCI: (dietro i scenarii) Mora, mora, Cesare more!

CESARE: Cosí dunque in Egitto regna la fellonia?
Bella, rimanti;
sono infausti per noi cotesti lidi.

CLEOPATRA: Fermati, non partir.

CESARE: Lascia, Lidia!

(He leaves, Sextus enters and finds Cornelia with a dagger about to take her life.)

SEXTUS: Mother! Stop! What are you doing?

CORNELIA: My son, Sextus, my beloved,
how have you come here?

SEXTUS: The man intent on vengeance cares not about his life, O mother!

NIRENUS: (entering) Cornelia—unhapping tidings.
The king commands me
to take you to his harem.

CORNELIA: O God!

SEXTUS: O gods, what do I hear?

NIRENUS: Do not be troubled.
Ptolemy has no suspicion of me;
both of you must come there,
where the tyrant king lies prey to his lascivious women.
There Sextus, in hiding, will find his great revenge within his power.

CORNELIA: May heaven favor so righteous an endeavor!
Cease now your sighing!
Not always is heaven wroth against the wretched;
it grants revenge however late.
(She leaves.)

SEXTUS: He is no son who would not strive to avenge the slaughter of a parent.
Up, then, and may your stout heart prepare you for revenge;
before you die, bring death to another!
(Nirenus leaves.)
The angry serpent never rests until he has spread his poison in his tormentor's blood.
So my soul dares not show itself
so haughty and so grand, until it has torn out the evil heart.

SCENE III

The "Mount Parnassus"

(Caesar and Cleopatra)

CAESAR: Beautiful Lydia, well might you hope one day for Fate to make you my wife, my consort.

CLEOPATRA: Wife? I shall love you until I die.

CURIO: (entering) Caesar, you are betrayed.

CAESAR: I, betrayed?

CLEOPATRA: What do I hear?

VOICES: (offstage) He shall die, Caesar shall die!

CAESAR: So then perfidy reigns in Egypt?
My beauty, remain here.
these shores are an evil omen for us.

CELOPATRA: Stop—do not leave.

CAESAR: Let me go, Lydia!

CLEOPATRA: Son Cleopatra,
e non piú Lidia in cambio.

CESARE: Sei Cleopatra? Lidia é Cleopatra?
Che udisti, cor mio?

CLEOPATRA: Fuggi, Cesare, fuggi!
Dalle reggi volano
i congiurati.

CESARE: Vengano pure, ho core.

CLEOPATRA: Oh, salvati, oh, mio bel sol!
Cesare, fuggi!

VOCI: (dietro i scenarii) Mora, mora, mora.

CESARE: Al lampo dell'armi quest'alma guerriera vendetta fará.
(lui e Curio se ne vanno)

VOCI: (dietro i scenarii) Mora, mora, Cesare mora!

CLEOPATRA: Che sento? O Dio!
Morrá Cleopatra ancora.
Anima vile, che parli mai?
Deh, taci!
Avró, per vendicarmi
in bellicosa parte, di Bellona in sembianza
un cor di Marte.
Intanto, o Numi,
voi che il ciel reggete.
difendete il mio bene!
Ch'egli é del seno mio conforto e speme.
Se pietá di me non senti,
guisto ciel, io moriró.
Tu da' pace a miei tormenti, o quest'alma spireró.

ACT III

SCENA I

Sulle sponde del Mediterraneo

(Al suono della Sinfonia comincia la battaglia tra i soldati di Tolomeo e quelli di Cleopatra. Le Forze de Tolomeo vince. A Sinfonia finita, Tolemeo e Cleopatra entrano seguiti dai soldati.)

TOLOMEO: Vinta cadesti al balenar, di questo mio fulmine reale.

CLEOPATRA: Tolomeo non mi vinse.

TOLOMEO: Olá! Sí baldanzosa del vincitor
al riverito aspetto?
(ai soldati)
S'incateni costei.

CLEOPATRA: Empio crude! Ti puniranno i dei.
(Tolomeo si ritira; Cleopatra e le guardie seguono)

CLEOPATRA: I am Cleopatra, no more the changeling Lydia.

CAESAR: You are Cleopatra? Lydia is Cleopatra?
What do I hear?

CLEOPATRA: Flee, Caesar, flee!
The conspirators are hastening from their palaces.

CAESAR: Let them come: I am brave.

CLEOPATRA: Oh, save yourself,
oh, my sun!
Caesar, flee!

VOICES: (offstage) He shall die.

CAESAR: Amidst the flash of arms the warrior's heart shall take its revenge!
(He and Curio leave.)

VOICES: (offstage) He shall die,
Caesar shall die!

CLEOPATRA: What do I hear? O
God!
Let Cleopatra also die.
Cowardly soul, what are you saying?
Ah, be silient!
I shall have,
for my revenge in battle,
the features of Bellona,
with the heart of Mars.
Meanwhile, O gods,
you who reign in heaven,
defend my lover!
For he is both
my hope and my comfort.
If you do not feel mercy for me,
just heaven, I shall die.
Give you peace to my torment, or this soul will die.

ACT III

SCENE I

At the edge of the Mediterranean Sea

To the strains of a warlike Sinfonia the battle between Ptolemy's soliders and those of Cleopatra takes place. Ptolemy's forces win. At the end of the Sinfonia, Ptolemy and Cleopatra enter, followed by soldiers.)

PTOLEMY: You have fallen, conquered by the flash of the royal sword.

CLEOPATRA: Ptolemy has not conquered me.

PTOLEMY: Enough! Still so haughty
before the revered face of the conqueror?
(to the soliders) Put this woman in chains.

CLEOPATRA: Cruel villain! The gods will punish you.
(Ptolemy goes off; Cleopatra and guards follow.)

CESARE: (entrando) Dall' ondoso periglio salvo mi porto al lido il mio propizio fato.
Qui la celeste parca non tronca ancor lo stame alla mia vita!
Ma dove andró?
E chi mi porge aita?
Ove son le mie schiere?
Ove son le legioni, che a tante mie vittorie il varco apriro?
Solo in queste erme arene
al monarca del mondo errar conviene?
Aure, deh, per pietá spirate al petto mio, per dar conforto, o Dio,
al mio dolor.
Dite, dov'é,
che fa l'idolo del mio sen,
l'amato e dolce ben di questo cor?
Ma d'ogni intorno i' veggio sparse d'arme e d'estinti
L'infortunate arene, segno d'infausto annunzio al fin sará.
(lui si ritira mentre Sesto e Nirenus entrano. Achille entra pure)

SESTO: Cerco in van Tolomeo per vendicarmi.

ACHILLE: (cadendo) Hai vinto, o fato!

NIRENUS: É questi Achilla, in mezzo al sen piagato.

ACHILLE: Tu sai che quell 'Achilla consigliò
del gran Pompeo la moret—

SESTO: (a se stesso) Ah, scelerato!

ACHILLE: Sol per aver Cornelia in moglie, contro Cesare ordí l'alta congiura—

CESARE: (a se stesso) Fellone!

ACHILLE: Questo sigil tu prendi; nel piú vicino speco
cento armati querrieri
a questo segno ad ubbidir son pronti; cosi tu puoi e in breve d'ora
torre all'empio Cornelia, e insieme far che vendicato io mora.
(dando il sigillo a Sesto lui muore)

CESARE: (rivelando se stesso) Lascia questo sigillo!

SESTO: Che veggio! Cesare vivo.

CESARE: Teco Niren mi segua;
o che torró alla sorte Cornelia e Cleopatra, o avró la morte.
Quel torrente, che cade dal monte,
tutto atterra ch' incontra lo stá.

CAESAR: (entering) From the perilous waves, my propitious Fate has brought me safe to shore.
The heavenly Fate does not yet sever
the thread of my life!
But where shall I go?
And who will help me?
Where are my troops?
Where are the legions, which opened the pass to so many of my victories?
Among these ancient sands must the conqueror of the world wander?
Gentle breezes, ah, for mercy's sake blow upon my breast,
to give comfort, O God,
to my grief.
Tell me, where is she who is the idol of my breast, the beloved, sweet love of this heart?
But on every side I see, covered with weapons and our dead,
the unlucky sands,
which in the end will be an unlucky sign.
(He withdraws as Sextus and Nirenus enter. Achillas also enters.)

SEXTUS: I am seeking Ptolemy, to take my revenge, but in vain.

ACHILLAS: (falling) You have conquered, O fate!

NIRENUS: This is Achillas, wounded in the chest.

ACHILLAS: You know that this Achillas
counseled the killing of Pompey—

SEXTUS: (to himself) Ah, wretched man!

ACHILLAS: Only to take Cornelia as his wife did he plan the conspiracy against Caesar—

CAESAR: (to himself) Villain!

ACHILLAS: Take this seal; is a cave nearby
a hundred armed men wait to obey this sign;
thus you can quickly
save Cornelia from the villain, and at the same time
see to it that I die avenged.
(Giving the seal to Sextus, he dies.)

CAESAR: (revealing himself)
Give me that seal!

SEXTUS: What is this I see! Caesar—alive.

CAESAR: Follow me with Nirenus; either I shall save Cornelia and Cleopatra, or I shall die.
The torrent that floods down from the mountain levels everything that stands in its way.

SCENA 2

Il Campo di Tolomeo

(Cleopatra e le sue attendenti. Soldati stanno alla Guardia.)

CLEOPATRA: Voi, che mie fide ancelle un tempo foste, or lagrimate invan, piú mie non siete.
Il barbaro germano,
che mi privó del regno,
a me vi toglie,
e a me torrá la vita.
(fuori si sente un battito d'armi.)
Ma qual strepito d'armi?
Ah, si! Piú mie non siete, spirar l'alma Cleopatra or or vedrete.
(Cesare e i sui soldati entrano. Lui fa motto alle guardie di uscire, e Cleopatra e' lasciata libera)
Cesare, o un' ombra sei?

CESARE: Cara! Ti stringo al seno; ha cangiato vicende il nostro fato.
Per conquister, non che l'Egitto, un mondo, basta l'ardir
di questo petto solo.
(lui va fuori, seguito dai suoi soldati)

CLEOPATRA: Da tempeste il legno infranto, se pai salvo giunge in porto.
non sá piú che desiar.
Cosí il cor tra pene e pianto,
or che trova il suo conforto,
torna l'anima a bear.

SCENA III

Il Serraglio di Tolomeo

TOLOMEO: Cornelia, é tempo omai, che tu doni pietade
a un Re che langue.

CORNELIA: Speri in vano mercede.
Come obliar poss'io l'estinto mio consorte?

TOLOMEO: Altro ten'offre il regnator d'Egitto;

SESTO: (entrando con la spada in pugno)
A me, tiranno!
(lui ferisce Tolomeo)

SCENE II

Ptolemy's camp

(Cleopatra and her attendants. Soldiers stand guard.)

CLEOPATRA: You, who were my faithful handmaidens, now weep in vain—
you are no longer mine.
The barbarous brother, who took my kingdom from me takes you too,
and from me he will take my life.
(There is a clash of arms outside.)
But that clash of arms?
Ah, yes! You are no longer mine, and now you shall see Cleopatra die.
(Caesar and his soldiers enter. He motions the guards out, and Cleopatra is released.)
Caesar—or his ghost?

CAESAR: Beloved! I hold you in my arms;
our destiny has changed its course.
To conquer not only Egypt but the world,
the daring of this heart alone suffices.
(He goes out, followed by his soldiers.)

CELOPATRA: When, broken by the storms, the ship comes safe to port,
the sailor has no other desire.
So the heart, torn with suffering and tears,
when at last it is comforted, brings ecstasy anew to the soul.

SCENE III

Ptolemy's seraglio

PTOLEMY: Cornelia, the time has come for you to take pity on a king who languishes for you.

CORNELIA: You hope in vain for mercy.
How can I forget
my husband who is dead?

PTOLEMY: The one who reigns in Egypt offers you more; beloved, close to me—

SEXTUS: (entering, with sword in hand) You are mine, tyrant!
(He stabs Ptolemy.)

TOLOMEO: Io son tradito, o Numi!
(lui muore)

CORNELIA: Or sí, ti riconosco, figlio del gran Pompeo,
e al sen ti stringo.

SESTO: Giace il tiranno estinto;
or, padre, sí,
tu benché vinto hai vinto.
(lui bacia la mano di Cornelia e si inginocchia difronte a lei)

CORNELIA: Non ha piú che temere quest'alma vendicata; or si sará beata—
comincio a respirar!

SCENA 4

Alessandria

(Durante la Sinfonia, Cesare e Cleopatra entrano con il seguito di Egiziani. Dopo entra Nirenus, poi Cornelia e Sesto.)

CESARE: (a Sesto, che si inginocchia) La vendetta del padre é ben dovuta al figlio;
sorgi, Sesto,
ed amico al sen t'accolgo.

SESTO: Ogni affetto di fede in te rivolgo.

CORNELIA: Dell'estinto tiranno ecco i segni reali;
a te li porgo.

CESARE: (a sua volta dando a Cleopatra i segni reali) Bellissima Cleopatra, regina del Egitto, darai norma alle genti,
e legge al trono.

IL POPOLO: Ritorni omai nel nostro core la bella gioia ed il piacer;
sgombrato é il sen d'ogni dolore, ciascun ritorni ora goder.

CLEOPATRA E CESARE: Un bel contento il sen giá si prepara, se tu sarai costante orgn' or per me;
cosí sortí dal cor la doglia amara,
e sol vi resta amor, costanza e fé.

IL POPOLO: Ritorni omai nel nostro core, ecc.

FINE

PTOLEMY: I am betrayed, O gods!
(He dies.)

CORNELIA: Now indeed I see in you great Pompey's son, and I clasp you to my breast.

SEXTUS: The tyrant lies dead;
now, indeed, father,
you although vanquished, have conquered.
(He kisses Cornelia's hand and kneels before her.)

CORNELIA: This soul, now avenged, no longer fears;
henceforth it will be blessed—
I breathe again!

SCENE IV

Alexandria

(During the Sinfonia, Caesar and Cleopatra enter with a following of Egyptians. Then Nirenus enters, and then Cornelia and Sextus.)

CAESAR: (to Sextus, who kneels)
The father's revenge comes indeed from the son;
arise, Sextus,
I embrace you as my friend.

SEXTUS: My loyalty I will give to you.

CORNELIA: Here are the royal symbols of the dead tyrant;
I give them to you.

CAESAR: (in turn giving the symbols to Cleopatra) Loveliest Cleopatra, Egypt's queen you shall be the model for the people and bring your law to the throne.

POPULACE: Let there return to our hearts fairest joy and pleasure;
with our hearts free from all sorrow,
let each one again rejoice.

CLEOPATRA and CAESAR: A great joy will fill my breast, if you will always be faithful;
thus bitter grief will leave my heart;
there will remain only love, constancy and faith.

POPULACE: Let there return to our hearts, etc.

THE END

Alcina (1735)

MUSIC BY GEORGE FREDERICK HANDEL

This three-act opera, set to a libretto by an unknown author (adapted from the opera L'isola di Alcina, based upon an episode in Ariosto's Orlando furioso), was first performed in London in 1735. This opera includes the use of ballet and full chorus (as opposed to an ensemble of soloists). Bradamante, dressed as a soldier, and her guardian Melisso are searching for Ruggiero, Bradamante's fiance. They are shipwrecked on an island ruled by Alcina, a sorceress. Morgana, Alcina's sister, meets them and falls in love with Bradamante in her disguise. Alcina is in her palace with Ruggiero. She welcomes the strangers and sings of her love for him. Bradamante, posing as her brother Ricciardo, and Melisso beseech him to remember Bradamante, but Ruggiero now loves Alcina. Oronte, Alcina's general, is in love with Morgana. He tells Ruggiero that Alcina is attracted to "Ricciardo" and that Ruggiero will soon become a beast or a tree as is the fate of Alcina's other former lovers. Bradamante tries to convince Ruggiero of her true identity; however, he doesn't believe her. Morgana and Melisso urge her to leave the island, but she refuses to do so. Melisso, dressed as Ruggiero's old tutor, comes to him and places a magic ring on his finger that breaks Alcina's spell. Ruggiero remembers his love for Bradamante but still doesn't believe "Ricciardo" is in fact she. Alcina is about to cast a spell on Ricciardo but is stopped by Morgana. Ruggiero assures Alcina that he still loves her (which isn't true), and Oronte tells Alcina that her lover intends to leave her. Bradamante and Ruggiero are at last re-united, but Morgana sees them together and rushes off to inform Alcina, who is enraged. Morgana, realizing that she has been in love with a woman, bemoans her fate to Orontes, who is still in love with her. Alcina swears revenge upon Ruggiero and later learns that the lovers are intent on conquering the island and breaking Alcina's spells. Alcina tries to convince them of her desire for friendship, which they don't believe; Ruggiero breaks the urn containing Alcina's magical powers. Alcina and Morgana vanish, and Alcina's former lovers return to life. The opera ends with their choruses of joy and a ballet.

CORO: Questo e il Cielo de' contenti,
Questo è il centro del goder.
Qui è l' eliso de Viventi,
Qui, gli eroi, forma il piacer.
Bradamante, e Melisso; si arrestano alquanto ad ammirare la magnificenza del luoco, e delle feste.

Bradamante, Melisso, Alcina, Ruggiero, ed Oberto.

BRAD: (Ecco l' infido.)

MEL: (Taci.) Alta Reina
(Avvanzando verso Alcina.)
Con Ricciardo Guerriero,
Melisso à piedi tuoi umil s' inchina.

ALC: Fu vostra forte, amici,
Al mio Regno approdar.

MEL: Diam lodi al Cielo.
Ti preghiam, che pietosa,
Sin che 'l mar sia placato
Ne permetti restar

ALC: Tanto m' è grato.
E' tu, odi Ruggiero, anima mia
Mostra lor la mia Reggia, e Caccie, e Fonti.
Veggan dove scorprimmo, all' ombra amica
D' un scambievole Amor, fiamma pudica.
Dì, cor mio, quanto t' amai.
Mostra il Bosco, il Fonte, il Rio
Dove tacqui, e sospirai
Pria di chiederti mercè.
Dove fisso ne miei rai,
Sospirando al sospir mio,
Mi dicesti con un sguardo
Peno, ed ardo al par di tè.
Dì, ec.
(Parte.)

SCENA III

Melisso, Bradamante, Ruggiero ed Oberto.

OBER: Generosi Guerrier; deh! per pietade
Udiste mai del Palladino Astolfo?

MEL: D' Astolfo?

BRA: Del Cugin?

MEL: Perche?

OBER: E mio Padre.
Dal naufragio scampati
Il Genitor ed io
Quivì approdamno; e la clemente Alcina
Generosa ne accolse, anzì d' onori
Colmò il mio Genitor.

MEL: Che arrivò poi?

CHORUS: Here's the Seat of endless Pleasure,
Centre of unbounded Joy,
Bless'd Elisium! Nothing here
Can our happy Peace destroy.
Bradamante and Melisso stay some time admiring the Magnificence of the Place and Pomp.

Bradamante, Melisso, Alcina, Rogero, and Oberto.

BAD: (Behold the base Ingrate!)

MEL: (Be still.) Great Queen, Melisso and the brave Richardo
Bow now before you.

ALC: Worthy unknown.
It was kind Fate that drove you on our Coast.

MEL: We thank the Fate that guided us so well,
And beg your kind Compassion, that we may Here take our Shelter, 'till the troubled Sea
Is more appeas'd.

ALC: I bid you Welcome, Strangers.
And you, my Dear Rogero, entertain them;
Shew them our Palace, Gardens, bubbling Fountains;
Shew them some pleasing Chase; shew them the Shade,
The ever grateful Shade where first we breath'd
The modest Fervour of our mutual Loves.
Tell, O tell, how much I lov'd thee;
Shew the Fount, the Rill, the Grove,
Where first by Sighs alone I ask'd
Your gentle Pity of my Love.
When your Eyes on mine intent,
And returning Sigh for Sigh,
First in pleasing Sounds you said
With equal Flames, I burn, I die.
Tell, etc.
(Exit.)

SCENE III

Melisso, Bradamante, Rogero and Oberto.

OBERT: Brave Warriours, for Pity let me know,
Have you heard of the Paladin Astolfo?

MEL: Astolfo?

BRAD: My Cousin?

MEL: Why seek you him?

OBERT: He is my Father.
We, by good Chance, escap'd the raging Sea,
And to this happy Place kind Fate directed us;
Where fair Alcina, generous and mild,
Receiv'd us hospitably; and still more,
With Honours deck'd my Father.

MEL: What then could happen?

BRA: (Sarà con gli altri in Fera.) (a Melisso.)

OBER: Più non lo trovo, è l' alma mia dispera. (piange)
Chì m' insegna il caro Padre?
Chi mi rende il Genitor?
Per far lieto questo cor.
Mi abbandona la speranza;
Langue in me bella constanza;
Agitato è me l' amor.
Chi, ec.
(Parte.)

SCENA IV

Bradamante, Melisso, e Ruggiero.

BRA: Mi ravviso, Ruggier, dimmi?

RUG: Il tuo Volto
Di Ricciardo rassembra.

BRAD: Io pur son quello.
Germano alla tua cara Bradamante.

RUG: Mia? Nò: t' inganni. Io son s' Alcina amante.

MEL: Signor: tu senza il Brando, e senza scudo?

RUG: Servo ad Amor, che và senz' Arme, e nudo.

MEL: Della tua prima Fama
Nulla curi?

BRAD: E la fede,
Che Alla Germana mia di sposo desti?

RUG: E Alcina mia non vien? Siete molesti?
Guardando all' intorno. (a Bra. e Mel.)
Di te mi rido
Semplice stolto. (a Bradamante.)
Sieguo Cupido,
Amo un bel Volto (a Melisso.)
Nè sò mancare di fedeltà.
Il caro bene
Che minnamora
A me non viene?
Non torna ancora?
Dov' è? Che fà?
Di te, ec.
(Parte.)

SCENA V

Oronte, Melisso e Bradamante.

OR: Quà dunque ne veniste,
D' una Donna incostante
A involarmi l' Amor? Grand' è l' offesa.
Decida il Brando fol la ria contesa.
(Sfodera la spada.)

BRAD: A savage Beast he, with the rest, will range
The horrid Wilds. (Aside to Mel.)

OBERT: Alas! in vain I've sought him; he is lost,
And with him all the Comfort of my Soul. (Weeps.)
Ah! who will tell me where to find
My dearest Father? Who again
Can give him to my longing Sight?
And ease my troubled Mind.
Of Grief alone I am possest
My Courage fails, Hope flies,
And leaves no Gleam of Joy within my Breast.
Ah! etc.
(Exit.)

SCENE IV

Bradamante, Melisso and Rogero.

BRAD: Think you, Rogero, that you ever saw me?

ROG: Your Face bears much resemblance of Richardo.

BRAD: I am the same,
The Brother of your dearest Bradamante.

ROG: You are deceiv'd; Alcina has my Love.

MEL: What mean you, Sir, thus without Shield and Sword?

ROG: Love now I serve, and need nor Shield nor Sword.

MEL: Have you thrown off all Care
For glorious Deeds, and for your former Fame?

BRAD: Have you forgot the Faith
You plighted to my Sister.

ROG: Why comes not my Alcina?
(Looking round him.)
Away, you trouble me.
Thy idle Talk
I laugh to Scorn. (To Bradamante.)
Cupid I serve; (To Melisso.)
To Beauty bow,
And miss not of my Faith.
Why does the Fair
Whom I adore
With Absence wound me so?
Oh Cruel, stay!
Why comes she not? Why this Delay?
Thy, etc.
(Exit.)

SCENE V

Orontes, Melisso and Bradamante.

OR: Here are you come to tempt a fickle Fair,
And rob me of her Love? Great the Offence,
Not to be born. The Sword shall do me right. (Draws.)

BRAD: Qual ingiuria? Qual' onta?
Ricevesti da Noi

OR: La spada il dica.

SCENA VI

Morgana, e Detti.

MOR: Io sono tura disesa. Io tua nemica. (a Bradam.) (ad Oronte.)

BRA: E Gelosia: (ad Oron.) Forza d' Amore (a Morg.) Che il fen t'affanna (ad Or.) Che senti al core, (a Mor.)
Ma questa è ancora la pena mia. (a Morg.)
Ma pur tiranna la provo in me.
Per un bel volto, che ne vien tolto
Tu mesto gemi. (ad Oronte.)
Noi ci sdegnamo (a Morgana.)
E tutti amiamo, senza mercè.
E Gelosia, ec.
(Parte con Mel.)

SCENA VII

Camera, che guarda agli Appartamenti di Alcina. Ruggiero, che torna dal cercare; e poi Oronte.

RUG: La cerco in vano, e la crudel non torna.

OR: (Nuovo inganno si trovi; Un geloso Amator all' altro giovi.)
Senti, Ruggiero, senti:
E' credi ai sguardi, alla mentita frode
D' Alcina tua?

RUG: Cosi favella Oronte?

OR: Cosi. Tu sol non fai,
Che Chiudon queste selve
Mille Amanti infelici
Conversi in Onda, in fredde Ruppi, e Belve?

RUG: Io fo ben dì quai laccj.
Per me la strinse Amore

OR: Il laccio è sciolto

RUG: Me sol' ama, e desia.

OR: Va, che sei stolto,
Ricciardo è l' Idol suo.

RUG: Già di lui s'invaghi?

OR: Lui solo adora;
E' per lui cangeratti in Belva ancora.
Semplicetto; a Donna credi?
Se la vedi, che ti mira,
Che sospira: pensa, e di;
Ingannar potrebbe ancor.
Quell sospiri lusinghieri,
Quelli sguardi a voglier tardi,
Menzogneri san cosi,
Senza amar, mostrare Amor.
Semplicetto, ec.
(Parte.)

SCENA VIII

Ruggiero ed Alcina.

RUG: Ah! infedel, infedel! Questo è l' Amore?

ALC: Mio tesoro, mio ben, anima mia,
Chiami Alcina infede?

RUG: Si, che lo sei, crudele.
Và; Ricciardo t'attende, Egli a' tuoi prieghi
Qui volse il piè: quivi per te dimoreà.

ALC: Tu geloso m' offendi, e piaci ancora.

SCENA IX

Bradamante e Detti.

BRAD: Reina: il tuo soggiorno
Quanto di raro ha il Mondo, ha in fe raccolto;
Ma il portento maggior' è il tuo bel volto.

AL: Bello è sol per Ruggiero.

BRAD: Egli lo merta.

RUG: Eh! torna al Patrio Nido,
Torna Ricciardo a tratar l' arme

BRAD: (Infido!)

ALC: Lascia prima, che sia l' Onda placata.

BRAD: E pietade.

ALC: E dovere.

RUG: E Amore, ingrata. (ad Alcina sdegnato.)

ALC: Alla costanza mia, cosi favella
Il tuo core crudele?
E pur ti son fedel', e pur son quella.
Sì: son quella
Non piu bella,
Non piu cara agli occhj tuoi;
Ma fe amar tu non mi vuoi,
Infedel, deh! non mi odiar.
Chiedi al guardo, alla favella
Se son quella, dillo ingrato
Al tuo core mentitore,
Che mi vuole rinfacciar.
Sì, ec.
(Parte.)

BRAD: We know not of the Charge:
What Injury have you receiv'd from us!

OR: Let this pronounce your Crime.

SCENE VI

To them Morgana.

MOR: I will maintain your Cause (to Brad.) and your's oppose (to Or.)

BRAD: 'Tis Jealousy torments your Breast. (To Or.)
'Tis Love that warms your Heart. (To Mor.)
Your Tyrant gives me equal Pain. (To Or.)
Yours too I prove within. (To Mor.)
For a lost Beauty you complain. (To Or.)
You love and meet Disdain (To Mor.)
Alike our Fate is hard,
Doom'd to Love, without Reward.
'Tis, etc.
(Exit with Mor.)

SCENE VII

A Galley leading to the Apartments of Alcina, Rogero, returning from seeking her, and afterwards Orontes.

ROG: I've sought the Cruel, but in vain;
She does not yet return.

OR: New Arts arise to mitigate my Grief;
A jealous Lover joys in another's Pains. (Aside.)
Hear me, Rogero;
Do you so easily believe the Arts,
The false designing Looks of your Alcina?

ROG: What says Orontes?

OR: E'en thus he says:
Do you not know that in these fatal Woods.
Thousands of hapless Lovers lie inanimate,
Some chang'd to Streams,
Some to wild Beasts, to Trees and Rocks?

ROG: Well, well I know that Love has bound her to me
With Chains not be loos'd.

OR: Already they are loos'd.

ROG: No; me alone she loves,
I am her only Wish.

OR: Too fond Credulity,
Alone Richardo has her very Thought.

ROG: Hah! what say'st thou, does he possess her Thought?

OR: Him fondly she beholds, and for his Sake
Will change you to some brutal Form.
Can you a Woman thus believe?
Shou'd you see her gently sigh
And gently gaze, e'en then think and say,
That still she may deceive.
Their flatt'ring Sighs, and practis'd Smiles
Not following the Heart,
Make Shew of Love they do not feel.
Can, etc.
(Exit.)

SCENE VIII

Rogero and Alcina.

ROG: Ah, faithless Fair! is this your boasted Love?

ALC: Thou Treasure of my Heart, my only Joy.
Call you Alcina faithless?

ROG: Yes, and most justly, cruel as thou art:
Away to thy Richardo, he expects thee;
Hither he comes according to your Wish;
Here waits he for you.

ALC: Your Jealousy offends, and yet you please me.

SCENE IX

To them Bradamante.

BRAD: The World's best choicest Treasures seem collected
In this your splendid Palace; yet, fair Queen,
Your Beauty far exceeds those Ornaments,
And is its chiefest Treasure.

ALC: Rogero owns that Praise.

BRAD: True, he deserves it.

ROG: Ah! haste away to serve your Country's Need;
Return, Richardo, to repel the Foes.

BRAD: (Ungrateful Man!)

ALC: First, let the stormy Sea be more appeas'd.

BRAD: This is most kind Compassion.

ALC: It is a Due to all.

ROG: No, no, Ingrate! 'tis Love.

ALC: Have you the Heart thus cruelly to wound
My firmest Truth?
And yet I am the same, the faithful She.
I am the same, though now no more
Dear or pleasing to your Eyes:
But, cruel, if you cannot love,
For Pity don't despise.
Question my Words and ev'ry Look,
If they denote a Change:
As your false Heart, 'tis that alone,
That will upbraid my Love.
I am, etc.
(Exit.)

SCENA X

Bradamante e Ruggiero.

BRAD: Se nemico mi sossì,
Potresti peggio far?

RUG: Rival mi sei.
T'odio Ricciardo.

BRAD: Odii il German diletto
Della tua Bradmante?

RUG: E perciò t' odio ancor.

BRAD: Perfido amante;
Tu così mi dispreggi?

RUG: Forse d' Amor vaneggi?

BRAD: Indegno Amante!

RUG: Che favelli? ed a chi?

BRAD: Mirami altero.
Bradamante cosi parla a Ruggiero.

SCENA XI

Malisso, e Detti.

RUG: Bradamante favella?
Bradamante in tali Arme?
Reina sei tradita

MEL: Eh! non è quella.

BRAD: Sì: và della tua Maga a' espormi all' ira.

MEL: Ruggier non l' ascoltar.

RUG: Sò, che delira.
La bocca vaga: quell' occhio nero
Lo sò, t' impiaga; ma è fida ancora.
Chi t' innamora
Per to non è
Và, che sei stolto. Cangia pensiero.
Piace quel Volto; ma datti pace
Non è per tè.
La bocca, ec
(Parte.)

SCENA XII

Melisso e Bradamante.

MEL: A quai strani perigli
N' espone il tuo parlare.

BRAD: Nell' altrui mal, facile è il dar configli.
(Melisso parte.)

SCENA XIII

Morgana e Bradamante.

MOR: Fuggi cor mio, ti affretta.
Al geloso Ruggiero
Concesse al fin l' innamorata Maga
In Belva di cangiarti

SCENE X

Bradamante and Rogero.

BRAD: Were I your Enemy,
What worse cou'd you have done?

ROG: Thou art my Rival, and I hate thee for't

BRAD: And do you hate
The Brother of your once-lov'd Bradamante?

ROG: Therefore I hate thee too.

BRAD: Perfidious Lover,
Am I so much your Scorn?

ROG: Does your Love make you rave?

BRAD: Oh! most unworthy of my Love!

ROG: What mean your Words? to whom, if what I know not?

BRAD: Then look, proud Man,
Thus to Rogero, Bradamante speaks.

SCENE XI

To them Melisso.

ROG: Thus Bradamante speaks?
Bradamante! and thus arm'd!
My Queen, you are betray'd.

MEL: Ah no! it is not she.

BRAD: I am: now haste to your Inchantress,
And rouse her Rage against me.

MEL: Rogero, listen not.

ROG: I see it is but Madness.
Each Look, I know, has pierc'd thy Heart;
But all your Hopes are vain:
What you would gain,
Is not for Thee.
Go, fond Believer; cease that Thought.
This Face does please;
But be at Peace,
'Tis not for Thee.
Each, etc.
(Exit.)

SCENE XII

Melisso and Bradamante.

MEL: To what known Dangers do we stand expos'd
By your incautious Words?

BRAD: 'Tis easy to advise in others Ills.
(Exit Mel.)

SCENE XIII

Morgana and Bradamante.

MOR: Fly, fly, my Dearest, haste far hence;
Jealous Rogero has at length prevail'd

BRAD: Và, la ritrova, e dilli,
Che Alcina non desio,
Che amarla non saprei:
Ch' ardo per altro Volto.

MOR: Il corro, e 'l mio

BRA: Dia l' inganno ristoro al miro gran duolo.
(Le dà la mano, e poi parteno.)

SCENA XIV

Alcina.

ALC: Tiranna Gelosìa.
Dell' amato Ruggier tormenta il core,
E pur solo per lui mì strugge Amore,
Tornami a vagheggiar,
Te solo vuole amar
Quest' Anima fedel
Caro mio bene.
Già ti donai 'l mio cor:
Fido sarà el mio amor.
Mai ti sarò crudel,
Cara mia spene.
Tornami, ec.

Fine dell' Atto Primo.

ATTO II

SCENA I

Ricca, e maestosa Sala del Palazzo incantato di Alcina.

Ruggiero, e poi Melisso nella forma di Atlante, che lo aveva educato.

RUG: Col celarvi, a chi v' ama, un momento Care luci, crudeli Voi sietè.
(Col, ec.)

MEL: Taci: taci codardo
Rimira il mio sembiante,
Ed arrossisci in rivedere Atlante.

RUG: Oh! de primi anni miei
Fedel educator

MEL: Menti.

RUG: T'abbraccio, (vuole abbracciarlo, una esso risospinge.)

On the Inchantress to employ her Power,
And change you to some Brute or senseless Form.

BRAD: Go, find him, courteous Fair One, and inform him
That I nor seek, nor yet desire Alcina;
That I not want her Love, nay cannot love her;
For to another all my Wishes tend.
I find some Comfort in deceiving her.
(Aside.)

SCENE XIV

Alcina.
She alludes to Rogero's Jealousy.

MOR: My Soul is full of you alone,
My dearest Youth,
You only can I love.
Since now I've given you my Heart,
I never more will change;
But ever will be kind and true,
My Dear, alone to you.

The End of the First Act.

ACT II

SCENE I

A rich and splendid Hall of the Inchanted Palace of Alcina.

Rogero, and afterwards Melisso in the Form of Atlante who had brought him up.

ROG: Oh cruel! for a Moment to deprive
Your Lover of the Sight of your dear Eyes.
Oh cruel, etc.

MEL: No more, soft wanton Coward, lost to Glory;
But look on me, awaken your Remembrance,
And blush to see Atlante thus again.

ROG: My more than Friend!
Thou tender Guardian of my Infant Years.

MEL: Thy Deeds belye thy Words.

ROG: Oh! let me clasp thee to my Breast.

MEL: Vanne lunge; io ti scaccio.
Molle, insame Ruggiero,
Così tu corrispondi
A tanti miei per te sosserti assanni?

RUG: Amor! Dovere!

MEL: E poi?

RUG: Cortesia di gentil

MEL: Segui.

RUG: Pietato

MEL: Ti arresti, e ti confondi?
D' Amor vile Guerriero:
E questo della Gloria il bel sentiero?

RUG: Un Fato.

MEL: Questa, in Dito ora ti poni.
(Li dà un' Anello.)
Verace Gemma, e fe piu a me non credi,
Mira Ruggiero, e la tua infamia vedi.
(Non così tosto Melisso porge a Ruggiero l' Anello stato già di Angelica, che la Sala tutta si cangia in luoco orrido, e deserto. Melisso in tanto riprende la sua prima forma.)

RUG: Qual portento mi richiama
La mia Mente a richiarar?
Atlante, dove fei?

MEL: Io quel sembiante
Presi per liberarti.

RUG: Ah! Bradamante!

MEL: A te appunto mi manda

RUG: Or và ad Alcina,
Dille pur, che Ruggiero piu non l' ama;
Che 'l mio core ha tradito, e a mia Fama.

MEL: Il tuo sdegno sia cara a Bradamante.

RUG: Dì a quella, che l' adoro
Che bramo E che far deggio?

MEL: Ora rivesti
Tutte pria l' Arme usate;
Ma taci con Alcina,
E fingi il primo amor', il primo Volto.
Mostra desìo di Caccia,
Così fuga, e salute a te procaccia
Pensa a chi geme d' Amor piagata,
E sempre teme abbandonata,
Crudel, da tè.
Pensa, ec.
(Parte.)

MEL: Away far hence; I bid you from this Chace, Idle luxurious Rogero.
Are these the Fruits of all my former Pains,
To foster thy weak Infancy?

ROG: Love! Duty!

MEL: What else?

ROG: Kind Courtesy

MEL: Go on.

ROG: The Gentle Pity

MEL: You are confus'd, and know not what to answer,
Love's wanton Champion:
Is this the great, the shining Path to Glory?

ROG: My Destiny

MEL: Put on your Finger This,
A true inestimable Gem;
And if you care not to believe my Words,
Be a Self-witness of your Infamy.
Melisso puts the Ring (formerly Angelica's) on Rogero's Finger, and the Hall immediately changes to a horrid desart Place. Then Melisso resumes his former Shape.

ROG: What mighty Cause has rous'd my drowsy Soul,
Shewn my lost Life, and bid me be my self.
Atlante, where art thou?

MEL: I took that Form to draw you from the State
Of idle Luxury in which you sunk.

ROG: Ah Bradamante!

MEL: From her I come on Purpose to

ROG: Go to Alcina, tell the Sorceress,
Rogero has at length thrown off her Love;
Tell her she has betray'd my Heart and Fame.

MEL: How dear this brave Resolve, this just Disdain
Will be to faithful Bradamante!

ROG: And tell that best unparagon'd in Truth,
Her only do I love Oh! what can I?

MEL: Again assume your wonted Dress and Arms;
But let it be all hidden from Alcina;
To her shew no Abatement of your Love,
But dress your Face in all its former Smiles Desire to hunt, and thus in Safety we May aid your Flight.
Think of the Fair, who left by thee,
Sadly complains;
Whose Tears and Pains
Are for your Cruelty.

SCENA II

Bradamante, e Ruggiero.

BRAD: Qual' odio ingiusto contro me?

RUG: Perdona;
Vinse la mia Ragion, forza d' incanto.
Fin' ora vaneggiai: ecco, a me torno;
Rompo l' indegno laccio,
E se Rival mi sei,
Il tuo crudel Destin piango, e t' abbraccio.

BRAD: Ed è ver, mi rammembri?

RUG: Sì. Ah! sosse teco ancora
L' adorata mia sposa, tua fore la.

BRAD: Ruggier non mi conosci! e pur son quella.

RUG: Numi! è ver! Bradamante!
Ma Bradamente? e come? Un nuovo Incanto
Sì, che d' Alcina è questo.
Non l' avria nò tacciuto
Chi m' osserse il bel dono.
Và insidiosa Maga,
Della mia Donna amata
Tu mentir vuoi la forma, e la favella.

BRAD: Crudel, tu mi discacci, e pur son quella.
Vorrei Vendicarmi
Del perfido cor.
Amor dammi l' Armi
M' appresta il furo.
Vorrei, ec.
(Parte.)

SCENA III

RUGGEIERO: Chi scopre al mio pensiero,
Se tradito pur son, o s' odo il vero?
Mi lusinga il dolce assetto
Con l' aspetto del mio bene.
Pur chi sà? Temer convience,
Che m' inganni amando ancor.
Ma se quella fosse mai
Che adorai, e l' abbandono;
Infedele, ingrato io sono.
Son crudele e traditor.
Mi, ec.
(Parte.)

SCENA IV

Luogo, che conduce ai Giardini Reali con Statua di Circe nel mezzo, che cangia gli Uomini in Fiere. Alcina, i poi Morgana.

SCENE II

Bradamante and Rogero.

BRAD: What unjust Cause for your Disdain to me?

ROG: Oh! pardon me:
At length my Reason has subdu'd the Force
Of foul Inchantment; till now I was bewilder'd
In a dark Maze, but now have found my Path.
I'll break th' unworthy Chain so long I've borne,
And if you are my Rival, I'm your Friend,
And weep your cruel Fate.

BRAD: Is it then true? Do you remember me?

ROG: Full well.
Ah! was my dearest Fair, your Sister with you.

BRAD: Do you not know me still? e'en I am she.

ROG: Ye Powers! Is't possible? this Bradamante!
Ah how? it cannot be! Surely this is
Some new invented Spell of base Alcina.
But she shall not sully my Reason more,
And rob me of the Gift so late obtain'd.
Away, designing Sorceress, away,
Falsely thou tak'st my much-lov'd Fair One's Form,
And dost abuse her Speech.

BRAD: You, cruel, drive me from you, yet I am She.
Cou'd I revenge me of thy faithless Heart,
Love give me Arms,
And Fury drive me on.
Cou'd, etc.
(Exit.)

SCENE III

ROGERO: (alone.) Who can resolve the Doubtings of my Mind?
Am I betray'd, or is it Truth I hear?
Love, every ready with fond Views,
Tells me the best, it is my Fair;
Yet I know not, and whilst there's room
To doubt, 'tis best to fear;
Then sweet is the Deceit to come.
But shou'd it be her I adore,
And I thus leave her still,
I shall deserve the worst Reproach,
As Traytor, base Ingrate.
Love, etc.
(Exit.)

SCENE IV

A Place leading to the Royal Gardens, with the Statue of Circe (who changes Men to Beasts) in the Middle.
Alcina, and then Morgana.

ALC: S' acquieti il rio sospetto,
Che tormenta il mio ben. Vesta Ricciardo
Ferina í poglia. O voi
Temute Larve, al noto imper scendete.
A te Figlia del sole
Porgo i miei prieghi usati.

MOR: Ancor per poco
Sospendi il suon di Magiche parole.

ALC: Importuna: mi arresti?

SCENA V

Ruggiero, e detti.

MOR: E la tua pace, (a Ruggiero.)
Con tanta crudeltà comprar si dee?

ALC: Caro ti vò appagar.

RUG: Ciò basta, Alcina,
Piu non chiede il mio Amor.

SCENA VI

Alcina, e Ruggiero.

ALC: Non scorgo nel tuo Viso
Il contento di pria. Dì: che ti offende?

RUG: Una noiosa Virtùte or mi riprende.

ALC: Pensa a goder

RUG: Concedimi, o Reina
Almen, che nel mio Usbergo
Faccia guerra alle Fiere,
Per ravvivar lo spirto mio languente.

ALC: Al tuo voler s' unì sempre mia mente.
Vanne, ma sia per poco:
Ma pensa al mio martiro.
Temo. Partir ti lascio, e ne sospiro.

RUG: Mil bel tesoro,
Fedel son' io,
(Ma non a te)
Al ben, che odoro
All' Idol mio
Prometto Fè.
Il caro amante
Non siegue il Piede,
E fido resta,
(Ma non con te)
Con chi li chiede
Costante, e mesta
Pace, e mercè.
Mio, ec.
(Parte.)

SCENA VII

Alcina ed Oberto.

ALC: Calm the black Jealousy that has possess'd
And wracks my Charmer's Breast;
Invest Richardo with a brutal Shape;
And you, dread Spectres, haste to the Command,
But chief to Thee, great Daughter of the Sun,
I give my wonted Prayers.

MOR: Oh! for a while break off those Magick Sounds,

ALC: Why this your Importunity?

SCENE V

To them Rogero.

MOR: Gentle Rogero,
Wou'd you buy Peace with with so much Cruelty?

ALC: I go to end your Pains.

ROG: Enough, Alcina, my Love demands no more.

SCENE VI

Alcina and Rogero.

ALC: Your Brow seems wanting of its fair Serene;
I miss its former Peace: Say what disturbs you?

ROG: With tedious Leisure, tir'd my Soul,
Burns now for active Sports.

ALC: Think but of Joys

ROG: Suffer me, Queen, in Arms to range the Woods,
And through the pathless Wilds the Chase pursue,
And there by glorious Toils, my drooping Spirits raise

ALC: Your Inclination ever has my Will:
Go, but, my Love, be quick in your Return;
Think of the Pains I suffer in your Absence.
I'm full of Fear,
I let you go, yet oh! I sigh to leave Thee.

ROG: Joy and Treasure of my Heart,
My Love is true
(But not to you)
To her whom I alone desire;
To the Object of my Vows
I promise deathless Truth.
I go and leave my Heart behind
(But not with you)
That's firm and true
To her who sweetly complains,
And asks my Pity of her Pains.
Joy, etc.
(Exit.)

SCENE VII

Alcina and Oberto.

OBER: Reina; io cerco in vano
L' amato Genitore!

ALC: Spera, Oberto, e sta lieto

OBER: Oh Dei! non posso

ALC: Il riso, il brio, la gioia,
Qui t' invita a goder.

OBER: Tutto mi annoja.

ALC: Dispon de' miei Tesori.

OBER: Io non li curo.

ALC: Al mio matterno amore
Cosi mal corrispondi?

OBER: Sempre grato
Ti sarò, se m' insegni il Genitore.

ALC: (Mi sà pietade; or si lusinghi) ascolta;
Vedrai in breve tuo Padre, Io tel prometto.

OBER: Comincia a respirar l' anima in petto.
Trà speme e timore
Mi palpita il core,
Nè sò ben ancora
S' è gioia ò dolor.
Trà, ec.
(Parte.)

SCENA VIII

Oronte, e Alcina.

OR: Reina, sei tradita
Con segreto Configlio
Degli Ospiti malvagj
A fuggir s' apparecchia il tuo Ruggiero.

ALC: Numi! che intendo, Oronte! e questo è vero?

OR: Pur troppo: ed

ALC: Ora intendo
Perchè l' Arme vesti; crudel, spergiuro!
Di lui, di lor, sarne vendetta io giuro.
Ah! mio cor! schernito sei
Stelle! Dei! Nume d' Amore!
Traditore! t' amo tanto;
Puoi lasciarmi sola in pianto,
Oh Dei! perchè?
Ma che sà gemendo Alcina?
Son Reina, e tempo ancora?
Resti, o Mora. Peni sempre,
O torni a me. Ah! mio,
Ah! mio, ec. (Parte.)

OBER: O Queen, all Search is vain,
I cannot find
My dearest Father.

ALC: Hope still, and be of Comfort.

OBER: Ah me! I never can.

ALC: Dispel that sad Despair.
Here Mirth and Joys alone invite to Pleasure.

OBERT: They are to me but troublesome and tasteless.

ALC: My Treasures all use as you will.

OBER: I care not for them.

ALC: Is this Return for all my tender Cares
And Mother's Love?

OBER: If you will shew me where to find my Father,
My Gratitude shall never know an End.

ALC: Those Words move Pity in me. (Aside.)
Then here I promise, you e'er long shall be Blest with your Father's Sight.

OBER: Again my Soul admits some small Content.
Now Hopes succeed my former Fears,
Now hasty throbs my trembling Heart;
But whether greater Joy or Woe
Creates this Change I cannot know.
Now, etc.
(Exit.)

SCENE VIII

Orontes and Alcina.

OR: My Queen, you are betray'd,
The secret Councils of the faithless Guests,
Have wrought on your Rogero, and prepar'd
His speedy Flight.

ALC: Ah me! what do I hear?
Orontes, is it true?

OR: Oh were it not! It is too true.

ALC: Now I perceive his Earnestness to bear
His warlike Arms with him; false perjur'd Man!
On Them, on Him, I vow a full Revenge.
Ye gentle Gods of Love,
Am I thus left despis'd!
Dear Traytor, thee I love alone,
Can you then leave me here,
To make a fruitless Moan
In what have I deserv'd your Hate?
But why these dull Complaints?
I've Time and Pow'r.
Traytor, return or die;
Return, or feel the Misery
I can inflict on Thee.
Ye, etc.
(Exit.)

SCENA IX

Oronte, e Morgana.

OR: Or, che dici Morgana?
Il tuo novello amante
Con perfidia, ed inganno
Ti abbandona. Lo sai?

MOR: Nol credo Oronte.
La gelosia ti sprona:
Ma piu gli affetti miei per te non sono.
Libera son, nè chieggo a te perdono.
(Parte.)

SCENA X

ORONTE: All' offesa, il disprezzo
Giunge l' ingrata? Sù: corraggio; Oronte
Scaccia costei dall' Alma; e se mai torna
Pentita a riamarti.
Deludi l' arti sue con l' istess' arti.
E un solle, è un vile affetto,
Non è la sua beltà,
Che trionfar la fa
Superba dei mio cor.
E un, ec.
(Parte.)

SCENA XI

Bradamante ed Oberto.

OBER: Ed è ver? Che mi narri?

BRA: Amato Oberto,
Del mio Cugino Astelfo
Tuo caro Genitor presto il sembiante
Vedrai; e l' empia Maga,
Che in Lion lo cangiò, errar confuso
Guarda cauto il secreto.

OBER: Non temer

BRA: Tienti pronto; or' và, stà lieto.
(Oberto Parte.)

SCENA XII

Ruggiero, Bradamante, e Morgana, che ascolta in disparte.

RUG: Eccomi a' piedi tuoi
Generosa Donzella (vuole inginocchicarse.)
Doppio error mi sà reo

SCENE IX

Orontes and Morgana.

OR: What say you, now, Morgana?
Your new, your gentle Lover proves unkind,
And, by perfidious Arts, abandons you.
You know th' unpleasing Truth?

MOR: Nor do I know it, nor believe.
Thy Jealousy drives Thee to odious Fancies:
But be at Rest, you share not my Regards;
I'm free, and care not for thy Love or Hate.
(Exit.)

SCENE X

ORONTES: What, does she heighten her Offence with Scorn?
No more, Orontes, stoop thus vilely low,
But drive the proud Inconstant from your Heart:
E'en shou'd she e'er, repenting of her Folly,
Return to Love, give back her Scorns,
And use the Arts she taught.
'Tis ill-plac'd Love, and foolish Airs,
More than her Beauty's Power,
That make her triumph o'er
My long subjected Heart.
'Tis, etc.
(Exit.)

SCENE XI

Bradamante and Oberto.

OBER: Is it then true? What joyful Sounds I hear!

BRA: Yes, my Oberto,
You soon shall see the Likeness of Astolfo,
Your dearest Father, and my more than Friend;
And the Inchantress too, whose impious Spells
Transform'd him to a Lion, soon confus'd, Wandring disconsolate.
Be cautious of the Secret.

OBER: Fear not.

BRA: And be you ready. Now go contented.
(Exit Oberto.)

SCENE XII

Rogero, Bradamante and Morgana, who listens apart.

ROG: See, prostrate at your Feet, kind injur'd Fair,
One conscious of his Crimes,
Black with a double Error

BRAD: Sorgi Ruggiero.
Serbiamo a miglior uso
Tu le discolpe, io le querele. Andiamo.
Temo sempre dovunque il guardo volga
Vedere Alcina ria, che mi ti tolga.

RUG: Bradamante cor mio

BRAD: Ruggiero ameto, (Si abbracciano.)
Fuggiam l' infame loco.
(Morgana si presenta loro insuriato.

MOR: Mentitrice che vuoi? (a Bradamante.)
Che pensi ingrato? (a Ruggiero.)
Alcina vi dara giusta mercede,
Ospite ingannatrice: Uom senza Fede. (a Bradam.) (a Ruggiero.)
(Parte sdegnata.)

RUG: Verdi Prati, e selve amene
Perderete la beltà.
Vaghi Fior, correnti Rivi
La vaghezza, la Bellezza
Presto in voi si cangerà.
Verdi Prati, e Selve amene
Perderete la beltà.
E cangiato il vago oggetto
All' orror del primo aspetto
Tutto in voi ritornerà.
Verdi Prati, e Selve amene
Perderete la beltà.
Verdi, ec.

SCENA XIII

Stanza sotterranea delle Magie, con varie Figure e Strumenti, che appartengono a quest' uso.

ALCINA: Ah! Ruggiero crudel, tu non mi amasti!
Ah! che fingesti amore, e m' ingannasti!
E pur ti adora ancor fido il mio core.
Ah! Ruggiero crudel, sei traditor!
Del pallido Acheronte.
Spiriti abitatori, e della notte
Ministre di vendetta
Cieche Figlie crudeli, a me venite.
Secondate i miei voti,
Perche Ruggiero amato
Non fugga da me ingrato.
Guarda d' intorno, e sospesa.
Ma; ahime! Misera! e quale
Insolita tardanza? Eh! Non mi udite?
(sdegnata.)
Vi cerco, e vi ascondete?
Vi comando, e tacete?
Evvi inganno? Evvi frode? (Infuriata.)
La mia Verga fatal non ha poslanza?
Vinta, delusa Alcina, e che ti avanza.
Ombre pallide, lo sò, mi udite.
D' intorno errate, e vi celate.

BRAD: Arise, Rogero, and let us reserve
For more and better Leisure,
You your Repentance, and I my Reproaches.
Let us away, for ever while I'm here
I fear to see Alcina, who depriv'd me
Of Thee, my All.

ROG: My dearest Bradamante!
(They embrace.)

BRAD: My dear Rogero! let's fly this hateful Place.

MOR: What will you, Faithless! (to Brad.)
What will you, Ingrate! (to Rog.)
Alcina shall give you both due Reward,
Deceitful Stranger! (to Brad.)
Most perfidious Man! (to Rog.)
(Exit angrily.)

ROG: Verdant Meadows, pleasant Shade,
All your Beauties soon shall fade.
Fragrant Flow'rs, crystal Rills,
Soon your Sweets will all decay,
And your Pride will soon away.
Verdant Meadows, pleasant Shade,
All your Beauties soon will fade.
Each gay Prospect now we see
Rising in its full Delight,
In its first Horror soon shall be
A rude unpleasing Sight.
Verdant Meadows, pleasing Shade,
All your Beauties soon shall fade.
Verdant, etc.
(Exit.)

SCENE XIII

A Subterraneous Apartment of the Inchantresses, with various Figures and Instruments for their Use.

ALCINA: Cruel Rogero! have I not your Love!
Did you but feign it? Am I then deceiv'd!
Ah! still my Heart reserves its Love for Thee,
Cruel Rogero! Art thou then a Traytor!
Ye Spirits that on Acheron's dark Shores
For ever dwell, ye Ministers of Night,
Offspring of blind Revenge, haste, haste to me,
Second my Will, employ your Power to stay
My dear Rogero's intended Flight:
But, hah! whence this unwonted Disobedience?
Alas! why this Delay? Do you not hear me?
I seek you, and do you avoid my Sight?
I now command; do you refuse to obey?
Do you betray me too? Are these Sorde da me. Perchè? Perche?

Fugge il mio bene; voi lo fermate
Deh! per pietatè,
Se in questa Verga, ch' ora disprezzo,
E voglio frangere, forza non v' è.
Ombre, ec.
(Parte con impeto gittando via la Verga Magica, ed allora mamsestandonsi diversi Spiriti, e Fantasmi.)

Fine del Atto Secondo.

ATTO III

SCENA I

Atrio del Palaggio.

Oronte, e Morgana.

OR: Voglio amare, e disamar
Così mi piace. Voglio, ec.

MOR: Vendicarti tu vuoi.
Di un' innocente inganno, e pur t' adoro,
Oronte, Anima mia.

OR: Và, tuo non sono.

MOR: Se t' offesi mio ben, chiego perdono.
Credete al mio dolore
Luci tiranne, e care.
Per voi languo d' amore,
Bramo da voi pietà.
Credete, ec.
(Parte.)

OR: M' inganna, me n' avveggo,
E pur' ancor l' adoro
Se ben mi su crudel', è 'l mio tesoro.
Un momento di contento
Dolce rende a' un fido amante
Tutto il pianto, che verso.
Suol Amore, dal dolore
Tirar Balfamo alle pene,
E sanar, chi pria piagò.
Un ec.
(Parte.)

SCENA II

Ruggiero, ed Alcina per parte opposta.

RUG: (Molestissimi incontro!)

ALC: Ahimè! Ruggiero.
E ver, che mi abbandoni?

your Arts?
My fatal Rod then has no Power to charm!
Left, left Alcina! nought is left for Thee!
You hear, I know, false airy Forms,
And wander here to me conceal'd;
But why is your Observance now with-held?
My Lover proves to me unkind
And flies; his Flight, for Pity, stay.
If in this Rod no Pow'r I find
When now most wanted, let it hence away.
You hear, etc.
Goes out in a Rage, throwing away her Magick Wand, when divers Spectres appear.

The End of the Second ACT.

ACT III

SCENE I

A Court of the Palace.

Orontes and Morgana.

OR: I'll love or hate
But as I please

MOR: Will you pursue so much so deep Revenge
For Arts of harmless Kind; for still, Orontes,
You are the only Object of my Wish.

OR: Then is your Wish mis-plac'd; mine tends elsewhere.

MOR: If I've been guilty of the least Offence,
Forgive me now.
Believe, dear Tyrant, that I grieve
Full much for my so small Offence.
For you I sigh, of you I ask Kind Pity of my Pains.
Believe, etc.
(Exit.)

OR: I was abus'd, but I must love her still;
Tho' she was cruel, yet I cannot change.
A Moment of Content o'er pays
A faithful Lover's Pains,
Waking Nights and restless Days.
Love ever heals the Wounds he gives;
E'en from the Torments we endure
He draws a pleasing Cure.
A Moment, etc.
(Exit.)

SCENE II

Rogero and Alcina differently.

ROG: (Unlucky Meeting!)

ALC: Alas! Rogero, must I find it true,
That you abandon me despis'd?

RUG: M' invita la Virtute,
Che langue nell' Amore.

ALC: E non pensi, mio caro, al mio dolore?

RUG: Il passato, suo inganno
Rimira con orrore un' Alma grande.

ALC: Ah! che sei mentitore:
Fuggi da me per darti a' un' altra amante:

RUG: Quella è mia sposa.

ALC: Oh! Dei!
E scordar tu mi puoi, mia cara speme?

RUG: Dover', Amor, Virtu pugnano assieme.

ALC: Per questi sospir miei

RUG: Li spargi al vento.

ALC: Ti sui sempre fedel.

RUG: Scorda il passato.

ALC: Ti adoro ancor.

RUG: Non è piu tempo.

ALC: Ingrato!

RUG: Mi richiama la Gloria.

ALC: E un van pretesto.

RUG: Mi stimola l' Onore.

ALC: Và: m' oltraggiasti assai. Và traditore
Ma quando tornerai
Di laccj avvinto il piè,
Attendi pur da me
Rigore, e crudeltà,
E pur, perche t' amai,
Ho ancor di te pietà.
Ancor placar mi puoi
Mio ben, cor mio; non vuoi?
Mi lascia infido, e và.
Ma, ec.
(Parte.)

SCENA III

Melisso, Ruggiero, e Bradamante.

MEL: Tutta d' armate Squadre
L' Isola è cinta, e d' incantati Mostri.

RUG: Mi sarò via col braccio.

BRAD: Io con la spada.

MEL: Non basta umana forza.
Prendi il Gorgoneo scudo,
Prendi il Destriero alato, e a me lo presta.

RUG: Partur da te mio ben l' Alma funesta.
Stà nell' Ircana pietrosa Tana
Tigre sdegnosa, e incerta pende,
Se parte, o attende il Cacciator.
Dal teso Strale guardar si vuole,
Ma poi la Prole lascia in periglio.
Freme, e l' assale desio di sangue,
Pietà del Figlio; poi vince amor.

ROG: Virtue excites me to those glorious Deeds,
Which idle Love has so long robb'd me of.

ALC: Oh! have you lost all Sense of what I bear.

ROG: A noble Soul looks e'en with Horror back
On his past Errors.

ALC: Oh! then am I betray'd:
You fly my Love, to hasten to another's.

ROG: She is my Spouse.

ALC: Oh killing Sound!
And can you then forget me?

ROG: Duty, Love, Virtue wage a cruel War.

ALC: For Pity of my Sighs

ROG: I must not hear, but give them to the Wind

ALC: I ne'er was missing in my Faith.

ROG: I must forget the past.

ALC: And still I love Thee.

ROG: Then now no more.

ALC: Barb'rous Ingrate!

ROG: 'Tis Glory calls, I must obey.

ALC: That's but a vain Pretext.

ROG: Great Honour drives me on.

ALC: Go, Traytor, Go.
Enough you've wrong'd me, to excite my Hate.
When you shall return again,
Not thus, but bound in Chains;
Then you may expect from me
Severest Rigour, justest Cruelty.
But as I once have lov'd,
Still Pity will have Place,
Still you have Pow'r to please
And calm my Rage. Do you refuse?
Go worthless Traytor, go. When, etc.
(Exit.)

SCENE III

Melisso, Rogero and Bradamante.

MEL: With armed Troops and with inchanted Monsters
The Isle is all surrounded.

ROG: My Arm will force my Way.

BRAD: The Sword shall mine.

MEL: All human Power, I fear, will not avail.
Take you the Gorgon Shield,
Get you the winged Horse, and haste to me.

ROG: O, my Delight, my Soul is griev'd to part
But for a Moment from Thee.
The Hyrcanian Tygress, when pursu'd,
Flies to her rocky Den, and knows not
If to depart or wait the Hunter's Coming;

Stà, ec.
(Parte.)

SCENA IV

Melisso, e Bradamante.

MEL: Vanne tu seco ancora;
Dov fà seno il mare,
Ed è la Nave ascosa, ambo vi attendo.

BRAD: Non partirò, se pria,
Sciolto ogni infame incanto
A chi privo ne stà Vita non rendo.
(Melisso Parte.)
All' Alma sedel
Amore placato,
Il Fato, ed il Ciel
Promette pietà.
In mezzo ai martiri
La gioia ravviso,
E dopo i sospiri
Il riso verrà
(Al. ec. Parte.)

SCENA V

Oronte, ed Alcina.

OR: Niuna forza lo arresta.
Vinse Ruggiero.

ALC: Ahime! perfide Stelle!
Ma i miei Guerrier?

OR: Giaccion distesi? al suolo.

ALC: E i Mostri miei

OR: Son vinti.

ALC: E quell' ingrato
Dunque fuggì?

OR: Nò. L' Isola minaccia.
Rende Amore a costei giusta mercede
Di tanti, ch' oltraggiò miseri amanti.
Val questa pena sua tutti i lor pianti.
(Parte.)

ALC: Mi restano le lagrime.
Direi dell' Alma i voti;
Ma i Dei resi ho implacabili,
E non mi ascolta il Ciel.
Alc. Mi, ec.

But cannot leave her Young in Danger:
In Rage she foams, her Safety bids her thence,
But Nature for her Young strongly assails,
And Love at last prevails

SCENE IV

Melisso and Bradamante.

MEL: Go you too with him,
Where the Sea forms a Bay;
A secret Bark is ready, there I expect you.

BRAD: No, I shall not depart
Till I have quite destroy'd this Magick's Force,
And given back to Life those who so long
Have lain inanimate.
(Melisso Exit.)
A faithful Soul will ever find,
Tho' late, its due Reward;
The Heavens promise Peace to all
Who much and truly love.
Amidst my Pains I see a Dawn
Of smiling Joy come swiftly on,
And after all the Torments past
I shall be blest at last.
(Exit.)

SCENE V

Orontes and Alcina.

OR: No Force can stay Rogero's conqu'ring Arm,
He bears down all before him.

ALC: Oh inauspicious Stars!
Where are my Warriours?

OR: All lie subdu'd.

ALC: And the devouring Monsters?

OR: They are tam'd.

ALC: Is the Ingrate then fled?

OR: No, no, the Ruin of the Isle he threatens;
Love justly gives her this Reward
For the Severity she us'd
Against so many hapless sighing Lovers.
And now the Pains she feels exceed Those that she made them undergo.
(Exit.)

ALC: Still Fears I have,
A needy Soul's best Arguments.
But cruel Heav'n hears me not,
Th' offended Gods are now no more Inclined to pity me.

SCENA VI

Prospetto della Reggia meravigliosa di Alcina, attorniata di Alberi, di Statue, di Obbelischi, e di Trofei, con Seragli di Fiere, chè vanno girando: ed Urna rilevata nel mezzo, che racchiude la forza di tutto l' Incanto.

CORO: Sin per le vie del sole
Una gloriosa Prole
Il volo sà innalzar.

Oberto, e poi Alcina con Dardo alla mano.

OBER: Già è vicino il momento
Di cangiar il mio duol tutto in contento; (Alcina ascolta a parte.)
E Parmi già con amoroso core
Di stringer in al mio seno il Genitore. (Alcina gli si presenta.)

ALC: Come lo sai? (Oberto si consonde nel risponderle.)

OBER: Perche il Destino i pianti
Il dover.

ALC: Ti confondi?

OBER: Alta Regina; (Oberto si dà corragio.)
Io ben lo sò; me lo promise Alcina.

ALC: (Ah! che ancora costui pensa a' miei danni; Ingrato! or proverai gli estremi affanni.)
(Alcina si volge verso il Seraglio delle fiere, e mormorando qualche parola, si avvanza un Lione mansueto verso Oberto, quando Alcina dà il suo Dardo al medesimo dicendogli.)

ALC: Prendi, Oberto, il mio Dardo, e ti difendi
Da quella Fiera. (Il Lione si corica vicino ad Oberto, e gli và lambendo i piedi.)

OBER: Eh! mi fi mostra amica.

ALC: Non ti fidar; la uccidi.

OBER: Ah! non hò core.

ALC: Ubbidisci il commande. (risoluta.)

OBER: (Ah! ch' io ben ricconosco il Genitore.

ALC: Rendimi 'l Dardo; Io ferirolla appieno.) (Sdegnata.)

OBER: Crudel; lo immergerò pria nel tuo seno.
(Oberto ritirandosi volge il Dardo contro Alcina, mentre)
Lione ritorna nel Seraglio.

SCENE VI

A Prospect of the splendid Palace of Alcina surrounded with Trees, Statues, Obelisks and Trophies, and Dens of wild Beasts; an Urn rais'd in the Middle which incloses the whole Power of the Inchantment.

CHORUS: A glorious Offspring on a daring Wing
Can raise its noble Flight
To an immeasurable Height.

Oberto, and then Alcina, with a Dart in her Hand.

OBER: The happy Moment now comes smiling on,
Whence all my Griefs shall change to sweet Content. (Alcina listens apart.)
When I again shall in a dear Embrace
With matchless Joy take to this Breast my Father.

ALC: How know you that?

OBER: My pitying Fate, my Plaints Duty

ALC: Your doubting Tongue knows not its Answer.

OBER: Great Queen, I know it well;
For so Alcina promis'd.

ALC: He also joins to aggravate my Woes:
But thou, Ingrate, shall prove extreamest Grief. (Aside.)
(Alcina turns towards the Den of wild Beasts, and muttering some Words, a Lion comes meekly towards Oberto and Alcina gives him a Dart.)

ALC: Oberto, take my Dart,
And guard you from this hungry Lion's Rage.
(The Lyon lies down near Oberto, licking his Feet.)

OBER: I see no savage Fierceness;
He rather seems my Friend.

ALC: Oh trust him not, kill the devouring Beast.

OBER: Nature points out my Sire in any Shape. (Aside.)

ALC: Give me the Dart, I'll strike the unerring Blow.

OBER: Inhuman, first I'll drench it in your Heart.
(Oberto retiring, turns the Dart on Alcina, mean while the Lyon returns to the Den.)
More savage than the brutal Kind;
This is, I know, my dearest Sire
In this senseless Form confin'd

Cangiato hà in fera.
Barbara, ec.

SCENA VII

Bradamante, Ruggiero, e Alcina.

BRAD: Le lusinge, gl' inganni,
Non udir piu, mio caro sposo amato.

ALC: Che inganni? Anzi ho pietà.
Piango il suo Fato.

RUG: Non la ascoltar.

BRAD: Detesto
Le sue offerte, e gli Auguri.

ALC: Per questa cara Destra (a Ruggiero.)

RUG: Ormai mi lascia.

ALC: Bradamante, à tuoi piedi. (a Bradamante.)

BRAD: A me t' invola,

ALC: A morir tu ten vai. (a Ruggiero.)

RUG: Cura è del Cielo.

ALC: Tu, Vedova dolente. (a Bradamante.)
Lo piangerai.

RUG: Non l' ascoltar, che mente.

ALC: Non è Amor, nè Gelosia è Pietà. (a Ruggiero.)

BRAD: Che ascose Frodi!

ALC: E' desio, che lieta godi. (a Bradamante.)

RUG: Che fallaci indifi accenti!

ALC: Non t' offendo. (a Bradamante.)

RUG: Indegna taci.

ALC: Non t' inganno.

BRAD: Iniqua, menti.

ALC: Cruda Donna: rio Tiranno

RUG: Non vogl' io da Voi

BRAD: Non sperar da Noi

RUG, BRAD: mercè.

BRAD: Caro sposo!

RUG: Animà mia!

ALC: Solo affanni, e solo pene

BRAD, RUG: Solo gioie, e solo bene:

ALC: Premio fian di nostra Fè.

BRAD, RUG: Premio fian di vostra Fè.
(Partono Alcina per una parte e Bradamante per un' altra.)

By thy black Spells and impious Power. Etc.
(Exit, carrying away the Dart.)

SCENE VII

Bradamante, Rogero, and then Alcina.

BRAD: Her Smiles, her Blandishments, and other Arts,
Oh hear them not, my Dear.

ALC: How much are you deceiv'd?
'Tis Pity moves me thus, I weep his Fate.

ROG: Heed not her Words.

BRAD: I scorn your Offers and your Auguries.

ALC: By this Dear Hand (To Rog.)

ROG: Away, and leave me.

ALC: Bradamante at your Feet (To Brad.)

BRAD: Speak not to me.

ALC: To certain Death you go. (To Rog.)

BRAD: That is as Heaven will.

ALC: And you become a Widow,
Will mourn his hapless Fate.

BRAD: Neither believe nor hear her.

ALC: Nor is this Love, nor Jealousy,
But kindest Pity all. (To Rog.)

BRAD: What hidden Arts are these!

ALC: 'Tis my Desire that you have Peace. (To Brad.)

ROG: Betraying Sounds!

ALC: In this I wrong not you. (To Brad.)

ROG: No more.

ALC: Nor is it to betray you. (To Rog.)

BRAD: That is alone your Will.

ALC: Oh cruel Fair! ungrateful Tyrant!

RUG: I ask not from you

BRAD: Hope not from us

RUG, BRAD: Pity.

BRAD: Joy of my Life!

ROG: My Heart's Delight!

ALC: May endless Fears and Pains alone

BRAD, ROG: May endless Peace and Joy alone

ALC: Be your Faith's Reward.

BRAD, ROG: Be our Faith's Reward.
(Exeunt Alcina and Bradamante differently.)

SCENA VIII

Ruggiero con Oronte a cui rende la Spada.

RUG: Prendi, e vivi.
Vuol la tua libertà, non il tuo sangue,

OR: Signor, m' è grato il dono,

RUG: Or l' Urna infame
Si spezzi.

OR: Eroico oprar.

RUG: Và, se paventi;
Io basto solo.
(Ruggiero si avanza per rompere l' Urna coll' Anello incantato: ed Alcina fretolosa lo tratiene.)

SCENA IX

Alcina e Detti, e poi Bradamante.

ALC: Ah mio Ruggiero, che tenti?

RUG: Voglio la libertade
Degl' infelici, che quì chiudi.

ALC: Ed io Lo sarò

BRAD: Non fidarti.
Lascia, che faccia il colpo, il braccio mio.
(Và per spezzar l' Urna.)

Morgana, e detti,
(Quando Bradamante và per spezzar l' Urna, Morgana le si oppone.)

SCENA X

Melisso, Oberto e detti.

ALC: Misera, Ah! nò!

SCENA ULTIMA

Melisso, Oberta, e detti.

MEL: A che tardi?
Struggi l' infame Nido: (a Ruggiero.)
Rendi altrui la salute.

RUG: Sì.

OR: Sì.

BRAD, OBER, MEL: Spezza, Ruggiero.

ALC, MOR: O noi perdute! (Si ritirano.)

Rogero and Orontes, to whom he gives his Sword.

ROG: Take it and live: I do not seek your Life,
But give you Liberty.

OR: Thanks for the grateful Gift.

ROG: Now to destroy this most destructive Urn.

OR: Good noble Work.

ROG: Go if you fear, alone I can perform
The needful Deed.
(Rogero goes to break the Urn with the inchanted Ring, and Alcina hastily holds him.)

SCENE IX

To them Alcina, and then Bradamante.

ALC: What wou'd you, my Rogero?

ROG: The Liberty of these Unhappy here confin'd.

ALC: I will desolve the Charm

BRAD: I shall not trust the glorious Task to you.
Let my Hand give the Blow.
(Goes to break the Urn, when Morgana enters and hinders her.)

SCENE X

ALC: Ah! No

MOR: For Pity of the Life which I've kept for you, Suffer I may

SCENE THE LAST

To them Melisso and Oberto.

MEL: Why this Delay?
Dissolve the hateful Spell,
Restore to every one their former State.

ROG: I go.

OR: On.

BRAD, OBER, MEL: Haste, Rogero.

ALC, MOR: Oh we are lost!
(Retire.)
(Rogero throws down the Urn and breaks it, when the Scene wholly disappears, changing to the Sea, which is seen thro' a vast subterraneous Cavern, where many Stones are chang'd into Men;

CORO: Doppo tanta amare pene,
Già proviam consorto all' alma;
Ogni mal si cangia in bene,
Ed al fin trionfa amor.
Fortunato è questo giorno,
Che ne reca bella calma,
Dell' inganno e infidie a scorno

Fine dell' Opera.

among them is Astolfo, who embraces Oberto: They form the Chorus.)

CHORUS: After the bitter Torments past,
Our Souls find Peace and smiling Joys at last;
Now each Misfortune's chang'd to Bliss,
And all exult with Love and Happiness.
How blest this Day,
That brings such Ease;
And now forgetting what we bear,
Our Hearts know nought but present Peace.

The End.

Serse (1738)

MUSIC BY GEORGE FREDERICK HANDEL ■ LIBRETTO ADAPTED FROM NICCOLÒ MINATO

This three-act opera, set to a libretto partly adapted from Niccolò Minato, premiered at the Haymarket Theatre in London on April 15, 1738. Serse, King of Persia, falls in love with Romilda after hearing her sing. However, he is betrothed to Amastre. Romilda is in love with Arsamene, the king's brother, and thus rejects Serse's repeated proposals. The king wants her at any cost and decides to send Arsamene into exile. Amastre, who discovers this, sees death as her only way out (but she doesn't die). Atalanta, Romilda's sister, appears—she, too, is in love with Arsamene. Atalanta encourages Romilda's marriage to Serse so that she herself may marry Arsamene. She intercepts a letter to Romilda, sent from Arsamene through the servant Elviro, and convinces the king that the letter is meant for her. She then begs the king to arrange a wedding immediately. Serse uses the letter to convince Romilda that Arsamene has betrayed her. The plot is revealed, and Romilda and Arsamene vow their loyalty to each other. Serse is still determined to marry Romilda, who states that she will do so if he gets Ariodate's consent (Ariodate is her father). Serse indeed asks Ariodate but does so in such a fashion that Ariodate believes he is giving permission for Arsamene and Romilda to marry—this is the outcome. Serse, once he realizes his mistake, resigns himself to the situation and at last returns the love of Amastre, who has waited for him all this time. Atalanta has to find another lover to replace Arsamene.

Note: This libretto was taken from an original facsimile and has not been edited, in order to preserve historical context.

ARS: L' Idol mio.	ARS: The idol of my soul.
ELV: Dite pure.	ELV: Forward.
ARS: Oh se fortuna—	ARS: Oh if fortune e'er—
ELV: Sì così è— (in atto di partire.)	ELV: Ay, that's true. (going.)
ARS: Tu dove vai?	ARS: Where dost thou go?
ELV: Men vado Ad appoggiarmi, che di sonno io cado.	ELV: I go To take a nap, for I'm half dead with sleep.
ARS: Vien quì pronto, ti dico (Si ode breve sinfonìa.) Sento un soave concento.	ARS: Quickly, I say, come hither strait to me; Strains of sweet musick strike upon my ear. (a short symphony heard.)
ELV: Andiam vicini.	ELV: Let us draw near.
ARS: Andiam.	ARS: We'll go.
ELV: Son di Romilda Questi Villaggi?	ELV: Romilda then Owns all these villages.
ARS: Sì. Lasciami udire.	ARS: Yes, let me hear.
ELV: Così dalla Città poco discosti? (sieguela sinfonia.)	ELV: So near the town!
ARS: Non parlar più.	ARS: Be hushed, and talk no more.
ELV: Me n' anderò a dormire.	ELV: I'll go, and of my pillow ask advice. (Romilda in the summer house.)
ARS: Non ti partir.	ARS: No, do not go—
ROM: (Nel Belvedere.) O voi—	ROM: O, ye.
ARS: Questa è Romilda.	ARS: This sure Romilda is.
ROM: —O voi che penate.	ROM: Ye, who for cruel beauties sigh.
ELV: Romilda è ver?	ELV: Romilda sure enough.
ARS: Sì, taci.	ARS: Peace then.
ELV: E chi favella?	ELV: Who speaks?
ROM: O voi, che penate Per cruda beltà, Un Serse.	ROM: The loving Xerxes.

SCENA III

SCENE III

Serse e detti.	To them Xerxes.

SER: Quì si canta il mio Nome.

ROM: Un Serse mirate,
Che d' un ruvido tronco acceso sta;
E pur non corrisponde
Altro al suo amor, che 'l mormoriò di fronde.

SER: Arsamene.

ARS: Mio Sire.

SER: Udiste?

ARS: Udii.

SER: Conoscete chi sia?

ARS: Io, no Signore.

SER: Io sì.

ARS: (Aimè che gelosià m' accora.)

SER: Che dite?

ARS: Ch' amerei sentirla ancora.

ROS: Va godendo vezzoso e bello
Quel ruscello la libertà.

SER: Quel canto a un bell' amor l' anima sforza.
Per mia Dama la scelgo.

ARS: (Oh Dei che sento!)
Signor, ella è Romilda; è Principessa:
Ma parmi non convenga—

SER: Eh mi diceste
Non conoscerla. Or come?

ARS: Sol la conosco al Nome.

SER: E al canto ancora.
Se Dama non convien, Sarà mia Sposa.
L' approvate?

ARS: Signor a un Re non lice
Ergere al Trono chi non è Regina.

SER: Per Dama non convien, Sposa non lice.
Nulla vi piace: è rigido il consiglio.
Mi sia compagna al Soglio.
Le direte che l'amo, io così voglio.

ARS: Io?

SER: Sì voi.

ARS: Non ò il modo di parlarle.

SER: Cercatelo.

ARS: Ma Sire e se non posso—

SER: Perchè?

ARS: Ma la modestia—e al fine.

SER: Intesi.
Io gliel dirò, che a parlar meglio appresi.
Io le dirò che l' amo,

XER: My name, I hear is mentioned in this song.

ROM: The loveing Xerxes see,
Who on a plane, has fix'd his eye
Enamour'd with a tree.
Yet no return to love it gives,
But the soft murmurs of its leaves.

XER: Arsamenes.

ARS: Sir.

XER: Did'st hear?

ARS: I did.

XER: And who is it, dost know?

ARS: I? no my lord.

XER: But well I know.

ARS: (How jealous do I grow!)

XER: Say'st thou?

ARS: That fain, this voice, I'd hear again.

ROM: That wanton lovely rivulet
Its winding liberty enjoys.

XER: To love's soft passion, does this voice impel
My glowing heart, the fair one there shall reign.

ARS: (Ye gods, what's this I hear)
Romilda 'tis;
She is a princess, true, but then, methinks
She does not suit.

XER: Thou said'st thou knew'st her not,
Now how?

ARS: I know her by her name alone.

XER: Yes, also by her voice it does not suit
She shou'd my fav'rite be. She shall my spouse;
Do'st this approve?

ARS: It is not lawful, sir,
That you, a king, shou'd, to the throne advance,
One who is not a sov'reign princess born.

XER: That she my fav'rite be, it does not suit;
And 'tis not lawful that my spouse she be;
Thus nothing's to thy mind. Thy counsel's harsh;
But she, however, shall adorn my throne.
Tell her, I love her. Such is my command.

ARS: I!

XER: Yes, you.

ARS: The opportunity to do't?

XER: Seek it.

ARS: Suppose I cannot speak your love?

XER: Why?

ARS: Bashfulness prevents—and, when all's done—

XER: I understand thee well; I'll count my love
Who have much better learn'd t'explain my mind.

Nè mi sgomenterò
E perchè mia la bramo,
So quel che far dovrò.
(Parte.)

ARS: Tu le dirai che l' ami
Ma non ti ascolterà
Quella beltà che brami
Solo di me sarà.

SCENA IV

Romilda, Atalanta, Arsamene, ed Elviro.

ROM: Arsamene.

ARS: Romilda, oh Dei! pavento
Che 'l tuo più volte a me giuranto amore,
Tu non sparga d' oblio.

ROM: Perchè parli così.

ARS: Lo so ben io.
Il Re.

ROM: Chi? Serse!
E che da me richiede?

ARS: Tenterà la tue fede.

ATA: (Se può vincerle il cor, oh me felice!)
Vien acceso ogni cor dal tuo bel guardo.
(a R.)

ROM: Io non temo.

ARS: Io pavento.

ATA: (Ed io tutt' ardo.)
Dimmi Arsamene, e credi
Che la Germana mia tradir ti possa?

ARS: Crollan le Quercie annose a una gran scossa.

ROM: Ma Romilda resiste.

ATA: (Ah fosse infida!)

ROM: Mia sarà l' alma mia da te disciolta.

ARS: Che diletto!

ATA: (Che doglia!) ascolta ascolta.
Sì sì mio ben sì sì
Io per te vivo sol,
Io per te moro.
Amo che mi ferì,
E pure al mio gran duol
Non ò ristoro.
Romilda notte e dì
Va esclamando così,
Io per te moro.

ELV: Presto, Signor, vien Serse.

ARS: Io quì mi celo.

SCENE V

(Serse, Romilda, Arsamene ed Elviro nascosi.)

My love I'll to the fair one speak;
Nor will my heart the task decline;
I know what method I've to take,
As I do ardent wish her mine.
(Exit.)

ARS: To her thou'lt 'count thy am'rous fire,
To which she will no ear incline;
That beauty, which thou dost desire,
She is, and shall be, only mine.

SCENE IV

Romilda, Atalanta, Arsamenes and Elviro.

ROM: Arsamenes!

ARS: Romilda! O ye Gods!
That love, I fear, which oft thou'st sworn to me;
Thou'lt in oblivion cast.

ROM: Why talk'st thou so?

ARS: Too well I know it. The king.

ROM: Who, Xerxes?
And what of me can Xerxes wish?

ARS: He'll tempt
Thy faith.

ATA: (He her heart may move, bless'd am I!
There's not a heart but what thy eyes enflame.
(To Romilda.)

ROM: I nothing fear.

ARS: I fear.

ATA: (I'm all on fire.).
Say, Arsamenes, canst thou e'er believe
My sister can thy love sincere deceive?

ARS: By vi'lent shocks the sturdy oak's o'erthrown.

ROM: But Romilda not.

ATA: (Ah were't thou but false!)

ROM: My heart from thee shall never be estranged.

ARS: What flow of joy?

ATA: (What tide of grief!) but hear
My treasure, does Romilda cry,
Thou hast no cause to grieve;
It is for thee alone I live;
It is for thee alone I die.
Him, him I love, who gave my wound,
And yet, to my too piercing grief,
No remedy can e'er be found,
To give my panting heart relief.
This night and day's Romilda's cry,
It is for thee, it is for thee I die.

ELV: Quick, quick, my lord, for Xerxes comes.

ARS: I here will hide.

SCENE V

SER: Come qui Principessa al Ciel sereno?
Forse agl' inviti d' Arsamene usciste?

ROM: Egli non mi chiamò.

SER: Parlovvi almeno.

ROM: Ma Sire—

SER: Basta, udite,
Romilda. Il Fato al Trono
Oggi vi scorge; amor v' ingemma il serto.

ROM: Non aspiro tant' alto. Io non ò merto.

SER: Ne so ben la cagione.
(escono Arsam. ed Elv.)
Arsamene m' offende, ma—

ARS: Io? Sire
Tolga il Ciel, che vi offenda.

ROM: Ei non sapea—

SER: Tacete. E voi veloce
Lunge da questa Corte, qual Torrente
Volgere il piede.

ARS: Andrò benchè innocente.

SER: Pure se promettete
Lasciar Romilda—

ELV: Eh dite, io lo farò.
(ad A.)

SER: Posso usarvi pietate.

ARS: Oh questo no.
Meglio in voi col mio partire
Gelosìa si estinguerà.
Io men vado al mio morire
Voi restate in libertà.
(Parte con Elv.)

SCENA VI

Serse e Romilda immobile e pensofa.

SER: Bellissima Romilda, eh non celate
L' adorato sembiante.
Uditemi Romilda, io sono amante.
E pur tacete ancora?
Dite un sì, dite un no, dite ch' io mora.
Di tacere e di schernirmi
Ah crudel, chi t' insegnò?
O lasciate d' esser belle Care luci amate stelle,
O ceslate di ferirmi
Che mai più vi seguirò.
(Parte.)

ROM: Aspide sono a detti tuoi d' amore,
Nè vuò macchiar d' insedeltà il mio cuore.
Nè men coll' ombre d' infedeltà

XER: How, princess? here, expos'd to th' evening damps?
At Arsamenes' invitation 'tis,
Perhaps, you ventured forth?

ROM: He asked me not.

XER: He spoke to you, at least.

ROM: But, sir.

XER: No more.
But listen thou, Romilda. Fate does guide,
Thee to the throne, where love the diadem
Does, by enriching, still more brilliant make.

ROM: So high aspire I not; nor merit have.

XER: I know full well the cause. I suffer thus (Ar. and Elv. appear.)
By Arsamenes; but howe'er.

ARS: By me—
Heav'n forbid I shou'd offend thee e'er.

ROM: He knew not—

XER: No more.
And thou, swift as a torrent's rapid course,
Hence; far, far distant from this court withdraw.

ARS: I'll go, tho' innocent.

XER: But yet, if thou,
Romilda, promisest to quit—

ELV: Ah! say
You'll turn her off.

XER: I may compassion show.

ARS: Ah no; with this I never can comply.
My going hence may prove, to you,
Th' extinction of your jealousy;
I now to death depart, adieu;
Remain thou here in liberty.
(Exit.)

SCENE VI

Xerxes and Romilda, pensive and motionless.

XER: Romilda, lovely fair, ah do not hide
Thy charms adored; in me, Romilda, hear
Thy ardent lover. Art thou silent yet?
Say yes, say no; or say, that I must die.
Who taught thee, cruel, thus to be
Scornful and silent still with me?
Ah do thou cease to be so fair;
Let those dear piercing eyes forbear,
And wound my tortured breast no more;
I'll then my present suit give o'er.
(Exit.)

ROM: To all professions of thy love, I'm deaf,
And never will, with falsehood, stain my heart.
My heart I never will betray,

Voglio tradire l' anima mia.
E se il mio bene suo mai si sa
Incolpi amore, non gelosìa.
(Parte.)

SCENA VII

Cortile.

Amastre in abito da Uoma seguita da uno Scudiere.

Se cangio Spoglia,
Non cangio core,
Ma nell' amore
Son pur l' istessa.
(Si ritira in disparte.)

SCENA VIII

Ariodate seguito da Soldati con Prigionieri ed insegne prese a Nemici, ed Amastre.

ARIO: Pugnammo Amici, e stette
Per noi bella Vittoria.

AMA: Dunqu' è vinto il Re Moro?
Oh noi felici!

ARIO: Ed accresce di Serse ognor la Gloria.

CORO DI SOLDAT: Già la tromba,
Che chiamò le schiere all' armi,
Or si scioglie in dolci carmi,
E vittorte a noi rimbomba.

SCENA IX

Serse, Ariodate, ed Amastre in disparte.

AMA: (Ecco Serse: Oh che volto!
Oh che splendore!)

SER: Ariodate, vi abbraccio. Il vostro ferro
Sempre porta vittoria.

ARIO: Del vostro Nome sol questa è la Gloria.

SER: In premio de' Disagj, ch' ora diamo
Alla vostra Città, che di nostr' armi
Fatta è Piazza, a sostener l' Impresa
Dì Atene; or vi prometto,
Romilda vostra Figlia
Avrà Sposo Reale
Della Stirpe di Serse a Serse eguale.

ARIO: Così arditi Fantasmi
Nel pensier non ammetto.

SER: Ite, così prometto.

Nor e'en to falsehood's shade give way:
If he who is belov'd by me,
Of his own harm the author be,
Let him blame love, not jealousy.
(Exit.)

SCENE VII

A court yard.

Amastre, in a man's habit, followed by a page.

Altho' my sex my dress belies,
My heart will never wear disguise;
That still the same shall ever prove,
And never will be false to love.
(Withdraws to one side.)

SCENE VIII

Ariodates, followed by soldiers, with prisoners, and colours, taken from the enemy. Amastre apart.

ARI: We've fought, my friends, and glorious vict'ry gained.

AM: (Is then the moor o'ercome? O happy we!)

ARI: And Xerxes daily does fresh laurels reap.

CHORUS OF SOLDIERS: The trumpet which, to arms did sound,
Shall sweetly breath to flowing verse;
Which shall our victories rehearse,
And the soft note, the shriller blast shall drown.

SCENE XI

Xerxes, Ariodates, and Amastre, apart.

AMA: See, Xerxes comes; how glorious is his mien?
And with what splendor does the king appear!

XER: O, Ariodates, welcome to these arms,
Conquest does still attend upon thy sword.

ARI: The glory to your name alone is due.

XER: To recompence the trouble, we now give
To this your town, which, of th' Athenian war,
The place of arms, and grand support has been.
Romilda shall a royal spouse embrace,
Equal to Xerxes, and of Xerxes' line.
To this I do engage our royal word.

ARI: Thoughts so aspiring, can I ne'er admit.

XER: Keep on your march; our promise is engaged.

ARIO: Soggetti al mio volere
Gli Astri non chieggio no.
Ma quel che fan le sfere
Sempre lodar saprò
(Parte col medesimo seguito. Replica Coro—Già la trombat)

SCENA X

Serse ed Amastre col suo Scudiere in disparte.)

SER: Queste Vittorie io credo,
Predicono trionfi anco al mio amore.

AMA: (Parla di me: ai vento sì mio core.)

SER: Impaziente io vivo,
Di abbracciar quell' amato mio tesoro.

AMA: (E di gioja non moro?)

SER: Ma pur, che dirà Amastre,
E l' offeso suo Padre
Del mio Imeneo, del mio novello amore?

AMA: (E così mi Schernisce il traditore?)

SER: Benchè di Regio sangue
Non sia l' Idolo mio,
Una Vassalla illustrar poss' io
Colle mie nozze. Al fin; crede decenti
I voler d' un gran Rege il Mondo.

AMA: Menti.

SER: Chi parla olà? Chi siete?

AMA: Forastieri Signor.

SER: Ma a chi mentita
Tu desti?

AMA: Al mio compagno,
Che volea sostener, che il vasto Eufrate—
E che 'l Ponte che fate—
Sarebbe esposto ai venti;
Io per discorso allor, dissi tu menti.

SER: Sciocchi mi rassembrate. Ite lontani.
(Am. Parte)
Non dee render ragione il mio decoro.
Sempre mi torna in mente il ben che adoro.
Più che penso alla fiamma del Core
Più l' ardore crescendo sen va.
E 'l mio petto è ricetto ben poco
Di quel foco che pena mi dà.
(Parte.)

ARI: I do not ask, I can't expect,
The stars shou'd do as I direct;
Tho' to whatever they think fit,
I do, with thankfulness submit.
(He goes off with his followers, the chorus repeating. The trumpet, & c.)

SCENE X

Xerxes and Amastre, with her page, apart.

XER: These victories, I hope, forerunners are
Of my triumphing, also, in my love.

AMA: (Of me he speaks. My heart the conquest's thine.)

XER: How slowly do the lazy moments creep,
Which lead me to embrace my life's sole joy?

AMA: (Beneath this tide of pleasure, live I still!)

XER: What will Amastre; what her father say;
With this new passion, these new nuptials wrong'd?

AMA: (And dost thou, traitor, scorn Amastre thus?)

XER: Altho' the fair, who triumphs in my heart,
Draws not her birth from a long race of kings;
Yet, o'er my vassal, will my nuptials spread
The rays of dazzling royalty. But more,
Whate'er great monarchs do, the world approves.

AMA: Thou ly'st.

XER: How now! who's that who speaks? who art?

AMA: A stranger.

XER: But to whom the lie did'st give?

AMA: To my companion, who wou'd needs maintain,
That great Euphrates—That the bridge thou build'st, Wou'd be expos'd to winds. To this discourse
I then return'd the lie.

XER: Thou seem'st of judgment little found. Be gone.
(Exit. Amastre.)
It don't become our state, to reasons give.
The beauty which I love, will still return,
And take up all my thoughts.
More on the flame I turn my mind,
Which does my heart devour;
It gathers greater strength, I find,
Increasing ev'ry hour,
Receptacle' too small's my breast,
For th' fire which robs me of my rest.
(Exit.)

SCENA XI

Arsamene ed Elviro.

ARS: Eccoti il foglio Elviro
A Romilda lo porta.

ELV: Siete pur risoluto?

ARS: Sì, vanne.

ELV: Io vi saluto.
Che parlar le volete,
Altro non le scrivete?

ARS: No.

ELV: Ma son, voi sapete,
Con voi bandito: e se son conosciuto?
Siete pur risoluto?

ARS: Vanne, non tardar più.

ELV: Come glie l' ò da dar?

ARS: Pensaci tu.

ELV: Che stravagante Scena!
(pensa un poco, e poi risoluto dice.)
Signore, Signore lasciate sare a me;
Io l' ò pensata bene,
Corro, volo, parto, vo.
E più presto tornerò
Che fe avessi l' ale al piè.
(Parte.)

ARS: Non so se sia la speme
Che mi sostenga in vita,
O l' aspro mio dolor.
Sio che quest' Alma geme,
Da che mi su rapita
La gioja del mio cor.
(Parte.)

SCENA XII

AMASTRE: Tradir di regia Sposa
La fe promessa? e chiamerallo il mondo
Un decente Voler? No che dei Regi
Son giustizia e Clemenza i più gran pregj.
Saprà delle mie offese
Ben vendicarsi il cor.
Colui, che l' ira accese
Proverà il mio furor.

SCENA XIII

Atalanta, e Romilda.

ATA: Al fin Sarete Sposa al vostro Serse.

SCENE XI

Arsamenes and Elviro.

ARS: Do thou this letter to Romilda give.

ELV: Is't possible? Art sure thou art resolved?

ARS: I am; be gone.

ELV: Well! Gods be with ye, then.
You nothing else have scarwl'd but that you wish
With tittle tattle to disturb her brain?

ARS: That I wou'd speak with her, is all I wrote.

ELV: But I, you know, thanks to your caterwawling,
As well as you, am on the common turn'd.
And are you still as obstinate?

ARS: I am.
No longer loiter.

ELV: Good, But how, I pray,
Must I this billet to her hands convey?

ARS: Look you to that.

ELV: 'Tis whimsical enough.
(He thinks awhile, and then, as having fallen on an expedient, he says,)
My lord,, my lord, let me alone,
Already thought expedient brings;
I run, I fly, I go, am gone,
As if my heels were arm'd with wings.
(Exit.)

ARS: Whether 'tis cruel grief, or hope,
Which gives to life a greater scope,
Is what I cannot say.
But this poor heart does nought but sigh,
Since that its only darling joy,
Is from it forc'd away.
(Exit.)

SCENE XII

AMASTRE: The faith that's to a royal princess giv'n,
Shall then be broke, and this the world approve?
Can royalty so mean an action grace?
No; for those kings with greatest lustre shine,
Whom clemency and justice make divine.
My heart will find, for injured love,
Means of revenge a thousand ways;
And he the effects of rage shall prove,
Who did my strong resentment raise.

SCENE XIII

Atalanta and Romilda.

ATA: At length thou wilt thy Xerxes' consort be.

ROM: Che? mio, Serse non è.

ATA: Meno Arsamene.

ROM: Egli sì, perchè l' amo.

ATA: Egli no, perchè parte esule errante.
Perdete un Re per un perduto amante.

ROM: Perduto amante? e come?

ATA: A il core acceso
D'altre fiamme.

ROM: Di chi?

ATA: Ben lo saprete.

ROM: Dunque odiarò Arsamene; e al Re gli affetti
Tutti darò: che dite?

ATA: Allor prudente
Certo vi chiamerò; ed Arsamene
In Sposo io chiederò

ROM: E che dunque l'amate?

ATA: No, ma poi l'amerò.

ROM: E sì tosto potrete
Render di amore i vostri voti accesi?

ARS: Mi sforzerò.

ROM: Ah che pur troppo intesi.
Se l' Idol mio
Rapir mi vuoi,
Cangia desio, ch' è vanità.
Quei dolci lacci
Snodar non puoi,
Che mi legaro la libertà.
(Parte.)

SCENA XIV

ATALANTA: Per rapir quel tesoro,
Che te colma di gioja, e me d'affanni
Se amor non basta, adoprerò gl' inganni.
Un cenno leggiadretto,
Un riso vezzosetto,
Un moto di pupille
Può fare innamorar.
Lusinghe pianti e frodi
Son' anco certi modi,
Che destano faville
E tutti io li so far.

Fine dell' Atto Primo.

ATTO II

SCENA I

Piazza della Città.

ROM: How? Mine he is not.

ATA: Arsamenes less.

ROM: Yes, he is mine, for my whole heart is his.

ATA: He? no, he is a wand'ring exile gone.
You'll lose a monarch, for a lover lost.

ROM: A lover lost? and how?

ATA: His heart avows
Another flame.

ROM: For whom?

ATA: That wilt thou know.

ROM: Then Arsamenes will I truly hate,
And, to the king, my whole affection turn.
What say'st to this resolve?—

ATA: Then truly prudent shall I say thou art,
And I, for spouse, will Arsamenes ask.

ROM: Thou lov'st him then?

ATA: No; but hereafter may.

ROM: And canst thou, then, so readily enflame
With love thy wish?

ATA: I some constraint may use.

ROM: Ah now I understand thee but too well.
If of my treasure thou'dst bereave me,
Let not those idle thoughts deceive thee;
Change thy desires, for they are vain;
Do thou thy purposes forsake;
Not all thy arts, those bands shall break,
Which do my liberty enchain.
(Exit.)

SCENE XIV

ATALANTA: That I may on that treasure seize, the which Fills thee with joy, and me with grief o'erwhelms.
If love does not suffice, I'll fraud employ.
A graceful and consenting nod,
Allureing smiles, and rowling eyes,
Assisted by the wanton god,
May, with soft love, his heart surprize.
So tears deceit, and flatt'ring praise;
Are also known, as methods sure,
Within the breast a flame to raise,
And I, all these will put in ure.

End of the First Act.

ACT II

SCENE I

A square of the city.

Amastre, e poi Elviro (che vende fiori, e parla la lingua franca.)

AMA: Speranze mie fermate,
Non mi lasciate ancor.

ELV: (Ah chi voler fiora di bella Giardina Giancinta Indiana, Tulipana Gelsomina.)
E chi direbbe mai ch' io sono Elviro?
Ma se del foglio poi sapesse il Re?

AMA: (Che parla egli del Re?)

ELV: Credo, Arsamene,
Pianti e sospiri al vento spargerà:
E che per moglie, al fine il Re l' avrà.

AMA: (Il Re? per moglie? chi? Cieli che sento!)

ELV: Serse però dovrebbe aver per Sposa
Dama di regio sangue, e non Vassalla:
Questa non gli sa onore.

AMA: (Dunque io sono schernita.
Ah traditore!)
Amico.

ELV: Ah ci sui colto.
(vuol fuggir.)

AMA: Ferma, olà, dico a te: perchè scappar?

ELV: Da mia che cercar?
(Voler fiora comprar? ma—)

AMA: (No.) Si dice,
Che Serse farà Sposo in questo dì:
Vorrei saper di chi?

ELV: Ma dire, tu chi star?
E perchè dimandar?

AMA: Viaggiante curioso, e chi ama il Re.

ELV: Poichè tì star bon Uom, mi dir a te;
Ma teser, non parlar.

AMA: Dì pur, non dubitar.

ELV: Ariodate, de Chista.
Città Signor, che stare al Re Vassallo,
Aver figlia Romilda; e Re voler
Chista sposar: ma chista sempre dir,
Se mi sposar, morir.

AMA: Ma Romilda ama i Re?

ELV: No: ma fratello
Ch' aver nome Arsamene.

AMA: E questo, forse
I dolor suoi le Scrive?

Amastre, and after her Elviro, (who carries flowers, and speaks in a broken dialect.)

AMA: Ah! stay your course, ye fleeting hopes,
And do not leave me yet.

ELV: (Who vant de vine vlower dat in garden be seen, Te jacint, te tulip, te sweet jessamine.)
Who, now, wou'd say, that I Elviro am?
But should the king of this same billet know.

AMA: (What says he of the king?)

ELV: I greatly doubt,
Altho' my master burst his belt with sighs,
Xerxes will gain the prize; she'll be his wife.

AMA: (The king? a wife? who? heav'ns! what is't I hear?)

ELV: Yet, for a consort, Xerxes ought to chose
A dame of royal blood; a vassal's wrong.

AMA: (Am I, traitor, then despis'd!) friend, a word.

ELV: Ah! I am catched.
(Getting off.)

AMA: Stop, holoa; to thee I speak—why woud'st fly?

ELV: Vat vid me you vant? (you flower buy? but—)

AMA: (No flow'rs I want;) I've by rumour heard,
That Xerxes on this day take a wife,
And I wou'd know who is the happy fair.

ELV: Say vat you be, and vy, for vat you you ask?

AMA: A curious traveller, who love the king.

ELV: Since you be one good man, me tell to you;
But hold your tongue; you no be for to speak.

AMA: You may proceed; you nothing need to doubt.

ELV: Ariodates, who be dis town lord?
Be too one vassal to te king. 'Tis lord
One dautre ave, dat be Romilda name.
Dis she te king vou'd make one vife; but her
Say, marry me, me soon be sure will die.

AMA: But this Romilda; does she love the king?

ELV: No; but te king browder, Arsamenes.

AMA: And he, perhaps, now writes her all his grief.

ELV: Aimè! tì star devina.
(Chi voler fiora di bella Giardina.)

AMA: Dimmi.

ELV: Nu saper altro.
(Tulipana Gelsomina.)

AMA: Perchè m' uccida il duolo
Mancava solo esser tradita ancora.

ELV: Chi voler fiora? chi voler fiora?

AMA: Or che siete speranze tradite,
Sì fuggite, fuggite da me.
E in quest' anima oppressa dal duolo
Resti solo la bella mio fe.
(Parte.)

SCENA II

Elviro, poi Atalanta.

ELV: Quel curioso è partito: oh! che indiscreto!
Matto non son per dirgli il mio segreto.
La Signora Atalanta a me sen viene.
Oh! bene: bene: bene!

ATA: A piangere ognora
Amor mi distina.

ELV: Ah! Chi vuol Fiora-di bella Giardina?
Voler Giancinta? voler Gelsominà?

AMA: Oà! vien quà. (Degli aspri miei dolori Le acute spine adornerò co' Fiori.)

ELV: Ma mi chi star?

ATA: Non so.

ELV: Mi ben guardar.

ATA: Tu quivi? o sventurato! guarda bene—
Che porti?

ELV: Porto un foglio di Arsamene
All' amata Romilda.

ATA: A me lo porgi.

ELV: Glielo darete poi?

ATA: Sì.

ELV: Ma dov' è?

ATA: Sta nelle stanze sue scrivendo al Re.

ELV: Al Re? ma che gli scrive?

ATA: Che in lui spera, in lui vive.

ELV: E di Arsamene?

ATA: Punto non si sovvienne.

ELV: Ah tigre infedele!
Cerasta crudele!

ATA: Parti, il Re si avvicina.

ELV: Ah, to be sure, you one great conj'rer be.
(Who buy te vine vlower dat ever be seen.)

AMA: But tell me—

ELV: Me no more know.
(Te tulip ant te vine jasmine.)

AMA: Grief only wanted this assisting stroke
Of infidelity to end my life.

ELV: Who vant te vine vlower, te vine vlower vant.)

AMA: My hopes betray'd, fly, hence depart,
And quit this over-burthen'd heart:
In this, in which strong grief bears sway,
Let faith, untainted, only stay.
(Exit.)

SCENE II

At the distance Atalanta and Elviro.

ELV: Th' impertinent is gone. O silly toad!
But I'm no fool, to blurt my secrets out.
This way the lady Atalanta comes.
Well, well.

ATA: Love to incessant tears
Has destined me.

ELV: Who vant de vine vlower dat ever be seen.
Who vant hyacint, who vant te jasmine?

ATA: Here, this way turn. (The pungent thorns of grief,
With gaudy, and with fragrant flow'rs, I'll deck.)

ELV: But vat me be?

ATA: I know not.

ELV: look me vell.

ATA: Thou here? o wretch unfortunate! take care—
What hast thou there?

ELV: From Arsamenes 'tis,
A note, which I must to Romilda give.

ATA: Give it to me.

ELV: Will you then give it her?

ATA: Yes.

ELV: Where is she tho'?

ATA: In her chamber, where She's writing to the king.

ELV: To th' king! pray what?

ATA: That all her hopes, nay, life, depend on him.

ELV: Of Arsamenes then?

ATA: She has no thought.

ELV: A! faithless tygress!
A! the viperous spawn!

ATA: Be gone; the king draws near: away.

ELV: Ah! chi vuol fiori di bella Giardina?
(Elv. Parte in fretta.)

SCENA III

Serse, ed Atalanta, che legge il foglio d' Arsamene.

ATA: (Con questo foglio mi sarò contenta.)

SER: E tormento troppo fiero
L' adorar cruda beltà.
Di quel foglio, Atalanta
(ad Atal. che legge.)
Lice saper gli Arcani?
Saran forse amorosi?

ATA: E' ver, ma strani.

SER: Son più curioso.

ATA: Ma.

SER: Ma che?

ATA: Io temo—
Mi perdonate?

SER: Sì.

ATA: Dunque leggete.
(Deh seconda l' inganno o ignudo Arciero.)
(Serse prende la lettera, e guarda la firma.)

SER: Scrive Arsamene.

ATA: E' vero.

SER: (legge.) "Allorchè nell Ibero ascoso è il sole Verrò notturno, ove talor mi suole
Il raggio balenar di vostre stelle.
Ivi a dispetto di maligna, sorte,
O sarò vostro o pur sarò di morte."
A chi serive Arsamene?

ATA: A me.

SER: A voi?

ATA: Vi sdegnate?

SER: Stupisco. Ma s' egli ama Romilda?—

ATA: No Signor: ella ben l' ama,
Ma lui finge d' amarla, affinchè quieta
Non sturbi il nostro amore.

SER: Strana Avventura! Godi sì mio core!

ATA: Dunque vi prego o Re, se l' approvate,
Che pubblico Imeneo lo faccia mio.

SER: Bella, farò che sia,
O vostro Sposo o preda all' ira mia.

ATA: Dià che amor per me
Piagato il cor non gli à.
Ma non gli date se
Ch' egli fingendo va.

ELV: Ah who vant te vlower, ov te vine garden.
(Exit hastily.)

SCENE III

Xerxes and Atalanta, who reads Arsamenes' letter.

ATA: My heart will from this letter find some ease.

XER: The torment is too great to bear,
When we adore a cruel fair.
Say, Atalanta, is't allow'd to know
The secrets which that letter does contain?
Perhaps of love they treat?

ATA: 'Tis true, but strange.

XER: It makes me still more curious.

ATA: But—

XER: But what?

ATA: I apprehend—Do you my pardon seal?

XER: I do.

ATA: Then read (o love, aid thou this fraud)

XER: This Arsamenes writes.

ATA: It is from him.

XER: (reads.) "When in the streams of ebro Phoebus hides,
I'll visit, in the night, the place where oft
Thy brilliant eyes have blessed my aching sight.
Then, spight of adverse fate, I will be thine,
Or my warm blood, my destiny shall sign."
To whom writes Arsamenes this?

ATA: To me. Does it displease thee?

XER: I am quite amazed.
But 'tis Romilda's object of his love?

ATA: Far diff'rent is it. She loves him 'tis true:
But he a passion only feigns for her,
That, thus amus'd, she mayn't our love impede.

XER: A strange adventure! thou my heart exult!

ATA: If I your approbation meet, I pray
That publick nuptials may secure him mine.

XER: Fair one, I will that he thy spouse shall be,
Or of my anger feel severe effects.

ATA: That love, for me, ne'er touch'd his heart
He'll say; don't thou believe;
For this is but concerted art,
On purpose to deceive.

SER: Voi quel foglio lasciate a me per prova.

ATA: (Bella frode, se giova.)

SER: Itene pur.

ATA: Ma vi ricordo.

SER: E che?

ATA: Dirà che non mi amò
Che mai per me languì,
Ma non credete nò
Che fingerà così.
(Parte.)

SCENA IV

Serse e Romilda.

SER: Ingannata Romilda! ecco leggete.
Dite poi se Arsamene amar dovete.

ROM: Leggo.

SER: Nè vi sdegnate?

ROM: A chi Scrive?

SER: Alla sua cara Atalanta.
Sapete già, s' io mento.

ROM: (Non mi uccider tormento!)

SER: Che farete?

ROM: Piangendo ognor vivrò.

SER: L' amarete?

ROM: L' amerò.

SER: E pur sempre vi tradì.

ROM: L' empia forte vuol così.

SER: Se ben fiero v' ingannò
L' amarete?

ROM: L' amerò.

SER: Se bramate d' amar chi vi sdegna,
Vuò sdegnarvi, ma come non so.
La vostr' ira crudel me l' insegna;
Tento farlo e quest' alma non può.
(Parte.)

SCENA V

ROM: (sola.) L' amerò? non sia vero.
Amante traditor! sorella infida!
Godete di mie pene.
Barbara, menzognero!
L' amerò? non sia vero.
Ma voi, che delirate, mi ascoltate,
Forse saper bramate
La mia furia crudel ora chi sia?
E' gelosia,
Quella tiranna
Che tanto affanna
L' anima mia.
Del suo veleno
Mi aspersa il seno,
E mi condanna
A pena ria.
(Parte.)

XER: Leave me that letter for my stronger proof.

ATA: Ingenious is the fraud, if it avails.

XER: Thou may'st withdraw.

ATA: But call to mind—

XER: And what?

ATA: He'll say, that me he never lov'd,
Nor for me languish'd e'er:
Let not thy faith, by this, be mov'd;
In this he's not sincere.

SCENE IV

Xerxes and Romilda.

XER: Deceiv'd Romilda! read thou this, and then
Speak Arsamenes worthy of thy love.

ROM: I've read.

XER: And anger does not dye thy cheek?

ROM: He writes, to whom?

XER: To Atalanta's this.
Thou know'st if I speak truth.

ROM: (Kill me not, grief!)

XER: What wilt thou do?

ROM: I'll waste my life in tears.

XER: And wilt thou love him yet?

ROM: My love I can't forget.

XER: Yet you're betray'd, you know.

ROM: 'Tis fate will have it so.

XER: Altho' deceiv'd, thou'lt love him still.

ROM: I'll love him, tho' he use me ill.

XER: If thou with love do'st meet disdain,
I'd slight thee too, but know not how.
Your anger teaches me in vain;
My heart can't e'n the thought allow.

SCENE V

ROMILDA: (solo.) Shall I then love him? let it not be said,
Deceitful lover! treach'rous sister! who
Now basely triumph in my misery.
Sister inhumane, and with fraud replete!
And shall I love him? be it never said.
But you, perhaps, who do my raving hear,
May ask what fury on my breast has seiz'd?
'Tis jealousy, that tyrant foul,
Which gives this torture to my soul,
Which sheds her venom in my breast,
And dooms me stranger to all rest.

SCENA VI

Amastre in atto di uccidersi, ed Elviro.

AMA: Giacchè il duol non m' uccide,
M' uccida questo ferro.

ELV: Oibò, che fate?
Pensate: e poi se mi volete credere
Vivete sol per ben mangiare e bevere.

AMA: Via su, pria di morire
A quell' alma crudel corriamo a dire.
Anima infida
Tradita io sono.
Vien, tu m' uccida
Io ti perdono.
(Parte.)

SCENA VII

Elviro, poi Arsamene.

ELV: E pazzo affè.

ARS: Elviro—

ELV: Voi quì Signor? fuggiamo.

ARS: Che ti disse Romilda?

ELV: Ad Atalanta
Diedi il foglio, e mi disse,
Che la vostra Romilda amava il Re:
Che stava a lui scrivendo.

ARS: Di nera infedeltade o mostro orrendo!
Ma, non bene intendesti? parla a me.

ELV: V' ò detto già, ch' ama e che scrive al Re.
Che volete di più?

ARS: Forse scherzò.

ELV: Oibò oibò; parlò troppo da vero.

ARS: O di Tigre crudel core più fiero!
Quella che tutta se
Per me languia d' amore,
No che più mia non è,
Perduto ò il core.
Che pensa il Ciel? che fa?
Non sa col suo rigore
Punir chi reo fen va
Di tanto errore.
(Partono.)

SCENE VI

Amastre going to kill herself. Elviro.

AMA: Since grief don't end my days, this trusty sword—

ELV: Hold. What art about? think well, and then,
If my advice thou'lt take—live—were it but
For th' bottle, and a little jaw work sake.

AMA: But hold. Let us th' inhuman lover find,
And, e'er we die, in dying accents say,
Faithless man, by thee betrayed,
Life is now a burthen made;
'Tis death alone, that can relieve me;
Take thou my life, and I forgive thee.
(Exit.)

SCENE VII

Elviro, and to him Arsamenes.

ELV: By the lord Harry, the poor creature's mad.

ARS: Elviro.

ELV: You here? Let us quick brush off.

ARS: What said Romilda to thee?

ELV: I, my lord,
To Atalanta did the letter give,
Who told me, your Romilda lov'd the king,
And even then, to him a billet-doux,
Well as she cou'd spell, was, sir, inditeing.

ARS: Monster most black of infidelity!
Did'st understand her well? answer me strait.

ELV: I've once already told you, that she loves
The king, and to the king love-letters writes.
And what a plague can you require more?

ARS: Perhaps this Atalanta jesting spoke.

ELV: O laud, in jest! no, no, she spoke plain truth.

ARS: O heart more cruel than the tyger fierce!
The fair, who was all faith before,
And loving me did languish;
Is mine, alass! is mine no more.
My heart is lost in anguish.
What think the Gods? what is't they do?
Will they such crimes forbear?
Will they not perjury pursue,
With punishment severe?
(Exeunt.)

SCENA VIII

Ponte costrutto sopra il Mare, che si unisce a due rive.
Serse, Ariodate, e Coro di Marinari.

CORO: La Virtute sol potea
Giunger l' Asia all' altra riva.
Viva Serse, viva viva.

SER: Ariodate.

ARIO: Signor.

SER: Del Mare ad onta
E fin del vento infido
Seppi giunger ancor Sesto ad Abido.
Tu vanne pronto ad ordinar le Schiere.

ARIO: Ubbidirò.

SER: Pria della terza Aurora
Di passar in Europa è il mio volere,

ARIO: Per essempio dei Regi
I tuoi gloriosi preggi
Con caratteri d' or la fama scriva;
(Parte.)

CORO: La Virtute sol potea, &c.

SCENA IX

Arsamene, e Serfe.

ARS: Per dar fine alla mia pena
Chi mi svena per pietà?

SER: Arsamene, ove andate?

ARS: A ber l' onda di Lete,
Sol per scordarmi che fratel mi siete.

SER: Cessi lo sdegno.

ARS: E in voi la tirannia.

SER: Voglio sposarvi al bel, che v' innamora.

ARS: E mi schernite ancora?

SER: So di qual fiamma ardete.
Lessi le vostre note, invan tacete.
(lio!)

ARS: (Ah che Romilda, Oh Dei! mostrò il mio fog.)
Ed or che lo confesso,
E che già lo sapete?

SER: Per Consorte l' avrete.

ARS: Ora lasciate
Ch' io vi baci la man.

SER: Tanto l' amate?

ARS: Più che l' Anima mia.

SCENE VIII

A bridge built over the sea, uniting the two shores.
Xerxes, Ariodates, and a chorus of mariners.

CHORUS: Virtue alone, nought else beside,
Cou'd Asia join to Europe's side;
Live, Xerxes, live, great nature's pride.

XER: Ariodates.

ARI: Sir.

XER: In spight thou seest
Of mountain seas, and of the faithless wind,
I Sestos, thus, and Abydos have joined.
Go quickly, thou, the warlike squadrons range.

ARI: I shall obey.

XER: Before the third day's dawn,
I am resolv'd to pass to Europe's side.

ARI: Fame will, in golden characters, record
Thy glorious deeds, that monarchs, yet to come,
From them may bright examples take.
(Exit.)

CHOR: Virtue alone, &c.

SCENE IX

Arsamenes and Xerxes.

ARS: Who is there will compassion shew,
And give me death to end my woe.

XER: Say, whether, Arsamenes, dost thou go.

ARS: From Lethe's muddy streams to take a draught,
That thou'rt my brother, I must thus forget.

XER: No longer am I wroth.

ARS: Thou tyranniz'st.

XER: I'll wed thee to the fair whom thou ador'st.

ARS: And do'st thou even make me too thy jest.

XER: I know the flame which preys upon they heart,
Thy note I've read, thy silence is in vain.

ART: (Romilda has, o gods! my letter shewn!)
And now that I my am'rous flame avow?
Now that thou know'st the whole, what does't avail?

XER: She shall thy consort be.

ARS: Ah now permit,
That I thy royal hand, may grateful kiss.

XER: So greatly do'st thou love her?

ARS: More than life.

SER: Che nol diceste pria?
Lieti saremo in un istesso dì.
Io Sposo di Romilda.

ARS: Ed io di chi?

SER: Di Atalanta.

ARS: E così voi m' ingannate?

SER: So, che Atalanta amate.

ARS: Amo Romilda.

SER: Eh non fingete più.

ARS: Dunque Romilda a me non concedete?

SER: Lo so, non la volete.

ARS: Sì la voglio, e la otterrò
E se il Ciel per me non Splende,
Gli empj Mostri, e l' ombre orrende
Di Cocito invocherò.
(Parte.)

SCENA X

Atalanta, e Serse.

ATA: V' inchino eccelso Re.

SER: Negò Arsamene
D' essere vostro amante,
E per Romilda sol egli è costante.
Dunque da ver non v' ama; e voi lasciate
Di fuggir tante pene, e non lo amate.

ATA: Voi mi dite che non l' ami
Ma non dite, se potrò.
Troppo belle Son le stelle
Che al suo volto il Ciel donò.
Troppo stretti quei legami
Onde amor m' incatenò.
(Parte.)

SER: Saria lieve ogni doglia,
Se potesse un amante
Amar e disamar sempre a sua voglia.
Il core spera e teme,
Penando ognor così,
Se goderà in amore
Sapere ancor non può.
Lo chieggio alla mia speme
Ella mi dice, sì.
Ma poi freddo timore
Sento che dice no.
(Parte.)

SCENA XI

ELVIRO: (solo.) Me infelice! ò smarrito il mio Padrone!
Ma mi confesso reo; son pazzo affè.
Egli à smarrito me.
Forse per questo Ponte ei sen andò

XER: Why did'st not sooner let me know this love?
One day, the happiness of both shall see,
I, with Romilda blessed.

ARS: And I, with whom?

XER: With Atalanta.

ARS: Do you mock me thus?

XER: I know, that thou dost Atalanta love.

ARS: Romilda, only does engross my heart.

XER: Ah, give dissembl'ing o'er.

ARS: Romilda then
Thou dost not yield me?

XER: Thou'lt that fair refuse.

ARS: Yes, he I'll have, I'll her obtain,
And if my pray'rs to heav'n prove vain;
The monsters of th' infernal shade,
I will invoke to lend their aid.
(Exit.)

SCENE X

Atalanta and Xerxes.

ATA: To thee, great monarch do I lowly bend.

XER: That Arsamenes loves you, he denies,
And constant only to Romilda proves
Wherefore, in truth, his passion's not for thee,
Avoid thy fruitless pain, nor love him thou.

ATA: To love no more, thou do'st advise,
But do'st not say, if thou hast pow'r,
Too many darts are in his eyes,
Which charms incessant round him show'r:
That chain which love on me imposed,
Is for my strength too streightly closed.
(Exit.)

XER: How trifling wou'd be grief, if lovers cou'd
At pleasure love, or from their love desist.
Both love and fear the heart possess,
Alternate tyrants to our joy;
Nor can the ardent lover guess,
If he the fair one shall enjoy.
If of my hopes I ask the fair,
My hopes a flatt'ring answer give;
But then, if I consult my fear,
A flat denial I receive.
(Exit.)

SCENE XI

ELVIRO: (solos.) Wretch that I am,
I have my master lost;
But 'tis my fault, I own. I'm quite turn'd fool.
He, by my troth, has turn'd my

No, ch' io nol veggo no
Ma qual adombra il Ciel nubilo oscuro?
Sento che l' onde fremono,
Sento che l' aria sibila:
Son restato all' oscuro;
Voglio partir, e vò partir in fretta
Si spezza il Ponte, a te, fa cor Gambetta,
Perchè nemico al mio temperamento
E l' acquoso elemento.
Del mio caro Bacco amabile
Nell' Imperio suo potabile
Amo Solo d' arbitar.
L'acqua rende Ipocondriaco;
Il buon vin sin al Zodiaco
La mia testa sa imalzar.
(Parte.)

SCENA XII

Luogo di ritiro contiguo alla Città.
Serse da una parte, Amastre dall' altra.

SER: Gran pena è gelosìa!

AMA: Lo sa il mio cor piagato.

SER: Per altri son sprezzato.

AMA: Per altri anch' io tradita.

SER: E la mia fe schernita.

AMA: Schernita è l' Alma mia.

A 2: Gran pena è gelosìa.

SER: Aspra sorte!

AMA: Empie stelle!

SER: O Romilda crudel!

AMA: Serse rubelle!

SER: Chi parla?

AMA: Un Infelice.

SER: E chi fei tu?

AMA: Un che vi servì in Guerra, e fu ferito.

SER: Vuoi tornar a servirmi?

AMA: Ci penserò.

SER: Perchè?

AMA: Perchè non vuò servir senza mercè.

SER: Che? mi trovasti ingrato?

AMA: Son rimaso ingannato.

SER: (Ma sen viene il mio ben) scostati. Appresso
Noi Parlarem. Tengo un affar che importa, Ritorna a me in brev' ore.

head, perhaps
O'er this bridge he's gone. No; I see him not.
But what a foggy cloud obscures the sky?
The billows roar, and whistling winds I hear,
'Tis now quite dark, I will brush off,
And that with speed, for if the bridge shou'd break,
'Twere best to shew a nimble pair of heels;
The wat'ry Elements I ne'er did like.
In Bacchus' liquid realms, I own,
I wou'd my habitation chuse;
'Tis there that I wou'd fix alone,
His potables I'll ne'er refuse.
The spleen does from mere water rise;
But glorious wine revives the foul.
I strike my head against the skies,
Whene'er I hug the flowing bowl.
(Exit.)

SCENE XII

A place of retirement contiguous to the town.
On one side Xerxes, on the other, Amastre.

XER: How great a pain is jealousy.

AMA: My wounded heart the proof has made.

XER: Another is prefer'd to me.

AMA: And for another I'm betrayed.

XER: My constant faith with scorn's receiv'd.

AMA: My constant heart by scorn deceiv'd.

BOTH: How great a pain is jealousy!

XER: O rigid fate!

AMA: O stars severe!

XER: Romilda cruel!

AMA: Xerxes disloyal!

XER: Who is't that speaks?

AMA: A wretch.

XER: And who art thou?

AMA: One serv'd thee in the wars, and wounded was.

XER: To serve me woud'st thou willingly return.

AMA: I will consider on't.

XER: And why?

AMA: Because I will not serve, without I meet reward.

XER: How? did'st find me, then, ungrateful e'er?

AMA: I've been deceiv'd

XER: My treasure comes this way.
Withdraw; anon we will have farther talk.
A business of great weight I have; return
In a short space.

AMA: (Tornerò per tua pena, o traditore.)
(Si ritira in disparte.)

SCENA XIII

Serse, Romilda, ed Amastre in disparte.

SER: Romilda, e farà ver, che sempre in vano
Pianger mi lasciarete?
Che dite? rispondete.

ROM: Val più contento core
Che quanto il Mondo aduna.
Più vale un ben d' amore
Che cento di fortuna.

SER: Vuò, ch' abbian fine i miei dolori immensi.

ROM: Lasciate, ch' io ci pensi.

SER: No, datemi la destra.

AMA: Olà fermate.
Che il Re v' inganna.

SER: Che ardimento è questo?
Olà, condotto sia
In oscura prigion.

AMA: Morirò pria.
(Si mette in difesa colla Spada in mano.)

SER: Temerità importuna!
(Serse parte sdegnato.)
Strano disturbo!

ROM: (O buona mia fortuna!)
(Le Guardie attaccano Amastre che si defende.)
Cessate olà. E voi prode Guerriero
Riponete quel brando.
Ite—Approverà Serse il mio comando.
(Le Guardie Partono.)

AMA: La fortuna, la Vita, e l' esser mio
In eterno obligate.

ROM: Ite, non vi fermate.
Che se venisse il Re—Ditemi solo,
Che v' indusse del Re a sturbar le voglie?

AMA: Perchè vi vuol sforzar d' effergli Moglie;
E fiamme più gradite
V' ardono il sen.

ROM: Partite.
(Am. Parte.)
Chi cede al furore
Di stelle rubelle
Amante non è.
Trionfa in amore
Del Fato Spietato
L' invitta mia fe.

AMA: (Yes, traitor, to thy grief)
(She withdraws to one side.)

SCENE XIII

Xerxes, Romilda, and Amastre apart.

XER: And art thou, fair Romilda, then resolv'd
To be regardless of thy lover's sighs?
What say'st thou, charmer? deign some answer give,

ROM: Search the world's stores, and you'll not find Treasures to weigh with peace of mind.
And Fortune, with her immense store,
Compar'd with love, is truly poor.

XER: Wilt thou, one day, that my fierce torments cease?

ROM: Allow me, sir, some little space for thought.

XER: No, bless me with thy hand.

AMA: Holloa, take heed;
The king deceives thee.

XER: What is this boldness? Who is there that waits?
To a dark dungeon let him be convey'd.

AMA: I first will die.
(Puts herself in a posture of defence.)

XER: Strange interruption! rash impertinence!
(Exit in anger.)

ROM: (How fortunate am I.)
(The guards attack Amastre, who defends herself.)
Halt there, forbear. Warrior, do thou replace Thy fearless sword. Withdraw.
What I command,
Great Xerxes will approve.
(The guards go off.)

AMA: My fortune, life, and all my faculties,
For ever to thy service hast thou bound.

ROM: Go, stay not, hero, for, if the king shou'd come—
But tell me, only, why thou were't induced
Thus to oppose the pleasure of the king?

AMA: Because he'd make thee, by constraint, his queen,
While a more pleasing flame thy breast does warm.

ROM: Retire from hence.
(Amastre goes off.)
A lover's name he don't deserve,
Who to malignant stars does yield.
My faith, unconquer'd, ne'er shall swerve;
But love triumphing over fate,
Howe'er severe and fierce its hate,
Shall bear the laurels from the field.

Fine dell' Atto Secondo.

ATTO III

SCENA I

Galleria.

Arsamene, Romilda, ed Elviro che trattiene Arsamene e poi Atalanta.

ARS: Sono vani i presti—

ROM: Scrivesti ad Atalanta.
Elviro parlerà.

ARS: Sì Atalanta dirà—(Oh amate pene!)

ROM: Ecco, Atalanta viene.

ATA: (Ahi! scoperto è l' inganno, e che farò?)

ELV: Brutti imbrogli son questi.
O la febre, e la voce—Deh Signora
Dite per carità
Quel che diceste a me.

ATA: Dissi, Romilda scrive, ed ama il Re.

ARS: Che volete di più?

ROM: Dunque ingannate?

ATA: Piano; non vi adirate.
Dissi così, per far partire il Servo,
Che voleva parlarvi.

ROM: Seguite pur, son pronta ad ascoltarvi.

ATA: Serse mi sopragiunse, e prese il foglio.
Io per giovarvi, dissi, è scritto a me,
Mi finsi Amante, ed ò ingannato il Re.

ARS: Or che dite Romilda?

ROM: Or che dite Arsamene?

ARS: Che vi adoro—

ROM: Che siete il caro Bene.
Fate Atalanta pur quanto sapete,
Arsamene il mio ben non mi torrete.

ATA: No, se tu mi sprezzi,
Morir non vuò.
Fo certi vezzi
Col mio sembiante,
Che un altro amante
Trovara saprò.
(Parte.)

SCENA II

Romilda, Arsamene, Elviro, e poi Serse.

ROM: Ecco in segno di se la destra amica.

ELV: Ecco Serse, ecco Serse.

ARS: Oh che sciagura!

End of the Second Act.

ACT III

SCENE I

A gallery.

Arsamenes, Romilda, and Elviro, who stops Arsamenes, and to them Atalanta.

ARS: Vain is all pretence—

ROM: Thou to my sister wrot'st. Elviro, speak.

ARS: Thy sister too shall say—(o cruel pain!)

ROM: See Atalanta comes.

ATA: (Discover'd is my fraud, what must I do?)

ELV: What filthy broils, what squabbling work is here.
I've catch'd an ague, and my voice—Madam,
For pity sake, say, what you said to me.

ATA: My sister lov'd, and to the king did write.

ARS: Woud'st thou have more?

ROM: Art a deceiver then?

ATA: Softly, and do not to thy wrath give way,
To fend the servant hence, I this devis'd,
For he wou'd speak to thee.

ROM: Proceed, I pray,
For I with eagerness thy tale attend.

ATA: Xerxes surpriz'd me, and the letter took;
I said it was, to skreen you, wrote to me,
And feigning that I lov'd, deceiv'd the king.

ARS: What says Romilda?

ROM: Arsamenes what?

ARS: That I adore thee.

ROM: That in thee I live.
Go on now, sister, ev'ry art employ;
Thou shall't not rob me of this only joy.

ATA: With patience I thy slights will bear,
Nor will romantick die.
I still have beauty, still an air,
Another lover to ensnare,
And still bear light'ning in my eye.
(Exit.)

SCENE II

Romilda, Arsamenes, Elviro, and to them Xerxes.

ROM: Behold, my hand in token of my faith.

ELV: See Xerxes, Xerxes comes.

ARS: What luckless fate!

ELV: Ed io vi aspetterò fuor delle mura.
(fugge.)

ROM: Nascondetevi.

ARS: Oh sorte!
(Si nasconde.)

SER: Che vi mosse, Romilda, a quel Guerrioro
Donar la libertate?

ROM: Il suo valore.

SER: Tutto potete; è vostro il Regno e il Core.
Già siete mia Reina.

ROM: Signor, volo tanto alto è gran ruina.

SER: Deh non negate puì.

ROM: Negherò sempre.

SER: Franger io ben saprò—
Intendete Romilda?

ROM: (Ah che farò?)

SER: Non partirò, se pria—basta—che dite?

ROM: Che del mio Genitor vi vuol l' assenso.

SER: E poi che dubbio v' è?

ROM: Ubbidirò il mio Re.

SER: Vado a chiederlo; e intanto
Mi stillo in gioja.

ROM: Ed io mi struggo in pianto.

SER: Per rendermi beato
Parto vezzose stelle,
E poi pupille belle
A voi ritornerò.
Farfalla al vostro lume
Il core innamorato
Ardendo le sue piume
Fenice io scorgerò.
(Parte.)

SCENA III

Arsamene e Romilda.

ARS: Ubbidirò al mio Re.
Oh che limpido amor! che bella se!

ROM: Ah ch' io mi moro.
(Sviene sostenuta dalle sue damigelle.)

ARS: Romilda?

ROM: Vi fermate.

ARS: Romilda?

ROM: Andate andate, Serse il Re
Sovvenirmi potrà,
Quando m' ucciderà.

ARS: Tanto m' odiatè?

ROM: Tantò vi adoro, Addio, vi lascio, addio.

ARS: Vi fuggo.

ELV: I'll wait you, sir, without the city walls.
(runs off.)

ROM: Hide thee.

ARS: O fate!—
(He hides.)

XER: What could, Romilda, move thee to release
That soldier?

ROM: 'Twas his bravery, Sir.

XER: Thou hast all pow'r; our heart and kingdom's thine.

ROM: So high a flight, an equal ruine threats.

XER: Refuse no more.

ROM: I ever shall refuse.

XER: I shall find ways to break—
Heark thee, Romilda.

ROM: (Ah! what shall I do?)

XER: I will not part, before—enough—what say'st?

ROM: That first my father shou'd approve your will.

XER: And then, what doubts?

ROM: I shall my king obey.

XER: I go for his consent. In th' int'rim I Feel thro' my heart of sudden flow of joy.

ROM: While I in tears do waste away.

XER: The choicest blessing to receive,
I now those lovely brilliants leave;
And then shall joyfully return,
To view those stars by which I burn.
Thus, like the moth, around those eyes,
Th' enamour'd heart does wanton play;
But if 'tis scorch'd by too much day,
It, phoenix like, again shall rise.

SCENE III

Arsamenes and Romilda.

ARS: I shall my king obey. O love most pure?
Oh glorious faith!

ROM: Ah me, I faint, I die.
(She falls into the arms of her women.)

ARS: Romilda?

ROM: Stay.

ARS: Romilda?

ROM: Away, be gone, for Xerxes,
The king, will give me ease in giving death.

ARS: Am I so much the object of thy hate?

ROM: Thou art so much the object of my love.
Adieu, I leave thee; but farewel.

ARS: I flie thee.

ROM: E dove andate Idolo mio?

ARS: Dove vuol fiera sorte.
E voi, dove?

ROM: Alla morte.

ARS: Eh dite, al Trono,
Che promesso vi sù.

ROM: Vi lascio, addio, non mi vedrete più.
(La damigelle la conducono via sostenendola.)

ARS: Amor, tiranno amor
Per me non à pietà.
Farmi languir ognor,
E troppa crudeltà.
Un core, un petto sol
Tanto soffrir non sa,
O cangia tempre al duol,
O dammi libertà.

SCENA IV

Bosebetto.

Serse, ed Ariodate.

SER: Come già v' accennammo
Sposo del nostro sangue, a piacer vostro, Destiniamo a Romilda.

ARIO: Alto e' l' onore—e—

SER: L' approvate? assentite?

ARIO: Bramo sol d' ubbidirvi.

SER: Dunque udite.
Verrà tra poco nelle vostre stanze
Persona eguale a noi, del nostro sangue:
Fate che vostra figlia
Per suo Sposo l' accetti.

ARIO: Del vostro sangue? e così noto a me?
(S. Parte.)

SER: Quanto Serse.

ARIO: Arsamene, altri non è.
Del ciel d' amore
Sorte sì bella
Chi mai sperò.
Per mio Splendore
Qual fu la stella
Che lampeggiò.
(Parte.)

SCENA V

Romilda sdegnata che poi s' incontra in Serse.

ROM: Il ferto rifiuto:
E dite a Serse in riportargli il dono,
Che fida Amante, ad altri Sposa io sono.
(vuol Par.)

ROM: Whither wilt thou go, my life?

ARS: Where cruel fate shall guide.
And whither thou?

ROM: To death.

ARS: Ah, rather to the promis'd throne.

ROM: Adieu; I quite thee ne'er to see thee more.
(Her women lead her off, supporting her.)

ARS: O love, thou too tyrannick pow'r,
No pity do'st thou shew to me:
To make me sigh away each hour,
Is too great cruelty in thee.
One heart, one breast, without relief,
Can't bear what thou inflict'st on me.
O change and moderate my grief,
Or give me back to liberty.

SCENE IV

A grove.

Xerxes and Ariodates.

XER: As we already hinted you before,
If you approve, we to Romilda give
A consort of our royal blood.

ARI: Sublime's the honour—and—

XER: Do'st thou approve? do'st thou to this consent?

ARI: My only wish is, to obey they will.

XER: Hear then; to thy apartment there will come,
In a short space, a person whom thou'lt own
Equal to us, and of our royal stem:
Do thou engage thy daughter to receive
This consort.

ARI: Of thy high blood? and known to me as such?

XER: As well as Xerxes is.

ARI: This cannot be (Exit, Xerxes.)
Other than Arsamenes.
Who, from the sphere of love,
Cou'd ever hope to prove
So happy in his fate!
What lucky star, to me,
Cou'd so propitious be,
To raise me to such state!

SCENE V

Romilda in anger, who meets with Xerxes.

ROM: His offer'd diadem I do reject,
And with his gift return'd, let Xerxes know;
Another's wife I am, and true to love.

SER: Fermatevi mia Sposa, e mia Reina.

ROM: Che dite? oimè! così non mi chiamate.

SER: Perchè?

ROM: Perchè oscurate
Il Decoro real.

SER: Come?

ROM: Ascoltate.
Arsamene mi amò—

SER: Principio infausto.

ROM: Fu modesto e fedel.

SER: Basta.

ROM: Servimmi
Tacito adoratore.

SER: Ah m' uccidete!

ROM: Ma ardito al fin.

SER: Che?

ROM: Non ardisco, o Sire,
Mi arrosiisco, Signor; non lo dirò.
Parto, lo scriverò.

SER: No no, seguite.

ROM: Non so se ardire, o se fortuna fu—

SER: Ah che non posso più.

ROM: Le sue labbra accostò—

SER: Dove?

ROM: Alle mie.
E— E— E—

SER: E vi baciò, non è? Ditelo.

ROM: Appunto.

SER: Per fuggir le mie nozze, ora mentite.
Ma siasi ver o no; delle sue colpe
Abbia il castigo. Olà, pronti volate;
Arsamene uccidete.
(alle Guardie.)
Vedova di quel bacio
Poi Sposa mia sarete.
(Parte sdegnato.)

ROM: Mio Re, mio Sposo, sì: Oh amare pene!
Fermate, e viva il caro mio Arsamene.

SCENA VI

Romilda, ed Amastre con lettera in mano.

ROM: Prode Guerrier.—

AMA: Signora.

ROM: A me venite.
Se nel petto nudrite
Alma cortese e pia,
Le mie preghiere udite.

XER: Stay thee, my spouse, stay my beloved queen.

ROM: What's this I hear? Alas! don't term me such.

XER: And why?

ROM: Thou'lt bring a blemish on thy crown.

XER: And how?

ROM: Do thou attend. I once was lov'd
By Arsamenes.

XER: Luckless exordium.

ROM: Within the bounds of faithful modesty.

XER: Enough.

ROM: A silent adoration prov'd.

XER: You give me death.

ROM: His love: but grown, at length,
More bold.

XER: What?

ROM: I dare not, sir, my blushes
Do preclude my words. No, I cannot speak;
But I will hence and write it.

XER: No, go on.

ROM: I know not, if it boldness was, or fate—

XER: Ah! I can bear no more.

ROM: His lips he did approach.

XER: To what?

ROM: To mine, and, and—

XER: And kiss'd thee; is't not so? speak out.

ROM: 'Twas so.

XER: This, to avoid my nuptials, hast thou feign'd;
This instant feign'd; but be it so or not,
He shall chastisement for his boldness meet.
Who's there? quick, fly, and Arsamenes slay.
(To the guards.)
First shalt thou widdow of that kiss be made,
And then the spouse of Xerxes shalt thou be.
(Exit in rage.)

SCENE VI

Romilda and Amastre, with a letter in her hand.

ROM: Brave warrior.

AMA: Lady.

ROM: Draw thou near to me.
If in thy breast thou gentle pity bear'st,
Hear my request.

AMA: Comandi, e non preghiere
A me porger dovete. Io mi sovvengo,
Che toglieste il mio piede
Da' lacci di quell' empio ingrato Re.

ROM: Ingratissimo appunto. Egli comanda,
Ch' Arsamene s' uccida.
In voi il mio cor si fida;
Cercatelo, e per voi nota gli sia
Quella sentenza ria.

AMA: Vado pronto a servirvi, ed io vi priego
Di far recare al Re questo mio foglio.

ROM: Volo per ispedirlo. (Oh mio cordoglio!)

AMA: Cagion son io
Del mio dolore,
E so perchè.
Ama il cor mio
Un traditore,
Con troppo amore
Con troppa fe.
(Parte.)

SCENA VII

Arsamene, e Romilda.

ARS: Romilda infida, e di me pensa ancora?

ROM: Romilda, che vi adora
Di voi pensa ad ognora.

ARS: Per spronarmi a partire,
Non per salvar chi v' ama,
Dite che Serse brama il mio morire.

ROM: Troppo oltraggi la mia fede.

ARS: Troppo inganni la mia fede.

A 2: Alma fiera, ingrato core.

ROM: E tiranna la Mercede.

ARS: Non è questa la Mercede.

ROM: Che riceve.

ARS: Che si deve.

A 2: Al mio petto innamorato.
(Partono per diverse parti.)

SCENA VIII

Gran Tempio, col simulacro del Sole, ed Ara accesa Coro di Ministri all' intorno del simulacro.

AMA: Commands, and not requests,
Become thee more with me; I bear in mind,
From the ungrateful king thou sett'st me free.

ROM: Ungrateful, truly, to the last degree.
He has commanded Arsamenes' death.
In thee my heart confides, ah, seek him out,
And let him know this wicked sentence pass'd.

AMA: To serve thee, I with readiness do go,
And to the king this note I beg thou'lt give.

ROM: I fly to give it. (O my piercing grief!)

AMA: The cause of my own grief am I,
And well I know the reason why:
My heart a traitor does pursue,
With too fond love, and faith too true.
(Exit.)

SCENE VII

Arsamenes and Romilda.

ARS: Faithless Romilda, think'st thou still of me?

ROM: Thou do'st Romilda's every thought employ,
As thou'rt alone, the fond Romilda's joy.

ARS: To hasten my departure hence with speed,
And not to have thy lover, do'st thou say,
That angry Xerxes has my death decreed.

ROM: Too many wrongs my faith does meet.

ARS: My faith does find too great deceit.

BOTH: Thy cruel heart denies me rest.

ROM: Tyranical is the reward.

ARS: This is not the just reward.

ROM: Which does receive.

ARS: Which thou do'st give.

BOTH: This faithful and enamour'd breast.
(Exit, on different parts of the stage.)

SCENE VIII

A large temple, with the image of the sun. An altar lighted. A chorus of priests round the statute.

CORO: Ciò the Giove destinò
Impedir l' Uomo non sa.
(Ariodate, Romilda, Arsamene dal fondo della Scena.)

ARIO: Ecco lo Sposo. Io ben ne fui presago.
Quanto m' arride il Fato.

ARS: Alma fiera

ARS: Core ingrato

ARS, ROM: Troppo oltraggi la mia fede.

ARIO: A colmarmi d' onore
Signor, so che veniste

ROM: Ah il Genitore!
(vuol P.)

ARIO: Romilda, non partite.

ARS: Ariodate, che dite?

ARIO: Che a voi dò la mia figlia
Per serva umile e Sposa,
Come m' impose il Re.

ARS: Serse l' impose?

ARIO: A me stesso.

ROM: Che Ascolto!

ARIO: E voi veniste
Per prenderla in consorte?

ARS: Altro non bramo.

ROM: (Oh me Beata! oh sorte!)

ARIO: Romilda, acconsentite?

ROM: Sì mio Padre, e Signore.

ARIO: Stringete omai le Destre

ROM, ARS: e in un il core.

ARIO: Ora corriamo a Serse
Per render grazie d' un si grande onore.
(Partono.)

CORO: (replica.)
Chi infelice si trovò
Pien di gioja or lieto va.

SCENA IX

Serse, poi Ariodate.

SER: Se ne viene Ariodate. è tempo omai
Di scoprir, che son Io,
Che Romilda desiò.
Eccomi Ariodate.

ARIO: Invitto Sire
V' inchino.

SER: Or che vi sembra?
Lo Sposo egual vi dissi?

ARIO: E un alto onore.

SER: Romilda vaga
Ne sarà paga?

ARIO: Non brama più.

SER: Ma perchè mai non viene?
Dov' è?

CHOR: Whate'er all ruleing Jove commands;
Vainly all human force withstands.
(Ariodates, Romilda, Arsamenes, at the farther end of the stage.)

ARI: Behold the bridegroom. This I well presaged.
How does fate smile on me this day.

ARS: Too cruel soul

ROM: Ungrateful heart

ARS, ROM: Too much my faith you wrong.

ARI: With honours to o'erwhelm me art thou come,
I know, my lord.

ROM: : Ha! is my father here!
(Going.)

ARI: Stay thee, Romilda; thou must not go hence,

ARS: What was it, Ariodates, thou did'st say?

ARI: That, in obedience to the king's commands,
For humble handmaid, and obedient wife,
I give thee here my daughter.

ARS: Did Xerxes
This Command?

ARI: To my myself.

ROM: What hear I?

ARI: And come you not to take her for your spouse?

ARS: Nothing I wish more.

ROM: (Happy me! O fate!)

ARI: Romilda, do'st consent?

ROM: My lord, I do.

ARI: Join then your hands.

ROM, ARS: And join in one our hearts.

ARI: Now let us strait to Xerxes haste away,
And thank him for the might honour done.
(Exit.)

CHORUS: (replies.) And he who was depress'd with woe,
Does rising joy and comfort know.

SCENE IX

Xerxes, to him Ariodates.

XER: See Ariodates comes, 'tis time, at length,
To let him know, 'tis I, Romilda ask.
Thou seest, my Ariodates,

ARI: that I'm here;
Now what's thy thoughts?

XER: equal the spouse I said?

ARI: The honour is sublime.

XER: Romilda fair,
Is she content.

ARI: She nothing more does wish.

XER: But say, why comes she not? where is she then?

ARIO: Con Arsamene.

SER: Che?

ARIO: Collo Sposo.

SER: Come?

ARIO: Collo Sposo Signor?

SER: Che Sposo? Aimè!

ARIO: Come imponeste.

SER: Che v' imposi? che?

ARIO: Eguale a voi, del vostro sangue; e venne
Nelle mie stanze—

SER: E sono Sposi?

ARIO: Sono.

SER: Empio, perfido, indegno.

ARIO: Mio Re?

SER: Tu m' ai tradito,
E per tuo Re tenti chiamarmi ardito,
(Un paggio porta un Lettera a Serse, e gli parla basso.) Romilda a me l' invia? Perfida donna!
crede co' inchiostri rei
Incantar follemente i sdegni miei?
(Dà la Lettera ad Ariodate, che legge.)

ARIO: (Perchè non moro oh Ciel!)

SER: Leggi, che fai?

ARIO: "Ingratissimo amante.

SER: Come? ingrato mi chiama; e tanto ell' osa?

ARIO: "Venni per esser vostra

SER: E altrui si Sposa?

ARIO: Trovai che mi sprezzate.

SER: Ah note Scelerate!

ARIO: "Partò, ma il Ciel punitrà vostra colpe.

SER: Colpe di averti amato.

ARIO: "Io piangerò
"Sino all' ultimo fiato;
"Amastre.

SER: Che?

ARIO: Non di Romilda è il foglio.
(Serse prende con isdegno la Lettera e guarda la firma.)

SER: Amastre? vanne, e ti allontana indegno;
(Ariodate si ritira in disparte.)
Non mancava altro tedio in tanto sdegno.
Crude furie degli orridi abissi
Aspergetemi d' aspro veleno.
Crolli il Mondo, il sole s' eclissi
A quest' ira, che spira il mio seno.
(Nel partire gli si fanno innanzi Arsamene, Romilda, Amastre, Atalanta, ed Elviro.)

ARI: With Arsamenes.

XER: What?

ARI: She's with her spouse.

XER: How?

ARI: She's with her spouse, my lord?

XER: Her spouse? alas!

ARI: Whom thou enjoin'st

XER: What? whom did I enjoin?

ARI: Equal to you, and of your royal blood
In my apartments.

XER: Are they married then?

ARI: They are.

XER: Thou treach'rous, impious, worthless wretch.

ARI: What means my king?

XER: I am by thee betray'd,
And hast thou confidence to call me king?
(A page brings a letter to Xerxes, and speaks softly to him.)
Romilda send me this? woman most base!
Thinks she by writing to appease my wrath?
(Gives the letter to Ariodates, who reads.)

ARI: Why still, o heavens, do I life retain.

XER: Read, what do'st thou do?

ARI: "Lover ungrateful.

XER: How? dares she tax me with ingratitude?

ARI: "To be thine I came.

XER: And weds another?

ARI: "By thee, I found myself despis'd.

XER: Wicked!

ARI: "From hence I go, thy crimes will heav'n o'ertake.

XER: The crime of loving thee.

ARI: "I shall in tears
"Draw my last gasp of breath.
Amastre.
(Xerxes takes the letter in a passion and examines the subscription.)

XER: Amastre! hence, hence from my sight thou wretch.
(Ariodates withdraws to one side of the stage.)
What worse could happen to encrease my pain.
Ye cruel furies of the lake,
On me, o'er me, your venome shake.
Crush'd by the world, and let yond light,
T' assuage my wrath, be drown'd in night.
(In going off, he is met by Arsamenes, Romilda, Amastre, Atalanta, and Elviro.)

SCENA ULTIMA

Tutti.

SER: Perfidi, e ancora usate
Venirmi innanzi?

ARIO: Che furor

ARS: Cessate.
Umili al vostro pie—

SER: Sol per schernirmi.

ARS: Come, Signor?

SER: Tu m' ai Romilda tolta.

ARS: Fu pur vostro comando.

ARIO: E ver.

ROM: Confermo.

SER: E quando?
Temerarj pretesti!
(tira la Spada.)
Questo ferro a quell' empia in seno immergi.

ARS: Ch' io sveni la mia Sposa?
Svenerò pria il tuo core.

AMA: Datelo a me Signore.
(a Serse.)

SER: E chi sei tu che ognor sempre mi sturbi?

AMA: Uno, che cerca far giusta vendetta.
Volete chi si sveni
Un alma che tradì chi pur l' adora?

SER: Sì.

AMA: E si squarci quel core.

SER: Sì.

AMA: Mori dunque ingrato, e traditore.
(gli rapisce a forza il ferro, presentandoglielo el petto.)
Ecco Amastre tradita, e ognor fedele:
E tu spietato e rìo
La disprezzi così.

SER: Uccidetemi sì.

AMA: Morir degg' io.

SER: Fermate. Ora mi pento—

AMA: E torni a amarmi?

SER: Sì, ma di tua pietade indegno sono.

AMA: Amami pur, o cara, io ti perdono.
(si abbracciano.)

ELV: Sono tutto tremante.

ARS: Or sparve il duolo.

ARS: Io respiro, e stupisco.

ROM: Io mi consolo.

SCENE LAST

All.

XER: Dare ye, ye wretches, meet me face to face.

ARI: How great's his rage!

ARS: No more. We prostrate come.

XER: T' insult.

ARS: How, my lord?

XER: Thou hast depriv'd me
Of Romilda.

ARS: It was by your command.

ARI: That's truth.

ROM: And I confirm it.

XER: When, I pray?
Most vain pretence, Here, do thou plunge this sword (draws.)
Into that impious breast.

ARS: How, kill my wife?
No, sooner would I spilt thy cruel heart.

AMA: Give me, my lord, the sword—
(to Xerxes.)

XER: And who art thou, who'rt momently my plauge.

AMA: One who does seek a just revenge to take.
Wouldst that I should pierce th' ungrateful heart
Which has with treachery repaid true love?

XER: Most willingly.

AMA: The faithless heart transfix?

XER: 'Tis what I wish.

AMA: Then, thankless traitor, die.
(She snatches the sword out of his hand, and claps it to his breast.)
Behold Amastre, traitor, faithful still.

XER: Give me then death.

AMA: 'Tis I that ought to die.

XER: Hold, I now repent—

AMA: Do'st thou return again to love and me?

XER: I do; but still thy pity don't deserve.

AMA: Give me thy love, and I can all forgive—
(They embrace)

ELV: I've got, methinks, an ague fit.

ARI: Let ev'ry grief now vanish.

ARS: I do again respire, tho' still amaz'd,

ROM: And I now comfort know.

ATA: Ed io cercherò altrove un altro amante.

SER: Amici, compatite i miei furori,
E godete felici: i vostri amori.

ROM: (à Ars.) Caro voi siete all' Alma
Dolce voi siete al cor.
Son dalla vostra palma
Fatta Trofeo d' amor.

ATA: And I else where another love will seek.

XER: Forgive, my friends, the vi'lence of my rage,
And be ye happy in each others love.

ROM: (to Ars) Thou to my heart art ever dear,
Such to my soul thoul't ever prove.
I am the palm, which thou shall't bear,
As trophy of a constant love,

CORO: Ritorna a noi la Calma
Riede la gioja al Cor.
Per riportar la palma
S' uniro amore e onor.

IL FINE.

CHORUS: Now, at length, returns the calm
Joy and peace, the heart's delight;
And, to bear away the palm,
Love and honour do unite.

FINIS.

Semele (1744)

Music by George Frederik Handel ■ Libretto by William Congreve

---

This three-act opera, set to a libretto by William Congreve, premiered at Covent Garden, London, on February 10, 1744. The story opens with religious ceremonies taking place at the Temple of Juno in Thebes. The daughter of King Cadmus, Semele, is engaged to Athamas, Prince of Boeotia. However, she is in love with Jupiter, who has come to her in disguise. Her father and Athamas urge her to cease delaying the wedding, and she prays to Jove to help her. Ino, Semele's sister, is in love with Athamas. Semele begs Ino to speak about her feelings; Cadmus tells her off, and the altar fire dies down, a sign of Jupiter's displeasure. The crowd is upset by this and rushes out of temple. In a scene between Ino and Athamas, he realizes her feelings for him. Cadmus enters and says that Semele has been taken by an eagle. Her disappearance is mourned until the priests tell Cadmus that Jupiter now favors his family—this cannot be explained. Semele appears from a cloud and reassures everyone that she is well. Juno, seeking revenge, is looking for Semele. Iris, Juno's attendant, tells her that Jupiter is protecting Semele with two dragons. Juno says that Somnus, god of sleep, will cause the two dragons to sleep so that she may exact her revenge. Semele is now asleep at her palace, surrounded by Zephirs and Loves. Jupiter appears and reassures her of his love. Semele brings up the matter of her mortality as opposed to Jupiter's immortality. Jupiter decides to bring Ino to her for company, and he takes them to Arcadia. Ino realizes that she is brought to this hallowed place at Jupiter's direct order. Somnus is asleep at his cave. Juno and Iris appear and ask his help to remove the protection Jupiter has placed around Semele. Somnus hesitates, but Juno mentions the name Pasithea and he agrees to help her in return for Pasithea. Juno orders that Jupiter be distracted by dreaming of Semele and that the dragons and Ino be put to sleep by Somnus' rod. Juno appears to Semele disguised as Ino and asks her if Jupiter has made her immortal yet; she suggests to Semele that she refuse Jupiter all favors until he grants her immortality and he appears to her in his godly state—Juno knows that Semele will be destroyed should he do so. Semele believes her and thanks her; Juno departs as Jupiter enters. Jupiter tells Semele that he has dreamt she refused him all favors, and she sticks to her decision to do just that. Jupiter promises to grant her whatever she should desire, and she asks him to appear to her in his immortal state. Jupiter is agitated by this request, but she insists that he comply. Jupiter mourns his promise as he realizes the consequences. He appears to her in his godly splendor and she dies. Back at Cadmus' court, Ino announces that her marriage to Athamas is prophesied. Apollo appears on a cloud and announces that a phoenix will rise out of Semele's ashes.

NOTE: The music for this opera was written for the following English libretto and therefore hasn't been edited in any way.

■ PART I.

SCENE I.

The SCENE is the Temple of Juno: Near the Altar is a Golden Image of the Goddess. Priests are in their Solemnities, as after a Sacrifice newly offered; Flames arise from the Altar, and the Statute of Juno is seen to bow.

Cadmus, Athamas, Semele, Ino, and Chorus of Priests.

RECITATIVE: (accompanied.)
BEHOLD! auspicious Flashes rise!
Juno accepts our Sacrifice;
The grateful Odour swift ascends,
And see, the golden Image bends.

CHORUS: Lucky Omens-bless our Rites,
And sure Success shall crown your Loves;
Peaceful Days and fruitful Nights
Attend the Pair that she approves.

CADM: Daughter, obey,
Hear and obey;
With kind Consenting
Ease a Parent's Care;
Invent no new Delay,

ATHA: O hear a faithful Lover's Pray'r;
On this auspicious Day,
Invent no new Delay.
Hear—

CADM: And obey—

BOTH: Invent no new Delay,
On this auspicious Day.

RECITATIVE: (accompanied.)

SEMELE: (Apart.) Ah me!
What Refuge now is left me?
How various, how tormenting
Are my Miseries!
O Jove! assist me:
Can Semele forgo thy Love,
And to a Mortal's Passion yield?
Thy Vengeance will o'ertake
Such Perfidy.
If I deny, my Father's Wrath I fear.
O Jove! in Pity teach me which to chose,
Incline me to comply, or help me to refuse.

SONG:
The Morning Lark to mine accords his Note,
And tunes to my Distress his warbling Throat;
Each setting and each rising Sun I mourn,
Wailing alike his Absence and Return.
The Morning Lark, &c.

ATHA: See, she blushing turns her Eyes;
See, with Sighs her Bosom panting:
If from Love those Sighs arise,
Nothing to my Bliss is wanting.

SONG:
Hymen, haste, thy Torch prepare,
Love already his has lighted;
One soft Sigh has cured Despair,
And more than my past Pains required.
Hymen, haste, &c.

INO: Alas! she yields,
And has undone me:
I can no longer hide my Passion;
It must have Vent—
Or inward Burning
Will consume me.
O Athamas!—
I cannot utter it.

ATHA: On me Fair Ino calls
With mournful Accent,
Her Colour fading,
And her Eyes o'erflowing.

INO: O Semele!

SEMELE: On me she calls,
Yet seems to shun me:
What would my sister?
Speak—

INO: Thou hast undone me.

A FOUR-PART SONG:

CADM: Why dost thou thus untimely grieve,
And all our solemn Rites prophane?
Can He, or She thy Woes relieve?
Or I? of whom dost thou complain?

INO: Of all; but all I fear in vain.

ATHA: Can I thy Woes relieve?

SEMELE: Can I asswage they Pain?

CADM, ATHA, SEMELE: Of whom dost thou complain?

INO: Of all, but all I fear in vain.
(Thunder is heard, and the Fire is extinguished on the Altar.)

CHORUS OF PRIESTS:
Avert these Omens, all ye Pow'rs!
Some God, averse, our holy Rites controlls;
O'erwhelmed with sudden Night the Day expires!
Ill-boding Thunder on the right hand rolls.
And Jove himself descends in Show'rs,
To quench our late propitious Fires.

RECITATIVE: (accompanied)
(Flames are rekindled on the Altar.)
Again auspicious Flashes rise,
Juno accepts our Sacrifice.
(The Fire is again extinguished.)
Again the sickly Flame decaying dies:
Juno assents, but angry Jove denies.

ATHA: Thy Aid, pronubial Juno, Athamas implores.

SEMELE: (Apart.) Thee, Jove, and thee alone, thy Semele adores.
(A loud Clap of Thunder, the Altar sinks.)

CHORUS OF PRIESTS:
Cease, cease your Vows, 'tis impious to proceed;
Be gone, and fly this holy Place with Speed:
This dreadful Conflict is of dire Presage;
Be gone, and fly from Jove's impending Rage.
(Exeunt)

SCENE II.

ATHAMAS AND INO:

ATHA: O Athamas, what Torture hast thou born!
And O, what hast thou yet to bear!
From Love, from Hope, from near Possession torn,
And plunged at once in deep Despair.

SONG:

INO: Turn, hopeless Lover, turn thy Eyes,
And see a Maid bemoan;
In flowing Tears and aching Sighs,
Thy Woes too like her own.
Turn, hopeless Lover, &c

ATHA: She weeps!
The gentle Maid, in tender Pity,
Weeps to behold my Misery!
So Semele wou'd melt
To see another mourn.

SONG:
Your tuneful Voice my Tale would tell,
In pity of my sad Despair;
And with sweet Melody compel
Attention from the flying Fair.
Your tuneful Voice, &c.

INO: Too well I see
Thou wilt not understand me.
Whence cou'd proceed such Tenderness?
Whence such Compassion?
Insensible! Ingrate! —
Ah no, I cannot blame thee:
For by Effects unknown before
Who cou'd the hidden Cause explore;
Or think that Love cou'd act so strange a Part,
To plead for Pity in a Rival's Heart?
ATHA: Ah me, what have I heard?
She does her Passion own.

DUET:

INO: You've undone me;
Look not on me;
Guilt upbraiding,
Shame invading,

ATHA: With my Life I wou'd atone
Pains you've born, to me unknown.
Cease to shun me.

INO: You've undone me;

BOTH: Love, Love alone,
Has both undone.

SCENE III.

To Them, Enter Cadmus, attended.

CADM: Ah, wretched Prince, doomed to disastrous Love!
Ah me, of Parents most forlorn!
Prepare, O Athamas! to prove
The sharpest Pangs that e'er were born;
Prepare with me our common Loss to mourn.
ATHA: Can Fate, or Semele invent
Another, yet another Punishment?

RECITATIVE: (accompanied.)

CADM: Winged with our Fears, and pious Haste,
From Juno's Fane we fled;
Scarce we the brazen Gates had passed,
When Semele around her Head
With azure Flames was graced;
Whose lambent Glories in her Tresses played.
While this we saw with dread Surprize,
Swifter than Light'ning downward tending,
An Eagle stooped, of mighty Size,
One purple Wings descending;
Like Gold his Beak, like Stars shone forth his Eyes;
His silver plumy Breast with Snow contending:
Sudden he snatched the trembling Maid,
And soaring from our Sight conveyed;
Diffusing ever as he lessening flew
Celestial Odour, and ambrosial Dew.

ATHA: O Prodigy, to me of dire Portent!

INO: To me, I hope, of fortunate Event.

SCENE IV.

Enter to them Chorus of Priests and Augurs.

CADM: See, see, Jove's Priests and holy Augurs come:
Speak, speak, of Semele and me declare the Doom.

CHORUS OF PRIESTS AND AUGURS:
Hail Cadmus, hail! Jove salutes the Theban King.
Cease your Mourning,
Joys returning,
Songs of Mirth and Triumph sing.

SONG:
Endless Pleasure, endless Love,
Semele enjoys above;
On her Bosom Jove reclining,
Useless now his Thunder lies;
To her Arms his Bolts resigning,
And his Lightning to her Eyes.

CHORUS:
Endless Pleasure, endless Love,
Semele enjoys above.

PART II.

SCENE I.

The SCENE is a pleasant Country.

Juno and Iris.

JUNO: Iris, impatient of thy Stay,
From Samos have I winged my Way,
To meet thy slow Return.

IRIS: With all his Speed, not yet the Sun
Thro' half his Race has run,
Since I to execute thy dread Command
Have thrice encompassed Sea and Land.

JUNO: Say, where is Semele's Abode?

RECITATIVE: (accompanied.)

IRIS: Look where Citheron proudly stands,
Bœotia parting from Cecropian Lands.
High on the Summit of that Hill,
Beyond the Reach of Mortal Eyes,
By Jove's Command, and Vulcan's Skill,
Behold a new erected Palace rise.

SONG:
There from Mortal Cares retiring,
She resides in sweet Retreat;
On her Pleasure, Jove requiring,
All the Loves and Graces wait.
There from, &c.

RECITATIVE: (accompanied.)

JUNO: No more—I'll hear no more.
Awake Saturnia from thy Lethargy;
Seize, destroy the cursed Semele.
Scale proud Citheron's Top:
Snatch her, tear her in thy Fury,
And down to the Flood of Acheron
Let her fall, let her fall, fall, fall,
Rolling down the Depths of Night,
Never more to behold Light.
If I th' imperial Scepter sway—I swear
By Hell—
Tremble thou Universe this Oath to hear,
Not one of cursed Agenor's Race to spare.

IRIS: Hear, mighty Queen, while I recount
What Obstacles you must surmount.

RECITATIVE: (accompanied.)
With Adamant the Gates are barred,
Whose Entrance two fierce Dragons guard;
At each Approach they lash their forky Stings,
And clap their brazen Wings:
And as their scaly Horrors rise,
They all at once disclose
A thousand fiery Eyes
Which never know Repose.

SONG:

JUNO: Hence, Iris, hence away,
Far from the Realms of Day;
O'er Scythian Hills to the Meotian Lake
A Speedy Flight we'll take:
There Somnus I'll compel
His downy Bed to leave, and silent Cell:
With Noise and Light I will his Peace molest,
Nor shall he sink again to pleasing Rest,
'Till to my vowed Revenge he grants Supplies,
And seals with Sleep the wakeful Dragons Eyes.
Hence, Iris, &c.
(Exeunt)

SCENE II.

An Apartment in the Palace of Semele, she is sleeping, Loves and Zephirs waiting. Semele awakes and rises.

SONG:
O Sleep, why dost thou leave me?
Why thy Visionary Joys remove?
O Sleep again deceive me,
To my Arms restore my wand'ring Love.

SCENE III.

To them enter Jupiter.

SEMELE: Let me not another Moment
Bear the Pangs of Absence;
Since you have formed my Soul for Loving,
No more afflict me
With Doubts and Fears, and cruel Jealousies.

SONG:

JUPITER: Lay your Doubts and Fears aside,
And for Joys alone provide;
Tho' this Human Shape I wear,
Think not I Man's Falshood bear.
Lay your Doubts, &c.
—I was not absent;
You are Mortal, and require
Time to rest and to repose.
I was not absent,
While Love was with thee
I was present:
Love and I are one.

SONG:

SEMELE: With fond Desiring,
With Bliss expiring,
Panting,
Fainting,
If this be Love, not you alone
But Love and I are one.
Causeless doubting,
Or despairing,
Rashly trusting,
Idly fearing,
If this be Love, not you alone
But Love and I are one.
With fond desiring, &c.

CHORUS OF LOVES AND ZEPHIRS:
How engaging, how endearing,
Is a Lover's Pain and Care!
And what Joy the Nymph's Appearing After Absence or Despair!

SEMELE: —Ah me!

JUPITER: Why sighs my Semele?
What gentle Sorrow
Swells thy soft Bosom?
Why tremble those fair Eyes
With interrupted Light?
Where hov'ring for a Vent,
Amidst their humid Fires,
Some new-formed Wish appears.
Speak, and obtain.

SEMELE: At my own Happiness
I sigh and tremble;
For I am Mortal,
Still a Woman;
And ever when you leave me,
Tho' compassed round with Deities
Of Loves and Graces,
A Fear invades me,
And conscious of a Nature
Far inferior,
I seek for Solitude,
And shun Society.

JUPITER: (Apart.) Too well I read her Meaning,
But must not understand her:
Aiming at Immortality
With dangerous Ambition.

SONG:
I must with speed amuse her;
Lest she too much explain,
It gives the Lover double Pain,
Who hears his Nymph complain,
And hearing, must refuse her.

CHORUS OF LOVES AND ZEPHYRS:
Now Love that everlasting Boy invites
To revel while you may in soft Delights.

JUPITER: By my Command,
Now at this Instant,
Two winged Zephyrs
From her downy Bed
Thy much-loved Ino bear,
And both together,
Waft her hither,
Thro' the balmy Air.

SEMELE: Shall I my sister see!
The dear Companion
Of my tender Years.

JUPITER: See, she appears,
But sees not me;
For I am visible
Alone to thee.
While I retire, rise and meet her,
And with Welcomes greet her.
Now all this Scene shall to Arcadia turn,
The Seat of happy Nymphs and Swains;
There, without Rage of Jealousy, they burn,
And taste the Sweets of Love without its Pains.

SONG:
Where'er you walk, cool Gales shall fan the Glade;
Trees, where you sit, shall croud into a shade:
Where'er you tread, the blushing Flow'rs shall rise;
And all things flourish where you turn your Eyes.
Where'er, &c.
(Exit.)

SCENE IV.

Semele, Ino, and Chorus of Nymphs and Swains.

SEMELE: Dear Sister, how was your Passage hither?

INO: O'er many States and peopled Towns we passed,
O'er Hills and Valleys, and o'er Desarts waste;
O'er barren Moors, and o'er unwholesome Fens,
And Woods, where Beasts inhabit dreadful Dens.
Thro' all which pathless Way our Speed was such,
We stopped not once the Face of Earth to touch.
Mean time they told me, while thro' Air we fled,
That Jove did thus ordain.

ACCOMPANIED:
But hark! the heav'nly Sphere turns round,
And Silence now is drowned
In Ecstacy of Sound.
How on a sudden the still Air is charmed,
As if all Harmony were just alarmed!
And ev'ry Soul with Transport filled,
Alternately is thawed and chilled.

DUET:
Prepare then, ye Immortal Choir,
Each sacred Minstrel tune his Lyre,
And all in Chorus join.

CHORUS: Bless the glad Earth with heav'nly Lays,
And to that Pitch th' eternal Accents raise,
That all appear Divine.

PART III.

SCENE I.

SCENE, the Cave of Sleep, the God of Sleep lying on his Bed. A soft Symphony is heard afterwards.

Juno and Iris appear.

JUNO: Somnus, awake,
Raise thy reclining Head.

IRIS: Thyself forsake,
And lift up thy heavy Lids of Lead.

SONG:

SOMNUS: (waking.) Leave me, lothsome Light.
Receive me, silent Night.
Lethe, why does thy ling'ring Current cease?
O murmur, murmur me again to Peace.
(Sleeps again.)

IRIS: Dull God, canst thou attend the Water's fall,
And not hear Saturnia call?

JUNO: Peace Iris, Peace, I know how to charm him,
Pasithea's Name alone can warm him.
Somnus, arise!
Disclose thy tender Eyes;
For Pasithea's Sight
Endure the Light.
Somnus, arise!

SONG:

SOMNUS: More sweet is that Name
Than a soft purling Stream;
With Pleasure Repose I'll forsake,
If you'll grant me but her to sooth me awake.
More sweet, &c.

JUNO: My Will obey,
She shall be thine.
Thou, with thy softer Pow'rs,
first Jove shall captivate:
To Morpheus then give order,
Thy various Minister,
That with a Dream in Shape of Semele,
But far more beautiful,
And more alluring,
He may invade the sleeping Deity;
And more to agitate
His kindling Fire,
Still let the Phantom seem
To fly before him,
That he may wake impetuous,
Furious in Desire;
Unable to refuse whatever Boon
Her Coyness shall require.

SOMN: I tremble to comply.

JUNO: To me thy leaden Rod resign,
To charm the Centinels
On Mount Citheron,
Then cast a Sleep on mortal Ino:
That I may seem her Form to wear,
When I to Semele appear.

DUET:

JUNO: Obey my Will, they Rod resign,
And Pasithea shall be thine.

SOMN: All I must grant, for all is due To Pasithea, Love, and You.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

An Apartment. Semele alone.

SONG:
My racking Thoughts by no kind Slumbers freed,
But painful Nights do joyful Days succeed.

SCENE III.

To her enter Juno as Ino, with a Mirrour in her Hand.

JUNO: (apart.) Thus shaped like Ino,
With Ease I shall deceive her,
And in this Mirrour she shall see
Herself as much transformed as me.
(To Semele.) Do I some Goddess see!
Or is it Semele?

SEMELE: Dear Sister, speak,
Whence this Astonishment?

JUNO: Your Charms improving
To Divine Perfection,
Shew you were late admitted
Amongst Celestial Beauties.
Has Jove consented?
And are you made Immortal?

SEMELE: Ah! no, I still am Mortal,
Nor am I sensible
Of any Change, or new Perfection.

ARIOSO:
(Juno giving her the Glass.)
Behold in this Mirrour
Whence comes my Surprize,
Such Lustre and Terror
Unite in your Eyes;
That mine cannot fix on a Radiance so bright,
'Tis unsafe for the Sense, and too slipp'ry for Sight.

SEMELE: O Ecstacy of Happiness
Celestial Graces
I discover in each Feature!

SONG:
Myself I shall adore,
If I persist in gazing;
No Object sure before
Was ever half so pleasing.

JUNO: Be wife, as you are beautiful,
Nor lose this Opportunity.
When Jove appears
All ardent with Desire,
Refuse his proferred Flame
'Till you obtain a Boon without a Name.

SEMELE: Can that avail me?
But how shall I attain
To Immortality?

RECITATIVE: (accompanied)

JUNO: Conjure him by his Oath
Not to approach your Bed
In Likeness of a Mortal;
But like himself, the mighty Thunderer,
In Pomp of Majesty,
And heav'nly Attire;
As when he proud Saturnia charms,
And with ineffable Delights
Fills her encircling Arms,
And pays the Nuptial Rites,
You shall partake then of Immortality,
And thenceforth leave this Mortal State
To reign above
Adored by Jove,
In spite of jealous Juno's Hate.

SONG:

SEMELE: Thus let my Thanks be paid,
Thus let my Arms embrace thee;
And when I'm a Goddess made,
With Charms like mine I'll grace thee.

JUNO: Rich Odours fill the fragrant Air,
And Jove's Approach declare.
I must retire—

SEMELE: Adieu—your Counsel I'll pursue.

JUNO: (apart.) And sure Destruction will ensue.
Vain wretched Fool—
Adieu.—
(Exit.)

SCENE IV.

Enter Jupiter to Semele.

SONG:

JUPITER: Come to my Arms, my lovely Fair,
Sooth my uneasy Care:
In my Dream late I wooed thee,
And in vain I pursued thee,
For you fled from my Pray'r,
And bid me despair.
—O Semele
Why art thou thus insensible?

SONG:
Semele. I ever am granting,
You always complain;
I always am wanting,
Yet never obtain.

JUPITER: Speak, speak your Desire,
Say what you require,
I'll grant it—

SEMELE: Swear by the Stygian Lake.

RECITATIVE: (accompanied.)

JUPITER: By that tremendous Flood, I swear,
Ye Stygian Waters, hear;
And thou, Olympus, shake,
In Witness to the Oath I take.
(Thunder is heard at a distance, and underneath.)

SEMELE: You'll grant what I require.

JUPITER: I'll grant what you require.

SEMELE: Then cast off this human Shape which you wear,
And Jove since you are, like Jove too appear.

ACCOMPANIED:

JUPITER: Ah, take heed what you press,
For, beyond all Redress,
Should I grant your Request I shall harm you.

SONG:

SEMELE: No no! I'll take no less Than all in full Excess;
Your Oath it may alarm you,
Yet haste and prepare,
For I'll know what you are,
With all your Powers arm you.
No no! &c.
(Exit.)

SCENE V.

Jupiter pensive and dejected.

RECITATIVE: (accompanied.)
Ah! whither is she gone! unhappy Fair!
Why did she wish?—why did I rashly swear?
'Tis past, 'tis past recall,
She must a Victim fall.
Anon when I appear
The mighty Thunderer,
Armed with inevitable Fire,
She needs must instantly expire,
'Tis past, &c.
My softest Lightning yet I'll try,
And mildest melting Bolt apply;
In vain—for she was framed to prove
None but the lambent Flames of Love.
'Tis past, &c.

SCENE VI.

Juno alone.

SONG: Above measure
Is the Pleasure
Which my Revenge supplies.
Love's a Bubble
Gained with Trouble,
And in possessing dies.
With what Joy shall I mount to my Heav'n again,
At once from my Rival and Jealousy freed!
The Sweets of Revenge make it worth while to reign,
And Heav'n will hereafter be Heav'n indeed.
Above measure, &c.

SCENE VII.

The Scene discovers Semele under a Canopy, leaning pensively: She looks up, and sees Jupiter descending in a Cloud: Flashes of Lightning issue from either side, and Thunder is heard.

RECITATIVE: (accompanied.)
Ah me! too late I now repent
My Pride and impious Vanity.
He comes! far off his Lightning scorch me.
—I feel my Life consuming:
I burn, I burn, I faint, for Pity I implore—
O help, O help—I can no more—
(She dies.)
The Cloud bursts, and Semele with the Palace instantly disappear.

SCENE VIII.

Cadmus, Athamas, Ino, and Chorus of Priests.

INO: Of my ill-boding Dream
Behold the dire Event.

ALL: O Terror and Astonishment!

CHORUS:
Nature to each allots his proper Sphere,
But that forsaken, we like Meteors err:
Tossed thro' the Void, by some rude shock we're broke,
And all out boasted Fire is lost in smoke.

INO: How I was hence removed,
Or hither how returned, I know not:
So long a Trance withheld me.
But Hermes in a Vision told me
(As I have now related)
The Fate of Semele;
And added, as from me he fled,
That Jove ordained I Athamas should wed.

CADM: Be Jove in ev'ry thing obeyed. (Joins their Hands.)

ATHA: Unworthy of your Charms myself I yield;
Be Jove's Commands and your's fulfilled.

SONG:
Despair no more shall wound me,
Since you so kind do prove;
All Joy and Bliss surround me,
My Soul is tuned to Love.
Despair no more, &c.

CADM: See from above the bellying Clouds descend,
And big with some new wonder this way tend.

SCENE THE LAST.

A bright Cloud descends and rests on Mount Citheron, which opening, discovers Apollo seated in it as the God of Prophesy.

RECITATIVE: (accompanied.)

APOLLO: Apollo comes to relieve your Care,
And Future Happiness declare.
From Semele's Ashes a Phœnix shall rise,
The Joy of this Earth, and Delight of the Skies:
A God He shall prove
More mighty than Love,
And Sighing and Sorrow for ever present.

CHORUS:
Happy, happy shall we be,
Free from Care, from Sorrow free;
Guiltless Pleasures we'll enjoy,
Virtuous Love will never cloy;
All that's Good and Just we'll prove,
And Bacchus crown the Joys of Love.

FINIS.

Hänsel und Gretel (1893)

Hansel and Gretel

Music by Englebert Humperdinck ■ Libretto by Adelheid Wette

This three-act musical fairy story (märchenspeil), set to a libretto by Adelheid Wette, Humperdinck's sister, is based on a story by the Brothers' Grimm. It premiered at the Hoftheater in Weimar on December 23, 1893. In a poor hut, Hänsel and Gretel are supposed to be doing chores. Their mother, Gertrude, yells at them when she sees them sitting by the fire. In anger, she knocks over a jug of milk, their only food for dinner. She sends them into the woods to pick strawberries instead. Peter, their father, comes home from work drunk as always, but with an armload of food. He is upset when he hears that the children are in the woods because a wicked witch who eats children lives there. Gertrude and Peter rush off to look for Hänsel and Gretel.

The children have picked plenty of strawberries but are afraid to go home because they've eaten them all. The Sandman sprinkles sand in their eyes; they say their prayers and go to sleep, guarded by angels. The next morning, they see the witch's house, made of marzipan and sugar, in the distance. Enticed, they make their approach. The witch captures them and forces Gretel to set the table while she fattens Hänsel up for dinner. Gretel seizes the witch's magic wand and frees Hänsel from his cage. As they push the witch into the oven and close the door, the house collapses, and a group of children appear, singing their thank-yous to Hänsel and Gretel for saving them. Their parents arrive just in time to find the children preparing to eat the witch, who they have baked into a gigantic cake.

■ ERSTES BILD

DAHEIM

ERSTE SCENE

Dürftige Stube. Im Hintergrunde rechts eine niedrige Thür, in der Mitte ein kleines Fenster mit Aussicht in den Wald. Links ein Herd mit einem Rauchfang darüber. As den rechten Wand hängen Besen in verschiedenen Formen. Hänsel an der Thüre mit Besenbinden, Gretel, am Herde, stricken beschäftigt, sitzen einander gegenüber.

GRETEL: Suse, liebe Suse, was raschelt im Stroh?
Die Gänse gehn barfuss und haben kein' Schuh.
Der Schuster hat's Leder, kein'n Leisten dazu.
Drum kann er den Gänslein auch machen kein' Schuh.

HÄNSEL: Eia popeia, das ist eine Not!
Wer schenkt mir einen Dreier zu Zucker und Brot?
Verkauf ich mein Bettlein und leg mich auf's Stroh, sticht mich keine Feder und beisst mich kein Floh!
Ach, käm doch die Mutter nun endlich nach Haus!

GRETEL: Auch ich halt's kaum noch vor Hunger aus

■ ACT I

AT HOME

SCENE I

(A small and poorly furnished room. In the background a door; a small window near it, looking on to the forest. On the left a fireplace with chimney above it. On the walls are hanging brooms of various sizes. Hansel is sitting by the door, making brooms, and Gretel opposite him by the fireplace, knitting a stocking.

GRETEL: Susy, little Susy, pray what is the news?
The geese are running barefoot, because they've no shoes!
The cobbler has leather, and plenty to spare,
Why can't he make the poor goose a new pair?

HÄNSEL: Then they'll have to go barefoot!
Eia-popeia, pray what's to be done?
Who'll give me milk and sugar, for bread I have none?
I'll go back to bed and I'll lie there all day;
Where there's nought to eat, then there's nothing to pay!

GRETEL: Then we'll have to go hungry!

HÄNSEL: Seit Wochen nichts als trocken Brot; ist das ein Elend! Potz schwere Not!

GRETEL: Still, Häsel, denk daran, was Vater sagt wenn Mutter manchmal so verzagt:
Wenn die Not auf's höchste steigt,
Gott der Herr die Hand euch reicht!"

HÄNSEL: Jawohl, das klingt ganz schön und glatt, aber leider wird man davon nicht satt.
Ach, Gretel, wie lang' ist's doch schon her, das wir nichts Gutes geschmauset mehr!
Eierfladen und Butterwecken—kaum weiss ich noch, wie die thun schmecken.
Ach, Gretel, ich wollt' . . .

GRETEL: Still, nicht verdriesslich sein:
Gedulde dich fein, sieh freundlich drein!
Dies lange Gesicht,—hu, welcher Graus!
Siehst ja wie der leibhaftige Griesgram aus!
Griesgram, hinaus!
Fort aus dem Haus!
Ich will dich lehren,
Herz zu beschweren,
Sorgen zu mehren,
Freuden zu wehren:
Griesgram, Griesgram, greulicher

HÄNSEL: If mother would only come home again!
Yes, I am so hungry,
I don't know what to do!
For weeks I've eaten nothing but bread—
It's very hard, it is indeed!

GRETEL: Hush, Hänsel, don't forget what father said, when mother, too, wished she were dead:
"When past bearing is our grief,
The Lord God, will send relief!"

HÄNSEL: Yes, yes, that sounds all very fine, but of course off maxims we cannot dine!
Ò Gretel, it would be such a treat if we had something nice to eat!
Eggs and butter and suet paste,
I've almost forgotten how they taste.
O Gretel, I wish—

GRETEL: Hush, don't give way to grumps; have patience awhile, no doleful dumps!
This woeful face, whew! what a sight!
Looks like a horrid old crosspatch fright!
Crosspatch, away!
Leave me, I pray!
Just let me reach you, quickly I'll teach you
how to make trouble,
soon mount to double!
Crosspatch, crosspatch,

Wicht,
griesiges, grämiges Galgengesicht,
packe dich, trolle dich, schäbiger
Wicht!

HÄNSEL: Griesgram, hinaus!
Halt's nicht mehr aus!
Immer mich plagen,
Hungertuch nagen,
muss ja verzagen,
mag's nicht ertragen!
Griesgram, Griesgram, greulicher
Wicht,
griesiges, grämiges Galgengesicht,
packe dich, trolle dich, schäbiger
Wicht!

GRETEL: So recht! Und willst du nun nicht mehr klagen, so will ich dir such ein Geheimnis sagen.

HÄNSEL: Ein Geheimnis? Wird
wohl was Rechtes sein!

GRETEL: Ja, hör nur, Brüderchen!
Darfst dich schon freun,
Guck her in den Topf, Milch ist darin, die schenkte uns heute die Nachbarin.
Mutter kocht uns, kommt sie nach Haus, gewiss einen leckeren Reisbrei daraus.

HÄNSEL: Reisbrei, Reisbrei, herrlicher Brei!
Giebt's Reisbrei, da ist Hänsel dabei!
Wie dick ist der Rahm auf der Milch! Lass schmecken!
Herrjemine, den möcht' ich ganz verschlecken!
Wie, Hänsel, naschen? Schämst du dich nicht?

GRETEL: Fort mit den Fingern, du naschhafter Wicht!
(Giebt ihm eins auf die Finger.)
Und jetzt an die Arbeit zurück, geschwind,
dass wir beizeiten fertig sind!
Kommt Muter heim, und wir thaten nicht recht,
Dann, weisst du, geht es den Faulpelzen schlecht.

HÄNSEL: Arbeiten? Brr! Wo denkst du hin?
Danach steht mir jetzt nicht der Sinn.
Immer mich plagen, das fällt mir nicht ein,
jetzt lass uns tanzen und fröhlich
sein!

GRETEL: (Entzückt.) Tanzen? Das
wär' auch mir eine Lust!
Dazu ein Liedchen aus froher Brust,
Wie's uns die Muhme gelehrt zu singen:
Tanzliedchen soll jetzt lustig erklingen!
(Klatscht in die Hände.)

what is the use,
growling and grumbling,
full of abuse?
Off with you, out with you,
shame on you, goose!

HÄNSEL: Crosspatch away!
Hard lines, I say.
When I am hungry, surely I can say so,
cannot allay so,
can't chase away so!

GRETEL: If I am hungry,
I'll never say so,
will not give way so,
chase it away so!
that's right. Now, if you leave off complaining,
I'll tell you a most delightful secret!

HÄNSEL: O delightful! it must be something nice!

GRETEL: Well, listen, brotherkin—won't you be glad!
Look here in the jug, here is fresh milk,
It was given today by our neighbor, and mother, when she comes back home,
will certainly make us a rice-blancmange.

HÄNSEL: Rice-blancmanage!
When blancmange is anywhere near, then Hänsel, Hänsel, Hänsel, is there!
How thick is the cream on the milk;
let's taste it! O Gemini!
wouldn't I like to drink it!

GRETEL: What, Hänsel, tasting?
Aren't you ashamed?
Out with your fingers quick,
greedy boy!
(Gives him a rap on the fingers.)
Get back to your work again, be quick,
that we may both have done in time!
If mother comes and we haven't done right,
then badly it will fare with us tonight!

HÄNSEL: Work again? No, not for me!
That's not my idea at all;
It doesn't suit me! It's such a bore!
Dancing is jollier far, I'm sure!

GRETEL: (Delighted.) Dancing, dancing! O yes, that's better far;
and sing a song to keep us in time!
One that our grandmother used to sing us;
sing then, and dance in time to the singing!
(Claps her hands)

Brüderchen, komm, tanz' mit mir, beide Händchen reich' ich Dir; einmal hin, einmal her,
rund herum, es ist nicht schwer!

HÄNSEL: Tanzen soll ich armer
Wicht,
Schwesterlein, und kann es nicht.
Darum zeig' mir, wie es Brauch, dass ich tanzen lerne auch!

GRETEL: Mit den Füsschen tapp
tapp tapp,
mit den Händchen klapp klapp
klapp,
einmal hin, einmal her,
rund herum, es ist nicht schwer.

HÄNSEL: Mit den Füsschen tapp
tapp tapp
mit den Händchen klapp klapp
klapp,
einmal hin, einmal her,
rund herun, es ist nicht schwer.

GRETEL: Ei, das hast Du gut gemacht, ei, das hätt' ich nicht gedacht!
Seht mir doch den Hänsel an,
wie der tanzen lernen kann!
Mit dem Köpfchen nick nick nick,
mit dem Fingerchen tick tick tick,
einmal hin, einmal her,
rund herum, es ist nicht schwer!

HÄNSEL: Mit dem Köpfehen nick nick nick,
mit dem Fingerchen tick tick tick,
einmal hin, einmal her,
rund herun, es ist nicht schwer!

GRETEL: Hänsel, komm und gieb mal acht,
wie's die Gretel weiter macht!
Lass uns Arm in Arm verschränken, unsre Schrittchen paarweis lenken!
Ich liebe Tanz und Fröhlichkeit und bin nicht gern allein;
ich bin kein Freund von Traurigkeit, und fröhlich will ich sein.
Tralala, tralala, tralala la la,
Dreh dich herum, mein lieber
Hans!

GRETEL: Komm her zu mir, komm her zu mir, zum Ringelreigentanz!

HÄNSEL: Geh weg von mir, geh weg von mir,
ich bin der stolze Hans!
Mit kleinen Mädchen tanz ich nicht,
das ist mir viel zu dumm!

GRETEL: Geh, dummer Hans, geh, stolzer Hans,
ich krieg dich doch herum!
Tralala, tralala, tralala la la,

Brother, come and dance with me,
both my hands I offer thee;
right foot first,
left foot then,
round about and back again!

HÄNSEL: I would dance, but don't know how,
when to jump, and when to bow;'
show me what I ought to do, so that I may dance like you.

GRETEL: With your foot you tap, tap, tap;
with you hands you clap, clap,
clap;
right foot first,
left foot then,
round about and back again!

HÄNSEL: With your hands you clap, clap, clap;
with your foot you tap, tap, tap;
right foot first,
left foot then,
round about and back again!

GRETEL: That was very good indeed,
O, I'm sure you'll soon succeed!
Try again, and I can see
Hänsel soon will dance like me!
With your head you nick, nick,
nick;
with your fingers you click, click,
click;
right foot first,
left foot then,
round about and back again.

HÄNSEL: With your head you nick,
nick, nick;
with your fingers you click, click,
click;
right foot first,
left foot then,
round about and back again!

GRETEL: Brother, watch what next
I do,
you must do it with me too.
You to me your arm must proffer,
I shall not refuse your offer!
Come!
What I enjoy is dance and jollity, love to have my fling;
in fact, I like frivolity.
and all that kind of thing.
Tralala, tralala, tralala!
Come and have a twirl, my dearest Hänsel, come and have a turn with me, I pray;
come here to me, come here to me,
I'm sure you can't say no!

HÄNSEL: Go away from me, go away from me,
I'm much too proud for you:
with little girls I do not dance,
and so, my dear, adieu!

GRETEL: Go, stupid Hans, conceited Hans, you'll see I'll make you dance!
Tralala, tralala, tralala!

dreh dich herum, mein lieber Hans!

HÄNSEL: Ach, Schwesterlein, ach, Gretelein,
Du hast im Strumpf ein Loch!

GRETEL: Ach Brüderlein, ach Hänselein,
Du willst mich hänseln noch!
Mit bösen Buben tanz ich nicht,
das ist mir viel zu dumm!

HÄNSEL: Nicht böse sein, lieb Schwesterlein,
ich krieg Dich doch herum!
Tralala, tralala, tralala, la la,
Dreh dich doch herum, mein Gretelein!

HÄNSEL: Tanz lustig, heissa, lustig tanz! Lass dich's nicht gereu'n; und ist der Strumpf auch nicht mehr ganz, die Mutter strickt dir 'n neu'n! Dreh dich doch herum! Sei nicht so dumm! Tralala, tralala u. s. w.

GRETEL: Tanz lustig, heiss, lustig tanz! Lass dich's nicht gereu'n; und ist der Schuh' auch nicht mehr ganz, der Schuster flickt dir 'n neu'n!
Dreh dich doch herum! Sei nicht so dumm! Tralala, tralala u. s. w.
(Dann fassen sie sich bei den Haenden und drehen sich immer schneller im Kreise, bis sie schliesslich das Gleichgewicht verlieren und uebereinander auf den Boden hinpurzeln. In diesem Augenblicke geht die Thuere auf; die Mutter wird sichtbar, worauf die Kinder schnell vom Boden aufspringen.)

ZWEITE SCENE

MUTTER: Holla!

HÄNSEL UND GRETEL: Himmel, die Mutter!

MUTTER: Was ist das für eine Geschichte?

GRETEL: Der Hänsel . . .

HÄNSEL: Die Gretel . . .

MUTTER: (In Zorn ausbrechend.)
Wartet, ihr ungezogenen Wichte!
Nennt ihr das Arbeit? Johlen und singen?
Wie auf der Kirmes tanzen und springen?
Indes die Eltern vom frühen Morgen bis spät in die Nacht sich mühen und sorgen?
Dass dich!
(Giebt Hänseln einen Puff.)
Lässt seh'n, was habt ihr beschickt?
Wie, Gretel, den Strumpf nicht fertig gestrickt?
Und du?—Du, Schlingel! In all den Stunden nicht mal die wenigen Besen gebunden?
Ihr unnützigen Kinder! Den Stock will ich holen, den Faulpelz werd' ich euch beiden versohlen!
(In ihrem Eifer hinter den Kindern her stösst sie den Milchtopf vom Tisch, das erklirrend zu Boden fallt.)
Jesses! Nun auch den Topf noch zerbrochen!
(Weinend.)
Was soll ich nun zum Abend kochen?
(Besieht ihren mit Milch begossenen Rock; Hänsel kichert verstohlen.)
Was, Bengel, du lachst mich noch aus?
(Mit dem Stock hinter Hans her, der zur offenen Thür hinausrennt.)
Wart, kommt nur der Vater nach Haus—
(Reist einen kleinen Korb von der Wand und drängt ihn Gretel in die Hand.)
Marsch, fort-in den Wald!
dort sucht mir Erdbeeren!—Nun, wird es bald?
(Treibt auch Gretel zur Stube hinaus und droht mit dem Stocke den sich furchtsam umschauenden Kindern.)
Und bringt ihr den Korb nicht voll bis zum Rand, so hau ich euch, dass ihr fliegt an die Wand!
(Setzt sich erschöpft an den Tisch.)
Da liegt nun der gute topf in Scherben!
Ja, blinder Eifer bringt immer Verderben.—
Herrgott, wirf Geld herab! Nichts hab' ich zu leben, kein Krümchen den Würmern zu essen zu geben;
kein Tröpfchen im Topfe, kein Krüstchen im Schrank, schon lange nichts als Wasser zum Trank
(Stützt den Kopf mit der Hand.)
Müde bin ich—müde zum Sterben—
Herrgott, wirf Geld herab—
(Legt den Kopf auf den Arm und schläft ein.)

DRITTE SCENE

Man hört eine Stimime von weitem:)

Ach, wir armen, armen Leute!
Alle Tage so wie heute: In dem Beutel ein grosses Loch und im Magen ein gröss'res noch—
Rallalala, rallalala,
Hunger ist der beste Koch!
(Am Fenster wird der Kopf des Vaters sichtbar, der während des Folgenden in angeheitertem Zu-

Come and have a twirl, my dearest Hänsel,
come and have a turn with me, I pray!

HÄNSEL: O Gretel dear, O sister dear, your stocking has a hole!

GRETEL: O Hänsel dear, O brother dear, do you take me for a fool?
With naughty boys I do not dance,
and so, my dear, adieu!

HÄNSEL: Now don't be cross.
you silly goose,
you'll see I make you dance!

GRETEL: Tralala, tralala, tralala!
Come and have a twirl, my dearest Hänsel,
come and have a turn with me, I pray.
Sing lustily hurrah! hurrah!
While I dance with you;
and if the stockings are in holes, why mother'll knit some new!

HÄNSEL: Tralala, tralala, tralala!
Sing lustily hurrah! hurrah!
while I dance with you;
and if the shoes are all in holes, why mother'll buy some new!
tralala, tralala, tralala!
(They dance round each other as before. They then seize each other's hands and go round in a circle, quicker and quicker, until at last they lose their balance and tumble over one another on the floor. Suddenly the door opens, the mother appears and the children jump up.)

SCENE II

MOTHER: Hallo!

HÄNSEL AND GRETEL: Heavens! Here's mother!

MOTHER: What is all this disturbance?

GRETEL: It was Hänsel, he wanted—

HÄNSEL: It was Gretel, she said I—

MOTHER: Silence, idle and ill-behaved children!
(The mother comes in, unstraps the basket, and puts it down.)
You call it working, yodelling and singing? As though it were fair time, hopping and springing!
And while your parents from early morning
Are slaving and toiling till late at night!
Take that!
(Gives Hänsel a box on the ear.)
Now come, let's see what you've done.
Why, Gretel, your stocking not ready yet?
And you, you lazybones, have you nothing to show?
Pray how many brooms have you finished?
I'll fetch my stick, you useless children, and make your idle fingers tingle!
(In her anger at the children she gives the milk-jug a push, and it smashes.)
Gracious! there's goes the jug all to pieces!
What now can I cook for supper?
(She looks at her skirt, down which the milk is streaming. Hänsel covertly titters.)
How saucy, how dare you laugh?
(Going with a stick after Hänsel, who is running out of the open door.)
Wait, wait till the father comes home!
(She snatches a basket from the wall, and pushes it into Gretel's hands.)
Off, off, to the woods!
There seek for strawberries! Quick, away!
And if you don't bring the basket back full,
I'll whip you so that you'll both run away!
(The children run off into the forest. She sits down exhausted by the table.)
Alas! there my poor jug lies all in pieces!
Yes, blind excitement only brings ruin.
O Heaven, send help to me!
I have nothing to give them—
(Sobbing.)
No bread, not a crumb, for my starving children!
No crust in the cupboard, no milk in the pot—
(Resting her head on her hands.)
Weary am I, weary of living!
Father, send help to me!
(Lays her head down on her arm and drops to sleep.)

SCENE III

(A voice is heard in the distance.)

Tralala, tralala! little mother, here am I!
Tralala, tralala! bringing luck and jollity!
O, for you and me, poor mother, every day is like the other;
with a big hole in the purse,
and one in the stomach, even worse.

stande mit einem Kober auf dem Rücken in die Stube tritt.)
Ja, ihr Reichen könnt euch laben!
Wir, die nichts zu essen haben, nagen, ach, die ganze Woch'
sieben Tag an einem Knoch'!
Rallalala, rallalala,
Hunger ist der beste Koch!
Ach, wir sind ja gern zufrieden, denn das Glück ist so verschieden,
aber, aber wahr ist's doch:
Armut ist ein schweres Joch!
Rallalala, rallalala,
Hunger ist der beste Koch!
(Er setzt seinen Kober nieder und tritt an die Rampe.)
Ja ja, der Hunger kocht schon gut, sofern er kommandieren thut.
Allein was nutzt der Kommandör, fehlt euch im Topf die Zubehör?
Rallalala, rallalala,
Kümmel ist mein Leiblikör!
Rallalala, rallalala,
Mutter, schau, was ich bescheer!
(Giebt ihr einen derben Schmatz.)

MUTTER: (Sich die Augen reibend.) Hoho!—
Wer spek—spektakelt mir da im Haus und rallalakelt
aus dem Schlaf mich heraus?

VATER: (Lallend.) Das tolle Tier, im Magen hier,
das bellte so, das glaube mir!
Rallalala, rallalala,
Hunger ist ein tolles Tier.
Rallalala, rallalala,
beisst und kratzt, das glaube mir!

MUTTER: So, so!
Das tolle Tier,
es ist wohl schier
stark angezecht—das glaube mir!

VATER: Nun ja, 's war heut ein heitrer Tag!
Fondst du nicht such, lieb' Weib?

MUTTER: (Ärgerlich.) Ach geh!
Du weisst, nicht leiden mag ich Wirtshaus-Zeitvertreib!

VATER: Auch gut! So sehen wir, wenn's beliebt, was es für heut zu schmausen giebt.

MUTTER: Höchst einfach ist das Speisregister.
der Abendschmaus—zum Henker ist er!
Teller leer,
Keller leer,
und im Beutel ist gar nichts mehr.

Tralala, tralala!
Hunger is the poor man's curse!
Tralala, tralala!
Hunger is the poor man's curse!
(The father appears at the window, and during the following he comes into the room in a very happy mood, with a basket on his back.)
It isn't much that we require;
just a little food and fire!
But alas! it's true enough, life on some of us is rough!
Hunger is a customer tough!
Yes, the rich enjoy their dinner, while the poor grow daily thinner!
Strive to eat, as well he may,
somewhat less than yesterday!
Tralala, tralala.
hunger is the devil to pay!
tralala, tralala!
hunger is the devil to pay!
(He puts down his basket.)
Yes, hunger's all very well to feel,
if you can get a good square meal;
but when there's nothing, what can you do, supposing the purse be empty too?
Tralala, tralala!
O for a drop of mountain dew!
Tralala, tralala!
Mother, look what I have brought!
(Reels over to his sleeping wife and gives her a smacking kiss.)

MOTHER: (Rubbing her eyes.)
Oho!—
Who's sing-sing-singing
all around the house, and tra-la-la-ing me out of my sleep?

FATHER: (Inarticulately.) How now!—
The hungry beast within my breast called so for food
I could not rest!
Tralala, tralala!
Hunger is an urgent beast!
Tralala, Tralala!
pinches, gnaws, and gives no rest!

MOTHER: So, so!
And this wild beast,
you gave him a feast.
He's had his fill,
to say the least!

FATHER: Well, yes! It was a lovely day, don't you think so, dear wife?

MOTHER: (Angrily.) Oh Please!
You have no troubles to bear,
it is I must keep the house!

FATHER: Well, well,—then let us see, my dear, what we have got to eat today.

MOTHER: Most simple is the bill of fare, our supper's gone, I know not where!
Larder bare, cellar bare,
nothing, and plenty of it to spare!

VATER: Rallalala, rallalala, lustig, Mutter, bin auch noch da!
Rallalala, rallalala,
bringe Glück und Gloria!
(Nimmit den Kober und kramt aus.)
Schau, Mutter!
Wie gefällt Dir dies Futter?

MUTTER: Mann, was seh' ich?
Speck und Butter!
Mehl und Würst! . . . vierzehn Eier——Mann! Sie sind jetztunder teuer!—
Bohnen, Zwiebeln und—herrjeh!
Gar ein viertel Pfund Kaffee!

VATER: Rallalala, hopsassa!
Heute woll'n wir lustig sein!
Ja, hör nur, Mütterchen, wie's geschah!
(Er setzt sich nieder, die Mutter kramt inzwischen die Sachen ein, zuendet Feuer im Herd an, schlaegt Eier in eine Pfanne u.s.w.)
Drüben hinterm Herrenwald prächt'ge Feste giebt's da bald,
Kirmes, Hochzeit, Jubiläum,
Böllerknall und gross Tedeum.
Mein Geschäft kommt nun zur Blüte; dessen froh sei Dein Gemüte!
Sieh! wer feines Fest will felern, der muss kehren, schrubben und scheuern.
Bot drum meine Waren aus, zog damit von Haus zu Haus:
"Kauft Besen! Gute Feger!
Feine Bürsten! Spinnejäger!"
Sieh, da verkauft' ich massenweise meine Waren zum höchsten Preise!—
Schnell nun her mit Topf und Pfanne, her mit Kessel, Schüssel, Kanne!

MUTTER: Vivat hoch die Besenbinder!

VATER: Doch halt—wo bleiben die Kinder?
Hänsel! Gretel!—Wo steckt der Hans?

MUTTER: Wo er steckt? Ja, wüsste man's!
Nur das weiss ich klar wie Tag, dass der Topf in Scherben lag!

VATER: (Zornig.) Was? der neue Topf entzwei?

MUTTER: Und am Boden quoll der Brei!

VATER: (Mit der Faust auf den Tisch schlagend.) Donnerkeil! So haben die Rangen
Unfug wieder angefangen?

MUTTER: Unfug viel und Arbeit keine hatten sie getrieben alleine.
Hörte schon draussen sie juchzen

FATHER: Tralalala, tralalala!
Cheer up, mother, for here I am, bringing luck and jollity!
(He takes his basket and begins to display the contents.)
Look, mother, doesn't all this food please you?

MOTHER: Man, what do I see?
Ham and butter,
flour and sausage—
eggs, a dozen . . .
(Husband, and they cost a fortune!)
Turnips, onions, and—for me!
Nearly half a pound of tea!

FATHER: Tralala, tralala,
hip hurrah!
Won't we have a festive time!
Tralala, hip hurrah!
Won't we have a happy time!
Now listen how it all came to pass!
(Sits down. Meanwhile the mother packs away the things, lights a fire, breaks eggs into a saucepan, etc.)
Yonder to the town I went, there was to be a great event, weddings, fairs, and preparation for all kinds of jubilation!
Now's my chance to do some selling, and for that you may be thankful!
He who wants a feast to keep,
he must scrub and brush and sweep.
So I brought my best goods out, tramped with them from house to house:
"Buy! good! brooms!
Buy my brushes! sweep your carpets, sweep your cobwebs!"
And so I drove a roaring trade, and sold my brushes at the highest prices!
Now make haste with cup and platter, bring the glasses, bring the kettle—here's a health to the broom-maker!

MOTHER: Here's a health to the broom-maker!

FATHER: But stay, why, where are the children?
Hänsel, Gretel, what's gone with Hans?

MOTHER: Gone with Hans? O, who's to know?
But at least I do know this,
that the jug is smashed to bits.

FATHER: What! the jug is smashed to bits?

MOTHER: And the cream all run away.

FATHER: (Striking his fist on the table in a rage.) Hang it all! So those little scapegraces have been again in mischief!

MOTHER: Been in mischief? I should think so!
Nothing have they done but their mad pranking;

und johlen,
hopsen und springen wie wilde Fohlen, wusste nicht, wie mir stand der Kopf.
Und vor Zorn

VATER: —zerbrach der Topf.
Hahahaha!
(Beide lachen aus vollem Halse.)
Na, Zornmütterchen, nimm mir's nicht, krumm, solche Zorntöpfe find' ich recht dumm!.
Doch sag, wo mögen die Kinderchen sein?

MUTTER: (Schnippisch.) Meinethalben am Ilsenstein!

VATER: (Erschrocken.) Am Ilsenstein?—Ei, juckt Dich das Fell?
(Nimmt einen Besen von der Wand.)

MUTTER: Den Besen lass nur an seiner Stell.

VATER: (Lässt den Besen fallen und ringt die Hände.) Wenn sie sich verirrten im Walde dort, in der Nacht, ohne Stern und Mond!
Kennst Du nicht den schauerlich düstern Ort?
Weisst nicht, dass die Böse dort wohnt?

MUTTER: Die Böse? Wen meinst Du?

VATER: (Mit geheimnisvollem Nachdruck.) Die Knusperhexe!—

MUTTER: (Fährt zusammen.) Die Knusperhexe!—
Mein! Sag doch, was soll denn der Besen!

VATER: Der Besen! Der Besen!
Was macht man damit? Was macht man damit?
Es reiten drauf, es reiten drauf die Hexen!
Eine Hex' steinalt, haust tief im Wald,
vom Teufel selber hat sie Gewalt!
Um Mitternacht,
wann niemand wacht,
dann reitet sie aus zur Hexenjagd,
Zum Schornstein hinaus auf dem Besen, o Graus!
Braus!
Über Berg und Kluft,
Über Thal und Gruft
durch Nebelduft
im Sturm durch die Luft:
Ja so reiten, ja so reiten, juchheissa, die Hexen!

MUTTER: Entstezlich!

VATER: Ja, bei Tag, o Graus:
zum Hexenschmaus
ins Knisper-Knasper-Knusperhaus die Kinderlein, Armsünderlein,
mit Zauberkuchen lockt sie herein.
Doch übelgesinnt
ergreift sie geschwind das arme Kuchen knuspernde Kind.

as I came home I could hear them hopping and cutting the wildest capers, till I was so cross that I gave a push—and the jug of milk was spilt!

FATHER: And the jug of milk was spilt!
Ha ha ha ha!
(Both laughing.)
Such anger, mother, don't take it ill, seems stupid to me, I must say!
But where, where think you the children can be?

MOTHER: (Snappishly and curtly.) For all I know, at the Ilsenstein!

FATHER: (Horror-struck.) The Ilsenstein! Come, come, have a care!
(Fetches a broom from the wall.)

MOTHER: The broom, just put it away again!

FATHER: (Lets the broom fall and wrings his hands.) My children astray in the gloomy wood, all alone without moon or stars!
Do you not know the awful magic place,
the place where the evil one dwells?

MOTHER: The evil one! What do you mean?

FATHER: (With mysterious emphasis.) The gobbling ogress!
(The mother draws back, the father takes up the broom again.)

MOTHER: The gobbling ogress!
But—tell me, what help is the broom!

FATHER: The broom the broom,
why what is it for?
They ride on it, they ride on it, the witches!
An old witch dwells within that wood and she's in league with the powers of hell.
At midnight hour, when nobody knows, away to the witches' dance she goes.
Up the chimney they fly,
on a broomstick they hie—
over hill and dale,
o'er ravine and vale,
through the midnight air
they gallop full tear—on a broomstick, on a broomstick, hop hop, hop hop, the witches!

MOTHER: O horror!
But the gobbling witch?

FATHER: And by day, they say, she stalks around, with a crinching, crunching, munching sound, and children plump and tender to eat she lures with magic gingerbread sweet.
On evil bent,

In den Ofen, hitzhell, schiebt's die Hexe blitzschnell;
dann kommen zur Stell, gerbräunt das Fell,
aus dem Ofen, aus dem Ofen die Lebkuchenkinder!

MUTTER: Und die Lebkuchenkinder?

VATER: Die werden gefressen!

MUTTER: Von der Hexe?

VATER: Von der Hexe.

MUTTER: (Händeringend.) O Graus!
Hilf, Himmel! die Kinder! Ich halt's nicht mehr aus!
(Rennt aus dem Hause.)

VATER: (Nimmt die Kümmelflasche vom Tisch.)
He, Alte, so wart' doch! Nimm mich mit!
Wir wollen ja beide zum Hexenritt!
(Eilt ihr nach: Der Vorhang fällt schnell.)

■ ZWEITES BILD

IM WALDE

ERSTE SCENE

(Im Hintergrunde der Ilsenstein, von dichtem Tannengehölz umgeben. Rechts eine mächtige Tanne; darunter sitzt Gretel auf einer moosbedeckten Wurzel und windet einen Kranz von Hagebutten; neben ihr liegt ein Blumenstrauss. Links, abseits im Gebüsch, Hänsel, nach Erdbeeren suchend. Abendrot.)

GRETEL: Ein Männlein steht im Walde ganz still und stumm; es hat von lauter Purpur ein Mäntlein um.
Sagt, wer mag das Männlein sein,
das da steht im Wald allein
mit dem purpurroten Mäntelein?
Das Männlein steht im Walde auf einem Bein und hat auf seinem Kopfe schwarz Käpplein klein.
Sagt, wer mag das Männlein sein,
das da steht im Wald allein
mit dem kleinen schwarzen Käppelein?

HÄNSEL: (Kommt hervor und schwenkt jubelnd sein Körbchen.) Juchhe!
Mein Erbelkörbchen ist voll bis oben; wie wird die Mutter den Hänsel loben!

with fell intent,
she lures the children, poor little things, in the oven red-hot
she pops all the lot;
she shuts the lid down until they're done brown, in the oven, in the oven,
the gingerbread children!

MOTHER: And the gingerbread children?

FATHER: Are served up for dinner!

MOTHER: For the ogress?

FATHER: For the ogress!

MOTHER: O horror!
Heav'n help us! the children!
O what shall we do?
(Runs out of the house)

FATHER: Mother, mother, wait for me!
(Takes the whiskey bottle from the table and runs after her.)
We'll both go together to seek the witch!
(The curtain falls quickly.)

■ ACT II

IN THE FOREST

SCENE I

(The curtain rises. The middle of the forest. In the background is the Ilsenstein, thickly surrounded by fir-trees. On the right is a large fir-tree, under which Gretel is sitting on a mossy tree-trunk and making a garland of wild roses. By her side lies a nosegay of flowers. Amongst the bushes on the left is Hänsel, looking for strawberries. Sunset.)

GRETEL: There stands a little man in the wood alone, he wears a little mantle of velvet brown.
Say, who can the mankin be,
standing there beneath the tree,
with the little mantle of velvet brown?
His hair is all of gold, and his cheeks are red, he wears a little black cap upon his head
Say, who can the mankin be,
standing there so silently, with the little black cap upon his head?

HÄNSEL: (Comes out, swinging his basket joyfully.) Hurrah! my strawberry basket is nearly full!
O won't Mother be pleased with Hänsel!

GRETEL: Mein Kränzel ist auch schon fertig, sieh! So schön wie heute ward's noch nie! (Will den Kranz Hänsel auf den Kopf setzen.)	GRETEL: My garland is ready also! Look! I never made one so nice before! (Tries to put the wreath on Hänsel's head.)
HÄNSEL: (Barsch abwehrend.) Buben tragen doch so was nicht, 's passt nur für ein Mädchengesicht. (Setzt ihr den Kranz auf.) Hei, Gretel, feins Mädel! Ei, der Daus, siehst ja wie die Waldkönigin aus!	HÄNSEL: (Drawing back roughly.) You won't catch a boy wearing that! It is only fit for a girl! (Puts the wreath on her.) Ha, Gretel! "Fine feathers!" O the deuce! You shall be the queen of the wood!
GRETEL: Seh ich wie die Waldkönigin aus, so reich' mir auch den Blumenstrauss!	GRETEL: If I am to be queen of the wood, then I must have the nosegay too!
HÄNSEL: Waldkönigin mit Scepter und Kron', da nimm auch die Erbeln, doch nasch' nicht davon! (Reicht ihr das Körbchen voll Erdbeeren und hockt, gleichsam huldigend, vor ihr nieder. In diesem Augenblick hörer der Ruf eines Kuckucks.)	HÄNSEL: Queen of the wood, with sceptre and crown, I give you the strawberries, but don't eat them all! (He gives the basket full of strawberries into her other hand, at the same time kneeling before her in homage. At this moment the cuckoo is heard.) Cuckoo, cuckoo, how d'you do?
HÄNSEL: Kuckuck! Eierschluck!
GRETEL: (Schalkhaft.) Kuckuck! Erbelschluck! (Nimmt eine Beere aus dem Körbchen und hält sie Hänsel hin, der sie schlürt, als ob er ein Ei austränke.)	GRETEL: Cuckoo, cuckoo, where are you? (Takes a strawberry from the basket and pokes it into Hänsel's mouth; he sucks it up as though he were drinking an egg.)
HÄNSEL: (Springt auf.) Hoho! Das kann ich auch! Gieb nur acht! (Nimmt einige Beeren und lässt sie Gretel in den Mund rollen.) Wir machen's, wie der Kuckuck schluckt, wenn er in fremde Nester guckt, (Es beginnt zu dämmern.)	HÄNSEL: (Jumping up). Oho, I can do that just like you! (Takes some strawberries and lets them fall into Gretel's mouth.) Let us do like the cuckoo too. who takes more than his lawful due! (It begins to grow dark.)
HÄNSEL: (Greift wieder zu.) Kuckuck! Eierschluck!	HÄNSEL: (Helping himself again). Cuckoo, cuckoo, how are you?
GRETEL: (Ebenso.) Kuckuck! Erbelschluck!	GRETEL: Cuckoo, where are you?
HÄNSEL: Setzest Deine Kinder aus! Kuckuck! Trinkst die fremden Eier aus! Gluckgluck! (Lässt sich eine ganze Handvoll Erdbeeren in den Mund rollen.)	HÄNSEL: In your neighbour's nest you go. Cuckoo, why do you do so? (Pours a handful of strawberries into his mouth.)
GRETEL: Sammelst Beeren schön zuhauf! Kuckuck! Schluckst sie, Schlauer, selber auf! Schluckschluck! (Sie werden übermütiger und raufen sich schliesslich um die Beeren. Hänsel trägt den Sieg davon und setzt den Korb vollends an den Mund, bis er gänzlich leer geworden. Indessen hat die Dunkelheit immer mehr zugenommen.)	GRETEL: And you are very greedy too! Tell me, cuckoo, why are you? (They get rude and begin to quarrel for the strawberries. Hänsel gains the victory, and puts the whole basket to his mouth until it is empty. During this time, it has grown dark.)
GRETEL: (Hänsel den Korb entreissend.) Hänsel, was hast Du gethan! O Himmel! Alle Erbeln gegessen, Du Lümmel! Wart' nur, das giebt ein Strafgericht, denn die Mutter, die spasst heute nicht!	GRETEL: (Horrified, clasping her hands together.) Hänsel, what have you done? O Heaven! all the strawberries eaten. You glutton! Listen, you'll have a punishment from the mother—this is more than a joke!
HÄNSEL: (Ruhig.) Ei was, stell Dich doch nicht so an, Du, Gretel, hast es ja selber gethan!	HÄNSEL: (Quickly.) Now come, don't make such a fuss; You, Gretel, you did the same thing yourself!
GRETEL: Komm nur, wollen rasch neue suchen!	GRETEL: Come, we'll hurry and seek fresh ones!
HÄNSEL: Im Dunkeln wohl gar, unter Hocken und Buchen? Man sieht ja nicht Blatt, nicht Beere mehr! Es wird schon dunkel rings umher!	HÄNSEL: What, here in the dark, under hedges and bushes? Why, we can see nothing of fruit or leaves! It's getting dark already here!
GRETEL: Ach, Hänsel, Hänsel! Was fangen wir an? Was haben wir thörichten Kinder gethan? Wir durften hier gar nicht so lange säumen!	GRETEL: O Hänsel! O Hänsel! O what shall we do? What bad disobedient children we've been! We ought to have thought and gone home sooner! (Cuckoo behind the scenes rather nearer than before.)
HÄNSEL: Horch, wie rauscht es in den Bäumen!— Weisst Du, was der Wald jetzt spricht? "Kindlein!" sagt er, "fürchtet ihr euch nicht?" (Späht unruhig umher.) Gretel! Ich weiss den Weg nicht mehr!	HÄNSEL: Hark, what a noise in the bushes! Know you what the forest says? "Children, children," it says, "Are you not afraid?" (Hänsel spies all around uneasily, at last he turns in despair to Gretel.) Gretel, I cannot find the way!
GRETEL: (Bestürzt.) O Gott! Was sagst Du? den Weg nicht mehr?	GRETEL: (Dismayed.) O God! What did you say? You do not know the way?
HÄNSEL: (Sich mutig stellend.) Was bist Du doch für ein furchtsam Wicht! Ich bin ein Bub', ich fürchte mich nicht!	HÄNSEL: (Pretending to be very brave). Why, how ridiculous you are! I am a boy, and not know fear!
GRETEL: Ach, Hänsel! Gewiss geschieht uns ein Leid!	GRETEL: O Hänsel, some dreadful thing may come!
HÄNSEL: Ach, Gretel, geh, sei doch gescheit!	HÄNSEL: O Gretel, come, don't be afraid!
GRETEL: Was schimmert denn dort in der Dunkelheit?	GRETEL: What's glimmering there in the darkness?
HÄNSEL: Das sind die Birken im weissen Kleid.	HÄNSEL: That's only the birches in silver dress.
GRETEL: Und dort, was grinset daher vom Sumpf?	GRETEL: But there, what's grinning so there at me?
HÄNSEL: (Stotternd.) D—d—das ist ein glimmender Weidenstumpf!	HÄNSEL: (Stammering.) Th—that's only the stump of a willow-tree.
GRETEL: Was für ein wunderlich Gesicht Macht er soeben—siehst Du's nicht?	GRETEL: (Hastily.) But what a dreadful form it takes, and what a horrid face it makes!
HÄNSEL: (Sehr laut.) Ich mach' dir ne Nase, hörst du's, Wicht?	HÄNSEL: (Very loud.) Come, I'll make faces, you fellow! D'you hear?
GRETEL: (Ängstlich.) Da, sieh', das Lichtchen—es kommt immer näh'r!	GRETEL: (Terrified.) There, see! a lantern, It's coming this way!
HÄNSEL: Irrlichtchen hüpfet wohl hin und her! Gretel, Du musst beherzter sein— wart, ich will einmal tüchtig schrein!	HÄNSEL: Will-o'-the-wisp is hopping about— Gretel, come, don't lose heart like this! Wait, I'll give a good loud call!

(Ruft durch die hohlen Hände.)
Wer da?

ECHO: Er da!
(Die Kinder schmiegen sich erschreckt aneinander.)

GRETEL: Ist jemand da?

ECHO: Ja!
(Die Kinder schaudern zusammen.)

GRETEL: Hast du's gehört? 's rief leise: Ja!
Hänsel, sicher ist jemand nah'!
(Weinend:)
Ich fürcht' mich, ich fürcht' mich!—O wär ich zu Haus!
Wie sieht der Wald so gespenstig aus!

HÄNSEL: Gretelchen, drücke Dich fest an mich!
Ich halte Dich, ich schütze Dich!
(Ein dichter Nebel steigt auf und verhüllt den Hintergrund gänzlich.)

GRETEL: Da, kommen weisse Nebelfrauen, sieh', wie sie winken und drohend schauen.
Sie schweben heran!
Sie fassen uns an!
(Schreiend:)
Vater! Mutter!
(Eilt entsetzt unter die Tanne und verbirgt sich, auf die Kniee stürzend, hinter Hänsel. In diesem Augenblicke zerreisst links de Nebel; ein kleines graues Männchen, mit einer Säckchen auf dem Rücken, wird sichtbar.)

HÄNSEL: Sieh' dort das Männchen, Schwesterlein!
Was mag das für ein Männchen sein?

ZWEITE SCENE

SANDMÄNNCHEN: (Nähert sich mit freundlichen Gebärden den Kindern die sich allmählich beruhigen, und wirft ihnen beim Singen Sand in die Augen.) Der kleine Sandmann bin ich—s-t!
und gar nichts Arges sinn ich-s-t!
Euch Kleinen lieb ich innig—s-t! bin euch gesinnt gar minnig—s-t!
Aus diesem Sack zwei Körnelein euch Müden in die Äugelein; die fallen dann von selber zu,
damit ihr schlaft in sanfter Ruh.
Und seid ihr fein geschlafen ein, dann wachen auf die Sterne, und nieder steigen Engelein aus hoher Himmelsferne und bringen hold Träume.
Drum träume, Kindchen, träume!
(Verschwindet. Völlige Dunkelheit.)

HÄNSEL: (Schlaftrunken.) Sandmann war da!

(Goes back some steps to the back of the stage and calls through his hands.)
Who's there?

ECHO: You there!
There!
(The children cower together.)

GRETEL: Is some one there?

ECHO: Where?
Here!

GRETEL: Did you hear? a voice said, "Here!"
Hänsel, surely some one's near.
(Crying.)
I'm frightened, I'm frightened,
I wish I were home!
I see the wood all filled with goblin forms!

HÄNSEL: Gretelkin, stick to me close and tight,
I'll shelter you, I'll shelter you!
(A thick mist rises and completely hides the background.)

GRETEL: I see some shadowy women coming!
See, how they nod and beckon, beckon!
They're coming, they're coming,
they'll take us away!
(Crying out, rushes horror-struck under the tree and falls on her knees, hiding herself behind Hänsel.)
Father! mother! Ah!
(At this moment the mist lifts on the left; a little grey man is seen with a little sack on his back.)

HÄNSEL: See there, the mankin, sister dear!
I wonder who the mankin is?

SCENE II

SANDMAN: (The little man approaches the children with friendly gestures, and the children gradually calm down. He is strewing sand in the children's eyes.) I shut the children's peepers, sh!
and guard the little sleepers, sh!
for dearly do I love them, sh!
and gladly watch above them, sh!
And with my little bag of sand,
By every child's bedside I stand;
then little tired eyelids close,
and little limbs have sweet repose.
And if they're good and quickly go to sleep,
then from the starry sphere above the angels come with peace and love, and send the children happy dreams,
while watch they keep!
(Disappears. Darkness.)

HÄNSEL: (Half asleep.) Sandman was there!

GRETEL: (Ebenso.) Lass uns den
Abendsegen beten!
(Sie kauern nieder und falten die Hände.)

BEIDE: Abends, will ich schlafen gehn, vierzehn Engel um mich stehn, zwei zu meinen Häupten,
zwei zu meinen Füssen,
zwei zu meiner Rechten,
zwei zu meiner Linken, zweie, die mich decken,
zweie, die mich wecken,
zweie, die mich weisen
ze Himmelsparadeisen.
(Sie sinken aufs Moos zurück und schlummern Arm in Arm verschlungen alsbald ein.) Vierzehn Engel, die kleinsten voran, die grössten zuletzt, schreiten paarweise, während das Licht an Helligkeit zunimmt, in Zwischenräumen die Wolkentreppe hinab und stellen sich, der Reihenfolge des Abendsegens entsprechend, um die schlafenden Kinder auf, das erste Paar zu Häupten, das zweite zu Füssen, das dritte rechts, das vierte links; dann verteilen sich das fünfte und sechste Paar zwischen die übrigen Paare, sodass der Kreis der Engel vollständig geschlossen wird. Zuletzt tritt das siebente Paar in den Kreis und nimmt als "Schutzengel" zu beiden Seiten der Kinder Platz waehrend sie sich zu einem malerischen Schlussbilde ordnen, schliesst sich langsam der Vorhang.)

DRITTE SCENE

DRITTES BILD

DAS KNUSPERHÄUSCHEN

ERSTE SCENE

Scene wie vorhin. Der Hintergrund noch von Nebel verhüllt, der sich während des Folgenden langsam verzieht. Die Engel sind verschwunden. Früher Morgen. Taumännchen tritt auf und schüttelt aus einer Glockenblume Tautropfen auf die schlafenden Kinder.)

TAUMÄNNCHEN: Der kleine Tau-Mann heiss' ich—kling!
Mit Mutter Sonne reis' ich—klang!
Von Ost bis Westen weiss ich—kling!

GRETEL: (Ditto) Let us first say our evening prayer.
(They cower down and fold their hands.)

BOTH: When at night I go to sleep, fourteen angels watch do keep:
two my head are guarding,
two my feet are guiding,
two are on my right hand,
two are on my left hand,
two who warmly cover,
two who over me hover,
two to whom it's given to guide my steps to Heaven.
(They sink down on to the moss, and go to sleep with their arms twined round each other. Complete darkness.)

SCENE III

(Here a bright light suddenly breaks through the mist which forthwith rolls itself together into the form of a staircase, vanishing in perspective, in the middle of the stage. Fourteen angels, in light floating garments, pass down the staircase, two and two, at intervals, while it is getting gradually lighter. The angels place themselves, according to the order mentioned in the evening hymn, around the sleeping children; the first couple at their heads, the second at their feet, the third on the right, the fourth on the left, the fifth and sixth couples distribute themselves amongst the other couples, so that the circle of the angels is completed. Lastly the seventh couple comes into the circle and takes its place as "guardian angels" on each side of the children. The remaining angels now join hands and dance a stately step around the group. The whole stage is filled with an intense light. Whilst the angels group themselves in a picturesque tableau, the curtain slowly falls.)

ACT III

THE WITCH'S HOUSE

SCENE I

(The curtain rises. Scene the same as the end of Act II. The background is still hidden in mist, which gradually rises during the following. The angels have vanished. Morning is breaking. The Dew Fairy steps forward and shakes dewdrops from a bluebell over the sleeping children.)

DEW FAIRY: I'm up with early dawning,
and know who loves the morning,
who'll rise fresh as a daisy, who'll sink in slumber lazy!

Wer faul ist und wer fleissig—klang!
Ich komm mit lichtem Sonnenschein und strahl in eure Äugelein, und weck mit kühlem Taue,
was schläft auf Flur und Aue.
Dann springet auf, wer fleissig zur frühen Morgenstunde, denn sie hat Gold im Munde.
Drum, Schläfer, auf, erwachet, der lichte Tag schon lachet!
(Ab.)
(Öffnet die Augen, richtet sich halb auf und blickt verwundert um sich, während Hänsel sich auf die andere Seite legt, um weiter zu schlafen.)

GRETEL: Wo bin ich? Wach ich? Ist es ein Traum?
Hier lieg' ich unterm Tannenbaum.
Hoch in den Zweigen lispelt es leise,
Vöglein singen so süsse Weise.
Wohl früh schon waren sie aufgewacht und haben ihr Morgenlied dargebracht.
Guten Morgen, liebe Vöglein, guten Morgen!
(Sie erblickt Hänsel.)
Sieh da, der faule Siebenschläfer!
Wart nur, Dich weck' ich! Tirelireli,
's ist nicht mehr früh!
die Lerche hat's gesungen
und hoch sich aufgeschwungen.
Tirelireli,

HÄNSEL: (Aufspringend.) Kikeriki!
's ist noch frü!
Ja, hab's wohl vernommen,
der Morgen ist gekommen,
Kikeriki!
Mir ist so wohl, ich weiss nicht wie;
so gut wie heute schlief ich nie.

GRETEL: Doch höre nur! Hier unter dem Baum, da hatt' ich einen wunderschönen Traum.

HÄNSEL: Richtig! Auch mir träumte so was!

GRETEL: Mir träumt' ich hört' ein Rauschen und Klingen, wie Chöro der Engel ein himmlisches Singen;
lichte Wölkchen im rosigen Schein wallten und wogten ins Dunkel herein.
Siehe, hell ward's mit einem Male, lichtdurchflossen vom Himmelsstrahle;
eine goldene Leiter sah ich sich neigen,
Englein zu mir herniedersteigen,
Engel mit goldenen Flügelein—

HÄNSEL: Vierzehn müssen's gewesen sein!

GRETEL: (Erstaunt.) Hast Du denn alles das auch gesehn?

ding! dong! ding! dong!
And with the golden light of day
I chase the fading night away, fresh dew around me shaking,
and hill and dale awaking.
Then up, with all your powers enjoy the morning hours, the scent of trees and flowers—
then up, sleepers, awaken!
The rosy dawn is smiling,
then up, sleepers, awake, awake!
(Hurries off singing. The children begin to stir. Gretel rubs her eyes, looks around her, and raises herself a little, while Hänsel turns over on the other side to go to sleep again.)

GRETEL: Where am I? Waking? Or do I dream?
How come I lie in the wood?
High in the branches I hear a gentle twittering, birds are beginning to sing so sweetly;
from early dawn they are all awake,
and warble their morning hymn of praise.
Dear little singers, little singers, good morning!
(Turns to Hänsel.)
See there, the sleepy lazybones?
Wait, now, I'll wake him!
Tirelireli, it's getting late!
Tirelireli, it's getting late!
The lark his flight is winging, on high his morning singing,
Tirelireli! tirelireli!

HÄNSEL: (Suddenly jumps up with a start.) Kikeriki! it's early yet!
Kikeriki! it's early yet!
Yes, the day is dawning;
awake, for it is morning!
Kikeriki! kikeriki!
I feel so well, I don't know why!
I never slept so well, no, not I!

GRETEL: But listen, Hans; here beneath the tree a wondrous dream was sent to me!

HÄNSEL: Really! I, too, had a dream!

GRETEL: I fancied I heard a murmuring and rushing, as though the angels in Heaven were singing;
rosy clouds above me were floating—hovering and floating in the distance away,
Sudden-all around a light was streaming, rays of glory from Heaven beaming,
and a golden ladder saw I descending, angels gliding, down it such lovely angels with shining golden wings.

HÄNSEL: Fourteen angels there must have been!

GRETEL: (Astonished.) And did you also behold all this?

HÄNSEL: Freilich! 's war halt wunderschön—
Und dort hinaus sah ich sie gehn!
(Er wendet sich nach dem Hintergrunde. In diesem Augenblick zerreisst der letzte Nebelschleier. An Stelle des Tannengehölzes erscheint glitzernd im Strahl der aufgehenden Sonne das "Knusperhäuschen" am Ilsenstein. Links davon in einiger über ein grosser Käfig, beide mit dem Knusperhäuschen durch einen Zaun von Kuchenmännern verbunden.)

ZWEITE SCENE

GRETEL: (Hält Hänsel betroffen zurück.) Bleib stehn! Bleib stehn!

HÄNSEL: Himmel, welch Wunder ist hier geschehn!
Nein, so was hab ich mein Tag nicht' gesehn!

GRETEL: (Gewinnt allmählich die Fassung wieder.)
Wie duftet's von dorten,
O schau nur die Pracht!

BEIDE: Von Kuchen und Torten
Ein Häuslein gemacht!
Mit Fladen, mit Torten
ist's hoch überdacht!
Die Fenster wahrhaftig wie Zucker so blank,
Rosinen gar saftig
den Giebel entlang!
Und—traun!
Rings zu schaun gar ein Lebkuchen-Zaun!
O herrliches Schlösschen,
Wie bist du schmuck und fein
Ach wär' doch zu Hause die Wald-Prinzessin f ein Sie lüde zum Schmause bei Kuchen und Wein zum herrlichen Schmause sie lüde zur Klause uns beide wohl ein!

HÄNSEL: (Nach einer Pause.)
Alles bleibt still. Nichts regt sich da drinnen.
Komm lass uns hineingehn!

GRETEL: (Erschrocken ihn zurückhaltend.) Bist du bei Sinnen?
Junge, wie magst du so dreist nur sein?
Wer weiss, wer da drin wohl im Häuschen fein?

HÄNSEL: O sieh nur, wie das Häuschen uns lacht!
(Begeistert.)
Die Englein haben's uns hergebracht!

GRETEL: (Sinnend.) Die Englein?—Ei, so wird es wohl sein!

HÄNSEL: Ja, Gretel, sie laden freundlich uns ein!
Komm, wir knuspern ein wenig vom Häuschen!

HÄNSEL: Truly, it was wondrous fair!
And upward I saw them float.
(He turns towards the background; at this moment the last remains of the mist clear away. In place of the fir trees is seen the "Witch's house at the Ilsenstein," shining in the rays of the rising sun. A little distance off, to the left, is an oven; opposite this, on the right, a large cage, both joined to the Witch's house by a fence of gingerbread figures.)

SCENE II

GRETEL: (Holds Hänsel back in astonishment.) Stand still, be still!

HÄNSEL: (Surprised.) O Heaven, what wondrous place is this,
as never in all my life have I seen!

GRETEL: (Gradually regains her self-possession.) What delicious odor!
O say, do I dream?

BOTH: A cottage all made of chocolate cream.
The roof is all covered with Turkish delight the windows with lustre of sugar are white;
and on all the gables
the raisins invite, and think! all around
is a gingerbread hedge!
O magic castle,
how nice you'd be to eat!
Where hides the princess who enjoys so great a treat?
Ah, could she but visit our little cottage bare,
she'd ask us to dinner,
her dainties to share!

HÄNSEL: (After a while.) No sound do I hear; no, nothing is stirring!
Come, let's go inside!

GRETEL: (Pulling him back horrified.) Are you senseless?
Hänsel, however can you be so bold?
Who knows who may live there,
in that lovely house?

HÄNSEL: O look, do look how the house seems to smile!
(Enthusiastically.)
Ah, the angels did our footsteps beguile!

GRETEL: (Reflectively.) The angels? Yes, it must be so!

HÄNSEL: Yes, Gretel, the angels are beckening us in!
Come, let's nibble a bit of the cottage.

BEIDE: Ja, knuspern wir, wie zwei Nagemäuschen!
(Sie hüpfen Hand in Hand nach dem Hintergrunde, bleiben wiederum stehen und schleichen dann vorsichtig auf den Fuss-spitzen bis an das Häuschen heran. Nach einigem Zögern bricht Hänsel an der rechten Kante ein Stäckehen Kuchen heraus.)

DRITTE SCENE

TIMME AUS DEM HÄUSCHEN:
Knusper, knusper Knaüschen,
wer knuspert mir am Häuschen?

HÄNSEL: (Lässt erschrocken das Stück su Boden fallen.)

GRETEL: (Zaghaft.) Der Wind!

HÄNSEL: Der Wind!

BEIDE: Das himmlische Kind.

GRETEL: (Hebt das Stück wieder auf und versucht es.) Hm!

HÄNSEL: (Gretel begehrlich anschauend.) Wie schmeckt das?

GRETEL: (Ihn beissen lassend.)
Da hast du auch was!

HÄNSEL: (Legt entzückt die Hand auf die Brust.) Hei!

GRETEL: (Ebenso.) Hei!

BEIDE: O köstlicher Kuchen,
Wie schmeckst du nach mehr!
Mir ist ja, als wenn ich im Himmel schon wär!

HÄNSEL: Hei. wie das schmeckt! 's ist gar zu leckeri

GRETEL: Vielleicht gar wohnt hier ein Zucker-bäcker!

HÄNSEL: He, Zuckerbäcker, nimm dich in acht,
Ein Loch wird dir jetzt vom Mäuslein gemacht!
(Bricht ein grosses Stück aus der Wand heraus.)

STIMME AUS DEM HÄUSCHEN:
Knusper, knusper Knaüuschen,
wer knuspert mir am Häuschen?

HÄNSEL UND GRETEL: Der Wind, der Wind, das himmlische Kind!
(Der obere Teil der Hausthüre öffnet sich leise, und der Kopf der Knusperhexe wird sichtbar. Die Kinder bemerken sie nicht und schmausen lustig weiter.)

GRETEL: Wart, du näschiges Mäuschen, gleich kommt die Katz' aus dem Häuschen!

HÄNSEL: Knuspre nur zu und lass mich in Ruh!

GRETEL: (Entreisst ihm ein Stück Kuchen.) Nicht so geschwind, Herr Wind, Herr Wind!

BOTH: Come, let's nibble it.
like two mice persevering!
(They hop along, hand in hand, towards the back of the stage; then stand still, and then steal along cautiously on tiptoe to the house. After some hesitation Hänsel breaks off a bit of cake from the right-hand corner.)

SCENE III

A VOICE FROM THE HOUSE: Nibble, nibble, mousekin, who's nibbling at my housekin?
who's nibbling at my housekin?

HÄNSEL: (Hänsel starts, and in his fright lets the piece of cake fall.)

GRETEL: (Somewhat timidly.)
The wind—

HÄNSEL: The Wind!

BOTH: The heavenly wind!

GRETEL: (Picks up the piece of cake and tastes it.) H'm!

HÄNSEL: (Looking longingly at Gretel.) Do you like it?

GRETEL: (Lets Hänsel bite it.) Just taste and try it!

HÄNSEL: (Lays his hand on his breast in rapture.) Hi!

GRETEL: (Ditto) Hi!

BOTH: Hi, hi! O cake most delicious, some more I must take!
It's really like Heaven to eat such plum-cake!

HÄNSEL: O how good, sweet, how tasty!

GRETEL: How tasty, how sweet!
It's perhaps the house of a sweet maker!

HÄNSEL: Hi, sweet maker! Have a care!
A little mouse your sweets would share!
(He breaks a big piece of cake off the wall.)

A VOICE FROM THE HOUSE: Nibble, nibble, mousekin,
who's nibbling at my housekin?

HÄNSEL AND GRETEL: The wind,
the wind,
the heavenly wind!
(The upper part of the house-door opens gently and the Witch's head is seen at it. The children at first do not see her, and go on feasting merrily.)

GRETEL: Wait, you gobbling mousekin, here comes the cat from the housekin!

HÄNSEL: Eat what you please, and leave me in peace!

GRETEL: (Snatches the piece from his hand.) Don't be unkind,
Sir wind, sir wind!

HÄNSEL: (Nimmt es ihr wieder ab.) Himmlisches Kind, ich nehm, was ich find!

HEXE: (Kichernd.) Hihi, hihi, hihhi!

HÄNSEL: (Entsetzt.) Lass los!—
Wer bist du?

HEXE: Engelchen!
Und du, mein Zuckerbengelchen!
Ihr kommt mich besuchen?—Das ist nett!
Liebe Kinder!—So rund und fett!

HÄNSEL: Wer bist du, Garstige?—
Lass mich los!

HEXE: Na, Herzchen, zier dich nicht erst gross!
Wisst denn, dass euch vor mir nicht graul:
Ich bin Rosina Leckermaul, höchst menschenfreundlich stets gesinnt, unschuldig wie ein kleines Kind.
Drum hab ich die kleinen Kinder so lieb.
So lieb—ach zum Aufessen lieb!

HÄNSEL: (Barsch abwehrend.)
Geh!—bleib mir doch aus dem Gesicht!
Hörst du? Ich mag dich nicht!

HEXE: Hihihi!
Was seid ihr für leckere Teufelsbrätchen.
besonders du, mein herzig Mädchen!
(Lockend.)
Kommt, kleine Mäuslein,
kommt in mein Häuslein!
Sollt es gut bei mir haben,
Will drinnen köstlich euch laben.
Schokolade, Torten, Marzipan,
Kuchen, gefüllt mit süsser Sahn',
Johannisbrot und Jungfernleder und Reisbrei—auf dem Ofen stecht er—
Rosinen, Mandeln und Feigen,
's ist alles im Häuschen eur eigen!

HÄNSEL: Ich geh nicht mit dir, garstige Frau!—
Du bist gar zu freundlich.

HEXE: Schau, schau, wie schlau,
Ihr Kinder, ich mein's doch so gut mit euch, seid ja bei mir wie im Himmelreich!
Kommt, kleine Mäuslein!
kommt in mein Häuslein!
Sollt es gut bei mir haben,
will drinnen köstlich euch laben!

GRETEL: Was willst du meinem Bruder thun?

HEXE: I nun, ich will ihn fuettern und nudeln mit allerhand vortrefflichen Sachen will ich ihn zart und wohlschmeck-

HÄNSEL: (Takes it back from her.) Heavenly wind,
I take what I find!

BOTH: (Laughing.) Ha, ha, ha!

THE WITCH: Hi, hi! hi, hi!

HÄNSEL: (Horror-struck.) Let go!
Who are you?
Let me go!

THE WITCH: Angels both!
(And goosey-ganders!)
You've come to visit me, that is sweet!
You charming children, so nice to eat!

HÄNSEL: Who are you, ugly one?

THE WITCH: Now, darling, don't give yourself airs!
Dear heart, what makes you say such things?
I am Rosina Dainty-mouth, and dearly love my fellow-men.
I'm artless as a new born child!
That's why the children to me are so dear, so dear, so dear, ah, so charming to eat!

HÄNSEL: (Turning roughly away.) Go, get you gone from my sight!
I hate, I loathe you quite!

THE WITCH: Hi hi! hi hi!
These dainty morsels I'm really gloating on,
and you, my little maiden, I'm doting on!
Come, little mouse,
come into my house!
Come with me, my precious,
I'll give you sweetmeats delicious!
Of chocolate, tarts, and marzipan you shall both eat all you can, and wedding-cake and strawberry ices, blancmange, and everything else that nice is,
and raisins and almonds,
and peaches and citrons are waiting—you'll both find it quite captivating!

HÄNSEL: I won't come with you, hideous fright!
You are quite too friendly!

THE WITCH: See, see, see how sly!
Dear children, you really may trust me in this,
and living with me will be perfect bliss!
Come, little mouse,
come into my house!
Come with me, my precious,
I'll give you sweetmeats delicious!

GRETEL: But say, what will you with my brother do?

THE WITCH: Well, well!
I'll feed and fatten him up well, with every sort of dainty delicious,
to make him tender and tasty.
And if he's brave and patient too, end machen

und ist er dann recht zahm und brav, geduldig und fügsam wie ein Schaf, dann—höre, Hänsel, ich sag dir's ins Ohr:
dir steht eine grosse Freude bevor!

HÄNSEL: So sag's doch laut und nicht ins Ohr!
Welche Freude steht mir bevor?

HEXE: Ja liebe Kinder, Hoeren und Sehen wird euch bei diesem Vergnügen vergehn!

HÄNSEL: Ei, meine Augen und Ohren sind gut, haben wohl acht, was Schaden mir thut.
Gretel, trau nicht dem gleissenden Wort
(Leise.)
Schwesterchen, komm, wir laufen fort!
(Er hat sich inzwischen von der Schlinge befreit und will mit Gretel fortlaufen, sie werden aber von der Hexe zurück gehalten, die gebieterisch einen Stab gegen die Beiden erhebt.)

HEXE: Halt!
(Die Bühne verfinstert sich.)
Hocus pocus, Hexenschuss!
Rühr dich, und dich deisst der Fluss!
Nicht mehr vorwärts, nicht zurück, bann dich mit dem bösen Blick;
Kopf steh starr dir im Genick!
Hocus pocus, nun kommt Jocus!
Kinder, schaut den Zauberknopf!
Äuglein, stehet still im Kopf!—
Nun zum Stall hinein, du Tropf!
Hocus pocus, bonus jocus,
Malus locus, hocus pocus!
(Leitet Hänsel zum Stalle und schliesst hinter ihm die Gitterthüre.) (Vernügt zu Gretel.) Nun, Gretelchen, sei vernünftig und nett!
Der Hänsel wird nun balde fett.
Wir wollen ihn, so ist's am besten, mit Mandeln und Rosinen mästen.
Ich geh ins Haus und hol sie schnell—
Du rühre dich nicht von der Stell!
(Hinkt ins Haus.)

GRETEL: (Starr und unbeweglich.) Hu—Wie mir vor der Hexe graut!

and docile and obedient like a lamb,
then, Hänsel, I'll whisper it you,
I have a great treat in store for you!

HÄNSEL: Then speak out loud and whisper not.
What is the great treat in store for me?

THE WITCH: Yes, my dear children, hearing and sight in this great pleasure will disappear quite!

HÄNSEL: Eh? both my hearing and seeing are good!
You'd better take care you do me no harm!
(Resolutely.)
Gretel, trust not her flattering words, come, sister, come, let's run away!
(He has in the meantime got out of the rope and runs with Gretel to the foreground. Here they are stopped by the Witch, who imperiously raises against them both a stick which hangs at her girdle, with repeated gestures of spellbinding.)

THE WITCH: Hold.
(The stage becomes gradually darker.)
Hocus, pocus, witches' charm!
Move not, as you fear my arm!
Back or forward do not try,
fixed you are by the evil eye!
Head on shoulders fixed awry!
Hocus, pocus, now comes jocus, children, watch the magic head, eyes are staring, dull as lead!
Now, you atom, off to bed!
(Fresh gestures; then she leads Hänsel, who is gazing fixedly at the illuminated head, into the stable, and shuts the lattice door upon him.)
Hocus pocus, bonus jocus,
malus locus, hocus pocus,
bonus jocus, malus locus!
(The stage gradually becomes lighter, whilst the light of the magic head diminishes.)
Now Gretel, be obedient and wise, while Hänsel's growing fat and nice.
We'll fatten him up, you'll see my reason,
and with sweet almonds and raisins season.
I'll go indoors, the things to prepare, and you remain here where you are!
(She grins as she holds up her finger warningly, and goes into the house.)

GRETEL: (Stiff and motionless.)
O, what a horrid witch she is!

HÄNSEL: Gretel! Pst! sprich nicht so laut!
Sei hübsch gescheit und gieb fein acht auf jedes, was die Hexe macht.
Zum Schein thu alles, was sie will—da kommt sie schon zurück—Pst! Still!
(Dem Hänsel aus einem Korbe Mandeln und Rosinen his streuend.)

HEXE: Nun, Jüngelchen, ergötze dein Züngelchen!
Friss, Vogel, oder stirb—
Kuchen-Heil dir erwirb!
(Wendet sich zu Gretel und entzaubert sie mit einen Wachholderbuach.)
Hocus pocus, Holderbusch!
Schwinde, Gliederstarre, husch!
Nun wieder kregel, süsses Kleinchen, rühr mir geschwind die runden Beinchen!
Geh, Zuckerpüppchen, flink und frisch und decke drinnen hübsch den Tisch!
Schüsselchen, Tellerchen, Messerchen, Gäbelchen, Serviettchen für mein Schnäbelchen;
und mach nur alles recht hurtig und fein,
sonst sperr ich auch dich in den Stall hinein!
(Sie droht kichernd; Gretel eilt ins Haus.)

HEXE: (Zu dem sich schlafend stellenden Hänsel.) Der Lümmel schläft ja nun—sieh mal an, wie doch die Jugend schlafen kann!
Na, schlaf nur brav, du gutes Schaf, bald schläfst du deinen ewigen Schlaf.
Doch erst muss mir die Gretel dran;
mit dir, mein Liebchen, fang ich an,
bist so niedlich, zart und rund, wie gemacht für Hexen-Mund!
(Sie öffnet die Backofenthür und riecht hinein.)
Der Teig ist gar, wir können voran machen
Hei, wie im Ofen die Scheite krachen!
Ja, Gretelchen,
wirst bald ein Brätelchen!
Schau, schau,
wie ich schlau bin, so schlau!
Sollst gleich im Backofen hucken und nach dem Lebkuchen gucken.
Und bist du dann drin—schwaps,
geht die Thür—klaps!
Dann ist fein Gretelchen
mein Brätelchen!
Das Brätelchen soll sich verwandeln in Kuchen mit Zucker und Mandeln!
Im Zauberofen mein wirst du ein Lebkuchen fein!
Hurr, hopp, hopp, hopp!
Galopp, Galopp!
mein Besengaul,

HÄNSEL: Gretel, sh! don't speak so loud!
Be very sharp, watch well and see whatever she may do to me!
Pretend to do all she commands—
O, there she's coming back, sh! hush!
(The Witch comes out, satisfies herself that Gretel is stil standing motionless, and then spreads before Hänsel almonds and raisins from a basket.)

THE WITCH: Now, little man, come, I pray you, enjoy yourself!
(Sticking a raisin into Hänsel's mouth.)
Eat, minion, eat or die!
Here are cakes, O so nice!
(Turns to Gretel and disenchants her with a juniper-branch.)
Hocus pocus, elder-bush!
Rigid body lossen, hush!
(Gretel moves again.)
Now up and move again, bright and blithesome, limbs are become again supple and lithesome.
Go, my poppet, go my pet,
you the table now shall set,
little knife, little fork, little dish, little plate, little napkin for my little mate!
Now get everything ready and nice, or else I shall lock you up too in a trice!
(She threatens and titters. Gretel hurries off.)

(The Witch, to Hänsel, who pretends to be asleep.)
The fool is slumbering, it does seem queer how youth can sleep and have no fear!
Well, sleep away, you simple sheep,
soon you will sleep your last long sleep!
But first with Gretel I'll begin—off you, dear maiden, I will dine;
you are so tender, plump, and good,
just the thing for witches' food!
(She opens the oven door and sniffs in it, her face lighted up by the deep red glare of the fire.)
The dough has risen, so we'll go on preparing.
Hark, how the sticks in the fire are crackling!
(She pushes a couple more faggots under, the fire flames up and then dies down again. The Witch, rubbing her hands with glee.)
Yes, Gretel mine, how well off you I'll dine!
See, see, O how sly!
When in the oven she's peeping, quickly behind her I'm creeping!
One little push, bang goes the door, clang!
Then soon will Gretel be just done to a T!
and when from the oven I take her sh'll look like a cake from the bakhurr, hopp, nit faul!

Sowie ich's mag am lichten Tag spring kreuz und quer
um Häuschen her!
Bei dunkler Nacht,
wann niemand wacht,
zum Hexenschmaus
am Schornstein raus!
Aus fünf und sechs,
so sagt die Hex,
mach sieb und acht,
so ist's vollbracht;
und neun ist eins,
und zehn ist keins,
und viel ist nichts,
die Hexe spricht's.
So reitet sie bis morgens früh—
Prr! Besen! hüh!
Auf, auf, mein Jüngelchen!
Zeig mir dein Züngelchen!
(Hänsel streckt die Zunge heraus.) (Schnalzend.) Schlicker, schlecker, lecker, lecker!
Kleines leckres Schlingerchen,
Zeige mir dein Fingerchen!
(Hänsel streckt ein Stöckchen heraus.)
Jemine, je!
Wie ein Stöckchen, o weh!
Bübchen, deine Fingerchen sind elende Dingerchen!
(Ruft.)
Mädel! Gretel!
(Gretel zeigt sich an der Thür.)
Bring Rosinen und Mandeln her;
Hänsel meint, es schmeckt nach
"mehr!"
(Gretel springt in's Haus und kehrt alsbald mit einen Körbchen voll, Rosinen und Mandeln zurueck. Sie stellt sich, waehrend die Hexe den Haensel fuettert, hinter sie und macht mit dem Wachhoolder die Entzauberungagebaerde.)

GRETEL: (Leise.) Hocus pocus, Holderbusch!
Schwinde, Gliederstarre—husch!

HEXE: (Sich rasch umwendend.)
Was sagtest du, mein Gänselchen!

er,
by magic fire red
changed into gingerbread!
See, see how sly!
Hi hi! hi hi!
(In her wild delight she seizes a broomstick and begins to ride upon it.)
So, hop, hop, hop,
gallop, lop, lop!
my broomstick nag,
come do not lag!
(She rides excitedly round on the broomstick.)
At dawn of day
I ride away, am here and there
and everywhere!
(She rides again; Gretel meanwhile is watching at the window.)
At midnight hour, when none can know,
to join the witches' dance I go!
And three and four are witches' lore, and five and six
are witches' tricks, and nine is one,
and ten is none,
and seven is nil,
or what she will!
And thus they ride till dawn of day!
(Hopping madly along, she rides to the back of the stage and vanishes for a time behind the cottage. Here the Witch becomes visible again; she comes to the foreground, where she suddenly pulls up and dismounts.)
Prr, broomstick, hi!
(She hobbles back to the stable and tickles Hänsel with a birch twig till he awakes.)
Up, awake, my mankin young;
come show to me your tongue!
(Hänsel puts his tongue out. The Witch smacks her lips.)
Dainty morsel! dainty morsel!
Little toothsome mankin come,
now let me see your thumb!
(Hänsel pokes out a small bone)
Gemini! Oho!
O how scraggy, how lean!
Urchin, you're a scraggy one,
as bad as a skeleton!
(Calls.)
Maiden, Gretel!
(Gretel appears at the door.)
Bring some raisins and almonds sweet,
Hänsel wants some more to eat.
(Gretel runs into the house and returns immediately with a basket full of almonds and raisins. Whilst the Witch is feeding Hänsel, Gretel gets behind her and makes the gestures of disenchantment with the juniper-branch.)

GRETEL: (Softly.) Hocus pocus, elder-bush,
Rigid body loosen, hush!

THE WITCH: (Turning suddenly round.) What were you saying, little goose?

GRETEL: Meint' nur: wohl bekomm's, mein Hänselchen!

HEXE: Hihihi! Mein gutes Tröpfchen!
da—steck dir, was ins Kröpfchen!
Friss, Vogel, und stirb—
Kuchen-Heil dir erwirb!
(Sie öffnet die Backofenthür; Hänsel giebt Gretel lebhate Zeichen.)

HÄNSEL: (Leise die Stallthür öffnend.) Schwesterlein, hüt dich fein!

HEXE: (Gretel gierig betrachtend.) Wie wässert mir das Mündchen nach diesem süssen Kindchen!
Komm, Gretelchen!
Zuckermädelchen!
Sollst in den Backofen hucken und nach den Lebkuchen gucken, sorgfältig schaun—ja,
ob sie schon braun da,
oder ob's zu früh—
's ist kleine Müh!

HÄNSEL: (Aus dem Stall schleichend.) Schwesterlein,
hüt dich fein!

GRETEL: (Sich ungeschickt stellend.) Ei, wie fang ich's an, dass ich komme dran?

HEXE: Musst dich nur eben ein bisschen heben,
Kopf vorgebeugt—
's ist kinderleicht!

HÄNSEL: Schwesterlein,
hüt dich fein!

GRETEL: (Schüchtern.) Bin gar so dumm,
nimm mir's nicht krumm;
drum zeige mir ieben,
wie soll ich mich heben?

HEXE: (Macht eine ungeduldige Bewegung.) Kopf vorgebeugt!
's ist kinderleicht!
(Sie schickt sich murrend an, in den Backofen zu kriechen indem sie sich mit halbem Leibe vorbeugt, geben ihr Hänsel und Gretel einen derben Stoss, so dass sie vollends hinaus fliegt, und schlagen dann rasch die Tuere zu.)

HÄNSEL UND GRETEL: Und bist du dann drin—schwaps!
Geht die Thür—klaps!
Du bist dann statt Gretelchen ein Brätelchen!
(Hänsel und Gretel fallen sich jubelnd in die Arme, fassen sich bei der Hand und tanzen.)
Juchhei! Nun ist die Hexe tot, mausetot!

GRETEL: (Confusedly.) Only—much good may it do to Hans!

THE WITCH: Eh?

GRETEL: (Louder.) Much good may it do to Hans!

THE WITCH: He he he, my little miss,
I'll stop your mouth with this!
(Sticks a raisin into Gretel's mouth.)
Eat, minion, eat or die!
Here are cakes, O so nice!
(She opens the oven door; the heat has apparently diminished. Meanwhile Hänsel makes violent signs to Gretel.)

HÄNSEL: (Softly opening the stable door.) Sister dear,
O beware!

THE WITCH: (looking greedily at Gretel.) She makes my mouth water, this pretty little daughter!
Come, Gretel mine,
sugar-maiden mine!
(Gretel comes towards her.)
Peep in the oven,
be steady,
see if the gingerbread's ready!
Carefully look, pet,
whether it's cooked yet,
but if it wants more,
shut quick the door!
(Gretel hesitates.)

HÄNSEL: (Slipping out of the stable.) Sister dear,
Now take care!

GRETEL: (Making herself out very awkward.) I don't understand what I have to do!

THE WITCH: Just stand on tip-toe, head bending forward;
try it, I pray,
it's merely play!

HÄNSEL: (Pulling Gretel, back by her frock.) Sister dear,
now take care!

GRETEL: (Shyly.) I'm such a goose, don't understand!
You'll have to show me
how to stand on tip-toe!

THE WITCH: (Makes a movement of impatience.) Do as I say,
it's merely play!
(She begins creeping up to the oven, muttering all the time, and just as she is bending over it, Hänsel and Gretel give her a good push, which sends her toppling over into it, upon which they quickly shut the door.)

HÄNSEL AND GRETEL: (Mocking her.) Then "One little push, bang goes the door, clang!"
You, not Gretel, then will be just done to a T!
(Hänsel and Gretel fall into one another's arms.)
Hurrah! now sing the witch is dead, really dead!
No more to dread!

Nun ist geschwunden Angst und Not!
Junchhei! Nun ist die Hexe still, mäuschenstill,
Und Kuchen giebt's die Hüll und Füll!
Juchhei! Nun ist zu End der Graus, Hexengraus!
Und böser Zauberspuk ist aus!
Drum lasst uns fröhlich sein, tanzen im Feuerschein, halten im Knusperhaus herrlichsten Freudenschmaus!
Juchhei, juchhei!

GRETEL: Da sieh nur die artigen Kinderlein, wo mögen die hergekommen sein?
(Sie umfassen sich und walzen mit einander, erst im Vordergrund, dann allmaehlich in der Richtung auf das Knusperhaeuschen zu. Als sie beim Knusperhaeuschen angekommet sind, reisst sich Hänsel von Gretel los, eilt in's Haeuschen, indem er die Tuere hinter sich zuschlaeget, und wirft Gretel durch die obere Luke Aepfel, Birnen, Apfelsinen, vergoldete Nuesse und allerhand Zuckerwerk in die aufgehaltene Schuerza, Mittlerweile faengt der Hexenofen gewaltig an zu knistern; die Flamme Schlaegt hoch empor. Dann gibt's einen starken Krach, und der Ofen stuerzt donnernd zusamnien.)

VIERTE SCENE

DIE KUCHENKINDER: (Ganz leise.) Erlöst—befreit für alle Zeit!

GRETEL: Geschlossen sind ihre Äugelein;
sie schlafen und singen doch so fein!

KUCHENKINDER: (Leise.) O rühre mich an, dass ich erwachen kann!

HÄNSEL: (Verlegen.) Rühr du sie doch an—ich traue mir's nicht.

GRETEL: Ja, streicheln will ich dies hübsches Gesicht!
(Sie streichelt das nächste Kind; dieses öffnet die Augen und lächelt.)

Hurrah! now sing the witch is still, deathly still!
We can eat our fill!
Now all the spell is over, really over!
We fear no more!
(They seize each other's hands.)
Yes, let us happy be, dancing so merrily;
now the old witch is gone,
we'll have no end of fun!
Hey! hurrah, hurrah!
Hip hurrah! Hip hurrah!
Hurrah!

GRETEL: (Spoken.) There, see those little children dear,
I wonder how they all came here!
(They take each other around the waist and waltz together, first in the front of the stage, and then gradually in the direction of the Witch's house. When they get there Hänsel breaks loose from Gretel and rushes into the house, shutting the door after him. Then from the upper window he throws down apples, pears, oranges, gilded nuts, and all kinds of sweetmeats into Gretels outstretched apron. Meanwhile the oven begins crackling loudly, and the flames burn high. Then there is a loud crash, and the oven falls thundering into bits. Hänsel and Gretel, who in their terror let their sweetmeats all fall down, hurry towards the oven startled, and stand there motionless. Their astonishment increases when they become aware of a troop of children around them, whose disguise of cakes has fallen from them.)

SCENE IV.

THE GINGERBREAD CHILDREN: (Motionless and with closed eyes, as the cake figures were before.) We're saved, we're freed for evermore!

GRETEL: Your eyes are shut—pray who are you?
You're sleeping, and yet you're singing too!

THE GINGERBREAD CHILDREN: (Always very softly.) O touch us, we pray, that we may all awake!

HÄNSEL: (To Gretel embarrassed.) O touch them for me,
I dare not try!

GRETEL: Yes, let me stroke this innocent face!
(She caresses the nearest child, who opens its eyes and smiles.)

ANDERE KUCHENKINDER: O rühre auch mich—auch mich rühr' an, dass ich die Äuglein öffnen kann.
(Gretel geht streichelnd zu den übrigen Kindern, die lächelnd die Augen öffnen, ohne sich zu rühren; endlich ergreift Hänsel den Wachholder.)

HÄNSEL: Hocus pocus, Holderbusch!
Schwinde, Gliederstarre—husch!

DIE KUCHENKINDER: Habt Dank, habt Dank euer Leben euer Leben lang!
Juchhei!
Die Hexerei
ist nun vorbei;
nun singen und springen wir froh und frei!
Kommt, Kinderlein,
zum Ringelreihn,
reicht allzumal die Händchen fein!
Drum singt und springt,
drum tanzt und singt, dass laut der Jubelruf durchdringt den Wald, und rings erschallt
von Lust der Wald.

HÄNSEL UND GRETEL: Die Englein haben's im Traum gesagt in stiller Nacht, was nun so herrlich uns der Tag hat waht gemacht.
Ihr Englein, die uns so treu bewacht bei Tag und Nacht, habt Lob und Dank für all die Pracht, die uns hier lacht.

DIE KUCHENKINDER: Habt Dank, habt Dank
euer Leben lang!

LETZTE SCENE

VATER: Rallalala, rallalala, wären doch unsre Kinder da!
Rallalala, rallalala.—
(Er erblickt Hänsel und Gretel.)
Juch—! Ei, da sind sie ja!

HÄNSEL UND GRETEL: (Den Eltern entgegen eilend.) Vater! Mutter!

MUTTER: Kinderchen!

VATER: Da sind ja die armen Sünderchen!
(Frohe Umarmung; unterdes haben zwei Knaben die Hexe als grossen Lebkuchen aus den Trümmern des Zauberofen gezo-

OTHER GINGERBREAD CHILDREN: O touch me too, O touch me too, that I also may awake!
(Gretel goes and caresses all the rest of the children, who open their eyes and smile, without moving; meanwhile Hänsel seizes the juniper-branch.)

HÄNSEL: Hocus pocus, elderbush!
Rigid body loosen, hush!

SOME OF THE CHILDREN: (Jump up and hurry towards Hänsel and Gretel from all sides.) We thank, we thank you both!

THE CHILDREN: The spell is broken and we are free,
We'll sing and we'll dance and we'll shout for glee!
Come, children all, and form a ring, join hands together while we sing,
Then sing and spring,
then dance and sing,
for cakes and all good things we bring.
Then sing and spring,
then dance and sing,
that through the wood
our song of praise my sound, and echo repeat it all around!
We thank, we thank, we thank!

HÄNSEL AND GRETEL: The angels whispered in dreams to us in silent night what this happy, happy day has brought tonight.

THE GINGERBREAD CHILDREN: We'll thank you both all our life!

LAST SCENE

FATHER: Tralala, tralala!
Were our children only here!
Tralala, tralala!
(The Father appears in the background with the Mother, and stops when he sees the children.)
Ha! Why, they're really there!

HÄNSEL: (Running towards them.) Father! mother!

GRETEL: (The same.) Father! mother!

MOTHER: Children dear!

FATHER: O welcome,
poor children innocent!
(*Joyfully embracing. Meanwhile two of the boys have dragged the Witch, in the form of a big gingerbread cake, out of the ruins of gen.)

VATER: Kinder, schaut das Wunder an, wie solch Hexlein hexen kann, wie sie hart,
knusperhart
selber nun zum Kuchen ward!

the magic oven. At the sight of her they all burst into a shout of joy. The boys place the Witch in the middle of the stage.)

FATHER: Children, see the wonder wrought, how the Witch herself was caught unaware in the snare laid for you with cunning rare!
Such is Heaven's chastisement;

Merkt des Himmels Strafgericht:
böse Werke dauern nicht!
Wenn die Not aufs höchste steigt,
Gott der Herr die Hand uns reicht!

ALLE: Wenn die Not aufs höchste steigt,
Gott der Herr die Hand uns reicht!

evil works will have an end.
"When past bearing is our grief,
Then God, the Lord, will send us relief!"

ALL: "When past bearing is our grief,
Then God, the Lord, will send relief!"

I Pagliacci (1892)

MUSIC & LIBRETTO BY RUGGIERO LEONCAVALLO

This two-act opera with a prologue, set to a libretto by the composer, premiered at the Teatro dal Verme in Milan on May 21, 1892. The libretto incorporates characters that are part of the Commedia del Arte tradition, which was popular in Italy during the last half of the nineteenth century and which laid the foundations for the mime tradition in France. Tonio, a member of a company of actors, announces that a performance is about to begin and tells the audience what the opera is about. The company arrives in a Calabrian village to the cheers of the crowd. Tonio offers a hand to Nedda, wife of the company leader, to help her down from the wagon. Canio, her husband, won't allow anyone near her and pushes Tonio away. The actors go inside the inn. Nedda, left alone, sings of freedom. Tonio comes to her and confesses his love. When she rejects him, he persists, and she hits him across his face with a whip. Tonio, utterly humiliated, overhears Silvio, her lover, asking her to run away with him; Nedda hesitates, but says she will meet him after the performance. Canio appears but Silvio escapes without Canio recognizing him, and Nedda refuses to say who he is. It is almost performance time, and Canio must hide his wrath behind a clown's face. Silvio is in the audience. After a serenade, Beppe, dressed as Harlequin rendezvous with Nedda, who is dressed as Columbine; Canio, playing Pagliacci, Columbine's husband, enters, and Harlequin flees. Canio thus finds himself acting out his own real-life drama. He hurls himself at Nedda, ordering her to tell him who her lover is, and when she refuses; he stabs her. Silvio rushes to her, and Canio kills him as well. He then addresses the audience, saying, "the comedy is ended."

Tonio, in costume da Taddeo come nella commedia, passando a traverso al telone.

TONIO: Si può? . . . (poi salutando) Signore! Signori! . . . Scusatemi se sólo mi presento.—
Io sono il Prologo. Poichè in iscena ancor le antiche maschere mette l' autore, in parte ei vuol riprendere le vecchie usanze, e a voi di nuovo inviami. Ma non per dirvi come pria: "Le lagrime che noi versiam son false: Degli spasimi e dei nostri martir non allarmatevi!" No:
L'autore ha cercato invece pingervi uno squarcio di vita. Egli ha per massima sol che l' artista è un uomo e che per gli uomini scrivere ei deve.—Ed al vero ispiravasi.
Un nído di memorie in fondo a l' anima cantava un giorno, ed ei con vere lacrime sorisse, e i singhiozzi il tempo gli battevano! Dunque, vedrete amar si come s' amano gli esseri umani; vedrete de l' odio i tristi frutti. Del dolor gli spasimi, urli di rabbia, udrete, e risa ciniche!
E voi, pruttosto che le nostre povere gabbane d' istrioni, le nostr' anime considerate, poichè noi siam uomini di carne e d' ossa, e che di quest' orfano mondo al pari di voi spiriamo l' aere!
Il concetto vi dissi.—Or ascoltate com' egli è svolto. (Gridando verso la scena.) Andiamo. Incominciate!
(Rientra e la tela si teva.)

■ ACT I.

PROLOGUE.

Tonio, dressed as Taddeo of the Comedy, comes in front of the curtain.

TONIO: A word—allow me! (bowing) sweet ladies and gentlemen,
I pray you, hear, why alone I appear,
I am the Prologue!
Our author loves the custom of a prologue to his story,
And as he would revive for you the ancient glory,
He sends me before you to speak the prologue!
But not to prate, as once of old,
That the tears of the actor are false, unreal,
That his sighs and cries, and the pain that is told,
—He has no heart to feel!
No! No! Our author to-night a chapter will borrow
From life with its laughter and sorrow.
Is not the actor a man with a heart like your?
So 'tis for men that our author has written,
And the story he tells you is—true!
A song of tender memories deep in his listening heart
One day was ringing; with trembling heart, he wrote it,
And marked the time with sighs and tears. . . . Come then,
Here on the stage you shall behold us, in human fashion,
And see the sad fruits of love and passion!
Hearts that weep and languish, cries of rage and anguish,
And bitter laughter. . . . Ah, think then—sweet people,
When you look on us, clad in our motley and tinsel,
Ours are human hearts, beating with passion,
We all are men like you, for gladness or sorrow.
'Tis the same broad Heaven above us,
The same wide lonely world before us!
Will you hear then the story, how it unfolds itself, surely and certain?
Come then! ring up the curtain!
(Exit. The curtain rises.)

SCENA I.

La scena rappresenta un bivio di strada in compagna, al l'entrats di un villaggio. La destra occupata obliquamente da un teatro di fiera. All' alzarsi della tela si sen ono squilli di tromba stonata alternantisi con dei colpi di cassa, ed insieme risa e, grida allegre, fischi di monelli e vociare che vanno appressandosi.—Attirati dal suono e dal frastuono i contadini di ambo i sessi, in abito da fes a, accorrono a frolte dal viale, mentre Tonio il gobbo, va a guardare verso la strada a sinistra, poi, annojato dalla folla che arriva, si sdraia, ainanzi al teatro. Son tre ore dopo mezzogiorno; il sole di agosto splende cocente. Coro di Contadini, Nedda, Canio, Tonio, e Peppe.

SCENE I.

SCENE: The entrance of a village, —where two roads meet. On right, a travelling theatre. As the curtain rises, sounds of a trumpet out of tune and a drum are heard. Laughing, shouting, whistling voices approaching. Enter Villagers in holiday attire. Tonio looks up road on left. Then, worried by the crowd which stares at him, lies down in front of the theatre. Time 3 o'clock. – Bright sunlight.

CORO DI UOMINI E DONNE: (arrivando a poco a poco). Son quà! Ritornano . . . Pagliaccio è là. Tutti lo seguono grandi e ragazzi e ognuno applaude ai motti, ai lazzi. Ed egli serio saluta e passa e torna a battere su la gran cassa In aria gittano i lor cappelli, fra strida e sibili, tutti i monelli.	MEN AND WOMEN: (entering one by one) This way they come With pipe and drum, This way they come, This way they come, Here's a pretty Columbine And Punchinello, A merry fellow. With laugh and jest They come, they come Look how sedately He smiles and passes, Beating his drum With a nod to the lasses.
RAGASSI: (di dentro). Ehi, sferza l'asino, bravo Arlecchino!	BOYS: (behind) Hi there! Harlequin! Whip up your donkey!
CANIO: (di dentro). Itene al diavolo!	CANIO: (behind) Go to the devil!
PEPPE: (di dentro). To, birichino! (Un gruppo di monelli entra, correndo, in scena dalla sinistra.) Indietro, arrivano . . . Ecco il carretto . . . Che diavolerio Dio benedetto! (Arriva una pittoresca carretta dipinta a varfi colori e tirata da un asino che Peppe, in abito da Arlechino, guida a mano camminando, mentre collo scudiscio allontana i ragazzi. Sulla carretta sul davanti e sdrajata Nedda in un costume tra la zingara e l' acrobata. Dietro ad essaiè piazzata la gran cassa. Sul di dietro della carretta è Canio in piedi, in costume di Pagliaccio, tenendo nella destra una trombe e nella sinistra la mazza della gran cassa.—I contadini e le contadine attorniano festosamente la carretta.)	BEPPE: (behind). Take that, you monkey! (Crowd of boys run on from left.) Keep back! They're coming now, The wagon's coming! Oh what an awful row! Oh what a drumming! (Enter Beppe, dressed as a harlequin leading donkey, which draws a gaily painted cart, in which Nedda is lying. Behind her, the drum, and Canio, dressed as Punchinello in back of cart, trumpet in his right hand, drumsticks in left. The villagers surround the cart.)
TUTTI: Evviva! il principe se' dei pagliacci Tu i guai discacci co 'l lieto umor. Evviva!	VILLAGERS: Hail, Punchinello! Long live the merry king, Who keeps us mellow! He is the blithest fellow! Long life to him we sing! Hail, Punchinello!
CANIO: Grazie . . .	CANIO: Thank you!
CORO: Bravo!	VILLAGERS: Bravo!
CANIO: Vorrei . . .	CANIO: Allow me.
CORO: E lo spettacolo?	VILLAGERS: Now then begin the play!
CANIO: (picchiando forte e ripetutamente sulla cassa per dominar le voci). Signori miei!	CANIO: (beating drum) Gentlemen all. (Drowning the voices of the crowd.)
TUTTI: (scostandosi e turandosi le orecchie). Uh! ci assorda! . . . finiscila.	VILLAGERS: (stopping their ears). You deafen us. Do stop, I say!
CANIO: (affettando cortesia e togliendosi il berretto con un gesto comico). Mi accordan di parlar?	CANIO: (politely) A word, a word, I pray! (Taking off his cap and bowing.)
LA FOLLA: (ridendo). Oh! con lui si dee cedere. tacere ed ascoltar.	VILLAGERS: Hush! Hush! be quiet, pray, Begin and say your say!
CANIO: Un grande spettacolo a ventitrè ore prepara il vostr' umile e buon servitore. (Riverense.) Vedrete le smanie del bravo Pagliaccio; e come ei si vendica e tende un bel laccio. Vedrete di Tonio tremar la carcassa, e quale matassa d'intrighi ordirà. Venite, onorateci Signori e Signore. A ventitrè ore! A ventitrè ore!	CANIO: This evening at seven o'clock I invite you To see our performance, I know it will delight you. We'll show you the troubles of poor Punchinello And the vengeance he wreaked on a treacherous fellow; And Tony the clown with his big corporation, And strange combination of love and of hate. O come then, and honor us, You'll all be delighted, At seven you're invited, At seven you're invited!
LA FOLLA: Verremo, e tu serbaci il tuo buon umore. A ventitrè ore! A ventitrè ore! (Tonio ai avanza per ajutar Nedda a discendere dal carretto Canio, che è già saltato giù, gl'dà un ceffone dicendo.)	VILLAGERS: With pleasure, with pleasure! We are all delighted. At seven we're invited! At seven we're invited! (Tonio advances to help Nedda down from the cart, but Canio, who has already alighted, boxes his ears.)
CANIO: Via da lì. (Pol prende fra le bracci Nedda e la depone a terra.)	CANIO: Get away! (Takes Nedda by the arms and lifts her down.)
LE DONNE: (ridendo, a Tonio). Prendi questo, bel galante!	WOMEN: (laughing at Tonio). How do you like it, pretty lover!
I RAGAZZI: (fischiando). Con salute! (Tonio mostra il pugno al monelli cne scappano, poi si allonta bron olando e scommoare sotto la tenda a destra del teatre.)	BOYS: (whistling). How do you like it? (Tonio shakes his fists at the boys, who run away, and goes off, grumbling, right of theatre.)
TONIO: (a parte). La pagherai! . . . brigante. (Intanto Peppe conduce l'asino col carretto dietro al teatro.)	TONIO: (aside.) Oh, he shall pay me, you'll discover! (Beppe leads off donkey and cart behind theatre.)
UN CONTADINO: (a Canio). Di', con noi vuo' tu bevere un buon bicchiere sulla crocevia?	VILLAGER: (to Canio). Say! will you drink with me a measure? They sell good liquor at the tavern yonder.
CANIO: Con piacere.	CANIO: With pleasure!
PEPPE: Aspettatemi . . . . Anch' io ci sto! (Poi entra dall' altro lato del teatro per cambian costume.)	BEPPE: I say! Wait, you two! I'll come with you! (Enters theatre to change his dress.)
CANIO: (gridando verso il fondo). Di Tonio, vieni via?	CANIO: (calling towards theatre). Hi! Tonio, are you coming?
TONIO: (di dentro). Io netto il somarello. Precedetemi.	TONIO: (behind). I've got to clean the donkey. I'll soon be after you.
UN CONTADINO: (ridendo). Bada, Pagliaccio, ei solo vuol restare per far la corte a Nedda.	VILLAGER: (laughing to Canio). Take care, my master. He waits till you're departed, to go a-courting Nedda!
CANIO: (ghignando, ma con cipiglio). Eh! Eh! vi pare?	CANIO: (smiling and frowning). You think so?
(tra il serio e l'ironico). Un tal gioco, credetemi, è meglio non giocarlo. con me, miei cari; e a Tonio . . . e un poco a tutti or parlo. Il teatro e la vita non son la stessa cosa; e se lassù Pagliaccio sorprende la sua sposa col bel galante in camera, fa un	(half in earnest, half ironically) Such a game, believe me, friends, is hardly worth the playing. Let Tonio ponder what I am saying. For the Stage and Life are different, you'll discover; For if up there (pointing to the theatre) I caught her—my lady, with a lover, comico sermone,

poi si calma od arrendesi ai colpi di bastone! . . .
Ed il pubblico applaude, ridendo allegramente.
Ma se Nedda sul serio sorprendessi . . . altramente finirebbe la storia, com'è ver che vi parlo . . .
Un tal gioco, credetemi, è meglio non giocarlo.

NEDDA: (a parte). Confusa io son! . . .

ALCUNI CONTADINI: Sul serio pigli dunque la cosa!

CANIO: (un po' commosso). Io? . . . Vi pare! . . . Scusatemi . . .
Adoro la mia sposa!
(Canio va a baciar Nedda in fronte. Un suono di cornamusa si fa sentire all'interno; tutti si precipitano verso la sinistra, guardando fre le quinte.)

I MONELLI: (gridando). I zampognari! . . . I zampognari! . . .

GLI UOMINI: Verso la chiesa vanno i compari
(Le campane suonano a vespero da lontano.)

I VECCHI: Essi accompagnano la comitiva che a coppie al vespero sen va giuliva.

LE DONNE: Andiam.—La campana ci appella al signore.

CANIO: Ma poi.. ricoratevi, A ventitrè ore.
(I zampognari arrivano dalla sinistra in abito da festa con nastri da colori vivaci e fiori ai cappelli acuminati. Li seguono una frotta di contadini e contadine anch' essi parati a festa. Il coro, che è sulla scena, scambia con questi saluti e sorrisi, poi tutti si dispongone a coppie ed a gruppi, si uniscono alla comitiva e si allontanano, cantando, pel viale del fondo, dietro al teatro)

CORO GENERALE: Din, don,— suona vespero,
ragazze e garzon,
a coppie affrettiamoci,
al tempio—din, don!
Il sol diggia i culmini,
Din, don, vuol baciar;
Le mamme ci adocchiano,
attenti, compar.
Din, don.—Tutto irradiasi di luce, d'amor;
Ma i vecchi sorvegliano,
gli arditi amador.
Din, don—suona vespero,
ragazze e garzon.
Le squille ci appellano
al tempio—din, don!
(Durante il coro, Canio entra dietro al teatro e va a lasciar la sua giubba da Pagliaccio, poi ritorna, e dopo aver fatto, sorridendo, un cenno d'addio a Nedda, parte con Peppe a cinque o sei contadini per la sinistra.—Nedda resta sola.)

SCENA II.

Nedda sola, poi Tonio

NEDDA: (pensierosa). Qual fiamma avea nel guardo!
Gii occhi abbassai per tema ch'ei ei leggesse
Il mio pensier segreto.
Oh! s'ei mi sorprendesse . . .
brutale come egli è . . . Ma basti, orvia.
Son questi sogni paurosi e fole!
O che bel sole di mezz' agosto! Io son piena di vita, e tutta illanguidita per arcano desio, non so che bramo!
(Guardando in cielo.) Oh! che volo d' augelli, e quante strida! . . .
Che chiedon? dove van? chissà ..La mamma mia, che la buona ventura annonciava, comprendeva il lor canto e a me bambina così cantava:
Hui! stridono lassù, liberamente lanciati a vol come frecce, gli augel.
Disfidano le nubi e 'l sol cocente,
e vanno, e vanno per le vie del ciel.
Lasciateli vagar per l' atmosfera questi assetati d' azzurro e splendor:
seguono anch' essi un sogno, una chimera,
e vanno, e vanno fra le nubi d'or.
Che incalzi il vento e latri la tempesta, con l' ali aperte san tutto sfidar;
la pioggia, i lampi, nulla mai li arresta,
e vanno, e vanno, sugli abissi e i mar.
Vanno laggiù verso un paese strano, che sognan forse e che cercano invan.
Ma i boëmi del ciel seguon l'arcano poter che li sospinge . . . e vanno.. e van!
(Tonio durante la canzone sarà uscito di dietro al teatro e sarà ito ad appoggiarsi all' albero, ascoltando beato.—Nedda, finito il canto fa per rientrare e lo scorge.)

NEDDA: (bruscamente contrariata). Sei là? credea che te ne fossi andato.

I'd preach a little sermon, and get into a passion,
Then calmly I would seat me there,
And let her lover beat me there, while the people would applaud me in the usual silly fashion!
But if Nedda—in earnest should deceive me,
The ending would be different, believe me.
Mark the words that I am saying, such a game, believe me, friends, is hardly worth the playing!

NEDDA: (aside). What can he mean?

VILLAGERS: But surely you cannot suspect her?

CANIO: (slightly moved). No, no, of course not. That could not be.
I love her and respect her!
(Kisses Nedda on her forehead.)
(Bagpipes heard from within. The villagers run to the left and look off.)

BOYS: Hark! hark the bagpipes!
The pipers are coming!

MEN: See where the people churchward are going!

OLD PEOPLE: Hark to the bagpipes so merrily blowing!
Gaily the couples to vespers are going!

WOMEN: Come away!
The gray twilight falls,
The Angelus calls!

CANIO: Yes, but remember, pray,
At seven you're invited!
(Enter bagpipe Players from left, in holiday attire. A troop of villagers follows. Villagers on stage greet them. All disperse in couples, and at close of chorus go off singing, down road behind theatre.)

CHORUS: Ding, dong! the shadows fall,
Then come, one and all!
To the church come away
Ding, dong! we roam along,
In love's dream so fair.
But mothers have watchful eyes,
Beware! oh beware!
Soon in the twilight
Love will be told;
But the old folks are watching,
Be not too bold!
Ding, dong! all above,
All around, is bright with love.
Ding, dong! the shadows fall,
Come one and all!
(During the above, Canio goes into theatre, and after taking off his Punchinello's dress, returns, nods good-bye to Nedda with a smile, and goes off with Beppe and five or six villagers, left. Nedda remains.)

SCENE II.

Nedda, alone, then Tonio.

NEDDA: (musing). How fierce he looked and watched me!
I hung my head, fearing lest he should discover
My secret thoughts of my lover.
Heavens! if he should suspect me,
With all his brutal ways! No matter!
I fear not,
These are but empty dreams and idle fancies.
Shine, oh glorious sun, upon me!
Every pulse is throbbing, glowing,
Like the tide, my passion flowing,
Oh my heart, my restless heart, where are you going?
(Looking to the sky.)
Ah, beautiful song-birds! I hear your pinions.
What do you seek? Where are you going? Who knows?
My mother knew the meaning of your sweet voices,
And the song she sang me in happy childhood
Comes back forever! High! high aloft they fly,
Through Heaven's blue ether launched in their flight,
Like arrows of light, in the sky,
The storm clouds and the tempest and the sunlight defying,
For ever flying,—through the boundless sky!
Afar, ever they journey! on, upward for ever!
On! wearying never, their fetterless wings unfold.
They have their visions, their tender, beautiful visions,
They soar forever through clouds of gold.
What though the wind howls, and night is dark above them,
Spreading their pinions by planet and star,
No night dismays them, no storm delays them,
They soar forever over sea and scar.
Far! oh so far they fly on wings untiring,
Seeking sweet regions they may never know,
For what can bar their dreams and their desiring?
It is fate that leads them;—still on they go!
(during the song, Tonio comes from behind theatre, leans against tree listening. As Nedda moves to go off, she sees him.)

NEDDA: (crossly). What! You? I thought that you had gone to market!

TONIO: (ridiscendendo, con dolcezza). E colpa del tuo canto. Affascinato io mi beava!	TONIO: (coming forward). The fault lies in your singing. (Caressingly.) The song bewitched me, And I could not leave you.
NEDDA: (ridendo con scherno). Oh! quanta poesia! . . .	NEDDA: (laughing scornfully). Ha! ha! How very poetic.
TONIO: Non rider, Nedda . . .	TONIO: Do not laugh, Nedda.
NEDDA: Va, va all' osteria.	NEDDA: Go to the tavern!
TONIO: So ben che difforme, contorto son io; che desto soltanto lo scherno o l' orror. Eppure ha 'l pensiero un sogno, un desio, e un palpito il cor! Allor che sdegnosa mi passi d' accanto non sai tu che pianto mi spreme il dolor, perchè, mio maìgrado, subito ho l' incanto m' ha vinto l' amor! (Appressandosi.) Oh! lasciami, lasciami or dirti . . .	TONIO: I know that you hate me and laugh in derision, For what is the Clown? he plays but a part. Yet he has his dream, and his hope and his vision, The Clown has a heart. And ah when you pass me, uncaring, unseeing, You know not my sorrow, so cruel and sweet. I give you my spirit, my life, and my being, I die at your feet. (Approaching her.) Ah, hear me then, hear me then, Let me tell you—
NEDDA: (interrompendolo e beffeggiandolo). che m'ami? Hai tempo a ridirmelo stasera, se il brami, facendo le smorfie colà, sulla scena. Intanto risparmiati per ora la pena.	NEDDA: (interrupting and scoffing at him). —You love me. It's time enough to tell me this evening, Tonight when you're playing the fool, With sighs and grimaces, Why not postpone the confession till then?
TONIO: (delirante con impeto). No, è qui che voglio dirtelo, e tu m' ascolterai. che t' amo ti desidero, e che tu mia sarai!	TONIO: (passionately). No, it is now I will tell you, And you shall hear me now. I love you, worship and long for you, To make you mine for ever.
NEDDA: (seria ed insolente). Eh! dite, mastro Tonio! La schiena oggi vi prude, o una tirata d' orecchi è necessaria al vostro ardor?	NEDDA: (with studied insolence) Tell me, silly varlet, Do your shoulders itch for a drubbing? Or do your ears want a rubbing? How shall I teach you to cool your love?
TONIO: Ti beffi? sciagurata! Per la croce di Dio, bada che puoi pagarla cara! . . .	TONIO: You mock me? Too long I've borne it. By the cross of the Saviour, I'll make you pay, I've sworn it!
NEDDA: Tu minacci? . . . Vuoi che vada a chiamar Canio?	NEDDA: You threaten? Must I then call Canio to you?
TONIO: (movendo verso di lei). Non prima chio ti baci	TONIO: (moving towards her). But not before I kiss you!
NEDDA: (retrocedendo). Bada!	NEDDA: (drawing back). Hands off!
TONIO: (s'avanza ancora aprendo le braccia per ghermirla). Oh, tosto sarai mia! . . .	TONIO: (advancing and putting out his arms to embrace her). No! No! you shall be mine. (Nedda goes up stage backwards, sees whip left by Beppe, takes it up and strikes Tonio in the face.)
NEDDA: (sale retrocendo verso il teatrino, vede la frusta lasciata de Peppe, l' afferra e dà un colpo faccia a Tonio, dicendo). Miserabile! . . .	NEDDA: Unhand me, wretch!
TONIO: (dà un urlo e retrocede). Ah! Per la vergin pia di mezz' agosto Nedda, lo giuro . . . me la pagherai! . . . (Esce minacciando dalla sinistra.)	TONIO: (screaming and drawing back). By the Holy Virgin of the Assumption, Nedda, I swear it, I'll be revenged upon you. (Exit left, with threatening gestures.)
NEDDA: (immobile guardandolo allontanarsi). Aspide! va.—Ti sei svelato ormai Tonio lo scemo!—Hai l' animo Siccome il corpo tuo difforme . . . lurido!..	NEDDA: Viper, begone! You have revealed your nature. Tonio—the Fool! You have a heart as foul And ugly as your body, ay! fouler still!
SCENA III.	SCENE III.
Silvio, Nedda, e poi Tonio.	Silvio, Nedda; then Tonio Silvio leans half over wall, right, and calls in a low voice.
SILVIO: (sporgendo la metà dei corpo arrampicandosi dal muretto a destra, e chiama a bassa voce). Nedde!	SILVIO: Nedda!
NEDDA: (affrettandosi verso di lui). Silvio! a quest' ora . . . che imprudenza.	NEDDA: (hurrying towards him) Silvio! at this hour. What madness!
SILVIO: (saltando allegramente e venendo verso di lei). Ah bah! sapea che non rischiavo nulla. Canio e Peppe da lunge a la taverna no scorto con gli amici! . . . Ma prudente per la macchia a me nota qui ne venni.	SILVIO: (jumping over and coming towards her). Bah! Bah! No danger, dear, I'm thinking. Canio I left at yonder tavern drinking. By the pathway that we love, through the bushes, I came here.
NEDDA: E ancora un poco in Tonio t' imbattevi.	NEDDA: A moment sooner and Tonio would have caught you.
SILVIO: (ridendo). Oh! Tonio il gobbo!	SILVIO: (laughing). Ha! ha! The fool!
NEDDA: Il gobbo è da temersi. M' ama . . . Ora qui mel! disse . . . e nel bestiale delirio suo, baci chiedendo, ardiva correr su me . . .	NEDDA: The fool is to be feared. He loves me, Just now he told me. With burning words and brutal fire, He tried to kiss me in his mad desire.
SILVIO: Per Dio!	SILVIO: By Heaven!
NEDDA: Ma con la frusta del cane immondo la foga calmai.	NEDDA: No, don't be anxious! For such a passion, A whip's the fashion. (Pointing to Beppe's whip.)
SILVIO: E fra quest' ansie in eterno vivrai? Decidi il mio destin, Nedda, Nedda rimani! Tu il sai; la festa ha fin e parte ognun dimani. E quando tu di qui sarai partita che addiverrà di me . . . de la mia vita? . . .	SILVIO: Why will you live, then, for ever like this, Nedda? My fate is in your hands. Nedda, pity my sorrow. Tonight the fair is over, You will be gone tomorrow. Ah, what of me, when you have departed? How shall I live apart from you And broken-hearted?
NEDDA: (commossa.) Silvio!	NEDDA: (deeply moved). Silvio!
SILVIO: Nedda, rispondimi. Se è ver che Canio non amasti mai, se è vero che t' è in odio il ramingare e il mestier che tu fai, se l'immenso amor tuo fola non è questa notte partiam! . . . fuggi con me.	SILVIO: Nedda, hear, I implore you! If for your husband no passion inspires you, If all this roving life sickens and tires you, If this great love of yours is not empty delight, Fly with me, fly with me, dearest, tonight!

NEDDA: Non mi tentar!. . . Vuoi tu—perder la vita mia? Taci Silvio, non più . . . —E delirio . . . è follia . . . Io mi confido a te—a te cui diedi il cor Non abusar di me—de 'l mio febbrile amor! . . . Non mi tentar!..E poi . . . — Chissè! meglio è partir Sta il destin contro noi.—E vano il nostro dir. Eppure da 'l mio cor—strapparti non poss' io, Vivrò sol de l' amor—ch' hai destato al cor mio. (Tonio appare dal fondo a sinistra.)	NEDDA: Ah, tempt me not! Has not life enough of sadness? Silvio, tempt me no more. It is folly, it is madness! Have I not given you my heart? You have my love for all time. Then say good-bye and part. You will not then betray. Ah, tempt me not, for pity's sake, my heart will break! Who knows, dear heart, it is best to part! Tears are vain, all is vain; we must not meet again. And yet remembering all our love, since first I met you. I shall dream of you, live for you, never forget you. (Tonio appears at back, left.)
SILVIO: No, più non m' ami!	SILVIO: No! you do not love me!
TONIO: (scorgendoli, a parte). T' ho colta, sgualdrina! (Fugge dal sentiero minacolando.)	TONIO: (aside, watching). I've caught you, you strumpet! (Runs down pathway, with threatening gestures.)
NEDDA: Sì, t' amo! t' amo!	NEDDA: I love you, love you!
SILVIO: E parti domattina? . . . (Amorasamente, cercando ammaliarla.) E allor perchè, di', tu m' hai stregato se vuoi lasciarmi senza pietà? Quel bacio tuo perchè me l' hai dato fra spasimi ardenti di voluttà? Se tu scordasti l' ore fugaci io non lo posso, e voglio ancor que' spasmi ardenti, que' caldi baci che tanta febbre m' han messo in cor!	SILVIO: And yet you leave me tomorrow. (Lovingly, trying to move her.) Why have you taught me Love's magic story, If you will leave me, hopeless, alone? Why press to mine your lips in their glory, Why fold your heart unto mine? If you forget all our caresses, I still remember that dream divine, I want your heart, your passionate kisses, I want your spirit to melt in mine!
NEDDA: (vinta e smarrita). Nulla scordai—m'ha sconvolta e turbata questo amor che ne 'l guardo ti sfavilla. Viver voglio a te avvinta, affascinata una vita d' amor calma e tranquilla. A te mi dono; su me solo impera. Ed io ti prendo e m' abbandono intera.	NEDDA: (overcome and yielding). Can I forget, as I see you before me, The spell of love your heart has woven over me? By the words you have spoken, the ties that have bound me, All I want is your love, folded around me. Ah, do not leave me! why must we sever? You have my heart, and I am yours forever!
SILVIO: (stringendoia fra le braccia). Verrai? . . .	SILVIO: (clasping her in his arms). Will you come?
NEDDA: Sì—baciami! . . .	NEDDA: Yes! Kiss me, love!
SILVIO: Tutto scordiamo . . .	SILVIO: Forget the past, think not of tomorrow!
NEDDA: Negli occhi guardami!	NEDDA: Look in my eyes, and kiss away my sorrow.
SILVIO: Sì, ti guardo e ti bacio, t'amo . . . t'amo!	SILVIO: In your dear eyes, I kiss away my sorrow.
SCENA IV.	SCENE IV.
I precedenti, Canio e poi Peppe.	The same. Canio, and then Beppe.
Mentre Silvio e Nedda s' avviano parlando verso il muricciuo arrivano, camminando furtivamente dalla scorciatoia, Canio e Tonio	As Nedda and Silvio go off towards the wall, talking, Canio and Tonio come stealthily by the short path.
TONIO: (ritenendo Canio). Cammina adagio e li sorprenderai. (Canio s' avanza cautamente sempre ritenuto da Tonio noe potendo vedere, dal punto ove si trova, Silvio che scavalca il muricciuolo.)	TONIO: (holding Canio back). Tread lightly, lightly, and you will catch them so! (Canio advances cautiously, still held back by Tonio; they cannot see Silvio getting over the wall.)
SILVIO: (che ha già la metà del corpo dall' altro lato ritenendosi al muro). Ad alta notte laggiù mi terrò. Cauta discendi e mi ritroverai. (Silvio scompare e Canio si appressa all' angolo del teatro.)	SILVIO: (half over the wall). At midnight, dearest, I wait you below! Come to me, love, when the starbeams shine. (Silvio disappears, and Canio approaches the corner of the theatre.)
NEDDA: (a Silvio che sarà scomparso di sotto). A stanotte—e per sempre tua sarò!	NEDDA: Tonight, love, and forever I am yours!
CANIO: (che dal punto ove si trova ode queste parole, dà un urlo). Oh! . . .	CANIO: (who overhears). Ha!
NEDDA: (si volge spaventata e grida verso il muro). Fuggi! (D' un balzo Canio arriva anch' esso al muro; Nedda gli si para dinante ma dopo breve lotta egli la spinge da un canto, scavalca il muro e scompare.—Tonio resta a sinistra guardando Nedda che come inchiodata presso il muro cerca sentire se si ode rumore di lotta mormorando.)	NEDDA: (turns round, frightened, and calls toward the wall). Fly, love! (Canio with one bound reaches the wall; Nedda places herself in front of him. After a short struggle he pushes her into a corner, gets over the wall and disappears. Tonio remains on left, watching Nedda, who, as if pinned to the wall, tries to hear whether they are fighting.)
NEDDA: Aitalo . . . Signor! . . .	NEDDA: Ah, Heaven, preserve him now!
TONIO: (ridendo cinicamente). Ah! . . . ah!	TONIO: (laughing ironically). Ha! ha!
LA VOCE DI CANIO: (di dentro). Vile! t' ascondi!	CANIO: (outside). Coward! where are you?
NEDDA: (al riso di Tonio si è voltata e dice con disprezzo fissandolo). Bravo! Bravo il mio Tonio!	NEDDA: (turning at Tonio's laugh, looking with disgust at him). Well done, well done, then, Tonio.
TONIO: Fo quel che posso!	TONIO: Yes—yes, I did it.
NEDDA: E quello che pensavo!	NEDDA: Just like you, you coward!
TONIO: Ma di far assai meglio non dispero.	TONIO: But next time, I expect to do better!
NEDDA: Mi fai schifo e ribrezzo.	NEDDA: You make me hate and loathe you.
TONIO: Oh, non sai come lieto ne son! (Canio intanto scavalca di nuovo il muro e ritorna in iscena pallido, asciugando il sudore con un fazzoletto di colore oscuro.)	TONIO: Love me, or hate me! It is nothing to me. (Canio re-enters, over the wall, pale, and wiping the perspiration from his forehead.)
CANIO: (con rabbia concentrata). Derisione e scherno! Nulla! Ei ben lo conosce quel sentiero Fa lo stesso; poichè del drudo il nome or mi dirai.	CANIO: So again, she's fooled me. Baffled again! He knows the path too well. But no matter. This moment you shall tell me Your lover's name.
NEDDA: (volgendosi turbata). Chi?	NEDDA: (turning in confusion). Who?
CANIO: (furente). Tu, pel padre eterno! . . . (Cavando dalla cinta lo stiletto.) E se in questo momento qui scannata non t' ho già, gli è perchè pria di lordarla nel tuo fetido sangue, o	CANIO: (furiously). You, by Heaven eternal! And if here now this moment, I have not cut your throat, (drawing dagger from his belt) It's because before I kill you, and svergognata, codesta lama, io vo' il suo nome.—Parla.

NEDDA: Vano è l' insulto.—È muto il labbro mio.

CANIO: (urlando). Il nome, il nome, non tardare o donna!

NEDDA: No, nol dirò giammai . . .

CANIO: (slanciandosi furente col pugnale alzato). Per la madonna! . . .
(Peppe, che sarà entrato dalla sinistra, sulla risposta di Nedda corre a Canio e gli strappa il pugnale che gitta via tra gli alberi.)

PEPPE: Padron! che fate! . . . Per l' amor di Dio . . .
La gente esce di chiesa e a lo spettacolo qui muovo . . . andiamo Canio, via, cal matevi!

CANIO: (dibattendosi). Lasciami Peppe—Il nome, il nome.

PEPPE: Tonio vieni a tenerlo. Andiamo arriva il pubblico.
(Tonio prende Canio per la mano méntre Peppe si volge a Nedda.)
Vi spiegherete.—E voi di lì tiratevi.
Andatevi a vestir,—Sapete, Canio, è violento, ma buono . . .
(Spinge Nedda sotto la tenda e scompare con essa.)

CANIO: (stringendo il capo frat le mani). Infamia! infamia!

TONIO: (piano a Canio, spingendolo sul davanti della scena). Calmatevi padrone.—E meglio fingere; il ganzo tornerà.—Di me fidatevi.
(Canio ha un gesto disperato, ma Tonio spingendolo col gomito, prosegue piano.)
Io la sorveglio—Ora facciam la recita.
Chissà ch' egli non venga a lo spettacolo
e si tradisca! Or via.—Bisogna fingere per riuscir . . .

PEPPE: (uscendo dalle scene). Andiamo, via, vestitevi padrone.—E tu batti la cassa, Tonio.
(Tonio va di dietro al e teatro Peppe anch esso ritorna al' interno, mentre Canio accasciato si avvia lentamente verso la cortina.)

CANIO: Recitar! . . . mentre preso dal delirio non so più quel che dico e quel che faccio!
Eppur . . . è d' uopo . . . sforzati!
Bah, se' tu forse un uom? Tu se' Pagliacci!
Vesti la giubba e la faccia infarina.
La gente paga e rider vuole quà.
E se Arlecchin t' invola Colombina, ridi, Pagliaccio . . . e ognuno applaudirà!
Tramuta in lazzi lo spasmo ed il pianto;
in una smorfia il singhiozzo e 'l dolor . . .
Ridi Pagliaccio, sul tuo amore infranto!
Ridi del duol che t' avvelena il cor!
(Entra commosso sotto la tenda, mentre la tela cade lentamente.)

(Fine del' atto primo.)

ATTO SECONDO.

La stessa scena dell' atto primo.

SCENA PRIMA.

Tonio compare dall'altro lato del teatro colla gran cassa e ra a piazzarsi sull' angolo sinistro del proscenio del teatrino. Intanto la gente arriva da tutte le parti per lo spettacolo e Beppe viene a metters nel banchi per le donne.
Donne, Uomini, Tonio, Nedda, Silvio, Peppe, Canio a Coro.

DONNE: (arrivando). Presto, affrettiamoci svelto, compare,
chè lo spettacolo
dee cominciare.
Cerchiam di metterci ben sul davanti.

TONIO: (picchiando la cassa). Si dà principio; avanti! avanti!

UOMINI: Veh, come corrono
le bricconcelle!
Accomodatevi
comari belle
O Dio, Che correre
per giunger tosto!
(Silvio arriva dal fondo e va a pigliar posto sul devanti a sinistra salutando gli amici.)

TONIO: Si dà principio pigliate posto!

LE DONNE: (cervando sedersi, spingendosi). —Ma non pigiatevi, fa caldo tanto!
—Su; Peppe ajutaci.
V' è posto accanto!
(Nedda esce vestita da Colombina col piatto per incassare i posti.—Peppe cerca di mettere a posto le donne.—Tonio rientra ad teatro portando via la gran cassa.) your blood stains my dagger,

You shameless woman, you will tell me
Who is your lover. Tell me!

NEDDA: Vain are your insults. My lips are sealed forever.

CANIO: (shouting). His name, I tell you. This moment, you shall tell me.

NEDDA: No! No! Never will I tell you.

CANIO: (rushing on her furiously with dagger raised). By Heaven, I'll kill you.
(Beppe, entering left, hearing Nedda's answer, snatches dagger from Canio and throws it away among the trees.)

BEPPE: Ah, stay, good master, for the love of God!
The people! see! they're coming.
Look, where they come from church, to see the play.
Come away. Be calm, I pray.

CANIO: (struggling). Leave me, I tell you. His name, then, his name!

BEPPE: Tonio, come here and hold him.
The people come this way. Don't let them see you.
(Tonio takes Canio by the hand, while Beppe turns to Nedda.)
And Nedda, you go , I say.
Go and dress yourself. You know well, Canio
Is hasty but tender.
(Pushes Nedda under the curtain and exits with her.)

CANIO: (holding his head in both hands). It is shameful, shameful!

TONIO: (in a low voice to Canio, pushing him towards front of stage). Ah! calm yourself, my master. It is best to make believe!
The gallant will return. I am convinced of it.
Trust me to watch her. Now it is time the play began.
(Canio makes a fierce gesture, but Tonio, pushing him by the elbow, comes forward slowly.)
Who knows? Haply the lover will be here tonight,
And will betray it. Come, then, we must dissemble,
If we would win.

BEPPE: (entering, to Canio).
Come, come, go dress yourself, I pray you.
(To Tonio.)
And you play up your drum there, Tonio!
(Tonio goes behind, Beppe re-enters theatre. Canio, worn out with emotion, walks slowly towards the curtain.)

CANIO: To act, with my heart saddened with sorrow.
I know not what I'm saying or what I'm doing.
Yet I must face it. Courage, my heart!
You are not a man; you're but a jester!
On with the motley, the paint and the powder,
The people pay you and want their laugh, you know.
If Harlequin your Columbine has stolen,
Laugh, Punchinello! The world will cry 'Bravo!'
Go hide with laughter your tears and your sorrow, sing and be merry, playing your part,
Laugh, Punchinello, for the love that is ended,
Laugh for the sorrow that is eating your heart.
(Passes under the curtain of the stage theatre, while the curtain slowly falls.)

(End of the first act.)

ACT II.

Scene as in Act I.

SCENE I.

Tonio appears with big drum and takes up his position at the left angle of the theatre. People come from different directions for the performance. Beppe places benches for the women.

WOMEN: (arriving). Quickly, sweet gossips come,
The show's beginning,
Hark, how they beat the drum,
Oh, what a dinning!
Come, quickly, come, I say,
Let's get good places.

TONIO: (beating drum). Walk up and see the play,
All take your places.

MEN: Look how they rush and run,
Ribbons and laces,
Come here and see the fun,
My pretty faces!
Oh, what a crush and rush,
Just for first places!
(Silvio comes from back, and takes his place in front, left, nodding to his friends.)

TONIO: Walk up, walk up, I say,
All take your places!

WOMEN: (sitting down, pushing each other). Why are you pushing, you?
I'm nearly baking;
Help, Beppe, help us, do!
Our places taking.
(Nedda enters dressed as Columbine, holding plate to receive money. Beppe tries to settle the women. Tonio re-enters theatre, carrying away the drum.)

UNA PARTE DEL CORO: (a Peppe). Suvvia, spicciatevi incominciate.
Perchè tardate?
Siam tutti là.

PEPPE: Che furia, diavolo!
Prima pagate.
Nedda, incassate

TUTTI: (volendo pagare nelio stesso tempo). Di qua—di qua!

UN' ALTRA PARTE DEL CORO:
Veh, si accapigliano! . . .
chiamano ajuto! . . .
Ma via, sedetevi
senza gridar.

SILVIO: (piano a Nedda, pagando il posto). Nedda!

NEDDA: Sii cauto!
Non t' ha veduto.

SILVIO: Verrò ad attenderti.
Non obliar! . . .
(Nedda dopo aver lasciato Silvio riceve ancora il prezzo della sedie da altri, e poi rientra anch' essa nel teatro con Peppe.)

CORO GENERALE: Questa commedia incominciate.
Perchè tardate?
Perchè indugiar?
Facciamo strepito.
facciam rumore,
ventitrè ore
suonaron già.
Allo spettacolo
ognuno anela! . . .
(Si ode una lunga e forte scampanellata.)
S' alza la tela!
Silenzio.—Olà.
(Le donne sono parte sedute sui banchi, situati obliquamente, volgendo la faccia alla scena del teatrino; parte in piedi formano gruppe cogli uomini sui rialzo di terra ov' è il grosso albero. Altri uomini piedi lungo le prime quinte a sinistra. Silvio è innanzi ad easi.)

SCENA II.

Commedia.

Nedda (Colombina), Peppe (Arlecchino), Canio (Pagliacci), Tonio (Taddeo), e Silvio.

La tela del teatrino si alza.—La scena, mal dipinta, rappresenta una stanzetta con due porte laterali ed una finestra praticabile in fondo. Un tavolo e due sedie rozze di paglia son sulla destra del teatrine—Nedda in costume da Colombina passeggia ansiosa.

COLOMBINA: Pagliaccio, mio marito, a tar la notte sol ritornerà.
E quello scimunito

SOME OF THE CROWD: (to Beppe). Now, then, begin the play,
Have done your prating!
Why keep us waiting?
We all are here!

BEPPE: Keep back, keep back, I say!
First you must pay, please,
This way, this way, please!

ALL: (trying to pay at once). This way!
This way!

OTHERS: See how they fight their way
To get between us!
You, there! sit down, I say,
Take care, take care!

SILVIO: (in a low voice to Nedda as he pays for his seat). Nedda!

NEDDA: Be careful,
He has not seen us!

SILVIO: Tonight, remember, love!
I shall be there!
(Nedda, leaving Silvio, takes money for more seats, and then re-enters theatre with Beppe.)

FULL CHORUS: Now, then, begin the play,
Have done your prating!
Why keep us waiting?
Begin, I say!
Time to begin!—
Let's make a din!
It's seven o'clock, that's certain!
Ring up the curtain!
Time to begin! We all are in.
(Bell rung loudly.)
Ring up the curtain.
Silence, you there!
Begin! Begin!
(Some of the women sit on benches placed obliquely towards the stage of theatre, others stand with the men on rising ground under tree. Others at wing, left. Silvio among them.)

SCENE II.

The Play.

Nedda (Columbine), Beppe (Harlequin), Canio (Punchinello), Tonio (Taddeo), and Silvio.

Curtain of the theatre rises. Scene: a small room with two side doors, practicable window at back. Nedda as Columbine is walking about anxiously.

COLUMBINE: My husband Punchinello does not Come till morning; empty lies the street!

di Taddeo perchè ancora non è quà!
(Si ode un pizzicar di chitarra all' interno; Colombina corre alla finestra e dà segni d' amorosa impazienza.)

LA VOCE DI ARLECCHINO:
(Peppe, di dentro). O Colombina, il tenero fido Arlecchin
È a te vicin!
Per te chiamando,
e sospirando—aspetta il poverin! . . .
La tua faccetta mostrami, ch' io vo' baciar senza tardar
la tua boccuccia.
Amor mi cruccia—e mi sta a tormentar!
O Colombina schiudimi
il finestrin, che a te vicin
ver te chiamando
e sospirando—è il povero Arlecchin!

COLOMBINA: (ritornando ansiosa sul davanti). Di far il segno covenuto appressa l' istante, ed Arlecchino aspetta! . . .
(Siede ansiosa volgendo le spalle alla porta si destra. Questa si apre e Tonio entra sotto le spoglie del servo Taddeo, con un paniere infilato al braccio sinistro. Egli si arresta a contemplare Nedda cant aria esageratamente tragica, dicendo.)

TADDEO: È dessa! (Poi levando bruscamente al cielo le mani ed il paniere.)
Dei, com'è bel a!
(il pubblico sul teatro ride.)
Se a la rubella
io disvelassi
l' amor mio che commuove sino i sassi!
Lungi è lo sposo.
Perchè non oso?
Soli noi stamo
e senza alcun sospetto! Orsù Proviamo (Sospiro lungo, esagerato.)
Oh! . . .
(Il pubblico ride.)

COLOMBINA: (volgendosi). Sei tu, bestia?

TADDEO: (immobile). Quell' io sono, si!

COLOMBINA: E Pagliaccio è partito?

TADDEO: (come sopra). Egli parti!

COLOMBINA: Che fai così impalato?
Il pollo hai tu comprato?

TADDEO: Eccolo, vergin divina!
(Precipitandosi in ginocchio, offrendo colle due mani il paniere. Colombina che si appressa.)
Ed anzi eccoci entrambi ai piedi

Taddeo's at the market—lazy fellow!
All is safe and sweet!
(A guitar is heard off. Columbine runs to window, with signs of love and impatience.)

HARLEQUIN: (behind the scene).
O Columbine, unbar to me
Your lattice high.
I watch and sigh,
Longing to hear you
And be near you, as the hours go by.
Ah, show your little face to me.
So dear you are
You have my heart.
Ah, do not vex me,
Tease and perplex me! how can I live
Without your loving heart?
O Columbine, then listen to me,
Unbar, the door.
Come down, my star!
Come down, and love me,
See, where alone I sigh!
For if you love me not,
Then let me die!

COLUMBINE: (returning anxiously to front). Ah, yes! it is now love's hour entrancing!
The moment's advancing!
And Harlequin is waiting there!
(Seats herself, with troubled looks, with her back to door on right, through which Tonio, dressed as Taddeo, enters with basket on left arm. He stops, and gazes at Nedda with exaggerated expression of love.)

TADDEO: Behold her! (Suddenly raising his hands and the basket to ceiling.) Ah! how surpassing fair!
(The audience laugh.)
Ah! just to tell her, rebellious maiden,
Just to tell her the love with which I'm laden!
All safe and clear, now!
No husband near, now!
Why should I fear, now!
There's no one to suspect me.
Come, Love! Direct me!
(Loud and exaggerated sigh. The audience laugh.)

COLUMBINE: (turning). Well, fool? Is it you?

TADDEO: (without moving). Yes, it is I.

COLUMBINE: Have you seen Punchinello?

TADDEO: (as before). He went just now.

COLUMBINE: Come, then, what were you sent for?
Where is the fowl you went for?

TADDEO: (throwing himself on his knees before Columbine and offering basket as he approaches).
Low at your feet it is lying,
See us both.

tuoi.
Poichè l' ora è suonata, o Colombina, di svelarti il mio cor. Di', udirmi vuoi?
Dal dì . . .
(Colombina va alla finestra la schiude e fa un segno; poi va versa Taddeo.)

COLOMBINA: (strappandogli il paniere). Quanto spendesti dal trattore?

TADDEO: Una e cinquanta. Da quel dì il mio core . . .

COLOMBINA: (presso alla tavola). Non seccarmi Taddeo!
(Arlecchino scavalca la finestra, depone a terra una bottiglia che h (sotto il braccio, e poi va verso Taddeo mentre questi finge non verderlo.))

TADDEO: (a Colombina, con intenzione). So che sei pura
E casta al par di neve! E ben che dura
Ti mostri, ad obliarti non riesco!

ARLECCHINO: (lo piglia per l' orecchio dandogli un calcio e lo obbliga a levarzo). Va a pigliar fresco! . . .
(Il pubblico ride.)

TADDEO: (retrocedendo comicamente verso la porta a destra). Numi! s' aman! m' arrendo ai detti tuoi.
(Ad Arlecchino.)
Vi benedico! . . . là . . . veglio su voi!
(Taddeo esce. Il pubblico ride ed applaude.)

COLOMBINA: Arlecchin!

ARLECCHINO: (con affetto esagerato). Colombina! Alfin s' arrenda
Ai nostri prieghi amor!

COLOMBINA: Facciam merenda!
(Colombina prende dal tiretto due posate e due coltelli Arlecchino va a prender labottiglia, poi entrambi sieaono a tavola uno in faccia all altro.)

COLOMBINA: Guarda, mio ben, che splendida cenetta preparai!

ARLECCHINO: Guarda, amor mio, che nettare divino t' apportai!
(A due.)
L' amor ama gli effluvii del vin, de la cucina!

ARLECCHINO: Mia ghiotta Colombina!

COLOMBINA: Amabile beon!

(Pointing to fowl in basket.)
Ah! I implore you,
Luckless couple here before you,
O Columbine—be mine, be mine!
Hear, O maiden tender!
From the day—
(Columbine opens window and makes signal.)

COLUMBINE: (turning to Taddeo). How much, I say?
(Snatching basket.)

TADDEO: Just one and three-pence!—Hear me say
How I love and adore you!

COLUMBINE: (near to table). Get away, get away!
(Harlequin enters by window, places bottle which he is carrying under his arm on floor, and goes towards Taddeo, who pretends not to see him.)

TADDEO: (to Columbine pointedly). Pure! Yes, I know you are, Pure as the snowflake falling.
Why will you close your heart,
Unto my calling?
Must I leave you and forsake you?

HARLEQUIN: (taking him by the ear and kicking him up). Yes, or I'll make you!
(The audience laugh.)

TADDEO: (retiring comically to door, right; to Harlequin). Heavens! You love her!
Then I must hand her over!
(Raising his hands.)
Bless you, my children!
(Retiring to door.)
Yonder I will watch over you!
(The audience laugh and applaud.)

COLUMBINE: Dear Harlequin!

HARLEQUIN: (in exaggerated style). Sweet Columbine! Ah, how we've prayed, dear,
And Love has heard our prayer.

COLUMBINE: (pointing to the table on which she has placed the fowl, knives, and forks, etc.) The supper's laid, dear!
See here, see here, my dearest dear,
The supper that I've bought you!

HARLEQUIN: (pointing to the wine which he places on the table). See here, my love, my dainty dove,
The splendid wine I've brought you!

BOTH: (sitting down opposite each other). For love is very fond of wine,
And partial to the kitchen.

HARLEQUIN: My greedy little Columbine!

COLUMBINE: My most bewitching friend!

ARLECCHINO: (prendendo un' ampolletta che ha nella tunica).
Prendi questo narcotico, dallo a Pagliaccio pria che s' addormenti,
e poi fuggiamo insiem.

COLOMBINA: Sì, porgi.

TADDEO: (spalanca la porta a destra a traversa la scena tremando esageratamente). Attenti! . . .
Pagliaccio è là tutto stravolto . . . ed armi cerca! Ei sa tutto. Io corro a barricarmi!
(Entra precipitoso a sinistra e chiude la porta. Il pubblico ride.)

COLOMBINA: (ad Arlecchino). Via!

ARLECCHINO: (scavalcando la finestra). Versa il filtro ne la tazza sua.
(Scompare.)
(Canio in costume da Pagliaccio, compare sulla porta a destra.)

COLOMBINA: (alla finestra). A stanotte.—E per sempre io sarò tua!

CANIO: (porta la mano al cuore e mormora a parte). Nome di Dio! . . . quelle stesse parole! . . .
coraggio!
(Forte.)
Un uomo era con te.

NEDDA: Che fole! Ser briaco?

CANIO: (fissando la). Briaco! sì . . . da un' ora! . . .

NEDDA: (riprendendo la commedia). Tornasti presto.

CANIO: (con intezione). Ma in tempo!
T' accora dolce sposina.
(Reprende la commedia.)
Ah! sola ti credea
(mostrando la tavola)
e due posti son là.

NEDDA: Con me sedea Taddeo che là si chiuse per paura.
(Verso la porta a sinistra.)
Orsù, parla! . . .

TONIO: (di dentro fingendo tremare ma con intenzione). Credetela. Essa è pura! . . .
E abborre dal mentir quel labbro pio!
(Il pubblico ride forte.)

CANIO: (rabbioso al pubblico).
Per la morte!
(Poi a Nedda sordamente.)
Smettiamo. Ho Dritto anch' io d' agir come ogni altr' uomo. Il nome suo.

NEDDA: (fredda e sorridente). Di chi?

HARLEQUIN: (taking a vial from his breast). Take then this little philter fine,
Give it to your husband,
Pour it in his wine,
And then let's fly, my dear!

COLUMBINE: Yes—give it to me!

TADDEO: (entering by door, on right, crosses stage, trembling in exaggerated style). Beware! Your husband is here!
For weapons seeking, with anger stamping,
All's discovered! I'd better be leaving now.
(Exit hurriedly through door, left. The audience laugh.)

COLUMBINE: (to Harlequin). Fly, then.

HARLEQUIN: (getting through window). Pour the philter in his wine, love!
(Disappears.)
(Canio, dressed as Punchinello, appears at door, right.)

COLUMBINE: Tonight and for ever, I am yours love!

CANIO: (with his hand to his heart, aside). God! am I dreaming?
What she said this morning!
Courage!
(Advancing for his part.)
Someone was with you here!

NEDDA: What nonsense! You've been drinking.

CANIO: (looking at her). Been drinking! . . . I think so!

NEDDA: (resuming the play). You're back too early.

CANIO: (pointedly). Too early! You fear!
I'm sorry, my sweetest, my dearest?
(Resuming the play.)
Ah, no you were not lonely.
(Pointing to the table.)
Who has been with you here?

NEDDA: The Fool Taddeo—only!
In fact, he's in the cupboard hiding!
(Pointing to door, left.)
Come out! . . . explain!

TONIO: (from within). Believe me, sir, your wife is true. She'd never grieve you!
(Pretending to be afraid, pointedly.)
Those pious lips of hers would never deceive you.
(The audience laugh.)

CANIO: (furious; to the audience).
To the death.
(To Nedda, quietly).
Do not trifle, false woman,
Do you forget that I am also human?
Tell me his name!

NEDDA: (coldly, with a forced smile). Whose name?

CANIO: Vo' il nome de l' amante tuo, del drudo infame a cui ti desti in braccio
O turpe donna!

NEDDA: (sempre recitando la commedia). Pagliaccio! Pagliaccio!

CANIO: No, Pagliaccio non son; se il viso è pallido è di vergogna, e smania di vendetta!
L' uom riprende i suoi dritti, e il cor che sanguina vuol sangue a lavar l'onta, o maledetta! . . .
No, Pagliaccio non son! . . . Son quei che stolido ti raccolse orfanella in su la via quasi morta di fame, e un nome offriati ed un amor ch' era febbre e follìa!
(Cade come affranto sulla seggiola.)

GRUPPI DI DONNE A PARTE: Comare, mi fa piangere!
—Par vera questa scena!

UN GRUPPO DI UOMINI: Zitte laggiù.—Che diamine!

SILVIO: (a parte). Io mi ritengo appena!

CANIO: (riprendendosi ed animandosi a poco a poco). Sperai, tanto il delirio accecato m' aveva, se non amor, pietà . . . mercè!
Ed ogni sacrifizio
al cor, lieto, imponeva,
e fidente credeva,
più che in Dio stesso, in te!
Ma il vizio alberga sol ne l' alma tua negletta;
tu viscere non hai . . . sol legge è 'l senso a te . . .
Va, non merti il mio duol, o meretrice abbietta, vo' ne lo sprezzo mio schiacciarti sotto i piè! . . .

LA FOLLA: (estusiasta). Bravo! . . .

NEDDA: (fredda, ma seria). Ebben se mi guidichi
Di te indegna, mi scaccia in questo istante.

CANIO: (sogghignando). Ah! ah! di meglio chiedere
Non dèi che correr testo al caro amante.
Sei furba!—No, per Dio, tu resterai
E 'l nome del tuo ganzo mi dirai.

NEDDA: (cercando riprendere la commedia sorridendo forzatemente). Suvvia, così terribile davver non ti credeo!
Qui nulla v' ha di tragico.
(Verso la porta a sinistra.)
Vieni a dirgli, o Taddeo, che l' uom seduto or dianzi a me vicino era . . . il pauroso ed innocuo

CANIO: Tell me, then, by God who made me, Within whose shameless arms have you betrayed me?

NEDDA: (continuing the play). Punchinello! Punchinello!

CANIO: No! Punchinello no more!
I am a man again,
With aching heart and anguish deep and human,
Calling for blood to wash away the stain,
Your foul dishonor, you shameless woman!
No! Punchinello no more! Fool that I sheltered you!
And made you mine by every tender token!
Of the love that I gave you, what is there left to me?
What have I now, but a heart that is broken?
(Falls on chair, overcome.)

WOMEN:
(aside to each other). Sweet gossip, ah, it makes me weep,
So true it all is seeming.

MEN: Silence, down there. Keep quiet.

SILVIO: (aside). Ah, can it be I'm dreaming?

CANIO: (recovering himself, and becoming gradually more excited). I hoped in my passion so blindly confiding,
If not for love, for pity sweet.
I loved you more than God in heaven abiding,
All my life and my being I laid at your faithless feet!
I dreamt you were true! I wish I never had met you!
I thought of you, pure and stainless as the morn.
You have broken my heart, I live but to forget you,
You had my love, but now you have my hate and scorn!

AUDIENCE: (with enthusiasm). Bravo!

NEDDA: (coldly, and in earnest). Well, then, if you deem me so unworthy,
Come, let me go and leave you.

CANIO: (laughing). No doubt! no doubt! and set you free,
And let your lover's arms receive you!
No! you shall remain, I swear it.
I want your lover's name—Come, then—declare it!

NEDDA: (trying to resume the play, with forced smile). I never knew, my dear, that you Were such a tragic fellow!
(going left, towards the door.)
You here will see no tragedy,
My dearest Punchinello!
The man who's been to dine with me,
And caused you all this bother,

Arlecchino!
(Risa tosta represse dall' attitudine di Canio.)

CANIO: (terribile). Ah! tu mi sfidi!
E ancor non l' hai capita Ch' io non ti cedo? Il nome, o la tua vita! (Assieme.)

NEDDA: (prorompendo). No, per mia madre! Indegna esser poss' io, quello che vuoi, ma vil non son, per Dio!
Di quel tuo sdegno è l' amor mio più forte . . .
Non parlerò. No . . . A costo de la morte! . . .

VOCI TRA LA FOLLA: Fanno davvero? Sembrami seria la cosa e scura!
(Peppe vuol uscire dalla porta a sinistra, ma Tonio lo ritiene.)

PEPPE: Bisogna uscire, Tonio.

TONIO: Taci sciocco! . . .

PEPPE: Ho paura! . . .

SILVIO: (a parte). Oh la strana commedia!
Io non resisto più! . . .

CANIO: (urlando dà di piglio a un coltello sul tavolo). Il nome! Il nome!

NEDDA: (sfidandolo). No!

SILVIO: (snudando il pugnale). Santo diavolo! . . .
Fa davvero . . .
(Le donne che indietreggiano spaventate, rovesciano i banchi ed impediscono agli uomini di avanzare, ciò che obbliga Silvio a lottare per arrivare all scena. Intanto Canio al parossismo della collera, ha afferrata Nedda in un attimo e la colpisce per di dietro mentre essa cerca di correre verso il pubblico.)

CANIO: (a Nedda) Di morte negli spasimi Lo dirai!

LA FOLLA E PEPPE: (che cerca svincolarsi da Tonio). Ferma!

CANIO: A te!

NEDDA: (cadendo agonizzando). Soccorso . . . Silvio!

SILVIO: (che e quasi arrivato alla scena). Nedda!
(Alla voce di Silvio, Canio si volge come una belva, balza presse di tui è in un attimo lo ferisce, dicendo.)

CANIO: Ah! sei tu? Ben venga!
(Silvio cade come fulminato.)

GLI UOMINI DEL CORO: Arresta aïta!

LE DONNE: (urlandino). Gesummaria! . . .
(Mentre parecchi si precipitano verso Canio per disarmarlo ed arrestarlo, egli, immobile, istupidito lascia cadere il coltello dicendo.)

CANIO: La commedia è finita! . . .
(La tela cade.)

FINE.

Was only Harlequin, you see,
Poor Harlequin, no other!
(Stops laughing, seeing Canio's attitude.)

CANIO: (in fury). Ah! do you mock me? My rage you still defy.
Say who's your lover—this moment—or you die!

NEDDA: (bursting out). No! By my mother's soul, unworthy though you call me,
I will not tell you, whatever fate befalls me!

VOICES in the CROWD: Are they in earnest?
What are they doing?
(Beppe tries to pass through door on left; Tonio detains him.)

BEPPE: Let us be going, Tonio!

TONIO: Silence, fool!

BEPPE: I am afraid!

SILVIO: (aside). Oh, the play is a strange one,
I can bear it no more!

CANIO: (yelling, takes knife from table). His name! His name!

NEDDA: (defiantly). No!

SILVIO: (drawing his dagger). What in the devil's name!
. . . He's in earnest!
(The women draw back frightened, overturning the benches, preventing the men from getting to the front. Silvio struggles to get clear. Meantime Canio has seized Nedda, and stabbed her from behind, as she tries to escape to the audience.)

CANIO: Take that, and that!
In your last dying agony you'll tell!

VOICES IN AUDIENCE: Stop him!

NEDDA: Ah! Help me, Silvio!
(Dies.)

SILVIO: (nearly reaching her). Nedda!
(At the voice of Silvio, Canio turns savagely, leaps at him, and stabs him.)

CANIO: So! It is you, then? It is well! (Silvio falls dead.)

MEN: Help! help! arrest him!

WOMEN: (screaming). Father of pity!
(Several of the audience throw themselves on Canio to disarm and arrest him; he stands stupefied and drops the knife.)

CANIO: The comedy is ended.

Curtain.

Zazà (1900)

MUSIC AND LIBRETTO BY RUGGIERO LEONCAVALLO

This four-act opera, set to a libretto by the composer (based upon a play by Charles Simon and Pierre Berton), premiered at the Teatro Lirico in Milan on November 10, 1900. The setting is France at the end of the 19th century. Zazà is a café singer at the Alcazar Theatre in Saint-Étienne, presented by the impresario Courtois. She has a major success there with her partner, Cascart—she is also Cascart's mistress. After the performance a journalist, Bussy, introduces her to his friend Milio Dufresne from Paris. She falls in love with him, but he treats her with disdain as he thinks that performers are flighty and that relations with them spell trouble. She arranges to see him alone several evenings later, and he is unable to resist her charms. Three months later, Dufresne and Zazà are living together. He now tells her that he must go to America for an indefinite period of time. Her former lover, Cascart, informs her that he has seen him with another woman in Paris. He suggests that she accept the way things are and return to her career. She is enraged and jealous and immediately goes to Paris. Dufresne is back at his home in Paris, where he has a wife and daughter. Conscious of his responsibility to them, he knows that he must leave the country in order to break off his affair once and for all. Zazà comes to his house disguised as a friend of his wife's. She sees a letter left open on a table and realizes the truth of the situation, compounded by the entrance of Dufresne's daughter. She doesn't have the heart to destroy Dufresne's family and leaves in deep despair. She returns to Saint-Étienne and is offered a contract by Courtois, but she refuses to return to work until she meets Dufresne one last time. Their meeting is stormy: Zazà tells him that she knows the truth, and as he grows more and more angry she pretends that she has told his wife about their affair. His anger grows uncontrollable, and he declares his total love and devotion to his wife and his disgust at his relationship with her. Zazà admits that she lied about telling his wife and sends him away.

■ Atto Primo.

Il Palcoscenico Dell'Alcazar di St. Étienne, visto lateralmente. — Una buona metà della scena a sinistra rappresenta il camerino di Zazà.—A destra della scena, sul davanti, un tavolo con varie sedie per gli assidui del concerto che hanno libero accesso sulla scena.—Nell'angolo, sempre sul davanti a destra, la porta che dà nella sala di spettacolo.—Indi tutto'il lato destro della scena presso le quinte è occupato in senso longitudinale dal fondale che per mezzo di una porta dà sulla scena del Caffè-Concerto.—In faccia a questa porta, pure in senso longitudinale, è il fondino che maschera al pubblico che si suppone essere nella sala del caffè-concerto, l'interno del palcoscenico.—Il fondo della scena che rappresenta l'altro muro laterale del palcoscenico, è ingombro di quinte, scene arrotolate, oggetti di ginnastica, ecc.—Nel camerino di Zazà, nel quale si entra per una porta situata nel mezzo della scena, quasi in faccia al tavolo, sono due o tre sedie, una toletta, un paravento; e sui muri, sospesi gli abiti di Zazà.— All'alzarsi della tela la porta che dà sulla scena è aperta, e si vede Floriana che saluta mientre si sentono all'interno applausi e grida di bis. Floriana esce di nuovo, e siccome la porta resta aperta la si sente cantare la strofa della sua canzone accompagnata dal vociare della folla.—Intanto Michelin, Courtois ed un altro signore insiemea Claretta, in costume corto da concerto, vengono a sedersi al tavolo sul davanti a destra, e comandano le bibite ad Augusto.—In fondo si scorgono il pompiere di servizio che gira sorvegliando, due macchinisti e varî artisti del concerto.—Movimento continuo sulla scena.—Qua e là grossi avvisi con: È vietato fumare, ma tutti fumano sigari e sigarette, compreso il pompiere di servizio.

■ Act I.

Side view of stage of the "Alcazar" at St. Étienne; left half of stage shows Zazà's dressing-room. At r. front, a table with some chairs for the habitués of the Concert Hall, who have free access to stage. In the corner r. front of stage, a door leads to auditorium of Hall. Thence all the right side of the stage near the wings is occupied longitudinally by the back drop through which a door opens on the stage of the Concert Hall. In front of this door, also longitudinally placed, is a screen which hides rear of stage from the audience supposed to be in the Concert Hall. The back drop is supposed to represent the other side wall of the stage, and is littered with rolled-up scenery, wings, flies, tumbling apparatus, trapeze, etc. Entrance to Zazà's dressing-room in center partition, almost in line with table r.; there are two or three chairs, a dressing table, a screen; along the walls hang Zazà's costumes. When the curtain rises, the door l. which leads to stage of Concert Hall is open, and Floriana is seen bowing in response to applause and encore calls offstage. As the door remains open, Floriana is visible as she repeats her song, which the audience cheers. Meanwhile Michelin, Courtois and another gentleman with Claretta, in short stage costume, take seats around the table at r. front, and give orders for drinks to Augusto. At back of stage a fireman is on duty, two machinists and many vaudeville artists standing about. Lively coming and going on stage. Signs with "No Smoking" prominent about stage, but all smoke cigars and cigarettes, the fireman on duty included.

FLORIANA: (cantando all'interno) So che son capricciosa
e sventatella,
che, come l'api, adoro svolazzar;
non son nata per far la monachella
e vivo sol per ridere e scherzar.
So pur che ad ogni giogo son rubella, che in amore mi piace di cangiar, che mi diverto ad ogni gherminella, eppur, s'io vo', la testa fo' girar!
Che s'io vi fo' l'occhietto, mio signor,
se lancio un sorrisetto
seduttor! . . .
tremante, io ci scommetto,
a' piedi miei v'udrò giurarmi eterno affetto mentr' io riderò!

FLORIANA: (singing offstage)
I know well that I am gay and capricious;
Like the bees I flutter on from flower to flower!
I was not born for weeping and for sighing,
I live but for the pleasure of the hour.
Free as a bird, no tie can ever hold me,
My heart I give now here, now there awhile:
My life is just a round of love and laughter,
None can resist the magic of my smile:
If I give you just one smile,
Yes, just one,
All your reason, gentle sirs,
Will be gone.

MICHELIN: (mentre Floriana canta) Augusto!

AUGUSTO: (accorrendo al tavolo) Pronti!

MICHELIN: Birra.
(poi a Claretta)
E voi, su, che prendete?

CLARETTA: Un kümmel, grazie.

COURTOIS: Io prendo una gran tazza; ho sete.

DUCLOU: (gridando mentre appare a destra)
Attenti i clowns!
(Due clowns portando bizzarri strumenti musicali giungono dal fondo a sinistra e dopo aver scambiato saluti amichevoli con le persone sedute al tavolo vanno a guardarsi ad uno specchio che sarà situato sul muro di divisione nel mezzo, accanto alla porta del camerino di Zazà, e si tengono pronti ad entrare in iscena.—Floriana finisce' la strofa; grandi applausi, essa saluta nuovamente e si avanza verso il tavolo mentre Duclou suona il campanello elettrico per annunciare l'entrata dei clowns.)

MICHELIN, COURTOIS, CLARETTA ed IL SIGNORE: (a Floriana)
Ma brava! ma brava! che successo!

FLORIANA: Stasera sono in voce.

COURTOIS: (galantemente)
Sempre!

FLORIANA: (squadrandolo con fare insolente) Ma guarda!
Adesso divien galante!
È vero che Zazà l' ha piantato!

COURTOIS: Come?!

FLORIANA: Come si pianta!
(ironica) Il mio turno è arrivato?
(salutando con affettazione)
Troppa grazia!

DUCLOU: (ai due clowns) In iscena!
(I clowns entrano in iscena suonando stonato e sono salutati da applausi.—Duclou che si terrà presso alla porta che dà sulla scena, la socchiude di tanto in tanto come per guardare nella sala; e si sentono dei frammenti musicali eseguili da istrumenti strani.)

MICHELIN: (a Floriana che si sarà seduta ed avrà ordinato da bere) Di', stasera si prova finito lo spettacolo la gran "rivista" nuova di Bussy?

FLORIANA: (di cattivo umore)
Ma . . . purtroppo!

Here at my feet you'll be sighing,
Vowing you'll love me forever!
While for my favor you're vying,
Laughing, I'll trip away!

MICHELIN: (while Floriana sings) Augusto!

AUGUSTO: (hurries to table)
Here, sir!

MICHELIN: Beer —
(then to Claretta)
And you, what can I get you?

CLARETTA: A cocktail, thank you.

COURTOIS: I'm dry—buy me a big one, I'll let you!

DUCLOU: (shouting as he appears from right) You clowns! you're next!
(Two clowns with bizarre instruments come from upstage l. and greet those seated at table. They take a final look at themselves in mirror hung against center partition, near Zazà's dressing-room door and then make ready to go on. Floriana finishes her encore to hearty applause. She returns bowing and comes towards table while Duclou rings electric bell announcing the clown number.)

MICHELIN, COURTOIS, CLARETTA AND THE OTHER GENTLEMAN: (to Floriana) Bravo, splendid—an ovation!

FLORIANA: My voice is in condition.

COURTOIS: (gallantly) Always!

FLORIANA: (looks at him insolently) You fill me with elation.
I think you flatter!—
So Zazà gave you the mitten?

COURTOIS: How?!

FLORIANA: As is her habit:
(ironically)
Is it my turn now to be smitten?
(bows low with affectation)
This is an honor!

DUCLOU: (to the two clowns)
You go on now!
(Clowns run off to concert stage banging instruments discordantly. Wild applause offstage. Duclou remains near door, opening on stage, which he leaves ajar from time to time, as though looking offstage into hall; whenever door is opened, the weird clown music becomes audible.)

MICHELIN: (to Floriana who sits down and orders drink) Tell me—is it true
That after the show you try the new "Review" by Bussy?

FLORIANA: (crossly) More's the pity!

MICHELIN: (sorridendo) Ciò non ti garba?

FLORIANA: (scattando) Affatto!
Questo sarà un bel fiasco!
Già, quasi tutto l'atto è per Zazà! . . .
la Diva! . . .

MICHELIN: (ridendo) Sempre la stessa storia! Contro Zazà!!

FLORIANA: (levandosi di scatto)
Perdono!
Che sciocca!
La sua gloria, come Bussy, tu canti sempre nel Gazzettino, ed io me lo scordavo! . . .
So a mente il fervorino!
(Simona arriva. Saluta e siede al tavolo. Tutti ridono. Natalia arriva dal fondo a sinistra, va ad aprire il camerino di Zazà ed entra.)

COURTOIS: (interrompe Floriana vedendo Natalia) È qui che arriva.
All'erta!

FLORIANA: (stizzosa) All'inferno la stella con l'astronomo!

COURTOIS: (sorpreso) Che astronomo? farnetichi!

FLORIANA: Cascart, l'amante suo che l'ha scoperta!
(Floriana siede volgendo le spalle al fondo del teatro donde giunge Zazà, che tutti si volgono a salutare.)

ZAZÀ: (allegramente appressandosi al tavolo) Salute, ragazzi.

MICHELIN, COURTOIS, CLARETTA e SIMONA: Zazà, buona sera.

ZAZÀ: (a Claretta e Simona) Addio, mie piccine.
(Scambia un'occhiata di odio con Floriana e poi chiede a Courtois e Michelin) È giunto Bussy?

MICHELIN: No, ancora il collega non vidi stasera.

ZAZÀ: (con interesse) E il suo fido amico Dufresne?

MICHELIN: Non è qui.

ZAZÀ: (delusa) Ah! . . . vado a vestirmi.
(fa un passo verso il camerino)

DUCLOU: (che sarà venuto avanti al giunger di Zazà) Però, senza fretta;
C' è tempo, sai.

ZAZÀ: (dando la mano a Duclou) Grazie.
(entra nel camerino)

DUCLOU: A te, su, Claretta.
(In questo punto i clowns rientrano salutando mentre si sentono applausi prolungati all'interno.—Poi Duclou suona il campanello come prima, si

MICHELIN: (smiling) You do not like it?

FLORIANA: (spitefully)
Frightful!!
This show is doomed to failure—
I'm not spiteful,
But it's all star—all Zazà—

MICHELIN: (laughing) Always the same old story:
Down with Zazà!

FLORIANA: (rises abruptly) Excuse me—this is foolish!
With her glory,
Like Bussy, you fill columns—rank and rotten—
I know your stuff by heart—but I'd forgotten!
(Simona enters; she greets the others and sits down. All are laughing except Floriana. Natalia enters from back of stage l., opens door of Zazà's dressing-room and goes in.) COURTOIS: (seeing Natalia, interrupts Floriana) I think she is coming—be careful!

FLORIANA: (viciously) Confound the astronomer and star!

COURTOIS: (surprised) Astronomer?—
You must be dreaming!

FLORIANA: Cascart, her lover, who has made her!
(Floriana sits down with her back turned to rear of stage, whence Zazà approaches; all others greet her effusively.)

ZAZÀ: (gayly approaching the table) Hello, everybody!

MICHELIN, COURTOIS, CLARETTA AND SIMONA: Hello, Zazà, how are you?

ZAZÀ: (to Claretta and Simona)
Well, girls, how are things going?
(Exchanges a glance of hatred with Floriana; then addresses Courtois and Michelin)
Have you seen Bussy?

MICHELIN: No, my colleague seems to be still absent.

ZAZÀ: (eagerly) And how about his faithful friend Dufresne?

MICHELIN: He's not here.

ZAZÀ: (disappointed) Oh!—I must dress for business!
(turns to go to her dressing-room)

DUCLOU: (who had come forward before Zazà's entrance)
Don't get in a flurry—
There is time a-plenty.

ZAZÀ: (shakes hands with Duclou) Thank you.
(Goes into dressing-room)

DUCLOU: Next, Claretta—hurry!
(The Clowns here reënter, while hearty applause is heard offstage. Then Duclou rings bell as before—prelude to Claretta's song is heard, she goes off through door sente il preludio della canzone di Claretta, questa entra in iscena, e Duclou chiude la porta.—Zazà, entrata nel suo camerino, comincia a svestirsi, si trucca ed avrà finito di mettere l'abito corto da concerto solo quando Bussy giungerà.—Mentre Claretta entra in iscena, dalla porta a destra che dà nella sala entra Malardot, il proprietario del Concerto, con la pipa in bocca, ed intanto appare dal fondo Lartigon in abito nero e cravatta bianca.— Quando Claretta sarà uscita, due cantanti in costume arrivano dal fondo, vanno al tavolo, siedono e bevono con Simona, Courtois e l'altro Signore.)	to concert stage; Duclou closes door. Zazà, having entered her dressing-room, begins to undress, then makes up and does not finish with change to short stage costume until Bussy arrives. When Claretta goes to concert stage, Malardot, the proprietor of the Concert Hall, enters from auditorium, through the door extreme r. He has a pipe in his mouth. Meanwhile Lartigon, in a dress suit and white tie, comes from upstage. As soon as Claretta goes off, two singers in costume enter from upstage and sit down at table to drink with Simona, Courtois and the other gentleman.)

MICHELIN: (andando incontro a Malardot) Ecco il padron.	MICHELIN: (meeting Malardot) See who is coming!
MALARDOT: (levando il berretto per salutare Michelin, Courtois e l'altro Signore) Signori!	MALARDOT: (raises cap to Michelin, Courtois and the other man) Good evening!
MICHELIN: (allegramente) Va bene. . . ! Quanta gente! È contento?	MICHELIN: (brightly) How's business? Fine, I'm thinking— Sold-out houses?
MALARDOT: Non troppo. Si beve poco o niente! (scorgendo Lartigon) Ah! udite!	MALARDOT: It's crowded—but they're slow at drinking. (catches sight of Lartigon) Say—listen!
LARTIGON: (salutando con affettazione) Direttore!	LARTIGON: (bows formally) At your service.
MALARDOT: Spero che ci direte un monologo allegro, e non in versi. Avete un repertorio . . .	MALARDOT: I hope you are reciting Some funny monologue—not one in verses—exciting! Or full of spice—
LARTIGON: (interrompendolo con severità) Classico! La morte d'Ermione: Amleto fra le tombe: La funebre orazione di Bossuet! . . .	LARTIGON: (interrupts with dignity) Hamlet's soliloquy, that grand creation, Hermione's death and Bossuet's funeral oration, Are all classics—
MALARDOT: (scoppiando) Saranno classici, ma, per Dio, non sono punto allegri!	MALARDOT: (explosively) They may be classics, I admit, But they're not funny—
LARTIGON: (con ironia) Nè Bossuet, nè io teniamo a farvi ridere.	LARTIGON: (with irony) Neither Bossuet nor I are bent on mirth and laughter—
MALARDOT: E torto entrambi avete.	MALARDOT: Then you won't make a hit!
LARTIGON: Ma l'arte . . .	LARTIGON: For Art's sake—
MALARDOT: (interrompendolo) L'arte . . . (vede un cameriere che traversa la scena con un vassojo di tazze di birra) Caspita! rovinarmi volete? La birra senza spuma si serve? Nel versare, una tazza su cinque bisogna-guadagnare con tanto di solino! Andate! . . . (poi a Lartigon) Mio signore, l'arte è ciò che i clienti mette di buon umore.	MALARDOT: (interrupting) Art— (sees waiter crossing stage with tray full of beer glasses) See here! is it my ruin you are after, To serve beer without foam? From each five glasses With collars you make six; that always passes! Now run along! (then to Lartigon) Remember, you there, sonny, Art is what pleases patrons and what brings in real money.
MICHELIN: (ridendo a Malardot) Bravo!! (va verso il fondo con Malardot) (Lartigon crolla le spalle con disprezzo e va a sedersi al tavolo.—Augusto giunge dalla porta che dà nella sala portando un gran mazzo di fiori, delle carte da visita, due bottiglie di sciampagna, e va a bussare al camerino di Zazà.—Natalia socchiude un po' l'uscio, ed Augusto fa passare i fiori e lo sciampagna; poi si allontana e scompare dal fondo.—Courtois addita a Floriana ciò che Augusto porta a Zazà, questa si leva di scatto furibonda e va via pel fondo, in collera.—In questo punto Claretta finisce, la porta si schiude e la si vede salutare mentre si applaude, poi essa ridiscende sul davanti della scena.—Dal fondo ritornano Malardot e Michelin mentre Lartigon si alza per prepararsi ad entrare in iscena.)	MICHELIN: (laughing, to Malardot) That's right! (He goes upstage with Malardot) (Lartigon shrugs shoulders contemptuously and sits at table. Augusto comes from door r. front, carrying large bouquet, some visiting cards and two bottles of champagne. He knocks at Zazà's door; Natalia receives flowers and champagne. Augusto then withdraws upstage. Courtois calls Floriana's attention to the offerings brought for Zazà and she rises in a temper; exit at back of stage. Claretta here ends her number, the door is opened and she is seen bowing while audience applauds. Then she comes downstage. Malardot and Michelin return from upstage, while Lartigon gets ready to go on for his number.)
DUCLOU: (a Lartigon, mentre suona il campanello) Che dite?	DUCLOU: (to Lartigon, while he rings bell) What's yours now?
LARTIGON: (con importanza) Il monologo di Ruy-Blas! (Entra in iscena, si sentono le prime parole del monologo; poi la porta si chiude.)	LARTIGON: (very important) The soliloquy Of Ruy Blas! (He goes on; the first words of monologue are heard—then the door closes.)
MALARDOT: (sul davanti, in collera) Ehi, Duclou! (Duclou accorre) appena termina, una buona fischiata, e poi gli lacero la scrittura!	MALARDOT: (comes forward angrily) See here, Duclou! (Duclou hurries over to him) When he has finished, I want a storm of hisses and then I can cancel his engagement!
DUCLOU: Sta ben. (Corre all'uscio che dà nella sala di spettacolo, esce e ritorna dopo un istante.—Cascart viene dal fondo in costume di città.)	DUCLOU: All right. (He hurries to door leading into Hall and exit, returning shortly after. Cascart comes from back of stage in street clothes.)
MALARDOT: Vedrem che cèra farà!! (scorge Cascart e lo saluta) Signor Cascart!	MALARDOT: I'll teach him what to do for Art! (notices Cascart—greets him) Hello, Cascart!
CASCART: (rispondendo al saluto di entrambi) La buona sera! (entra da Zazà senza battere all'uscio) Buona sera, mia Zazà.	CASCART: (greeting all present) Good evening to you! (enters Zazà's room without knocking) Good evening, dearest Zazà.
ZAZÀ: (lietamente, continuando a vestirsi) Ah, sei tu, Cascart! mio core! (Natalia esce dal camerino e scompare dal fondo.) Amor mio! Donde venite? Raccontate, mio signore Dove foste ad ingannarmi?	ZAZÀ: (joyfully, but continuing her dressing) Oh—it's you, Cascart, my dear one! (Natalia retires from dressing-room and disappears upstage.) Sweetheart mine, where did you come from? Sir, you might at least come near one. And confess where you've been flirting!
CASCART: (ridendo) Come va, cattiva cèra?	CASCART: (laughs) How are you? How are things going?
ZAZÀ: Bene. Siedi là, mi narra: che notizie questa sera?	ZAZÀ: Fine! Sit here and tell me all the news that is worth knowing.
CASCART: (sedendo a cavalcioni sulla sedia) C'è l'agente che mi scrive da Marsiglia: offre la piazza . . .	CASCART: (sits astride chair) The agent at Marseilles has offered double: I won't be losing.

ZAZÀ: Per noi due?
Non vuoi piantarmi già?

CASCART: (crollando le spalle)
Sarebbe cosa pazza!
Offre il doppio!

ZAZÀ: E dire, amico, ch'è per te che sono artista!
(Courtois e l'altro Signore con le due cantanti si allontanano pel fondo e scompajono.)
Ti rammenti?
Alle taverne per cantar che vita
trista!
Io col piatto andava intorno . . .
Che dolori abbiam sofferti
Con mia madre!

CASCART: Certamente ch'eran
magri i vostri incerti!
Se per caso trenta soldi raccoglievi nel tuo piatto, ne beveva almen quaranta la tua madre d'un sol tratto!
Vecchia spugna insazïata!

ZAZÀ: Basta. . . ! sai che mi dà pena!

CASCART: Va il gran male e che prosegue . . . oggi, vedi, una dozzena!

ZAZÀ: (con dolcezza) Via, non mi torturare!
È madre mia, e ha sorriso sì poco ai suoi prim'anni:
ha pianto molte lacrime per via, povera donna, ed ebbe molti affanni!
(seria)
Lo sai tu che vuol dire un uom che fugge e che ti lascia con un bimbo, sola?
Ogni seme di bene in te si strugge, e diventa l'amore una parola!
Che farà, dove andrà, dimmi, una madre con un figliuol tremante fra le braccia!
Annoja tutti un bimbo . . . anche suo padre . . . e la povera donna ognun discaccia!!
Io la mamma rivedo in abbandono:
rammento i suoi dolori, e le
perdono!!

CASCART: (levandosi un po' commosso, bonariamente) Sei buona . . . troppo buona!
(la bacia)
Ora a vestirmi vado.

ZAZÀ: (allegramente) Ti spiccia, e vieni a prevenirmi.
(Cascart esce dal camerino e scompare dal fondo a destra mentre un cantante vestito da soldato si prepara ad entrare in iscena giungendo dalla sinistra.—Pure dal fondo ritornano Malardot e Michelin nel tempo stesso che Du-

ZAZÀ: For both of us?
You would not leave me now?

CASCART: (shrugs shoulders) I'd be a fool refusing a splendid contract!

ZAZÀ: My art, dear, it was you alone who taught me!
(Courtois and the other man with the two singers withdraw upstage and exit.)
You remember?
From such a wretched life you have brought me to stardom!
I passed the plate in taverns—I suffered sore privations—
Then, with my mother—

CASCART: Yes, they were rather meagre, those donations,
I believe that thirty cents was most that you collected daily.
But your mother drank her forty cents' worth of strong spirits gaily.
She could soak it up like sponges!

ZAZÀ: Hush—you know I hate to hear it!

CASCART: She drinks whiskey by the gallon, though she knows she shouldn't go near it!

ZAZÀ: (gently) Don't you see how much you hurt me?
She's my mother—
Her youth was sad, all tears and grief and sighing,
Drink was her solace and she knew no other;
And that one comfort would you be denying?
(gravely)
Think what it means, when by a man forsaken,
You have a child—the world is black before you,
Your faith in man and even heaven is shaken,
A cruel mockery the love he bore
you!
Where can she turn, poor mother, who will aid her?
She is condemned—the child an accusation,
No help, not even from the God who made her.
What wonder if she craves some consolation?
I know well how mother to drink was driven,
I know how much she suffered—and have forgiven.

CASCART: (rises; he is touched, and speaks very gently) You're a good girl—much too good, dear, (kisses her)
I'll go—if you will let me, to dress.

ZAZÀ: (brightly) Yes, hurry—then come and get me.
(Cascart leaves dressing-room and exit at back of stage r., while a singer in soldier's uniform prepares to go on, coming from upstage l. Malardot and Michelin also return from back of stage at this moment and Duclou runs to clou corre ad aprire la porta che dà sulla scena e si sentono le ultime parole del monologo di Ruy Blas.)

DUCLOU: (a Malardot) Attento, direttore!
(Appena la voce di Lartigon finisce ed egli appare sulla porta, si sente una salva di fischi.)

LARTIGON: (mostrando il pugno al pubblico e venendo sul davanti) Oh, i vili! oh, gli asini!
Fischiano Vittor Hugo!

MALARDOT: No, no, fischiano
Voi, mio signore.
Ed alla porta io mettovi.

LARTIGON: (nel partire, con disprezzo) Va! mercante d'assenzio verde!
(esce.)

MALARDOT: (correndogli dietro) Stupido!
Sei tu che al verde resti! . . .
(esce seguito da Michelin che ride)

DUCLOU: (all'artista vestito da soldato suonando il campanello)
A voi, cominciano.
(L'artista entra in iscena, Duclou chiude la porta e poi scompare dal fondo a destra mentre Natalia ritorna dalla sinistra ed entra nel camerino.)

ZAZÀ: (a Natalia, che rientra)
Dimmi: Bussy . . . o Dufresne
visto non hai lì fuori?

NATALIA: No, mia signora.

ZAZÀ: (preoccupata) È strano! . . .
Chi mandò questi fiori?

NATALIA: (leggendo le carte da visita) Courtois . . .
Camus . . .
Qui ognuno per voi d'amor si strugge.

ZAZÀ: (pensierosa) Sì, ma il solo che bramo è quello che mi fugge!
(Anaide appare dal fondo a sinistra mentre Augusto entra dalla porta che dà nella sala; essi si incontrano a mezza scena.—Augusto avrà un vassojo con un bicchiere ripieno.)

ANAIDE: (graziosa) Augusto, buona sera!

AUGUSTO: Buona sera, Signora Anaide!
Avete buona cèra.

ANAIDE: (subito, in tono desolato) No, sto mal! . . . ne lo stomaco ho un gran fuoco! (indicando il bicchiere) Che porti?

AUGUSTO: Un grog.

open stage door just as the last words of Ruy Blas' monologue are heard.)

DUCLOU: (to Malardot) Now, sir, you'll see what happens!
(As Lartigon finishes his monologue and reappears in door, a storm of hisses and catcalls is heard.)

LARTIGON: (shakes his fist at audience, then advances) O, you villains, O you jackasses,
To hiss at Victor Hugo!

MALARDOT: No—not Hugo,—
You they are hissing—and you are fired this very moment!

LARTIGON: (contemptuously)
Bah—go drown in your vile green liquor!
(Exit)

MALARDOT: (after him) You idiot!
You're greener than my absinthe is!
(Exit followed by Michelin, laughing)

DUCLOU: (to singer in uniform, as he rings bell) Your turn beginning!
(The singer goes on; Duclou closes door and passes out at back r. while Natalia enters from l. and goes into dressing-room.)

ZAZÀ: (to Natalia, as she enters)
Tell me:
Bussy and Dufresne—did they bring me these roses?

NATALIA: No, dearest lady—

ZAZÀ: (thoughtfully) Peculiar!
Who sent the pretty posies?

NATALIA: (reads cards) Courtois
. . . Camus . . .
I've noticed they all are mad about you.

ZAZÀ: (pensively) Not all—there's one quite sane—so I'm inclined to doubt you!
(Anaide comes on from back of stage l. as Augusto enters by door leading to hall. They meet in center stage. He is carrying a tray with a glass of liquor.)

ANAIDE: (sweetly) Good evening,
dear Augusto!

AUGUSTO: Well, how are you?
You're looking fine tonight.
Can I do something for you?

ANAIDE: (suddenly in whining tone) No—I'm ill!
My stomach pains me
It's turning—
(points to glass he carries)
What is that?—

AUGUSTO: Some gin—

ANAIDE: Dà qui. (lo beve) Ciò calma un poco. Mettilo in conto di mia figlia.	ANAIDE: All right. (drinks it) That soothes the burning. And you can charge it to my daughter.
AUGUSTO: Bene. Ah! vostra figlia che successo! Tiene tutta da voi! Che ai vostri tempi!	AUGUSTO: Yes, ma'am! Your daughter is a star and nothing less, ma'am. She's you all over in your days of glory!
ANAIDE: Augusto! Quand'io cantavo!!	ANAIDE: I delighted all by my singing!
AUGUSTO: Che grazia! che gusto!	AUGUSTO: What grace and charm united!
ANAIDE: Il repertorio classico!	ANAIDE: A classic repertoire was mine!
AUGUSTO: Il Pompiere!	AUGUSTO: Fireman's ending!
ANAIDE: Le oche!! Oh, miei trionfi. . . ! Or vo' a vedere Zazà. Mi porta un punch nel camerino.	ANAIDE: The Goose and Gander! What a triumph! —I must be attending Zazà.— Please bring me a drink; my hand is shaking.
AUGUSTO: Sta ben.	AUGUSTO: Yes, ma'am! (Exit)
ANAIDE: (appressandosi all'uscio del camerino) Ahi! brucio . . . è proprio all'intestino. (apre l'uscio e grida facendo la graziosa) Addio tesoro!	ANAIDE: (going to dressing-room door) Mercy! Frightful—this burning here inside, and aching! (She opens door and cries out effusively) My darling treasure!
ZAZÀ: (sorpresa) Toh! sei tu, Mammà.	ZAZÀ: (surprised) Is it you, Mother?
ANAIDE: Sì, la mammina de la sua Zazà.	ANAIDE: Yes, your own dear little mother, my Zazà.
ZAZÀ: Datele un bacio tosto alla Zazà.— Ma via non portate il rossetto.	ZAZÀ: Come, give me a kiss, dear—you see I am busy— Don't get my rouge all smeared and mussy!
ANAIDE: (bacia Zazà, saluta Natalia e siede) Signora Natalia!	ANAIDE: (kisses Zazà—nods to Natalia and sits down) How are you, Natalia?
NATALIA: Signora!	NATALIA: Quite well, ma'am.
ANAIDE: (a Zazà) Alfin ti trovo sola, e si può parlare senza Cascart che sindaca! . . .	ANAIDE: (to Zazà) At last we are alone, dear, no one here to bother, And no Cascart between us—
ZAZÀ: Mamma, non cominciare!	ZAZÀ: Please drop the subject, Mother.
ANAIDE: (riscaldandosi) Già, non si può toccarlo; sempre i consigli suoi segui!	ANAIDE: (annoyed) There—he, of course is perfect; his advice you follow blindly. Always—
ZAZÀ: Nella miseria ci avean costretti i tuoi!	ZAZÀ: That your own people would not help, you oftentimes remind me.
ANAIDE: (tragicamente) Va pure, ingrata, insultami! su me le accuse aduna.	ANAIDE: (tragically) Ungrateful daughter, to insult me! All blame on me you're laying!
AUGUSTO: (entrando col vassojo) Ecco il punch. (esce subito e ritorna nella sala)	AUGUSTO: (enters with tray and glass) Here is your punch. (exit quickly, returning to Hall)
ANAIDE: (in tono gentile) Mille grazie. (prende il bicchiere e prosegue tragicamente) Ciò non porta fortuna!	ANAIDE: (sweetly) Thank you so much. (takes glass and continues tragically) The outlook is dismaying!
ZAZÀ: Mamma, bevi e sta zitta.	ZAZÀ: Mother—drink it and be quiet.
ANAIDE: (fingendo scoppiare in pianto) Ahi! sono sventurata!	ANAIDE: (pretending to weep) O dear, I shall die of sorrow!
ZAZÀ: Ci siamo! eccoci al pianto! la solita scenata! (levandosi a calmarla) Baciami, bevi e dimmi perchè sei qui.	ZAZÀ: There, there dear! I know these scenes of weeping. You'll do the same tomorrow. (rises to soothe her) Now kiss me, drink this and tell me what you want.
ANAIDE: (dopo averla baciata e bevuto sorride imbarazzata) Zazà, Per vederti!	ANAIDE: (after having kissed her and gulped down the liquor, smiles somewhat embarrassed) Zazà, just to see you.
ZAZÀ: E per chiedermi?	ZAZÀ: And then you wanted?
ANAIDE: L'affitto . . .	ANAIDE: The rent, dear—
ZAZÀ: Lo so già. Farò pagare; e dopo?	ZAZÀ: Dearest Mamma, that will be settled. And further?
ANAIDE: Un vecchio conto . . . un nulla . . . Tre luigi. . . !	ANAIDE: A trifling matter long due now,—Three Louis—
ZAZÀ: (balzando) Sei matta. . . !	ZAZÀ: (jumps up) Good gracious!
ANAIDE: Zazà, cara fanciulla . . .	ANAIDE: Zazà, I appeal to you, now—
ZAZÀ: Darò un luigi, e smettila.	ZAZÀ: I will give one Louis—that is settled.
ANAIDE: Oh! due!	ANAIDE: O, two, dear!
ZAZÀ: Mamma, prevedo . . .	ZAZÀ: Mother, you dun me!
ANAIDE: Due, ti farò le carte!	ANAIDE: TWO, dear, I will tell your fortune—
ZAZÀ: (sorridendo) Le carte! . . . ah furba! io cedo.	ZAZÀ: (smiling) Card fortune?— How clever!— You've won me!
DUCLOU: (di fuori forte) Avanti i ballerini!	DUCLOU: (outside—calls) All ready—the dancing number.
ZAZÀ: (ad Anaide) Il mio turno è vicino. Vieni domani.	ZAZÀ: (to Anaide) My turn is near—and I am busy; come back tomorrow.
ANAIDE: (baciandola) Amore! (esce, e dice allontanandosi:) Oh, Dio, questo intestino. . . ! (Due donne e due uomini in costume di ballerini spagnuoli arrivano vivamente dal fondo e vanno a guardarsi allo specchio mentre l'artista vestito da soldato rientra, e di dentro si applaude. Poi Duclou suona il campanello, l'orchestra preludia all'interno un movimento di danza spagnuola ed i ballerini entrano in iscena fra grandi applausi. Nel tempo istesso Bussy giunge vivamente dal fondo, picchia alla porta di Zazà ed entra. Zazà sarà completamente vestita.)	ANAIDE: (kisses her) My darling! (As she goes out, holding her stomach) O heavens! Pain has made me dizzy! (Exit) (Two men and two women dancers in Spanish costume come on quickly from back of stage and go to take a final survey in the mirror; while the singer in soldier's uniform returns, applause offstage. Duclou rings bell—Spanish dance music offstage and the dancers go on, received with loud applause. Simultaneously Bussy enters quickly from back of stage, knocks at Zazà's door and enters. Zazà has now finished dressing.)
ZAZÀ: (abbracciando Bussy, allegra) Alfin! sei tu, poeta del cuor mio!	ZAZÀ: (embracing Bussy effusively) At last, my poet, eagerly awaited!
BUSSY: (sorpreso allegramente) Che accoglienza! Davver fiero son io! Saresti incapricciata di Bussy?	BUSSY: (surprised and delighted) What a reception! I am quite elated! You like me just a little, is that so?
ZAZÀ: Che pretesa!	ZAZÀ: Why, what conceit!
BUSSY: Ti par?	BUSSY: Indeed?
ZAZÀ: (ansiosa) Sei solo?	ZAZÀ: (anxiously) No one with you?

BUSSY: Sì.	BUSSY: No.
ZAZÀ: (delusa) Ah!	ZAZÀ: (disappointed) Oh!
BUSSY: Ti portavo il duo per la "Rivista".	BUSSY: I brought the song for the "Review," dear lady.
ZAZÀ: (annojata) Ah!	ZAZÀ: (annoyed) Oh!
BUSSY: Vuoi vederlo?	BUSSY: Shall we rehearse it?
ZAZÀ: (c. s.) Grazie, fa lo stesso. E facile?	ZAZÀ: (as above) Thank you—later, maybe. Is it easy?
BUSSY: Lo impari a prima vista; il l'ho letto a Dufresne adesso adesso.	BUSSY: I'm sure it's to your liking. I showed it to Dufresne; he thought it striking.
ZAZÀ: (balzando di gioja) È qua?	ZAZÀ: (starts up joyfully) He's here?
BUSSY: Da Floriana . . .	BUSSY: With Floriana.
ZAZÀ: (scoppiando) Oh! addirittura si vede che di lei non può far senza! Certo al tuo Milio piace la pittura se al vecchio quadro dà la preferenza.	ZAZÀ: This fad for her seems funny. I think your friend is fond of antique treasure. Doubtless for old masters he would squander money, if such old painted faces give him pleasure.
BUSSY: (ridendo) Tu meglio ameresti vederlo da te!	BUSSY: (laughing) Of course you'd rather have him admiring you!
ZAZÀ: (dissimulando) Io . . . no . . . non ci tengo . . . non l'amo!	ZAZÀ: (pretending indifference) I—no—I don't want him!— No, not I!
BUSSY: Ma che! Ei non ti vagheggia, e, naturalmente, chi poco ti cura tu brami.	BUSSY: You do! We all are devoted—he by far the coldest, so he attracts you more than others—
ZAZÀ: (ridendo) Insolente! Al tuo bel Dufresne sol ch'io dica: voglio! lo vedi ai miei piedi. . . !	ZAZÀ: (laughing) You are boldest! As for your friend Dufresne—if I'd only let him, he'd be here at my feet—
BUSSY: Zazà . . . troppo orgoglio!	BUSSY: Don't be too sure you'd get him!
ZAZÀ: Tu dunque mi sfidi?	ZAZÀ: You dare me to do it?
BUSSY: Scommetto. Ci stai? Ciò ch'egli rifuta a me tu darai.	BUSSY: We'll wager! You agree? Whatever he refuses—you'll grant it to me!
ZAZÀ: (ridendo) Stai fresco!	ZAZÀ: (laughing) You'll wait long!
BUSSY: Tu temi?	BUSSY: Afraid, dear?
ZAZÀ: Temer? Poveretto. . . !	ZAZÀ: Afraid? That's not in me!
BUSSY: Se Milio non cede. . . ?	BUSSY: If Milio's unyielding?
ZAZÀ: (ridendo) Mi vinci; l'hai detto! (Intanto dal fondo arriva Cascart in costume da concerto con Michelin, mentre dalla porta che dà nella sala rientrano Courtois e l'altro signore, la scena si va popolando e durante la prima parte del dialogo tornano dal fondo Claretta e Simona che siedono al tavolo. Cascart va alla porta di Zazà e l'apre.)	ZAZÀ: (laughs) You've said it—you win me! (Cascart, in dress clothes, meanwhile enters with Michelin from back of stage; Courtois and the other gentleman come through door from Hall; the stage fills and during first part of following conversation Claretta and Simona return from back of stage and sit at table. Cascart goes to Zazà's door and opens it.)
CASCART: Ebben, Zazà?	CASCART: Ready, Zazà?
ZAZÀ: Ho finito; ci siamo?	ZAZÀ: I am ready! Is it our turn?
CASCART: Non ancora. (salutando Bussy) Addio.	CASCART: No—too early. (greets Bussy) How are you?
ZAZÀ: Beviamo allora un bicchier di sciampagna.	ZAZÀ: Come have a drink with me, then, champagne will make us brighter.
BUSSY: Ciò mi va.	BUSSY: I'm with you!
ZAZÀ: (a Michelin e Courtois che son presso all'uscio rimasto aperto) Signori, avete udito? Entrate, dunque, andiamo!	ZAZÀ: (to Michelin and Courtois, who are near the open door) Well, boys, did you hear me? Come in—don't be exclusive.
MICHELIN: (entrando con Courtois) Se non v'importuniamo. . . !	MICHELIN: (enters with Courtois) If we are not intrusive?
COURTOIS: Mille grazie.	COURTOIS: Thank you, thank you!
CASCART: (scorgendo l'altro signore mentre si adopera ad aprire la bottiglia di sciampagna.) Signore! e lei che fa?	CASCART: (noticing the other man, while he is opening a bottle of champagne) Come on, sir, why don't you join us?
ZAZÀ: (facendosi all'uscio) Via, ci faccia l'onore. . . ! entri anche lei, . . . le pare. . . ! (Il signore entra salutando, quando appajono dal fondo Milio Dufresne con Floriana.)	ZAZÀ: (coming to door) Come—come and do us the honor! Come right in—you're very welcome! (The gentleman enters bowing; Milio Dufresne with Floriana comes forward from back of stage.)
CASCART: (a Bussy) Guarda! . . . veggo spuntare l'amico tuo, Bussy.	CASCART: (to Bussy) Look here! See who is with us! Your friend is coming, Bussy.
BUSSY: (avanzandosi all'uscio) Dufresne?	BUSSY: (goes toward door) Dufresne?
CASCART: Sì: è là con Floriana . . .	CASCART: Yes. And with him Floriana.
ZAZÀ: (ritenendosi appena) Ah! . . .	ZAZÀ: (scarcely controlling herself) Ah!
CASCART: (a Bussy) Se ti fa piacere, invita anch'esso a bere.	CASCART: (to Bussy) Ask Dufresne—if you care to, to join us—if he dare to!
BUSSY: (chiamando) Ehi, Dufresne!	BUSSY: (calls) Hey there—Dufresne!
DUFRESNE: Che c'è?	DUFRESNE: What now?
BUSSY: Venite qui.	BUSSY: Will you come here?
DUFRESNE: Or vengo. (a Floriana) Mi scusate! (Va anche egli nel camerino di Zazà, saluta e prende la coppa che gli offre Bussy.)	DUFRESNE: I'm coming. (to Floriana) Please excuse me! (He joins the others in Zazà's dressing-room, greets all and takes the glass which Bussy offers him.)
ZAZÀ: (dopo aver salutato Dufresne) I calici colmiamo.	ZAZÀ: (after having greeted Dufresne) Now have the glasses clinking!
CASCART: È fatto . . .	CASCART: We've done so!
BUSSY: Noi beviamo a Zazà!	BUSSY: We are drinking to Zazà!
TUTTI GLI UOMINI: Ai trionfi di Zazà!! (bevono)	ALL THE MEN: All success to our Zazà! (They drink)
FLORIANA: (presso al tavolo, a Bussy che si accosta alla porta del camerino) Un uomo sol restavaci da questo lato, e l'hai condotto via! Sei proprio gentilissimo!	FLORIANA: (beside table, to Bussy, who stands in door of dressing-room) One single man was left us here, And you have coaxed him in there too. That was a kindly thing to do!
BUSSY: (ridendo) E tu perchè con lui non vieni qua?	BUSSY: (laughing) And why did you not follow him inside?

FLORIANA: (forte, con astio) Io là?! No, tante grazie! Ci resti sol. Se cerca compagnia, da quella parte non ne mancherà!!	FLORIANA: (loud and vindictively) In there?!— No thank you, no, not I! I hate a crowd. In there you're one of many. It's like a streetcar—everyone piles in.
ZAZÀ: (che ha sentito, grida dal camerino) Da te certo altrettanta non ne trova!	ZAZÀ: (who heard her—calls from dressing-room) With you he would be sure to have no rivals.
FLORIANA: Se non ti basta prendi anche il pompier!	FLORIANA: If you want more, the fireman might be willing!
ZAZÀ: Vederlo teco non è cosa nuova: s'egli ti vuole te lo lascio inter! (In questo punto i ballerini han finito e rientrano applauditi, ma restano in iscena vedendo Zazà che esce furibonda dal camerino seguita dagli uomini. Gli altri artisti arrivano in iscena attirati dal tumulto; le donne tengono per Floriana e gli uomini per Zazà.)	ZAZÀ: I've noticed he was all that you could capture, Poor thing, and so I'll leave that ONE to you. (Dancers, having finished, return while applause is heard; they remain on stage when Zazà, furious, comes from her dressing-room, followed by the men. Other performers, hearing the noise, come on stage; the women side with Floriana and the men with Zazà.)
FLORIANA: (urlando) Ah, baldracca!	FLORIANA: (shrieks) Ah! you hussy!
ZAZÀ: Vil mezzana!	ZAZÀ: Hateful cat, you!
CASCART e BUSSY: (cercando ritenere Zazà) Via cessate!	CASCART AND BUSSY: (trying to restrain Zazà) Stop this scrapping!
PARTE DELLE DONNE: (tenendo per Floriana) Essa ha ragione. (Zazà afferra pel ciuffo Floriana, ma gli uomini le separono.)	SOME OF THE WOMEN: (siding with Floriana) She knows what she's saying. (Zazà seizes Floriana by the hair, but the men separate them.)
LE DONNE: (Iª parte) Dalli, dalli, Floriana!	WOMEN: (first half) Give it to her, Floriana!
ALTRA PARTE: (a Zazà) Su, Zazà, dalle un ceffone!	WOMEN: (second half) Slap her, quick, without delaying!
ZAZÀ: Linguacciuta!	ZAZÀ: Dirty liar!
FLORIANA: Svergognata!	FLORIANA: Shameless devil!
UOMINI: La tempesta è scatenata! Dividiamole—smettetela! Teniamole—finitela! (Malardot arriva dal fondo con Duclou.)	MEN: Now the fight is growing evil, Keep them still and make them stop it, Hold them back and make them drop it! (Malardot comes from back of stage with Duclou.)
MALARDOT: (urlando) Basta, basta, che mai fu? Zitto, sentono di giù!	MALARDOT: (yelling) Stop that noise—shut up, you all! They can hear you in the Hall!
DUCLOU: Via Zazà, ch'or tocca a voi.	DUCLOU: Come, Zazà, your turn is next.
ZAZÀ: (a Cascart mentre si riacconcia innanzi allo specchio.) No, paura non mi fa.	ZAZÀ: (to Cascart, while she takes final look in mirror) No—of her I have no fear!
CASCART: Sì, lo so, ma spetta a noi: su, preparati Zazà.	CASCART: No—of course—but don't be vexed! Are you ready now, my dear?
ZAZÀ: Se pel ciuffo la ripiglio . . .	ZAZÀ: If I ever catch her napping—
FLORIANA: (dal fondo mentre la portono via) Che. . . ?!	FLORIANA: (who is being led away, turns again) What?!!!
MALARDOT: (a Floriana e Zazà) Cessate lo scompiglio! (poi a Duclou) Date il segno. (agli artisti che si allontanano) Zitti, olà!	MALARDOT: (to Floriana and Zazà) Girls, stop this foolish scrapping! (to Duclou) Give them the signal! (to artists who are leaving stage) Quiet back there!
DUCLOU: (suonando) Fate posto.	DUCLOU: (rings bell) Take your places!
CASCART: (prendendo Zazà per la mano per entrare in iscena) A noi, Zazà. (Appena Cascart e Zazà si presentano sulla porta per entrare in iscena si sente una salva di applausi dalla sala. Gli artisti saranno tutti ritirati nelle quinte.)	CASCART: (Cascart takes Zazà's hand to go on concert stage) Now then, Zazà! (Cascart and Zazà barely appear when a storm of applause is heard offstage from Hall. The other artists have all retired.)
MALARDOT: (dando un sospiro) Oh! le donne!!	MALARDOT: (gives a sigh) O, these women!
MICHELIN: (a Bussy e Dufresne) Venite?	MICHELIN: (to Bussy and Dufresne) Coming along?
BUSSY: No, restiamo.	BUSSY: No, we're remaining.
MICHELIN: (a Courtois ed all'altro Signore) La nostra diva a festeggiare andiamo! (Escono Michelin, Courtois, l'altro Signore con Malardot per la porta che dà nella sala. Restano in iscena Bussy e Dufresne passeggiando sul davanti della scena mentre Duclou ha chiusa la porta che dà sulla scena e resta dietro l'uscio.)	MICHELIN: (to Courtois and the other gentleman) Let's hear how much applause our star is gaining! (Michelin, Courtois and the other gentleman leave with Malardot through door leading to Hall; Bussy and Dufresne stay on, walking to and fro. Duclou has closed door to concert stage and remains standing behind it.)
BUSSY: Dufresne, contarvene voglio una bella! . . .	BUSSY: Dufresne, I must tell you Something very funny!
DUFRESNE: Che?	DUFRESNE: Well?
BUSSY: Ma pria ditemi: la nostra stella, la irresistibile nostra Zazà, come vi va?	BUSSY: However, first pray tell How do you like her, The radiant and sunny, Quite irresistible, Bright shining star?
DUFRESNE: Come? benissimo. . .! la trovo un frutto saporosissimo . . . davver farei pazzie per lei!	DUFRESNE: Like her? Why certainly! She's like a lovely peach, Growing—not out of reach. We want a bite, Though it's not right.
BUSSY: (sorpreso) Ne imparo delle belle! e la fuggite?	BUSSY: (surprised) Then I wonder, friend and brother, You avoid her?
DUFRESNE: Come tutte quelle che al primo incontro turbano il mio cuore. Io non voglio un amore violento, nel mio stato . . .	DUFRESNE: Just like any other Who at our first meeting Sets my heart to beating. People of our social station Should avoid a wild, mad passion—
BUSSY: (sorpreso quasi interrogando) Oh. . . !?	BUSSY: (dumbfounded—questioningly) Oh?!
DUFRESNE: (correggendosi) Non mi va lo scherzare col fuoco; ci si abbrucia! . . .	DUFRESNE: (explaining) I'm afraid If I play with fire, I'll suffer—I'll burn my fingers!
BUSSY: E Zazà?	BUSSY: And Zazà?
DUFRESNE: Pericolosa!	DUFRESNE: She is a danger.
BUSSY: E perchè mai?	BUSSY: But tell me why?
DUFRESNE: Sentirlo è facil cosa . . . eppure io non so dirlo! . . . È un riso gentile	DUFRESNE: I feel it like strong conviction—and yet I cannot reveal it! Like a zephyr of May

Qual' alba d'aprile che inebria e conquide le fibre del cuor!
È un brivido arcano se porge la mano, e baldi si destano i sogni d'amor!
Soavi misteri han gli occhî severi e par che dischiudan del cielo il
confin;
E l'anima oblìa per dolce malìa al
suon di sua voce, la vita, il destin!
Pur belle cotanto ci passano accanto, ma è lei che il destino ci impone adorar!
Chi folle d'amore la strinse sul cuore a lei sempre vinto dovrà ritornar!
È l'ebbro vicino al nappo di vino.
Se fugge lontano resister potrà.
Se il nappo egli tocca, se il porta alla bocca,
sin l'ultima goccia del nappo berrà!

BUSSY: Allor tutto va bene! guadagno la scommessa.

DUFRESNE: Quale?

BUSSY: Zazà ha un debole per voi, e lo confessa!

DUFRESNE: (balzando) Davver?

BUSSY: Le ho raccontato ch'essa v'è indifferente
e ha scommesso di vincervi. . . !

DUFRESNE: (turbato) Che v'è saltato in mente!
E poi perchè ripetermi. . . ! pensate un poco . . . tale ragazza innamorata. . . !

BUSSY: (ridendo) Si monta il collegiale!
Sarà come vorrete, in fondo! . . .

DUFRESNE: Oh, mio Bussy!
Sarà com'essa vuole; . . . non fu sempre così!
(A questo punto si sente una salva di applausi all'interno: dalla porta laterale arrivano Malardot, Michelin, Courtois e l'altro Signore. Zazà e Cascart salutano fra grida insistenti di bis: Malardot li spinge a salutare mentre tutti si appressano alla porta, anche Bussy e Dufresne.)

MALARDOT: Son tutti in delirio!
Andiam, salutate!
(Le voci di dentro domandano con insistenza: Il bacio, il bacio!)
Il bacio reclamano!

MICHELIN, DUFRESNE, COURTOIS, BUSSY: Sì, il bacio!

Her laughter can sway,
Can make you forget what the world would call wise;
By a sweet, gentle bond,
To her touch you respond,
And wonderful visions before you arise.
Love's light you behold
In the eyes that were cold,
You see a promise of rapture unbounded!
So potent their spell,
That heaven and hell,
Life, honor and truth will be forgotten!
You pass all unseeing,
Till you meet with the being,
The one whom by Fate you are doomed to adore,
Who sets your heart beating,
Sweet madness each meeting,
To her you are bound like a slave evermore!
Where wine means temptation
And intoxication,
The drunkard must flee, or he struggles in vain.
If his lips wine have tasted,
Resistance is wasted,
He empties the flagon again and again!

BUSSY: Then I shall win the wager!
I might have guessed it!

DUFRESNE: Wager?

BUSSY: Zazà is badly smitten with you and has confessed it.

DUFRESNE: (starts) Truly?

BUSSY: I had said you were like marble, cold and quite unbending.
And she has wagered she could win
you!

DUFRESNE: (perturbed) And what, pray, will be the ending?
And why betray it and tell me?
Impossible to conceive it—
This woman by love affected!

BUSSY: (laughing) You schoolboy—do you believe it?
It will end exactly as you elect it.

DUFRESNE: O no, Bussy!
It will end as she may decide it.
It has always been thus.
(Wild applause offstage; Malardot, Michelin, Courtois and the other man come through the side door. Zazà and Cascart are seen bowing, while shouts of "encore" are heard. Malardot urges them to respond, while all come nearer to stage door, including Bussy and Dufresne.)

MALARDOT: The crowd is wild with pleasure—
Go on to please them!
(Calls outside for "The Kiss! The Kiss!")
They want "The Kiss" repeated!

MICHELIN, DUFRESNE, COURTOIS, BUSSY: Yes, repeat it!

DUCLOU: Attaccate!
(Suona il campanello e lascia la porta aperta, di maniera che si senton distintamente le due voci di Zazà e Cascart all'interno.)

LUI: Non so capir perchè, se m'ami tu,
non vuoi venir qui sola a me vicin!

LEI: No, mio signor, venir non posso giù;
è buja troppo l'ombra del giardin!

LUI: Dunque paura io faccio a te?!

LEI: Ma alfin che vuoi tu, giù, da me?

LUI: Io che mai voglio. . . ? un sol bacin!

LEI: Uh! . . . che mai dite, signorin! . . .
(Insieme)

LEI: Un bacin!
Giù in giardin! . . .
è peccar:
nol vo' far!

LUI: Perchè no?
Io lo vo'!
Cedi orsù, vieni giù!

LEI: Ma se mamma ci arriva repente chi la sente!
che terror!

LUI: No, fa cor!

LEI: Vieni invece un po' su dalle scale,
e se giunge nasconderti io so!

LUI: Cara! io salgo; c'è niente di male;
più d'un bacio allor darti potrò!
(Appena Zazà e Cascart hanno finito, nuovi applausi; essi poi si avanzano giulivi tra gli amici.)

BUSSY, MICHELIN, COURTOIS, DUFRESNE: Ma bravi! che delizia!

CASCART: (trionfante) Eh. . . ? quando noi vogliamo. . . !

BUSSY: Siete straordinarî!

MALARDOT: Su, tempo non perdiamo; la "Rivista" or si prova. Ognun sia pronto!

CASCART: (andando via) È detto!
(esce dal fondo)

BUSSY: Duclou, mi raccomando!

ZAZÀ: (sull'uscio del camerino)
Ehi, Bussy! quel duetto Vorrai farmi ripetere . . .

BUSSY: Non posso . . . ho un gran da fare!
(con intenzione)
Ma l'amico Dufresne può fartelo passare!

DUCLOU: Pay attention!
(He rings bell and leaves door open so the voices of Cascart and Zazà can be distinctly heard from offstage.)

HE: If you love me, how can you be so cold?
Why do you leave me all alone down here?

SHE: No, no, dear boy, 't is dangerous, I'm told,
The garden is too dark at night, I fear!

HE: Are you afraid?
Am I so awful to you?

SHE: What do you want me for—tell me, now do?

HE: What do I want of you?
One kiss, my dear!

SHE: Go—you're a naughty boy, I fear!
(together)

SHE: One small kiss
Might not be amiss,
Still, at night
It's not right.

HE: Don't say no!
Before I go,
Come, give in,
It's no sin!

SHE: It is dangerous, my mother has told me!
She would scold me
If she knew!

HE: Come now, do!

SHE: I'll not come down, but you come up to me, dear!
If mother comes, safe hidden you'll be.

HE: Sweetheart, I'm coming!
Love can be no sin, dear!
(When Zazà and Cascart end their song, renewed applause offstage. They join their friends joyfully.)

BUSSY, MICHELIN, COURTOIS, DUFRESNE: Just splendid, quite delightful!

CASCART: (triumphantly)
Well—we impressed them rather!

BUSSY: You are just splendid!

MALARDOT: Come, gather for rehearsal!
The new "Review" we're trying—be quick, get ready!

CASCART: (goes upstage) I'm going.
(Exit at back of stage)

BUSSY: Duclou, I'd like to see you!

ZAZÀ: (in the door of her room) I say, Bussy, how about it?
Shall we go over that one number?

BUSSY: I cannot—I shall have to be here.
Perhaps (with meaning) my friend
Dufresne can substitute for me here.

ZAZÀ: (lieta) Davvero? non v'incomoda?	ZAZÀ: (pleased) O, will you? It will not bore you?
DUFRESNE: (un po' imbarazzato) Vi pare. . . !	DUFRESNE: (a little embarrassed) Indeed, no—
BUSSY: (ridendo) Andiamo, su!	BUSSY: (laughing) Then go ahead!
ZAZÀ: (a Dufresne) Oh, come siete buono! (entra vivamente nel camerino e dice piano a Natalia:) Fila, e non tornar più! (Natalia esce e si allontana dal fondo.)	ZAZÀ: (to Dufresne) You are so kind to help me! (She hurries into dressing-room and says softly to Natalia) Leave us and don't return here! (Natalia exit back of stage.)
BUSSY: (andando verso il fondo con Malardot) Duclou, tutto sia pronto!	BUSSY: (going upstage with Malardot) Duclou, are you all ready?
DUCLOU: Fidate pure in me! (Malardot e Bussy escono dal fondo a sinistra) (gridando e uscendo dalla porta che dà sulla scena) Fuori di scena. . . ! All'opra. . . !	DUCLOU: You can depend on me. (Malardot and Bussy exeunt back of stage l.; Duclou through door which opens on stage, shouting) Clear the stage—all ready!
MICHELIN: (a Courtois) Noi scendiamo al Caffè. (Escono dalla porta che dà nella sala in modo che la scena resta vuota e scura. Il camerino di Zazà è rischiarato come prima, Dufresne è presso all'uscio.)	MICHELIN: (to Courtois) Let us go to the Café. (Exit through door which opens into hall; half of stage is empty and darkened. Zazà's room is lighted as before. Dufresne is near the door.)
ZAZÀ: Signore, entrate; è un gentile pensiero il vostro . . . (Dufresne entra; Zazà chiude l'uscio.)	ZAZÀ: Come in! Perhaps I shall impose unduly upon you— (Dufresne enters—Zazà closes door.)
DUFRESNE: È un debole ajuto!	DUFRESNE: I fear small help I'll render.
ZAZÀ: Modesto troppo!	ZAZÀ: To please me, try it!
DUFRESNE: È la prima campagna!	DUFRESNE: My first venture at coaching.
ZAZÀ: Davvero? Le attrici agli amanti domandan questo. . . ; ne conoscete?	ZAZÀ: Truly? The actresses all have their lovers coach them—it's easy. Do you know any?
DUFRESNE: Qualcuna . . . (Dufresne siede)	DUFRESNE: A number. (He sits down.)
ZAZÀ: Ero certa! Dite, e Floriana?	ZAZÀ: I could guess it. Tell me, this Floriana?
DUFRESNE: La trovo piacente . . .	DUFRESNE: I think her entertaining.
ZAZÀ: Ma non è il vostro ideal?!	ZAZÀ: But she is not your own ideal?
DUFRESNE: Veramente non ho idëali!	DUFRESNE: I confess it, I have no ideal!
ZAZÀ: Davver? Che scoperta! Amate il vario . . .	ZAZÀ: Really? Ah, I see then you like variety?
DUFRESNE: Ecco . . . il vario . . .	DUFRESNE: Just so —variety.
ZAZÀ: Capisco! . . . Ma, in fede mia, non sposatevi!	ZAZÀ: Exactly! But, take my advice and do not marry!
DUFRESNE: (ridendo come colto da un'idea comica) Io? mai. . . !!!	DUFRESNE: (laughs as though struck by a comical idea) I?— Never!
ZAZÀ: Io son diversa da voi—Non ardisco dirvelo, e pur d'un sogno mi beai! (chinandosi sino alla faccia di Dufresne) C'è un uomo al mondo ch'è tutto per me . . . e ha nome . . . il nome è un mistero. . . !	ZAZÀ: I am not like you at all—I feel timid to tell it. A dream is haunting me ever! (Bends close to Dufresne) There is one man who means all the world to me— And this one man—his name is a mystery!—
DUFRESNE: (freddo) Perchè?	DUFRESNE: (coldly) And why?
ZAZÀ: Perchè non so; pur questo mi turba e mi confonde . . . ma a voi poco ne importa . . .	ZAZÀ: I cannot tell; the mere thought can fill me with sweet confusion. But that can never interest you.
DUFRESNE: (con fredda cortesia) No, dite!	DUFRESNE: (coldly courteous) No—tell me!
ZAZÀ: Si nasconde forse l'indifferenza? Voi non la nascondete; e allora a che parlare?	ZAZÀ: No illusion have I that you are curious—it causes you no worry; Then why discuss the subject?
DUFRESNE: E il duetto?	DUFRESNE: Shall we rehearse now?
ZAZÀ: (contrariata dandogli i fogli) Tenete! . . . (sospirando) Ripetiamo . . . ma prima vo' cambiar veste; avvezzo ai nostri camerini voi siete già da un pezzo! (fingendo chiamare) Natalia! . . . Non avete scrupoli . . . Natalia!	ZAZÀ: (handing song to him) There's no hurry. (sighs) We'll rehearse it—but first I want to change my costume slightly. You know our dressing-rooms and that we take conventions lightly. (pretends to call Natalia) Natalia!—I'm sure you will excuse me—Natalia!
DUFRESNE: (alzandosi) La chiamo?	DUFRESNE: (jumps up) Shall I call her?
ZAZÀ: No; vorreste, signore, in cortesia darmi un poco d'ajuto, slacciarmi il corsaletto?	ZAZÀ: No—instead I'll ask you to assist me. Kindly unfasten my bodice for me—if you don't mind it!
DUFRESNE: Ben lieto . . .	DUFRESNE: With pleasure!
ZAZÀ: Cominciate di sopra, dal laccetto.	ZAZÀ: Begin at the top hook, if you can find it.
DUFRESNE: (sempre freddo) Scusate; non ho pratica, son così poco destro . . .	DUFRESNE: (still frigid) Have patience!— I have had no experience as a maid to ladies.
ZAZÀ: (piegandosi indietro voluttuosamente) Che! fate così bene. . . ! siete un vero maestro! . . .	ZAZÀ: (bending backward enticingly) Why, I can scarce believe this is your "first appearance!"
DUFRESNE: Grazie!	DUFRESNE: Thank you!
ZAZÀ: (sfiorando il volto di Dufresne colla nuca) Con che piacere voi slaccereste il busto d'una donnina bella . . .	ZAZÀ: (grazing his face with her hair) You would unlace a bodice to perfection for some nice little woman—
DUFRESNE: (tirando indietro la testa) Già! . . .	DUFRESNE: (drawing back) True!
ZAZÀ: Ma di vostro gusto . . .	ZAZÀ: Of your own selection—
DUFRESNE: Ahi! mi son punto!	DUFRESNE: There—a pin pricked me!
ZAZÀ: Al diavolo! ho la maledizione! Vi duole?	ZAZÀ: O darn those pins—they make you feel like cursing! Does it hurt you?
DUFRESNE: Oh, no. (Zazà passa un accappatojo.)	DUFRESNE: Oh no— (Zazà puts on a negligée.)
ZAZÀ: Son lieta!! Ed ora alla lezione. (Siede in faccia a Dufresne che si dispone a leggere presso il tavolo.) Oh! strano. . . ! (si alza e si accosta a Dufresne)	ZAZÀ: All right then—now let us begin rehearsing. (She sits down facing Dufresne, who is beside table—ready to read.) How funny! (She goes close to Dufresne.)
DUFRESNE: A che guardate, signorina?	DUFRESNE: Now what is holding your attention?

ZAZÀ: Guardo i vostri capelli: han lampi d'oro!	ZAZÀ: Your hair is golden where the reflections strike it!
DUFRESNE: (ridendo) Ma con lega d'argento; è lega fina ma disprezzata . . .	DUFRESNE: (laughing) But mingled with silver—and I would call it a common alloy—
ZAZÀ: (carezzandogli i capelli) No; sono un tesoro! Oh, guarda! un segno voi portate presso la nuca: oh, grazioso! Ce l'ho anch'io . . . ma più piccino e quasi al luogo istesso . . . (piegandosi) No, più presso l'orecchio. Eccovi il mio . . . (Un servo di scena traversa il fondo suonando la campana.)	ZAZÀ: (playing with his hair) No—precious is more like it! O—lovely! You have a mole—till now I did not know it— Right by the ear, where I have mine; come nearer— It's in the selfsame spot—just wait, I'll show it! (bending close to him) There—on my neck. Bend down, you'll see it clearer. (A stagehand crosses at back, ringing bell.)
DUFRESNE: (freddo) La campana . . .	DUFRESNE: (coldly) The call sounding.
ZAZÀ: (sdegnata) Oh, la sento la campana, per Bacco!	ZAZÀ: (angry) Oh, I can hear that bell, don't worry!
DUFRESNE: E il duetto? . . .	DUFRESNE: And the song number?
ZAZÀ: So tutto: (fra sè) mi pagherai lo smacco! (Arrivano dal fondo Duclou, Malardot, Bussy, Cascart e Claretta) (Dufresne esce lentamente dal camerino.)	ZAZÀ: I know it! (aside) For this I'll make him sorry! (Duclou, Malardot, Bussy, Cascart and Claretta come downstage from back. Dufresne slowly leaves dressing-room.)
CASCART: (aprendo la porta del camerino) Su, Zazà!	CASCART: (opens door to dressing-room) Come, Zazà!
BUSSY: (vedendola in accappatojo) Che! in quello stato?	BUSSY: (noticing the negligée) What—in this condition?
ZAZÀ: (nervosa) Per servirti. È un gran peccato?	ZAZÀ: (nervously) No, not dressed. Pray pardon the omission!
BUSSY: Ma c'era ben tempo . . .	BUSSY: You had time enough, though.
ZAZÀ: Da sola dovevo vestirmi?	ZAZÀ: Left lonely, how could I change dresses?
CASCART: Non c'era la sarta?	CASCART: Was the maid not with you?
ZAZÀ: È partita . . .	ZAZÀ: She had left me!
MALARDOT: Parola d'onore la multo stasera!	MALARDOT: She is paid to wait on you, and on you only!
BUSSY: (piano a Malardot) Ha i nervi, lascia . . .	BUSSY: (softly to Malardot) Let her go—she is nervous.
MALARDOT: Dà il segno, Duclou!	MALARDOT: Give the signal, Duclou!
DUCLOU: Al posto, batto i tre colpi!	DUCLOU: All ready—three knocks I'll give you.
BUSSY: (a Malardot) Andiam giù . . . (Malardot e Bussy escono dalla porta che dà nella sala. Gli artisti che prendono parte alla Rivista si perdono tra le quinte. Zazà, in collera, leggendo il duetto, siede presso ad una quinta sul davanti a destra. Dufresne passeggia guardandola.)	BUSSY: (to Malardot) We'll go too. (Malardot and Bussy out through door into Hall; the singers who take part in the "Review" disappear in the wings.) (Zazà, angry, sits down near one of the wings, r. front, reading the duet. Dufresne passes her, watching her.)
DUCLOU: (batte i tre colpi) A te, Cascart . . . (Cascart entra in iscena.) (appressandosi a Zazà) Zazà, dopo tu sei di scena . . . sta pronta, te ne prego: potrò guardarti appena; debbo dall'altra parte fare il rumor del cocchio.	DUCLOU: (gives three loud knocks) On stage, Cascart! (Cascart goes on concert stage.) (coming over to Zazà) Zazà, he goes on just before you. Be ready—I can't call you—don't fail me, I implore you! I have to make the noise for carriage wheels approaching.
ZAZÀ: (secca) Lo so.	ZAZÀ: (dryly) I know!
DUCLOU: Mettiti calma, te ne prego in ginocchio. Quando Cascart ti dice: "Chi dunque mi conduce?" entra; non mi sbagliare!	DUCLOU: Don't get excited, don't forget your coaching! As soon as Cascart says: "Who then would dare resist you?" Run on—don't keep them waiting!
ZAZÀ: (come sopra) Lo so. (Duclou gira dietro al fondaletto e scompare al di là del fondo a destra.)	ZAZÀ: (as before) All right! (Duclou goes behind the back drop and disappears r.)
DUFRESNE: (arrestandosi presso Zazà) Non vi seduce ripetere il duetto insieme un pò?	DUFRESNE: (stops beside Zazà) Can I assist you? Shall we rehearse the number after all?
ZAZÀ: (sgarbata) No, grazie; ne fo' senza!	ZAZÀ: (curtly) No thank you—I don't need you!
DUFRESNE: Aspetterò! . . . (Dufresne si china e la prende alla cintura col braccio mentre la bacia con forza sul collo: Zazà si volge raggiante e lo avvinghia con le braccia.)	DUFRESNE: I'm at your call! (He bends over her and, putting his arms around her, kisses her passionately on the shoulder.—Zazà, radiant, clasps him in her arms.)
ZAZÀ: Perchè, cattivo, non me l'avevi prima tu detto?	ZAZÀ: But why, you rascal, why did you keep me waiting forever?
DUFRESNE: È forse tardi per riparare?	DUFRESNE: I'll make amends, or is it too late now?
ZAZÀ: No, mio diletto!	ZAZÀ: No, dearest, never!
CASCART: (di dentro) "Chi dunque mi conduce?"	CASCART: (from offstage) "Who then would dare resist you?"
ZAZÀ: (estasiata) Oh! come bene m'hai tu baciata qui, sul collo!	ZAZÀ: (in ecstasy) Oh, you were kissing me on my neck—just where I like it!
DUCLOU: (riapparendo dietro al fondaletto: con angoscia) Ebbene? Zazà! . . . Psst. . . !	DUCLOU: (reappears behind drop—in agonized tone) She's missing! Zazà—Psst!
ZAZÀ: (sempre nelle braccia di Dufresne) Dunque ti divertiva la mia tortura? Allor tu m'ami?!	ZAZÀ: (still in Dufresne's arms) For fun you just made me suffer—just confess it! And now you love me?!
DUCLOU: Zazà. . . !	DUCLOU: Zazà!
MALARDOT: (di dentro) L'entrata non è sicura!	MALARDOT: (from offstage) If you're too late, you will mess it!
BUSSY: (di dentro) Zazà è di scena!	BUSSY: (offstage) Zazà—this is your scene!
CASCART: (in collera appare sull'uscio della scena) Per Dio! non entri?	CASCART: (angry, appears in door to stage) Confound it! Where are you?
ZAZÀ: (stordita) Che?	ZAZÀ: (amazed) What?
CASCART: Come, che? Non entri in tempo! mi pianti in asso!	CASCART: Nothing "what"! You missed your entrance; your cue I shouted!
ZAZÀ: (in collera) Basta, perchè tu m'hai seccata!	ZAZÀ: (furious) Enough of that— You have annoyed me!
CASCART: (stupito) Ah!	CASCART: (nonplussed) Ah!!!
ZAZÀ: (proseguendo) Vo' mancare alle mie entrate quando mi piace! Ti proibisco queste scenate!	ZAZÀ: (as above) If I choose, I can miss my cue! And this I'll tell you—I'll not stand for being bossed by you!
CASCART: (a Duclou) Che diavolo ha in corpo? (Duclou crolla le spalle, Cascart rientra.)	CASCART: (to Duclou) What devil is she possessed of? (Duclou shrugs his shoulders; Cascart goes on stage again.)

ZAZÀ: Ora vengo:
(a Milio con dolcezza)
Scusate . . .

CASCART: (di dentro) "Chi dunque mi conduce?"

ZAZÀ: (sempre a Milio) Udrete il mio pezzo?
(Dufresne fa un segno di affermazione e le bacia la mano.)

CASCART: (più forte c. s.) "Chi dunque mi conduce?"

ZAZÀ: (entra in iscena facendo dei gorgheggi) Io. . . !

La tela cala rapidamente.
Fine Del Primo Atto.

ZAZÀ: Now I'm coming:
(to Milio, sweetly)
Excuse me—

CASCART: (offstage) "Who then would dare resist you?"

ZAZÀ: (still to Dufresne) Will you stand by and listen?
(Dufresne nods and kisses her hands.)

CASCART: (louder, offstage) "Who then would dare resist you?"

ZAZÀ: (runs off on concert stage, trilling) I!

Quick Curtain.
End of Act I.

■ Atto Secondo.

Il Salotto in Casa Di Zazà.—Scena parapettata: a sinistra camino con sopra una specchiera, un orologio, un servizio per cognac, fotografie, ecc.; sulla campana dell'orologio sarà posto un cappello di Zazà. Subito dopo il camino una porta che conduce all'interno dell'appartamento; poi sul muro in isbieco una porta che dà in un gabinetto di sbarazzo; dalla porta aperta si scorge un portamantello con delle vesti, e per terra delle scatole di cappelli. Sul muro di fondo, nel mezzo una finestra che dà sulla via; a sinistra della finestra un tavolo da toletta; a destra un pianoforte verticale. Indi sulla destra, in fondo in isbieco, la porta che dà nell'anticamera; poscia un paravento; presso al paravento una chaise-longue e verso la sinistra un tavolo. Qua e là sedie. Mobili modesti. È pieno giorno. Milio è mezzo sdrajato sulla chaise-longue, Zazà è presso a lui, in piedi, con un ginocchio appoggiato sul divano.

ZAZÀ: (con tristezza) È deciso: tu parti per questo gran viaggio?

MILIO: (con affetto) Dovrei: ma di lasciarti ancor non ho coraggio.

ZAZÀ: Quanto starai lontano?

MILIO: . . . Tre, quattro mesi . . .

ZAZÀ: Ahimè che quattro lunghi mesi saranno senza te! . . .
Prendimi teco!

MILIO: Mia Zazà, mio bene, ragiona dunque; che follìe son queste?
Sai?
L'America è lungi e sono modeste lo mie sostanze; lavorar conviene.
Perciò solo io men vado.
Ed è già tardi!

■ Act II.

ZAZÀ: (sadly) Is it settled: Upon this journey you are starting?

MILIO: (tenderly) I must—although my courage fails at thought of parting.

ZAZÀ: How long will you be absent?

MILIO: Four months or over.

ZAZÀ: Poor Me!
Four endless months without you, as many years will be!
Do take me with you!

MILIO: My Zazà—my dearest, be good; you know it's folly what you say, and the United States are very far away.
I am not wealthy—there my work is waiting;
And I must go alone, tho' it's exasperating!

ZAZÀ: (sedendo ed abbracciandolo stretto) Amor mio, che farà non più vicina a te, la tua Zazà, la tua piccina, essa che vive solo dei tuoi sguardi?
Quando vai a Parigi e la sera ritorni, ch'io non ti veggo, o Milio, mi sembran mille giorni . . .
Hai detto: quattro mesi . . . due piccole parole, ma quanto strazio, amore, in queste voci sole!
Quattro mesi a domandarmi: Tornerà? m'amerà ancora?
Tornerai, dimmi, ad amarmi? come un tempo? come allora che mi desti il primo bacio? come adesso?
Dimmi o mio bene, mi farai soffrire? . . .
No, tu m'ami! . . . e t'amo anch'io!
(si getta al collo di Milio profondamente commossa.)

MILIO: (commosso) Zazà, Zazà, non ti attristare sai che mi strazia questo abbandono!
Sai, da tre mesi dovevo andare e a te vicino ancora io sono . . .
Perchè, s'io parto, l'ore del pianto sul mio deserto cuor scenderanno, e queste labbra baciate tanto più le tue labbra non bacieranno! . . .

ZAZÀ: (quasi sperando) Tu pur sei triste! . . .
Vedi? avrai coraggio di partire?

MILIO: (levandosi serio) L'avrò! questo viaggio è necessario . . .

ZAZÀ: (con dolce rimprovero) Ancora?

MILIO: (guardandola) Ebbene, no . . . se sarai buona . . .

ZAZÀ: (ansiosamente) Che?

MILIO: Ritarderò!

ZAZÀ: (con impeto di gioja gettandosi nelle sue braccia) Ah! lo sapevo!
T'amo! sei buono.

MILIO: T'amo, ma troppo debole io sono!
Or tempo e baci per guadagnare tosto a Parigi lasciami andare.

ZAZÀ: (lieta) Oh, certo!
(chiamando) Natalia! . . .
(Natalia entra dalla destra)
Dà l'abito e il cappello
(Natalia eseguisce.) al signore.

ZAZÀ: (sitting down and holding him close) My dearest love!
I live for you only!
Your own Zazà, your girl will be lonely!
The world is dark without your smile, your glances—
When you go on to Paris and are late in returning,
On the days you are absent, Milio, I nearly die of yearning!
You said four months of absence; those two brief words mean grieving and tears, and sorrow, dearest, that is beyond believing!
Four months of endless question:
Will he come?
Does he love no more?
Dearest—say you'll come back and love me just the same as you did before!
As you did with the first sweet kisses!
Just as now—O tell me true!
Tell me, will you make me suffer?
No, you love me and I adore you!
(She throws herself passionately into his arms.)

MILIO: (deeply moved) Zazà, Zazà, you must not be downhearted!
You know it rends my soul to leave you lonely.
You know three months ago I should have started,
And still I'm beside you—I think of you only!
For if I leave, the bitter hours of yearning will torture me with memory of blisses.
Alone—my lips, still with your kisses burning, can not meet yours in hungry, endless kisses!

ZAZÀ: (hopefully) You too are sorry!
There now—you cannot stand it to be parted—

MILIO: (rises, seriously) I must—the Fates demand it.
This awful journey—

ZAZÀ: (with gentle reproach) Still cruel?

MILIO: (looking at her fondly) O well then, no, if you'll be good, dear—

ZAZÀ: (anxiously) How?

MILIO: I will not go.

ZAZÀ: (in a transport of joy, throwing herself into his arms)
Ah, how I love you—Dearest!
I adore you!

MILIO: I love you too, and yield too much before you!
Now let me go to Paris; there I'm earning the time for kisses that shall still my yearning.

ZAZÀ: (joyfully) Oh—surely!
(calls)
Natalia!
(Natalia enters from r.) Bring Mr. Dufresne's hat and coat here.

(a Milio)
Il bastone? . . . i guanti? . . .
Tornerai? . . .

MILIO: Posdomani . . .

ZAZÀ: Due giorni? sono lunghi! . . . Ora vai!

MILIO: (con finto rimprovero) Con che fretta mi scacci!

ZAZÀ: Ritornerai più presto.

MILIO: Passo per le valigie dall'albergo . . .

ZAZÀ: Io mi vesto vengo alla stazione a vederti . . . mi vuoi?

MILIO: Sì . . .

ZAZÀ: (prendendolo fra le braccia) Ma prima baciami forte . . . laggiù non puoi!
Che tu pensa!
Baciami! . . . Addio! . . .

MILIO: Fanciulla mia, amo e ti penso: Addio! . . . (Esce strappandosi da Zazà)

ZAZÀ: Fa presto, Natalia! stivaletti, il velo, il mantello . . .

NATALIA: (correndo allo spogliatojo) Ecco quà . . . Signor Milio parte?

ZAZÀ: No, va a Parigi.
(con un grido)
Ah! la che ancor lo veda alla finestra! (va alla finestra e la spalanca per seguire Milio coll'occhio) che mi batte il cuore, o Natalia! Ora traversa già la via maestra . . . nobiltà nel passo e che malìa . . . apisce che è un uomo, al portamento, io, franco, leale, . . . un uomo raro! bene alta la testa! Ecco, un momento olge; vedi, s'è voltato . . . Caro! (mandandogli dei baci) manca di voltarsi . . . mi ha sentito . . .
Lì io lo guardo!
È all'angolo . . . È sparito!
(sospira)

NATALIA: Ecco gli stivaletti, signora . . .

ZAZÀ: Ed il cappello?
fa presto . . .

NATALIA: È là; lo vede? sul caminetto . . .

He is leaving.
(to Milio)
Your walking-stick—your gloves?
When will you be here?

MILIO: Day after next.

ZAZÀ: Two days!
They will be endless; now go, dear!

MILIO: (pretending to be reproachful) You're in great haste to lose me!

ZAZÀ: I'll have you back here sooner.

MILIO: I'll stop at the hotel for my valises.

ZAZÀ: I'll get ready and see you on your train down at the station.—
Shall I?

MILIO: Yes, come!

ZAZÀ: (clasping him in her arms)
First kiss me good and hard—later we'll have no time.
You'll not forget me?
One more kiss now!
—Good-by!

MILIO: My own girl!
I think of you and love you: Now, good-by!
(He breaks away from Zazà.)
(Exit)

ZAZÀ: Make haste—it is not early!
Natalia—bring my boots, my veil, my wraps—where are they?

NATALIA: (running to dressing-room) Here they are.
Is Mister Milio leaving?

ZAZÀ: No—he goes to Paris—
(cries out)
Ah!—
From the window I can see him as he is going—(runs to window and opens it, looking after Milio)
O, how my heart is beating—while I am waiting!
Now—there he crosses the street, the distance is growing.
See, how noble his bearing—how fascinating!
One can see he is grand—his manner is royal!
Yet he's kind and gentle and frank and loyal—
How high he carries his head: See, he is turning and smiling; he has seen me—Dearest!
(throws kisses)
He never fails to turn—O, how endearing!
He knows I'm watching—he turns the corner—disappearing—(sighs)

NATALIA: Here are your walking boots, Miss Zazà.

ZAZÀ: I want my hat on!
Please hurry!

NATALIA: It's there—before you upon the mantel.

ZAZÀ: Quello?
Vuoi che Milio mi creda un istrice od un riccio?! . . .
(Va da sè, trascinandosi con una sola scarpa ad un piede a prendere il cappello che le conviene nello spogliatojo.)

NATALIA: (segendola) Signora!
mia signora . . . che fa? . . .

ZAZÀ: Così mi spiccio.

NATALIA: Ma signora! . . .
(suono di campanello)

ZAZÀ: (spaventata) Si suona!?
Non ci sono: partita, ammalata . . . defunta . . . tutto!! . . .
(Natalia esce.)
Sarei spedita!
Una visita! . . .
(cercando i guanti)
i guanti dove sono?
Oh, disdetta!
Fa nulla . . .

NATALIA: (annunziando) È la signora Anaide.

ANAIDE: (a Zazà, entrando, cerimoniosa) Benedetta . . .

ZAZÀ: (lieta, ma rapidamente)
Mamma, se avete fame, mangiate!
Avete sete?
Bevete!
Avete sonno? un letto troverete:
avete da parlarmi?
Ritornerò . . .
(esce correndo)

ANAIDE: (interdetta)
Zazà! . . .
(a Natalia)
Adesso dove corre quella saetta?

NATALIA: Va a salutar l'amico alla stazione . . .

ANAIDE: (lieta) Parte?

NATALIA: Sì.

ANAIDE: Oh! non ritornasse mai, da nessuna parte!

NATALIA: Torna domani l'altro . . .

ANAIDE: (seccata, sedendo presso il tavolo) Maleducato!
(Suonano)

NATALIA: Vado ad aprir . . .

ANAIDE: Che noja! . . .
(Visto il cognac sul camino va a versarsene un bicchierino che beve rapidamente.)
(Entrano Cascart e Natalia)

CASCART: (a Natalia) Non c'è?
perchè vorrei . . .

NATALIA: Fra poco . . .
la signora
(accenna Anaide) l'aspetta ancora lei . . .

CASCART: (con spiacevole sorpresa, salutando) Signora . . .

ZAZÀ: That one?
He'll take me for a porcupine with stickers—I won't wear it!
(She hops off with one shoe on to select another hat from dressing-room.)

NATALIA: (following) Miss ZaZà—wait one moment—just one!

ZAZÀ: He cannot bear it!

NATALIA: (trying to put on her shoe) Please, Miss Zazà—
(The bell rings.)

ZAZÀ: (frightened) Who's ringing?
I've gone walking—departed—
I've a headache—say I'm dead—anything—
(Exit Natalia)
I'll not get started
If it's a caller.—
(hunting for her gloves)
Where can my gloves be hiding?
How unlucky!
No matter—

NATALIA: (announces) It's only Madam Anaide—

ANAIDE: (enters, to Zazà, ceremoniously) May God bless you!

ZAZÀ: (joyously, very quickly)
Mamma, if you are hungry, there's plenty—for that dry feeling,
Take this here.—
If you are sleepy, the lounge may look appealing!
And if you want to see me,—I will return—
(runs off)

ANAIDE: (upset) Zazà! . . .
(to Natalia)
Where is she running now, the crazy creature?

NATALIA: Off to meet her friend down at the railroad station.

ANAIDE: (pleased) Leaving?

NATALIA: Yes.

ANAIDE: Well—if he returned no more, I should not be grieving!

NATALIA: Day after next he comes.

ANAIDE: (annoyed, sits down beside table) I hate that rascal!
(bell rings)

NATALIA: I'll see who is there.

ANAIDE: Annoying!
(She sees cognac on the mantel—fills a glass and gulps it down.)
(Cascart and Natalia enter.)

CASCART: (to Natalia) Not here?
Now, if I knew?

NATALIA: She's coming—here, the lady is waiting for her too.
(indicates Anaide)

CASCART: (unpleasantly surprised, bows) Beg pardon—

ANAIDE: (con affettata amabilità) Riverenza!!

CASCART: (a Natalia) Aspetterò . . .
Pazienza!
(Natalia esce dalla destra.)
(Cascart siede sul divano. Anaide siede presso al caminetto facendo il possibile perchè Cascart attacchi la conversazione. Momento di silenzio. Poi, visto il fermo proposito di Cascart nel suo silenzio, non potendone più, Anaide si alza decisa e va a sedere sul divano accanto a Cascart.)

ANAIDE: Che ne dite, Cascart? suvvia, parlate!

CASCART: E voi, che cosa dunque ne pensate?
Or siete lieta!

ANAIDE: Io, lieta!
Dio buono!!! . . .

CASCART: Non m'odiavate?

ANAIDE: (con dignità) Domando perdono!
Voi di Zazà m'avevate rubato il cuore! . . .

CASCART: (ridendo) Il cuore?! . . .

ANAIDE: (levandosi) Perciò, nel mio stato di madre, v'odio, e vi copro di fango! . . .
Uomo, vi stimo, v'ammiro e compiango!
Con voi non fece pazzie . . .

CASCART: Voi trovate Ch'ora ne faccia?

ANAIDE: Pazzie da legnate. . . !
(sedendo nuovamente)
E dove corre?
Che cosa pesca?

CASCART: (levandosi serio) Chi può supporre?
Vattelapesca!! . . .
Sapete; è sdrucciolevole la strada della vita: quando una donna ruzzola . . . buona notte, è finita. . . !

ANAIDE: (sospirando) Purtroppo!
(levandosi)
Ma conoscere almen la verità Saper di quel suo Milio le generalità!

CASCART: (con mistero) Io ne so qualche cosa . . .

ANAIDE: (balzando) Davvero? oh Dio, parlate! salvatemi la figlia!

CASCART: Dirò . . . non dubitate . . .
(Zazà entra lieta e si arresta ridendo francamente come colta da un'idea comica vedendo Cascart e Anaide accanto.)

ANAIDE: (pretending joy at seeing him) I'm delighted!

CASCART: (to Natalia) I'll wait for her—don't worry.
(Exit Natalia)
(Cascart sits on sofa. Anaide sits near fireplace trying every possible means to induce Cascart to begin a conversation. A pause; then seeing that Cascart is determined not to speak first, she can stand it no longer, rises resolutely and goes to sit beside him on the sofa.)

ANAIDE: What's your opinion, Cascart?
Speak freely, frankly!

CASCART: And you?
I guess it pleases you to see me—now you are happy!

ANAIDE: I happy?
God forbid it!

CASCART: You did not hate me?

ANAIDE: (very dignified) Excuse me—YOU did it.
You stole my daughter's heart from me, and no other—

CASCART: (laughs) Heart, you call it?

ANAIDE: (rising) And therefore as her mother, I detest you—fling mud at you, berate you, but as a man I esteem you—I pity and not hate you.
With you she tried no nonsense.

CASCART: You suspect then that this is different?

ANAIDE: She is simply crazy!
(sits down again)
Where is she going?
Where is she straying?

CASCART: (rising gravely) There is no knowing,
There is no saying!
The road of life is steep and slimy
Unto the heights ascending,
And when a woman stumbles blindly,
She'll fall before long—then comes the ending.

ANAIDE: (sighing) I know it!
(rises)
If I only knew the facts about this man!
About her precious Milio;
I'll find out all I can!

CASCART: (mysteriously) There's something I could tell you—

ANAIDE: (jumping up) What! really?
Tell me about it!
O save my daughter, tell me!

CASCART: I'll tell you—you need not doubt it!
(Zazà enters joyfully and stops, laughing openly, as though struck by a comical idea, on seeing Cascart and Anaide together.)

ZAZÀ: (ad Anaide e Cascart) Ah, ah, ah!
Che quadretto!
È molto, è poco che m'aspettate insieme? . . .
Ed i vicini non han gridato al fuoco . . . ai ladri . . . agli assassini. . . ?
Non credo alla mia vista . . .

ANAIDE: (offesa) L'hai sempre avuta trista!
Ma tua madre e Cascart sono persone piene d'educazione, e fra noi sedie o tazze non sono mai volate!

ZAZÀ: (sorridendo) Eh!!

ANAIDE: (seria) Basta—
Ei vuol parlarti—
Io vo di là.
(a Cascart)
Scusate!
(saluta ed esce dalla sinistra)

ZAZÀ: Cascart, mio camerata, mi piace il rivederti . . .
Siedi . . .

CASCART: Son qui a proporti affari . . .

ZAZÀ: (sedendo distratta) Ah!

CASCART: (sedendo a sua volta presso al tavolo) M'hanno offerti Dei buoni patti.

ZAZÀ: (sempre con aria sbadata) Ah?!!

CASCART: (serio) È tempo di mettere giudizio o tutte le scritture ci vanno a precipizio!

ZAZÀ: Offrono?

CASCART: Da Marsiglia . . .

ZAZÀ: (balzando) Non vado in capo al mondo!
Perchè non al Tonkino, allora?

CASCART: (perdendo la calma) Cioè Dove lui vuole!

ZAZÀ: (severamente) Questo riguardo solo me!
(siede volgendo le spalle a Cascart)

CASCART: (dopo un momento, cercando riprendere la calma)
Buona Zazà del mio buon tempo, ascolta: è il vecchio amico che ti parla al cuore: non è il geloso che domanda amore ma l'uom che a la miseria un dì t'ha tolta!
Per te sola io son qui: per te m'increbbe di veder l'arte da te tradita!
Hai avuto un capriccio! . . . e chi non l'ebbe? ma il capriccio è di un dì . . . lunga è la vita!! . . .

ZAZÀ: (come assorta) Peggio se questa dolce— illusion non dura!

ZAZÀ: (to Cascart and Anaide)
Ha ha ha ha! what a picture!
You can't be waiting for me together long?
Or there's no telling but that I'd find the neighbors all excited, police or fire or murder yelling!
I thought my eyes deceived me!

ANAIDE: (offended) You never were sharp-sighted!
Your mother, child, and Cascart both have good breeding, always etiquette heeding.
I did not throw the dishes and he would not abuse me!

ZAZÀ: (smiling) Eh!!?

ANAIDE: (gravely) Enough—he wants to see you!
I'll go in there!
(to Cascart)
Excuse me.
(Bows and goes into room at left)

ZAZÀ: Cascart, my friend and partner, sit down, I'm glad to see you!
How are you?

CASCART: I came to you on business.

ZAZÀ: (sits down abstractedly) Ah!

CASCART: (takes chair near table) They have made us a splendid offer!

ZAZÀ: (as before) Ah?

CASCART: (gravely) To future business we must now be looking, or for the good engagements we'll fail to get a booking.

ZAZÀ: What offers?

CASCART: Marseilles wants us!

ZAZÀ: (jumps up) I'll not go to the backwoods!
I might as well go off to China!

CASCART: (losing his temper) I see his wishes guide you—

ZAZÀ: (curtly) That's something which concerns but me!
(Sits with her back to Cascart)

CASCART: (after a pause, trying to regain composure) My dearest Zazà, for old times' sake hear me!
It is your good old pal to you appealing,
And not the lover out of jealous feeling—
The man who saved you from want and degradation.
For your sake I am here, for you I'm grieving,
To see your art betrayed for something hollow.
You have a passing fancy!—it is deceiving
Our fancies last but for a day, and years will follow!

ZAZÀ: (as though far away) Pity me, if from dreaming I should awaken later!

CASCART: (incalzando) T'inganni! se durasse sarebbe una sventura!	CASCART: (earnestly) Believe me—if this lasted, your sorrows would be greater!
ZAZÀ: (estasiata) Fosse tal guadio eterno com'ei me l'ha giurato.	ZAZÀ: (ecstatically) He swore our joy would be endless!— Your bitterness deceives you!
CASCART: Ricco non è: Che aspetti? che t'abbia abbandonato?	CASCART: He is not rich: —What prospect other than that he leaves you?
ZAZÀ: Niuna promessa: amore solo Zazà gli chiese!	ZAZÀ: No binding promise: His love was all I asked him!
CASCART: E s' anco ti sposasse? saresti . . . una borghese! No: resta libera: resta la limpida gola squillante del rosignuolo: serbati all' ilare tuo ritornello irresistibile e civettuolo. . . ! Serbati al plauso, alla vertigine, dea della folla china al tuo piè. È questo il vivere, è questo il bello! Illusa! destati, ritorna in te!!	CASCART: And even should he wed you? What are you? Only a housewife! No—stay free, unfettered: cling to your calling! Your golden voice was not meant for seclusion! Cling to your gay little songs, light and airy, Bringing you plaudits and flowers in profusion! Do not renounce the applause and the laurel, To crowds a goddess—their idol remain! Keep to the pathway all strewn with roses: You dreamer, awake! Be yourself again!
ZAZÀ: (animandosi) Bello è soltanto il vivere sempre con l'uomo amato!	ZAZÀ: (with animation) Life is sweet only when united with the beloved forever!
CASCART: (impaziente) Tutte le cose passano . . .	CASCART: (impatiently) That is soon past and forgotten.
ZAZÀ: (rivoltandosi) Io non ho ancor mutato!	ZAZÀ: (turning on him) But I will not change—no, never!
CASCART: (incalzando sempre) Ma puoi cangiare! . . .	CASCART: (still more urgently) You might forget it.
ZAZÀ: Amare un altro? . . .	ZAZÀ: And love another?
CASCART: E perchè no?	CASCART: And why not, pray?
ZAZÀ: Tu scherzi!	ZAZÀ: You're joking!
CASCART: (prorompendo) Un dì m'amasti!	CASCART: (impulsively) Once you loved me!
ZAZÀ: (gridando) Io?! non t'ho amato, no!	ZAZÀ: (with an outcry) I?—I never loved you, no!
CASCART: (stupito) Neghi?	CASCART: (dazed) Never?
ZAZÀ: (sorridendo quasi con compassione) M'illusi, amore non conoscevo: tutto che mi cresceva intorno era cattivo e brutto. Ti conobbi, eri buono; ti piacqui e mi piacesti. fui tua . . . com'ero d'altri; nè tu te ne dolesti . . . (nervosa) E dici che t'amavo? e amor questo è per te?! Cascart, lasciami ridere, . . . ridi tu pur con me!	ZAZÀ: (smiling almost pityingly) So young was I, yet often heard the power of love derided; my inner self was crude—my youthful soul was all unguided. I met you and you were kindly; we liked each other truly, And I was yours—like many who scrupled not unduly. (nervously) And you say that I loved you? Love means no more to you? Cascart—we'll laugh together—that is the best we can do!
CASCART: (irritato) Pazza! tu sogni!	CASCART: (irritated) Stop—you are dreaming!
ZAZÀ: Lasciami sognar! son paga, e basta!	ZAZÀ: Then let me dream on, and do not try to awaken!
CASCART: No! l'ora del risveglio sarìa per te nefasta: Un' altra può rapirtelo, Zazà!	CASCART: No—for the hour has come—your faith must now be shaken. Another woman might claim him, Zazà.
ZAZÀ: (con impeto di passione) Io sfido Iddio a togliermelo! È mio, e non lo cedo! è mio. . . !	ZAZÀ: (passionately) Not Power Divine can rob me of him! He's mine—I will not yield him!— He's mine!
CASCART: Cieca e stolta! e se avesse un'amante?	CASCART: You are blind and foolish! What if he loves another?
ZAZÀ: (come folle lo afferra disperatamente per le mani) Menti!! . . .	ZAZÀ: (seizes his hands wildly) Falsehood!!
CASCART: (concitato) No, dissi il vero, e costante Fido amico ti son nel dolore! Ha un' amante a Parigi . . .	CASCART: (excitedly) No—I'm not lying! Like a brother I grieve at what I am revealing. He has another love in Paris!
ZAZÀ: (tremante di emozione, portando le mani al cuore, quasi senza voce) Ah! . . . mio core. . . ! Come sai? . . . Chi t'ha detto? . . .	ZAZÀ: (trembling with emotion, puts her hands over her heart and says in a toneless voice) Ah—I am reeling! How do you know?— Who told you?
CASCART: (commosso e turbato) Sei bianca . . . Sei tremante . . . la voce ti manca . . .	CASCART: (moved and troubled) You feel ailing— You are trembling—your voice is failing—
ZAZÀ: (insistendo) Chi t'ha detto? la prova! la prova. . . !	ZAZÀ: (insisting) Who has told you? And prove it—yes, prove it!
CASCART: Tio dirò: ma sii calma, disperarsi che giova? A Parigi una sera ero alle "Varietà". Milio vid'io con una donna . . .	CASCART: I'll tell you—but be quiet, you must not get excited. One fine evening while in Paris I went to a Variété— And saw Milio there with a woman—
ZAZÀ: Una donna . . .	ZAZÀ: With a woman?
CASCART: Ma elegante, distinta . . . Pareva una moglietta . . . Li rividi all'uscita: poi montarono in fretta in carrozza . . . e ridevano. . . !	CASCART: Looking distinguished—a wifely look about her. I met them at the exit—he did not leave without her. I saw them take a cab—both laughing—
ZAZÀ: Ridevano! e non sai altro?	ZAZÀ: Laughing! And is that all You know?
CASCART: Non basta?	CASCART: You want more?
ZAZÀ: (al colmo dell'orgasmo) Infatti, chi potrebbe esser mai fuor che un'amante? (scoppiando) e questo sapevi? e me lo dici ora soltanto! Adesso che sono là, felici, a Parigi ad amarsi!	ZAZÀ: (in high excitement) No question—what else could this woman be except a sweetheart—? (turning on him wildly) And you said nothing? You kept it from me until this minute? Meanwhile those two are there in town, united, to love and laugh together!
CASCART: Non m'ascoltavi!	CASCART: You would not listen!
ZAZÀ: Ed io son qui a rodermi! . . . (urlando) Bene non finirà, per Dio! (Anaide appare sull'uscio a sinistra e si avanza.)	ZAZÀ: And now I sit here fuming! (fiercely—very loud) This thing will not end well—I vow! (Anaide appears in door l. and comes forward.)
ANAIDE: Dite figliuoli . . . che mai succede?	ANAIDE: Why so excited? Tell me, my children—

ZAZÀ: (disperatamente) Egli ha un'amante . . .

ANAIDE: (stupefatta) Cascart?!

ZAZÀ: (in collera) Si vede che voi vivete dentro la luna!
Milio ha un'amante!

ANAIDE: (scattando) Oh! che fortuna.
(correggendosi tosto)
Cioè che scandalo! . . .

ZAZÀ: Che infamia, intendi? . . .

CASCART: Non sei sua moglie, poi . . .

ZAZÀ: (furente) Lo difendi?
Ah!
Cascart . . . quanto soffro . . . quanto male mi fa!
(Scoppia in pianto e cade fra le braccia di Cascart.)

CASCART: (commosso) Hai ragione; ti calma, è una malvagità . . .

ZAZÀ: (sempre piangendo) Oh! sì.

CASCART: Convien punirlo! . . .

ZAZÀ: Sì, sì!

CASCART: Piantarlo!

ZAZÀ: (decisa sciogliendosi dall'abbraccio) Ah no!! . . .

CASCART: Che farai?

ANAIDE: Figlia mia, la dignità . . .

ZAZÀ: Non l'ho!
Me ne infischio!!
Lasciarlo? . . . ora vi mostrerò.
(chiama mentre corre alla toletta)
Natalia!

ANAIDE: Che vuoi fare?

CASCART: Ma insomma . . .

ZAZÀ: Natalia!
(Natalia entra dalla destra.)
Il cappello, il mantello . . . fa presto . . . vado via!
(Natalia esce dallo spogliatojo e torna con gli effetti di Zazà.)

ANAIDE: Ma pensa . . .

CASCART: Rifletti!

ZAZÀ: Io parto.

ANAIDE: Che tenti?

ZAZÀ: Lo seguo a Parigi!

CASCART: Ma calmati, senti. . . !

ZAZÀ: Saper voglio il vero!

ANAIDE: E sola tu vai?

ZAZÀ: (desperately) I hear he has a sweetheart!

ANAIDE: (bewildered) Cascart?

ZAZÀ: (impatiently)
Good gracious!
One might believe that you are benighted!
Milio has a sweetheart—

ANAIDE: (jumps up)
I'm delighted—
(Catching herself)
I mean—what a scandal!

ZAZÀ: It's an outrage, I tell you!

CASCART: You are not his wife—so—

ZAZÀ: (furious) You defend him?
Ah, Cascart—how I suffer—it is breaking my heart!
(Breaks into tears and falls sobbing into Cascart's arms.)

CASCART: (moved) There, don't worry, be quiet—it is a shame! a disgrace!

ZAZÀ: (still weeping) Oh yes!

CASCART: He must be punished!

ZAZÀ: Yes, yes!

CASCART: You will leave him!

ZAZÀ: (frees herself resolutely from his arms) Oh no!

CASCART: Well, what then?

ANAIDE: Dearest child, show dignity!

ZAZÀ: Not I!
I have no dignity.—
But leave him?
I'd rather die!
(Calls as she runs to dressing-room)
Natalia!

ANAIDE: Where are you going?

CASCART: Be careful!

ZAZÀ: Natalia!
(Natalia comes from right.)
Bring me my hat—my coat—get ready; and hurry—I am leaving!
(Exit Natalia to dressing-room and returns with Zazà's hat and wrap)

ANAIDE: Consider—

CASCART: Take counsel!

ZAZÀ: I'm going!

ANAIDE: And where to?

ZAZÀ: I'll follow him to Paris!

CASCART: Be calm before you dare to!

ZAZÀ: I want to know the truth now!

ANAIDE: You go all alone?

ZAZÀ: (a Natalia che le ha portato il cappello e il mantello) Su, su, Natalia, tu meco verrai; ma spicciati presto!
(Natalia esce.)

CASCART: Zazà, via, m'ascolta, t'invito a riflettere un'ultima volta.

ZAZÀ: (a Natalia che ritorna in cappello e scialle) Sei pronta? partiamo!

CASCART: Zazà! . . .

ANAIDE: Figlia mia! . . .

ZAZÀ: Bisogna ch'ei scelga—
O me o l'altra . . .
Via!
(Prende per la mano Natalia e la trascina rapidamente.—Anaide levando le braccia verso l'uscio donde Zazà è partita.— Cascart siede con un gesto desolato.)

Cala la tela.
Fine Del Secondo Atto.

ZAZÀ: (to Natalia, who hands her hat and coat) Come, come, Natalia—I'll take you with me, but hurry—time is pressing!
(Exit Natalia)

CASCART: Zazà, I pray you, listen! I ask you to consider this thing that you would do!

ZAZÀ: (to Natalia who returns with hat and shawl) All ready? then follow!

CASCART: Zazà!

ANAIDE: Dearest daughter!

ZAZÀ: Now he must choose between us—I or the other!—
Come!
(She takes Natalia's hand and draws her off quickly. Anaide raises her arms imploringly and goes after her to door. Cascart sits down dejectedly.)

Curtain.
End of Act II.

Atto Terzo.

Il Salotto Di Milio Dufresne A Parigi, Riva Di Mazzarino: mobili elegantissimi; pianoforte a coda nel mezzo colla tastiera verso il fondo della scena; poltroncine, causeuses, divanetti all'ingiro; a destra finestra che dà verso la Senna; innanzi alla finestra elegante scrivania sulla quale, tra le altre carte, sarà una lettera colla busta lacerata; in fondo, nel mezzo, porta che dà nell'anticamera; altra porta a sinistra che dà negli appartamenti.

Milio solo, in costume da viaggio, è seduto al tavolo presso la finestra a destra; sta ordinando alcune sue carte sparse alla rinfusa sullo scrittojo; dopo rimane un momento come malinconico ed assorto, la testa fra le mani.

MILIO: Oh mio piccolo tavolo ingombrato sì come è ingombro di sgomenti il cuore!
Domani a Saint-Étienne sarò tornato . . . l'ultima volta . . . a salutar l'amore! . . .
Come dirle ch'io parto? oh come fare a lasciarla? a mentire? il labbro mio come le giurerà di ritornare mentre che il cuore le dirà l'addio? . . .
Mai più, Zazà, raggiar vedrò da gli occhi tuoi la fiamma de l'amor! . . . e mormorar mai più t'udrò calde parole, stretta sul mio cor . . .
Oh baci, oh nostre tenere ebbrezze, notti incantate, lunghe carezze, sereni dì! . . .
Il nostro amore è naufragato, e ci ha travolti l'onda del fato!
Tutto finì! . . .
(Signora Dufresne entra dalla

Act III.

Drawing-room in Milio Dufresne's home at Paris. Very elegantly furnished, grand piano in center of stage, with keyboard away from audience; armchairs, sofas, lounge chairs; at right a window overlooking the Seine; in front of window an elegant desk on which, with other papers, is a letter with the envelope torn open; in center back a door opening on reception hall; another door at left leads to the other dwelling-rooms.

Milio, alone, in travelling costume, is seated at the desk, near the window at right; he is arranging some papers scattered over the desk. He sits silently a moment in sad thoughts, with his head resting in his hands.

MILIO: Oh, my poor desk, encumbered with this confusion. Just like my heart, that is beating beneath a load of care!
Tomorrow I am returning to St. Étienne; to see my dearest in a last fond meeting!
How can I tell her gently—O, how betray her?
How can I lie and swear to leave her never?
And while my lips may vow I'm soon returning, my heart knows well it is farewell forever.
No more, Zazà, shall I behold within your eyes the fire of love aglow!
Nor hear your whispered words grow more ardent when I fold your trembling form in my arms.
O rapture!
O joy of our kisses unending!
Clinging caresses, when night was descending—porta a sinistra, seguita da Marco, il cameriere.)

SIGNORA DUFRESNE: Ecco son pronta, Milio, . . .
(al cameriere)
La valigia è al suo posto?

MARCO: È giù nella carrozza.

MILIO: (si è alzato, ha preso il cappello, il soprabito, alcune carte) Bene, scendiamo tosto . . .

SIGNORA DUFRESNE: (a Marco)
Vegliate a tutto . . .
(fà per avviarsi, poi si trattiene ancora) oh, Marco, . . . mi scordavo . . .
Aspetto una signora Dunoyer . . .
Se giunge, trattenetela: le dite che tornerò . . . che sono alla stazione . . .

MARCO: Sta bene.

SIGNORA DUFRESNE: (fa qualche passo poi si rivolge) Ricordate . . .
(sillabando)
Dunoyer . . .
(Esce con Milio.)
(Marco li accompagna e compare in anticamera con essi; poi ricompare.)

MARCO: Dunoyer? . . .
Chi è? . . .
Ora veniamo a noi!
(Va al tavolo a destra, apre il tiretto, prende la scatola dei sigari del padrone, ne sceglie uno e lo accende.)
La fumatina solita . . .
(aspirando il fumo, da buon conoscitore)
Peuh! non c'è male, poi! . . .
(prende un giornale dal tavolo)
Ora un po' di notizie politiche: fa bene! . . .
(Si sente il canto delle lavandaje, come venendo di sotto alla finestra, accompagnato dai colpi di battitojo, mentre Marco va al canapè a sinistra e si allunga per leggere comodamente.)

LE LAVANDAJE: (giù dalla Senna) Perchè soletta sei laggiù? Margot?
Sparve il riso dal tuo viso.
Il tuo ben fuggì nè più torna qui!
E canti il labbro non ha piu!
Ma rinnovare amor si può Margot!
Prendi il mazzuol, ritorna ancor
Come l'onda fugge amor.
Ridi con noi—Margot!
(risate e colpi di mazzuolo.)

MARCO: Ecco la nenia solita che dalla Senna viene: Oh, queste lavandaje! . . .
(si sprofonda nella lettura del giornale)
(Scampanellata, Marco butta via sigaro e giornale ed esce dal fondo.—Entrano Zazà e Natalia con Marco dopo un istante.)

MARCO: (introducendole, a Zazà) Lei dunque è la signore Dunoyer?

ZAZÀ: (coglie l'occasione) Sì, sì, Dunoyer . . .

MARCO: Sia buona di trattenersi qui un istante: madama è andata alla stazione; accompagna il signore che parte per Lione.

ZAZÀ: Grazie: l'aspetterò . . .
(Marco saluta ed esce dal fondo chiudendo la porta.)

NATALIA: Che turbamento! . . .

ZAZÀ: Tremi? Perchè?

NATALIA: Se dalla casa ci scacciano. . . ?

ZAZÀ: Che temi?
Non sono io forse teco?

NATALIA: Voi? che potreste fare? in casa sua?

ZAZÀ: La loro casa la puoi chiamare!
Il domestico ha detto: il signore . . . madama . . . qui fiorisce l'idillio! qui si sorride ed ama!!

NATALIA: Ebben, fuggiam, signora: ormai tutto v'è noto!

ZAZÀ: Perchè fuggir? sei folle: tutto m'è invece ignoto! . . .

NATALIA: (dopo una pausa, guardando il salotto) Han scelto un incantevole, elegante soggiorno . . .

ZAZÀ: Più del mio! . . .
Troppo bello! . . .

NATALIA: Perchè?

ZAZÀ: Guardati intorno:
Non odi la tacita stanza da un' onda di baci pervasa?
non senti l'acuta fragranza d'amore, che corre la casa?
È un' orma invisibile, un segno di giunco sul lido del mare . . . chè dove la donna ha suo regno un nulla può tutto svelare! . . .
Lo vedi quel cantuccio? i cuscini! . . . il divano? là s'abbraccian

Days of delight!
Our love has been wrecked in life's mighty ocean, and swept in the deep is our tender emotion—
Joy takes to flight!
(Mme. Dufresne enters from door l., followed by Marco, the butler.)

MME. DUFRESNE: Now I am ready, Milio—(to butler)
The baggage has all departed?

MARCO: It's down in the cab, ma'am!

MILIO: (Has risen, taken his hat and coat and some papers.) All right—it's time that we started.

MME. DUFRESNE: (to Marco) Be watchful and careful!
(She is about to go, but stops and turns back.)
O Marco, that reminds me.
I am expecting a Mme. Dunoyer;
Please ask her if she will wait, and tell her I will return—I've merely gone to the station.

MARCO: Very good, ma'am.

MME. DUFRESNE: (goes a few steps, then turns back) Now remember—(distinctly) Dunoyer!
(Exit with Milio)
(Marco goes out with them to reception hall and then reappears.)

MARCO: Dunoyer?
Who's that?
Well, of this chance I am glad!
(He goes to desk at r., opens drawer, takes out box of cigars, chooses one and lights it.)
The usual daily smoke—
(blowing off smoke with air of connoisseur) Puh!—
After all, not bad!
(taking newspaper from desk)
Now for a little political discourse—it broadens!
(While Marco goes to the sofa at l. and lies down to read in comfort, the song of washerwomen on the bank of the Seine floats through the window—to the beating of the wooden paddles used in washing the clothes.)

THE LAUNDRESSES: (from the riverbank) Why are you walking all alone, Margot?
Your smile has faded,
Your face looks jaded,
Your own sweetheart dear
Has left you, we fear,
And songs from your lips we no longer hear!
A new love soon in your heart will grow, Margot!
Come, take your washing, love comes and goes,
Just like the water it surges and flows;
Smile with us—laugh, Margot!
(Laughter and beating of paddles)

MARCO: It is the daily song that floats to us from up the river!
Oh, these young washerwomen!—
(He buries himself in his newspaper. Bell rings energetically; Marco throws away cigar and paper, and exit to reception room. Presently, Marco reenters, with Zazà and Natalia.)

MARCO: (holding door for them to enter, to Zazà) Pardon me—you are Mme. Dunoyer?

ZAZÀ: (grasping opportunity)
Yes, yes!
Dunoyer!

MARCO: Be good enough to enter here, and wait.
Madame went to the station to the Lyons train,
To see the Master off—he's leaving town again.

ZAZÀ: Thank you—then I will wait.
(Marco bows and exit at back, closing door.)

NATALIA: I am so worried.

ZAZÀ: Worried?
And why?

NATALIA: Suppose they drive us from the house!

ZAZÀ: You're flurried!
Why fear when I am with you?

NATALIA: You?
What could you do for me?
In his own home?

ZAZÀ: In their own home might be as well to call it:
The Master and the Madam—I heard the butler saying.
And here they live their idyl, with love like children playing!

NATALIA: Now you know all!
Come with me, and endeavor to get home!

ZAZÀ: Why run away?
How foolish!
I now know less than ever!

NATALIA: (after a pause, looking about her) They have selected lovely quarters—I know it must wound you.—

ZAZÀ: Finer than mine—far too lovely!

NATALIA: But why?

ZAZÀ: Just look around you!
I fancy a flood of caresses
From every corner is sweeping,
I scent the sweet fragrance of roses
Where love lies sleeping in seclusion.
A sound, that is swaying like a reed,
A mark in the sand by the sea—
Small trifles are betraying the truth,
Wherever a woman may be!
See there, the corner sofa—the la sera, si stringono la mano e si parlan d'amore! . . .

Oh, li vedo, son là, e non posso dividerli! . . .
—Folle divengo già!

NATALIA: Posson udir, calmetevi . . . signora! . . .

ZAZÀ: (mal contenendosi) Chi sarà questa donna? . . .
Se il servo interrogassi . . .
(gli occhi suoi cadono sulla lettera ch'è sul tavolo; sordamente.)
Ah!

NATALIA: Che è?

ZAZÀ: Guarda: una lettera . . . sopra quel tavolino . . .

NATALIA: (si avvicina al tavolo e si china a leggere la soprascritta) "A madama Dufresne, riva di Mazzarino" (spaurita)

È ammogliato! . . . signora, signora . . . andiamo via!

ZAZÀ: (fissando la lettera, convulsa, angosciata, con voce spenta) Ammogliato?!
No, è l'uso, vivendo in compagnia di dare il proprio nome . . .
(poi afferrando convulsamente la lettera)
Tra poco lo saprò!

NATALIA: (spaurita, supplichevole) Non l'oserete!?

ZAZÀ: (risoluta) È aperta . . . e poi? . . .
Venni per ciò!
(legge rapidamente)
"Quando, amica, a Parigi verrà vostro marito" . . . (lascia cadere la lettera, accorata dalla subita rivelazione)
Dunque è vero? . . .
Ammogliato! . . .
Non aveva mentito quel povero Cascart . . .
Ammogliato?!

NATALIA: Signora, buona signora, andiamo . . .
Perchè soffrire ancora?
tutto è scoperto . . .

ZAZÀ: (come pazza) Andare?
No: qui restar conviene: egli è certo già stanco di queste sue catene!
Me sola ama! io l'aspetto ferma; egli giungerà, lascerà la sua sposa . . . e meco partirà!

NATALIA: (bruscamente scuotendola) Ah! vengono . . .
(La porta a sinistra si apre; una bambina entra senza vedere le due donne e va verso l'etagère vicino al piano per cercare della musica.)
(a bassa voce, rapidamente)
Signora . . . guardate: una bambina.

ZAZÀ: (nello spavento) Dove? chi è? . . .

NATALIA: Signora, . . . certo è la sua piccina, è sua figlia! . . .

ZAZÀ: Sua figlia! . . .
(La bambina si accorge delle straniere e resta interdetta.)

NATALIA: Le abbiam fatto paura . . .

ZAZÀ: Parlale tu . . . non oso . . .

NATALIA: (osservando Totò) Che dolce creatura!
(parlando alla bambina)
Signorina, vi abbiamo spaurita?

TOTÒ: (sempre semplicemente) No, signora, venivo al pianoforte . . .

NATALIA: Vi disturbiamo . . .

TOTÒ: No . . . la mamma è uscita: l'aspettate?

NATALIA: Da un pezzo . . .
Ora più corte saran l'ore con voi.

TOTÒ: (confusa) Signora, come siete gentile . . .
(Fa cenno a Zazà ed a Natalia di sedere e siede anch'essa nel mezzo.)

ZAZÀ: (facendosi forza) Angioletto, il tuo nome?

TOTÒ: Antonietta Dufresne è il nome mio . . . ma mi dicon Totò . . .

ZAZÀ: (con soavità)
Totò . . . Perchè?

TOTÒ: Voi mi date del tu?
Perchè?

ZAZÀ: Perchè . . . tu rassomigli . . . voi rassomigliate ad uno . . . che amo tanto . . .

TOTÒ: Uno che amate?
Io somiglio a papà . . . lo conoscete?

ZAZÀ: (con slancio) No! . . .

TOTÒ: Mi vuol tanto bene, . . . è tanto buono . . . io da sei mesi nol vedea, sapete . . .

ZAZÀ: Sei mesi! . . .

TOTÒ: Or lo rivedo e lieta sono . . .
Presso la nonna in Algeria siam stati . . . babbo, al ritorno, al circo ci ha portati . . .
Ma insieme a noi tra breve partirà.

cushions soft and warm,
There they embrace at evening—he holds her in his arm;
And all their love confessions—I see them—I can hear—
And can not separate them:—My brain will turn, I fear!

NATALIA: Try to be calmer, I beg,—I implore you!

ZAZÀ: (hardly able to contain herself) Who is she, the other woman?
Maybe I might ask the butler—
(Her eyes are attracted by letter on desk—softly) Ah!

NATALIA: What now?

ZAZÀ: See here: there is a letter lying upon the table!

NATALIA: (goes to table and bends over to read address) It is plainly addressed to Mme. Dufresne, Paris!
(frightened) He is married!
Oh, Madam, dearest lady!
What shall we do?

ZAZÀ: (looks at letter—then in an agonized, breaking voice)
Married?!
No—no—it is the custom to take the man's name too
When people live together—
(seizes letter convulsively)
The contents soon will show—

NATALIA: (frightened, imploringly) You would not dare to?

ZAZÀ: (resolutely) It is open—why not?
I want to know!
(reading quickly)
"My dearest friend:—When in Paris I hope to meet your husband"— (drops letter—overcome by the revelation)
Then it is true—he is married—it was not a falsehood poor Cascart told me!
He is married!

NATALIA: Dearest lady, dearest Madam—do come away!
Why should you suffer longer?
All is discovered—

ZAZÀ: (as though crazed) Leave here?
No, we surely must remain, for I know well he's weary and hates the galling chain.
He loves only me!
I believe him—he will not betray!
He'll leave his wife—I know it—and go away with me!

NATALIA: (taking her by the arm and shaking her) Oh—they're coming!
(Door opens and a little girl enters without seeing the two women; she goes to music rack near the piano to look for some music.)
(Natalia softly, speaking quickly)
See, Madam! look—the little girl!

ZAZÀ: (startled) Who? and where?

NATALIA: O madam, it surely must be his daughter, his little girl!

ZAZÀ: His daughter!
(The child sees the strangers and stops shyly.)

NATALIA: She is afraid of strangers.

ZAZÀ: You speak to her—I dare not!

NATALIA: (looking at Totò) O, what a little darling!
(to the child)
Were you frightened, little lady, when you saw us?

TOTÒ: (ingenuously) No, madam, I had come to play the piano.

NATALIA: Do we disturb you?

TOTÒ: No—my mamma is not here yet!
You've been waiting?

NATALIA: Quite awhile now—time will pass quickly since you are with us here.

TOTÒ: (shyly) How very lovely of you to say that!
(She motions Zazà and Natalia to seats and sits down between them.)

ZAZÀ: (forcing herself to composure) What's your name, dear, will you tell me?

TOTÒ: Antonietta Dufresne I was baptized, but they call me Totò.

ZAZÀ: (sweetly) Totò?—and why?

TOTÒ: Now your voice is more friendly—why?

ZAZÀ: Perhaps you may resemble—indeed you have great likeness
To someone—whom—I love dearly—

TOTÒ: Whom you love dearly?
I look just like my papa—do you know him?

ZAZÀ: (with sudden resolution)
No!

TOTÒ: He loves me very much—my darling papa!
You see, for six whole months I had not seen him.

ZAZÀ: For six months?

TOTÒ: But now he's back and I am very happy!
We were with Grandma in Algiers to visit;
Then Papa came, and took us to the circus,
And soon we'll go away—all three together!

ZAZÀ: (ansiosa) E dove andate? . . .	ZAZÀ: (anxiously) Where are you going?
TOTÒ: In America.	TOTÒ: To America.
ZAZÀ: (commossa) Ah . . .	ZAZÀ: (agitated) Ah!
TOTÒ: Voi non avete, dunque, una Totò?	TOTÒ: You haven't got a little Totò, have you?
ZAZÀ: No, il cielo, Totò, non me l'ha data! S'io l'avessi, Totò, l'adorerei . . . come adorata dal tuo babbo sei . . .	ZAZÀ: No, dear, for heaven did not send me any. If I might have a Totò, I would love her, Just as your father loves his own dear little girl.
TOTÒ: Certo che mamma e babbo amano assai la piccola Totò! . . . V'ama, signora, la vostra?	TOTÒ: My mamma and my papa both love Their own little Totò dearly. Do yours love you, Dear lady?
ZAZÀ: (con profonda tristezza) Mamma?! io non l'ho avuta mai! Mamma usciva di casa in sull'aurora . . . ed ero sola . . . fin che ritornava . . . Ma la sera . . . al ritorno . . .	ZAZÀ: (very sadly) Mamma? I scarcely ever saw her. My mamma left the house at early morning And I was lonely—all day long, till evening, When she came home again—and then—
TOTÒ: (interessandosi) Vi baciava?	TOTÒ: (eagerly) And then she kissed you?
ZAZÀ: (dolorosamente) No: non volea destarmi . . . Avea ragione, c'era sì poco da vedere al mondo! Lo sai, piccina mia? ci son persone che devi amare d'un amor profondo! sono cattive . . . e il mondo le disprezza . . . pure han tanto sofferto . . . in fanciullezza . . .	ZAZÀ: (sadly) No—for she feared to wake me—she had reason, For there was little joy in life to wake to. You know, my little dear, there are some people Whom you must love more tenderly than others, For they are wicked and the world condemns them, But they have suffered deeply when they were little—
TOTÒ: (con interesse crescente) I bimbi senza pane e senza tetto?	TOTÒ: (with rising interest) The children with no homes, nor bread and butter?
ZAZÀ: (amaramente) Vi sono bimbi ai quali manca molto più! . . .	ZAZÀ: (bitterly) And there are children who lack more than bread, dear. Much more!
TOTÒ: (alzandosi ed andando verso di lei) Sono i bimbi che non han l'affetto del babbo? . . .	TOTÒ: (gets off chair and goes to Zazà) Are they the children who have no dear daddies To love them?
ZAZÀ: I bimbi senza padre . . . hai colto! (con le lagrime agli occhi abbracciando Totò) Questa per un fanciullo è la maggior sventura! Ma tu . . . vivi tranquilla . . . soave creatura; il padre tuo . . . nessuno . . . ti strapperà! . . .	ZAZÀ: The children without fathers—poor babies— (She clasps Totò in her arms with tears in her eyes) For little girls that is a great misfortune, But you need never fear it, you sweet darling, Your father, dear, no one will take away—
TOTÒ: (guardandola) Signora . . . piangete? . . .	TOTÒ: (regarding her) Dear lady, you are crying—
ZAZÀ: No, non piango . . . Un ricordo m'accora . . . (levandosi come per nascondere la sua angoscia) A studiar tu venivi . . . Ti prego . . . suona un poco . . .	ZAZÀ: No, not crying—I remember something. (rises to hide her anguish) You came in here to practice—will you not play something?
TOTÒ: Non oso: di me certo voi vi farete gioco! . . .	TOTÒ: I dare not—you might laugh at me if I play badly!
ZAZÀ: (protestando) Totò, che dici! . . .	ZAZÀ: (protesting) Oh no—I would not!
TOTÒ: Allora, suono un' "Ave Maria"; è bella e piace tanto alla mammina mia. (Totò parlando si è accostata al pianoforte, lo apre, sceglie un foglio di musica, e siede.)	TOTÒ: Then I will play "Ave Maria" for you— It's very nice and pleases my mamma when I play it. (While speaking, Totò goes to the piano and takes a piece of music which she puts on rack, then sits down.)
ZAZÀ: (mal frenando il pianto) Sì, Totò, va! (Cade sul divano a sinistra piangendo a dirotto mentre Totò comincia a suonare l' "Ave Maria" di Cherubini.)	ZAZÀ: (scarcely able to restrain her tears) Yes, Totò, do! (She sinks on sofa l. weeping, while Totò begins to play Cherubini's "Ave Maria".)
NATALIA: (piano, sorreggendo Zazà) Coraggio! . . .	NATALIA: (softly soothing Zazà) Have courage!
ZAZÀ: È finita! . . . Ammogliato . . . e un angiolo ha per figlia! . . . ho sognato . . . ho sognato . . . (Totò tutta assorta nel pezzo non s'accorge di Zazà che accasciata dal dolore piange dirottamente.) Dir che ci sono al mondo crëature nate fra gli agi e contro il mal protette, che a l'uom prescelto se ne vanno pure spose felici e madri benedette! E non son paghe! E ignorano i dolori di noi cresciute al freddo ed alla fame che stanche alfine di cotanti orrori cerchiamo scampo ne la vita infame! Noi siam le maledette!! il nostro cuore alla speranza invano si aprirà?! Il mondo ci rifiuta anche l'amore! Quanto dolor! . . . di me che addiverrà?!	ZAZÀ: It is ended—he is married And has a little angel daughter—I was dreaming, I was dreaming! (Totò, all engrossed in her piece, does not notice Zazà, who, overcome by sorrow, is weeping heartbrokenly.) And there are beings in this world, I know, Who born to wealth, and shielded more than others, Are led before the altar pure as snow, Becoming happy wives and blessed mothers! What do they know of us, whose childhood dreary Was nothing but cold and want and rank starvation, And who, at last of hopeless struggle weary, Gave up the fight and yielded to temptation! We are the outcast kind, our hearts are crying For one small ray of hope to bring relief, But love to us the whole world is denying, It is too much—how can I bear this grief?
TOTÒ: (levandosi dal pianoforte) Ho finito! . . . baciatemi . . .	TOTÒ: (rising from piano) Now it is finished. Will you kiss me?
(la bacia ardentemente) Non piangete! (in ascolto, udendo rumore nell'anticamera) È Mammà. (va verso l'uscio del fondo)	(Zazà kisses her passionately) Please stop crying. (offstage a noise in reception hall) That's Mamma! (goes toward door at back of stage)
NATALIA: Dio! che succede adesso?!	NATALIA: Lord help us—what will happen!
ZAZÀ: (levandosi e rassicurandola) Nulla . . . (La porta si apre. La signora Dufresne appare e resta un po' interdetta vedendo delle straniere, poi si avanza mentre Zazà a porte) Oh, come è bella! (salutando) Voi, signora, aspettavate una signora Dunoyer . . . E il nome mio. Noi di porta ci siamo sbagli-	ZAZÀ: (rising and reassuring her) Nothing! (Door opens, Mme. Dufresne appears and stands a little embarrassed at finding strangers—then advances) (Zazà says, aside) Great heaven! How lovely! (bowing) I understand that you expected A Mme. Dunoyer—which is my name.

Volli spiegar l'equivoco e restai.
Intanto con la bimba conversai . . .
È un angiolo! . . .
Felice voi . . .
Men vo . . .
(andando verso l'uscio seguita da Natalia) Scusate!

TOTÒ: (presso alla sua mamma) Addio, signora . . .

ZAZÀ: (rivolgendosi con intensa emozione) Addio, Totò! . . .
(Zazà e Natalia escono. Totò corre ad abbracciare la madre che sembra interrogarla confusa.)

Il sipario cala lentamente.
Fine Dell'Atto Terzo.

Atto Quarto.

Il salotto di Zazà come nel secondo atto.
(Anaide seduta presso al tavolo.—Malardot inquieto in piedi vicino a lei.)

MALARDOT: Così, nessuna nuova?

ANAIDE: Forse verrà più tardi; non so . . . qualche disgrazia forse?
Dio ce ne guardi!

MALARDOT: Non si dovea lasciarla allontanare nemmen di quattro passi!
Con quei nervi, vi pare. . .?!
Ora mi avete messo in un impiccio serio! mi mangio il meglio degli incassi per ogni suo capriccio!!
Ieri sera, ad esempio: hanno imparato che Zazà non cantava . . . e m'han piantato!

ANAIDE: (balzando in piedi)
Qualcuno! s'apre l'uscio . . .
È lei. . . !
(Anaide scompare, correndo incontro e poscia rientra in iscena con Zazà, che camminando quasi automaticamente, traversa la stanza senza vedere Malardot.—Zazà si getta sulla sedia presso al tavolo come oppressa; Malardot passa a destra impacciato.—Dalla destra in fondo entrano Cascart e Natalia che rapidamente sembra mettere Cascart al corrente dell'avvenuto a Parigi.)

ANAIDE: (accompagnando Zazà) Figliuola mia . . .
Mia Zazà!

ZAZÀ: (sedendo) Buondì, Mamma . . .

We came to the wrong house, but soon detected
Our own mistake, remaining to explain.
Your little girl was here to entertain;
She is an angel.
You are fortunate—Adieu!
(goes to door followed by Natalia)
Excuse us!

TOTÒ: (beside her mother) Good-by, dear lady!

ZAZÀ: (turning to her, with deep emotion) Good-by, Totò!
(Exit Zazà and Natalia—Totò runs to embrace her mother, who bends to question her wonderingly.)

Slow Curtain.
End of Act III.

Act IV.

Zazà's living-room, as in Act II.
(Anaide seated near table. Malardot standing near her—restlessly shifting his feet.)

MALARDOT: So you know nothing further?

ANAIDE: Perhaps she will come later!
Who knows—perhaps some awful scandal?
I await her in fear!

MALARDOT: You never should have let her go four paces out of your sight unguarded.
And she high-strung—hot-headed!
This escapade my box receipts retarded more than you think; my business goes to pieces.
The people want their favorites, last night the house was empty when they discovered that Zazà was not singing.
I pay for her caprices!

ANAIDE: (jumps to her feet) The door is being opened:
It is she!
(Exit Anaide, running to meet Zazà and reentering with her. Zazà walks as though dazed, crosses stage without noticing Malardot, then drops on chair near table, exhausted. Malardot passes to right, embarrassed. From r. back Cascart and Natalia enter. She is hurriedly explaining to him what happened in Paris.)

ANAIDE: (close beside Zazà) My beloved daughter, my Zazà!

ZAZÀ: (sitting down) Good morning, Mamma!

ANAIDE: (riprende una sedia e siede come per cominciare un lungo discorso) Che orribile agonia! . . .
Ma tu ci darai subito notizie . . . stavo in pena . . .

ZAZÀ: Oh no, Mamma, non posso . . .
Mi reggo in piede appena: tutta notte ho vegliato . . .
Racconterò . . . ma dopo!

ANAIDE: (insistendo) Vorrei . . .

ZAZÀ: La sciami in pace.
(volgendosi scorge Malardot—irritata e sorpresa)
Voi qui! per quale scopo?

MALARDOT: (imbarazzato)
Io . . . venivo a sentire . . .

ZAZÀ: (amaramente) Oh! già lo sò!! . . . se canto!!
Voi pagate!
Che importa a voi se ho il cuore infranto!
Sì, canterò. . . !
(levandosi, ad Anaide)
Ma portalo, Mamma, lontan di qua!

MALARDOT: (scusandosi) Io non pensavo . . .

ZAZÀ: (a Malardot) Andate . . .
(a Anaide)
Mamma . . . va via!
va . . . va . . .
(Anaide esce con Malardot.—Zazà ricade spossata sul canapè.)

NATALIA: (a Cascart, dolcemente) Signore! è adesso—la vostra volta . . . ditele qualche—mite parola . . . se voi non siete—chi la consola?

CASCART: (un po' risentito, bonariamente, avanzando) Che debbo dirle—se non m'ascolta?

ZAZÀ: (supplichevole) Ah, tu non puoi, Cascart, dire così . . . i tuoi consigli io seguirò . . .
Sei tu ch'io stimo!
Oh, mio Cascart, non reggo più . . . perdo la testa!
Che far debbo? . . .
Di'!?
(Natalia esce dalla sinistra.)

CASCART: (commosso) Zazà, piccola zingara, schiava d'un folle amore, tu non sei giunta al termine ancor del tuo dolore!
Quanto convien di lacrime che sul tuo volto scenda pria che il tuo solo ed umile pellegrinar riprenda!
Tu lo credesti libero . . . or la speranza è spenta . . .
Ora sei tu la libera, e il tuo dover rammenta!
Ahi! del sognato idillio sparve l'incanto a un tratto!
una manina d'angelo indietreggiar t'ha fatto!

ANAIDE: (drawing up a chair and sitting down, as though for a long talk) What an awful time of waiting!
But now you must tell me all—I have such an anxious feeling!

ZAZÀ: Oh no, Mamma, I couldn't—my head is simply reeling—
All night I could not sleep—I'll tell you all—but later!

ANAIDE: (insisting) I would—

ZAZÀ: Let me alone, I beg you!
(Turns and sees Malardot; annoyed and surprised)
You here?
What are you bringing?

MALARDOT: (embarrassed) I—came to inquire—

ZAZÀ: (bitterly) Oh, it's about my singing!
You pay me!
So what's the odds if I'm heartbroken?
Yes—I will sing!
(rises;—to Anaide)
Take him away, Mamma—but far from here.

MALARDOT: (apologetically) I was not thinking—

ZAZÀ: (to Malardot) Please leave me!
(to Anaide)
Mamma, please hurry—go—go!
(Anaide exit with Malardot; Zazà drops on sofa again, exhausted.)

NATALIA: (to Cascart, softly)
Now, sir, it is your turn for consolation.
Say something kindly—show consideration.
Of your good counsel she is sore in need.

CASCART: (a little hurt but kindly—going toward Zazà) What can I tell her, if she will not heed?

ZAZÀ: (pleadingly) Ah, Cascart, do not talk like that to me!
I know your counsel good and wise will be.
Cascart, I have no faithful friend but you,
I can not stand this—tell me what to do!
(Exit Natalia, left.)

CASCART: (with emotion) Zazà, you wild little Gipsy,
The folly of love you are tasting.
The cup is not drained, and not ended
The tears that for him you are wasting!
Many will flow from your lovely eyes
Before you awaken from this dream,
Before you go onward alone again,
Faith in humanity shaken!
You had believed he was fancy-free,

ZAZÀ: (come mormorando) Ah, quella figlia . . .

CASCART: Piangi la pace tua svanita . . .
Ma rammenta che un altro dovere hai nella vita:
Quell'uomo ha una famiglia . . . Rendilo!

ZAZÀ: Abbandonarlo?

CASCART: È tuo dovere: rendilo!
Che? . . .
Non vorresti farlo?

ZAZÀ: Ciò non dissi . . .

CASCART: Che pensi?

ZAZÀ: Nulla . . . che lo farò . . . dovessi anche morire . . . oggi . . . gli parlerò . . .

CASCART: No! non vorrai riceverlo? ti rovini! . . .

ZAZÀ: Ha promesso di tornare oggi!

CASCART: Pazza tu, che glie l'hai concesso!
Pazza le mille volte! . . .
Se lo vedi . . . sei persa!
Scrivigli . . . se gli scrivi la cosa è assai diversa. . .
Egli sen va . . . tu all'arte ritorni come pria . . .

ZAZÀ: Non sarebbe cortese . . .

CASCART: (brutale) Parli di cortesia?!
Qui si tratta di moglie, di figlia, di dovere!

NATALIA: (entrando in fretta)
Oh signora, signora . . .
Venitelo a vedere . . . il signor
Milio è all'angolo della via . . .

ZAZÂ: (corre alla finestra) Milio!!

NATALIA: E là; Ei conversa ridendo con il signor Courtois.

ZAZÀ: (con gioja delirante) Mio
Cascart, ti ringrazio dei tuoi consigli . . . di . . . li seguirò . . . ma parti, ch'ei non ti trovi qui . . . va . . . va . . .

CASCART: Men vo: Ma presto su te discenderà l'ora del pentimento! . . .
Ahi povera Zazà! . . .
(esce)

ZAZÀ: Natalia, guarda! si vede che ho pianto?

For vanished hopes you are crying!
You have no fetters to hold you,
Duty before you is lying!
Alas, the dream that you cherished so
Proved a deception hollow;
It was the hand of an angel that Pointed to the path you must follow!

ZAZÀ: (murmurs) Ah—little Totò!

CASCART: Weep for the hopes and dreams you loved so dearly,
But remember your duty is outlined very clearly.
Your lover has a family—release him!

ZAZÀ: How can I stand it?

CASCART: It is your duty:
release him!
What?
Does not right demand it?

ZAZÀ: I cannot tell!

CASCART: You're thinking?

ZAZÀ: Nothing—I'll tell him,
though,
And if it kills me, Cascart, today I'll know my fate!

CASCART: No—you must not receive him—that is fatal.

ZAZÀ: He will be here,
Today, as he has promised.

CASCART: To see him is a great mistake, I fear.
You must refuse to see him, for if you do, you'll falter.
But write him—written reasons the case are bound to alter.
He'll go his way—you to your art once more restoring.

ZAZÀ: It would not be polite,
though—

CASCART: (harshly) You're talking politeness?
The question here is wife and child!—
Your duty is to free him!

NATALIA: (enter excitedly) O
Madam—dearest madam!
Come quick if you would see him!
It's Mister Milio—standing on the corner!

ZAZÀ: (runs to window) Milio!

NATALIA: He's there!
Talking and laughing with Mr.
Courtois.

ZAZÀ: (wild with joy) Dear Cascart—I am grateful for your advice and—I—
Will follow it—but leave now—he's coming—so good-by!
Go—go!

CASCART: I'll go!—
But soon your hour of sorrow and penitence will reach you!
—Alas—poor little Zazà!
(Exit)

ZAZÀ: Natalia—look if you can discover traces of tears?

NATALIA: Anzi non fosti mai bella così!

ZAZÀ: La colazione preparagli intanto . . .
(osservando intorno)
Dio! quale orrendo disordine, qui!
Ei che a Parigi ha quel ricco salotto. . . !
(volgendosi)
Sulla poltrona m'hai lasciato il busto?!
Vedi; quel pajo di scarpe là sotto!
(accenna il tavolo)

NATALIA: (prendendo il busto e le scarpe) Siam giunte or ora, poi!
mi sembra giusto!

ZAZÀ: Taci. . . ! la polvere . . . sul pianoforte!
l'accappatojo sul paravento . . .
(*si serve dell'accappatojo per pulire il piano.— Scampanellata:
Zazà si rivolge.*) E quel cappello . . .
(indicando quello sulla campana dell'orologio) (Natalia sempre tenendo le scarpe e il busto corre a cercare il cappello; quando si volta, Zazà le getta l'accappatojo; allora Natalia va a gettar tutto nello spogliatojo, ne chiude la porta e corre a destra ad aprire a Milio.)

ZAZÀ: (dando un ultimo sguardo) Per buona sorte tutto è a suo posto . . .
Dio! che momento!
(Milio appare sulla porta.)

ZAZÀ: Eccoti, amore e vita!
Deh, ch'io ti guardi e baci: oh, t'amo: ancor ti stringono le braccia mie tenaci!

MILIO: (abbracciandola) Che hai? perchè m'abbracci sì forte, stamattina?

ZAZÀ: Oh, il cattivo! io son sempre uguale a te vicina!

MILIO: No: conosco i tuoi baci; so del tuo amore immenso!
(Natalia prepara la tavola.)
T'amo troppo, e il mistero indovinare io penso!

ZAZÀ: (in un abbraccio lungo)
M'ami troppo?
Mai quanto basta! . . .
Ti par tedioso l'amor mio? . . .
È che ho fatto un sogno tormentoso!
Tu non m'amavi più . . . non ti vedevo più . . .
Dei dolci tempi andati, dei baci innumerati, del nostro amor che fu, altro non rimanea che una parola . . . anzi due voci e una minaccia sola: Mai più!
E ridestandomi—ancor ti vedo!
m'ami, ai tuoi baci—ancora io

NATALIA: You never looked more lovely, young and fair!

ZAZÀ: Prepare some lunch meanwhile—he may be hungry.
(notices disorder around her)
Lord—what a wild disorder everywhere!
And he has such a fine house—
what a contrast!
(turning around)
Now who has left my corset on the chair?
Those shoes were lying there for two days past!
(She scans table.)

NATALIA: (taking shoes and corset) We've only just arrived—we have excuses.

ZAZÀ: Silence!
The piano—there the dust is thickest!
The bathrobe on the screen will clean it quickest!
(She takes the robe to wipe the piano; bell rings)
(starts and turns) And that old hat
there—
(points to the hat on the clock) (*Natalia still with shoes and corset runs to get the hat; when she turns back, Zazà throws her the bathrobe; Natalia then throws everything into the dressing-room, pell-mell, closes door and runs r.
to open the door for Milio.*) ZAZÀ: (giving a last glance around) Now all is right, I guess.

All is in order!
Heavens—such a mess!
(Milio appears in door.)

ZAZÀ: My love!
My life!
What rapture to kiss you,
to behold you!
O dearest, once more my longing arms can fold you to my bosom!

MILIO: (embracing her) Why are you so impassioned this morning, so excited?

ZAZÀ: O you bad boy!
When you come here, I'm always so delighted!

MILIO: No—I know too well your kisses and your great love—all mine!
(Natalia sets table)
And I love you far too much!
Your thoughts I would divine.

ZAZÀ: (in a long embrace) Too much you say—I want still more,
dear!
These warm caresses
May have a cause—I had a horrid dream, and that depresses:
Your love for me was dead,
You left me all alone—
Joy gone beyond returning,
Our kisses fond and burning,
Our love—one long regret.
One haunting phrase remains, no pledge, no token,
By two strange voices like a menace credo!

Come felice,—Milio, mi fai . . . lasciami piangere . . .

MILIO: (asciugandole gli occhi) Zazà, che hai?

ZAZÀ: Nulla: i miei nervi! solita storia!
Non ti dar penna . . . facciam baldoria!
Vogliamo ridere . . . far vita lieta . . . Hai appetito?

MILIO: Come un poeta!

ZAZÀ: (gridando a Natalia) Presto! servi!
E tu siediti, come sedesti, qui, all'indomani della "Rivista" di Bussy . . .
(Natalia serve. Zazà fingendo calma ed allegria.)
Come la prima volta! . . .
Che notizie mi porti da Parigi?

MILIO: (allegro) Le solite: le nascite, le morti, le corse . . . oh! mi scordavo; i cani ammaestrati al circo!

ZAZÀ: (interrogando ansiosa) E ci sei stato?

MILIO: Cioè: ci siamo stati!

ZAZÀ: (contenendosi) Ci siete stati! . . .

MILIO: Avevo due miei amici meco . . .

ZAZÀ: (fissandolo seria) Due amici?

MILIO: Che hai? . . .
Mi fissi e mi fai l'eco!

ZAZÀ: Nulla; pensavo che sono felici
Di venire a teatro con te; quei tuoi amici!
Zazà, tu non la prendi, Zazà! . . .

MILIO: Tu hai ragione . . .
Vuoi? stasera . . .

ZAZÀ: (vivamente) Ah, davvero?

MILIO: Ho visto il cartellone che annuncia una commedia . . .
Quindici giorni fa ero . . .

ZAZÀ: (interrompendo) Con un amico . . .

MILIO: Ero . . .

ZAZÀ: (come sopra) Alle "Varietà".

MILIO: (fissandola) Che hai?

spoken:
No more!
And now to your return once more I waken.
In your love and your kisses my faith is not shaken!
I am so happy since you are here—
The tears are coming—

MILIO: (drying her eyes) What is it, dear?

ZAZÀ: Nothing—I'm only nervous—the same old story;
Let us be festive—and do not worry!
Laugh with me—life is sweet!
Clouds have all vanished!
Dear, are you hungry?

MILIO: Yes—I am famished!

ZAZÀ: (calls to Natalia) Serve the luncheon!
And you sit here, as on the day we two
Sat here, just after Bussy's new "Review"!
(Natalia serves; Zazà pretends to be calm and merry.)
Like that first, blessed morning!
Now tell the news you brought me.
From the City—

MILIO: (merrily) The same old thing—some births, some deaths—the races,
O yes—some new trained dogs put through their paces
At the circus—

ZAZÀ: (questioning anxiously) You went to see them?

MILIO: I went—or rather we!

ZAZÀ: (controlling herself) You went with others?

MILIO: I took two friends of mine, so we were three.

ZAZÀ: (looks at him gravely) You took two friends?

MILIO: What now?
You stare and echo what I'm saying?

ZAZÀ: Nothing—my thoughts had gone a-straying.
You do not take your Zazà out at all
To theatres with you—like your two friends.

MILIO: We might be going this evening, if you like?

ZAZÀ: (eagerly) Ah, really?

MILIO: I saw a poster showing announcement of a funny play, about two weeks ago.
I went—

ZAZÀ: (interrupting) You took a friend?

MILIO: I went—

ZAZÀ: (as above) To the Variétés!

MILIO: (looking at her surprised) What ails you?

ZAZÀ: Sono nervosa . . .
Cascart ieri è venuto a propormi Marsiglia . . . ed io non ho voluto . . .

MILIO: Perchè?

ZAZÀ: Non hai affari laggiù da quelle parti . . .

MILIO: Ed io delle scritture non voglio più privarti. Il mio viaggio . . .

ZAZÀ: (scattando, si alza e passeggia nervosa) Alfine!! . . .
Eccolo il gran discorso!! . . .
Morivi se di nuovo non lo mettevi in corso!!
Il tuo viaggio!!! invero che ci mancava questo! . . .

MILIO: Via, ti calma, bambina . . . sai che ritorno presto, fra tre o quattro mesi . . .

ZAZÀ: O cinque, o sei . . .
Che fa?
Misura forse il tempo la gelosia?!

MILIO: (con rimprovero) Zazà . . . tu sai che parto solo!

ZAZÀ: (si volge impetuosa) Solo?
Tu menti!
Vai . . . bugiardo!
Con tua moglie parti!! . . .

MILIO: (levandosi sorpreso) Mia moglie! . . .
Sai?! . . .
(Ricade seduto. Un silenzio.)

ZAZÀ: Ebbene, sì, so tutto!
Che hai moglie . . . che mi fuggi!
(un silenzio)
Senti; io non vo' dolermi di ciò: tu non sapevi il futuro . . .
Mi dolgo di ciò che in me distruggi!
So che nel mio destino entrar tu non dovevi!
Perchè m'hai tanto amata! . . .
Perchè! . . .

MILIO: Zazà!

ZAZÀ: Ah! no! tu non avevi il diritto di fare tutto ciò!
La mia vita era quella che tu sai . . . io sorridevo . . . non pensavo al male . . . tu m'apparisti allora . . . e t'adorai, dolce amor mio fatale!
E sognai di passar lieta al tuo fianco, una vita d'amor rigenerata! e mi vedevo già col crine bianco sposa e madre adorata! . . .
Come tornar qual fui, dopo tal sogno?! del mio passato io stessa mi vergogno!!
No, tu dovevi dir la verità . . .
Che non t'avrei amato . . . allor! . . .

ZAZÀ: I am nervous—
Cascart urges making
A contract with Marseilles—and I should hate to do it.

MILIO: But why?

ZAZÀ: You would be taking no business trips into those parts.

MILIO: I'd not prevent your bookings any longer, if I knew it!
There is my journey—

ZAZÀ: (jumps up—nervously pacing room) Now for it! Here we have the awful subject!
You had to bring it up again—you couldn't do without it!
This journey that you plan—I simply cannot bear to talk about it!

MILIO: Come, calm yourself, my girlie, you know I'll only stay three months or maybe four—

ZAZÀ: Or five or six—one day of absence to a jealous heart is torture!

MILIO: (reproachfully) Zazà, alone you know I'm going—

ZAZÀ: (turns impetuously)
Alone?
You're lying!—
Go, deceiver!
You're going with your own wife.

MILIO: (jumps up surprised)
My wife?
You know?
(Falls back in chair—a pause.)

ZAZÀ: Yes—it is so—I know it!
You have a family—you will leave me!
(A silence)
Listen: You could not see the future; the past I'm not regretting,
But what you have destroyed in me, and that you could deceive me!
It was wrong to enter into my life—to keep me from forgetting;
Why did you ever love me? Ah why?

MILIO: Zazà!

ZAZÀ: Ah no, you had no right to do this thing and make me suffer so!
You knew my past—and what I was you know,
I gaily smiled, no thought of evil bearing,
And then you came and I adored but you,
And love was sweet beyond comparing!
I dreamt, transfigured by my love unbounded,
By your side I would walk through life, protected!
I saw myself with silvery hair, surrounded
As wife and mother, loved, adored, respected!
How can I live the old life after dreaming,
All of my past seeming to me a horror?

	You should have told the truth and spared me—Ah! I would not then have loved you—oh no!
MILIO: Zazà!! (Zazà cade tra le braccia di Milio, piangendo)	MILIO: Zazà! (Zazà falls weeping into Milio's arms.)
ZAZÀ: No! tu lo sai ch'io mento; che t'avrei sempre amato! eri il mio solo ed unico amor predestinato! Ma mi dovevi, o Milio, il pianto risparmiare d'una felicità . . . che non potevi dare! (Cade sul canapè piangendo a dirotto. Milio è presso a lei.)	ZAZÀ: No—you must not believe me. I would have loved you knowing You were not free, bestowing my only true love on you; But Milio, all the tears that flow so bitterly For joy you cannot give, you might have spared me. (Sinks on sofa sobbing; Milio is beside her)
MILIO: Zazà, tu mi rimproveri d'averti troppo amata? Forse io potea riflettere? Tu mi domandi ciò! La tua carezza prima forse m'hai tu negata? Forse potevo amarti diversamente? No! Dimmi: ho avuta la forza io di lasciarti? di fuggire lontano? . . . Io sono qui, presso le labbra tue, chino a baciarti, a desiarti, come il primo dì! No! mia colpa non è. Eravam nati l'uno per l'altra: era fatalità! bisognava non essersi incontrati per non volersi bene, o mia Zazà! (A poco a poco egli si è seduto su di una sedia dietro il divano, e a questo punto Zazà, piegandosi indietro, si trova fra le sue braccia, piangendo.)	MILIO: Zazà, can you reproach me for loving you too madly? I could not think or reason—I will admit it gladly! That first caress decided—and you did not deny it. Could any man resist you or leave you coldly?—No! Tell me, had I the courage to go away and miss you, To flee from danger wisely? I still am here, Close to the lips I love—waiting to kiss you, Warm with desire whenever you are near! No—it is not my fault—we two were fated To love each other—it is destiny! That Power by whom all beings were created, My Zazà, willed that you should meet with me! (He has meanwhile approached a chair behind the divan and is about to sit down, when Zazà turns, weeping, and finds herself in his arms.)
ZAZÀ: (in lacrime, perdutamente) Sì! sì!	ZAZÀ: (sobbing) Yes, yes!
MILIO: (susurrando, tenendola tra le braccia) Tu sei buona; m'hai tanto adorato . . .	MILIO: (soothingly, holding her close) Dear, you are good—you loved me well, I know it—
ZAZÀ: E sempre t'adoro. . . !	ZAZÀ: And still I love you!
MILIO: Tuo sempre son stato! lo sai. . . !	MILIO: I am yours as ever, believe me!
ZAZÀ: So che parti . . . mi lasci . . .	ZAZÀ: You are going—to leave me—
MILIO: Ma torno! . . .	MILIO: Not long, dear,
ZAZÀ: Amor che finisce non ha più ritorno!	ZAZÀ: Since love is ended, you depart forever!
MILIO: Che pensi?	MILIO: Who told you?
ZAZÀ: (risoluta) Non torni! . . . L'ha detto . . . Totò! . . .	ZAZÀ: (firmly) Forever—she told me—Totò!
MILIO: (levandosi bruscamente) Totò!! . . . Tu hai veduta mia figlia!!	MILIO: (jumps up brusquely) Totò! You mean to say you saw my daughter?
ZAZÀ: Sì . . .	ZAZÀ: Yes!
MILIO: No . . . Smentisci! . . . Ma dove? (silenzio) Ma dove?	MILIO: No! Deny it! But where? (pause) But where?
ZAZÀ: Da te!	ZAZÀ: At home!
MILIO: Sei stata a Parigi?! sei stata da me?!	MILIO: You went into the City?— You went to my house?
ZAZÀ: Sì . . .	ZAZÀ: Yes!
MILIO: Hai visto mia moglie?	MILIO: And did you see my wife?
ZAZÀ: L'ho vista!	ZAZÀ: I saw her!
MILIO: Hai parlato?	MILIO: Did you meet her?
ZAZÀ: Sì! . . .	ZAZÀ: Yes!
MILIO: Questo delitto hai compiuto? Hai osato. . . !	MILIO: You dared to do this thing, you dared to greet her?
ZAZÀ: (levandosi diritta, terribile) Io! . . . perchè no?	ZAZÀ: (rises up straight and terribly tense) I—and why not?
MILIO: (con furore crescente) Che hai detto? che hai fatto, malaccorta!	MILIO: (with growing fury) What did you say—what did you do, blundering creature!
ZAZÀ: Nulla! Ma s'io son quella che adori, . . . che t'importa?	ZAZÀ: Nothing! But if you are "still mine as ever," what do you care?
MILIO: Che le hai detto? hai potuto la pace sua turbare?	MILIO: What did you tell her? To destroy her peace of mind—ah!—did you dare?
ZAZÀ: Ah, come l'ami! Vedi l'ami! non puoi negare!!	ZAZÀ: Oh, how you love her! I know it—you cannot deny it!
MILIO: (cercando scuse) È mia moglie . . . e tu sei . . .	MILIO: (seeking excuses) She is my wife—while you, of course—
ZAZÀ: (fra l'ira e i singhiozzi) Lo so! . . . sono un piaga putrida, che tu celi giù nel tuo cuor profondo! Lo so; sono una stolta che col suo pianto paga il marchio dell'infamia che la segnò nel mondo! "Mia moglie!" quando hai detto "mia moglie" hai detto tutto! Va, che mi bolle il sangue! Non vale il mio più brutto costume di cantante, quella tua donna! . . . Va!	ZAZÀ: (sobbing with anger) I know! I'm something foul to hide away in secret—deep where no one will find it! I know—poor fool, I'm paying with tears the price of living! The brand of shame is scarlet with which the world has marked me. "My wife"—the way you said it—"my wife"—that told the story! Go—for my blood is boiling! Your woman is no better Than we who wear the spangles and gauzy raiment—GO!
MILIO: (folle) Tuosi. . . !	MILIO: (furious) How dare you?
ZAZÀ: Oso!! Le ho detta tutta la verità!	ZAZÀ: I dare! And what is more—the truth I let her know!
MILIO: Le hai parlato? Ah, l'infame! Tu non le hai detto . . .	MILIO: You spoke together? Ah—outrageous! And what did you tell her?
ZAZÀ: Ho detto tutto: sì, tutto! I nostri baci, l'ardente affetto, le notti innamorate; sai? le follie! . . . Che sei mio, tutto mio! . . .	ZAZÀ: I told her all that has happened! About our kisses, our glowing passion, The nights of mad delight—do you remember? That you Are mine—all mine!
MILIO: (l'afferra come per batteria, poi la getta a terra, urlando) Sgualdrina!	MILIO: (Seizes her as though to strike her, then flings her from him to the floor, shouting.) You harlot!
ZAZÀ: (a terra) Ah, come l'ami, lei!!! (silenzio)	ZAZÀ: (crushed) Ah! how you worship her! (silence)

MILIO: (tremante di rabbia, con voce soffocata, mentre prende il soprabito ed il cappello) Ed ora io mi domando come, vicino a te, potei scordar la dolce mia buona creatura; come insozzare il nome mio, ch'ella porta, e me in quell'immondo amplesso della tua carne impura!
(Zazà poco a poco si alza e si ritrae verso il caminetto a sinistra)
Oh! tu m'hai ben guarito dalla fatal follia!
ora chi sei conosco; so il fondo del tuo cor! e al rientrar domani nella dimora mia, d'averti conosciuta mi resterà il rossor!
(Va a passo concitato sino alla porta a destra.)

ZAZÀ: (in uno sforzo ultimo) Basta! non più!
Ritorna pur nella tua dimora: vi troverai la pace . . .

MILIO: (che stava per uscire, ritornando indietro vivamente) Che?

ZAZÀ: Nulla io dissi . . .

MILIO: Allora, Zazà, perchè mentire?

ZAZÀ: Nulla han saputo . . .
Io sola or so quanto volevo. . . !
(senza voce)

MILIO: Zazà, una parola!

ZAZÀ: Tua moglie . . . tu l'ami . . . mi basta!

MILIO: (appressandosi) Zazà!

MILIO: (trembling with rage—in a choked voice, goes to get his hat and coat) How could I ever forget her—how could I leave her for you?
That pure, sweet, lovely being, and with you be enraptured?
And how defile and dishonor the name she bears with me,
Lowered in your embrace, by your vile arts captured!
(Zazà has slowly risen and withdrawn to fireplace l.)
Oh, rest assured you have cured me of this unspeakable madness!
Now I have learned to know you, now I have looked into your heart!
When I return to my fireside, dark and bereft of all gladness,
Shame that I ever have touched you will be my inglorious part.
(He goes to door r. in great agitation.)

ZAZÀ: (after a last struggle) That is enough!
Your fireside is undisturbed and waiting—
You will find peace and gladness—

MILIO: (who was about to go out, turns back) How?

ZAZÀ: I told her nothing.

MILIO: Then wherefore Zazà, did you deceive me?

ZAZÀ: She suspects nothing—I only learned what I wanted to know.
(Her voice breaks.)

MILIO: Zazà, can you forgive me?

ZAZÀ: Your wife—you love her—that ends it!

MILIO: (going closer to her) Zazà!

ZAZÀ: Va via! vorrei dirti che t'odio e ti sprezzo!
Non posso: ma parti: mi metti ribrezzo . . .
Va . . . taci . . .
(lo respinge)

MILIO: (dopo un istante di lotta, disperatamente) Ah!?!
(Fugge)
(Un silenzio)

ZAZÀ: Che ho fatto?
(corre alla porta)
Egli parte! egli va?
Non torna indietro . . .
(esce correndo nell'anticamera e là si sente gridare)
Milio! Milio!
(nessuna risposta)
(rientra)
Ed io l'ho scacciato!
(un'idea)
Ah! posso richiamarlo!
(corre alla finestra)
Dio!
(chiama)
Milio!!
(un lampo di speranza)
S'è voltato! . . .
(disillusa)
No . . .
(chiamando più forte)
Milio! torna!
Milio . . .
(Lo segue coll'occhio come nell'Atto II)
È all'angolo . . .
È sparito!
(disperata) Sparito! . . .
E non ritorna . . . mai più!
Tutto è finito!
(Cade seduta sui gradini della finestra piangendo.)

Fine.

ZAZÀ: Go, leave! I'd like to tell you "I hate you"—I'm glad to free you—
I cannot!
But go now—I do not want to see you.
Say—nothing—
(She pushes him from her.)

MILIO: (after a moment's struggle—desperately) Ah!
(runs off)
(Pause)

ZAZÀ: What have I done?
(runs to door)
He is leaving!
He has gone
And never will I see him!
(runs to anteroom and calls offstage)
Milio! Milio!
(No reply)
(reentering)
Why did I not restrain him?
(struck with an idea)
Perhaps I still can reach him!
(runs to the window)
Heavens!
(calls)
Milio!!
(with a ray of hope)
He is turning—(disappointed)
No!
(calls louder)
Milio!
Come back, Milio!
(follows him with her eyes as in Act II)
He's at the corner—disappearing!
(despairing)
He's gone—no more I'll see him—no more—
Now all is ended!
(She drops to the window seat, weeping.)

End.

Cavalleria Rusticana (1890)

Rustic Chivalry

MUSIC BY PIETRO MASCAGNI ■ LIBRETTO BY GIUDO MENASCI & GIOVANNI TARGIONI-TOZZETTI ■ BASED ON A PLAY BY GIOVANNI VERGA

Cavalleria Rusticana premiered at the Teatro Costanzi in Rome on May 17, 1890. This one-act opera, set to a libretto by Giovanni Targioni-Tozzetti and Giudo Menasci (based on a short story by Giovanni Verga), launched the vogue of operatic verismo. The story, based on an actual event, takes place in Sicily. Upon returning to his village after serving in the military, Turiddu finds his girlfriend, Lola, married to the carter, Alfio. Turiddu turns his affections to the beautiful Santuzza. The villagers celebrate Easter at the piazza in front of the church. Santuzza pays a visit to Turiddu's mother, Lucia, to inquire about her son. While they are talking, the crack of a whip announces Alfio's arrival. Santuzza begs Turiddu for his love and faithfulness, but when he hears Lola's voice, he spurns Santuzza for his first love. Santuzza goes to Alfio and reveals his wife's infidelity. Alfio swears to kill both Lola and Turiddu in revenge. After a beautiful intermezzo sinfonico, Turiddu invites the peasants to drink wine with him. Alfio enters, and Turiddu offers him a cup, but he refuses; only a duel will settle this matter. The two men embrace in the Sicilian manner, and Turiddu bites off Alfio's right ear, symbolizing the challenge. Turridu asks his mother to bless him and to look after Santuzza. They fight the duel outside the village. Santuzza rushes in only to find her beloved dead and collapses to the ground, crying out, "They have murdered Turiddu."

TURIDDU: O Lola, bianca come fior di spino, .. quando t'affaci te s'affaccia il sole; .. Chi t'ha bacciato il labbro porporino .. Grazia più bella a Dio chiedernon vole .. C'è scitto sangue sopra la tua porta; .. Ma di restarci a me non me n'inporta; .. se per te mojo e vado in paradiso, Non c'entro se .. non vedo il tuo bel viso,
Se per te mojo e vado in paradiso
Non e'entro se .. non vedo il tuo bel viso.
Ah! . . . Ah! . . . Ah! . . . Ah!

SCENA I

La scena rappresenta una piazza in un paese della Sicilia. Nel fondo, a destra, Chiesa con porta practicabile. A sinistral'o steria e la casa di Mamma Lucia. E il giorno Pàsqua.
(Campane interne dalla Chiesa. Si alza la tela. Lascena sul principio è vuota. Albeggia. Paesani, contadini, contadini e ragazzi traversano la scena. Si apre la chiesa e la folla vi entra. Il movimento del popolo continua fino al Coro punto in cui rimane la scena vuota.)

CORO: (Donne di dentro,) Ah!
(Uomini di dentro.)
Ah!
(Donne di dentro.)
Gil aranci olezzano sui verdi margini,
Cantan le allodole tra i mirti in fior;
Tempo è si mormori da ognuno il tenero canto che i palpiti—
Raddoppia al cor
(Le donne entrano in iscena.)
(Uomini di dentro.)

CORO: In mezzo al campo tra le spiche d'oro
Giunge il rumore delle vostre spole,
Noi stanchi riposando dal lavoio
A voi pensiamo, o belle occhidisole.
O belle occhidisole, a voi corriamo,
Come vola l'augelo—al suo richinmo.
(Gli uomini entrano in issena.)

DONNE: Cessin le rustiche opre:
(tor;)
La Virgine serena allietasi del Salvator;
Tempo è si mormori da ognuno il tenero canto che i palpiti—
Raddoppia al cor.

UOMINI: (Allontanandosi.) In mezzo al campo, etc.

DONNE: (Allontanadosi.) Gil aranci olezzano, etc.

TURIDDU: (Behind the scenes.) O Lola, fair as flowers smiling in beauty, Love from your soul lit eyes is glowing softly; .. He who would kiss your lips, red and beguiling .. blissful and favored were he, Knowing such heaven! .. Though your threshold blood, crimson, is staining, .. Caring for nothing, I seek you; scorning to hide me; .. What though I forfeit life, your presence gaining? What were the joy of heaven, were you denied me! What though I forfeit life, your presence gaining, What were the joy of heaven were you denied me.
Ah! . . . Ah! . . . Ah! . . . Ah!

SCENE I

A public place or square in a Sicilian village. At right, in background, a church. At left, the inn and dwelling of Mamma Lucia. Time, Easter morning.
(Peasants, countrymen, countrywomen, and children, cross the stage.)
(The church doors open and the throng enters.)
(The movement continues until the following:)

CHORUS OF WOMEN: (Behind scenes.) Ah! Ah!
CHORUS OF MEN: (Behind scenes.) Ah! Ah!
CHORUS OF WOMEN: (Behind scenes.) Sweet is the air with the blossoms of oranges;
Sings now the lark from the myrtles in flower;
Murmurs of tender song tell of a joyful world,
And of thankful hearts. Ah! gladsome hour!
(The women enter.)

CHORUS OF MEN: (Behind scenes.) Your spinning wheels now busily are humming,
Over fields of golden corn the sound is coming;
We linger where the leafy shade is restful;
Of you we think, and every heart is zestful.
Oh lovely women! Allured by you and enraptured,
Like the bird held by the lure, now we are captured!
(The men enter.)

WOMEN: Work in the field now is ended;—
The Holy Mother mild
Fondles the Child in ecstasy.

ALL: (Withdrawing from stage.)
Murmurs of tender song tell of a joyful world,
And of thankful hearts.
Ah! gladsome hour!
(Enter, Santuzza, approaching Lucia's dwelling.)

SCENA II

Sortita di Alfio.

SANTUZZA: (Entra e si dirige alla casa di Lucia.) Dite, Mamma Lucia—

LUCIA: (Sortendo.) Sei tu? che vuoi?

SANTUZZA: Turiddu ov'è?

LUCIA: Fin qui vieni a cercare il figlio mio?

SANTUZZA: Voglio saper soltanto, Perdonatemi voi, dove trovarlo.

LUCIA: Non lo so, non lo so, non voglio brighe!

SANTUZZA: Mamma Lucia, vi supplico piangendo,
Fate come il Signore a Maddalena,
Ditemi per pietà, dov' è Turiddu.

LUCIA: E andato per il vino a Francofonte.

SANTUZZA: No! l'hanvisto in paese ad alta notte.

LUCIA: Che dici? che dici! se non è tornato casa! Entra!

SANTUZZA: Non posso entrare in case vostra. Sono scomunicata!

LUCIA: E che ne sai del mio figliuolo?

SANTUZZA: Quale spina ho in core!
(Dall' interno schiocchi di frusta e tintinnio di sonagli
(Entrano in iscena i coristi indi Alfio.)

ALFIO: Il cavallo scalpita, i sonagli squillano, schiocchi la frusta, Ehi là! . . . Soffiil vento gelido cada l'acquao nevichi, a me che cosa fa! . . . Il cavallo scalpita, i sonagli squillano, schiocchia la frusta, schiocchi la frusta, Ehi là! .. schiocchi la frusta, schiocchi la frusta, Ehi là! Ehi là!

TENORS: O che bel mestiere fare il carrettiere andar di qua e di là! . . . Oh che bel mestiere fare il carrettiere andardi quà e di là! andardi qua e di là! andardi qua e di là! andardi quà e di là! andar di quà e di là!

ALFIO: (Andante rit.) M'a spetta a casa Lola che m'a ma e mi consola, ch'è tutta fedeltà . . . M'a spetta a casa Lola! che m'ama e mi consola, ch'è tutta fideltà . . . Il cavallo scalpiti, i sonagli squillino, è Pasqua, ed io son quà, . . . è Pasqua ea' io son quà . . . son quà! . . .

SCENE II

(Santuzza, Lucia, Alfio, and chorus.)

SANTUZZA: Tell me, mother Lucia—

LUCIA: (Coming from house.) It is you? What will thou?

SANT: Where is Turiddu?

LUCIA: You ask for him? For him, my son Turiddu!

SANT: I ask you only for him. Pardon, but answer! Where is Turiddu?

LUCIA: Ask me not! I know not; I want no trouble.

SANT: Mamma Lucia, with weeping I pray you!
Even as spake the Saviour to the Magdalen,
Say, in pity say, where is Turiddu!

LUCIA: He's gone to bring some wine from Francofonte.

SANT: No! Last night someone in the village saw him.

LUCIA: What say you? Who told it?
No, he has not yet returned.
Enter!

SANT: I may not step across your threshold;
I cannot pass it, I, most unhappy outcast!
Excommunicated!

LUCIA: What of my son? What have you to tell me?

SANT: Ah! the torture, the heart-pain.
(Cracking of whips and jingling of bells behind scenes.)
(Chorus enters, followed soon by Alfio.)

ALFIO: Gaily moves the tramping horse, Joyful sound the ringing bells; Snap, now, the lash goes, A-hi! . . . The wind may blow cold today, Rain or snow do what it may, I do not care, not I! . . . Gaily moves the tramping horse, Joyful sound the ringing bells; Snap, now, the lash goes, Snap, now, the lash goes! A-hi! .. Snap, now, the lash goes. Snap, now, the lash goes, A-hi! A-hi!

TENORS: Who has a calling merrier than the life of a carrier? Where is a jollier man? . . . Who has a calling merrier than the life of a carrier? Where is a jollier man? Where is a jollier man? Where is a jollier man, a jollier man than he?

ALFIO: My loving Lola calls me! Her gentle grace enthralls me, Ah! .. faithfully she calls . . . My loving Lola calls me, Her gentle grace enthralls me, Ah! fondly I reply . . . .. Gaily moves the tramping horse, Joyful sound the ringing bells; It's Easter and I come home . . . It's Easter and I come

(Women of the chorus enter the scene.)

CORO: O che bel mestiere fare il carrettiere andar di quà e di là, andar di quà e di là! andar di quà e di là, andar di quà e di là, di quà e di là.

ALFIO: Ehi là! Ehi là! schiocchi la frusta, Ehi là! schiocchi la frusta, schiocchi la frusta, schiocchi la frusta, Son quà! Oh che bel mestiere fare il carrettiere, oh che bel mestiere, andar de quà, andar di là, andar di quà, andar di là! Pasqua ed io son quà, . . . andar di quà e di là, andar di quà e di là, E Pasqua ed io son quà, . . . sou qua!
(Il Coro esce, alcuni entrano in chiesa, altri prendone direzioni diverse.)

SCENA III

LUCIA: Beato voi, compar Alfio, Che siete sempre allegro così!

ALFIO: (Spigliato.) Mamma Lucia, N'avete ancora di quel vecchio vino?

LUCIA: Non so; Turiddu è andato a provvederne.

ALFIO: Se è sempre qui!
L'ho visto stamattina vicino a casa mia

LUCIA: (Sorpresa.) Come?

SANTUZZA: (A Lucia rapidamente.) Tacete.

ALFIO: Io me ne vado, ite voi altre in chiesa
(Esce.)

CORO: (Interno.) Regina Coeli, laetare—
Alleluja!
Quia, quem meruisti potare—
Alleluja!
Resusrexit sicut dixit—
Alleluja!

CORO: (Esterno.)
(Uomini e donne entrano e si schierano innanzi alla Chiesa in atteggiamento devoto.)
Inneggiamo, il Signor non è morto!
Ei fulgente ha dischiuso l'avel,
Inneggiamo al Signore risorto
Oggi asceso alla gloria del ciel!
Inneggiamo, il Signor non è morto!
Ei fulgente ha dischiuso l'avel,
Inneggiamo al Signore risorto
Oggi asceso alla gloria del ciel!
(Tutti entrano in chiesa tranne Santuzza e Lucia.) home! . . . come home! . . . It's Easter and I come home . . . come home . . .

(Women of the chorus enter the scene.)

CHORUS: Who has a calling merrier, Than the life of a carrier, Where is a jollier man? Where is a jollier man? Where is a jollier man? Where is a jollier man, a jollier man?

ALFIO: A-hi! A-hi! Snap, now, the lash goes, A-hi! Snap, now, the lash goes, Snap, now, the lash goes Snap, now, the lash goes, I come! I'm the merry carrier! I'm the merry carrier, Who has a calling merrier than the life, the life of a carrier, than the life, this life of mine, A happier man than I? . . . Where is a jollier man, where is a jollier man? It's Easter, I, come home I come home!
(Chorus withdraws into the church; others separate in various directions.)

SCENE III

Scene And Prayer.

LUCIA: Your are blessed, friendly Alfio!
So favored, ever to be gay!

ALFIO: Mamma Lucia, have you that rare old wine,
The same as ever?

LUCIA: Not now; Turiddu has gone to buy plenty.

ALFIO: No; he is here! I saw him here this morning;
He lingered near my cottage.

LUCIA: (Surprised.) What now!

SANTUZZA: (Rapidly, to Lucia.)
Be silent!

ALFIO: I will not linger,
You will to church devotedly?
(Exit.)

CHORUS: (In church.) Queen of the Heavens, sorrow flies!
PEOPLE: (External chorus.) Hallelujah!
CHORUS: (In church.) Your holy Son lives, nor dies!
PEOPLE: Hallelujah!
CHORUS: (within.) From the dead He now has risen,
Truly has He risen.
PEOPLE: Hallelujah.

CHORUS: (External. Grouping in devotional attitudes.) We will sing of the Lord now victorious!
All the terrors of death were in vain!
Let us sing of the Christ ever glorious;
He is risen, in glory to reign!
(All enter the church, except Santuzza and Lucia.)

SCENA IV	SCENE IV
LUCIA: Perchè m'hai fatto segno di tacere?	LUCIA: (To Santuzza.) And why with signals would you gain my silence?
SANTUZZA: Voi lo sapete, o mamma, prima d'andar soldato Turiddu aveva a Lola eterna fe giurato. Tornò, la seppe sposa; e con un nuovo amore Volle spegner la fiamma che gli bruciava il core M'amò, l'amai, l'amai, ah! Quell' invida d'ogni delizia mia, Del suo sposo dimentica, arse di gelosia. Me l'ha rapito. Priva dell' onor mio, Dell' onor mio rimango: Lola e Turiddu s'amano, io piango!	SANTUZZA: Now shall you know, kind mother: Before he went forth as a soldier, Turiddu pledged his love to Lola, All his faithfulness renewing But; ah! homeward returning, Married he found his Lola! And, her falsity shaming— All the old love subduing— Loved me! And I loved him! With jealousy, hatefully, and with madness, Scorning wifely duty, envious of my gladness, Lola, in malice shameful, regains Turiddu! Disgraceful fate overtakes me, My own Turiddu forsakes me! He and Lola in joy remain, Having each other's love again! Ah me! alone I weep, I weep!
LUCIA: Miseri noi, che cosa vieni a dirmi In questo santo giorno?	LUCIA: Grief is upon us! Such dire and woeful tidings to hear this holy morning.
SANTUZZA: Io son dannata. Andate, o mamma, ad implorare Iddio, E pregate per me. Verrà Turiddu, Vo' supplicarlo un' altra voltra ancora!	SANTUZZA: I am accursed! I am accursed! Good mother, go pray for me to the Saviour! You'll beseech Him for me! I'll seek Turiddu, and pray to him That he again may love me!
LUCIA: Ajutatela voi, Santa Maria! (Lucia entra in chiesa.)	LUCIA: Holy Mary be with you—the blessed Mary! (Lucia enters the church)
SCENA V	SCENE V
TURIDDU: (Entrando.) Tu qui Santuzza?	TURIDDU: (Entering.) Are you here, Santuzza?
SANTUZZA: Qui t'aspettavo	SANTUZZA: Here I await you.
TURIDDU: È Pasqua in chiesa non vai!	TURIDDU: Attending not the service of Easter?
SANTUZZA: Non vo. Debbo parlarti.	SANTUZZA: Not now! I would speak with you.
TURIDDU: Mamma cercavo.	TURIDDU: I seek my mother.
SANTUZZA: Debbo parlarti.	SANTUZZA: I would speak with you!
TURIDDU: Qui no! qui no!	TURIDDU: Not here, not here!
SANTUZZA: (Parlato.) Dove sei stato?	SANTUZZA: From where have you come?
TURIDDU: (Parlato.) Che vuoi tu dire? A Francofonte.	TURIDDU: Why do you ask me?—From Francofonte.
SANTUZZA: No, non è ver.	SANTUZZA: Ah, that is false!
TURIDDU: Santuzza credimi.	TURIDDU: Santuzza, believe me!
SANTUZZA: No, non mentire Ti vidi volgere giù dal sentir. E stamattina all' alba t'hanno Scorto presso l'uscio di Lola.	SANTUZZA: No! You are lying! Over yon path I saw you approach: And you were seen today returning homeward From the dwelling of Lola!
TURIDDU: Ah! mi hai spiato!	TURIDDU: Ah! you were spying!
SANTUZZA: No! te lo giuro, a noi l'ha raccontato Campar Alfio il marito poco fa.	SANTUZZA: No, I do swear it! Her husband, Alfio, saw you Here within the town, and told it me!
TURIDDU: Cosi ricambi l'amor che ti porto? Vuoi che m'uccida?	TURIDDU: So you reward the love I gave you, Now he will slay me!
SANTUZZA: Oh! questo non lo dire.	SANTUZZA: Ah! Tell me not of murder!
TURIDDU: Lasciami dunque, lasciami invari tenti sopire Il giusto sdegno colla tua pietà.	TURIDDU: Leave me, I tell you! leave me! The rage burning within me— My righteous wrath, you can not assuage!
SANTUZZA: Tu l'ami dunque? TURIDDU: No! SANTUZZA: Assai più bella è Lola! TURIDDU: Taci, non l'amo. SANTUZZA: L'ami, l'ami, Oh! maledetto!	SANTUZZA: Then, you do love her! Lola is more fair than I am— False friend! Oh, curses on her!
TURIDDU: Santuzza!	TURIDDU: Santuzza!
SANTUZZA: Quella cattiva femmina ti tolse a me!	SANTUZZA: She—vilest woman, steals the love that should be mine!
TURIDDU: Bada, Santuzza, schiavo non sone Di questa vanatua gelosia.	TURIDDU: I am no slave to your envy Scornfully showing, jealously showing
SANTUZZA: (Con angoscia.) Battimi, insultami, t'amo e perdono Ma è troppo forte l'angoscia mia. (Troncando nel sentire avvicinarsi Lola.)	SANTUZZA: Beat me, insult me! Yet do I love you, Even though anguish my heart is rending, Even though in sorrow my life is ending.
SCENA VI	SCENE VI
LOLA: (Dentra alla scena.) Fior di giaggiolo Gli angeli belli stano A mille in cielo Ma belli come lui Ce n'è uno solo. (Entra in iscena e s'interrompe.) Oh! Turiddu, e passato Alfio?	LOLA: (Behind scenes.) Bright flower, so radiant! Angelic thousands stand arrayed in heaven, Yet none so fair as you have yet been given! (Enters. Pauses suddenly.) Oh! Turiddu, have you seen Alfio?
TURIDDU: Son giunto ora in piazza non so.	TURIDDU: I came but this moment: I have not.
LOLA: Forse è rimasto dal maniscalco ma non può tardare! E voi sentite le funzioni in piazza?	LOLA: Then perhaps he awaits at the forge. Here I must not linger. And you? Is it here in public that you are praying?
TURIDDU: (Confuso affret.) Santuzza mi narrava—	TURIDDU: (Confusedly.) Santuzza here was telling—
SANTUZZA: Gli dicevo che oggi è Pasqua E il Signor vede ogni cosa.	SANTUZZA: I was saying this is Easter! (Meaningly.) And the Lord beholds all things!
LOLA: Non venite alla messa?	LOLA: (To Santuzza.) You will not go to the service?
SANTUZZA: (Subito.) Io no, ci deve andar chi sa (Con intensione.) Di non aver peccato!	SANTUZZA: No, no! None shall attend but those Who know they are not guilty!
LOLA: (Con forza.) Io ringrazio il Signore, e bacio in terra!	LOLA: (Vehemently.) In the grace of the Saviour I bow before you!
SANTUZZA: (Esprimendosi.) Oh! fate bene, fate bene, (Con amarezza.) Lola!	SANTUZZA: (Bitterly.) O, well you speak!— Lola!

TURIDDU: (A Lola.) (Impacciato.) Andiamo, andiamo, Oni non abbiana che fare.	TURIDDU: (Embarrassed.) (To Lola.) Away then! Come, Lola; Here there is nothing to hold us.
LOLA: (A Turiddu.) Oh! (Con ironia.) Rimanete.	LOLA: (Ironically.) Oh, stay with her!
SANTUZZA: (A Turiddu con fermezza.) Si, resta, resta, Ho da parlarti ancora.	SANTUZZA: (To Turiddu.) Yes stay! (Firmly.) I have something yet to tell you:
LOLA: (Sempre ironica.) E v'assista il Signore, (Con caricatura.) Io me ne vado. (Entra in chiesa.)	LOLA: (Mockingly.) May the Saviour assist you! (Going.) So, I will leave you. (Enters the church.)

SCENA VII	SCENE VII
TURIDDU: (Con ironia.) Ah! lo vedi, che hai tu detto.	TURIDDU: (To Sant.) Ah! how foolish! nothing availing!
SANTUZZA: (Fredda.) L'hai voluto e ben ti sta!	SANTUZZA: (Coldly.) I have spoken; it is well—it is the truth.
TURIDDU: (S'avventa.) Ah! per Dio!	TURIDDU: (Threateningly.) Ah! by heaven!
SANTUZZA: Squarciami il petto.	SANTUZZA: My heart is ripped open!
TURIDDU: (S'avvia.) No!	TURIDDU: (Approaching her.) No!
SANTUZZA: (Trattenendolo.) Turiddu ascolta!	SANTUZZA: (Warding him away.) Turiddu, ah! hear me!
TURIDDU: Va!	TURIDDU: Go! (Turns from her.)
SANTUZZA: (Andante appassionato.) No, no, Turiddu, rimani, rimani ancora abbandonarmi dunque tu vuoi? no, no, Turiddu! rimani ancora dunque tu vuoi abbandonarmi? No, no, Turiddu, rimani, rimani ancora, no, Turiddu, Turiddu rimani ancora.	SANTUZZA: No, no, Turiddu, remain with me yet, and forever! Love me again! How can you forsake me! (with dolorous vehemence.) Into your arms . . loving again, Say you will take . . . me! No, no, Turiddu! Remain with me yet and for ever! No Turiddu, Turiddu remain with me ever!
TURIDDU: Perchè seguirmi, perchè spiriarmi sullimitare fin della chiesa? Perchè seguirmi perchè spiarmi?	TURIDDU: Why do you follow me? Why do you watch me? Why do you spy even at the church-door? Why do you follow, Why watch me ever?
SANTUZZA: (con dolore.) La! tua Santuzza piangè e t'implora . . . come cacciarla cosi tu puoi, la tua Santuzza? no, Turriddu! rimani ancora! Oh! Turiddu! no, Turiddu! rimani ancor. no, Turiddu! Ah! .. no, Turiddu, rimani, rimani ancora, ancor. No! no! no! la tua Santuzza piangè e t'implora come cacciarla come cacciarla tu puoi?	SANTUZZA: Lo! here your Santuzza now do implore . . . you; . . . Ah! can you leave me weeping before you! Love your Santuzza! No, Turiddu! Stay, I implore you! (entreatingly.) Oh! Turiddu! No, Turiddu, remain! No! Turiddu! Ah!.. No, Turiddu, remain, remain, I implore you, again! No, no, no! See your Santuzza now does implore you, Ah! can you leave me, thus weeping before you!
TURIDDU: Va ti ripèto, va non te diarmi pentirsi è vano dopo l'offesa. Non te diarmi va! va! va! va Ti ripeto non te diarmi, pentirsi è vano, dopo l'offesa pentirsi è vano, dopo l'offesa. va! va! va! (reprimendosi.) va, ti ripeto, va, pentirsi e vano dopo l'offesa. Va! va! Ti ripeto Va! Ah! va! ti ripeto, va non te diarmi. va! Pentirsi e vano dopo l'offesa, pentirsi è vano dopo l'offensa.	TURIDDU: Go! I repeat it! Go! you make me weary! All repentance for such offending is in vain! You shall leave me! Go! Go! Go! Go! I repeat it; Go, I tell you, repenting is in vain, for all your offending, all your offending! Go! go! go! Go! I repeat it! Go! repentence for such offending is in vain. Go! Go! I repeat it, Go! Ah! Go! I repeat it, Go! I repeat it! Go! Go! repentence for your offending is in vain! Once more I tell you, go! And forever!
SANTUZZA: (Minacciosa.) Bada!	SANTUZZA: (Threateningly.) False! false!
TURIDDU: (Con moltissima forza.) Dell' ira tua non mi curo! (La getta a terra e fugge in chiesa.)	TURIDDU: (With increased rage.) Thus I reward you in my anger. (Throws her down, and hastens into the church.)
SANTUZZA: (Nel colmo dell' ira.) A te la mala Pasqua, spergiuro! (Cade affranta ed angosciata.)	SANTUZZA: (In the height of fury.) Accursed! accursed at Easter, you false one. (Falls, despairingly.)

SCENA VIII	SCENE VIII
(Sorte Alfio e s'incontra con Santuzza.)	(Enter, Alfio.)
SANTUZZA: (Ad Alfio rianimandosi.) Oh! Il Signore vi manda, compar Alfio.	SANTUZZA: (Calming herself.) Oh! did the Saviour send you, neighbor Alfio?
ALFIO: (Tranquillo.) A che punto è la messa?	ALFIO: At what point is the service?
SANTUZZA: Ètardi ormai, ma per voi (Con intenzione.) Lola è andata con Turiddu!	SANTUZZA: It is now at closing. But I tell you Lola has gone with Turiddu!
ALFIO: (Sorpreso.) Che avete detto?	ALFIO: (Surprised.) What are you saying?
SANTUZZA: Che mentre correte All' acqua e al vento a guadagnarvi il pane, Lola v'adorna il tetto in malo modo!	SANTUZZA: While you labor to earn an honest living, Lola is giving her love unfaithfully.
ALFIO: Ah! nel nome di Dio, Santa che dite?	ALFIO: Ah! in the name of heaven, Santuzza, What are you saying?
SANTUZZA: Il ver. Turiddu mi tolse, mi tolse l'onore, E vostra moglie lui rapiva a me!	SANTUZZA: The truth! Turiddu forsakes me—and he has betrayed me! It was your wife who enticed him away from me!
ALFIO: (Minaccioso.) Se voi mentite, vo' schiantarvi il coro.	ALFIO: (Threateningly.) And if you are lying I'll have your heart's blood!
SANTUZZA: Uso a mentire il labbro mio, il labbro mio non è! Per la vergogna mia, pel mio dolore La trista verità—vi dissi, ahimè!	SANTUZZA: Lies, as yet, my lips have never uttered. Prone to be truthful am I.
ALFIO: (Dopo un poco di pausa.) Comare Santa, allor grato vi sono.	ALFIO: (After a pause.) Santuzza, I am thankful that you have spoken.
SANTUZZA: Infame io son che vi partai così!	SANTUZZA: But ah! what shame! And I have told it to you!
ALFIO: Infami loro, ad essi non perdono Vendetta avrò pria che tra monti il dì! Io sangue vo glio, all'ira m'abbandono, In odio tutto l'amor mio finì! (Escono.)	ALFIO: (Suddenly, in fury.) It is they who are shameful! I'll have revenge upon them! This day and hour my wrath Shall fall upon them!

SCENA IX	SCENE IX

Scene IX

CORO: (Uomini.) A casa, a casa, amici, ove ci aspettano Le nostre donne, andiam, Or che letizia reasserena gli animi.	CHORUS OF MEN: (sotto voce.) Now homeward, now homeward neighbors, Good cheer is awaiting there; And wives our joy will share, Now Easter day shall be for all a time of rest, Without sorrow or care.
CORO: (Donne.) A casa, a casa, amiche, ecc. (Lola e Turiddu escono dalla chiesa.)	CHORUS OF WOMEN: Now homeward, now homeward neighbors, etc. (Lola and Turiddu come from the church.)
TURIDDU: Comare Lola, ve ne andante via Senza nemmeno salutare?	TURIDDU: My pretty Lola! Have you not a greeting, When honest people we are meeting?
LOLA: Vado a casa; Non ho visto compar Alfio!	LOLA: I must leave you. I must go and welcome Alfio!
TURIDDU: Non ci pensate, verrà in piazza. (Rivolgendosi al Coro che s'avvia.) Intanto, amici, qua, Beviamone un bicchiere. (Tutti si avvicinano alla tavola dell' osteria e prendono in mano i bicchierei.)	TURIDDU: Here he will seek you. Do not hasten! (To the people.) Meanwhile, good friends, come here. (All come forward.) We'll try the merry wine! (All take cups from the bar of the inn.)
TURIDDU: Viva il vino spumeggiante, nel bicchiere scintillante Come il riso dell' Amante; mite infonde il giu .. bilo, viva il vino spumeggiante, nel bicchiere scintillante come il riso dell' amante, mite infonde il giu .. bilo! Viva il vino ch'è sincero che ciallieta ogni pensiero, e che affoga l'umor nero nell' ebbrezza tenera . . . Viva il vino ch'è sincero che ci allieta ogni pensiero, e che affoga l'umor nero nell' ebbrezza tenera.	TURIDDU: Hail! the ruby wine now flowing, Brightly in the cup now showing, Merry spell upon you throwing, Like a smile from happy love Hail! the ruby wine now flowing, Brightly in the cup now showing, Merry spell around you throwing, Like the smile of happy love! Hail! ah, wine so richly gleaming! In your crimson joy is beaming! All your comfort lend us, With your cheer attend us—Hope and love! . . . Hail! ah, wine so richly gleaming! In your crimson joy is beaming! All your comfort lend us, With your cheer attend us—Hope and love!
CORO: Viva, beviam! Rinnovisi la giostra!	CHORUS: Welcome!
TURIDDU: (A Lola.) Ai vostri amori! (Beve.)	TURIDDU: (To Lola.) To those who love you! (Drinks.)
	CHORUS: Drink it!
LOLA: (A Turiddu.) Alla fortuna vostra! (Beve.)	LOLA: (To Turiddu.) May fortune give you favor! (Drinks.)
	CHORUS: Drink it!
TURIDDU: Beviam!	TURIDDU: We will!
	CHORUS: Welcome! and drink! (All drink.) Come, let us drink another!
LOLA, TURIDDU E CORO: Beviam, beviam! rinnovisi la giostra! (Entra Alfio.)	ALL: Come, drink; yes, let us drink another! Hail! the ruby wine now flowing, etc.
ALFIO: A voi tutti salute.	ALFIO: To all of you, greeting!
CORO: Compar Alfio, salute.	CHORUS: Neighbor Alfio, greeting!
TURIDDU: Benvenuto! con noi dovete bere, (Empie un bicchiere.) Ecco pieno e il bicchiere. (Troncando.)	TURIDDU: (To Alfio.) Hearty welcome! Now join with us in revel. (Fills a glass for him.) Look you! drink you this measure!
ALFIO: Grazie, ma il vostro vino io non l'accetto, Diverrebbe veleno entro il mio petto!	ALFIO: Thank you! but I must refuse the offer! A cup of deadly poison perhaps you proffer!
TURIDDU: (Parlato.) A piacer vostro. (Getto il vino.)	TURIDDU: Then suit your pleasure! (Throws away the wine.)
LOLA: Ahimè che mai sarà? (Alcune donne nel Coro si consigliano fra loro poi si su vicinano a Lola dicendole sotto voce.)	LOLA: Ah me! what now befalls! (Some of the women consult together, and then approach Lola)
CORO: Comare Lola, andiamo via di qua. (Tutte le donne escono conducendo Lola.)	CHORUS: Neighbor Lola, come, haste away from here! (Exit, all the women, with Lola.)
TURIDDU: Avete altro a dirmi?	TURIDDU: (To Alfio.) Perhaps you have something to tell me!
ALFIO: Io nulla.	ALFIO: I? nothing!
TURIDDU: Allota sono agli ordini vostri—	TURIDDU: Then hear me! You will find me at your service!
ALFIO: Or ora?	ALFIO: This moment?
TURIDDU: Or ora! (Si abbracciano. Turiddu morde l'orecchio destro o Alfio.)	TURIDDU: This moment! (They embrace, Turiddu bites Alfio's ear, viciously.)
ALFIO: Compar Turiddu, a vete morso, a buono (Con intenzione.) Cintenderemo bene a quel che pare!	ALFIO: Neighbor Turiddu, you give a ready challenge! And I accept it! you understand me!
TURIDDU: Compar Alfio. Lo so che il torto è mio; E ve lo giuro nel nome di Dio Che al par d'un cane mi fare! sgozzar— Ma s'io non vivo, (Dolorosamente.) Resta abbandonata povera Santa! Lei che mi s'è data! (Con impeto.) Vi saprò in core il ferro mio piantar!	TURIDDU: Neighbor Alfio! I own you should have vengeance, And I admit, in the name that is holy, That I should be dealt with as a dog! But, should you kill me—if I perish By your arm—yes, if I perish,— Unhappy Santa, she whom I have cherished— Lone, unhappy Santa, my dagger Will embed within her heart!
ALFIO: (Freddamente.) Compare fate come più vi piace, Io v'aspetto qui fuori dietro l'orto. (Esce.)	ALFIO: Good neighbor, act upon it as may suit you! You will find me yonder in the orchard. (Exit.)
TURIDDU: (Chiamando.) Mamma— (Entra Lucia.) Mamma—quel vino è generoso, E certo oggi troppi bicchier Ne ho traccannati— Vado fuori all' aperto— Ma prima voglio che mi benedite— Come quel giorno che partii soldato: E poi mamma, Sentite, s'io non tornassi— Voi dovrete fare da madre a Santa, Ch'io le avea giurato di condurla all' altare.	TURIDDU: (Calling.) My mother! (Enter Lucia.) Mother! the wine-cup too freely passes! Exciting, crazing! I have drunk too many cups! —I must leave you, good mother! But first let me ask for a kindly blessing, As on that day when I became a soldier. And, mother, hear me—and heed it: If I return not, You must be a kindly mother to my Santa! Santa, whom I promised I would lead to the altar! —If I return—
LUCIA: Perchè parli cosi, figliolo mio?	LUCIA: Why say you this to me? What is it? tell me!
TURIDDU: (Con disinvoltura.) Oh! nulla, è il vino che m'ha suggerito! M'ha suggerito il vino— Perme pregate Iddio,	TURIDDU: Ha—nothing! It is wine—that I have drunk so freely. —For me oh! pray to heaven, That I may be forgiven!

Un bacio mamma! un altro bacio
Addio!
(Fugge disperatamente.)

LUCIA: Turiddu! che vuoi dire!
(Va in fondo alla scena a disperatamente chiama.)
Turiddu! Turiddu! ah!
(Entra Santuzza.)
Santuzza.

SANTUZZA: Oh! madre mia!
(Le getta le braccia al collo. La scena si popolo. L'agitazione si scorge sul volto di tutti. Che scambievolmente s'interrogano con terrore. Si ode un mormorio confuse da lontano. Una donna sola, assai lontano, gridando.)
Hanno ammazzato compare Turiddu!
(Si sentono delle voci confuse piu vicine. Alcune donne entrano atterite correndo, ed una di esse grida disperatamente.)
Hanno ammazzato compare Turriddu!
(Tutti si precipitano sulla scena.)

SANTUZZA, LUCIA E CORO:
(Gridando.) Ah!
(Santuzza cade priva di sensi, Lucia sviene ed è sorrettidalle donne del Coro. Tutti restano atterriti.)

CALA RAPIDAMENTE LA TELA.

One kiss, one kiss, my mother!
And yet—and yet another!
Farewell!
(Rushes off, desperately.)

LUCIA: Turiddu! Ah!
(Retires to back of stage, crying.)
(Enter, Santuzza.)
Santuzza!

SANTUZZA: Ah! good mother!
(Throws her arms around Lucia's neck.)
(People crowd upon the stage.)
(Excitement and agitation.)
(Enter a woman in the distance crying, "Neighbor Turiddu is murdered.")
(Several women hastily enter, terrified. One of them shrieks—)
"Neighbor Turiddu is murdered."
(All rush upon the stage.)

ALL: Ah!
(Santuzza falls; swooning. Lucia faints, and is supported by some of the women.)

THE CURTAIN FALLS RAPIDLY.

L'Amico Fritz (1891)

Friend Fritz

MUSIC BY PIETRO MASCAGNI ■ LIBRETTO BY P. SUARDON

L'Amico Fritz, a three-act lyric comedy, is set to a libretto by P. Suardon (whose real name was Nicola Daspuro) based on L'Ami Fritz by Emile Erckmann and Alexandre Chatrian. The opera premiered at the Teatro Costanzi in Rome on October 31, 1891. Fritz, a middle-aged, well-to-do Alsatian landowner, doesn't understand why people like to marry. He wagers one of his vineyards with David, the Rabbi, that he will never give up the life of a bachelor that he enjoys with his friends, Federico and Hanezo. At Fritz' birthday party, he sees Suzel, the daughter of one of his tenants, and asks her to sit next to him. David tells her that she will soon be the most beautiful bride in Alsace. Fritz, on vacation in the country, helps Suzel pick cherries in an orchard. David realizes that Suzel is in love with Fritz, and he tells Fritz that she is about to marry a country boy. Fritz is very upset to hear this as he is in love with her, and he leaves without saying good-bye in order to get over his unwelcome feelings. She is upset and mystified by his actions. Fritz cannot forget Suzel; David enters and announces the arrival of Suzel's father, who asks for Fritz' consent to her marriage as mentioned earlier. Fritz is jealous and opposes the match. When he finds out from Suzel that she does not want this marriage, he at last tells her that he loves her. David wins the bet and gives the vineyard to Suzel.

■ ATTO I	■ ACT I
SCENA I	SCENE I
Sala da pranzo in case de Fritz Kobus.	Scene: Fritz Kobus' dining parlor.
Fritz e David.	Fritz and David.
FRITZ: Ma questa è una pazzia! vuoi maritare Tutti e per colmo di sventura io debbo Sborsar la dote! . . .	FRITZ: But this is merely nonsense, You'd have them all be wedded. And to crown all this misery, It is I who must furnish the dowry.
DAVID: Son ragazzi e si amano . . .	DAVID: They love—and loving—they—
FRITZ: Ci pensin loro . . . ho in odio il matrimonio, Non so che sia l'amore . . . e chi sospira E piange e si dispera per le donne, Rider mi fa. Ma chi del mio danaro Resta garante?	FRITZ: At least they think so. The very thought of marriage disgusts me. I look upon this love as naught by folly. This sighing for the bright eyes of some young woman Seems so absurd— Who'll guarantee that I won't lose my money?
DAVID: Io firmerò per loro . . .	DAVID: I! Will you take my word for it?
FRITZ: (sorridendo). Bravo! di te posso fidarmi. Scrivi!	FRITZ: Bravo! Of course that's quite sufficient. Write then—
DAVID: Grazie! grazie!	DAVID: Thanks! thanks!—
FRITZ: (dettando). "M'impegno io sottoscritto . . ."	FRITZ: "I, the undersigned—"
SCENA II	SCENE II
Hanezò, Caterina, Federico e i precedenti.	Hanezo, Caterina, Federico and the preceding.
HANEZÒ: Evviva Fritz!	HANEZO: Hurrah! for Fritz.
FEDERICO: Evviva!	FEDERICO: Hurrah! boys.
HANEZÒ: (a Fritz) Per la tua festa i nostri voti accogli.	HANEZO: (to Fritz). Now, on your birthday, we offer you our greeting.
DAVID: Deh! tacete. Bisogna che io gli scriva . . .	DAVID: Hold your tongue lad! Just let me put my name here.
FRITZ: Debbo sbrigare uno dei tanti imbrogli Del rabbino . . .	FRITZ: I must take care of some of the troubles that beset the old Rabbi.
FEDERICO: Ha qualcun da maritare?	FEDERICO: Any one else here to marry?
HANEZÒ: Sempre! . . .	HANEZO: Certainly!
DAVID: Scrivo: "M'impegno io sottoscritto, Di rendere al signor Fritz Kobus mille Trecento lire al sei per cento, quando . . ."	DAVID: Now, then— "I, the undersigned, do covenant with Master Fritz Kobus To pay thirteen hundred ducats, at six per cent., when—"
FRITZ: (interrompendo). Il detto signor Fritz compiuti avrà Due secoli d'età!	FRITZ: The aforesaid Fritz shall have attained—two hundred years of age!
HANEZÒ E FEDERICO: (ridendo). Ah! ah!	FEDERICO AND HANEZO: Ha! ha!
DAVID: Che dici?	DAVID: What's that, now?
HANEZÒ: Bella davver!	HANEZO: Faith that is good!
DAVID: (con dolore). È inutile; tu vuoi Farti giuoco di me.	DAVID: It is nonsense! You are playing a trick on me.
FRITZ: Su via, scherzavo. Ecco il danaro.	FRITZ: Your pardon; I was joking. Here, take the money.
DAVID: O mio diletto Fritz, Come potrò ricompensarti?	DAVID: Oh! my good fellow, Fritz, How can I ever thank you enough?
FRITZ: Voglimi Sempre bene!	FRITZ: Think of me always kindly. (Enter Caterina.)
CATERINA: (entrando colla zuppiera). Signori. È pronto.	CATERINA: The dinner is served!
FRITZ: Andiamo A tavola! Ed ancor Beppe non venne?	FRITZ: Come, then!—to table!

	HANEZO: But where can Beppe be lingering?
FEDERICO: (a David che si dispone ad uscire) E tu che fai?	FEDERICO: (to David, who is going). Where are you going?
DAVID: Verrò per far un brindisi! (Si mettono a tavola, meno David.—Caterina esce.)	DAVID: I'll soon be back to drain a glass. (Exit; the rest seat themselves at the table.)
FRITZ: (sevendo la zuppa agli amici). Lascialo! In palpiti saran gli sposi . . . Se tarda, possono d'ansia morir.	FRITZ: (helping the soup). Let him go! The lovers' hearts are beating with joy. Hearts are ticklish things to play with, Timid and coy.
FEDERICO: Vada! s'affretti!	FEDERICO: Off, then! Don't tarry!
HANEZÒ: Corra!	HANEZO: Hurry!—
DAVID: Noiosi! . . . D'amor dovrete voi pur languir! (esce dalla terrazza.)	DAVID: You rascal! Or may your heart be made of love the toy (Exit by terrace.)
FRITZ: (chiamando David a traverso la finestra). Ohè, David! David! oggi, perchè Anche una sposa non hai per me?	FRITZ: (seeing David through the window). Hey! David! David! have you, I say, Such a thing as a wife for me? Tell me, I pray!
DAVID: (sulla terrazza). O Fritz, rammentalo! tu pur sarai Marito un giorno!	DAVID: (through the window). Oh! Fritz, I tell you true, There will be a little wife for you.
FRITZ: Ma tu non sai La mia divisa? Amico a tutti e sempre . . . Marito . . . no!	FRITZ: The lady's name I pray you tell me. You know I always was your friend, But—marriage!—No!
DAVID: Vedremo! (si allontana.)	DAVID: We shall see! (Exit.)
FRITZ: Oh! che bel matto!	FRITZ: (reflecting). Sharp as a needle!
HANEZÒ: (alzando il bicchiere). Viver tu possa sempre giocondo!	HANEZO: (raising his goblet). Here's to good fellows, wherever they be!
FEDERICO: (come sopra). Salute ai celibi di tutto il mondo!	FEDERICO: (same business). Here's to all bachelors, merry and free! (Enter Caterina.)
CATERINA: (rientrando, a Fritz). Signore, è giunta Suzel, la figliuola Del fattor . . . vi vorrebbe salutare . . . Ha dei fiori per voi . . .	CATERINA: (to Fritz). Good master, the steward's daughter, Suzel, waits outside. She comes to bid you welcome, and brings some flowers.
FRITZ: Fatela entrare. (Caterina fa entrare Suzel e poi esce.)	FRITZ: Good! She is welcome! (Enter Suzel, with a bunch of violets in her hand. She advances with downcast looks.)
SCENA III	SCENE III
Suzel e i precedenti, poi David.	Suzel and the preceding, then David.
SUZEL: Son pochi fiori, povere viole, Son l'alito d'aprile Dal profumo gentile; Ed è per voi che la ho rapite al sole . . . Se avessero parole, Le udreste mormorar: "Noi siamo figlie timide e pudiche Di primavera, Siamo le vostre amiche; Morremo questa sera, Ma morremo felici Di dire a voi, che amate gl'infelici: Il ciel vi possa dar Tutto quel bene che si può sperar." Ed il mio cor aggiunge una parola Modesta, ma sincera: Eterna primavera La vostra vita sia, ch'altri consola . . . Deh, vogliate gradir Quanto vi posso offrir! (Suzel, con gli occhi bassi, offre il mazzolino a Fritz.)	SUZEL: Sweet, purple violets, emblems of spring's beauty, Perfumed by April's showers, Upspringing in sweet bowers, For you, with humble duty, I bring my ravished booty. For though they are but mute, he That loves will hear their sighs: "Daughters of Spain, we hide our faces, Striving to shun Phœbus' burning embraces. Each flower fades in blooming, In death the air perfurming. We comfort those who sorrow, From hope our sweets we borrow. May joy crown this fair morrow." Then these gifts I offer, Love's own flowers I proffer. Enjoy love before he flies. Take, then, these flowers, Types of sweet, happy hours. (She offers the violets to Fritz.)
FRITZ: (sorridendo). Tu sei molto gentil; dei fiori tuoi L'olezzo mite giunge caro a me. Grato ti sono . . . Orsù, vieni fra noi, Al fianco mio . . . (Suzel esita.) Ti vergogni? E di che?	FRITZ: (smiling as he smells them). How good and kind you are, Your flowers shed fragrance on my inmost heart. Thanks, lovely maid.—Nay, do not now depart, Come, sit beside me. (She wavers.) What affrights you? Is it I?
SUZEL: (timidamente). Oh . . . no . . .	SUZEL: Oh! no.
FRITZ: Bambina! (Suzel siede.)	FRITZ: Come nearer.
HANEZÒ: (sottovoce). Com'è carina!	HANEZO: (in a whisper). He might say "dearer."
FEDERICO: (c. s.). Quanto candor!	FEDERICO: (aside). How sweet and fair.
HANEZÒ: (c. s.). Dei campi è un fior!	HANEZO: (aside). A lily rare.
FRITZ: E babbo come va, povero vecchio?	FRITZ: Tell me, my child, how is it with your father?
SUZEL: Babbo sta bene; egli, però, vi aspetta.	SUZEL: Well, honored sir, and longing much to see you.
FRITZ: Certo, verrò Di' . . . come vanno i campi?	FRITZ: Soon shall I come. Are all the meadows blooming?
SUZEL: Tutto si allieta: il cielo è uno splendore, L'aria è dolce, sottile, e il prato è in fiore.	SUZEL: The fields are gemmed with roses, redly blowing, The air is full of fragrance, the skies with sunshine, glowing, All Nature rejoices with all her myriad voices.
FRITZ: Bevi, Suzel.—Verrò fra pochi di.— Bevi! Non star così!	FRITZ: Some wine, Suzel! Be sure I'll not delay. Drink, then—you'll not say nay? (Enter David.)
DAVID: (entrando). Vi saluto!	DAVID: Sir, I greet you!
FEDERICO: Sei qui, vecchio rabbino!	FEDERICO: What! back again so soon?
HANEZÒ: Giungi in buon punto . . .	HANEZO: Glad to meet you!
FRITZ: Ecco un bicchier di vino! (David siede e beve.)	FRITZ: Drink, your person is a boon. (David sits and drinks.)
FEDERICO: Un brindisi chi fa?	FRITZ: Who knows a lively song?
DAVID: (a Suzel). Tu pur, bimba sei qua? (Come la bricconcella S'è fatta grande e bella!) (Dalla terrazza, arriva un dolce suono di violino.)	DAVID: (noticing Suzel). I've not seen you for long. How these young ones do spring up, And what sad thoughts they bring up! (A violin is heard outside.)
HANEZÒ: Chi mai sarà?	HANEZO: What's that?
FRITZ: Lo zingaro!	FRITZ: The gypsy lad.
DAVID: Ah! questi è Beppe!

FEDERICO: Udite il violino!	HANEZO: Ah! Beppe? surely. Eh! can't he play divinely?
FRITZ: (guardando Suzel). Perchè piangi, perchè?	FRITZ: (looking at Suzel). You are crying. And why?
SUZEL: (timidamente). Mi commove la musica . . . Scusatemi.	SUZEL: (timidly). The music is so sad—forgive me, sir.
FRITZ: (sottovoce). Di che? . . . Se commove anche me?	FRITZ: (aside). And I? Those notes stir my feelings.
HANEZÒ: (ascoltando la musica). Oh, quanto è bella!	HANEZO: (listening to the music). Oh! how delightful. Silver—hark! What lovely strains!
FEDERICO: Silenzio! . . . taci.
FRITZ: Che dolci note!
DAVID: Paiono baci! (La musica cessa.) (Tutti si alzano. Fritz corre verso la terrazza e s'incontra con Beppe.)	DAVID: Like song of lark.

SCENA IV

SCENE IV

Beppe e i precedenti.	Beppe and the preceding.
BEPPE: Salute, amico Fritz!	BEPPE: Ah! Fritz. How do you do?
FRITZ: (abbracciandolo). Ah! n'ero certo Che saresti venuto . . .	FRITZ: Welcome, dear friend! I am glad to see you.
BEPPE: Amico, avrei sofferto Di non farti per oggi il mio saluto . . .	BEPPE: Dear fellow, on this day, above all others, you might expect me.
FRITZ: Beppe, siediti qua . . . So quel che mi vuoi dir . . . Non voglio udir . . .	FRITZ: Beppe, I know you well! Come, join our party.
DAVID: Allor, canta per noi! (Beppe imposta il violino all'uso zingaresco, e, dati alcuni accordi, canta.)	DAVID: Come, sing a song! (Beppe plays his fiddle like a gypsy and sings.)
BEPPE: Laceri, miseri tanti bambini Languiano qua: Senza la mamma quei poverini Facean pietà. Era uno strazio! Quando amoroso, Per essi stringersi, un cor sentì, Fu il nostro amico quel generoso Che li nutrì.	BEPPE: Sad and forlorn, Starving, tattered and torn, We crouched in despair— For our dear mother we mourn. Full of care, Oh! it was piteous. But help came quickly. A brave defender came to aid Our dearest friend—a hero, strictly, Brought me back hope, all fear allayed.
FRITZ: (con dispetto). La vuoi finir?	FRITZ: Be silent, pray!
	HANEZO: Sing on!
DAVID, HANEZÒ E FEDERICO: Oh, canta, seguita, lascialo dir!	DAVID: Make an end!
	CHORUS: Go on! Go on!
BEPPE: Preso dal turbine d'una bufera Persi il cammino; Ansante, gelido, sfinito, a sera, Caddi supino. Scendea la morte! Quando, pietoso, Un braccio valido mi sollevò: Fu il nostro amico quel generoso Che mi salvò!	BEPPE: In the fierce blasts of the wild tempest raging Forth I was hurled, Chilled to the bone, strange misfortune presaging. Out of the world, Death was approaching, When a defender Came to the rescue, And all the shadows that now were encroaching Far away whirled.
DAVID, HANEZÒ E FEDERICO: Viva lo zingaro! Evviva! Bravo!	DAVID: Long live the Zingara!
	CHORUS: Bravo! Bravo!
FRITZ: (celiando). D'esser sì grande io non pensavo!	FRITZ: I never thought you were so clever.
CATERINA: (rientrando ed appressandosi a Suzel). Suzel, fermo alla porta è il baroccino . . .	CATERINA: Suzel, the farmer's cart is near by.
SUZEL: (alzandosi rapidamente). Sì, chè è tardi!	SUZEL: Ah! yes, it is late.
FRITZ: Ci vuoi lasciar di già?	FRITZ: And must you go?
SUZEL: Il babbo attende . . .	SUZEL: Yes, my father calls me.
FRITZ: Va, cara piccina . . . Presto verrò. Salutalo per me.	FRITZ: Go, pretty maid, then I will follow. Remember me to papa.
SUZEL: Grazie, vi servirò.	SUZEL: Thank you; I'll not forget.
FRITZ: Ringrazio te Dei vaghissimi fior . . . (Suzel fa un inchino ed esce.)	FRITZ: Many thanks for the pretty flowers.
HANEZÒ: Come s'inchina!	HANEZO: What a sweet bow!
BEPPE: Ha nello sguardo amor . . .	BEPPE: "Love in her eyes sits playing."
FEDERICO: Quanto è gentil!	FEDERICO: "And wanting in her breath."
DAVID: E a me susurra il core: Bisogna farne subito La più vaga sposina Di tutta Alsazia!	DAVID: My heart whispers to me that our little lass Will be soon the fairest bride in all Alsace.
FRITZ: Ma Suzel è bambina.
DAVID: Presto, vel giuro, la mariterò.	DAVID: I'll take my oath she soon will find a mate.
FRITZ: Che pazzo!	FRITZ: Don't be an ass!
HANEZÒ: Oh, tu vaneggi . . .	HANEZO: What cursed nonsense!
DAVID: Io so quel che mi fo!	DAVID: Then my job will come in.
FRITZ: Va alla malora Tu, le tue femmine, E chi le adora!	FRITZ: Oh! to the devil You and your women, all are naught but evil.
HANEZÒ E FEDERICO: Rabbin, questa è per te!	FEDERICO AND HANEZO: (to David). You want her for yourself!
DAVID: (levandosi, irritatissimo). Per voi, ghiottoni inutili, La vita è nel goder: Passar i giorni a tavola, Ecco il più gran piacer Ma chi nel petto ha un'anima, Chi crede in Dio, che disse: "Getta nel fuoco l'albero Che senza frutti visse," Chi preferisce al vivere Randagio e senza amor, Una famiglia, un placido Nido che allieti il cor, Vi deve disprezzar, Deve chiamarvi piante da bruciar!	DAVID: You lazy, loafing loiterers on naught but pleasure think, You spend your days in idleness, your nights in brawl and drink. But who puts his trust in God, and never with evil clashes, Knows that the barren, withered tree is good for naught but ashes. But who lives a virtuous life, And lets the girls alone, Will still be free from care or strife Nor dread misfortune's frown. So I might such as you despise, And deem you very fit To follow the "lust of your eyes" Unto the yawning pit.
BEPPE: Il suo sermone è splendido!	BEPPE: That's a splendid sermon.
FEDERICO: Ma predica al deserto . . .	FEDERICO: He preaches to the stones.
FRITZ: Oh! grida, strilla, arrabbiati!	FRITZ: Oh! bellow. Hollo! Tear your clothes!
DAVID: (a Fritz). Eppure . . . io ne son certo Noi presto accompagnar Ti dovremo all' altar.	DAVID: For all that, I am certain we shall soon go with her to the altar.

FRITZ: All' altare?

DAVID: Ne debiti?
Lo affermo e ci scommetto!

BEPPE: Oh, che bel matto!

HANEZÒ: Stolido!

FRITZ: La tua scommessa accetto:
Giuoco la vigna mia di Clairefontaine!

DAVID: Ad ufo beverò! Vada!

FRITZ: Sta ben!

HANEZÒ: Son gli orfanelli . . .

BEPPE: (a Fritz). Portano
A te, benefattor,
Il saluto del cor!
(Beppe, Federico e Hanezò corrono ala terrazza.)

HANEZÒ: Oh, quanta gente!

BEPPE: Vengona qua!

FEDERICO: Oh, come marciano!

BEPPE: Guardali là!

HANEZÒ: (a Beppe). Son tuoi discepoli?

BEPPE: Amico, sì!

HANEZÒ: La folla applaude!

FEDERICO: Sono già qui!

BEPPE: (che batte il tempo con le mani). Oh vieni, Fritz, vieni a veder!

FEDERICO: È uno spettacolo che fa piacer!

FRITZ: (battendo sulla spalla di David). I figli miei saranno quelli ognor!
(poi, agli altri)
Andiamo, tutti, i bimbi a salutar!
(Raggiunge gli amici sulla terrazza.)

DAVID: Eppure, o stolti, vi vedrò cascar!

CORO: (di fuori). Salute a Fritz!
Viva il benefattor!
(Tutti agitano i cappelli, salutando la folla.)

[Fine Del Primo Atto.]

■ ATTO II

SCENA I

Cortile nella fattoria di Mèsanges.

Suzel, Coro interno.

SUZEL: Oh! le belle ciliege! Stamattina,
Appena il signor Fritz sarà disceso,
Vo' che la assaggi . . . sono già mature.

CORO: (da lontano). Chi l'amor suo non seppe conservar
Perde il tempo a sperar:
L'amore che lontano se ne va

FRITZ: To the altar?

DAVID: Aye, to the altar. Will you wager on it?

BEPPE: Oh! what a madman!

HANEZO: Yes, what an ass!

FRITZ: I'll take your bet. My vineyard at Clairfontaine I stake.

DAVID: Done! Here's my hand.
Your bet I take.
(Trumpets sound afar off.)

HANEZO: Here come the children!

BEPPE: The orphans come to greet
Their lord with voices sweet.
(Beppe, Federico and Hanezo go to the window.)

HAENZO: Oh! what a lot!

BEPPE: They are coming hither!

FEDERICO: Don't they march bravely!

BEPPE: Only look at them!

HANEZO: (to Beppe). Are they your pupils, then?

BEPPE: You've hit the mark!

HANEZO: Hear the applause!

FEDERICO: Yes, here they come!

BEPPE: (beating time). Oh! come here, Fritz,
Just come and see!

FEDERICO: Oh! ain't it jolly! It just suits me.

FRITZ: (slapping David's shoulder). I'll adopt the whole lot.
(To the others.)
Come, salute my children, dear!
(Goes to window.)

DAVID: You are an idiot!

CHORUS: Hurrah! for Fritz. Hurrah! Hurrah!

[Curtain.]

■ ACT II

SCENE I

Scene: Courtyard of the farm.

Suzel and chorus behind the scenes.

SUZEL: Oh! what lovely cherries! I'll pluck some for Master Fritz. He will enjoy them,
They're so nice and ripe.

CHORUS: (outside) Ah! (Chorus approaches, but is not seen.)
(Close at hand.)
Who knows not how true love to

Mai più non tornerà.

SUZEL: I contadini sono andati all'opre,
Era tempo: oggi devono tagliare
L'orzo maturo nella prateria.

SCENA II

Suzel, poi Fritz.

SUZEL: Il padrone tra poco sarà desto,
Voglio per lui comporre un mazzolino.
(Cogliendo fiori.)
—Bel cavalier, che vai per la foresta . . .
—Che volete da me, cara figliuola?
—Bel cavaliere dalla faccia mesta . . .
—Cogliete fiori, allegra boscaiuola!
—Bel cavaliere, ti darò una rosa . . .
—Grazie, piccina, rose non ne vo'! . . .
—Bel cavalier, sarà per la tua sposa . . .
—Piccina, grazie! la sposa non l'ho!
(Fritz si mostra in cima alla scala, ascoltando.)

FRITZ: Suzel, buon dì. D'un gaio rosignuolo
La voce mi svegliò.

SUZEL: Che dite mai?

FRITZ: Mi piace come canti . . .

SUZEL: Oh, signor Fritz . . .
Canto così come mi vien dal core.

FRITZ: (scende la scala). Quei fiori son per me?

SUZEL: Per voi li ho côlti
Ed oltre i fiori ho pronta una sorpresa . . .

FRITZ: Una primizia certo . . .

SUZEL: Le ciliege.

FRITZ: Ah! le ciliege! e son di già mature?

SUZEL: Han della porpora vivo il colore,
Son dolci e tenere . . .

FRITZ: (da sè guardandola dolcemente). Di Maggio è simile a un vago fiore Fragrante e roseo . . .

SUZEL: Son pronta a coglierne un mazzettino,
Debbo gettarvele?

FRITZ: Gettale subito, bell'augellino,
Le saprò prendere . . .
(Suzel esce dalla porta dell'orto, keep

Will waste his time in wooing.
The love that nods and falls asleep
Will work its own undoing.

SUZEL: Ah! the peasants are going to their labor.
The crops are ready for the sickle.

CHORUS: (afar off). The love that nods and falls asleep
Will work its own undoing.

SCENE II

Suzel, then Fritz.

SUZEL: The master will soon be awaking. I must cull him a bunch of flowers. (Sings.)
"Brave knight, who through the wood
Now goes so gaily riding!"
"What would you with me, prettiest of maidens?"
Brave sir knight, I see
That something sore does grieve you."
"Go cull your flowers, dear girl,
For surely I must leave you."
"Brave cavalier, take then these rosebuds, blushing."
"Thanks, pretty maid, the flowers I should be crushing."
"Fair cavalier, your bride they'll suit right well."
"Sweetest of girls, no bride have I. Farewell!" (Enter Fritz.)

FRITZ: Good day Suzel, I thought I heard a nightingale.

SUZEL: And found it was a raven.

FRITZ: You sing like any lark.

SUZEL: Good Master Fritz, I sing as my heart prompts me.

FRITZ: (pointing to flowers). Are those for me?

SUZEL: For you I've culled them, and a sweet surprise awaits you.

FRITZ: The first sheaf of the harvest?

SUZEL: No, these sweet cherries.

FRITZ: Cherries! And are they ripe so early?

SUZEL: See how their purple cheeks are softly blushing.
See, from their rosy lips sweetness is gushing.

FRITZ: (gazing at her). Fragrance of spring all around your breathing.

SUZEL: (passing through the gate and picking cherries). Catch them in bunches. See, them I am wreathing.

FRITZ: Them throw here quickly, you darling, you beauty,
I'm here to catch them—a most pleasant duty.

appare in cima alla scala, dall'altra parte del muro, coglie le ciliege e le getta a Fritz.)
Son fresche e morbide, di brina ancora
Son tutte roride . . .
Ma . . . è da quell'albero, che, sull'aurora,
Pispiglia il passero?

SUZEL: Sì, da quell'albero . . .

FRITZ: Ciò ch'egli dice
Sai tu comprendere?

SUZEL: Io lo so intendere . . .
ch'egli è felice
Nel canto mormora:
Sui rami floridi ha i suoi piccini . . .
Lieti lo aspettano;
Agili scherzano dei bianco-spini,
Tra i fiori candidi.

FRITZ: Come ne interpreti bene il linguaggio!

SUZEL: Sembra che parlino . . .
Sembra salutino coi canti il raggio
Del dì che nasce! . . .

FRITZ: (solo, al proscenio). Tutto tace . . .
Eppur tutto al cor mi parla . . .
Questa pace
Fuor di qui, dove trovarla?
Tu sei bella,
O stagion primaverile!
Rinnovella
Fiori e amori il dolce aprile!

SUZEL: (rientrando dalla porta dell'orto, col grembialino pieno di ciliege). Qual incanto
Nel risveglio d'ogni fiore!
Riso e pianto,
Tutto è palpito d'amore!
Tutto il prato
D'un tappeto s'è smaltato . . .
Al Signore
S'alza l'inno di ogni core!

SCENA III

David, Beppe, Hanezò, Federico e i precedenti.

(Si ode il rumore di un baroccino che arriva.)

FRITZ: Oh! chi è che giunge? Ragazza, guarda!
Odo i sonagli . . .

SUZEL: (guardando a sinistra). È un baroccino . . .
I vostri amici! Beppe, il Rabbino . . .

FRITZ: (che è corso a vedere). E Federico! Visto il bel cielo, Vengono qui.

SUZEL: Scesi son già.

Fresh as the dew they are, new fallen daily.
Is this the tree where the birds sang so gaily?

SUZEL: This is the tree.

FRITZ: Of what were they singing?
Teach me the song that the birds' throats were singing.

SUZEL: I know the singing well.
Birds gaily caroling high on the tree
Sing of the pleasures of life, gay and free.
No care have they, nor thought of the morrow,
Leaving to human souls trouble and sorrow.

FRITZ: Oh! let me know what their carol is telling.

SUZEL: Oh! I can hear them within their snug dwelling.

FRITZ: What do they say? Come, tell me, I pray.

SUZEL: They sing of the glory of sun-risen day.
(Exeunt.)

FRITZ: (alone). All is silent. Yet to my heart a message,
Comes from the silence, bringing Love's sweet presage.
Oh! lovely spring, season of hope and joy,
Fair April's promise all my thoughts employ.
(Enter Suzel.)

SUZEL: (at the gate with her apron full of cherries). What bliss and sadness from these flowers arise,
All Nature seems to yield to Love's surprise.
The meadows praise the God with sweet incense of flowers,
The birds chant hymns excelling songs of ours.

SCENE III

David, Beppe, Hanezo, Federico and the preceding.

(Bells are heard, a whip cracks, and wheels rumble.)

FRITZ: Ah! who comes here?
Oh! Suzel, listen!
I hear bells clanging.

SUZEL: (looking off). A carriage comes,
And all your friends,
Beppe, the Rabbi—

FRITZ: (looking). And Federico!
The day is fine,
And now they come.

FRITZ: Incontro andiamo!
(Escono. Dopo popo rientrano, accompagnati da David, Beppe, Hanezò e Federico.)

SUZEL: Bene arrivati!

FRITZ: Il sol vi attrasse? . . .

BEPPE: Tu ci hai scordata:
Ti ripeschiamo!

DAVID: (guardando Fritz meravigliato) Sei fresco e bello.

FRITZ: Sì, sto benone . . . Merito a lei . . .
(Addita Suzel.)

DAVID: Brava, davver!
(Suzel entra nella fattoria.)

FRITZ: Nelle mie terre Facciamo un giro?

BEPPE, HANEZÒ E FEDERICO: Sì! sì!

FRITZ: (a David). Non sei
Tu pur dei nostri?

DAVID: Io no; darei
Disturbo e noia; mi sento stanco . . .

BEPPE, HANEZÒ E FEDERICO: Andiamo noi!

DAVID: Vi attenderò . . .

FRITZ: Salute a David . . . Andiam, andiamo! . . .

DAVID: Sin che torniate riposerò!
(Tutti escono, meno David.)
(David siede.)
Vediamo un po'! L'amico
In volto è colorito e d'umor gaio . . .
Non ci fa saper nulla
E, sorridendo, elogia la fanciulla . . .
Ch'egli sia già rimasto al paretaio?
Quando Suzel vedrò, tutto conoscerò.

SCENA IV

David e Suzel.

SUZEL: (con una brocca dirigendosi al pozzo). Ah! siete ancora qui?

DAVID: Sì, mi riposo.

SUZEL: Io l'acqua attingerò.

DAVID: Dammene un sorso.

SUZEL: Vo a prendere un bicchier . . .

DAVID: Oh! non importa. . .
La broca basterà . . .

SUZEL: Come volete . . .

DAVID: (da sè) La ragazza è carina . . .

SUZEL: (gli proge da bere). A voi! prendete!

SUZEL: Yes, they are here!
Let's haste to greet them!

SUZEL: (to David, helping him off with his coat and seating him).
You are welcome!

FRITZ: You bring the sunshine with you!

BEPPE: We thought we were forgotten and came to put you in mind.

DAVID: I hope you're well?

FRITZ: Yes, well and happy.
(Pointing to Suzel.)
Thanks to her.

DAVID: God bless her for it.

SUZEL: (going into the house).
Will you not come and look around you?

CHORUS: Of course we will.

FRITZ: (to David). Will not you come, too?

DAVID: I? No! I don't wish to offend you, but I am tired.

CHORUS: Come, then, let's go!

DAVID: I'll see you later.

FRITZ: Good-bye, then. Come on!
Come on!

DAVID: I'll take a snooze while you are gone.
(Takes snuff.)
Our good friend is very jolly. His face is radiant.
Ah! ha! I smell a rat. He was eloquent in praise of that young girl.
When I see Suzel alone I'll find out what's in the wind.

SCENE IV

David and Suzel.

SUZEL: Ah! you are here still?

DAVID: Yes, at my ease.

SUZEL: Shall I bring you some water?

DAVID: Yes, just a drop.

SUZEL: I'll bring a goblet.

DAVID: Don't trouble, give me the pitcher.

SUZEL: As you please.

DAVID: (aside). She's as pretty as a peach.

SUZEL: Here is the water.

DAVID: (dopo aver bevuto). È purissima e fresca . . .	DAVID: (after drinking). Ah! that is refreshing.
SUZEL: (c. s.). Eccone ancora!	SUZEL: Is that enough?
DAVID: Per ora no . . . fammi riprender fiato . . . Ragazza, tu non sai ciò che pensavo?	DAVID: Quite enough, thank you! Let me take breath. Do you know what I was thinking?
SUZEL: In verità . . . signor . . .	SUZEL: (hesitating). Truly, good sir, I—
DAVID: Presso la fonte, Porgendomi da ber, tu mi sembravi Rebecca e mi credetti Eleazaro.	DAVID: I was thinking how like Rebecca you are, And I like Eleazar.
SUZEL: Vi ridete di me?	SUZEL: (quickly). Ah! now you are laughing at me.
DAVID: Non rido, no.	DAVID: Not I, indeed!
SUZEL: Ma che volete dir?	SUZEL: Then what do you mean?
DAVID: Non sai la Bibbia?	DAVID: You read your Bible?
SUZEL: Sì; la leggo ogni sera al padre mio.	SUZEL: Yes, I read a chapter every day to my dear father.
DAVID: Ridimmi un po' la storia de Rebecca!	DAVID: Then tell me the story of Rebecca at the well.
SUZEL: (impacciata). Signor mio, non potrò . . .	SUZEL: (agitated). Oh! no, indeed I cannot!
DAVID: Che! ti vergogni?	DAVID: What! Are you shy?
SUZEL: Ho soggezione . . .	SUZEL: The tale is too suggestive.
DAVID: Via! fatti coraggio!	DAVID: Take courage, lass!
SUZEL: (dopo un po' d'esitazione). "Faceasi vecchio Abramo, ed il Signore Lo aveva benedetto. Ei disse un giorno Al suo più vecchio servo: "Parti, va Nella natal mia terra ed una sposa Scegli ad Isacco mio"	SUZEL: (bashfully at first, but gaining courage as she goes on, the first part almost speaking). "Now Abraham was stricken in years "And God had blessed him above all men. "And he said to his trusty and beloved servant Eleazar: "'Go, seek the land where I was born and choose there "'A wife for my son Isaac'"—
DAVID: "Che tra le figlie Di Canahan, donna per lui non v'ha."	DAVID: "'For, verily, among the daughters of Canaan "'I find none worthy.'"—
SUZEL: "Ed in Mesopotamia il vecchio servo Fedele, se ne andò; ma, giunto ai possi Nei pressi di Nachor . . .	SUZEL: "And the old servant came to Mesopotamia, "And when he had come to the well near the house of Nahor"—
DAVID: Proprio così	DAVID: You tell it well, my daughter—
SUZEL: "Signore—ei disse—fa che la donzella A cui prima dirò: Progimi l'anfora E che dirammi "Bevi" sia la sposa D'Isacco."	SUZEL: "'Oh! Lord,' cried he, 'grant that the maiden "'I first shall ask: 'Give me to drink,' and who "'Shall fill her pitcher for me, may be wife to Isaac!'"—
DAVID: Brava!	DAVID: Very good!—
SUZEL: E tempo non passò Che comparve Rebecca . . .	SUZEL: "And so it befell, for Rebecca came from the house,"—
DAVID: Amata figlia, Di Bathuel, figlio a Nachor, bellissima!	DAVID: "Rebecca, the daughter of Bethuel—Nahor's son— "And she was fair to look upon."—
SUZEL: E il vecchio servo disse: "Oh! fa ch'io beva Un sorso di quell'acqua, per favore!" Ed essa a lui: "Ne bevi, o mio signore," E l'anfora piegò verso quel vecchio.	SUZEL: "Then spoke Eleazar: 'Give me to drink, I beseech thee,' "And the damsel answered: 'Drink freely,' and to "The aged stranger she offered the pitcher."
DAVID: E sposa fu Rebecca . . . Ed ora, o Suzel, Se a te dicessi, che porgesti l'acqua: "Sono un messo del cielo; il mio Signore, Che ha dovizia di case e campi e armenti, Non attende che te," che mi diresti?	DAVID: And Isaac won Rebecca. And now, Suzel, must I teach you, you who have given me your pitcher, that I am a herald from on high? Know that the owner of this house, these flocks and herds, would wed you, my daughter, What will you answer?
SUZEL: Che dir potrei? . . . Non so . . . Giammai pensiero . . .	SUZEL: I do not know. I never thought.
DAVID: (fissandola negli occhi). Giammai, davver? . . . E se come Eleazaro, Ti dicessi: "Chi viene a noi dai campi? Risponderesti tu come Rebecca Nascondendoti il viso?	DAVID: (looking fixedly at her). Never? Come, trust me. Now if I should ask: "What manner of man is he that comes" would you answer, like Rebecca: "Hide your face from your handmaid?"
FRITZ: (da fuori) O Beppe, qua!	FRITZ: (outside). Beppe, come here!
SUZEL: (nascondendosi il viso). Ahimè! Mio Dio! (Fugge nella fattoria.)	SUZEL: (hiding her face in her apron). Oh! heaven! (Runs into the house.)
DAVID: (con un sorriso di soddisfazione). La sposa sua sarà!	DAVID: (smiling). She shall be his wife.

SCENA V

SCENE V

David e Fritz.	David and Fritz.
FRITZ: Come va?	FRITZ: How do you do?
DAVID: Meglio assai . . . son riposato . . . Ma . . . la campagna a te non viene a noia?	DAVID: Much better since I've rested. But, tell me, do you not find the country irksome?
FRITZ: No; qui Suzel con garbo m'intrattiene . . .	FRITZ: No, Suzel's prattle amuses me.
DAVID: Suzel . . . di fatti, ha qui con me parlato . . . Mi piace . . . troverà presto marito.	DAVID: Suzel? Good! I've just been chatting with her. She is charming, and I must find her a good husband.
FRITZ: Marito a lei! Ti pare? . . . è una bambina! . . .	FRITZ: A husband! For her? She's only a child!
DAVID: Ho il giovinotto che ci vuol per lei . . .	DAVID: I know a young fellow who will suit her.
FRITZ: (scaldandosi). Essa rifiuterà . . .	FRITZ: (angry). She'll not consent!
DAVID: Non ci pensare!	DAVID: Don't be so sure of that.
FRITZ: Dell'antica manìa non sei guarito?	FRITZ: Always matchmaking! Why don't you drop it?
DAVID: E mai ne guarirò. Parlo a suo padre E le nozze, vedrai, si faran presto.	DAVID: It suits me. I've only to tell her father, and she'll be wedded in short order.
FRITZ: (scattando). Oh! no, non si faran perchè non voglio . . . Ah! finalmente . . . tu mi vieni a noia. Lasciami in pace!	FRITZ: Not it! I will forbid the banns! What am I saying? I do declare, I've lost my temper! Leave me in peace!
DAVID: A un vecchio amico parli In questo modo? . . . Ma non mi spaventi Colle tue grida: non mi fai paura! (Fa l'atto d'andarsene.)	DAVID: Why so rough with an old friend? But, never mind, You can't frighten me.
FRITZ: David! David!	FRITZ: David! David!
DAVID: (ritornando). Che c'è?	DAVID: Well? What?
FRITZ: Vattene al diavolo! (David esce.)	FRITZ: Confound your impudence! (Exit David.)

SCENA VI

FRITZ: (solo). Uno strano turbamento
Improvviso ora m'asssale . . .
Da qual nuovo sentimento
Agitato io sento il cor?
È l'amor da me deriso,
Che si vendica ad un tratto . . .
Dovran ridere sul viso
Alla vittima d'amor?
No . . . son salvo . . . il rabbin m'aperse gli occhi . . .
Vo' fuggir . . . Suzel qui non mi trattiene . . .

SCENA VII

Fritz, Hanezò, Federico poi Beppe.

FEDERICO: Fritz, noi partiamo . . . addio!

FRITZ: Con voi ritorno anch'io . . .

HANEZÒ: Come, vieni in città?

FRITZ: Sì . . . voglio tornar via.

FEDERICO: Così presto, perchè . . .

FRITZ: Mi son seccato già.

HANEZÒ: Ma il Rabbino dov'è?

FRITZ: Resta alla fattoria.

FEDERICO: Ma qui si perde tempo.

FRITZ: (da sè). Oh! povera mia Suzel!

BEPPE: Il baroccino si move già.

FEDERICO: Che più s'aspetta?

FRITZ: Lesti! in città!

SCENA VIII

David e Suzel.
(Si sente il rumore del baroccino che si allontana.)

DAVID: Sono i sonagli del baroccino . . .
E Fritz ov'è? On sta a vedere
Che ha preso il volo! . . .

SUZEL: Signor Rabbino

DAVID: (additando il baroccino). Non vedi . . . là?

SUZEL: (con un grido). È lui!

DAVID: (de sè) Il disertor!

SUZEL: (desolata). Ahimè. partì!

DAVID: Piangi? . . . perchè? . . .

SUZEL: (confusa). Non so . . .

DAVID: Via, fatti cor?
(Da sè.)
Son lagrime d'amor.

SCENE VI

FRITZ: (alone). What a strangely troubled feeling Fills my heart with doubt and fear,
While my brain with hope is reeling
And I'm happy while she's near.
Can it be that Love has slain me
With his arrow, sharp and strong?
That his net has taken me prisoner,
I who mocked at him so long?
No, I'm safe! The Rabbi has opened my eyes!
I will fly! Suzel shall not make a fool of me!

SCENE VII

Fritz, then Beppe, Hanezo and Federico.

FEDERICO: Fritz, we must depart. Farewell!

FRITZ: I shall go with you!

HANEZO: What! back to town?

FRITZ: Aye, I will go with you!

FEDERICO: And why so soon?

FRITZ: I hate the country!

HANEZO: And where is David?

FRITZ: In the house, resting.

FEDERICO: But time is flying. Come!

FRITZ: Oh! Suzel, my little darling!

BEPPE: The cart is all ready!

FEDERICO: We can stay no longer!

FRITZ: Let us go back!

SCENE VIII

David and Suzel.

DAVID: Bells ringing! Carriage starting! Where is Fritz?
Ho! Fritz, why have you left us?

SUZEL: Oh! Rabbi, he's gone?

DAVID: (pointing to carriage). Don't you see him?

SUZEL: (with a scream). It is he!

DAVID: (aside). The rascal! The deserter!

SUZEL: (disconsolately). Alas! he's gone. Alas!

DAVID: Why do you weep?

SUZEL: I don't know.

DAVID: Then don't do it!

SUZEL: Alas! he's gone away! He's gone away!

DAVID: (aside). Those tears are tears of love.

CORO INTERNO DI DONNE:
L'amore, che lontano se ne va,
Mai più non tornerà!

SUZEL: (disperata). Mai più . . . non tornerà!

[Fine Del Secondo Atto.]

ATTO III

SCENA I

La stessa scena del primo atto.

FRITZ: (solo). Tutto ho tentato . . . tutto! e sempre invano . . .
L'ho lasciata laggiù, senza un addio:
Ma l'imagine sua, pur da lontano,
M'appare mesta e mi richiama a se.

VOCI INTERNE: Intrecciate ghirlande, o giovinette!
Giovani, un fior mettetevi all'occhiello!
La bionda molinara è andata sposa
Stamane col suo bello!

FRITZ: E da per tutto amor! Sempre il destino
Mi perseguita . . . Ahimè! si sposa a Franges,
A Mesnil si battezza . . . e fin due vecchi,
Bianchi ed allegri, fan le nozze d'oro! . . .
Oh! questa pace come turba il core!
Come tutto mi canta: "Amore! Amore!"

SCENA II

Fritz e Beppe.

BEPPE: Buon giorno, Fritz! Ti volli salutare . .
Perchè triste così?

FRITZ: Nulla . . .

BEPPE: Una volta,
Venivi incontro con un bel sorriso . . .
Che cos'hai?

FRITZ: La tristezza mi tortura!
Pace trovar non so . . .

BEPPE: Povero amico!
Oh! lo conosco il male che tu soffri . . .
E l'ho provato anch'io, nè son guarito! . . .
E scrissi una canzon per consolar-

CHORUS: (outside). The love that loves and runs away
Won't live to love another day.

SUZEL: He'll never return to me!
Alas!
(Bursts into tears.)

[Curtain.]

ACT III

SCENE I

Scene: Same as in Act First, but without the table equipage.

FRITZ: (discovered). I have tried everything, but in vain! I fled from her presence without a farewell, but her face still pursues me and seems to call me back!

CHORUS: (outside). It is the miller's daughter
Going to be wed
To the man who sought her.

GIRLS: Come, take this flower, red,
And wear it in your bosoms.

FULL CHORUS: In honor of the fair
These white and rosy blossoms,
Of tint and fragrance rare.

FRITZ: Ah! Love, you follow me everywhere! It is my fate! Alas!
At Franges will be the wedding,
At Mesnil babes will come,
And bye and bye two white haired old folk
Will hold their golden wedding.

CHORUS: It is the miller's daughter, etc.

FRITZ: Oh! how this peace disturbs my heart!
The whole world seems to echo:
"Love! Love! Love!"

SCENE II

Fritz and Beppe.

BEPPE: Good morning, Fritz! I'm very glad to see you.
But why so sad?

FRITZ: No matter!

BEPPE: You used to meet me with a smile of welcome.
What is the matter?

FRITZ: I'm broken hearted. I shall never more find peace.

BEPPE: Poor old boy! I, too, have felt love's smart.
But as there is no cure for it, I ease it with a song. Perhaps it may do you good. I'll sing it.
Oh! pale one, who so long ago mi.

Non la conosci tu? vuoi che la canti?
O pallida, che un giorno mi guardasti,
In sogno tornami!
Una dolcezza tal mi procurasti,
Che ancor ne ho l'estasi!
Oh! che chiedevi tu, con gli occhi tuoi?
Ebbrezze o lagrime?
Pallida, torna a me, dimmi che vuoi,
Dimmi i tuoi palpiti!
Nulla ti so negar, pallida mia,
T'ho dato l'anima . . .
E, se un tuo bacio dà la morte . . . sia!
Oh! vieni, baciami!

FRITZ: Anche tu, Beppe, giungi a torturarmi
Con le mendaci ebbrezze del pensiero?
Lasciami in pace . . . lasciami!

BEPPE: Men vo!
Povero amico!
(Beppe esce.)

SCENA III

FRITZ: (solo). Ed anche Beppe amò . . .
Anche al suo cor s'apprese
Questa febbre fatale della vita!
Anch'ei s'accese
Del male che delizia e fa soffrir!
(Sospira.)
O amore, o bella luce del core,
Fiammella eterna che il mondo ha in sè,
Mesta carezza lieto dolore,
La vita è in te!
Blanda è la luce che a notte scende,
Sfolgora il sole possente ognor,
Pure il tuo raggio su tutti splende,
Luce del cor!
Oh! splendi, eterna limpida face,
Spanditi, o palpito generator!
Oh! Cielo canta l'inno di pace:
La vita è amor!

SCENA IV

Fritz e David.

DAVID: (da sè). L'amico Fritz fantastica d'amore!
(Avanzandosi.)
Ebbene, come va?

FRITZ: Lasciami stare!

DAVID: Lo so, lo so che non ti senti bene . . .
Dice la Bibbia: "Al solitario guai!"
(Con mistero.)
Ho combinato tutto . . .

FRITZ: Io non intendo . . .

DAVID: Per le nozze di Suzel . . .

FRITZ: Che mi dici?

DAVID: Impallidisci?

Gave kisses kind,
Come back, though but in dreams, to me,
You'll find welcome.
Your eyes are stars of destiny
None can resist,
Come back, my love, come back to me,
Come and be kissed.
I can refuse you nothing,
My maiden mild,
I'm yours and you are mine, dear Flower undefiled.

FRITZ: And even you, Beppe, would tease me with these mists of the imagination! I pray you leave me!

BEPPE: I'm off! Poor old boy!
(Exit.)

SCENE III

FRITZ: (alone). So Beppe, too, has loved! He, too, has felt the archer's dart and knows the unrest that gives no rest!
Oh! Love, sunlight of the heart, everlasting flame, pleasing pain, exquisite torture, all the world is yours!
Fair as the moon in the evening's still splendor,
Glorious as sun in the beauty of day,
But Love, royal Love, to your I render homage,
More than sun, moon or stars gleams your bright, shining ray.
Oh! shine, then, eternal, fair child of Dame Venus,
Sing on your sweet carols of music and joy,
No darkness nor sorrow can ever come between us,
For Love still is Life, Love our life shall employ.

SCENE IV

Fritz and David.

DAVID: (aside). Friend Fritz, sunk in a dream of love!
(Aloud.)
Good morning, Fritz! How goes it?

FRITZ: Let me be!

DAVID: I see you are not happy.
What says the Scriptures?
"It is not good for man to be alone."
(Mysteriously.)
Everything is working for the best.

FRITZ: What do you mean?

DAVID: For Suzel's wedding.

FRITZ: (hastily). What do you say?

DAVID: Why are you so pale?

FRITZ: Non mi sento bene!
Ma . . . di' la verità . . . Suzel è sposa?

DAVID: Con un bel giovinotto allegro e ricco . . .
Suo padre oggi verrà pel tuo consenso.

FRITZ: Ma . . . Suzel non sa nulla?

DAVID: Approva tutto.

FRTIZ: Io nego il mio consenso . . .

DAVID: Oh! non lo dire!

FRITZ: Per farti rabbia m'opporrò . . .

DAVID: Fa pure!
(Fritz esce.)

SCENA V

David, poi Suzel.

DAVID: (sorridendo). Povero Fritz, l'amore in te si desta . . .
E una vera tempesta
S'agita nel tuo core!
(Entra Suzel—David voltandosi.)
Caterina . . . Ah sei tu, Suzel!

SUZEL: Signore,
Venni a portare i frutti al mio padrone.

DAVID: Perchè mesta così? . . . piccina mia,
Ti voglio sempre veder lieta, sai?
Che? ti spuntan le lagrime? Fa' cuore!
Quando ritornerò, sorriderai!
(Exce.)

SCENA VI

SUZEL: (sola.) Non mi resta che il pianto ed il dolore . . .
Io non sogno che ai piedi suoi cader,
Dirgli che tutto il core
Vive del suo pensier!
Vorrei dirgli: ma tu dei miei tormenti
Non comprendi l'orribile martir?
Ah! nel tuo cor non senti
Che mi farai morir!

SCENA VII

Suzel e Fritz.

FRITZ: Suzel!

SUZEL: Signor!

FRITZ: (da sè.) Come s'è fatta pallida!
(A Suzel.)
Che mi vuoi dire?

SUZEL: Io? . . . nulla . . .

FRITZ: E che mi venne
Allora a raccontare David? . . . Ch'eri
Già fidanzata ad un bel giovinotto?

FRITZ: I am not well. But, tell me, is Suzel going to be married?

DAVID: Yes; a rich, good looking fellow, of a pleasant temper.
Her father will come today for your approval of the match.

FRITZ: Then Suzel consents?

DAVID: She does, with joy.

FRITZ: But I don't! Nor will I!

DAVID: Oh! pray, don't say that!

FRITZ: Just for spite I'll not consent!

DAVID: I fancy not. (Exit Fritz.)

SCENE V

David, then Suzel.

DAVID: (smiling). Poor Fritz, he is in a bad state! Love's fever has caught him.
(Calls.)
Caterina!
(Enter Suzel.)
Ah! you, Suzel?

SUZEL: I have brought the fruit for the master.

DAVID: Why do you look so sad, poor little child, you who should always be gay? What! tears? Cheer up, you will be laughing bye and bye. (Exit.)

SCENE VI

SUZEL: (alone). Now nothing is left but bitter tears of sorrow,
Never more shall I see his godlike features.
Hope from his presence never more may I borrow,
My life is very weary, my dream of love is over.
On his dear smile I'd live and love forever,
But without him my heart is bleak and drear.
Since from his presence I must sadly sever,
Sure I shall die of grief too deep for tear.

SCENE VII

Suzel and Fritz.

FRITZ: Suzel!

SUZEL: Master!

FRITZ: (aside). How pale she is!
What do you want?

SUZEL: I? Nothing!

FRITZ: What did David mean by telling me that you were going to be married to a young and handsome fellow?

SUZEL: Ahimè!

FRITZ: (con amarezza). Credevo inver che tu venissi
A portarmi l'invito per le nozze.

SUZEL: Ah! non lo dite!

FRITZ: Perchè piangi? Forse
Non l'ami? . . . E perchè mai lo sposi?

SUZEL: Così vuol.

FRITZ: Ma non l'ami?

SUZEL: Io no . . .

FRITZ: Rifiuta
La nozze!

SUZEL: Io non ho core . . .
Ma, voi che lo potete,
Salvatemi, signore!
(Supplichevole.)
Ah! ditela per me quella parola,
Ditela al padre mio:
E se dovrò nel mondo restar sola,
M'assisterà il buon Dio!
Pel babbo, questa è certo una gran pena,
Io lo farò soffrir . . .
Ma, pria d'avere al cor quella catena,
Preferisco morir!

FRITZ: Suzel, tu n'ami un altro!

SUZEL: Un altro? Ah no!

FRITZ: Confessa! dimmi il nome suo qual è?

SUZEL: Ahimè!

FRITZ: Saper lo voglio! Ed io farò
Ch'egli ti sposi.

SUZEL: No!

FRITZ: Sì, dillo a me!

SUZEL: Giammai, giammai, signor, prima morir!

FRITZ: Te ne scongiuro!

SUZEL: Ah, no!—voglio partir!

FRITZ: Ma . . . s'io t'aprissi le mie braccia?

SUZEL: Oh Dio!

FRITZ: Se ti dicessi: io t'amo!

SUZEL: È sogno il mio?!

FRITZ: Io t'amo, t'amo, o dolce mio tesor,
Soave immagine d'amor!
Di te soltanto
Vivea, mio bene,
E sol di te vivrò!

SUZEL: Alas!

FRITZ: I thought you were bringing me an invitation to the wedding.

SUZEL: Ah! do not say that!

FRITZ: Do you not love him, then?
If you do not, why marry him?

SUZEL: I must obey my father.

FRITZ: Your father! You do not love him, then?

SUZEL: No!

FRITZ: Then break the engagement!

SUZEL: I dare not. But you, who can do everything,
Save me! Save me! Ah!
Say to my father that I would not marry.
That I would rather live out my days alone.
To my life's end I would carry deep regret
Bound to a husband whom I would disown.
Tell him, I pray, that I am loath to grieve him,
But thus to wed would break my very heart.
And though I never will trouble or deceive him,
I cannot wed with one in whom I have no part.

FRITZ: Suzel, do you love some other?

SUZEL: Another? No!

FRITZ: Come, tell me his name.

SUZEL: Alas!

FRITZ: He shall be your husband. I will see to that.

SUZEL: No!

FRITZ: Yes, I will know!

SUZEL: No! Never! I rather would die!

FRITZ: I entreat you!

SUZEL: Ah! no! I must go.

FRITZ: But if I hold you in my arms—

SUZEL: Oh! heaven!—

FRITZ: And say that I love you?

SUZEL: Ah! it is my dream.

FRITZ: I love you! I love you! treasury of my soul, sweet jewel of my heart! Tell me you love me, and we will live for each other.

SUZEL: Oh! parla, parla, imparadisa il cor!
Non oso gli occhi volger su di te!
O vivo raggio d'amor,
Oh splendi, splendi per me!
Il duolo, il pianto
E le mie pene,
Tutto ora scorderò!

FRITZ: O Suzel mia, giammai, giammai si amò di più!

SUZEL: Io t'amo, t'amo tanto! La vita mia sei tu!

SCENA ULTIMA

I Precedenti, David, Beppe, Federico, Hanezò e Caterina.

DAVID: (comparendo, seguito dagli altri, sul limitare della terrazza). Amici! ho vinto, ho vinto!

FRITZ: O buon Rabbino,
Vinse l'amor! La vigna è tua!

DAVID: La vigna
È di Suzel!

FRITZ: Che dici?

DAVID: E non si strinse
Patto fra noi che ne sarei padrone?
E sia data alla tua sposa la vigna
Di Clairefontaine!

BEPPE E CATERINA: Bravo, Rabbino! bravo!

FEDERICO: (a Fritz). Tu sposi, Fritz?

HANEZÒ: E noi che mai faremo?

DAVID: Per voi ci penseremo . . .
Se avete in petto il core,
Lontana no sarà l'alba d'amore!

FRITZ: O amore, o bella—luce del core,
Fiammella eterna—che il mondo ha in sè,
Mesta carezza—lieto dolore, La vita è in te!

TUTTI: O amore, o bella—luce del core,
Fiammella eterna—che il mondo ha in sè,
Mesta carezza—lieto dolore, La vita è in te!

[Fine.]

SUZEL: Oh! speak, your words bring heaven to my heart!
I scarce dare raise my eyes to look on you. Bright sun of love, oh! shine upon me still!
All grief is past, my soul is full of joy.

FRITZ: Oh! Suzel, sure none ever loved before?

SUZEL: I love you, love you dearly, as none ever loved before!

FRITZ: My heart speaks, loud and clearly, each day I'll love you more!

LAST SCENE

The preceding, David, Beppe, Federico, Hanezo and Caterina.

DAVID: (on the threshold). I've won, my friends, I've won!

FRITZ: No, good Rabbi, it was Love!
The vineyard is yours!

DAVID: I give it to Suzel!

FRITZ: What do you say?

DAVID: According to our bargain the vineyard is mine, and I give it to Suzel—the vineyard of Clairefontaine.

BEPPE AND CATERINA: Bravo, Rabbi! Bravo!

FEDERICO: So, Fritz, you'll wed?

HANEZO: And, pray, what shall we do?

DAVID: We'll find you wives.
If in your hearts love's fire is glowing,
His favor Cupid will be soon bestowing.

FRITZ: Oh! Love! fair as moon in the evening's still splendor,
Glorious as sun in the beauty of day,
Love, royal Love, to you I render homage,
More than sun, moon or stars gleams your bright, shining ray.

CHORUS: Oh! shine, then, eternal, fair child of Dame Venus,
Sing on your sweet carols of music and joy,
No darkness nor sorrow can ever come between us,
For Love still is life, Love our life shall employ.

[Curtain.]

Iris (1898)

MUSIC BY PIETRO MASCAGNI ■ LIBRETTO BY LUIGI ILLICA

This three-act melodrama, set to a libretto by Luigi Illica, was first performed at the Teatro Costanzi in Rome on November 22, 1898. In a Japanese village, Osaka, a wealthy young rogue, is in love with Iris, a simple laundry girl. He asks the owner of a teahouse, Kyoto, to kidnap her. They plan a public marionette show at which this scheme will take place. The marionettes perform the story of the love of Dhia and Jor; Osaka himself performs the part of Jor, the son of the Sun God. Iris, attracted by his singing, joins the crowd watching the show; she is grabbed and dragged away. Kyoto sends Iris' old father, who is blind, money along with a note that says she has gone of her own free will to Yoshiwara, an area of bad reputation. The old man searches for his daughter so that he may curse her. Iris regains consciousness in Osaka's apartment. She recognizes his voice as that of Jor, and she rejects his attempts to woo her. He tires of her, and Kyoto dresses her up and shows her off to the crowd. Her father finds her thus and curses her, throwing mud as he does so. She throws herself into a sewer in her sadness. Her body is found at the bottom of the sewer by ragpickers who attempt to remove her clothes and jewelry, but they realize that she is still alive and run away in fright. The dawn comes as Iris is dying, comforting her in her grief. Flowers open in full bloom around her body as she dies, and she rises into the sky surrounded by color and light.

■ ATTO PRIMO	■ ACT ONE
La Notte. I Primi Albori. I Fiori. L'Aurora. I Primi Raggi.	The Night. Daybreak. Flowers. The Dawn. Sunrise.
La luce e l'idioma de'gli eterni! Udetelo!	Light is the language of the immortals, Hear it!
IL SOLE: Son Io! Son Io la Vita.— Son la Belta Infinita! la Luce ed il Calor! Amate, O Cose dico: Sono il Dio novo e antico! amate!— Son l'Amor! Per me gli augelli han canti i flor profumi e incanti! Dei Mondi Io la Cagione! Dei Cieli Io la Ragione! Uguale Io scendo ai Re, si come a te, Mousme! Pieta la esenza mia Eterna Poesia—Amor!	CHORUS — THE SUN: I am! I am the Life. I am the Infinite Beauty! The Light; and the Heat! Love O things — I say — I am the god, new and old! Love! I am Love! By me the birds have their songs! The flowers their perfume and incense! I am the Cause of the world! I am the Reason of the Heavens! On equal terms I go to the King And to you, Wash-girl! Compassion is my nature; Eternal Poesy — Love!
IRIS: (Sul limitare della casa). Ho fatto un triste sogno pauroso Un sogno tutto pieno di draghi, mostri, volante chimera, e di striscianti colubri. S'era malata la amica bambola ond' io—tutta piangente— l'avea posta in giardino a riposare entro un cespo di rose. Intorno a lei tacea tutto il giardino: non piu canti di gigli, canzoni di gardenie porporine ne voli di libellule; Avevo detto ai flor— "Tacete, O fiori! Malata e mia bambola!" Quand'ecco in ciel vol di bianche cicogne fuggire spaventate! Guardo!—Pieno e il giardin di mostri terribile che la mia bimba insidiano! Accorro a sua difesa! Prego! La grimo! "Lasciatemi, l'amica! Ma una fenice spiega in ruote e giri fantastici la coda che come serpe avvinghia la piccina allarga l'ali—e fugge! Ma, Sol, tu vieni, ed il sogno e bugia, Guarita e la mia bambola! (Corre entro la casa, vi prende una bambola, poi rapidamenta tornando sui limitare della casa alza verso il sole la sua bambola, e con grazia, le agita le manine, a guisa di saluto). Vieni e saluta il Sole!	IRIS: (At the door of her cottage) I have had a sad and fearful dream A dream all filled. With dragons, flying chimeras, And hissing serpents. My dear doll-baby was sick So I, all weeping, Had put it in the garden to sleep Under a rose-bush. Everything around her was silent, in the whole garden. No more sang the lilies The songs of the purple flowers, Wish not to disturb her I said to each flower, "Silence, flower, My doll-baby is sick." When lo! in heaven white storks were flying. They flew away, frightened. I watch! The garden is full of horrible monsters That threaten my doll-baby! I run to her defense. I pray. I weep. "Leave me! my friend." But a phoenix spread its tail like a wheel And made fantastical motions As a serpent came near my baby. Then it spread its wings, and flew! But, Sun! you came back, and the dream was a lie! Guard my doll-baby! (She goes into the house, picks up a doll-baby, returns quickly to the door, lifts the doll high, gracefully moving its hands saluting) Come! Salute the Sun!
IL CIECO: (dall' interno). Con che parli?	CIECO: (Within) With whom are you speaking?
IRIS: O padre mio, col Sole! (depone la bambola su un vaso di fiori ed entra nella casa). (Gia di tempo si sono veduti spiare il luogo-nascosti dietro il gruppo di bambou). (cautamento si sono avanzati lungo la siepe, finche Osaka ha sconto Iris nel momento in cui essa entra nella casa—Osaka la indica a Kyoto).	IRIS: O, my father, with the Sun! (She places her doll by a vase of flowers and goes into the house) (At the same time, Osaka and Kyoto are seen watching the place from behind a group of bamboo) (Cautiously they creep along the hedge until Osaka has seen Iris. He points her out to Kyoto)
OSAKA: E lei! e lei!	OSAKA: It is she! It is she!
KYOTO: E la figlia del Cieco.	KYOTO: She's the blind man's daughter.
OSAKA: La voglio!	OSAKA: I want her.
KYOTO: Tu l'avrai!	KYOTO: You'd have her?
OSAKA: Non farle male!	OSAKA: Do her no harm!
KYOTO: Non sciupo la mia merce!	KYOTO: Don't covet my property!
OSAKA: Che se! Bada!	OSAKA: Look out! Beware!
KYOTO: Son noto al Yoshiwara! Non temere!	KYOTO: I'm known at the Yoshiwara! Don't be frightened.
OSAKA: Sta ben!	OSAKA: Very well!

KYOTO: Soltanto. Ho d'uopo di tua voce all trammi ch'io medito— Sottile e pieghevol come salce e la tua voce.

OSAKA: E ver! ho voce acuta:
imita il sono, il bisbiglia d'augelli
e il chiacchierare d'irrequiete fanciulle.
La mia voce vibra nell'aria, desta gli echi ai monti, e vola alta nel ciel come cigne o falco.

KYOTO: Essa ni occorre!

OSAKA: E la fanciulla?

KYOTO: Supponi ch'esso gia sia cosa tua.
Andiamo a prepararci un viso!

OSAKA: Andiamo!

KYOTO: Prudenza vuol cosi!
ignoti, e cauti!

OSAKA: Cauti! Ignoti!

KYOTO: Si.

OSAKA: Gia mi diverto e godo gia.

OSAKA E KYOTO: La vita e cosi bella.
(s'avviano verso il fondo della scena).
(passano il ponte e scompaino).
(sul limitare della casa appare il cieco, che la figlia Iris guida amorosamente. scendono nel giardino).

CIECO: Voglio posare ove a piu caldo il sole!

IRIS: (fa sedere il padre su di un piccolo sgabello).

CIECO: Si, Oh, il buon raggio!
M'avviva! Or dammi il mio rosario.
Vio pregare!

IRIS: (porgendo al padre il rosario). Ecco il rosario!

CIECO: E tu pai pregato?

IRIS: Si! inaffiero i mei fiori, intanto.
(Iris si aggiro pel piccolo giardino, inaffiando i fiori; ammiradore aciuno-coglie un crisantemo a se lo pone fra i capelli).

CIECO: Io prego.
(Il cieco prega silenziosamente, immobile, movendo solo la d'ita per fare scorrere la grana del rosario).

(Dal villaggio si avanza un gruppo di mousme portano a braccio, o sul capo, della cestedi giunchi—Sono giovani lav—daji che vengono a lavore del ruscello bianchi lini, e varlotinte mussoline).

CORO DE MOUSME: Al rio! al rio!
E il plenilunio! A rio!
(si dispongono in vari e pittoresqui gruppi pe cominciare il lavoro).
L'acqua e limpida e tiepida!

KYOTO: Only I wish I had your voice For the trick I'm planning — Your voice is subtle and flexible as the willow.

OSAKA: It is true. I have a sharp voice.
It imitates sound; the whirr of Birds; the chatter of noisy children.
My voice vibrates in the air,
Echoes from the mountains, and Flies up like a stork or a falcon!

KYOTO: She's runnning here!

OSAKA: Is it the girl?

KYOTO: Suppose the girl is yours,
Let's go and prepare a show.

OSAKA: We'll go.

KYOTO: Such affairs demand prudence, caution, disguise!

OSAKA: Caution! disguise!

KYOTO: Yes.

OSAKA: It will be a good diversion for me.

OSAKA and KYOTO: "For life is thus made lovely!"
(They go toward the back of the scene)
(They cross the bridge and disappear)
(At the door of the cottage Cieco appears guided lovingly by his daughter, Iris. They go into the garden)

CIECO: I wish to sit where the sun is warm.

IRIS: (Placing her father on a small bench) Here, father!

CIECO: Yes!
Oh! good warmth! It revives me!
Now give me my rosary.
I wish to pray.

IRIS: (Handing the rosary) Here is the rosary.

CIECO: And have you prayed?

IRIS: Yes, I will go and water my flowers the while.
(Iris moves about her little garden, watering the flowers, admiring them. She picks a chrysanthemum, and puts it in her hair)

CIECO: I pray.
(The blind man prays silently, immobile, only moving his finger to slip the beads of the rosary)

(From the village come a group of Mousme, working girls; they carry in their arms or on their heads rush baskets filled with muslins of various colors)

CHORUS OF MOUSME: To the river! The river!
The moon is full! To the river!
(They dispose themselves in picturesque groups to commence their work)

Sciuga il bucato il sole e la lavanda in fiore!
E il plenilunio!
Fra loti ed iridi, felci e ninfe
e nenufare gelsominee scorre la rapida carezza il pie delle Mousme.
Viene il suo bacio dalla sorgente,
Bacio di rio, bacio di Dio
Contorci e attorta
Acqua correnti da lungi porta cento profumi l'odor del muschio, cotto dall'onde fra zolle e dumi
di cento sponde!

IRIS: In pure stille—gaie scintilla scende la vita!
L'acqua s'effonde per vie profonde
Bevi la vita alga cerulea.
Tu, Margharita,
leva il candore, della chioma.
O celestrino! fiore di mey.
neve odorante,
tu, gelsomino
e tu, olezzante, fiore di amoma!
La varia chioma
leva, o coriando.
fiore di monte!

CHORUS: Fra zolle e dumi
di cento sponde.

CIECO: (recitando). Tu mi, hai tolta la vista.
Ma io verdo la Tua Grandezza:
La tua Grandezza la sento.
essa parla all'anima mia!
la belleza della Vita creato da te mi penetra col sole, nella mia
Vecchia persona!
Tu sei Grande e Buono!
La Vita e pur tuttavia sempre un cammino faticoso,
Ma e aggradevole se io penso che conduce a Nirvana!
Io cammino anelando alla meta!
Tu mi hai tolta la vista
Ma mi hai dato degli occhi d'Iris;
Mi hai dato un Genio.
Buono e gentile
non son solo! Io dico la tua Grandezza!

IRIS: Ristoria! Irrora!
Thea dorosa, fiore divino, gardenia, rosa, vita bevete!
Bevete, fiori, mente, verbene e olezzi e balsami pel mio giardino fiore espandete!

CORO: Ha raggi il sole; ha timi il prato, il lino candido, bioncheggia ed ole.
(Suoni lontani di striduli samisen, di gongs, e di tamburelli—

The water is clear and warm!
Drying our wash in the sunshine
And working away among the flowers.
Now is it full moon!
Mid ferns and irises, water-lilies
Nymphs and jassamines
They follow rapidly.
Wavelets whirl,
Caressing the feet
Of the Mousme.
Come now and kiss us, rising still higher
Kiss of the river; yet kiss of fire!
Now twisting; now turning
Swift running water
Carrying perfume.
The odor of musk, borne by the wave-
From sweet briars and thorns
Of a hundred strands!

IRIS: Dropping so purely — gaily, demurely,
So Life is falling!
To the deep journey — soaring upward with lightness!
Drink! and be living,
Your fragrance giving!
Thou, Margarita,
Hold to your title named for your whiteness!
Sky-colored fennel! —
Sweet-scented snow-flower!
Thou, yellow jessamine!
And you, with aroma, flower of amoma,
Named as you may be —
Up! coriander!
Over mountains to wander!

CHORUS: From the clay and the thorns
Of a hundred strands.

CIECO: (reciting). You have robbed me of my sight
But I see all your grandeur —
I know your greatness!
It speaks to my soul!
The beauty of life from you
Penetrates my old body with the sunshine.
You are great and good!
Life is, by every road,
A toilsome journey.
But I love it, since it leads me to Nirvana!
I walk impatiently toward the goal!
You have robbed me of vision
But have given me the eyes of Iris.
You have given me an angel,
Gentle and good.
I am not alone, I say to your grandeur!

IRIS: Refresh! Bedew!
Odorous Thea, divine flowers
Garden of roses, Life now drink ye.
Drink, pretty flowers, mint and verbena!
That grow in my garden,
To increase, now, I think ye!

CHORUS: The sun has rays; and thyme has the meadow,
Linens are whitering, drawn from the shadow.
(Far away are heard the sounds of Iris e le mousme guardono con sorpresa verso la strada che conduce al ponte).	the samisen, of gongs and tambourines. Iris and the Mousme look with surprise toward the street which leads to the bridge)

IRIS: Gui per la via ne viene un gaio suono.	IRIS: Up from the street comes very gay music!
CORO: (ascoltando ansiose). Son samisi, tamburi e risonati cymbali e gongs!	CHORUS: (Listening anxiously) There are samisens, tambourines, High resounding cymbals, and gongs!
CIECO: (ad Iris). Lontano?	CIECO: Away, far?
IRIS: S'avvicina.	IRIS: They are coming near.
CIECO: Iris! chi son? li vedi? Guarda!	CIECO: Iris, who are they? Do you see them? Watch you!
IRIS: Guardo! (si avvicina alla siepe guardando verso il fondo).	IRIS: I'll watch. (She goes to the hedge and looks beyond)
CORO: Son commendianti! Sono guechas! Vengono	CHORUS: They are comedians; And some Geishas. They're coming.
IRIS: O padre!	IRIS: O father!
CIECO: Di!	CIECO: Speak!
IRIS: E il Teatro dei Pupi!	IRIS: It's a puppet-show.
CIECO: Stammi presso, fanciulla!	CIECO: Keep near me, my child.
IRIS: Obbediro.	IRIS: I'm standing here.
CIECO: Sono vagabondi! (Iris torna presso il padre e lo rassicura).	CIECO: They are vagabonds. (She returns to her father, and reassures him)
CORO: Ritordiamo il ritorno? (Osaka e Kyoto entrambi camuffati da istrioni girovaghi sbucano del fondo con un codazzo, di sounatori guecha e samovrai; al suono di samisen gongs, tamburelli; le mousme corrono incontro curiose, a battono festamente le mani nei vedere che si tratti d'una rappresentazione di Pupi—Osaka e Kyoto scendono li ponte, sequlti della loro compagnia: Le mousme, curiose, fanne cerchio—mentre ad un cenno di Kyoto alcuni degli istrioni pianto il Teatro del Pupi).	CHORUS: Shall we delay our going home? (Osaka and Kyoto, both disguised as wandering players, enter. They are followed by a crowd of musicians, geishas and vagabonds, at the sound of the music) Yes; we'll stay here! (The Mousme run about, moved by curiosity, and clap their hands joyfully at the prospect of seeing the puppet-show) (Osaka and Kyoto cross the bridge followed by the whole company) (The Mousme look at them curiously. Meanwhile at a sign from Kyoto some of the others set up the theatre for the puppets)
CORO: Rimaniamo! Col bucato piu tardi torneremo! Ecco il guechas! Tutte a veli E numerosa assai la campagnia! Veh! quattro guechas: sono due attori! Son quattro suonatori! Eccoli! Vengono!	CHORUS: We'll stretch out our washing, delaying return. Look at the Geishas! all clothed in gauzes, See what a company! See! Four Geishas! Two actors! Four musicians! Look at them! They're coming!
IRIS: (attratta dalla curiosita, si pone ad osservare dietra la siepe). Dietro allo biancho spine me mettro.	IRIS: (Drawn by curiousity she posts herself so as to see behind the hedge) I will place myself behind the white-thorn.
KYOTO: (rivolto alle mousme, pur tenedo d'occhio Iris, che se e avvincinata all a siepe del suo giardino, guardando ansiosamente). Io son Danjuro il padre dei Fantocci che nelle mie commedie faccio sposi alle gentili bambole. (rivolto al suonatori). Ola, musica! mousme! tenete pupe da marito?	KYOTO: (Kyoto turns to the Mousme while holding the eyes of Iris, who comes near the edge of the garden peering anxiously beyond) I am Danjuro, the father of the puppets, which, in my comedy, become husbands to the gentle doll-babies. (To the Musicians) Ho, there! Music! Mousme, have you had the puppets of marriage?
CORO: Si che ne abbiamo, e sono buone e belle.	CHORUS: Yes, we have had them; and they ar just lovely!
IRIS: Come la mia, no; non ve n'ha. Sto certa!	IRIS: As for me, no; I have not. That's certain.
CORO: E un Teatro di lusso!	CHORUS: As a show, it is charming!
CIECO: — (chiamando). Iris!	CIECO: Iris!
IRIS: (al padre). Sto qua.	IRIS: I'm here.
KYOTO: Ora daremo representazione! Udrite i Pupi miei dirtante cose tutte maravigliose e dotta assai Parlai udrite Jor, figlio del Sole e Dhia la bella figlia sventurata! Ma piu non voglio dir — Udrite, e basta Ehi — Musica! Preparo la scena! (Osaka! attento!)	KYOTO: Now we give the representation. You shall hear my puppets tell many things. All marvellous and very learned; You shall hear Jor, Son of the Sun, And Dhia, the beautiful unfortunate daughter. But more, I won't say. You'll hear plenty. Ho, there! Music! Prepare the scene! (Osaka, attention!)
OSAKA: (Non die temer).	OSAKA: (Never fear!)
KYOTO: (La parte?)	KYOTO: (Your part.)
OSAKA: (Io la ricordo e non ne fallo un ette!)	OKASA: (I remember it. I'll not miss a point.)
LE MOUSME: Poniamici tutte intorno. (Duranti gli ultimi preparativi le Mousme seggono, ginnochioni, facendo cerchio intorno al teatrino).	THE MOUSME: Let's place ourselves around. (The Mousme seat themselves around the theatre knee-fashion, forming a circle, while the preparations go on)
KYOTO: (E la piccina?)	KYOTO: (And the young maiden.)
OSAKA: (Guarda con occhi larghi come foglie di loto e di nelumbo! sta alla siepe!)	OSAKA: (She's looking With large eyes, like a lotus flower. She's at the hedge.)
KYOTO: (Vedrai, ne la trarremo!) (Ora l'adesco! E la curiosita infallibil amo).	KYOTO: (You'll see how we'll draw her!) (Now she's attention!) (Curiosity's certain to lead to love!)
LE MOUSME: Facciam silenzio! Gia danno principio. (Osaka e Kyoto si collocano dietro il paravennto a destro del Teatrino, da dove possono spiare i vovimenti d'Iris, pure sequendo le loro respettive parti). (Kyoto fa cenno d'introdurri in Scena Dhia).	THE MOUSME: Let us keep silence! They give the beginning! (Osaka and Kyoto arrange themselves behind a large screen at the right of the puppet theatre, where they are able to spy out the movements of Iris, while following out their respective parts) (Kyoto makes a sign to bring on Dhia).
DHIA (una guecha). Misera! (un gran sospiro). Ogno qui sola! Unque mai mi consola! . . . Morte rapi mia madre ridotta e mia famiglia a un collerico padre che non ama la figlia! . . . (un gemito). Ho vesti brutte a lacere . . . (altro gemito). scarne braccia e sottili (terzo gemito). gote pallide e grame . . . son malata ed ho fama e sono le mie lacrime mie gemmi e mie monili! . . . (un singhiozzo).	DHIA: (A Geisha) Miserable (A long breath) Always here alone! No one even consoles me! Death took my mother— my family is broken up I've a bad, ill-tempered father, Who does not love his daughter! (A sigh) I am all wounds and bruises. (Another sigh) My arms are scrawny and thin (Third sigh) My cheeks are sad and pale. I am sick and hungry. I have only my tears, My sighs and my weepings. (A great sob) chi ascolta i mie dolori? . . . (lamento). non ho amiche ne fiori! . . .	Alas! who hears my grieving? (Lamentations) I've neither friends nor flowers! (A sigh, a sob and a lament)

OSAKA: (sotto voce). (Brava!)	OSAKA: (sotto voce). (Brava!)
KYOTO: (a clever actress)	KYOTO: (A clever actress!)
LE MOUSME: (fanno i loro commenti). come forza le lacrime la povera fanciulla! Davvero fa pieta!	THE MOUSME: (Commenting among themselves) The poor young woman is moved to tears! It is most pitiful!
OSAKA: (Ve come stanno attente!)	OSAKA: (See how attentive they are!)
LE MOUSME: (chiamando Iris). Iris, vientene qua; di la tu vedi nulla!	THE MOUSME: (Calling Iris) Iris! why don't you come here? You can see nothing from there.
IRIS: (alle Mousme). Vedo. Qui resto: grazie! (Kyoto imitanda la voce rauco de un vecchio catarroso fa le plu strane grida del mondo, picchiondo forte sul legno del Teatro, a dare l'idea dell' avvicinarse del vecchio, irraconda ed inumono genitore).	IRIS: (to the Mousme). I can see. I'll stay here,—thank you. (Kyoto, imitating the nasal voice of a rough old croaker, with catarrh, knocks loudly on the wooden frame of the puppet theatre to announce the arrival of the irate and wicked old father)
DHIA: Ah, mia padre! (Apparizze sul teatrino il pupo Padre).	DHIA: Ah! my father! (The puppet father appears)
CORO: Ecco il padre!	THE CHORUS: See the father!
DHIA: (tremolo voce). Lo sento. Tremo dallo spavento	DHIA: I know him! (Voice trembling) I tremble from fear.
LE MOUSME: Che ceffo! Me lo sogno stanotte!	THE MOUSME: What a face! I'll dream of it to-night!
IL PADRE: (Kyoto, con voce terribile). Ah! sciagurata putta! Sono stanco di mantenermi questo sciocca, vana, inutile, neghittosa, scioperata!	THE PUPPET FATHER: (Kyoto, in a terrible voice) Ah! wicked wench! I am tired of keeping. Such a stupid, vain, useless, lazy, idle—
DHIA: Ah, padre mio!	DHIA: O, my father!
IL PADRE: Preparati! Io ti vendo al gran mercato di Simonosaky!	THE FATHER: Get ready, I will sell you To the great whiskey merchant.
DHIA: (grande strida). No, padre, no non vendermi!	DHIA: (Great shriek) No! father! Do not sell me!
IL PADRE: Preparati!	THE FATHER: Get ready!
OSAKA: (La piccina si muove! Forza al dialogo!)	OSAKA: (Our, little girl is moved. Force of the dialogue!)
DHIA: (cade ai piedi del pupo padre). Per la luce del sole, e delle stelle . . . tienmi ancora con te! Che vuoi ch'io faccia? (gurgli inghiozzi).	DHIA: (Falls at the feet of her father) By the light of the sun and of the stars I'll work again for you. What would You have me do? (Gurgling sighs)
OSAKA: (Ha gli occhi rossi, rossi!)	OSAKA: (Her eyes are blood red!)
CIECO: (chiamando). Iris!	CIECO: (calling). Iris!
IRIS: Sto qua!	IRIS: I'm here!
IL PADRE: (Kyoto, forzando terribilmente la voce). Al gran mercato di Simonosaky Tu troverai padrone! Io sono stanco d'averti con me! Tu mangi troppo e non rendi mi nulla! Ond io te vendo!	THE FATHER: (Forcing terribly his voice) In the great whiskey merchant You may find a father! I am tired Of having you near me! You eat much, And earn me nothing, Therefore I sell you.
(impressionate di tanta crudelta, Le Mousme sono furenti contro il pupo Padre).	(Impressed by the great cruelty of the Father, as shown by the rough voice of Kyoto, the wash girls are furious against the wicked man)
LE MOUSME: Vecchio lercio! Furfonte! Muso da vecchia arpia!	THE MOUSME: You old scoundrel! You thief! The face of an old harpy.
DHIA: (con grida straziante e disperato). Uccidimi, piuttosto!	DHIA: (With a cry of distress and desolation) O kill me rather!
IL PADRE: Basta! Ho detto. (se ne va).	THE FATHER: Shut up! I've spoken! (He goes out)
CORO: E sordo alle sue tante lacrime disperate! Pigliamolo a sassale? Orco! Vampiro! Via! (urlando, e minniciando coi pugni il padre tiranno).	CHORUS: He has no feeling for her tears of desperation. Let's catch him and kill him! Old Death-head. Vampire! Away! (Howling, and threatening to fight the wicked Father with their fists)
OSAKA: (Si scalda il nostro pubblico). (E in furora)	OSAKA: (Our public is warm over it.) (It's in a fury.)
DHIA: Morire! . . . Si . . . Finire!	DHIA: To die——yes——end it!
OSAKA: Quasi, quasi, t'uccidono davvero il pupo padre.	OSAKA: (Thus, indeed, they'd kill the puppet father.)
IRIS: Ah! la istoria pietosa! Mi pai che centro al core Mano me prema e tocchi che me vende affanosa.	IRIS: Ah! this play is affecting! It goes straight to my heart! My hands I press with heavy grief, My thoughts are torn apart.
DHIA: (con esaltazione) Deh prendimi con te, genio il Bene! Portami teco dov non si soffre!	DHIA: (With exaltation) Then take me to you, angel of Good! Take me where there is no weeping!
KYOTO: (ad Osaka). Or torcati! Dolcissimo!	KYOTO: (To Osaka) Now comes your part. Sweetly!
OSAKA: Dolcissimo.	OSAKA: Most sweetly.
JOR: (figlio del Sole). (Osaka invisible.) Apri la tua finestra — or son io che venga al tuo chiamar, povera Dhia Apri la tua finestra al raggio mio Apri il tuo cor a mia calda malia Jor ha ascolta, O Dhia, la tua preghiera Apri l'anima tua, fanciulla al Sole Apri l'anima tua alle mi parole! Apri il tuo cuore a me, fanciulla, e spera! Tu vuoi morir? Morire io ti faro, ma ti faro morir dal sol baciata, Poscia paese eterno ti traro Ove, O fanciulla tu sarai amata!	JOR: (Osaka invisible) Open your lattice window to Jor! He that comes at their call, poor Dhia, Open your window to my gentle power, Open your heart to my love for you! Jor has heard, O Dhia, your prayer Open your soul, dear child, to the sun! Open your soul to my words so fair! Open your heart, though all hope be gone! You wish to die? To die I will make you; But you shall die of the kiss of the Sun, Then to eternal worlds I'll take you To be loved, where all weeping is done!
KYOTO: (a Osaka). (vedendo i impressione che la voce di Jor ha fatto sull' anima di Iris). E questa poesia gran ciurmatrice Due motti, due bisticci, ch'uno dice. E una fanciulla inconscia come questa Vi si sdilinque e vi perde la testa. (e ride). (Poco a poco una finestra del Teatrino si illumina, poi si apre e si scorge il pupo de Jor figlio del Sole:	KYOTO: (Seeing the impression Jor's voice has made on the mind of Iris) This fine-sentiment's always deceiving With innocent girls who are sweetly believing; For a quibble and distich, so it is said, A girl such as this one will lay down her head! (Little by little a window of the theatre is illuminated, then it opens and there is seen the puppet Dhia s'inginocchia innanzi a lui — Iris, quasi affascinata da tale spettacola, obbandona la slepe del suo giardino e si accosta al Teatro).

IRIS: Dei sogni il triste verde disvanisce e si perde!
Quali i vani bagliori d'errantim, misteriose lucciole luminose
se ne vanno i dolori!

KYOTO: (alla danzatrici). Or, Guechas, quando termina il duetto dansate e fate! senza dar sospetto.

DHIA: Io muorio! Prendimi! Tua m'abbondono!
Portami al mondo eterno della luce!
Salgo a Nirvana! E Jor che me conduce!
Jor, son tua! A te tutta mi dono!

IRIS: (a Dhia). No, tu non muori, Dhia!
Tu ascendi alle alte nuvole di rose e di viole
Con Jor tu ascendi, o bambola al paese del sole, e del Poesia.

JOR: (Osaka). Or muori dunque!
(Dhia cade stecchita, mentre Jor invoca sulla morta pupa le danze celesti).
Danzatrice alato!
Intorno a lei che a me ne vien danzate!
(a Dhia).
Ti copriro di zaffiri e topazi!
Vieni agli amori degli eterni spazi!
(con gran stupore del pubblico, Jor avvinghia Dhia, e cosi abbraciati si vedono i due pupi innalzarsi lentamente per salire al — Nirvana, mentre cala il sipario del Teatrino; in pari tempo le tre Guechas mascherate si collocono innanzi pronte alla danza).

LA BELLEZZA, LA MORTE, IL VAMPIRO: (Durante le danze, Kyoto gira intorno, e cosi riesce scaltramente a distrare l'attenzione, mentri le tre Guecho danzatrici circondano Iris, la quale rimane ad un tratto isolato dal gruppo delle mousme al posto piu avanti).
(con vorticosi giri e con voli del loro veli le tre danzatrici riescono a nascondere Iris, la quale ingenumente ammira).
(I samourais rapidi s'impossenano della fanciulla: una mano sulla bocca le strozza un grido).
(Le tre Guechas continuano la danza avvicinandosi di nuovo al gruppo delle mousme: col larghi giri de i loro veli impediscono alle spettatrici di vedere i Samourais che trasportano Iris, completamente inanimata verso la citta).

Jor, son of the Sun. Dhia kneels before him. Iris, who is fascinated by this spectacle, leaves the garden hedge and comes near the theatre)

IRIS: The earth is but sad dreaming.
It's pleasures only seeming
Short flashes, gone before the morrow.
We are wandering in mystery
On vanities still pondering
Until all ends in its sorrow.

KYOTO: (to the dancers). Now Geishas, at the end, this your mission;
Dance widly, to keep off suspicion!

DHIA: I'm dying! O take me! Here do not leave me
With you to the world of Light eternal.
O Jor, we will dance to Nirvana supernal.
I am yours, Jor, I give myself to you.

IRIS: (to Dhia). No! You'll die never, Dhia.
Among high clouds forever
Of violets and roses,
Where evil never opposes,
From Jor none shall sever
From Love and Poesy.

JOR: (Osaka). And die therefore!
(Dhia falls like a stick, meanwhile Jor invokes over the dead puppet the dances celestial)
Now dancers, prance!
Around her, but not me, dance!
(to Dhia)
Thou shall be covered with topaz and sapphire,
Come to eternal love's desire!
(To the amazement of the public, Jor is tied to Dhia, and thus bound together the two puppets are seen slowly to dance away to Nirvana; meanwhile the puppet curtain descends; at the same time the three Geishas put on their masks ready for their dances)

BEAUTY, DEATH, THE VAMPIRE: (During the dances Kyoto goes around and thus cunningly succeeds in distracting the attention; meanwhile the three dancing Geishas surround Iris, who remains at a spot isolated from the Mousme farther to the front)
(With whirling motions and the folds of their veils the three dancers contrive to hide Iris, who is absorbed in her unsuspecting wonder)
(The Samourais quickly seize the young girl; with a hand on her mouth they smother a cry)
(The three Geishas continue their dance again approaching the group of Mousme; with wide swings of their garments they prevent the spectators from seeing the Samourais, who carry Iris, quite inanimate, toward the city)

KYOTO: Grazie, Mousme! A rivederci! Musica!
(Le Mousme si alzano in piedi per andarsena).

CORO: Andiamo? E tardi! Andiamo!

KYOTO: (ad Osaka). Or lascio questo scritto e del denaro al Cieco . . . e il colpo e fatto).

OSAKA: Il colpo e fatto!
(Partono tutto ripassando il ponte; Kyoto corre entro il giardino d'Iris rapidamente depone sulla soglia della casetta un foglio scritto, poi raggiunge correndo la comitiva che si allontona).

CIECO: Questo drammo e menzogna . . . tutto, tutto
Malvagio intento e talento malvagio.
(credendo Iris sempre presente).
Iris, tu che ne dice? Non rispondi?
Comprendo; sei commossa!
(credendo sempre di parlare ad Iris).
No; non credervi!
Tu sei si buona che ogni pianto
breccia fa nel tuo cuore! Andiamo.
(stendono, il tremulo braccio).
Dammi il bracchio! Perche non credo ai genito di Dhia? Ebben . . . vi credo!
(stendo ancora il bracchio).
Vieni! Dammi il bracchio. Una carezza. al vecchio Cieco..Iris!
(sorpreso).
Ancora non rispondi!
Iris! . . .Iris . . . Iris . . . Mia figlia! . . .
Vita! . . . Non ei sei piu!
(alcuni mercialuoli ambulanti che passano per andare allo citta, undendo le grida strazianti del Cieco entravo nel giardino a lo rialzono compassionevoli).

CORO: Cieco, a che grida desperamente!

CIECO: Iris! Mia figlia! In casa! La! Cercatela!
(ajunl merciaiuoli entrano nella casa ed appariscono pol alla finestra spalancata).

I MERCIAIUOLO: (alla finestra) E vuota la tua casa! Iris non c'e!

TUTTI: Iris!
(ascoltono).
Iris!
(ascoltano ancora).
Neppur l'eco risponde!

CIECO: La mia Vita! . . . Pupilla da' mei occhi!
(tonnano dalla casa, uno del merciaiuoli. nell' uscire, vede e il fogl-

KYOTO: Thanks, Mousme! Now we are going. Music!
(The Mousme arise to their feet and disperse)

CHORUS: Shall we go? It is late now! Let us go.

KYOTO: (To Osaka) Now I'll leave this letter and the money to the blind man and the deed is done.

OSAKA: (The deed is done.)
(All separate, crossing the bridge; Kyoto runs into the garden of Iris, quickly places on the threshold of the cottage a note with money for the blind man. He then runs to join his companions, who are far away)

CIECO: This play is false—utterly—totally.
It was of evil intent and badly given.
(Believing Iris still present)
Iris, do you not say so? Don't you answer? I see it! She is overcome!
(Smiling pleasantly, believing still that he is speaking to Iris)
No; I'll not believe it!
You are so good that every sorrow
Breaks through to your heart.
(Stretching out his trembling arms)
Let us go, give me your arm.
Why not believe in the sighs of Dhia?
(Smiling again)
Very well. I believe! Come!
Give me your arm! One caress
For poor old Cieco! Iris!
Again do you not answer?
(Surprised)
Iris! Iris! My daughter!
My Life! Are you not here!
Iris! My Iris! Iris!
(He gets up, staggering; he searches around him; stumbles; falls. Some of the peddlers passing toward the city, hearing the cries, mock the blind man, but coming into the garden are moved with pity)

CHORUS: Ah, that wailing! It is of desperation.

CIECO: Iris! My daughter! In the house!
There! Please look for her!
(Some of the peddlers go into the house; and appear at the wide open window)

PEDDLERS: (At the windows) The house is empty. Iris is not here!

CIECO: Call her loudly, for pity's sake!

ALL: Iris! Iris!
(They listen)
Iris! Iris!
(Again they listen)

CHORUS: There is not the least answer.

CIECO: She's my life! The sight of my old eye balls!
My only daughter! And she so good!
(Coming away from the house lo e il denaro lasciato da Kyoto sulla soglia).

UN MERCIAIUOLO: Tu la piange! Non piangerla!

CIECO: Che dici? Ohime, che dici?

IL MERCIAIUOLO: Qui sulla soglia t'ha lasciato un foglio e del denaro!
(mostrando foglio e denaro ai compagni).

CORO: E al Yoshiwara!
(il cieco tocca e ritocca, unsendo in grid; soffocati, il foglio e il denaro).
(Five, il dolore, rendo il Cieco come pazzo, ed allontanando con violenza alcuni fra i Merciaiuoli che gil stanno vicinl verebe correre da solo verso la citta: ma incespica e cade—I Merciaiuoli si affrettono a rialzan il Cleco, il quale prorompe in dirotto pianto).

CIECO: (piangendo, se rivolge ai Merciaiuoli che sono invasi di un gran sento di pieta).
La Casa! Il mio giardino. Quel che tengo a chidi voi mi guida al Yoshiwara?
(Con voce terribile).
Or voglia la-la schieffeggiarla!
Vogli sputarle in volto voglio e
Maladirla! Iris! Mia Vita!
(le lagrime gle troncano le parole).
(quasl rergognoso di quell affetto che gli trabocca dall' anima, esclama minaccioso).
E posica . . . e poscia . . . e poscia..
(pietosamente i Merciaiuoli lo sorrengono e lo accompagnano, barcollante, inebetito quesi fantasma verso la citta).

Fine dell'Atto Primo

ATTO SECONDO

Dov'è ora l'umile casetta tua così modesta e semplice colle sue stuoie colorate e i battenti di quercia, o piccola Iris;—la bianca siepe di biancos-pine fiorite?;-il sentiero coverto dal fiore delle scabbiose che conduce al rio?;—

Dov'è la pace dei campi intorno e il silenzio ristoratore come il riposo della tua vallea entro all'ampia circolare distesa di monti e, in alto, la solenne maestà del Fousi-yama?;—dove l'aria purissima?;—dove la luce libera?—

one of the peddlers at the doorway sees and picks up the letter, and the money left on the threshold by Kyoto)

PEDDLER: You are crying! Don't cry any more.

CIECO: What do you speak of? Alas, what say you?

PEDDLER: Here on the threshold was left a letter, and this money.
(Showing the note and money to his companions)

ALL: She's at the Yoshiwara!
(The blind man touches and retouches the letter and money, sending out great suffocating cries. His anger and grief take away his senses, and at length for his violence, some of the peddlers wish to run away to the city but he stumbles and falls. The peddlers hesitate to raise the blind man up, who again breaks out into weeping; turning to the peddlers who are filled with a feeling of pity)

CIECO: My cottage! To my garden!
All I love! Ah! who among you
Will guide me to the Yoshiwara?
I must go there! To whip her!
I will spit in her face and curse her!
Iris! My life!
(Weeping breaks off his words)
(As if looking at those who had caused the downfall of her soul, he exclaims, threatening)
And then!—and then,—and then—
(Pitying, the peddlers surround him and accompany him, stumbling, toward the city)

End of Act I

ACT II

Where now, O little Iris, is your tiny simple cottage with its colored blinds and wooden doors? Where the white hedge of flowering hawthorn? Where the flowered path that leads to the river?

Where is the peace of the fields all around it, and the silence, healing as slumber, of your valley nestling in the vast amphitheatre of the mountains? Where the solemn majesty of Fushi Yama? Where the limpid air? Where the light and freedom?

Tu ora gianci nel cuore affannoso della città gaudente ove più accelerato batte il palpito delle esistenze nelle diverse febbri che agitano le genti—quella della gloria, quella del piacere, quella del denaro.—La più appariscente delle sue case è ora la tua abitazione—tu vi riposi sul rialzo di lacca ed oro di un fion ricchissimo, abbandonata la fragile persona alla stanchezza che ti hi affranto.

Tu sei nella casa di Kyoto.

Qui, nella dolcissima ora del drago, non verrà il Sole a dissipare i piccoli sogni paurosi della tua infantile fantasia!;—qui, nella misteriosa ora del cignale, non la luna scenderà a posarsi con te!—

Qui, ricche stuoie a tessiture fantasiose, impediscono alla luce di penetrarvi.

No, il Sole non penetra in questa casa!—Qui tutto è riflesso di metallo che scoppia a vivi e rapidi sfavillii dalle profumiere cesellate dove brucia esalando l'olio di camelia odorosa, dai vasi smaltati, dalle grandi chimere e mostri di smalto e cobalto che adornano la stanza.

Là in un angolo un bouddah ridè, i piccoli occhi sfuggenti.

Non la luce, non l'armonia del Sole! Solo, su dalla tumultuante via, per le stuoie che la dimenticanza delle kamouro ha lasciato semiaperte, entra l'affannoso moto della vita cittadina, le strida dei merciaioli, le minaccie dei samourais, le ansanti cadenze dei djin, i diversi idiomi dei dragomanni, la bestemmia e la risata.

Presso al tuo letto, come spettri, stanno ancora le guèchas. La guècha della commedia accosciata sussurra a bocca chiusa un 'Anakomitasani" accompagnandosi al suono del sàmisen.

Kyoto le coglie appunto in quell'abbandono di oziosa trascuratezza— e le investe.

Accosciata presso il letto ove giace Iris susurranda "Ana Komitasansa" accompagnandosi al suono di samisen e tamtam delle altre guechas.

UNA GUECHA (a bocca chiusa).

Now you are lying in the fiercely beating heart of the City of Joy, where the pulse of existence beats faster with the fevers that distract mankind—that of Glory, that of Pleasure, that of Gain. The most gaudy of its houses is now your dwelling; you are now reposing on a couch rich with gold, your fragile body abandoned to the weariness which overcomes you.

You are in the house of Kyoto.

Here, in the sweetest hour of the mid-day sleep, the sun will not come to dissipate the tiny timid dreams of your childish fancy. Here in the mysterious hour of the curfew the moon will not rise to rest with you.

Here, rich hangings fantastically woven forbid the light to enter.

No, the sun does not penetrate within this house. Here, all is sheen of metal glancing back in swift rays from the chiselled censers in which burns, exhaling sweet perfume, the fragrant oil of camelia; from the enamelled vases; from the huge dragons and monsters of enamel and dark blue which adorn the chamber.

There in the corner smiles a Buddha, his eyes half hidden.

Not the light, not the harmony of the sun. Only from the bustle of the street below, through the shutters which the negligence of the attendants has left half open enters the frenzied roar of the life of the City; the cries of the peddler, the threats of the police, the panting cadence of the ricksha men, the varied idioms of the dragomans, blasphemy and loud laughter.

Near your couch, like spectres, still stand the Geishas, still disguised in their horrible masks. The Geisha of the comedy sitting beside you is humming with closed lips an "Anakomitasani" to the accompaniment of the sâmisen and the tam-tams of the other Geishas.

Kyoto comes upon them in this attitude of careless indolence and scolds them.

(Gathered near the bed where Iris is lying, humming "Anakomitisana," accompanied by the sound of samisens and tam-tams, are three Geishas)

A GEISHA: (Hums with closed mouth)

KYOTO: La che ci fate
ancora mascherate?
O che siete bonzi? e . . . stz!
Tacete! silenzio; non voglio appena desta abbia ricordi tristi, ognor dolori!
Tutta una festa, un giorno d'ori, di bronzi e fiori!
(sorpreso nel vedere aperta una delle imposte).
Toh! fuori spalancata e ancora l'impannata?
(vorebbe gridare, ma si ritiene).
Silenzio, dico! Rispondermi volete?
Oh, le sfaccite! Udite! Da la strada
Salgon le voci chioccie de le genti,
Vandari ed il venire, de djin correnti!
O che avete gli orecchi falla in giada?
Con tal baccano o chi puo mai dormire?
Echete! Mogie! Vostre voce acute.
son vespe, son cicale, son zanzare!
Mute!
vi voglio, mute, e se possibili, senza respirare!
(va a chiudere l'imposta, guardando nella strada vede un elegante norimon entrare nella casa).
Toh! Vien gente! E Osaka in palanchino!
Giu tutti col migliore nostro inchino!
(entra con inusata vivacita indrizzandosi a Kyoto).

OSAKA: Ch'io vegga, ov'e la Mousme da li occhi simila a camelie!

KYOTO (calmandole). La voce tua moduta in suon piu grave
Come punta d'agrave
Va ne le orecchio a chi posa Ripsoa!
(l'astuto taikomati mostra all' annoiato signori Iris addormentata).
(allontanando brutalmente le Guechas, che scompaiono rapide).
Donne, vampiri della casa, via!

OSAKA: Sollevani il velario!

KYOTO: Parla Piano!
(sollevando il velario).
Toh! guardala! E perfetta!
Non ti Pare?

OSAKA: Spande l'oro dal loto, la piccina!

KYOTO: Sogguardo a quella bocca porporina.

OSAKA: E cilieggia da cogliene e mangiare!

KYOTO: Vedi che braccio! e vedi un po' che mano!

KYOTO: Shall we have again the masquerade
Or do you wish the priests?
(Preventing them from answering)
Quiet! Be silent!
I want nothing to disturb her!
She remembers only grief and sorrows.
It's a feast day; a day of money;
Of bells and flowers.
(Surprised to see a window open)
Toh! without, that panel is wide open!
(They would answer; but he stops them)
Silence! I tell you.
You want to answer back! You brazens!
Now listen! From the street comes
The chattering voices of the people
As they go here and there,
And of the djins running.
Or are your ears filled with cotton?
With that bacchanal going on
Who would be able to sleep?
Now quiet, stupids! Your voices
Are as sharp as the sound of wasps,
Tree-frogs or mosquitos! Mute
I want you! Mute! And, if possible,
Don't breathe!
(He goes to close the window, and looking into the street he sees an elegant nobleman enter the house)
Toh! they're coming! And Osaka
In a palanquin! We must bow down.
(Quickly all bow as they touch their foreheads)

OSAKA: (Entering with unusual vivacity and going toward Kyoto)
Now that I am here, where is the Mousme,
With the eyes like camelias?

KYOTO: Modulate your voice to something lower.
Like the point of a thorn it goes into
The ears of the sleeper.—She's sleeping.
(He calls brutally to the Geishas)
Ladies! Vampires of the house!
Away!
(Osaka and Kyoto come near the bed of Iris)

OSAKA: Let us lift the veil.

KYOTO: Speak softly.
(Lifting the veil).
Here! Look at her! She's perfect!
Don't you think so?

OSAKA: She sends out the fragrance of the lotus! The beauty!

KYOTO: Look at that beautiful purple mouth!

OSAKA: Lips like cherries, ready to be eaten!

KYOTO: See what arms! And look at that little hand!

OSAKA: (con grande entusiasmo). Crea in quegli occhi il lampo d'un desio.
Vibri in quegliocchi il senso, l'uman dio,
Una scintilla, un fuoco uno favilla, che di piace ne incenda la pupilla,
e dimmi, come lei ne sai tu alcuna?

KYOTO: Nessuna, in fede mia nessuna!

OSAKA: In questa noia matta Ogni di soddisfatta e insoddisfatta costei nel cuor m'ha cacciata una spina di brama che m'offana!
Non e mousme leziosa di citta ordigno fatto per la volutta!
Qui c'e l'anima!
(torno presso il letto a guardare e lasoia il velario sulla fanciulla addormentata, poi trae con se lontano in disparte Kyoto onde il loro chiacchierio non risvegli Iris).
Lunga lotta m'annoia a ritrosie io mal m'addato s'ella resistesse?

KYOTO: Abbi denaro
E il paradiso e ovunque! Comprendi tu?

OSAKA: Parla un linguaggio chiaro!

KYOTO: Son fior le frasi, le parole foglie,
ma il frutto e l'or,
che satolla le voglie,
Comprendi tu?

OSAKA: Abborro dai proverbi!

KYOTO: Regali! . . . Doni . . . appariscenti!
Ricchi! Vistosi! Mi comprendi?
Larga mano! aperti borsellino!
Mi comprendi?
Vesti! Fiori! Giovelli!
Mi comprendi?

OSAKA: Oh, fauce ingorda!
Oh, fauce sazia mai!

KYOTO: Dapprima gia ci vuol che moino per rasciugar gli occhietta da le lacrime,
Poi, una nuora poi doventa suocera!

OSAKA: E aggiunge, in oltre, il piu fantazioso e armonico linguaggio figurata . . .

KYOTO: Desta e la piccina! Vieni via.
Va a preparti un romanzesco viso!
Porta gemme, regali, mi comprendi?
(escono cautamente).

IRIS: (si sveglia e guarda intorno a se sorpresa). Ognora sogni, sogni e sogni . . .
(con dolcezza).
Oh, il bel velario . . . oh, il lieve drappo

OSAKA: (With great enthusiasm)
I believe that such eyes are the lamps of desire!
In these eyes there is sensibility!
The true human feeling!
A spark, a twinkling of fire,
Of pleasure in these burning pupils!
And, tell me, have you ever
Seen any one like her?

KYOTO: I, never! On my faith, no one!

OSAKA: In love's annoying madness
Every day satisfaction is unsatisfied.
This one has taken my heart.
She has put a thorn in my breast
That tortures me! She is no
Wanton Mousme from the city!
Made to go the rounds of pleasure!
Here is a soul!
(He comes near the bed to look at her, and then goes away a little distance with Kyoto, where their talk will not disturb Iris)
For waywardness I'm not fit
Who could resist her?

KYOTO: They have money in Paradise
As everywhere else!
Do you understand me?

OSAKA: You speak in a moonshiny language!

KYOTO: The phrase is the flower
The words are its leaves!
But its fruit is the gold
I would harvest in sheaves!
Understand me?

OSAKA: I hate the proverb!

KYOTO: Presents, showy gifts!
Riches, are comely!
Understand me?
A liberal hand! An open purse!
Understand me?
Garments, flowers, jewels!
Understand me?

OSAKA: Jaws of a glutton, never to be satisfied!

KYOTO: First we try coaxing; then work on her fears
To rescue her eyes from the folly of tears!
A sister-in-law requires a mother-in-law!

OSAKA: You add to the others a still more fantastic and figurative language.

KYOTO: Stz! You disturb the girl!
Come, this way!
Go and get up a romantic face.
Bring gems, presents!
Understand me?
(They go out cautiously)

IRIS: (She awakes and looks around surprised). Always visions! Visions and visions!
(Sweetly)
Ah! this beautiful drapery!
And this light dress all covered with tutto sparsa a. or la a vesta e un velo e ha trasparenze a'onda e di nube! Or io cosi ho vergogna! non piu le mie pianelle in lacca nera, ho sandali dorati, e il pie vi posa cosi morbidamente . . . che ne me pare di comminar sopra un prato dipiume!

(Ed ecco svolgersi nella mente trasonata dell'ingenua fanciulla le scene del teatrino, la danza delle Guechas e . . . la rapimento).
Ecco! or ricordo! si! il teatro!
Dhia! La danza delle geuchas!
Il nero manto m'avvolve del
Vampiro!
Ove son io? Morta son? dunque?
Si; sono una morta!
E questa casa bella e il Paradiso! ?
(guardando intorno piu attentamente mormora fra l'angoscia e la gioia).
(si ode un dolcissimo suono di samisen interno; Iris ascolta).
(un samisen attira i suoi sguardi).
chi e morto tutto so, diceva il bonzo!
Mi voglio accompagnai l'Uta di Naniva!
Sorge dal mar la luna e luna piena:
una giunca laggiu, me mena
Io vo coll' onda che mi porta.
La voce canta, ma il suon non accompagna!
(getta indispettita l'istromento, mentre riprende il suono interno del samisen).
Dicon di gran bugie nel mondo ai vivi!
Chi da vivo non sa, non sa da morto!
(si aggira curiosa e meravigliata, ammirando i ricchi paraventi ed i preziosi dipinti).
(verde pennelli e colori su di una tavola).
(essa vi si accosta ed attratt a dal mestero del colori siedo presso la tavola tentando dipingere).
(Iris getta indispetti a il foglio di carta).
(ed ora vorrebbe dipingere un cielo azzuro). (sfiduciata lascia cadere i pennelli).
Io pingo . . . pingo, ma il mio pennilo
invano stendo, intengo!
Va la mia mano invano!
Io peso a un fiore.
E n'essce invece un'angue tutto terrore!
Tutto un rosso di sangue!
Se voglio un cielo azzuro in mio pensiero
e un fosco velo un velo tinto in nero!
La fantasia con se m'invola porta di casa mia a la picciola porta:
la—la pupilo d'un Cieco finalmente ha una scintula una favilla d'una luce rovente che fulge e brilla ma e il lucer d'una lacrima irises!

Now my clothing is a veil;
And has the transparency of water and the clouds!
I am ashamed of such things!
No more slippers lacquered black,
But I have lovely sandals!
And my feet on these soft cushions,
They will nevermore walk for me over the meadow!
(She revolves in her mind, dreamily, the innocent girl scene in the puppet theatre; the dances of the Geishas, and then her capture)
Let's see! Now I remember! Yes!
The theatre! Dhia! The dances of the Geishas!
The black mantle that covered the Vampire!
Where am I? Am I dead? Truly?
Yes! I am dead! And this beautiful house
Is Paradise!
(She looks about her attentively murmuring both from anguish and from joy)
(She hears the sweet sound of a samisen near. She listens)
"Whoever is dead, knows all," so said the priest.
(She takes the samisen)
I will accompany "The Fall of Nineveh."
"Rises the moon over the ocean,
And now it is for me!"
(She tries to accompany herself but makes only meaningless sounds)
"A bulrush below I would carry
With the wave upon the sea."
(Breaks off)
My voice sings but the sound does not accompany it.
(Throws away the samisen)
They tell a great lie in the living world.
What the living know not
The dead know not!
(She looks around, with curiosity, wondering and admiring the rich folding screen, and the beautiful pictures. She sees brushes and colors on a table. She seats herself near the table and tries to paint. She would paint a flower, but instead makes a snake. She lets fall the brush)
I paint — paint — but my brush
I employ in vain! My hand
Moves without purpose!
I think of a flower, and a snake
All terrible, with a red, bloody mouth
Comes instead. If I would make The azure sky; there comes a dark veil;
A spot of black! My fancy takes me
To the door of my cottage;
My pretty little doorway;
There the eye of a blind man
At last has a spark, a ray
Of red light, which sparkles and dazzles,
But it shines through tears slowly falling.

che lentamente stilla!
(accasciata, nasconde il viso le mani).
In paradiso (ha detto) non si piange!
Ed io de lacrime ho i miei occhi pieni!
(una cortina si solleva lentamente e Kyoto introduce Osaka).
(i due uomini soffermano sul limitare della porta e guardano la fanciulla seduta al tavalino del colori).

OSAKA: A un cenno mio manda le vesti e i doni

KYOTO: Si, mandero!

OSAKA: or . . . quanto a te—inutil qui . . . va, via!

KYOTO: A meraviglia, Vo!
(il taikomati scompare dietro la cortina, insciando soli il giovanne signore voluttuoso e l'ingenua Mousme).
(alle parole di Osaka Iris si volge sorpressa,)

OSAKA: Oh, come al tuo sottile corpo s'aggira e s'informa di tela flessuosa notturna Vesta! senza posa lo sguarda ti rimira da capo a pie
e l'anima s'appago nella sorpresa vaga, nel portento gentile di tua belta, che in festa alta trionfa in te!
(Osaka si avvincia sempre piu ad Iris Questa si ritrae ancor piu, sordesa e impaurita).

IRIS: Conosca questa voce! O gia l'udivi
In ogni sera parola si rivela
E la voce d'Jor! E Jor! E Jor!

OSAKA: Perche il piede vitragge se a te vicin mi porta il mio desio. Dentro a'tuoi lascia lo sguardo mio desirioso penetravar! Io ne tuoi occhi vego tut ti i cieli! Gli olezzi io bevo in te di tutti maggi!
(Osaka accarezza la testa di Iris; questa chiude timorosa gli occhi. Al tocco del giovine gli spilloni cadono e disciolgono liberi i lunghi capille che fluiscono giu per le spalie di Iris recoprendola come de un manto).

OSAKA: (tuffando con volutto le mani nel cappeli di Iris).
Ah i tuoi capelli son si lunghi e tanti da incatenarti intorno.. tutto gli uomini!
Tu m'incatena e per la via,
Mousme.
d'ogni tua brama, deh, tu mi mena!

(She hides her face with her hands)
In Paradise they say there's no
weeping,
And I of tears have my eyes full.
(A curtain is slowly raised and Kyoto brings in Osaka)
(The two men pause a little at the entrance, and watch Iris seated at the table with the colors)

OSAKA: (Speaking sotto voce to Kyoto) At a sign from me hand me the garments and the gifts.

KYOTO: Yes; I'll hand them.

OSAKA: Now — as to you — you're useless here.
Go away.

KYOTO: That's wonderful! Go!
(Kyoto, the taikomati, disappears behind the curtain leaving alone the young man and the innocent Mousme)
(At the words of Osaka Iris turns herself, surprised)

OSAKA: Oh how cunningly your body
Is surrounded and shut in by that Flexible night-robe! Without resting
I stare at it, admiring you from head to foot.
The soul is pleased of the surprised lover
In the wonderful gentility of your beauty!
Which in the high feast will bring Triumph to you!
(Osaka comes nearer and nearer to Iris, who draws back again through surprise and fear)

IRIS: (I know that voice! I have heard it!
In every word is he revealed.
It is the voice of Jor! It is Jor!
It is Jor!)

OSAKA: Why do you draw back your foot
At the very beginning of my longing?
Within the veil let me look
Where my strong love would enter!
In your eyes I see all the heavens!
In your fragrance I drink in all May!
(Osaka caresses the head of Iris, who timorously closes her eyes. At the young man's touch her comb falls, and frees the long hair, which falls on her shoulders, and covers her as with a mantle)

OSAKA: (Toying with his hands in her hair) Ah! your hair, so abundant and beautiful!
It weaves chains around you,
For all men! You have enchained
Me by your manner, Mousme,
By every motion do you draw me!

IRIS: (incredula, quasi sorridendo e riannodandosi i capelli). Da niuno ho udito dirmi tanta cosa.
Iris tanta belleza? Niun lo crede!
M'ha detto un sol finor che son graziosa, il babbo mio, ch'e Cieco e non me vede.

OSAKA: Il tuo corpo s'iniglia d'un candore piu bianca del Fousiaama! Bocca sana vermiglio.
Fresca fontana ove zampillan tutte le dolcezza e tutte le carezze!
Ove il mio sangue vivo si ristora!
(Iris sorride nell' udiere le arole entusiastiche di Osaka).
Tu ridi? Ridi? Ridi! Ridi ancor!

IRIS: Ho fatto male a rider, ma non so se muovermi o star fermia a sue parole se fargli reverenza! Gli diro "Signor,"
No. Re? E poco.. Figliuol del Sole!

OSAKA: Arrossia mie parole? Non arrossir!
Lascia arrossire il Sole! egli ogni di ha tramonti tu? sali, sali altissima a le superbe aurore ai superbi orrizzonti del mio amore!

IRIS: Figlio del Sol! (da in una stridente risata Iris si ritral ancora, impaurita).

OSAKA: Ah! tu fanciulla ancor me credi
Jor della commedia? Or recito la Vita.
T'ho in vesta d'istrion per farti mia rapita!
Apri gli occhi, Mousme! vede ed impara la Vita!
Il vero nome mio vuoi tu sapere?
Ebben, Mousme, io mi chiamo "Il Piacere!"

IRIS: (ricordando con accento di terrore). Un di (ero piccino) al tempio vidi un bonzo a un paravento tutto fatto a simboli, sciorinare il velame d'un Mistero—
Era una plaga d'un gran mare morto color del bronzo; e vera un Cielo rosso livido e una gran spiaggia, una grau spiaggia morta di grigio e nero—una fanciulla giaceva adagiata, scorne le membra, sparsi i capelli, e nella bocca un riso che era uno spasimo—- su dal mar morta unagran piovra intanto il capo ergeva.
e la fanciulla col grande occhio falcato fuor guatava—- questa domata a quel terror di sguardo tutto affisava.
su dal mai morto, e viscidi tentacole moveva il mostro, e per le gambe, pei reni e per le spalle, poi perle

IRIS: (Incredulous, smiling, and rearranging her hair) From no one did I ever hear such things! Iris so beautiful! No one will believe it. Only one has ever spoken so graciously. He was my father. He was blind, and never saw me!

OSAKA: Your body is of lilies. whiter than Fujiama. Your mouth is vermilion; a fresh fountain overflowing with caressing sweetness, where my mounting blood would fain restore itself! You smile! You smile! Smile! Smile again!

IRIS: I did wrong to smile! But I know not whether to stay or run from your words. I make my reverence! Shall I say "Signor?" No! King? It is too small.
Son of the Sun!

OSAKA: You are blushing at my words! Don't blush! Let the sun blush! Has he not drawn you every day higher and higher, up to the highest? You are the glorious dawn — the great horizon of my love!

IRIS: Son of the Sun! (After a shrill laugh, Iris again draws back, frightened)

OSAKA: Ah! you child! Again do you believe me Jor of the comedy? Now I play Life! I have stage clothes exactly fitted for my bride. Open your eyes, Mousme! See
And get ready for Life.
My true name would you like to know?
Very well, Mousme, I am called Pleasure!

IRIS: (Recoiling with accents of terror) One day (I was a child) at the temple
I saw a priest, with a large screen
All made over with symbols,
To show the veil of Mystery.
There was the shore of a great dead sea
Of the color of bronze. And there was a heaven
Red as blood, an ugly livid red,
And a great seashore of dead
Gray and black. There a child
Was lying, lean in limbs, with scattering hair,
And on its mouth a laugh, which was a spasm.
On this dead sea a great monster its head
Was raising. And the child
With large eye peeping,
Was captivated, by a look it was transfixed.
By this sea of the dead, with its viscid tentacles,
The monster moved; and by the legs, chiome e il fronte e gli occhi e il petto esile ansante, e per le bracchia, le stringe e alloecia! La stringe e allacia in viso! Essa sorride ognor!

essa sorride e muor . . . con un estremo spasima che par un riso, essa sorrida e muor! e muor!
E il bonzo a voce forte:
"Quella piovra e Piacere!"
"Quella piovra e Morte!"
(Iris lascia cadere ai piedi del giovane, piangendo, e rimanendo accosciata dalla paura e dal dolore).
Deh . . . ch'o torni a mio padre!

OSAKA: (con cinismo). Son le folle dei bonzi spavaldi e i ipocriti che all' alito d'un bacio si sbugiardono!
(a an cenno di Osaka le Koumaro portano e stendono ai piedi di Iris stoffe, gioielli, ventagli, fiori).
(sallevando Iris e stringendola a se poco a poco).

OSAKA: Or dammi il braccio tuo braccio de neve e avorio!
intorno al callo
cosi m'annoda!
sciogli i capelli
la testa bruna sovra il mio petto tu m'abbandona!
Cogli occhi, gli occhi miei tu, ed io, labbra le labbra
vi, scendo e tocco
la dolce bocca.
(Osaka abbondona la sua bocca su quella di Iris quasi svenuta mormorando e supplicando).
E questo il baccio
(Iris staccadosi da Osaka rimane atterita poi prorompe i pianto).

OSAKA: (guardandola, sorpreso). Piangi?

IRIS: Penso a mia padre!

OSAKA: Gli daro vesti e denaro.

IRIS: Io penso alla mia casa!

OSAKA: Palazzi avrai!

IRIS: Io penso al mio giardino!

OSAKA: Ne avrai d'immense e a serre in fiore!

IRIS: ma non sono i mie flori

OSAKA: (E una puppetola!) Nulla desio ti desca di codesto splendore.
Vesti, ori? E bacio e un esca cui non morde il tuo cuore?
chiedi, fanciulla, Brama! . . .
Ta pur abbi un desio!

IRIS: Voglio il giardino mio!
Io voglio il mio giardino,
Colla sua siepe intorno, la mia casetta bianca col mormorate rio, col suo villagio

By the loins, and by the shoulders
And then by the hair, the forehead and the eyes.
And the chest, lean, panting,
And by the arms, with strings
Bound it. Bound, with strings over its face,
It smiled on, ever! It smiled and died,
In a terrible convulsion that seemed a laugh
It smiled and died.
And the priest, in a loud voice, said:
"This monster is Pleasure!
This monster is Death!"
(Iris lets herself fall at the feet of Osaka, weeping, and lies powerless through grief and fear)
Oh! that I could return to my father!

OSAKA: (With cynicism) There are the lies of the impudent priest
And hypocrite, which the delights of one kiss will overcome!
(At a sign from Osaka, the female servants bring and place at the feet of Iris gifts, silks, jewels, fans and flowers)
(They lift Iris up and she gathers strength little by little)

OSAKA: Now give me your arm;
Your arm of snow and ivory —
Around my neck as a love bond
Scatter your hair. Your head on my bosom,
Give yourself to me; your eyes to mine!
And I, lips to lips, will come down
And touch your sweet mouth!
(Osaka puts his mouth on that of Iris, as subdued, she supplicates and murmurs)
This is a kiss!
(Iris disengages herself from Osaka, and terrified, breaks out into weeping)

OSAKA: (Looking at her, surprised) Crying?

IRIS: I think of my father!

OSAKA: I'll give you clothes and money!

IRIS: I think of my cottage!

OSAKA: Palaces you shall have!

IRIS: I think of my garden!

OSAKA: Immense fields that you can plant
All in flowers!

IRIS: But they are not my flowers!

OSAKA: (annoyed and angry)
She's but a little puppet!
Have you no love for all this splendor?
Garments? Gold? Is a kiss a monster
That will bite your heart?
You seek Bramma, child! Have you not one desire?

IRIS: I want my garden! I want my garden with its hedge around it!
My white cottage, with the murmuring brooklet,
With the village to buy in!

a manca
con la vallata a prati, col sol che oppena e giorno appar sugli elevati fianchi del Fousiyama e mi chiama, mi chiama!

OSAKA: (seccato vivolgendosi a Kyoto). Da un' ora essa m'attedia!
E pupa da commedia! pupa di legno; or io me sdegno!
Un mio consiglio accetta!

KYOTO: (con finta sollomissione). Ognora Kyoto impara!

OSAKA: (imitando Iris). "Torni alla sua casetta!"

KYOTO: E questo il tuo consiglio?
La espongo al Yoshiwara!

OSAKA: Fa pur. Ah, me! che noia
Vo! sbadglio.

KYOTO: (con astuzia parlando fra se). Colle piccine, gran maestra natura;
O moina, o paura!
Osaka e giovin, ve de ratto
E ratto e i vuole il suo desio tradotto in fatto.
Esperienza e pazienza!
Ah me! Vedlam!
(con occhio conoscitore osserva e studia attentomenta Iris).
E in una vesta ancor piu trasparente codesta
Come se indosso avesse a vesta il nulla
Vedrite quol trionfo di fanciulla!
(sceglie una veste e fa cenno a le donne di vistirne Iris).
alla toeletta . . . Ol'a—
(le donne accorrono; Iris impaurita vuol fuggire).

KYOTO: Con me retrosa? (Imperioso).
Qui s'obbedisce! Bada!
Per le putte cattive c'e la morte!
(apre la parete a destra e mostra ad Iris un precipizio oscuro e fondo; Iris indietreggia impaurita).
Chiamo il Vampiro, e fatta e la tua sorte!

IRIS: (implorando). No—non me fate male!
(rabbonito).

KYOTO: Non lo voglio!
(Insinuante-prende il pupo che nella commedia rappresentava Jor e lo porge ad Iris).
E se obbedisci, guardo! tuo!

IRIS: E Jor

With the valley, and the meadow!
With the sun rising in the morning!
Shining over the broad sides of Fujiama
And calling me! calling me!

OSAKA: (Dryly, and turning to Kyoto) For an hour she has wearied me!
She's a comedy puppet. A puppet of wood.
She makes me tired.
Now take my counsel!

KYOTO: (With a pretense of submission) Kyoto must always be learning.

OSAKA: (imitating Iris) "Take her to her home!"

KYOTO: And that is your counsel!
I'll expose her in the Yoshiwara.

OSAKA: So do! Ah me. I'm tired. I go.
I yawn.
(He goes out yawning)

KYOTO: (With cunning, talking to himself) With children, Nature is the grand master.
Either by coaxing or by fear.
Osaka is young; after rapine.
Forcing in his pleasure, his ecstasy.
Experience and patience! Ah me!
We shall see!
(With the eye of a connoisseur he looks at Iris, and studies her attentively)
Perfect—and in a garment again
More transparent than this one;
As appearing to have clothes of nothing;
We shall see the triumph of the child.
(He selects a garment and makes a sign to the women to put it on Iris)
To the toilet. Ho there!
(The women come, running. Iris, frightened, would run away)

KYOTO: (Irritated) Stubborn, with me! Here you must obey!
Careful! For a bad wench it is death!
(Opening the wall at the right, he shows Iris a precipice, dark and deep. Iris draws away, frightened)

KYOTO: I'm called the Vampire!
And I am your husband!

IRIS: (Imploringly) No. Don't treat me badly.

KYOTO: I don't want to. But you must obey.
Remember!
(He takes the puppet which represents Jor in the comedy, and hands it to Iris) It is yours!

IRIS: Jor!

KYOTO: (dietro le stuoje, spiando nella via). Annoto! La gente dotta e ghiotta d'ogni cosa vaga e rara s'accalca e indagi
Arrossa di lumiere il Yoshiwara!
Oh, febre de Il Piacere!
(intanto le esperte donne cominciano ad abbigliare Iris dietro un paravento).
La parete sottile scorre e si schiude a uno sciame gentile di donne ignude Qualch altro Osaka certo passeva e in questa onesta rete di giovinezza incappera.
(mentre abbigliano, Iris tutta intenta al pupo, si risovviene la dolcissima cantilena del dramma, e mentre repete, infantilemente lo fa agire).

KYOTO: Vediam . . . cosi stai bene!
(strappa ruvidamente il pupo ad Iris, e io gitta in alto; ana guecha lo offerra a volo). Ha sonno il piccol Jor; poniamolo a dormire! sovra la bocca un vaga punta in or!
(prende an pennello, e designa un neo d'oro sulla labbra d'Iris).
Cosi! Vediam ove posarti . . .
In alto! Ti voglio qui!
(collora Iris sulla veranda). (con enfasi).
superba erette le divin tua forma!
Ed or vediam se la gente abbocca!
Attente, streghe, attente, attente!
(colpo di mani-gridato).
Via le cortime!
(le guechas fanno scorrere rapidamente le mobili pareti).
(si scorge la strada del Yoshiwara tutta affollata).
(L'improvisa apparizione di Iris, attrae subito l'attenzione della folla, che prorompe in entusiasmo).

CORO-LA FOLLA: Oh, maraviglia del maraviglie!
La vaga figlia—E rosa thea
Fior verbena! Fior da vaniglia!
Fra le piu vaghe figlie
O vaga mervaviglia!
Giorno di rose e di viole notte serena:
Parla bella Mousme!
Udiamo l'armonia di tue parole!
L'anima ti desia!

KYOTO: (esultandosi fregandosi le mani). Son uomo di talento, si o no?
Ve' che furore!
Strana e la genti in fregula d'amore.
Io ci guadagnero a staia i rios!

OSAKA: Datemi il passo!

KYOTO: E Osaka.

OSAKA: Indietro.

KYOTO: (Behind the screen, peering into the street) Just look at it!
The people, ready and hungry for any rare attraction, are searching.
They are red with the light of the Yoshiwara! Ah! this fever of Pleasure!
(The women experts commence to dress Iris behind the screen)
The thin little wall will safely hide
Our thinly clad women from people outside.
Some other Osaka is sure to pass by;
And in this honest net the youth will be caught!
(While being dressed, Iris, always intent on the puppet, sings the cantilena of Jor, and fondles the puppet)

KYOTO: We shall see. Just now it's all right.
(He snatches rudely the puppet, and throws it away)
Enough of little Jor; let him go to sleep!
Now, above the mouth, there wants a little bit of color.
(Takes a brush and paints a mole above the lips of Iris)
So! Let me see where to put you!
Here? Up on high!
(Placing Iris on the veranda)
(With enthusiasm)
Supurbly erect is your beautiful form!
And now we'll see the public captured!
Attention, witches! Attention! Attention!
(Clapping his hands)
Away with the curtain!
(The Geishas quickly take away the light, moveable wall)
(The street of the Yoshiwara is seen to be crowded)
(The improvised apparition of Iris quickly attracts the attention of the throng, which breaks out in enthusiasm)

CHORUS: O wonder of wonders!
Lovely maiden! A tea rose!
Verbena, flower, vanilla!
Of all pretty maidens
The most wonderful!
Speak! lovely Mousme!
We hear harmony in your words,
Our souls love you!
Purest gem! O diadem!

KYOTO: (Elated and rubbing his hands) Am I a man of talent—yes, or no?
See, what a furore! The people struggle
In the fire of passion! I'll make more than a bushel of rios!

OSAKA: Here, let me pass!

KYOTO: It is Osaka!

OSAKA: Get back there!

KYOTO: Eccolo ancor!
E pazzo! Io godo!

OSAKA: Indietro! Indietro. (aggrappandosi sale sulla veranda).
Iris, son io; io sono Osaka, Jor tutto saro per te quel che vorrai!
Osaka puo donar gemme ed oro;
quanto puo darti Jor di luce orai!
qui or io m'inchino innazi a te,
qui giu! qui giu nel fango a tuoi piedi, curvo a tuoi pie, fanciulla.
Osaka vedi qui giu! qui giu nel fango! qui a tuoi pie.
Qui la pazzia prostemo del mio orgoglio che cieco e vil mia fatta a tue bellezza!
Iris ancor! ancor! ti voglio.
Dammi l'immenso ciel di tue carezza!
(si slancio verso, Iris, ma Kyoto se framette Osaka e la fanciulla).

KYOTO: Osaka! io qui son servo a tutti pubblico.

OSAKA: (impetuosa e minnacciando Kyoto). Io primo fui che tol tesoro vidi! Kyoto La voglio ancor! I son pentitol . . .
Ebben chi gareggar potra con me?
Do tutto quel che chiedi, ladra, arpia!
Iris divina, deh sia mia, Iris!
(appare nella fola il cieco accompagnato da due merciaiuoli).

CIECO: Iris! . . . Essa e qui dunque?
(rimasta nno allora intonititta, alla voce dell padre sobbolza per le gran gioia).

IRIS: Si! son io! Padre! Son Iris!
(protendendo le braccia verso il padre mentre la fola sorpresa circonda curiosmente il cieco).

CORO: Suo padre! E un cieco!

IRIS: Ah, qui vieni!

CIECO: (implorando i circostanti; la folla presa subitamente da un senso di pieta fa largo intorno al Cieco). Conducetemi sotto a la finestra!

CORO: Fate largo! Il passo!

CIECO: ovi sta la fanciulla svergognata.

KYOTO: (sorpreso dall apparizione del cieco urla per giustificarsi). Egli venduto m'ha la figlia sua!

CIECO: Iris! rispondi! Ove sei tu?

KYOTO: He here again!
He's a fool. I'm glad of it.

OSAKA: Get back there.
(Clinging to the veranda)
Iris! It is I! I am Osaka; Jor!
You shall have whatever you want!
I am able to give you gems and gold!
Pray to Jor for whatever you will!
And here now I bend before you!
Down here! Here down in the mud and at your feet!
Bent down at your feet, dear child, see Osaka!
Here, the folly of my pride
Has brought all this on your beauty!
Iris, once more! Once more!
Once more I love you,
Give me the heaven of your caresses!
(He urges himself towards Iris, but Kyoto puts himself between Osaka and the child)

KYOTO: Osaka! here I serve the whole public.

OSAKA: (Impetuous and threatening Kyoto) I was the first to find the treasure.
Kyoto! I want her again—I'm sorry.
For how much will you sell her to me?
I will give you all you ask; you thief!
You harpy!
(To Iris)
Iris, divine! Come! be mine! Iris!
(The blind man appears in the crowd, accompanied by two peddlers)

CIECO: Iris!
(Iris, who had been silent, at the voice of her father, sobs with joy)
Here do I find her?

IRIS: Yes! I'm here!
(Extending her arms towards her father while the crowd, in curiosity, surrounds the blind man)
Father! I am Iris! Ah! You are here!

CHORUS: Her father! He's a blind man!

IRIS: Here!

CIECO:
(Imploring those around; the crowd quickly affected with a feeling of pity gives plenty of room for the blind man) Lead me up to the window!

CHORUS: Make room! Make room!

CIECO: Where stands the disgraced hussy.

KYOTO: (Surprised at the apparition of the blind man and shrieking out to justify himself)
"He sold his daughter to me!"

CIECO: (Imperiously) Iris! answer me! Where are you?

IRIS: Qui padre!
(guidata dallo voce della figlia, si avvicina, e raccoglienda manate di fango lo scaglia contro la veranda; gran movimento disorpresa nella folla).

CIECO: To! sul tuo viso! To sovra il fronte!
To! nella bocca! To! ne tuoi occhi fango!

CORO: Ah!
(le maledizione del padre rende Iris pazza di dolore, e respingendo tutti da se con improvviso slancio se precipita dalla finestra nelli abissa prima mostratole la Kyoto, prorompendo in grido terribile).
(Osaka, che non arriva in tempo per salvare Iris rimane terrorizzato alla finestra, davanti al abisso).

IRIS, OSAKA, KYOTO E CORO: Ah!

Fine dell'Atto Secondo

IRIS: Here, father!
(Guided by the voice of his daughter he goes near, and gathering his hands full of mud, he throws it toward the veranda. A great movement in the surprised throng)

CIECO: There! in your face! There, on your forehead!
There! in your mouth! There, in your eyes!
Mud!

(The curses of her father make Iris crazy, and pushing all from her, with an impetuous rush, she throws herself from the window into the abyss which Kyoto had shown her, making a terrible outcry)
(Osaka, who arrived too late to save Iris, stands terrified at the window before the abyss. Kyoto tears his hair)

IRIS, OSAKA, KYOTO and CHORUS: Ah!

END OF ACT II

■ ATTO TERZO

O bel Genio nipponico, bello e antico Genio delle poesie, leggende, paurosi drammi, grottesche commedie e ute dolcissime agli amori che animano i silenzii delle sere,—bello e antico Genio dei fiori e dei pittori, non dunque gaiezza di colori vivaci, non bianchi chiarori di cune o distese di prati verdi correnti ai declivii di azzurri monti rispecchiati da laghi candidi, non trionfi di cieli e stormi di migranti uccelli, o mari d'argento ed agili saettii di awabis, intorno alla agonia di Iris?

Sul dilicato corpo, capolavoro distrutto, giù nell'abisso incombono solo le tre sinistre notti, la notte senza stelle del cielo,—la notte senza riflessi delle acque morte,—la notte senza lacrime della insensibilita dellà della natura.

Così qui muore la vergine, il picciol corpo abbandonato all'abbraccio della bombéria velenosa e della scirpa pungente.

Di lassù non un riflesso di una delle mille gaie lumiere della città!

Nell'aria greve e letale pur tuttavia vagano incerte ombre strane.

■ ACT III

A Waste Space outside the City Boundary.
Oh! beautiful genius of Nippon, beautiful ancient Genius of Poesy, Legend, awe-inspiring Drama, grotesque Comedies, and sweet Melodies which waken the silences of night to Love; beautiful ancient Genius of flowers, of painters, have you, then, no sheen of bright colors, no silvery glow of moonlight, no horizons of green fields sloping down the blue mountain side mirrored in gleaming lakes, no triumphs of the sky, no flights of wandering birds, no sea of silver wherewith to surround the deathbed of Iris?

Over her dainty frame, now lying at the foot of the precipice with all its beauty marred, brood only the three dark Nights—the starless Night of Heaven, the Night of the waters on which no sun shines, the Night of unresponsive Nature that sheds no tears.

Thus, then, Iris died her shattered body, once so fair, abandoned to the deadly embrace of the venomous swamp, rent by cruel thorns.

From above not one gleam from the thousand gay lights of the city.

Yet in through the fetid death-bearing mists wander strange vague shadows.

Bella e antica fantasia nipponica, sono essi forse gli Oni del tuo mondo superstizioso che scendono radendo gli squallidi fianchi della squallida montagna, i tuoi grotteschi, bonarii o perversi folletti dalle facce sinistramente buffone? È Bénkei a cavallo della sua gran campana di bronzo? È Kintoki abbracciato ad un orso che ride? È Momotaro gobbe e sbilenco? O sono forse gli Incubi in forma di granchi o nani dall'orribile rictus quelle strane ombre?

In Verità rassembrano fantastiche creazioni, così la penombra caliginosa li trasfigura! No; non sono gli enti permalosi e ad ora bonaccioni delle tue fole infantili, bello e antico Genio nipponico; sono dei cenciaioli, quaggiù sospinti dalla lotta per la esistenza!

Colle loro lanternuzze, bizzarre umano lucciole della Vita cittadina, errano, l'uncino acuto a mano, guardando, desiderando, sognando i più pazzi tesori del mondo, giù in questo fango di cose morte.

(Poche voce di donne in lontananza).

(I cenciaiuoli alcune figure strane errane con piccolo lanterne e con uncini, rovistando).

IL CENCIAIUOLO: (canticchia un Elogia allo Luna). Adora brunna e tarda la luna e tutta gaia se in due la si reguarda soli, e luna scialba
Se notte not te appaia
amico invoco l'Alba!

ALCUNI CENCIAIUOLI: (frugando inutilmente). La fogna e avara e muta (sarresta-gli occhi fissi nell'ancino trattenutto da un presso l'acqua morta).

UNO: Tacete! Il mio s'intrica!
(il cenciaiuolo ritira con paziente cautela l'uncino, e trae a se un inviluppo d'ortiche. Gli altri ridono).

I CENCIAIUOLI: (Ridono). Ah, ah!
E il cespo d'un' ortica!

UNO: Ola! Non muover passo!
(respinge brutalmente il colega che gli stavacino).
(il suo uncino ha fatto resa in un blocco di fango e resiste contro un oggetto, pesante, come fosse davvero uno serigno colmo di rios d'oro).

O beauteous and ancient mystic lore of Nippon, are they perhaps the Oni of your world of fancy who descend skirting the squalid sides of the squalid hillocks; are they your goblins, grotesque, good-humored, or malicious, with faces sinister yet mocking? Is it Ben Kei, astride on his great bell of bronze? Is it Kintoki who embraces the grinning bear? Is it Momotoro, maimed and halt? Are they dwarfs or strange monsters of the sea, these shadows that smile so horribly?

Of a truth they resemble the creatures of fancy, so strangely does the misty half light transform them. No, they are not the beings, now playful, now helpful, of your tales of childhood. O fair and ancient Genius of Nippon, they are rag-pickers, driven hither by the struggle for existence.

With their little lamps, strange human will-o'-the-wisps of the city's life, they wander with their sharp hooks in their hands, searching, desiring, dreaming of the maddest treasures of the world here amid the slime and by the margin of the dead sea.

(Voices of women far away)

(Rag-pickers, some of them in strange guises, with small lanterns and grappling hooks, roving around)

RAG-PICKER: (Sings a Eulogy to the Moon) The hour of night is tedious;
The moon is ever gay,
If either one regards you,
Whitewashed, the Moon, they say.
If Night now does not please you
Then call, my friend, for the day.

CHORUS OF RAG-PICKERS: (Probing uselessly) The sewer is mean and stingy; Gives nothing to us, here, dingy!
(He stops, his eyes fixed on the hook drawn out by one of those near the motionless water)

ONE: Hush, now! This is my find!
(He patiently draws at the hook, which brings up a bag of thorny bushes. The others laugh)

CHORUS OF RAGPICKERS: It's a bag of thorns!

ANOTHER: Ho there! It won't budge an inch!
(He rudely pushes away those nearby)
(His hook, stuck in the mud, was held by a heavy stone which seemed as if it might be a chest full of gold)

I CENCIAIUOLI: Un tesoro! Del oro!
Grand oro! gran tesoro!
(con enorme sforzo i fortunato cenciaiuci lo estrae dal fango un sasso—e qui altri ridono).
Ah, ah, ah! E il tesoro d'un sasso!
(il cenciaiuolo bestemmia).

UNO: (riprende il suo Elogie alla Luna). Adora bruna e tarda la Luna e tutta gaia se in due la si riguarda soli e una Luna scialba se Notte—
(un rapido bagliore luccica sotto il monte tagliata a picco; un grido di sorpresa strozza al cantelina cenciaiuolo l'Elogio all Luna).

UN CENCIAIUOLO: Il bagliore!
(il bagliore e gia svanita, e innalzino abbassono le lanterne per richiamare nel oggetto misterioso il bagliore intravveduto).

I CENCIAIUOLI: Svanito via . . . spento..
D'avida fantasia
e il tormento.
(ecco di nuova e piu distinto il bagliore prima; e la veste d'Iris).

CORO: Ancor! E raggio d'or!
Traluce!
E veste!
E luce!
Ha dentro ancor il corpo che la porta!

UNO: che importa? E l'una morta!
(I cenciaiuoli, che sono accorsi avidamente s'arrestano avanti il corpo d'Iris, e non osono stenderne le mani).
(si slanciarno sul corpo d'Iris).
(la veste e strappata con gran violenza, uno respingendo l'altro a pugne, a ceffate, si contendono gli orpelli di Kyoto).
(un moto di vita sfugge dai piccolo corpo di Iris).
(i cenciaiuoli, atterite, supestiziosi, pauroso, fuggono).

IL CENCIAIUOLO: (la voce del cenciaiuolo dentro alle scene, lontanissimo). Amico, invoca l'Alba!

IRIS: (rinvenendo un poco, come trasognata mormora, quasi rampogua contro il mondo, il destino o la divinita).
Perche? . . . Perche?
(e rimane immobile: nell aere freddo e muto le sembra di udire strane e beffarde voci, che rassembrano quelle del tre personaggi della sua breve existenza)
(il giovane della volutta, il Taikomati Kyoto, e il Padre cieco).

THE RAG-PICKERS: Of Gold! A treasure!
Great gold! Large measure!
(With great force he pulls up the hook) It is a treasure of a stone!
(The disappointed rag-picker swears)

A RAG-PICKER: (Taking up his song) The hour of night is tedious,
The moon is ever gay,
If either now regards you,
Is whitewashed the moon, they say,
If night——
(A quick flash of light from a mountain peak; a cry of surprise interrupts the rag-picker's song)

A RAG-PICKER: A flash!
(The light vanishes, and in vain they seek a mysterious object which the light had revealed) It's gone
It has vanished.

ONE RAG-PICKER: From greedy fancy is this torment!
(Again they see the flash, more distinctly than before. It is the dress of Iris)

CHORUS: Again! A flash of gold.
Transparent, Splendid;
A garment! Has in it also
The body it has carried!

A RAG-PICKER: What does it matter? It's a dead one.
(The rag-pickers, running greedily, stop before the body of Iris, but do not dare to touch it with their hands)
(They rush again toward the body of Iris. They violently tear off the dress. They push and strike each other contending for the ornaments put on Iris by Kyoto)
(A motion, indicating life, comes from the body of Iris)
(The rag-pickers, superstitious, frightened, terrified, run away)

A RAG-PICKER: (A voice heard from away behind the scenes)
My friend, then call for the day!

IRIS: (Reviving a little, as dreaming, she murmurs, as if reproaching the world, destiny, or divinity, sotto voce)
Why? Why?
(She remains immobile, in the air, cold and silent; she seems to hear strange and mocking voices which resemble those of the three persons associated with her short life—the young man, the taikomati Kyoto, and the blind father)
(The voice of Osaka)

L'EGOSIMA DI OSAKA: (La voce di Osaka). Ognun pel suo cammino va spinto dal destino di sua fatal natura!
Il tuo gentile vezzo
calma a desio divino,
e un umana tortura.
Tu muori come il fior
che pel suo olezzo muor!
Nel mio egoismo tetro or porto altrove
il mio riso canto di spetro cosi la Vita!
Addio!

L'EGOISMA DEL KYOTO: Rubai, fai bastonato
onde mutai mestiere;
ho la livrea indossata
del piu gran re; Il Piacere!
Or siamo qui cosi,
io per la mia vilta
carnefice, tu, vittima per questa tua belta
Perche? Io non lo so.
Cosi la Vita
Vo!

L'EGOISIMO DEL CIECO: Ahime!
che allumera
nell inverno il mio foco
e all' ombro fresco loco la state m'addura?
Tale e il pensiero che in fondo dispreme il pianto mio
e fa il mio duol profondo!
Cosi la Vita!
Addio!
(Le voce misteriose, così come hanno favellato alla fantasia dalla morente fanciulla, si estinguono bizarramente).

IRIS: (credendo sempre di sognare). ancora il triste sogno pauroso!
Visioni! affani! angoscie!
Personne ignote!
ignote cose e lochi . . .
e strane risa . . .
e lacrime!
(La voce di Osaka—Lontanissima).
Tu vuoi morir? Morir io ti faro
Ma ti faro morir dal sol baciata, ed al paese eterno te traro.
Ove, O fanciulla tu sarai amata!

IRIS: Apri l'orecchio a mie dolce parole
Apri l'anima tua alla fede, e spera!
Jor ha oscoltata O Dhia, la tua preghiera

OSAKA: Tu muori come il fior
che pel suo olezzo muor!
(il pensiero della sua misera vita le si affaccia dolorosamente).

IRIS: Il picciol mondo del mia casetta perche dispar? Perche?
Giardin, rondini, fior.
echi a miei canti

THE EGOISM OF OSAKA: Every step in your journey
Was thrust on you from destiny
By your fatal nature!
In your gentle sporting,
Cool to desire divine
There was human torture.
You die as a flower—
Shedding fragrance in death!
In my gloomy egoism
Now I carry elsewhere
My spectral laughter and song.
Such is life.
Farewell!

THE EGOISM OF KYOTO: I
robbed; was bastinadoed,
Wherefore I changed my occupation,
I have worn a livery
Of a great king—Pleasure.
Now we are here—in this plight.
I, by my cowardly hangman;
You, the victim
Of your own beauty.
Why? I do not know.
Such is life.

THE EGOISM OF CIECO: Alas!
Who will rekindle
My fire in winter;
Or in the shade place me a summer?
This is the thought, in the deep
Extremity of my weeping,
Which makes my grief profound!
Such is life!
Farewell!
(The mysterious voices having thus fabled to the fancy of the dying child, end strangely)

IRIS: (Believing always that she dreams) Again the evil dream so fearful!
Visions! Agitations! Anxieties!
Unknown persons! Unknown places and things!
Strange laughter, and tears. (The voice of Osaka, far away)
You wish to die? To die I will make you;
But you shall die of the kiss of the Sun,
Then to eternal worlds I'll take you
To be loved where all weeping is done!

IRIS: Jor has heard, O Dhia, your prayer,
Open your soul, dear child, to the Sun!
Open your soul to my words so fair!
Open your heart, though all hope be gone!

OSAKA: You die as a flower
That sheds its fragrance in death.
(The thought of her sad life affects her sorrowfully)

IRIS: Why destroy the little world of my cottage?—Why?
Gardens; swallows; flowers; my songs

tutto dilegua e tace.
Perche codesti strazii
e queste tenebre?
E perchi piango e muoio
e m'abbondona ogni persona
e cosa, e vita, e luce, e tutto.
Il picciol mondo della mia cosetta
e silenzio e paura. Perche? perche?
(sempre l'angoscia la stessa domanda).
(nel cielo cominciano i primi bagliore)
(la luce si fa piu viva quasi volesse riani mare la morento Iris che guarda, fissa nelle immense profonditta dell' azzuro cielo. I primi raggi del sole scendono a carrezzare Iris; essa creda sentire in se rinnovellarsi la vita; e con entusiasmo alzandosi a protendendo le braccia in alto).
Un grand occhio me guarda!
E il sole! tu sol non m'abbandoni!
A me tu vieni;
io reposi al tuo raggio!
Riposo nella luce!
Aure di canti! mari splendore!
Plaghe, cieli di fiore.

CORO-IL SOLE: Ancor! son Io! la Vita! son la Belta infinita la Luce ed il Calor!
Amate o cose! dico:
sono il Dio novo e antico son l'Amor!

FIORI: (tutta una fantasia di fiori, che sbocciano sotto la potenza del raggi solari, si stendo poco a poco intorno al corpo d'Iris non piu gli squalidi dirupi, la melmosa fogna, ma una immensita di fiori ad un mare di luce).
(gli steli del fiori si annodano intorno al corpo d'Iris, come braccia umane, e la sollevano su per l'azzuro e l'infinito, verso il sole).

CORO: Dei Mondi Io la Cagione!
Dei Cieli Io la Ragione!
Uguale Io scendo ai Re
si come a te, Mousme!
L'anima tua e mia!
D'un fior all' agonia!
Venite, o fior!
Venite tutti!
O fior!

Tutto un sussuro di fiori intorno alla morente! . . — Piove il sole sul picciolo corpo aureole irradiate! . . Nella suprema agonia Iris finalmente non ha più angoscia, affanni, paure, dolori.—Il suo sogno è di luce—è di fiori!—E raggi e fiori parlano il linguaggion eterno della pietà, dell'amore!—

all dissolved in silence!
Why these tearings-away? And this darkness?
And why do I weep and die?
Every person, every thing leaves me!
And Life, and Light, and All.
The little world of my cottage
Is silent and afraid. Why? Why?
(Always asked with anxiety)
(In the sky there come the first flashes. The light gives her more life, as if to reanimate the dying Iris, who looks with fixed gaze on the immense profundity of heaven's azure. The first rays of the sun descend, to caress Iris. She believes them intended to reanimate and restore her life, and with exaltation extends her arms on high, saluting the sun, which now illuminates everything)
The great eye I see!
It is the Sun!
You alone do not abandon me!
To me you come!
I rest on ray.
I sleep in your light
Aura of singing!
Ocean of splendor!
Lands and heavens of flowers!

CHORUS—THE SUN: Once more!
I am the Life!
I am the Infinite Beauty!
The Light and the Heat!
Love! O things!
I am the god new and old! I am Love!

THE FLOWERS: (A fancy of flowers, which flow out under the power of the sun's rays. They extend themselves little by little)
(The flowers knot themselves around the body of Iris, as human arms, and lift her up toward the Azure, the Infinite and to the Sun!)

CHORUS—THE SUN: I am the Cause of the world!
I am the Reason of the heavens.
Alike I descend to the King
And to you, O Mousme!
Your soul is mine!
From a Blossom to Death!
Come, O Flower! Come, O Flower!
Come all,
O Flowers!

The air is filled with the rustling of flowers around the dying girl. The Sun irradiates her with a crown of gold. In her last death struggle Iris feels neither pain, frenzy, fear, nor grief. Her dream is all of light and flowers and the Sun and flowers speak to her the eternal language of the Pity of Love.

Muore la Vergine colla visione splendente della immortalità; essa vede intorno a sè una fantasia di fiori—tutti i fiori della terra—che allungano a lei gli steli, steli che si snodano e si stendono intorno al corpo suo come braccia umane.

Ed è in questa trionfante visione che gli occhi della mousmè si chiudono, onde sul suo pallido viso è ancora la calma della tenera giovinezza innocente che la lotta della vita terrena lasciò immacolata. Sotto a quegli abbracci e baci di fiori il piccolo corpo della morta dispare. L'anima della mousmè è fiore, luce, armonia!

O Morte, Signora Misteriosa, quanto sei grande nella tua pietà, Tu che tanti mari e cieli eterni poni fra gli umani e i loro dolori!

FINE.

She dies with the splendid vision of immortality before her eyes; she sees all around her a glorious fantasy of flowers—all the flowers of the Earth—which spread out their arms towards her, which wrap her body in their embrace like the arms of the beloved.

In this triumphant vision the eyes of the Mousmé close in death and on her wan face is still the calm of tender innocent youth which the squalid battle of the life of this earth has left unstained. Beneath the embraces and kisses of the flowers her body is lost to sight. The soul of the Mousmé has fled to the World of Flowers, Light, Harmony.

O Death, Lady of Mystery, how great you are in your infinite pity. You, who place such vast oceans, such boundless heavens between Humanity and its grief.

FINIS.

Hérodiade (1881)

Herodias

MUSIC BY JULES MASSENET ■ LIBRETTO BY PAUL MILLIET, "HENRI GREMONT" (GEORGES HARTMANN), & ANGELO ZANARDINI

This four-act opera with seven tableux is set to a libretto by Paul Milliet, "Henri Gremont" (Georges Hartmann) and Angelo Zanardini based upon Hérodias by Gustave Flaubert. It was first performed at the Théâtre de la Monnaie in Brussels on December 19, 1881. Salomé, left behind when her mother Hérodiade married Hérode, is a follower of the prophet Jean. She is in love with Jean; however, Hérode, her stepfather, is deeply and openly attracted to her. Hérodiade decides to use her husband's fixation on her daughter to destroy Jean, who attacks her behavior publicly. Hérode realizes that Jean and his followers are the only real Jewish opposition to Roman rule. Jean refuses to cooperate with Hérode, and he is thrown into prison when Hérode finds out about Salomé's love for the prophet. Salomé joins him there, prepared to die with him, and he finally accepts her love since it is purified by her sacrifice. The guards take her away to a banquet at the palace where Salomé throws herself at the feet of her mother and stepfather. Hérodiade recognizes her daughter at last, but their joint pleas for Jean's life are in vain. He has already been beheaded, and Salomé takes her own life in her mother's presence.

■ ACTE PREMIER

Une grande cour extérieure du palais d'Hérode.—A gauche, un portique qui sert d'entrée au palais; à droite, bocages d'oléandres, de sycomores et de cèdres; en face, une balustrade avec colonnade à jours qui domine la vallée; dans le loitain la mer Morete entourée des collines de la Judee.

SCÈNE PREMIERE

Chefs, Marchands, Jeunes Esclaves, puis Phaneul, puis Salomé.

C'est l'aurore, presque la nuit encore; des chefs sont endormis à terre pres de la barricde qui domine la vallee où repose la caravane en attendant le jour.—Peu après le lever du rideau, le jour paraît, les chefs s'éveillent, se lèvent et appellent les marchands.

LES CHEFS: Alerte! levez-vous! le palais est ouvert!
Debout! vous tous qui venez du désert!
(Des marchands de différents pays, des esclaves portant de lourds fardeaux gravissent lentement la côte.)

MARCHANDS ET ESCLAVES: Voici que le jour se lève, Nous avons touché le but!
Notre voyage s'achève,
O Jérusalem! salut!
Au bord des claires fontaines

■ ACT I

A large outer court in Herod's palace.—To the left, a portico serving as an entrance to the palace; to the right, thickets of oleander, sycamore and cedar.—In front, a balustrade with colonnade dominating the valley.—In the distance, the Dead Sea, surrounded by the hills of Judea.

SCENE I

Chiefs, Merchants, Young Slaves; then Phanuel, afterward Salome.

It is dawn of day, but as yet almost as dark as night.—When the curtain rises, the Chiefs are asleep on the ground, near the barrier which separates the palace from the depression where the caravans are resting while waiting for daylight.—Day dawns; the Chiefs awake, arise, and call to the Merchants.

CHIEFS: Awake! Arise! The palace is open.
All who come from the desert
Awake! Arise!
(Merchants of different lands and Slaves, carrying heavy burdens, come slowly up the slope.)

MERCHANTS AND SLAVES: The day is breaking!
We have reached our goal.
Our journey is ended.
O Jerusalem, all hail!
Beside the clear fountains

Nous pourrons nous rafraichir,
Quand de plus chaudes haleines
Sur les sables vont courir.

LES CHEFS: Que dès l'abord on remarque,
Dans ce que vous apportez,
Les dons offerts au tétrarque
Par ses nombreuses cités!
Séparez l'or et les baumes,
Les ivoires et l'argent,
Rangez l'encens, les arômes
Et la nacre au ton changeant.
(Les esclaves ouvrent les ballots, et étalent les parfums, les étoffes, etc.)

LES ESCLAVES: Voici l'ambre de Judée!
Voici les parfums d'Ophir!
Les pistaches d'Idumée!
Voici les agrès de Tyr!

MARCHANDS: (premier groupe.) Nous arrivons des plus lointaines villes
Sans fatiguer nos chevaux de Saron!

MARCHANDS: (deuxième groupe): Mais nos chevaux ne sont pas moins agiles, Nous avons pris cette pourpre a Sidon!

PREMIER GROUPE: (avec mépris.) Oh! le Pharisien!

DEUXIÈME GROUPE: (de même.) Ah! le Samaritain!

PREMIER GROUPE: Nos chevaux ont des ailes . . .

DEUXIÈME GROUPE: (raillant.) Comme les sauterelles
Des rives du Jourdain!

We may refresh ourselves
While the hot winds
Blow across the desert.
Our journey is ended,
O Jerusalem, all hail!

CHIEFS: First of all set aside
Of what you have brought
The gifts offered to the Tetrarch
By his numerous cities.
Set apart the gold from the balm,
The ivory from the silver!
Set in place the incense and the perfumes!
(The Slaves open the bales and spread out the presents, perfumes and fabrics.)

THE SLAVES: Here is amber from Judaea!
Here are the perfumes of Ophir!
Here are the species from Idumaea!
Set apart the silver from the gold,
Separate the gold from the silver!

MERCHANTS: (first Group.) We have come from the farthest cities,
Without wearying our horses of Sharon!

MERCHANTS: (second Group.) Our horses are no less fleet!
These purples have we brought from Sidon—

FIRST GROUP (contemptuously): Fie on the Pharisees!

SECOND GROUP (same): Fie! Samaritans are these!

FIRST GROUP: All our horses are arrows.

SECOND GROUP (mockingly): And swifter than the sparrows
Of Jordan's banks they fly!

TOUS: (prêts à en venir aux mains.) Quoi! cette indigne race
Ose nous outrager!
D'une pareille audace
Nous saurons nous venger!

PREMIER GROUPE: Va, va, Samaritain! nous acceptons la lutte!

DEUXIÈME GROUPE: Croient-ils vraiment nous egaler?
(Phanuel paraît)

TOUS: (apercevant Phanuel.) Le Chaldéen!

PHANUEL: (au milieu des groupes qui se séparent) Encore une dispute!
Eh quoi! toujours se quereller!
Le monde est inquiet, la patrie est en larmes!
Et les voilà! contre eux-mêmes tournant leurs armes!
Les insensés! les débiles humains!
Ils en viennent aux mains
Et restent sourds à la voix immortelle
Qui leur répète: "Amour! Pardon! Vie éternelle!"

TOUS: L'avenir est trompeur!
Faut-il ouvrir son coeur
A l'espérance vaine?

PHANUEL: Non! Contre les Romains
La révolte est prochaine!
J'arrive de pays lointains
Où les actes suivront de très près les paroles;
Bientôt tout changera, les lois et les symboles!

TOUS: Jusqu'à ce jour ce qu'on nous a promis
N'allège pas le joug des ennemis!

PHANUEL: Soit! N'espérez donc rien! Poursuivez votre route
Ou descendez à la cité;
Pour moi, j'attends, calme et sans doute,
Des jours meilleurs pour notre humanité.
(Les marchands et les esclaves s'éloignent, se dirigeant vers la ville, les chefs, suivis d'esclaves portant les présents destinés au roi, entrent dans le palais par le portique.–Salomé est sortie par la gauche du palais, elle est inquiète, indécise, et semble chercher une issue pour s'enfuir, quand elle aperçoit subitement Phanuel.)

PHANUEL: (avec surprise.) Salomé! . . . Quelle destinée
T'amène dans ces lieux?
(A part.)
Ignore-t-elle encore de quel sang elle est née?
(A Salomé.)
De Siloé pourquoi quitter les bords heureux?

SALOMÉ: (avec tristesse.) Sans cesse, je cherche ma mère! . . .
Une voix me criait: "Espère,
Cours à Sion! . . . –Je ne l'ai pas trouvée, hélas!
Et je reste seule ici-bas.
Celui dont la parole efface toute peine,
Le prophetè est ici! . . . C'est vers lui aue je vais! . . .
Il est doux, il est bon; sa parole est sereine,
Il parle, tout se tait . . . Plus léger sur la plaine
L'air attentif passe sans bruit.
Partout mon souvenir le suit,
Ah! quand reviendra-t-il? Quand pourrai-je l'entendre?
Je souffrais, j'étais seule, et mon coeur s'est calmé
En écoutant sa voix mélodieuse et tendre!
Puis-je vivre sans toi, prophète bien-aimé!
C'est là, dans ce désert où la foule étonnée
Avait suivi ses pas,
Qu'il m'accueillit un jour, enfant abandonnée
Et qu'il m'ouvrit ses bras!
Ah! quand reviendra-t-il? Quand pourrai-je l'entendre?
Je souffrais, j'étais seule, et mon coeur s'est calmé
En écoutant sa voix mélodieuse et tendre!
Puis-je vivre sans toi, prophète bien-aimé!

VOIX: (dans le lontain.)
Jérusalem! Jérusalem! Salut.

PHANUEL: Tu le veux! pars, enfant, la foi t'éclaire
Elle te guidera
Et dans de palais veillera
Un ami fidèle et sincère.

VOIX: (s'éloignant encore.)
Jérusalem! Jérusalem! Salut!
(Salomé s'éloigne par la droite. –Phanuel accompagne Salomé du regard et remonte au palais. –A ce moment sortent par la droite des jardins les Esclaves du Roi qui, sous la conduite de leurs gardiens, traversent la scène et se dirigent vers le Palais; c'est la Promenade Des Danseuses Du Palais.)

SCÈNE II

Hérode entre précipitamment en scène par la porte qui a précédemment livré passage à Salomé; il parcourt d'un regard inquiet les groupes des Danseuses qui s'éloignent et voit que Salomé n'est parmi elles.

HÉRODE: (flévreusement.)
Elle fui le palais, elle a quitté ces lieux,
Et l'angoisse soudain a pénétré mon âme! . . .
Déesse ou femme
Au charme séducteur,

ALL: (on the point of active hostilities). What! Does this ignoble race Dare to insult us?
For such audacity
We shall have our revenge!

FIRST GROUP: We are ready to fight, Samaritans!

SECOND GROUP: Do they really suppose they are equal to us?
(Phanuel appears.)

ALL (perceiving Phanuel): The Chaldean!

PHANUEL (stepping between the disputants, who separate).
Another quarrel! Why must they always wrangle?
The world is full of unrest;
Their country is in tears.
And behold them! They turn their arms against themselves!
Insensate Madmen!
Depraved creatures! They will come to blows!
They are deaf to the eternal voice
Which calls to them and says:
Love, pardon, life everlasting!

ALL: The future is full of uncertainty
Dare I trust my heart to doubtful hopes!

PHANUEL: Revolt against Rome is at hand.
I returned of late from distant lands,
Where deeds follow swiftly upon words.
Soon all laws and the symbols of laws will change.

ALL: All that has been promised us as yet
Has not lightened the yoke of our oppressors!

PHANUEL: True! Better have no hopes.
Take your own course! As for me, steadfast and calm,
I wait for better days for all mankind.
(The Merchants and the Slaves go down to the city; the Chiefs, followed by Slaves carrying the presents destined for the King, enter the palace by the portico.)
(Salome comes out of the palace on the left, anxious, undecided. She seems to be seeking an avenue of escape when she sees Phanuel and approaches him.)

PHANUEL (in surprise): Ah, Salome, what fate has brought you to the palace?
(Aside.)
Can it be that she does not yet know from what blood she is sprung?
(To Salome.)
Why have you left the happy banks of Silo?

SALOME: Still without ceasing, O Phanuel. I search for my mother. I heard a voice cry: "Hope on! Go to Jerusalem!" Alas, I have not found her; and I am still alone in this world. But he whose words can dispel all griefs, the Prophet, is here. I shall go to him. He is kind, he is good. His words are calm. He speaks and all keep silence. The wind blows more softly over the meadows, and listens to him. He speaks- . . . ! Ah, when will he return; we shall I hear him? I was sick, I was alone, but my heart grew peaceful when I heard his voice, so melodious, and so tender. O Prophet, much beloved, how can I live without you! It was there in the desert, with the people who had followed him in awe, that one day he took me to him; me, an abandoned child! And to me he opened his arms. He is kind, he is good, and his words are sublime.

VOICES (in the distance): Jerusalem! Jerusalem! Hail!

PHANUEL: As you will! Go my child,
Thy faith shall enlighten you
Thy faith shall guide you
And in this palace a friend,
Sincere and faithful,
Will watch over you
Farewell, Salome!

VOICES (still more distant) Jerusalem! Jerusalem! Hail!
(Salome goes off toward the right. Phanuel follows Salome with his eyes and goes up toward the palace.—The Slaves of the King appear at the right of the garden, under the escort of their guardians, and go toward the palace.—This is the Promenade of the Dancers of the Palace.)

SCENE II

Herod enters suddenly by the door at which Salome has just gone out; he anxiously passes in review the various groups of dancers as they go out, and perceives that Salome is not among them.

HEROD (feverishly): She has fled from the palace.
She has left this place.
And a sudden anguish strikes into my soul.
Goddess or woman whose seductive charm,

Forme à peine entrevue et qui déjà m'est chère,
Reviens, reviens, rêve enchanteur!
Salomé, Salomé! c'est ma voix qui t'implore!
Une ivresse ineffable illumine mes cieux!
Mon rayon de soleil c'est l'éclat de tes yeux!
C'est toi, toi que j'attends! Ah! reviens, je t'adore!
(Hérodiade paraît, pâle, égarée.)

SCÈNE III

Hérode, Hérodiade, puis Jean.

HÉRODIADE: Hérode, venge-moi d'une suprême offense!
C'est de toi, de toi seul que j'attends ma vengeance!
J'allais ce matin au désert,
Quand un homme à peine couvert,
Le front menaçant, la voix brève,
Se dresse au milieu du chemin!
Comme un vent d'orage se lève.
Sa voix, invoquant le destin,
Me poursuit, me trouble et m'outrage
“Tremble, me dit-il, Jézabel!
“Que de fléaux sont ton ouvrage!
“Il faut en rendre compte au ciel!
“Va, la colère du prophète
“A fait appel aux nations,
“Bientôt tu courberas la tête
“Devant leurs malédictions!”

HÉRODE: Qui est cet homme?

HÉRODIADE: C'est Jean! C'est l'apôtre infâme
Qui prêche le baptême et la nouvelle foi!

HÉRODE: (brusquement.) Que puis-je? Que veux-tu de moi?

HÉRODIADE: C'est sa tête que je réclame!
Ne me refuse pas, toi, mon seul bien.
Pour qui j'ai tout quitté, mon pays et ma fille.
N'es-tu pas mon soutien?
Et ma seule famille?
Rappelle-toi le Tibre avec ses bords ombreux!
Nous vivions sans compter les heures fugitives;
Nos timides baiser étaient nos seuls aveux;
Nous n'avions pour témoins que ses vagues plaintives;
Le soir, sous les grands pins, nos serments répétés
Eveillaient des échos inconnus à la terre
Et l'astre de la nuit dans ses molles clartés
Enveloppait nos coeurs d'amour et de mystère!

Though scarcely seen by me,
Has yet become most dear,
Come back once more!
Come back enchanting dream!
Salome! Come back! I call you! I implore!
Salome! What ineffable intoxication
Brightens the world for me!
The light of your eyes is the radiance of my sun.
I await you! I adore you!
Salome! Return once more!
(Herodias appears, pale and distraught.)

SCENE III

Herod, Herodias; then John.

HERODIAS: Avenge me of insult; one most deep! By you alone, can I be avenged. I was walking this morning out upon the desert, when a man, well near naked, with threatening brow, and of rough voice, sprang up before me in my path, as springs up a whirlwind. Calling upon the Fates he followed me;frightened and insulted me! “Tremble,” he cried, “tremble, Jezabel! For you have been a flail, and must give account to heaven. Go! The wrath of the Prophet has called aloud to the nations of the earth, and soon you will bow your head before their maledictions.”

HEROD: Who is this man?

HERODIAS: It is John! He is the impious apostle, who preaches baptism, and the new faith.

HEROD: What can I do? What would you have me do?

HERODIAS: It is his head that I demand!
Herod! Herod! Do not refuse me this!
Herod, remember. Do not refuse me this!
I have none but you. I left all for you.
My country and my child.
Are you not my sole support and family?
Do not refuse me this. Remember.
Remember the Tiber, with its shady banks,
Where we lived, nor ever counted the happy hours;
Our furtive kisses were our only vows,
Our only witnesses the phantom waves.
At night beneath the great pines
Our vows awoke unearthly
And the moon, with radiance tender,
Wrapped us in mystery and love

HÉRODE: Non! je ne puis . . . je dois céder à la raison.
Aimé des Juifs, consolant leur misère . . .
Cet homme est fort . . . partout on le révère!

HÉRODIADE: (méprisante.) Ah! la peur te conseille?

HÉRODE: Et toi, c'est le démon.

HÉRODIADE: (de même.) Quel nouveau favori t'inspire?

HÉRODE: (résolu.) Je prétends demeurer seul maître dans l'empire!

HÉRODIADE: (avec rage.) Tu ne m'aimes plus? Soit! seule j'accomplirai
Ce que j'ai résolu . . . Jean, je te frapperai!

JEAN: (il est entré sur les dernières paroles d'Hérodiade.) Frappe donc!

HÉRODE ET HÉRODIADE: (avec un cri d'epouvante.) Jean!

JEAN: Il n'est plus d'ombre pour tes crimes,
Je réveillerai tes victimes!
Jézabel! . . . Tes sanglots te briseront le coeur!
Nul ne prendra pitié de ta douleur!

HÉRODIADE: (à Hérode.) Sa malédiction me glace de terreur.
Ne prendras-tu pitié da ma douleur?

HÉRODE: Sa malédiction me frappe de terreur.
Il me brave, il l'outrage, et moi, le roi, j'ai peur! . . .
(Hérode et Hérodiade entrent précipitamment dans le Palais, fuyant la malédiction de Jean.)

SCÈNE IV

Jean, Salomé.

JEAN: (les regardant s'éloigner.) Allez! ne parlez pas d'offense, Vous que le Seigneur tient déjà dans sa balance!
(Salomé est apparue; elle reconnaît Jean et s'élance vers lui.)

SALOMÉ: (embrassant les genoux de Jean.) Ah! Jean! je te revois!

JEAN: (avec bonté.) Enfant, que me veux-tu?

SALOMÉ: Ce que je veux, oh Jean! te dire que te t'aime
Et que je t'appartiens! . . . que je vis par toi-même
Et qu'au son de ta voix mon être est suspendu!

JEAN: C'est toi, Salomé? . . .
Pauvre enfant . . . qu'ai-je entendu?

HEROD: No! I cannot. I must do what is wise.
I am liked by the Jews,
And I alleviate their sufferings.
This man is powerful; he is revered by all.

HERODIAS: Ah, you counsel of your fears.

HEROD: And you are a devil!

HERODIAS: What new favorite rules over you?

HEROD: It is my purpose to be sole ruler in this empire!

HERODIAS: You have ceased to love me! It is vile!
Alone then I shall accomplish what I have resolved!
John! I shall strike you down!
(John enters in time to hear the last words of Herodias.)

JOHN: Strike me then!

HEROD and HERODIAS (with a cry of terror). John!

JOHN: No more your crimes shall in the shadows lurk,
I will awake your victims!
Jezabel! . . . Your sobs your heart shall break
And none upon your tears shall pity take!

HERODIAS: His curses and his threats have filled my heart with fears!
Ah! Will you not take pity on my tears!

HEROD: With terror I hear his maledictions.
He braves, insults me, and I, I go in fear!
(Herod drags Herodias, shaking with fear, away.—They go quickly into the palace, as if fleeing in terror before John's attitude of malediction.)

SCENE IV

John and Salome.

JOHN (watching them go): Oh, calm your rage: and talk not, forsooth, of insult, you whom the Lord already holds in the balance!
(Salome appears; she runs to John and falls at his feet.)

SALOME: John! I have found you!

JOHN (kindly): My child! What do you want of me?

SALOME: What do I want, O John? What I want is to tell you that I love you, and that I belong to you; that in you alone I live; that by the sound of your voice my whole being is held in suspense!

JOHN: It is you, Salome? Poor child, what did I hear?

SALOMÉ: Loin de toi je souffrais et me voilà guérie!
Dans ton regard est ma patrie;
Mon visage est baigné de larmes, et mon coeur
Tessaille de bonheur!

JEAN: Que me veut ta splendeur dans l'ombre de ma vie?
Que ferait ta jeunesse à peine épanouie
Dans les pierres de mon chemin?
Pour toi, c'est la saison où les voeux moins timides
Appellent des baisers sur les lèvres avides;
Pour moi, tout autre est le destin!
Je ne veux pas t'entendre.
Va, laisse-moi!
Ame naïve et tendre,
Eloigne-toi!

SALOMÉ: Non, l'amour n'est pas un blasphème
Et c'est ton amour que je veux!
Qu'à tes genoux, ô toi que j'aime,
S'épande l'or de mes cheveux!

JEAN: (inspiré.) Aime-moi donc alors, mais comme on aime en songe
Dans la mystique ardeur où l'idéal te plonge,
Transfigure l'amour, esclave de nos sens!
Dannis tous les transports d'un sentiment profane,
Elève, jusqu'au ciel, ton âme! qu'elle plane
Au milieu des parfums de nuageux encens!
Enfant, regarde cette aurore
De vie et d'immortalité!
La foi nouvelle est près d'éclore
Dans cette sublime clarté!
N'entends-tu pas les saints cantiques
Que prennent leur essor
Et les voeux des âmes mystiques
Ouvrant leurs ailes d'or?

SALOMÉ: (avec ravissement.) Parle, j'écoute . . . je t'adore!
Et l'éclat de tes yeux
Plus resplendisssants que l'aurore
Illumine les cieux.
(Jean se délivre des bras de Salomé que tombe à genoux, extasiée; il s'éloigne en lui montrant le ciel.)

FIN DE L'ACTE PREMIER.

■ ACTE DEUXIÈME

Premier Tableau

La Chambre d'Hérode.

Les hautes murailles sont couvertes de tentures rouges à bandes noires. Des poutrelles de cèdre, avec des dorures dans les noeuds du bois, encadrent les parois auxquelles sont suspendues des armes de toute espece.—La chambre forme un pentagone régulier; petites portes au premier plan, au fond, à droite.—L'ameublement se compose d'escabeaux d'ébène, de coussins de pourpre, de tapis épais, de peaux de lynx et d'un lit d'ivoire placé au second plan à la gauche de spectateur. Ce lit très bas est fait de courroies blanches et recouvert de riches étoffes; candélabres de bronze soutenus par des sphynx; cassolettes d'argent remplies de nard et de cinnamone; gigantesques morceaux d'ambre; vasques de porphyre, cornes d'antilopes garnies de bagues et de bracelets.—Au lever du rideau, Hérode est nonchalamment étendu sur le lit; des esclaves nubiennes, grecques et babyloniennes sont couchées au fond de la chambre et autour du lit du roi, dans des poses lascives et pittoresques, une d'entre elles est appuyée contre le pied du lit.

SCÈNE V

Hérode. Une Babylonienne, Esclaves.

LES ESCLAVES: Roi, tu peux t'assoupir sur ta couche d'ivoire,
Tu peux rêver d'amour, tu peux rêver de gloire!
Les ardeurs du midi font taire les échos,
Rien ne troublera ton repos.
Le matin s'est enfui de perles tout humide,
L'oiseau cherche un abri sous le feuillage aride,
C'est l'heure où le soleil monte dans le ciel bleu
Et couvre le désert des ses vagues de feu.

HÉRODE: Non! le sommeil me fuit et ses chaudes haleines
Font circuler un sang plus brûlant dans mes veines! . . .
Dans les clartés de l'aube au dans l'ombre du soir
C'est elle que j'attends . . . elle que je veux voir! . . .
Que votre danse, au moins, me la rappelle encore.
(Les Esclaves dansent.)

DANSE BABYLONIENNE: (Sur un geste d'Hérode les danseuses arrêtent.)

UNE JEUNE BABYLONIENNE: (désignant à Hérode la coupe que lui tient une esclave.) Que ce philtre amoureux dissipe ton ennui! . . . .
Maître, bois dans cette amphore
Le vin rosé d'Engaddi
C'est un rayon de l'aurore
Enchâssé dans l'or poli.
Et dans l'ivresse du breuvage
Dont notre pays est fier
Tu retrouveras limage
De l'être qui t'est si cher!

SALOME: I am yours! I love you! Away from you, I was sick; ah, so sick! And now I am whole. In your look is my country; my cheeks are bathed in tears, yet my heart trembles with hapiness.

JOHN: What place has your beauty in this gloom of my life? How would your youth fare, that has scarcely come to bloom, upon my stony pathway? For you it is the season when tenderer avowals, call for kisses upon thirsty lips. For you it is the time to love. Another fate awaits me. No, I will not hear you. Leave me. Go your way. Sweet, tender, innocent soul. Leave me; leave me. Go!

SALOME: Love is no blasphemy! It is your love I desire. I love you! And you alone do I love. I would spread the glory of my hair upon your knees; for you alone do I love! O John!

JOHN (inspired): Love me then, but as one loves in dreams, where in contemplation of the ideal one is wrapped in a mystic flame which passes away that love which destroys the body. Banish these transports of unholy desire! Raise up your soul, till it shall soar, most perfumed clouds of incense! My child, behold the dawn, and life everlasting. Harken! Can you not hear the holy canticles that even now arise, and the prayers of mystic spirits that spread their golden wings? My child, behold the dawn. The new faith is breaking; and life everlasting.

SALOME: Ah, I hear you speak, and I adore you!
The light of your eyes more splendid than the sun, illumines the sky!
(John releases himself from Salome's arms.—She falls at his feet in ecstasy.—He goes off pointing toward the sky.)

END OF FIRST ACT.

■ ACT II

First Tableau

Herod's Chamber.

The high walls are covered with red hangings banded with black. Beams of cedar-wood, their projections gilded, frame panels from which hang weapons of every kind. The room is in the shape of a regular pentagon; small doors at the front, at the back, and to the right. The furniture consists of ebony stools, purple cushions, heavy rugs, lynx skins, and an ivory couch placed in the center to the left of the spectator. The low couch is made of white leather and covered with rich stuffs; candelabra of bronze supported by sphynx; silver vessels filled with nard and cinnamon; gigantic pieces of amber; porphyry bowls; antelope-horns garnished with rings and bracelets. As the curtain rises Herod appears, negligently reclining on the couch; Nubian, Greek and Babylonian slavegirls, lie around the back of the chamber, and about the king's couch, in lascivious and picturesque poses. One of them leans against the foot of the couch.

SCENE V

Herod; A Babylonian Slave-girl; other slaves.

SLAVES: Take your rest, O king, upon your ivory couch,
You may dream of love and of glory.
The heart of the day has silenced the echoes,
You may dream of love nothing shall disturb your rest!
It is the hour when the sun ascends the azure sky,
And bathes the desert in his waves of fire.
You may dream of love!

HEROD: No! Sleep has deserted my couch, but his hot breath sends my blood burning through my veins! In the light of the morning, or in the shadows of eve, I wait for her! It is she whom I desire to see.
Let your dances recall her to me once more!
(The Slaves dance.)

BABYLONIAN DANCE: (At a sign from Herod the dance ends.)

YOUNG BABYLONIAN WOMAN (calling Herod's attention to the cup a Slave holds out to him). Let this amorous drink dispel these cares of yours!
This love portion will dispel your cares.
Drink, master, from this amphora,
Of the roseate wine of Engadi;
It is rays of the sun
Chaliced in burnished gold!
And in the intoxication of this drink,

HÉRODE: (se soulevant, à lui-même, troublé et radieux.) Ce breuvage pourrait me donner un tel rêve!
Je pourrais la revoir . . . contempler sa beauté!
Divine volupté
A mes regards promise! Espérance trop brève!
Qui viens bercer mon coeur et troubler ma raison . . .
Ah! ne t'enfuis pas . . . douce illusion! . . .
Vision fugitive et toujours poursuivie,
Ange mystérieux qui prends toute ma vie,
C'est toi que je veux voir,
O mon amour, ô mon espoir!
Te presser dans mes bras! te dire ma tendresse,
Sentir battre ton coeur
D'une amoureuse ardeur!
Puis, mourir enlacés . . . dans une suprême ivresse! . . .
Ah! pour connaître ces transports
Et pour te voir partager cette flamme,
Je donnerais mon âme
Sans regrets, sans remords!
Si l'esclave mentait cependant . . . ce breuvage . . .
Si c'était un poison mortel! . . .
Lâche terreur! . . . Voir son image!
Puis-je hésiter encor quand on m'offre le ciel! . . .
Donne la coupe, esclave!
(Il boit et pousse un cri.)
Ah! déjà . . . je chancelle,
Mes yeux sont obscurcis
. . . mais je la vois . . . c'est elle.
Que de cris sur ma levre . . . et je ne puis parler
Je sens là . . . dans mon coeur qui s'agite et soupire
Comme un aveu brûlant qui ne peut s'exhaler!
Ah! prends pitié de mon martyre!
Viens! plus près . . . Je le veux!
Que ma lèvre effleure
L'or de tes cheveux!
Qu'à tes pieds je meure!
Car dans mon vertige
Je ne veux que toi . . .
Viens . . . plus près . . . te dis-je! . . .
Encor! . . . Sois à moi!
(Il tombe accablé sur le lit.–Phanuel paraît.)

SCÈNE VI

Hérode, Phanuel.

Of which our land is so proud,
You shall see once more,
The features of the one
Who is most dear to you.

HEROD: (anxious, yet pleased; aside.) This drink might well bring me a dream!
I might see her! Behold her beauty!
A divine pleasure is promised to my sight!
An all too fleeting hope,
That comes to ease my heart,
And to disturb my mind;
Fly not, O sweet illusion!
You fleeting vision that I must pursue,
Mysterious angel that steals my life
Ah, it is you whom I would see!
O my love, O my hope!
It is a fleeting vision.
That steals away my life.
Ah, to hold you in my arms!
To feel your heart beat with loving flame,
And to die, in your arms, in mutual intoxication!
Ah, for such fire of joy,
Would I surrender my soul.
For your love, oh my hope,
It is a fleeting vision,
That steals my life away!
Yes, it is you, my love!
you, my only hope!
What if the slave is lying after all?
This draught may be some deadly poison!
Cowardly fear! To see her form!
How can I any longer hesitate
When it is heaven that is offered me?
Slave, give me the cup!
(He drinks. Casting away the goblet with a cry.)
Ah!
Already do I tremble, and my eyes
Grow dim! And yet I see her! It is she.
What words rush to my lips, and
I cannot speak! I feel here, in my heart,
That beats and sighs, a flood of burning vows
I cannot utter. Oh, take pity,
Take pity on my pain. Come nearer, come!
Come nearer still, and let my lips caress
Your golden hair! For at your feet I'd die.
Ah, in my madness it is you alone
Whom I desire! Come nearer! It is my will!
Be mine! Come nearer! Come! And at your feet
Let me expire. Come nearer! Nearer! Ah!
(He falls on his couch, overcome, and sleeps.–Phanuel enters.)

SCENE VI

Herod, Phanuel.

PHANUEL: Voilà l'homme qui fait trembler tout un empire!
Qu'importe si l'aurore à des voiles de sang!
Qu'importe le ciel menaçant!
Cet homme . . . c'est le roi . . . flétri par le délire!
Une femme l'occupe . . .

HÉRODE: (revenant à lui et cherchant à se rappeler le rêve qui l'oppresse.) Ah! Là! . . . n'ai-je pas vu Sa vivante image? . . .
Tout à disparu! . . .
Impuissante rage.
(il se lève, chancelant.)
A moi! . . .
(Apercevant le Chaldéen.)
Phanuel! . . . Est-ce toi? . . . Réponds!

PHANUEL: Hérode tristement je reviens dans Sion;
La misère s'accroit selon la prophètie
Et le peuple inquiet réclame le Messie!

HÉRODE: Explique-moi d'abord le mal que je ressens
Et guéris un amour qui consume mes sens!
Nuit et jour, je l'appelle et je vois son image;
Un instant, j'ai cru la posséder . . . vain mirage!
Ce n'était qu'un fantôme, une ombre une vapeur! . . .
Parle! . . . Est-ce le délire? . . . Est-ce un songe trompeur? . . .

PHANEUL: (avec fermeté.) Roi, tu dis vrai, c'est le délire!
Une femme t'occupe, alors que tout respire
Autour de toi la révolte et le sang!
Roi, le ciel deviet menaçant,
Parcourant en ton nom les cités et la plaine,
Partout j'ai demande l'appui de nos voisins,
Nos plus sûrs alliés sont soumis aux Romains!

HÉRODE: Je le sais! mais ici la révolte est prochaine,
Et le peuple est pour moi!

PHANUEL: Le peuple est inconstant.

HÉRODE: Ce n'est pas un consul c'est un roi qui réclame!

PHANUEL: Il tremble devant toi, mais c'est Jean qu'il acclame.

HÉRODE: Ce Jean me servira peut-être dans l'instant
Où les Romains chassés je vaincrai les prophètes!
(Avec energie.)
Tu verras à mes pieds tomber toutes les têtes
De ces fous dangereux que la gloire a tentés! . . .

PHANUEL: Des fous? Eux? Des croyants!

PHANUEL: There lies the man who makes an empire tremble!
A woman fills his thoughts. And the king,
Lies there! Blasted by his delirium.

HEROD: (waking, and trying to remember the dream by which he is still oppressed.)
Ah! did I not see her living image?
There! All has disappeared
(He rises, trembling.)
Help!
(Seeing the Chaldean.)
Phanuel, is it you?

PHANUEL: Sadly, oh, Herod, I return to Zion.
Evils increase apace, as foretold by the prophet. The people are ill at ease, and demand the Messiah!

HEROD: First tell me what are those troubles that I feel! Ah, cure this love that is consuming me. Cure this love that is killing me. Night and day I call her, and I see her face. For a moment I believed her mine. It was an empty vision. Alas, it was but a shade, a phantom and a mist! Oh, cure this love of mine! Speak! Tell me, is it delirium? Or a deceptive dream? Speak! Speak!

PHANUEL: You have said the word, O king—delirium it is! A woman fills your mind, while all about you foreshadows slaughter and blood. Heaven has begun to threaten, O king. As in your name I passed through the cities of the plain, from all our neighbors I asked assistance. Our foremost friends are subject to Rome!

HEROD: That I know. But here, the revolution is at hand, for the people are with me.

PHANUEL: The people are fickle.

HEROD: It is not a Consul, it is a King who demands.

PHANUEL: They tremble before you, but it is John whom they receive with acclamation.

HEROD: This John will serve my turn. And when the Romans are once driven out, I shall conquer the prophets! (With energy.) You shall see fall at my feet the heads of each one of these dangerous madmen, whom the hope of glory has led astray.

PHANUEL: Madmen? They? They are believers!

HÉRODE: (s'animant.) Ce sont des révoltés!

PHANUEL: Que tu glorifieras, ô roi! par le martyré!

HÉRODE: On ne les plaindra pas où je les veux proscrire!

PHANUEL: On entendra leurs cris.

HÉRODE: Je les étoufferai!

PHANUEL: Leurs temples resteront.

HÉRODE: Je les renverserai!

LE PEUPLE: (au loin, acclamant Hérode.) Gloire au tétrarque! à l'alliance
Qui nous promet la liberte
Et renverse un joug détesté!

HÉRODE: Entends-tu, Phanuel? . . . Ai-je encor la puissance? . . .
Ce sont les messagers
De nos voisins, tributaires de Rome!
Mon oeuvre se consomme,
Je puis braver tous les dangers!
(Ils sortent.–Changement à vue.)

Deuxieme Tableau

La Place Publique.
Le Xyste, place publique de Jérusalem.–A droite, l'entrée principale du Palais d'Hérode, avec un vaste escalier, des tapis de laine en couvrent les marches.–A gauche, une fontaine, une suite de terrasses aboutissant à la porte dorée.–Dans le lontain, la vue de la ville, l'aspect, du temple de Salomon sur le mont Moriah.–La multitude aux vêtements bigarrés s'y presse, sous l'ombrage. des sycomores et des sophoras.–Prêtres juifs. – Pharisiens, scribes, marins, marchands et soldats de toutes les tribus, envoyés arabes, chefs du désert, tous sont debout attendant l'arrivée d'Hérode. Des femmes et des enfants à la fontaine.–Marchands de colombes.-Une grande animation règne sur la place.–Dernières heures du jour.

SCÈNE VII

Hérode, Hérodiade, Phanuel, des Messagers, La Multitude, puis Vitellius, Les Romains, puis Jean. Salomé et Les Femmes Chananéennes, etc., etc.

LA MULTITUDE: Roi, que ta superbe vaillance
Nous sauve d'un joug détesté!
Gloire au tétrarque! à l'alliance
Qui nous promet la liberté!
(Hérode et Phanuel descendent les degrés du Palais avec les envoyés du désert.)

HÉRODE: Le moment est venu de te faire connaître,
O peuple, le projet que caresse ton maître,
Depuis assez longtemps, nous nous courbons flétris
Par le joug! . . . Le Romain n'a que notre mépris,
Mais, installé chez nous, avec un front superbe
Il donne à ses troupeaux le meilleur de notre herbe!
Peuple, pour le chasser, seconds mon effort:
Voici mes alliés! Es-tu prêt?

TOUS: Oui, la mort!
Ou notre indépendance!

HÉRODE: Et vous mourrez en braves?

TOUS: Oui! nous ne voulons plus d'entraves!

HÉRODE: Si leurs cohortes, là, surgissaient tout à coup?

TOUS: Nous n'aurions qu'un seul cri: debout!

HÉRODE, PHANUEL, LES MESSAGERS, LES CHOEURS: Aux Romains orgueilleux de nous avoir soumis
Faisons une guerre sacrée!
Jetons-nous bravement dans les rangs ennemis,
Frappons une race abhorrée!

HÉRODE: C'est bien! Vous, messagers, dites quels sont vos gages?

LES MESSAGERS: (s'avançant.) Tu nous garderas comme otages!

PHANUEL: Que nos apportez-vous?

PREMIER GROUPE: Quinze mille chevaux

DEUXIEME GROUPE: Des hommes!

TROISIEME GROUPE: Nous, cent chariots!

LES CHOEURS: Faisons une guerre sacrée
Aux Romains orgueilleux de nous avoir soumis.
Frappons cette race abhorrée.
Jetsons-nous bravement dans les rangs ennemis.
(Fanfares romaines au loin.–Hérodiade, paraissant subitement au haut de l'escalier, fait un gest pour imposer silence à la foule qui, frappée de stupeur, écoute les fanfares encore très lointaines.)

HÉRODIADE: Vous qui tenez conseil sur les places publiques, Cessez vos appels héroiques
Et prêtez l'oreille! . . . Là-bas
Vous entendrez monter les pas
Du consul et de son escorte!
(Elle descend. Le jour baisse peu à peu.)

LES CHOEURS: O Dieux!

HÉRODE ET PHANUEL: Vitellius?

HÉRODIADE: Il est à votre porte!

HÉRODE: Que faire?

HEROD: They are insurgents!

PHANUEL: Whom you would glorify by making martyrs of them!

HEROD: They shall be prosecuted!

PHANUEL: Their cries will be heard!

HEROD: I will stifle them!

PHANUEL: Their temples will remain.

HEROD: I shall demolish them!

VOICES OF THE PEOPLE: (distant.) Hail to the Tetrarch!
Hail to the alliance
That promises us our freedom!

HEROD: Do you hear, Phanuel? I still hold the power!
These are the messengers.
Of our neighbors, who are subject to Rome! These are the deputies!
My work nears fulfilment. I can face all dangers.
(They go out!-The scene changes.)

Second Tableau

The Grand Square in Jerusalem (the Xyst.) On the right, the principal entrance to Herod's palace with a great flight of steps covered with woolen carpets. To the left a fountain and a series of terraces leading to the Golden Door. The city can be seen in the distance, with Solomon's temple on Mount Moriah. A crowd in variegated raiment, surges beneath the shadow of the sycamore and sophoras-trees; Jewish Priests, Saducees, Pharisees, sailors, merchants, soldiers of all the tribes, Arabian envoys, desert chieftains, all await the arrival of Herod. There are women and children by the fountain. Vendors of doves. Great animation reigns in the Square. The day is drawing to a close.

SCENE VII

Herod, Herodias, Phanuel: Envoys, the Crowd, then Vitellius, the Romans, then John, Salome and Women of Canaan.

CHORUS: O king, may your sublime courage,
Save us from the yoke we detest!
All hail! Hail to the Alliance
That promises to us our freedom!
(Herod comes down the steps of the palace, followed by the Envoys.)

HEROD: (to the people.) The time has come, O my people, when you should be informed of the project which your master has at heart. For a long time we have bowed down, crushed by the yoke of Rome. The Romans we despise, yet they have established themselves among us, and have given to their flocks the best of our harvests. Help me, therefore, O my people, to cast them out! Here are my allies! Are you ready?

MESSENGERS AND CHORUS: Aye! Death or independence!

HEROD: And you will die like brave men?

MESSENGERS AND CHORUS: Aye, we swear it! Away with truces!

HEROD: What if their cohorts, here, were suddenly to rise?

MESSENGERS AND CHORUS: "Death or independence!" would be our only battle cry!

HEROD, PHANUEL AND THE REST: ALL. On Rome that was proud to bring us to our knees, We'll now wage a holy war.
Let us rush bravely on against our proud enemies.
Let us conquer the race we abhor.

HEROD: It is well. And you the deputies,
What pledges do you bring?

THE MESSENGERS: You shall hold us as hostages.

PHANUEL: What do you bring us?

FIRST GROUP: Fifteen thousand horses!

SECOND GROUP: And men! And arms!

THIRD GROUP: One hundred chariots!

CHORUS: We will wage a sacred war Against the Romans!
Let us fling ourselves bravely upon the ranks of our enemies!
We will strike down this race that we abhor.
(Fanfare of Roman trumpets, in the distance. Herodias suddenly appears at the top of the steps. With a motion of her hand she silences the crowd, which listens in amazement to the Roman trumphets, still far off.)

HERODIAS: You who hold your concerts in public place, cease for a moment your heroic clamor. Hark! Hark! You will hear the approaching foot—
(She comes down. The daylight slowly fades.) steps of the Consul, and his guard!

CHORUS: O, God!

HEROD, PHANUEL: Vitellius!

HERODIAS: Is at your doors!

HEROD: What's to be done?

LES CHOEURS: Nous sommes perdus!	PEOPLE: We are lost!
HÉRODIADE: Peut-être . . . . (A Hérode.) Toi, ne tremble plus: Ton existence m'est plus chére que la mienne, Je saurai les tromper. (Les fanfares se rapprochent.)	HERODIAS: It may be so. (to Herod aside) Tremble no more. Your life is dearer to me than my own. Herod, I love you! I shall outwit them. (The fanfares are heard more distinctly.)
TOUS: Ah! le Romain!	CHORUS: The Roman! The Roman! The Roman!
HÉRODIADE: Qu'il vienne! (Des femmes envahissent la place, tout le monde s'agite confusément. –la nuit est venue.	HERODIAS: Let him come! (Women rush into the square and run about distractedly. General commotion. Night has fallen gradually.)
LE CHOEUR: Voici les Romains Avec leurs cohortes, C'est en souverains Qu'ils ouvrent nos portes! L'airain retentit Et, sur leur passage, Sinistre présage, Tout céde et s'enfuit! (Une nouvelle fanfare annonce l'arrivée des Romains, le cortège du proconsul est précédé de porteurs de torches éclairant les enseignes et les aigles dorées qui surmontent les drapeaux de pourpre; vélites et licteurs, légionnaires.–Hérode confus et troublé va à la rencontre de Vitellius.)	PEOPLE: Here are the Romans Their cohorts march on, Seeming like victors To seize on our town! And at their passage, Ominous presage, How the brass rings, Let us fly from the sound! (Another fanfare announces the arrival of the Romans. The Proconsul's train is preceded by torchbearers lighting the standarts, and the golden eagles surmounting the purple banners; velites, lictors, legionaires.)
VITELLIUS: Quel trouble à mon approche Fait détourner les yeux? S'il me faut réprimer un complot odieux, Qu'ils tremblent! car le châtiment est proche Pour ce peuple orgueilleux!	VITELLIUS: Why do they lower their eyes at my approach? If it be some vile plot to be suppressed, let them beware! The punishment of this rebellious people is at hand!
HÉRODE: Quel trouble à son approche Me fait baisser les yeux? Sachons cacher encore ma haine et mes voeux, Qu'il tremble, car notre vengeance est proche Contre un joug odieux!	HEROD: At his approach, what compels me thus to avert my eyes? We must cover our plot! I must conceal, as yet, both my hate and my vow! Beware, then! I must hide for a while my hate and my plot! For the punishment comes against a power we like not!
HÉRODIADE: Quel trouble! A leur approche Il a baissé les yeux! L'ingrat qui m'oubliait se courbe devant eux. Il tremble! Mais le jour de ma vengeance est proche Le sort comble mes voeux!	HERODIAS: Unworthily he bows to them, and I'm forgot! He trembles, and fate grants what I sought! What causes you to avert your eyes? He trembles! yet is my triumph nearing! And the gods will grant what I long have sought!
PHANUEL: Quel trouble à leur approche Leur fait baisser les yeux? Est-ce le châtiment qui commence pour eux? Ils tremblent? O Jean, ton heure est proche! . . . Dieu va combler tes voeux!	PHANUEL: When they approach them, What causes them to avert their eyes? In this vengeance, at last, that has come on them now? They tremble! John, your hour is nearing! By God you are not forgotten!
LE PEUPLE JUIF: Quel trouble à leur approche Nous fait baisser les yeux? Sachons dissimuler notre haine et nos voeux, Qu'ils tremblent! car notre vengeance est proche Contre un maître odieux!	CHORUS OF THE JEWS': When they approach us, What causes us to avert our eyes? Wherefore should we tremble? Beware, then! We must conceal both our hate and our plot! Against an odious master!
LES ROMAINS: Quel trouble à notre approche Fait détourner les yeux? S'il nous faut réprimer un complot odieux, Qu'ils tremblent! car le châtiment est proche Pour ce peuple orgueilleux!	ROMAN SOLDIERS: When we approach them, What causes them to avert their eyes? Beware then! Vengeance is now upon them! Swift retribution waits For haughty peoples who rise!
VITELLIUS: Je représente ici César et la justice: Peuple, dis-moi quels sont tes voeux?	VITELLIUS: (to the people.) I represent here, Caesar, and justice! What does this people demand?
LES PRETRES JUIFS: (revenant de leur surprise et entourant Vitellius.) Rome nous est propice! Qu'elle nous rende alors le temple d'Israël Et fasse respecter le grand prêtre à l'autel!	The JEWISH PRIESTS (having recovered from their surprise, surround Vitellius.) Is Rome propitious to us? Then let her give us back the Temple of Israel, And cause to be respected, the High Priest at the altar!
VITELLIUS: Tiberè exaucera ce voeu trop légitime! Célébrez le pouvoir d'un vainqueur magnanime!	VITELLITUS: Tiberius will grant your reasonable petition. Hail then the power of so generous a conqueror!
LA FOULE: Salut au proconsul, aux Romains, aux soldats Dont la gloire grandit encore à chaque pas! (Tandis que la foule se presse autour du proconsul et qu'Hérodiade invite Vitellius à monter au palais, tandis que les Romains retirent les lances plantées sur le sol et passent leurs boucliers à leurs bras, Jean paraît près de la Porte dorée suivi de Salomé, et de femmes chananéennes.–Jean, Salomé, et les Chananéennes semblent enveloppés dans la blanche clarté des étoiles, ils chantent: Hosannah! Gloire à celui qui nous vient du Seigneur.–Vitellius s'arrête, surpris des témoignages de respect que l'on donne à Jean.-Hérode reconnait Salomé et la désigne à Phanuel.–Enfin Hérodiade considère toute la scène avec jalousi et fureur.)	MESSENGERS AND PEOPLE: All hail the Proconsul! All hail Tiberius! Caesar all hail! All hail the soldiers! (The crowd presses about the Proconsul, and Herodias invites Vitellius to enter the palace, while the Romans take up the lances planted on the ground and place their shields on their arms.-John and Salome appear followed by the Canaanite women.-The moonlight surrounds them like an aureole. They sing "Hosanna! Hosanna! Hosanna! Bless him that comes in the name of the Lord!" Vitellius stops, surprised at the honor and respect shown to John. Herod recognizes Salome and points her out to Phanuel. Herodias contemplates the scene with jealous fury.)
HÉRODE: (a Phanuel.) Vois! C'est elle! mon coeur l'avait bien reconnue!	HEROD: See! It is she, Salome! I felt it in my heart!
HÉRODIADE: (à part.) Il connaît cette enfant! Il pâlit a sa vue! D'où vient-elle?	HERODIAS: He knows this young girl! He grows pale at sight of her.
VITELLIUS: Quel est ce mortel triomphant?	VITELLIUS: Who is this triumphant mortal?
SALOMÉ: (s'avançant.) Le prophète du Dieu vivant!	SALOME: He is the prophet of the living God!
VITELLIUS: Un fou?	VITELLIUS: He's mad!

HÉRODIADE: (bas et vivement à Vitellius.) Qui rêve la puissance!
Regarde!
(A part.)
Ah! je tiens ma vengeance!
(Sur l'ordre du proconsul, des licteurs se mêlent au cortège de Jean et entourent le précurseur.)

JEAN: (très calme.) Toute justice vient du ciel!
Homme, ta puissance fragile
Se brise aux pieds de l'Éternel
Comme un vase d'argile!
Les Femmes chananéennes et Salomé reprennent leur chant: Hosannah! Hosannah!–La foule crie de nouveau: Salut au proconsul.–Hérodiade et Vitellius entrent dans le Palais.–Phanuel entraîne Hérode qui ne peut détacher ses regards de Salomé.–Tableau. –Rideau.

FIN DE L'ACTE DEUXIÈME.

HERODIAS: (to Vitellius, in a low voice angrily.) Who has dreams of power. See! (aside.)
My revenge is at hand!

JOHN: (to Vitellius and to People.) Justice cometh from the Lord! Man, your power is a frail thing, And will break at the feet of the Eternal
As a vessel of clay!
The Canaanites and Salome take up their chant again: "Hosannah! Hosannah!" The crowd again cries, "All Hail, Proconsul!" Herodias and Vitellius go into the palace, while Phanuel leads away Herod, who cannot take his eyes off Salome.

END OF SECOND ACT.

ACTE TROISIÈME

Premier Tableau

La demeure de Phanuel.–Au fond une large ouverture qui laisse voir la nuit étoilée, et d'où l'on domine Jérusalem.

PHANUEL puis Hérodiade.

SCÈNE VIII

PHANUEL: Dors, ô cité perverse! . . . Ignore le destin
Qui frappera tes fils au milieu de leurs fêtes!
Dors, et n'écoute pas la plainte des prophètes,
Moi, j'interrogerai le ciel jusqu'au matin!
Astres étincelants que l'infini promène
Enfermant l'avenir dans vos cercles de feu;
Astres qui dévoilez la destinée humaine,
Parlez! Quel est ce Jean? Est-ce un homme? Est-ce un Dieu?
Sa voix tonne comme la foudre;
Il dit: Vous trouverez, cherchez!
Les sceptres vont tomber en poudre!
Peuples! ceignez vos reins! . . .
Et les humbles, sur son passage,
Paraissent attendre un signal;
Et les rois cachent leur visage
Dans les plis du manteau royal!
Astres étincelants que l'infini promène
Enfermant l'avenir dans vos cercles de feu;
Astres qui dévoilez la destinée humaine,
Parlez, Quel est ce Jean? Est-ce un homme? Est-ce un Dieu?

ACT III

First Tableau

Phanuel's house.-At the back, a large opening overlooking Jerusalem, and showing the starlit sky.

SCENE VIII

PHANUEL: Sleep, O foolish city! Heed not the fate that will overwhelm your children in the midst of their festivities! Sleep, and listen not to the cries of your prophets! I shall question the stars until the morning.
O burning stars that heaven spreads out, and who compass the future with your orbits of fire,-O stars who can unveil the destiny of mankind, shining stars,-speak! Who is this John? Is he a man, tell me,-or a god? His voice resounds like thunder; he cries "Seek and you shall find! Sceptres will crumble into dust! Gird up your loins, people and walk!" And the lowly, as he passes, seem to await some sign. And kings hide their faces in their royal robes. Who is this John? Is he a man or a god? Shining stars, speak! Speak!
(He remains wrapt in contemplation of the starry night. Herodias enters suddenly, disturbed and agitated.)

(Il reste absorbé dans la contemplation de la nuit étoilée, Hérodiade entre tout à coup, inquiète, agitée.

HÉRODIADE: Ah! Phanuel!

PHANUEL: (surpris.) Vers ma demeure
Quel souci t'amène à cette heure?

HÉRODIADE: Puis-je m'inquiéter de l'heure où du danger?
La reine vient ici pour se venger!

PHANUEL: Te venger?

HÉRODIADE: Le ciel et notre âme
Ont un lien secret! Phaneul, montremoi
L'astre auquel est lié le sort de cette femme
Qui m'a volé l'amour du roi!

PHANUEL: (hesitant.) Tu lu veux?

HÉRODIADE: Je l'ordonne!

PHANUEL: Ecoute:
J'ai souvent contemplé to astre, et je l'ai vu
Par un autre toujours obscurci dans sa route! . . .
Ce soir encore . . .
(Il remonte.)

HÉRODIADE: Ah! que dis-tu?

PHANUEL: (considérant le ciel.) Vos deux étoile sont comme une âme jumelle
Avec la même vie et la même clarté!
Le destin vous sépare . . . , et l'amour vous appelle . . .

HÉRODIADE: (avec angoisse.) Regarde encore! Et dis la vérité, Phanuel, je veux tout connaître!

PHANUEL: (sombre.) L'horizon devient menaçant;
Je vois l'étoile disparaître,
Tu restes seule! . . . Ah!
Que de sang!
Que de sang couvre ton étoile!

HÉRODIADE: (fremissante.) Du sang . . . Je suis vengée! . . .

PHANUEL: (sans l'écouter.) Hélas! un dernier voile
Se déchire . . . tu fus mère . . . et tu ne l'es plus!

HÉRODIADE: (d'abord stupefaite, puis s'attendrissant.) Oui . . . mère! . . . Je le fus!

PHANUEL: (se rapprochant d'elle.) Ah! songe au passé, reine!
Reine, qu'il t'en souvienne!

HÉRODIADE: Si Dieu l'avait voulu!
Si j'avais pu garder auprès de moi cet ange,
J'aurais tout oublié, vengeance, amour deçu!

PHANUEL: (a part.) Son coeur se trouble (charme étrange!)
Au souvenir de son enfant perdu . . .

HÉRODIADE: Oui, Phanuel, mon âme à besoin de tendresse!
Je voudrais mon enfant; j'ai soif de ses caresses . . .

HERODIAS: Ah, Phanuel!

PHANUEL: What cares bring the Queen to my house at this hour?

HERODIAS: Shall I trouble myself as to the hour, or the danger? The Queen comes here for vengeance.

PHANUEL: For vengeance?

HERODIAS: The heavens and my soul are bound together by a secret bond! Phanuel, point out to me the star that is united to the fate of the woman who has stolen from me the love of the King!

PHANUEL: You wish it?

HERODIAS: I command it!

PHANUEL: Listen! I have often beheld your star. And ever, on its way, I have seen it obscured by another even tonight . . . !

HERODIAS: Ah! What do you say?

PHANUEL: Your star and hers are like twins, that have one life, one light! Fate separates you, but love draws you together.

HERODIAS: Look again! And tell me the truth. Phanuel! Phanuel! I would know all!

PHANUEL: The horizon becomes threatening! I see the star disappear . . .
Yours alone remains . . . Ah, and blood, blood quenches your star!

HERODIAS: Blood! I am revenged!

PHANUEL: And now, one last veil is rent asunder. You are mother no more.

HERODIAS: Mother! Sacred word.

PHANUEL: Think of the past, O Queen.

HERODIAS: Had it been God's will . . . ! If I could have kept my angel with me.
I should have forgotten it all!
Vengeance, and love betrayed.

PHANUEL: Her heart is troubled.

HERODIAS: My soul is in need of love-I want my child.
I thirst for her caresses!

PHANUEL: (se rapprochant encore.) Espère donc!

HÉRODIADE: La voir? . . . la presser sur mon coeur?

PHANUEL: Oui, tu le peux!

HÉRODIADE: O ciel! pour moi plus de douleur!
Et c'en est fait de ma misère!

PHANUEL: Ah! tu le vois, le ciel te permet d'être mère!
(Subitement et rémontant la scène. il l'entraine ver l'ouverture du fond et lui montre Salomé qui se dirige vers le temple.)
Ta fille . . . tiens! regarde!
Là-bas . . . entrant
Dans le temple . . .

HÉRODIADE: (reculant et poussant un cri de rage.) Elle! ma rivale!
Non! non! ma fille est morte, et je n'ai plus d'enfant!

PHANUEL: (terrible et chassant Hérodiade.) Reine impitoyable et fatale!
Et tu disais que tu l'aimais!
Va! tu n'es qu'une
femme . . . une mère, jamais!

(Hérodiade fuit épouvantée sous la malédiction de Phanuel.)
(Changement à vue.)

Deuxième Tableau

Partie immense du temple de Solomon précédant le Sanctuaire.–Murailles de bois de cèdre, dont la dorure est éblouissante; colonnes de marbre et de porphyre, corniches en formes de lis avec feuillage d'or.–Des chaînes de bronze, des tapisseries rattachent les colonnes les unes aux autres. –A droite, grille fermée conduisant au souterrain du temple. Au fond, portes d'argent sur lesquelles pendent des voiles de lin.–Des voiles à fleur de pourpre cachent l'entrée du Sanctuaire.–Au lever du rideau, la scène est déserte.

SCÈNE IX

VOIX AU DEHORS: Hérode, à toi ces palmes,
A toi, reine, ces fleurs!
A tous deux, richesse et bonheurs
Que vos jours soient nombreux et calmes!
(Salomé, entre faible, se soutenant à peine.)
L'aube renaît à peine . . . on s'éveille au palais
On acclame Hérode et la reine!
Ah! qu'ils soient maudits à jamais
Ceux qui poursuivent de leur haine
Jean mon bien-aimé!
Ils l'ont pris . . .
enchainé!
Quel supplice s'apprête!
Ou peut-être . . . déja . . . quel tombeau s'est fermé?
Je souffre! . . . Et là toujours ces chants de fête!

VOIX AU DEHORS: A toi, reine, ces fleurs,
Hérode, à toi ces palmes!
A vous deux, richesse et bonheurs!
Que vos jours soient nombreux et calmes!

SALOMÉ: La force m'abandonne . . . hélas! toute la nuit J'ai veillé . . .
(Elle regarde craintivement autour d'elle.)
C'est ici pourant qu'ils l'ont conduitô (Avec désespoir.)
Dieu! tu n'entends donc pas leur injuste sentence?
Charme des jours passés où j'entendais sa voix,
Où je sentais mon coeur renaître a l'espérance,
As-tu donc disparu pour le dernière fois?
Vais-je rester encor seul avec ma souffrance?
Les cieux s'ouvraient plus brillants et plus clairs,
La tendresse et la foi palpitaient dans les airs,
A peine ai-je entrevu cette heure fortunée
Que tu viens me frapper, cruelle destinée!
Qui prendra pitié de mes pleurs?
Qui m'ouvrira la porte de sa tombe!
Ah! permettez qu'avec lui je succombe,
Bourreaux! . . . s'il doit mourir . . . je meurs!
(Elle tombe épuisée au moment où Hérode entre et se dirige vers la grille de souterraiu à droite.)

SCÈNE X

Hérode, Salomé.

HÉRODE: (il s'arrête sombre et préoccupé) C'en est fait! . . . La Judée appartient à Tibère!
A quio m'a-t-il servi de flatter les Romains
Pour devenir le roi de ce pays prospère?
Je suis chef de tribu chez les Galiléens!
Tu l'emportes, César! . . . Mais ma vengeance est prête.
Tremble! Je sauverai Jean, ce hardi prophète
Qui n'attend rien de ta faveur,
Et les Juifs briserout ton joug envahisseur!
(Il aperçoit Salomé toujours accroupie dans l'ombre.)
On m'écoutait! . . . qui donc était la?
Femme! femme!
Que fais-tu là?

Salomé: (comme dans un rêve douloureux.) Qui parle?

PHANUEL: Hope on!

HERODIAS: To see her! To hold her to my heart!

PHANUEL: You may see her!

HERODIAS: Can it be I shall see her? O Heaven! For me then there would be no more pain!

PHANUEL: Oh, you see, Heavens permit you To be a mother again!
(leading her to the opening at the back and showing her Salome who is going toward the temple.)
Your child! There! Look! She is about to enter the Temple!
Down there! Entering the temple!

HERODIAS: My daughter? She? My rival! No, no! My daughter is dead! I have no child.

PHANUEL: Queen, pitiless as fatego! You are but a woman; a mother, never!

HERODIAS: Ah!

Second Tableau

A large portion of the Temple before the Sanctuary.- Walls of cedar, richly gilded; columns of marble and periphery with lily-shaped cornices with golden foliage. Bronze chains and tapestries interconnect the columns. To the right, a barred gate leading to the Temple vaults. At the back, silver doors, over which fall linen vails; these veils, embroidered with purple and hyacinth flowers, hide the entrance to the Sanctuary.- When the curtain rises, the stage is empty.

SCENE IX

VOICES OF WOMEN (heard off):
O Herod! for you the palms,
For you, Queen, the flowers!
To them both, long life, happy hours!
To him, the palms! To her, the flowers!
(Salome enters, half-fainting, scarcely able to stand.)
Dawn is scarcely appearing,
Yet I hear them before Herod's palace servilely cheering!
Ah! Be they accursed evermore,
Those who to death, perhaps, are bearing
John, whom I adore!
In their chains he was bound! Is he waiting their torture?
Or, it may be, even now, he lies dead in the ground!
I suffer-these festal songs, how they resound!

VOICES (without): Riches and hapiness be yours!
May your days be long, and peaceful!
For you the flowers; for you the palms.

SALOME: I suffer! And ever about me these festal songs. My strength fails me! Alas, I kept watch all night. It was here, indeed, they bought him. Some dark conspiracy threatens the prophet! This Herod, cowering before the Romans; and these Pharisees, fearing lest they rose their power, have thrown him into the dungeons beneath. O God, you will not heed their unjust condemnation! God have pity, have mercy!
How sweet were the days that are gone,
When I listened to his voice;
When I felt my hopes revive in my heart.
Have you then vanished forever?
Shall I be left alone with my grief?
Heaven opened then more bright and clear,
Mercy and faith breathed in the air.
But scarce had I beheld this happiness,
When you, O cruel Fate, did strike me down.
God, O God, have pity on my tears!
Have pity on me. Have pity
Murderers! Murderers! If he must die,
Let me die with him!
(She falls exhausted at the bars of the prison.)

SCENE X

Herod, Salome.

HEROD: (stops, preoccupied and gloomy). It is done! Judaea belongs to Tiberius. What use to me was it to flatter the Romans only to become king of this pretty province? I am chief of a tribe-the tribe of Galileeans! You have conquered, O Caesar! But my vengeance is at hand, Beware! Beware! I shall save this John, this bold prophet, who asks no favors of you! And the Jews will break your conqueror's yoke.
(He sees Salome.)
I have been overheard! Woman! Answer. What do you want here?

SALOME: (as though in a painful dream.) Who speaks?

HÉRODE: (avec violence.) Sur ton âme, Réponds!
(La reconnaissant.)
Ah! Salomé! . . . C'est elle que je voi . . . Rêves réalisés!

SALOMÉ: (interdite.) Que voulez-vous de moi?

HÉRODE: Demande au prisonnier qui revoit la lumière,
A la fleur qui s'entr'ouvre aux premiers feux du jour,
Au coeur désespéré qui renait à l'amour,
Demande-leur, enfant, ce qu'ils veulent sur terre?
Ils oublient tout, la nuit, le froid et la misère,
Ils ne désirent rien car ils ont le soleil,
Ils ont la joie, ils ont un horizon vermeil! . . .
Et pour moi c'est ainsi: j'ai tout ce que j'espère! . . .
Laisse-moi contempler ta beauté douce et fière!
Une ivresse ineffable illumine mes cieux;
Mon rayon de soleil, c'est l'éclat de tex yeux
Toi seule es le trésor que je cherche sur terre!
(Salomé s'est relevée, elle fait un effort pour chasser le souvenir qui la possède, et, comprenant tout enfin, elle repousse Hérode avec horreur.)

SALOMÉ: Ah! que m'oses-tu dire?

HÉRODE: Oui, je n'aime que toi;
Oui, c'est toi que veux; oui, ton corps et ton âme
Vont m'appartenir, car je suis le roi!

SALOMÉ: (fremissante.) Le roi! . . . C'est lui, l'infâme!

HÉRODE: (cherchant à l'entraîner.) Viens! viens! sois à moi!

SALOMÉ: Non!

HÉRODE: Faveur suprême
Du ciel en ce jour!
Esclave, je t'aime
Et veux ton amour!

SALOMÉ: (lui résistant.) Non!

HÉRODE: Vois quelle aurore
S'ouvre devant toi!

SALOMÉ:
Lui! . . . C'est lui que m'aime!

HEROD: C'est moi qui t'implore
Et je suis le roi!

SALOMÉ: O douleur suprême!

HÉRODE: Tu m'appartiendras!

SALOMÉ: Non! jamais!

HEROD (violently): Upon your soul, reply!
(recognizing her)
Ah, Salome, Salome, it is she! My dream is realized!

SALOME: What do you wish of me?

HEROD: Salome! Ask of the prisoner who regains the light of day; ask of the hopeless heart that feels its love revive, ask these, my child, why they wish to live on the earth. They forget all, night, cold, and suffering. There is nothing they wish, for they have the sun; joy they have and the future is roseate for them. So it is with me: I have everything for which I hoped. Salome, let me behold your beauty, sweet and proud! Salome, what ineffable intoxication fills my sky! The rays of my sun are the light of your eyes. You alone are the treasure which I seek on this earth. Salome! Let me love you, Salome!
(Salome rises and making an effort to drive away the memories that hold her, then as she realizes Herod's meaning, repulses him with horror.)

SALOME: How dare you speak to me this way!

HEROD: I love you! Yes, you alone I love! And you are my desire! Ah, your body and your soul must be mine; for I am the King!

SALOME: The King! It is he! Monster!

HEROD (seeking to persuade her.) Come! Be mine! Salome, I love you!

SALOME: Never!

HEROD: It is the highest gift the world affords today. Slave, I love you and I will have your love!

SALOME: No!

HEROD: See what a future opens before you. Come, Salome, I implore!

SALOME: He loves me! He!

HEROD: See what a future opens before you. I am the King, and I implore!

SALOME: O—to suffer so! Have pity!

HEROD: I love you, and you shall belong to me.

SALOME: Never!

HEROD: I'll make you smart!

SALOME (braving him): What care I for death . . .

HÉRODE: Crains ma fureur!

SALOMÉ: (le bravant.) Je te méprise, toi, ton amour, ta puissance . . .
J'aime! . . . Un autre, entends-tu? possède tout mon coeur.

HÉRODE (avec violence.) Un autre! . . . dis-tu vrai?

SALOMÉ: Cet autre qui t'offense
Est plus fort que César, plus grand que les héros!

HÉRODE: (terrible.) Qu'il soit César où bien esclave,
Je connaîtrai cet homme qui me brave
Et je vous livrerai tous les deux aux bourreaux!

DES VOIX: (dans les profondeurs du sanctuaire.) Schmah Isroël!
Adonaï Eloheinou!

HÉRODE: (revenant à Salomé et suppliant.) Ecoute, enfant! Le peuple anvahit ces portiques, Et des Juifs j'entends les cantiques.
Ne me repousse pas . . . Pitié! viens au palais!

SALOMÉ: (se dégageant.) Tu me fais horreur! je te hais!

HÉRODE: (avec fureur.) Depuis trop longtemps, Hérode supplie!
Va! je châtierai tes amours!

SALOMÉ: Que m'importe la mort! que m'importe la vie,
Si le ciel protège ses jours!
(Hérode sort précipitamment en faisant un dernier geste de menace à Salomé qui, palpitante, se laisse tomber auprès du grand voile de lin, devant le sanctuaire.–La foule envahit le temple.)

HEROD: Beware of my anger!

SALOME: I despise you; your love and your power! I, too, love! Another has my heart!

HEROD: Is this the truth?

SALOME: I, too, love! And that other who offends you, is mightier than Caesar, and greater than any hero!

HEROD: Is this the truth? I shall discover this man, who defies me, and I will send you both to eternity!

VOICES (from the Temple):
Schmah Isroël!
Adonaï Eloheinou!

HEROD: (taking Salome by the arm, beseechingly.) You hear them? The arches with voices are ringing!
It is the Jews, singing their ancient anthem.
Repel me not! Be kind, come home with me!

SALOME (breaking away.) Ah, disgusting brute!

HEROD (fiercely.) Good! it will be your fault! I will chastise your contemptible love!

SALOME: What care I for death!
What care
I for living! If heaven but guard him!
(Herod goes out hurriedly, with a final threatening gesture toward Salome (who, trembling, sinks down beside the great veil which conceals the Holy of Holies.- The crowd invades the temple.)

SCÈNE XI

Les Princes Des Prètres, Une Voix dans la sanctuaire, La Foule.

Par les portiques de droite et de gauche la foule pénètre dans le temple, lentement, avec calme et en donnant les marques du plus profond respect.–Puis des serviteurs du temple ouvrent les grilles d'argent qui défendent l'accès du sanctuaire et le grand voile se sépare laissant apercevoir le sanctuaire dont la large colonnade et les vastes profondeurs sont brillamment éclairées; seul, le tabernacle reste encore voilé.–Une procession sainte sort lentement par la droite du sanctuaire, ce sont: Les Serviteurs du Temple, des Prètres, les Femmes de Jérusalem portant des offrandes, les Princes des Prètres, les

SCENE XI

The Priestly Nobles. A Voice (within the Sanctuary). The Crowd.

(The people go into the temple slowly and quietly, by the doors at the right and left, exhibiting the greatest reverence. The servitors of the temple open the silver gratings that prevent access to the Sanctuary and the great veil slowly separates. The great colonnade and extensive depth of the Sanctuary appear in a brilliant illumination; the Tabernacle alone remains veiled. A sacred procession moves slowly out from the right of the Sanctuary, comprising: Temple Servitors, Priests; Women of Jerusalem bearing offerings; the Priestly Nobles; Levites carrying golden censers in which incense is burning; Young Israelites; the Lévites tenant les cassolettes d'or où brule l'encens, De Jeunes Israélites, les Filles Sacrées et enfin le Grand Prètre; toute la foule se prosterne.

VOIX: (dans le sanctuaire.): Schemah Israel! Adonaï Eloheinou!

LA FOULE: (prosternée.) Schemah Israel! Adonaï Eloheinou!

LE GRAND PRETRE: Accurez tous, revenez dans le temple!!
Le Seigneur trois fois saint permet qu'on le contemple
O peuples d'Israël,
Prosternez-vous! Adorez l'Eternel!

LA FOULE: Gloire au Dieu des armées!
Hosannah! Gloire à Dieu!
Revenez, tribus alarmées,
Prier dans le saint lieu!
Hosannah! Gloire à Dieu!
(Le lin qui cachait encore le tabernacle se soulève, et le Saint des Saints, éclairé de mille lumières, apparaît aux yeux de la foule frémissant de joie.)

DANSE SACRÉE:
(Les filles de Manahim.)

SCÈNE XII

Les Mêmes, Hérode, Hérodias, Phanuel, Vitellius, Les Romains, puis Jean, puis Salomé.

VITELLIUS: Peuple juif! rends justice à la grandeur de Rome,
Sa gloire et ses bienfaits emplissent l'univers!

HÉRODE: (à part.) Oui, célébrez César qui vous donne des fers!
(Les princes des prêtres s'avancent vers Vitellius.)

LES PRETRES: Achève donc ton oeuvre en condamnant un homme
Qui preche la discorde et méconnait ta loi:
Il pervertit le peuple des Juifs et se dit roi . . .
Rends la paix au royaume en frappant cent impie! . . .

VITELLIUS: (a Hérode.) Jean est Galiléen, Hérode, c'est à toi De le juger.

HÉRODE: (avec un mouvement de joie bientôt réprimé.)
Moi! . . .

VITELLIUS: N'es-tu as son roi?

LES PRINCES DES PRETRES: On t'amène ce faux Messie,
Pour l'Etat et pour nous mesure le danger!

HÉRODE: (a Vitellius.) Je consens à l'interroger.
(A part.)
Qu'il serve mes projets, je lui donne la vie!
(Entrée de Jean, amené par les serviteurs et les gardes du temple.)

Daughter of Manahim; and, last, the High Priest. The people fall prostrate).

A VOICE (within the Sanctuary): Schemah Israel! Adonaï Eloheinou!

THE CROWD: Schemah Israel! Adonaï Eloheinou!

THE HIGH PRIEST: Come one, come all, to the Temple.
For this day you may see the Lord, who is thrice holy!
People of Israel! Now bow down, and adore the Eternal!

THE CROWD: Glory to the Lord of Hosts!
Hosannah! Sing His praise
Come, tribes affrighted, in this holy place
Your prayers to Him upraise!
Hosannah! Sing His Praise!
(The sacred veil of the Temple rises little by little and the Holy of Holies appears, lit by a thousand lights. The people rise, joyful and excited).

SACRED DANCE:
(The Daughters of Monahim).

SCENE XII

Herodias, Herod, Vitellius, and Phanuel enter, followed by the Romans; then John, afterward Salome.

VITELLIUS (to The People): People of Judea, render justice to the greatness of Rome, whose great deeds and glories fill the world.

HEROD: Aye! Shout for Caesar, who keeps you in chains.
(The Priests advance toward Vitellius.)

PRIESTS: Finish your work, by the condemnation of a man who preaches discord, and disregards the law! He stirs up the people, and calls himself King of the Jews. Restore peace of the realm, by punishing this offender.

VITELLIUS (to Herod): John is a Galileean, it is for you to pass judgment.

HEROD (with a movement of ill-conceled joy). For me?

VITELLIUS: Are not you his King?

PRIESTS (to Herod): They are bringing you this false Messiah! Judge well of the danger to the State, and to us.

HEROD: I consent to question him.
(Aside.)
If he will serve my purpose, I will give him his life.
(John appears, led in by the guards of the Temple.)

LES FEMMES: Comme il est beau dans sa misère!
Il est rempli de majesté,
Son regard n'a rien de sévère,
Il rêve d'immortalité! . . .

VITELLIUS: (à Hérode.) Je plains cet homme en sa misère,
Je crois à sa sincérité.
Hérode, ne sois pas sévère,
Le voilà plein d'humilité! . . .

LES PRETRES: Roi, cet homme feint la misère,
Pour éveiller la charité;
Craignant que te ne sois sévère,
Le voilà plein d'humilité! . . .

HÉRODIADE: (à Hérode.) Vois cet homme qui feint la misère,
Il abandonne sa fierté;
Craignant que tu ne sois sévère,
Le fourbe est plein d'humilité!

PHANUEL: Comme il est grand dans sa misère!
Il est rempli de majesté,
Son regard n'a rien de sévère,
Il rêve d'immortalité!

HÉRODE: Voilà donc ce mortel qui soulève le monde! . . .

JEAN: Seigneur! donne à mon coeur les clartés de la foi,
Que ma parole soit plus ardente et féconde;
Soutiens ton défenseur! Je vais parler pour toi! . . .
(Hérode, Vitellius, Phanuel: ont pris place sur les sièges placés devant les grandins.)

HÉRODE: (avec une faveur marquée.) Homme, ton nom?

JEAN: Je suis Jean, fils de Zacharie.

HÉRODE: Est-il donc vrai que par ta prophétie Le peuple est agité?

JEAN: J'ai dit: Paix aux mortels de bonne volonte!

HÉRODE: Quelle armes as-tu pour fonder ton symbole?

JEAN: Je n'ai qu'une arme: La parole!

HÉRODE: Quel est ton but enfin?

JEAN: Mon but: La liberté!
(Rumeurs diverses.)

LA FOULE: La liberté! la liberté!

LES PRETRES: César! A mort! à la torture! . . .

HÉRODIADE: Roi, souffriras-tu cette injure?
A mort! . . . A la torture!

VITELLIUS ET PHANUEL: Quoi! la mort! la torture!

HÉRODE: (profite de ce moment de confusion pour se rapprocher de Jean.) On ne peut condammer cet homme en vérité:

THE WOMEN OF JERUSALEM:
Ah, what distress, and yet what beauty!
See! see him stand there in his misfortune!
Ah, behold! Ah, he is full of majesty.

VITELLIUS (to Herod): He does not lack humility.
See, he seems in humble mood to me!
It is he! And, Herode, there is no need to be severe . . .

THE PRIESTS: King, this man but acts his misery!
That it may arouse our charity
He thinks you will not be severe
Therefore behold him all humility!

HERODIAS (to Herod): See, the rogue is all humility!
See, he's lost his old audacity!
It is he! Here he is! Behold him all humility!
He's before us at last!

PHANUEL: Is he not grand in his misfortune?
He is imbued with majesty,
He dreams of immortality!
He stands there clothed in majesty!

HEROD: Here is the man who would uplift the world!

JOHN: Pour, O Lord, into my heart the light of your faith, that my words may be fervent and fruitful. Sustain, O Lord, your advocate, for I speak for you!
(Herod, Vitellius, and Herodias take their places on the seats before the steps. The crowd is held back by the guards. Phanuel remains apart.)

HEROD (to John): Man, what is your name?

JOHN: I am John, son of Zacharias.

HEROD: Is it true that the people are stirred up by your prophecies?

JOHN: I have preached, "Peace on earth, good will towards men!"

HEROD: What weapons have you with which to establish your pretension?

JOHN: I have no arms but my words.

HEROD: What end have you in view?

JOHN: My end-is liberty!
(Clamor.)

ALL: Liberty! Liberty! Liberty!

PRIESTS: Caesar! It is death! It is torture!

HERODIAS: Will you, O King, suffer this outrage?
It is death! It is torture!

HEROD (taking advantage of the confusion, he rises and imposes silence on the crowd.) This man cannot be condemned. He is mad.

C'est un fou!

BAS, (à Jean.) Grace à moi, la foule est incertaine;
Serviras-tu mes projets et ma haine?

JEAN: (a Hérode.) Dieu n'abaisse pas son regard
Sur les complots des rois!

LES PRÊTRES: Il insulte César! A mort! à la torture!
Roi, souffriras-tu cette injure? . . .
(Avec exaltation croissante.)
Il à méconnu notre loi!
Des Juifs cet homme se dit roi!
Crucifiez ce faux Messie!
A mort! à mort! Mort à l'impie!

HÉRODIADE: Crucifiez ce faux Messie!
A mort! mort! . . . Mort à l'impie!

LA FOULE: (entraînée par la voix des prêtres.) A mort! qu'on l'attache à la croix!
Et s'il doit vivre
Nos verrons si Dieu le délivre!

HÉRODE, PHANUEL, VITELLIUS: Non! il doit vivre! Mon/ton pouvoir le délivre! . . .
(Au milieu du tumulte produit par cette scène, Salomé sort des rangs de la foule et se précipite cu-devant de Jean que les gardes du temple vont saisir.)

SALOMÉ: J'ai vécu de sa vie et mourrai de sa mort,
Laissez-moi partager son sort!

HÉRODE: (à part, à la vue de Salomé.) Malédiction! C'était lui! cet homme!
(Salomé tombe aux pieds de Jean.-La foule interdite se retourne vers elle.)

SALOMÉ: C'est Dieu que l'on te nomme,
Car il n'est pas un homme
Qui garde ta sérénité! . . .
Toi, dont la vie entière
Ne fut qu'une prière
A l'amour, à la charité!
Je veux quitter la vie,
Divin maître, ravie
Dans l'extase de ta clarté,
Loin des vaines pensées,
Nos âmes enlacées
Montent dans l'immortalité.

LA FOULE: (attirée.) Que dit-elle?
etrange mystère
Elle veut partager son sort?
Victime volontaire,
Elle affronte la mort!

(Going near to John and saying to him:) Thanks to me the people is divided. A word. Will you further my projects and my revenge?

JOHN: God does not stoop to look upon the petty plots of kings.

PRIESTS: It is insult to Caesar! To death with him! To the torture! Will you, O King, suffer this outrage? He had disregarded our laws! To death with him. Nail him to the cross; and if he is to live, let his God deliver him! Death to the imposter.

HERODIALS: Death to the impostor! Crucify this false Messiah!

THE CROWD (incited by the priests) Death to the traitor! Crucify him!
If he's to live,
Then his God must deliver!

HEROD, PHANUEL, VITELLIUS: No! He should live! My power shall deliver him./ No! He should live! Your power shall deliver him.
(Great movement in the crowd. At a signal from the Priests, the guards of the Temple advance to seize John. In the midst of the tumult, Salome comes suddenly out of the crowd and runs to John.)

SALOME: I have lived in his life; and in his death I shall die! Let me share his fate.
(Salome falls at John's feet; the crowd contemplates them in silence.)

HEROD: (aside, seeing Salome): Fool that I am! It is he that she loves, and I would have saved him.

SALOME (to John): It is a god they call you! For no man could maintain your serenity! You, whose whole life was an appeal for love, for charity! It is a god they call you. I would leave this life, Divine Master, and follow you, exalted in the ecstacy of your brightness! I would follow you! Far from vain thoughts our souls together joined, will soar upward to immortality. It is a god that they call you! God!

PEOPLE and OTHERS: Ah! What does she say? How strange a mystery!
A voluntary victim!
She faces death!

HEROD: It is he that she loves!
And I would have saved him!

PHANUEL ET VITELLIUS: Que dit-elle? O sombre mystère!
Ile veut partager son sort?
Victime volontaire,
Elle s'offre à la mort!

HÉRODIADE: Que dit-elle?
etrange mystère!
Elle veut partager son sort?
Mon coeur jaloux espère!
Pour elle, c'est la mort!

HÉRODE: C'est lui! c'est cet homme.
Qu'elle aime! Et j'allais le sauver! . . .
(Revenant à lui et s'adressant avec véhémence aux prêtres, aux Romains et à la foule.)
Prêtres, vous disiez vrai! contre César et Rome
C'est bien le peuple juif qu'il voulait soulever!
Il menaçait les grands d'un châtiment sévère,
Il prêchait la révolte aux humbles de la terre,
Et lui! . . . le saint prophète! est l'amant odieux
De Salomé, la courtisane!
Frappez-les! Frappez-Les! car ma voix les condamne!

Tous: A mort! Hérode les condamne!

HÉRODE: (s'avançant, et bas à Salomé.) Je te l'avais bien dit! vous périrez tous deux.

HÉRODIADE: (à part.) Quelle étrange pitié saisit mon âme!

PHANUEL: (à Hérodiade.) O reine!
Ton coeur est rassuré! Ta jalousie est vaine!

JEAN: (inspiré.) Vox yeux sont grands ouverts et ne voient pas le jour!
Frappez donc, frappez les apôtres
Dont le dernier soupir est un long cri d'amour!
Oui, frappez-moi! vous en lapiderez bien d'autres!
Toi, Rome, dans l'horreur des nuits
Tu veux étouffer ma prière!
Mais je vois tes palais et tes temples détruits,
Il n'en restera plus bientôt pierre sur pierre!

HÉRODE ET HÉRODIADE: Qu'ils périssent tous deux
Si la foi les inspire!
Pas de pitié pour eux . . .
Sous mes yeux qu'elle expire!

LES PRETRES ET LA FOULE:
Qu'ils périssent tous deux
Si la foi les anime!
Pas de pitié pour eux,
Non! La mort pour leur crime!

VITELLIUS AND PHANUEL: What does she say?
O dark mystery!
A voluntary victim!
She offers to die!

HERODIAS: What does she say?
She wishes to share his fate!
My jealous heart has hopes!
Death for her.

HEROD: (regaining his self-possession and speaking very forcibly to the Priest, the Romans and the Crowd). Priests! you have said what is true! He has endeavored to rouse the people against Rome and Caesar. He has threatened the mighty with dire punishments. He has preached revolt to the lowly of the earth, and he, the holy Prophet, is the vile lover of Salome the Courtesan! Slay them! Slay them. It is I who condemn them!

ALL: To death! To death! Herod has condemned them!

HEROD (to Salome): I told you that you both should perish.

HERODIAS (aside): What strange feeling of pity takes possession of my soul?

PHANUEL (to Herodias): O Queen, your jealousy is in vain; for your heart has lost its fears.

JOHN (with inspiration): Slay me, then. Kill the apostles, whose last breath is a great cry of love! Your eyes are open wide, but ye see not the light of day! Aye slay me! Many others will you also stone! And you, O Rome, you would strangle my prayers in horror and darkness! But I see your palaces and your temples overturned, and soon there shall not be left one stone upon another! Slay one! Kill the apostles-slay!

HEROD AND HERODIAS: Let them both perish! The faith that upholds them is a fresh crime. Yea, I wish them both to perish now! O Rome, they have insulted your gods! This is their crime! Let them both perish! This is their fresh crime! Let them both perish! Aye, both!

PRIESTS AND CROWD: Destroy them! Have them both put to death
It is faith's expression!
Pity not their obsession!
Have them both put to death!

LES FEMMES: Il meprise la mort,
Innocente victime!
Un Dieu puissant et fort
Le soutient et l'anime!

VITELLIUS et LES ROMAINS: Ils méprisent la mort,
Quelle foi les anime?
Ils bénissent leur sort
En dépit de leur crime.

JEAN: Que m'importe la mort?
C'est la foi qui m'inspire!
O Dieu puissant et fort,
Je bénis mon martyre!

SALOMÉ: Que m'importe la mort
C'est la foi qui m'anime,
En partageant ton sort,
O prophète sublime!

PHANUEL: Ils mésprisent la mort
Et la foi les inspire!
Quel Dieu puissant et fort
Apaise leur martyre?
(Les gardes et les serviteurs du temple entourent Jean et Salomé.)

FIN DE L'ACTE TROISIÈME.

ACTE QUATRIÈME

Premier Tableau

Un Souterrain du Temple.

Sorte de crypte creusée jusqu'au tuf sous le temple de Jérusalem; les piliers trapus qui forment les assises du temple, sont très rapprochés les uns des autres.–A gauche, sur une stèle, une lampe funéraire brûle dans une coquille de bronze faisant un demi-circle de clarté douteuse au milieu de laquelle se trouve Jean.–A droite, la vasque de la fontaine où se désaltéraient les prisonniers.

SCÈNE XIII

Jean, puis Salomé puis le Grand Prètre.

JEAN: (est assis dans une attitude de résignation contemplative.)
Ne pouvant réprimer les élans de la foi,
Leur impuissante rage à frappé ton prophète.
Seigneur, ta volonté soit faite,
Je me repose en toi!
Adieu donc, vains objets qui nous
Charment sur terre.
Salut! premiers rayons de l'immortalité!
L'infini m'appelle et m'éclaire;
Je meurs pour la justice et pour la liberté!
Je ne regrette rien de ma prison d'argile,
Fuyant l'humanité,
Je vais, calme et tranquille,
M'envelopper d'éternité!
Je ne regrette rien, et pourtant, ô faiblesse!
Je songe à cette enfant dont les traits radieux
Sont toujors presents à mes yeux,
Souvenir qui m'oppresse! . . .
O Seigneur, si je suis ton fils, dis-moi pourquoi
Tu souffres que l'amour vienne ébranler ma foi?
Et si je sors meurtri, vaincu de cette lutte,
Qui l'a permis! . . . à qui la faute de la chute?
(Avec angoisse, comme si un doute subit s'emparait de lui.)
Ah! Seigneur, suis-je bien le héraut du vrai Dieu
Et l'elu des apôtres?
Ou nes suis-je qu'un homme en tout semblable aux autres?
(Il retombe accablé. La clarté bleuâtre du temple fait tout à coup une traînée lumineuse dans le souterrain, et, enveloppée dans cette lumière, Salomé paraît.)

JEAN: (avec un cri.) Salomé!

SALOMÉ: (de même.) Jean!

JEAN: C'est toi! toi, dans ce sombre lieu!
Mais qu'as-tu donc, Salomé
. . . tu frissonnes . . .

SALOMÉ: Oui, Jean c'est de bonheur!

JEAN: Ah! c'est donc vrai,
Seigneur, que tu pardonnes?
Que je puis respirer cette enivrante fleur,
La presser sur ma bouche et murmurer: Je t'aime.
Ces mots ne sont pas un blasphème:
Tu m'as donné la voix pour te nommer,
Seigneur, et l'âme pour aimer!

SALOMÉ: Mon coeur se brise . . . et j'ai peur de l'entendre . . .
Jusqu'à moi tu veux bien descendre?

LES PRÊTRES: (dans le temple.)
Mort au prophète.

JEAN: (égaré.) Pars! enfant, pars! il le faut.

SALOMÉ: (presque bas.) C'est le supplice qui s'apprête!

JEAN: S'élever jusqu'au ciel et retomber si tôt!

LES PRETRES: Mort au prophéte!

JEAN: (avec déchirement.) Hôlas, le rêve était trop beau!
Va, fuis l'horreur de ce tombeau!

SALOMÉ: Te quitter, moi? quand le ciel nous appelle!
Ami, la mort n'est pas cruelle
Qui nous prend tous les deux et va nous réunir!
Si Dieu l'avait permis, l'âme heureuse et ravie,
A tes côtés, j'aurais passé ma vie;

WOMEN: He despises death!
He holds to his faith!
How strong in God his faith!
He despises even death!

VITELLIUS AND ROMANS: They despise death, which faith provokes that?
They praise their fate
Braving their crime!

JOHN: Blest be the martyr's pyre,
It is faith that inspires
O God, more strong than death,
Bless your martyr's pyre.

SALOME: Ah, what is death to me,
If faith be in possession!
I'll share your fate with you.
Though death mark my transgression!

PHANUEL: This faith that's in possession,
Leads to the martyr's pyre!
May God this fresh oppression
Reprove in his just ire!
(The guards of the Temple seize John and Salome.)

END OF THIRD ACT.

ACT IV

First Tableau

(A Dungeon in the Temple.)

(A sort of circular vault, arched to the top under the Temple at Jerusalem. Thick-set pillars forming the foundation of the edifice are set closely together. At the left on a stool burns a funeral lamp in a bronze stand, shedding a semicircle of faint light, in the middle of which John sits. To the right, a fountain-basin for the refreshment of prisoners.)

SCENE XIII

John, then Salome, then the High Priest.

JOHN (in an attitude of contemplative resignation). Since they could not repress the power of Thy Truth, their impotent rage has struck at Thy prophet, O Lord! Thy will be done. I trust in Thee! Farewell, then, vain things of earthly charm. Hail! Hail! first rays of immortality. The infinite calls me, and lights my way. I die for justice and for liberty! I do not regret this prison of clay, for when I leave this humanity I shall be clothed in eternity! I do not regret anything, yet, such is my weakness, I dream of that child. I dream of that child, whose radiant features are present to my eyes. Her memory weighs upon me. Ever do I dream of her! I am your son, O Lord. Why do you permit love to come to me and disturb my faith? If I should be wounded or worsted in this struggle, whose fault would be my fall? I am your son, O Lord.
(He falls, overcome.)
(The azure light of the Temple suddenly casts a luminous glow into the dungeon and enveloped in this radiance, Salome appears.)

JOHN (with a cry): Salome!

SALOME (with a cry): John!

JOHN: Is it you? You in this dismal place? But . . . what is it, Salome? You tremble!

SALOME: Yes, John with happiness.

JOHN: Ah, then it is true, O Lord, that you forgive me! That I may breathe of this intoxicating flower,
To press it to my lips, and murmur, "I love you!"
Such words are not blasphemy.
You have given a voice to pray to you, O Lord
And a soul for love!

SALOME: My heart is bursting . . .
I am afraid to listen!
And would you then stoop to me?

THE PRIESTS (in the Temple):
Death to the Prophet! Death to the Prophet!

JOHN (disturbed): Go, Salome! Go! You must!

SALOME: They are preparing for you the torture!

JOHN: Ah, to be lifted up to heaven, to fall again so soon.

THE PRIESTS: Death to the Prophet!

JOHN (in anguish): Alas! It was too fair a dream!
Go, flee from the horrors of this tomb!

SALOME: Leave you? I? When heaven is calling us? O John! I leave you? No! Never! My friend, there is no cruelty in a death that takes us both, only to reunite us! Had God permitted it, with a happy and joyous heart I could have spent my life with you. God has not willed it so.

Dieu ne l’a pas voulu; je saurai donc mourir
Près de toi, dans tes bras, ô sublime martyr!

JEAN ET SALOMÉ: (elacés dans une étreinte suprême.) Il est beau de mourir en s’aimant ma chère âme!
Quand nos jours s’éteindront comme une triste flamme,
Notre amour, dans le ciel rayonnant de clarté,
Trouvera le mystère et l’immortalité!
(Le grand prêtre paraît accompagné des gardiens de temple et des esclaves éthiopiens du Tétrarque.)

LE GRAND PRETRE: (à Jean.) Hérodiade veut qu’on te mène au supplice!
Jean! ton heure est venue . . . (à Salomé.)
Enfant, rends grâce au roi
Pour toi, pour ta jeunesse, il brave la justice
Et t’appelle au palais!

SALOMÉ: (résistant aux esclaves éthiopiens qui s’emparent d’elle.) Non! jamais! . . . Laissez-moi!

LE GRAND PRETRE: (bas à Jean.) Maintenant dis un mot: Hérode te délivre!
Il veut régner sur ce pays,
Viens le proclamer roi, viens armer tes amis,
Consens à le servir enfin . . . si tu veux vivre!

JEAN: (se livrant lui-même aux gardes du temple.) Je suis le serviteur du Dieu puissant et fort Et non du lâche Hérode! Allons, j’attends la mort.
(Il suit les gardes, pendant que les esclaves éthiopiens entraînent Salomé sur l’ordre du grand prêtre.)

Deuxieme Tableau

La Salle Du Festin.

Salle immense du palais du Proconsul. –Aux colonnes de marbre sont suspendus des trophées militaires, des boucliers d’or, des éperons de trirèmes et des lampadaires d’argent. –Les corniches des colonnes sont ornées de feurs et de guirlandes.– Un velarium aux couleurs éclatantes abrite cette salle à ciel ouvert. –A gauche au premier plan, la statue colossale, en or, de Rome.–Au fond, de vastes marches conduisent à une terrasse qui domine Jérusalem. –Au lointain l’aspect ensoleillé de la ville.

So I shall gladly die, with you, in your arms. Oh, martyrdom sublime!

JOHN AND SALOME: (Clasped in a supreme embrace.)
When our life shall be quenched, as if it were a sacred fire,
Still our love up in heaven will be more radiant.
And will solve the Unknown in immortality.
(The Chief Priest appears with the Ethiopian slaves of the Petrarch.)

HIGH PRIEST: John, your hour has come! Herodias commands that you be put to death.
(to Salome).
My child, give thanks to the King!
As for you, by reason of your youth, he waives the law, and calls you to the palace.
(The Slaves seize Salome, who resists desperately, holding out her arms to John.)

SALOME: John! No! Let me go! Never!

THE HIGH PRIEST (low to John): And now say but a word and Herod frees you!
For in this land he thinks to reign.
Proclaim him king, arm all your friends;
Serve him, in short—and life you gain!

JOHN: (placing himself voluntarily in the hands of the Guards of the Temple.) I am the servitor of God alone, not of the coward Herod!
Enough! Enough! I am ready for death!
(He follows the guards, while the black slaves drag away Salome at the command of the High Priest.)

Second Tableau

The Festival.

SCÈNE XIV

Les Romains, puis Hérode, Hérodiade, Vitellius et leur cour.

LES ROMAINS: Romains! nous sommes Romains!
A ce nom seul le monde entier frémit de crainte
Devant Jérusalem, devant la cité sainte
Arrêtons-nous en souverains!
Nos aigles d’un coup d’aile étendent notre gloire.
A travers la plaine et les mers;
Et nous parcourons l’univers
En marquant tous nos pas avec une victoire! . . .
Quel charme tout-puissant
Possèdes-tu, Patrie?
Pour toi, mere chérie,
Nous versons notre sang!
Rome, de nous sois fiere!
Et toi, Tibère,
Regarde tes enfants,
Leur front à l’auréole
Des Césars triomphants!
Nous monterons au Capitole!
Romains! nous sommes Romains!
A ce nom seul le monde entier fremit de crainte!
Devant Jérusalem, devant la cité sainte
Arrêtons-nous en souverains!
(Entree d’Hérode, d’Hérodiade et de Vitellius; on acclame le proconsul: Gloire à César!)

BALLET:
1. Les Egyptiennes.
2. Les Babyloniennes.
3. Les Gauloises.
4. Les Phéniciennes.

SCÈNE XV

Les Mêmes, Salomé, Phanuel, Le Peuple.

(Salomé, les cheveux épars et s’arrachant des mains des esclaves êthiopiens, se precipite sur la scène.)

SALOMÉ: (suppliante.) Pourquoi me retirer cette faveur suprême,
Le bonheur de mourir avec celui que j’aime?

HÉRODE: Elle me doit la vie, et c’est lui seul qu’elle aime?

HÉRODIADE: Quel trouble m’envahit! Puis-je oublier qu’il l’aime!

PHANUEL: Espère-t-elle encore sauver celui qu’elle aime!

VITELLIUS: Pourra-t-il faire grâce au prophète qu’elle aime!

LE CHOEUR: Elle espère sauver le prophète qu’elle aime!

SALOMÉ: (s’adressant à Hérode, puis à la reine.) Qu’il vive! sois clément et doux!
Salomé te prie à genoux!

SCENE XIV

The Romans, then Herod, Herodias, Vitellius and the Court.

THE ROMANS: Romans, Romans, Romans are we!
At this name alone the world trembles with fear.
Before Jerusalem, before the Holy City,
Let us halt, as conquerors!
With the strokes of their wings our eagles spread our glory
Over land and sea!
And we overrun the universe!
And mark our steps with victories!
Romans, Romans are we, etc.
For you, our mother country dear,
We pour out our blood!
Rome shall be proud of us,
And you, Father Tiber, look upon your sons!
Our brows wear the glory of triumphant Caesars!
We shall ascend to the capitol!
Romans, Romans are we!
At this name alone the world trembles with fear.
Before Jerusalem, before the Holy City,
Let us halt, as conquerors!
(Enter Vitellius, Herod and Herodias, followed by the court. The proconsul is acclaimed with shouts of, "Hail to Caesar!")

BALLET:
I. Egyptian Women.
II. Babylonian Women.
III. Women of Gaul.
IV. Phenecian Women.

SCENE XV

The Same, Salome, Phanuel, the People.

(Salome, her hair in disorder, tearing herself from the hands of the Ethiopian slaves, rushes on the stage.)

SALOME: (supplicating) Why refuse me this last favor,
The joy of dying with him I love?

HEROD: She owes her life to me; but she loves him alone!

HERODIAS: What troubles me? Can I forget that he loves her?

PHANUEL: Can she hope to save the one she loves?

VITELLIUS: Could he show mercy to the prophet whom she loves?

CHORUS: She hopes to save the Prophet!

SALOME (to Herod): Let him live! Let him live! Be kind and merciful! Salome implores you! (To Herodias:) No, it is you, I implore! O

Non! c'est toi qu'elle implore! . . . ô reine, vois mes larmes! Une femme comprend de pareilles alarmes! Pitié! si tu fus mère!	Queen, behold my tears! A woman will understand my agony! Have pity! If you ever were a mother, have pity!
HÉRODIADE: (frissonnant à ce mot.) Ah! que dis-tu . . . tais-toi! Quel souvenir! . . . c'est vrai, dieux puissants, je suis mère!	HERODIAS (trembling at the word): Ah! What do you say? Be still! What memories . . . ! It is true! Oh, ye gods! I was once a mother!
SALOMÉ: (avec des sanglots.) Si je vous fais pitié, connaissez ma misère; Laissez-vous émouvoir, ô reine! écoutez-moi! Lorsque m'abandonnait une mère inhumaine . . . C'est lui qui m'accueillit . . . et consola ma peine . . .	SALOME (with deep feeling): Save him for me! save him! If I have touched your heart, Then try to feel my pain, do not smother your pity When I was cast aside by a mother ignoble, It was he who took me in, it was he who consoled my trouble.
HÉRODIADE: Ses pleurs ont calmé ma fureur! De l'enfant oublié c'est le spectre vengeur! Qui comme cette enfant ma fille eût été belle! Sa voix me rappelle sa voix, Le remords me crie: oui, c'est elle. Il me semble que je la vois!	HERODIAS: By tears I am of rage bereft! It is a shade of revenge of the child that I left Ay, as fair as this child might now have been that other! Her voice, too, recalls me her voice! My remorse proclaims me her mother! Ay, as fair as this child might have been that other!
SALOMÉ (douloureusement.) Pour un hymen infâme. Ma mère, je l'ai su . . . Ma mère à brise l'âme Du pauvre enfant perdu! . . .	SALOME (with deep grief): To make an infamous alliance my mother, oh, I knew of it, my mother crushed the soul of her poor lost child.
HÉRODIADE: Elle maudit sa mère! Je lui tendais les bras, Mais non, je veux me taire, Je ne parlerai pas!	HERODIAS: But no, I must beware. Alas! that she should curse her mother! To her my arms I'd strain. Yet silent I remain! That she should curse her mother!
SALOMÉ: Connaissez ma misère, Laissez-vous émouvoir! Reine, vous fûtes mère, Voyez mon désespoir!	SALOME: Ah, try to feel my pain, And look on my despair! Be kind! My tears are falling! O look on my despair.
HÉRODE: Au bonheur que j'espère En vain je tends les bras, A toi ma vie entière Enfant! ne t'en va pas!	HEROD: I stretch my arms to you! My child, fly not again! With you I'd share my life! Fly not again, I love you child, I give my life to you!-Come! ah, come!
VITELLIUS, PHANUEL: Grâce pour sa misère, Voyez son dèsespoir! Reine, vous fûtes mere, Laissez-vous émouvoir!	VITELLIUS AND PHANUEL: Ah, let your heart be moved, And try to feel her pain And her despair! Ah, look, look on her pain! Ah, save his life for her!
SALOMÉ: Reine! . . . laissez-le vivre! Parlez! qu'on le délivre . . . (Au moment où Hérodiade, hèsitante, émue, va céder aux supplications de Salomé, le bourreau paraît au fond, sur le haut de la terrasse, tenant à la main le glaive teint de sang.)	SALOME: Queen! spare his life! Speak! and deliver him . . . (Herodias, hesitating and moved, is about to yield to Salome's supplications, when the Executioner appears at the back on the terrace, holding in this hand a sword dripping with blood.)
SALOMÉ: (avec un cri terrible.) Ah!	SALOME (with a terrible cry): Ah!
LE CHOEUR: (atterré.) Le prophète est mort!	ALL: The Prophet is dead!
SALOMÉ: (fait un effort désespéré tire un poignard de sa ceinture et se précipite sure Hérodiade.) Il est mort de ta main . . . Tu mourras donc aussi! . . . Tu m'implores en vain!	SALOME: (with a frantic effort drawing a dager from her girdle and flinging herself upon Herodias). He is slain by your hand! And you shall die as well!
HÉRODIADE: (recule épouvantée.) Pitié! je suis ta mère!	HERODIAS: Mercy! I am your mother!
SALOMÉ: Ah! reine détestée, S'il est vrai que tes flancs odieux m'aient portée, Tiens! reprends ton sang et ma vie. (Elle se frappe.)	SALOME: Ah, hated Queen, if it be true that it was your odious womb that bore me . . . Here! take back your blood and my life. (She stabs herself and dies.)
HÉRODE: Ah! morte! Horreur!	HEROD: Salome, dead!
HÉRODIADE: Ma fille! morte!	HERODIAS: My daughter!
LE CHOEUR: O jour de rage et de terreur!	CHORUS: O day of horror!
FIN.	END.

Werther (1892)

MUSIC BY JULES MASSENET ■ LIBRETTO BY EDOUARD BLAU, PAUL MILLIET & GEORGES HARTMANN ■ BASED ON GOETHE'S LEIDEN DES JUNGEN WERTHERS

This four-act drame lyrique, set to a libretto by Edouard Blau, Paul Milliet and Georges Hartmann is based on Goethe's Lieden des jungen Werthers, and premiered at the Hofoper in Vienna on February 16, 1892. In Wetzlar, near Frankfurt, during the year 1780, the burgomaster, whose wife has died, is teaching his children a Christmas carol when Johann and Schmidt enter with an invitation to dinner. However, his eldest daughter, Charlotte, is going to a ball and he must stay home with the other children. Werther, Charlotte's escort, arrives; Albert, Charlotte's fiance, returns unexpectedly, disappointed not to find her at home, but Sophie, the next eldest daughter, tells him that her sister has not forgotten about him. Werther confesses his love to Charlotte. But, the burgomaster calls out, announcing Albert's return, and she tells Werther that she gave her word to her dying mother that she would marry Albert. Werther goes off, deeply disappointed. In the town square, at the celebrations for the golden wedding anniversary of the village Pastor, Johann and Schmidt make a toast to Albert and Charlotte; they have been married for the past three months. Werther watches from a distance, unconsolable. Albert tells Werther how happy he is and suggests that Sophie might be of interest to him. Werther goes to see Charlotte, who pleads with him to stay away until Christmas. Werther considers killing himself. Sophie asks him to dance; he turns her down, saying he is going to go away and never come back. She bursts into tears. On Christmas Eve, Charlotte rereads Werther's letters. She misses him terribly and cannot hide this fact from Sophie. At Charlotte's window, Werther recites some Ossian, which he translated especially for her. Moved to tears, she lets him kiss her and then runs away from him, vowing never to set eyes on him again. Albert suspects Werther's visit. A servant delivers a note from Werther, asking to borrow Albert's pistols. Albert tells Charlotte to give them to the servant, and she is afraid that Werther might shoot himself. She finds him in his room, mortally wounded, and she tells him that she has loved him ever since they met. As he dies in her arms, the faint sound of children singing a Christmas carol can be heard.

■ ACTE PREMIER	■ ACT I
SCÈNE I	SCENE I
LE BAILLI: (grondant) Assez! Assez! . . . Va-t-on m'écouter cette fois? Recommençons! . . . surtout pas trop de voix!	BAILLIE. Enough! Enough! Will you listen to me this time? Begin again. Above all not too loud.
LES ENFANTS: (chantant très fort et sans nuances.) Noël! Jésus vient de naître, Voici notre divin maître . . .	CHILDREN SING: Christmas! Jesus came this day, To lead us in the heavenly way!
LE BAILLI: (se fâchant) Non! ça n'est pas cela! Osez-vous chanter de la sorte Quand votre soeur Charlotte est là! Elle doit vous entendre au travers de la porte! (Les enfants ont paru tout émus au nom de Charlotte. Ils reprennent le Noël avec gravité.)	BAILLIE: No, it's not that! How dare you sing that way when your sister Charlotte is there? She'll hear you through the door.
LES ENFANTS: Noël! Jésus vient de naître, Voici notre divin maître, Rois et bergers d'Israël! Des anges gardiens fidèles, Dans le firmament, Ont ouvert leurs grandes ailes Et s'en vont partout chantant: Noël!	CHILDREN SING: Christmas! Jesus came this day, To lead us in the heavenly way. Israel's king and shepherds all Heard the startled Magis call— Stir the firmament! All the world its offering brings When the Christmas carol rings. Christmas!
LE BAILLI: C'est bien! Jésus vient de naître! Voici notre divin maître . . . (Johann et Schmidt, qui s'étaient arrêtés pour écouter les enfants, sont entrés dans la cour.)	BAILLIE: That's good. Christmas! Jesus came this day. To lead us in the heavenly way.
SCÈNE II	SCENE II
Les Mêmes, Johann et Schmidt.	(Enter Johann and Schmidt.)
JOHANN: Bravo pour les enfants!	JOHANN: Bravo for the children!
SCHMIDT: Bravo pour le couplet!	SCHMIDT: Bravo for the rhyme!
LES ENFANTS: (accourant joyeusement.) Ah! monsieur Schmidt! monsieur Johann!	CHILDREN: Ah! Herr Schmidt! Herr Johann!
JOHANN: (au bailli.) Eh! mais j'y pense! Vous chantez Noël en juillet, Bailli, c'est s'y prendre à l'avance!	JOHANN: Eh?–but I think when you sing of Christmas in July, you rush the season.
LE BAILLI: Cela te fait rire, Johann; mais quoi! Tout le monde n'est pas artiste comme toi; Et ce ne sont point bagatelles Que d'apprendre le chant à ces jeunes cervelles! (Entrée de Sophie.)	BAILLE: That makes you laugh, Johann; but why? All the world is not as artistic as I am, and it's a mere bagatelle when I teach children.
SCÈNE III	SCENE III
Les Mêmes, Sophie.	(Enter Sophie)
SCHMIDT: Bonjour, Sophie! . . . Eh! eh! Charlotte n'est pas loin!	SCHMIDT: Good day, Sophia! Eh? but Charlotte isn't far off.

SOPHIE: (lui faisant une révérence.)
En effet, monsieur Schmidt, puisque nous prenons Charlotte et moi, de la famille.

JOHANN: (au bailli) Ah! Ce superbe temps Viens-tu?

LE BAILLI: Dans un instant.

SOPHIE: (à Johann.) Ma sœur s'habille
Pour le bal . . .

LE BAILLI: (se retournant, à Schmidt) Oui, le bal d'amis et de parents Que l'on donne à Wetzlar . . . On vient prendre Charlotte.

SCHMIDT: C'est donc cela! . . . Keeffel a mis sa redingote,
Steiner a retenu le cheval du brasseur,
Hoffmann a sa calèche et Goulden sa berline . . .
Enfin, monsieur Werther m'a paru moins rêveur!

LE BAILLI: (à ses deux amis.) Fort bien, ce jeune homme!

JOHANN: Oui, mais pas fort en cuisine!

LE BAILLI: (insistant) Il est instruit, très distingué.

SCHMIDT: (vivement) Un peu mélancolique . . .

JOHANN: Ah! certes! jamais gai!

LE BAILLI: (poursuivant son idée.) Le Prince lui promet, dit-on, une ambassade!
Il l'estime et lui veut du bien . . .

JOHANN: (avec mépris.) Un diplomate! Ah! bah! ça ne vaut rien
A table.

SCHMIDT: (de même) Ça ne sait pas boire une rasade!

JOHANN: (au bailli, en lui tendant les mains) A tout-à-l'heure, au Raisin d'Or.

SCHMIDT: (de même) Oui, tu nous dois une revanche.

LE BAILLI: (se récriant) Encore!

JOHANN: Dame! . . . et puis c'est le jour des écrevisses . . .
Grosses comme le bras . . . Gretchen nous l'a promis.

LE BAILLI: Oh! les gourmands! les deux complices!
(Cédant un peu.)
Vous n'attendez donc pas Charlotte, mes amis?

SCHMIDT: (à Johann) Nous la verrons ce soir, nous voulons faire
Un petit tour sur le rempart.

LE BAILLI: (souriant, à Johann)
Pour t'ouvrir l'appétit? . . .

SOPHIE: We are looking for the family, Herr Schmidt, Charlotte and I.

JOHANN: Ah, this is lovely weather. Will you come now?

BAILLIE: In a moment.

SOPHIE: My sister is dressing for the ball.

BAILLIE: Yes; the family ball which they are giving at Wetzlar. They are coming for Charlotte.

SCHMIDT: That's it. Keeffel has put on his frock coat. Steiner has hired the brewer's horse. Hoffman has his carriage, Goulden, his. In fact, Herr Werther seems less dreamy.

BAILLE: The young man is well enough.

JOHANN: Yes, but he is not much of a cook.

BAILLIE: He is well educated—well mannered.

SCHMIDT: A little melancholy.

JOHANN: He is certainly never very lively.

BAILLIE: They say that the Prince promised him an embassy. He esteems him, and wishes him well.

JOHANN: A diplomat. Bah That's no good at the dinner-table.

SCHMIDT: He does not know how to drink a bumper.

JOHANN: See you later, Baillie, at the Golden Grapes.

SCHMIDT: Yes, you owe us our revenge, you know.

BAILLIE: What, still?

JOHANN: Why not? Besides, this is crayfish day—big as your arm, Gretchen promised us.

BAILLIE: Oh, the gluttons! They are of a kind. Won't you wait for Charlotte, then, my friends?

SCHMIDT: We shall see her this evening. Johann and I are going to take a turn on the ramparts.

BAILLIE: (to Johann). To give you an appetite?

JOHANN: (à Schmidt) Toujours il exagère . . .
Allons, viens; il est tard!

SCHMIDT: (revenant, au bailli) A propos, quand Albert revient-il?

LE BAILLI: Je l'ignore:
Il ne m'en parle pas encore,
Mais il m'écrit que ses affaires vont au mieux.

SCHMIDT: Parfait! Albert est un garçon brave et fidèle;
C'est un mari modèle
Pour ta Charlotte; et nous, les vieux,
Nous danserons à perdre haleine
A la noce prochaine.

JOHANN: (gaiement) Eh! bon soir! les enfants!

SCHMIDT: (au bailli, plus bas) A tantôt!

LE BAILLI: (et les enfants) Au revoir!
(Les deux hommes s'en vont bras dessus bras dessous en chantant un refrain bacchique: Vivat Bacchus semper vivat!)

SCÈNE IV

Le Bailli, Sophie, Les Enfants, puis Werther.

LE BAILLI: (aux enfants) Rentrez! nous redirons notre Noël ce soir, Avant goûter, note par note!
Sophie, il faut aller voir ce que fait Charlotte.
(Sophie sort)
(Werther, accompagné d'un jeune paysan, s'avance dans la cour et regarde curieusement la maison.)

WERTHER: (au paysan) Alors, c'est bien ici
La maison du bailli? . . .
(Congédiant son guide.)
Merci.

WERTHER: (seul, pénètre plus avant dans la cour et s'arrête devant la fontaine.) Je ne sais si je veille ou si je rêve encore:
Tout ce qui m'environne a l'air d'un paradis;
Le bois soupire ainsi qu'une harpe sonore:
Un monde se révèle à mes yeux éblouis.
O nature, plein de grâce,
Reine du temps et de l'espace,
Daigne accueillit celui qui passe
Et te salue, humble mortel!
Mystérieux silence! ô calme solennel!
Tout m'attire et me plaît! ce mur, et ce coin sombre,
Cette source limpide et la fraîcheur de l'ombre;
Il n'est pas une haie, il n'est pas un buisson
Où n'éclose une fleur, où ne passe un frisson.

JOHANN: (to Schmidt). How that man exaggerates. Come along; it's late.

SCHMIDT: When does Albert come back?

BAILLIE: I don't know. He says nothing about it in his letters. But he writes me that his business is going on well.

SCHMIDT: Glad to hear it. Albert is a good fellow. There's a model husband for your Charlotte, and we old fellows will dance ourselves breathless at the wedding.

JOHANN: Well, good-night, children.

SCHMIDT: See you later.

BAILLIE AND CHILDREN: Until we meet again.
(Exeunt Schmidt and Johann.)

SCENE IV

BAILLIE: (to the children) Come, children, we'll sing over our Christmas carol this evening before supper, note by note. Sophie, go and see what Charlotte is doing. (Exit.)

WERTHER: (appears with a peasant). Well, here we are at the Baillie's house.
(Dismisses guide.)

GUIDE: Thanks.

WERTHER: I know not if I sleep or wake!
I seem to move in Paradise,
The winds make soft music.
A new world meets my eyes.
Oh, nature full of grace—
Queen who reigns on high
Bend your beauteous face—
On me—a passer-by.
Mysterious silence! brooding peace.
That lurks within this shadowy dell;
Beneath these trees one finds release,
From worldly sorrows' sodden spell!
There's not a bush but hides a flower;
The whole scene breathes of spring—the hour.
Oh, Nature
Eternal mother, ever young,
Defend me. Sun, that shines so red,

Mère éternellement jeune, nature, adorable et pure
Enivre-moi de tes parfums! et toi, soleil,
Viens m'inonder de ton rayon vermeil!
(Voix des enfants, dans l'intérieur de la maison, répétant le Noël.)
Oh! chers enfants! . . . Autant notre vie est amère
Autant leurs jours sont pleins de foi,
Leurs âmes pleines de lumière!
Ah! comme ils sont meilleurs que moi!

Fling down your blessings over my head.
(Children sing.)
Children, with childhood's golden love,
With faithful voices fresh and glad
Would I could pray the God above,
To give me back the faith I had.

SCÈNE V

Les Mêmes, puis Charlotte.

LES ENFANTS: Charlotte! Charlotte!

CHARLOTTE: (au bailli) Eh bien! père,
Etes-vous content d'eux?

LE BAILLI: Content, content! ce n'est pas merveilleux.

LES ENFANTS: (entourant Charlotte) Si! père est très content!

LE BAILLI: (embrassant sa fille et admirant sa toillette) Comme te voilà belle, Mignonne!

LES ENFANTS: Oh! mais c'est vrai!

LE BAILLI: (prenant les mains de Charlotte) Venez, mademoiselle!
Qu'on vous regarde . . . nos amis seront jaloux.

CHARLOTTE: (souriante) Nos amis ne sont pas exacts au rendez-vous.
Voilà ce dont je suis bien sûre;
Et j'en vais profiter
Pour donner le goûter
Aux enfants.

LE BAILLI: Hâte-toi, car j'entends la voiture!

LES ENFANTS: Merci, grande sœur! . . .

LE BAILLI: (apercevant Werther et allant au-devant de lui) Ah! monsieur Werther!
Vous venez visiter mon petit ermitage . . .
Mieux . . . mon petit royaume, et j'eu suis vraiment fier.
(Lui présentant Charlotte)
Ma fille, qui prend soin de ce ménage
Et de tous ces enfants gâtés
Depuis le jour où leur mère nous a quittés.

CHARLOTTE: Pardonnez-moi, monsieur, de m'être fait attendre,
Mais je suis, en effet, une maman très tendre,
Et mes enfants exigent que ma main
Leur coupe chaque jour leur pain.

SCENE V

(Enter Charlotte.)

CHILDREN: Charlotte! Charlotte!

CHARLOTTE: Well, father, are you pleased with the children?

BAILLIE: Yes, yes; it's not wonderful.

CHILDREN: Yes, father is satisfied.

BAILLIE: How lovely you are, pet.

CHILDREN: Oh yes, indeed.

BAILLIE: Come when they see you, our friends will be jealous.

CHARLOTTE: Our friends are not punctual, evidently, and I shall take advantage of their absence to give the children their supper.

BAILLIE: Make haste I hear the carriage.

CHILDREN: Thank you, sister.

BAILLIE: (sees Werther). Ah, Herr Werther! You have to see my little hermitage, or rather my little kingdom. I am very proud of it. My daughter and housekeeper has had charge of these spoiled little ones since the mother left us.

CHARLOTTE: Pardon me, sir, if I have made you wait, but I am a tender mother, and my children insist that their daily bread and butter must be cut by me.

SCÈNE VI

Werther, Charlotte, Le Bailli, Sophie, Les Invités.

LE BAILLI: Arrivez donc, Brülhmann! Charlotte est prête; On vous attend! . . .
(Brülhmann et Kathchen marchent côte à côte.)

BRÜLHMANN: (avec un soupir d'extase) Klopstock! . . .

KATCHEN: (avec ravissement) Divin Klopstock! . . .

LE BAILLI: (à Brûlhmann) Bavard!
Vous direz le reste à la fête . . .
Un aussi long discours vous mettrait en retard.

CHARLOTTE: (à l'enfant) Embrasse ton cousin! . . .

WERTHER: (se redressant. étonné) Cousin? suis-je bien digne
De ce nom? . . .

CHARLOTTE: (enjouée) En effet, c'est un honneur insigne,
Mais nous en avons taut qu'il serait bien fâcheux
Que vous fussiez le plus mauvais d'entre eux.
(A Sophie, avec autorité, mais sans sévérité, en lui montrant les enfants.)
Tu me remplaceras, Sophie;
Tu le sais, je te les confie . . .
(Aux enfants.)
Vous serez tous sages comme avec moi.

SOPHIE: Oui, mais ils aimeraient bien mieux que ce fût toi.

WERTHER: (avec extase, tandis que Charlotte embrasse les enfants) O spectacle idéal d'amour et d'innocence,
Où mon cœur et mes yeux sont ravis à la fois!
Quel rêve de passer une entière existence
Calmé par ses regards et bercé par sa voix!

LE BAILLI: (saluant Werther) Monsieur Werther . . .
(A Charlotte.)
Adieu, ma chérie . . .

CHARLOTTE: Adieu, père! . . .
(Charlotte et Werther s'éloignent, suivis d'un groupe d'invités; Brülhmann et Kathchen s'en vont les derniers sans avoir dit une parole.)

LE BAILLI: (les regardent en souriant.) Ne souhaitons rien à ceux-là!
L'extase magnétique!
Klopstock! divin Klopstock! cela
Me paraît sans réplique!
(Sophie a fait rentrer les enfants dans la maison.)

SCENE VI

BAILLIE: Come along, Brülhmann, Charlotte is ready. You are waited for.
(Brülhmann and Kathchen enter.)

BRÜLHMANN: (with a bit of ecstasy in his voice) Klopstock!

KATCHEN: Divine Klopstock!

BAILLIE: Charlotte! You can tell us the rest at the festival. Such a long discourse will delay us now.

CHARLOTTE: Kiss your cousin.

WERTHER: Cousin?—am I indeed worthy of that name?

CHARLOTTE: Really, it's a great honor! We have so many cousins that it would be a pity if you were the worst in the lot. Take my place, Sophie. I trust the children to you. Children, you must be as good as though you were with me.

SOPHIE: Yes, but they'd rather have you with them.

WERTHER: Visions so holy, sent from the skies
My heart is enraptured, my senses beguiled.
A man might live on for the light of your eyes,
And count the world better and bright when you smiled.

BAILLIE: Adieu, Herr Werther. (To Charlotte) Adieu, my dear one.

CHARLOTTE: Adieu, father.
(Exeunt omnes, except the Baillies.)

BAILLIE: We needn't waste our wishes on those two, They're in a magnetic ecstasy. Klopstock! Divine Klopstock! Even you could add nothing to their bliss.
(Enter Sophie.)

SCÈNE VII

Le Bailli, puis Sophie.

SCENE VII

SOPHIE: Et qui donc a promis d'aller au Raisin d'Or?

LE BAILLI: (d'un ton embarrassé.) Qui? moi, te laisser seule . . .

SOPHIE: Eh bien! . . .

LE BAILLI: Non!

SOPHIE: (gravemeut.) Je l'exige!
Schmidt et Johann doivent t'attendre encore.

LE BAILLI: (se laissant convaincre, et prenant le chapeau et la canne des mains de Sophie.) Rien qu'un moment alors . . .
(Il s'éloigne, puis se retournant, à Sophie.)
Au fait, promesse oblige!

SCÈNE VIII

Albert, Sophie.

ALBERT: Sophie!

SOPHIE: Albert! toi de retour?

ALBERT: Oui, moi, petite sœur, bonjour!
(Il l'embrasse.)

SOPHIE: Que Charlotte sera contente
De te revoir!

ALBERT: Elle est ici?

SOPHIE: Non, pas ce soir,
Elle qui jamais ne s'absente!
Aussi pourquoi n'as-tu prévenu?

ALBERT: J'ai voulu la surprendre . . .
Parle-moi d'elle, au moins; il me tarde d'apprendre
Si de moi l'on s'est souvenu?
Car c'est bien long, six mois d'absence!

SOPHIE: Chez nous, aux absents chacun pense,
Et n'es-tu pas, d'ailleurs, son fiancé?

ALBERT: (joyeux.) O chère enfant! . . . Et que s'est-il passé?

SOPHIE: Rien! . . . On s'est occupé de votre mariage . . .
On y dansera, dis?

ALBERT: Beaucoup . . . et davantage!
Oui, je veux que pour tous, il y ait du bonheur;
Ah! j'en ai tant au fond du coeur!
Va! rentre.. j'ai peur qu'on t'appelle
Et qu'on apprenne mon retour:
N'en dis rien, je serai prè d'elle
Dès le lever du jour.

SOPHIE: (restant) A demain monsieur mon beau-frère.
(Elle ferme la porte vitrèe.)

SCENE IX

ALBERT: (seul) Elle m'aime . . . elle pense à moi!..
quelle prière
De reconnaissance et d'amour

SOPHIE: And your promise to go to the Golden Grapes?

BAILLIE: What! Leave you alone?

SOPHIE: That's all right.

BAILLIE: No

SOPHIE: I insist on it Schmidt and Johann will wait for you.

BAILLIE: Well! Only for a moment. If it was not for my promise—
(Exit.)
(Albert enters.)

SCENE VIII

ALBERT: Sophie!

SOPHIE: Albert—you are back?

ALBERT: Yes, my little sister. How are you?

SOPHIE: Charlotte will be delighted to see you again.

ALBERT: She is here?

SOPHIE: No, not this evening, she who is never away– why didn't you let us know you were coming?

ALBERT: I wanted to surprise you. Tell me of her, at least. I can hardly believe that she has thought of me. How long I have been away! Six months!

SOPHIE: Our thoughts go ever to the absent, and are you not, besides, her betrothed?

ALBERT: Oh, dear child! Now, what news is there?

SOPHIE: None. Every one talks of your marriage. Will there be dancing?

ALBERT: Plenty. And more. Yes, I wish every one to have a good time! Ah I have so much hidden in my heart. There, go in. I am afraid that you are called and that they suspect I am here. Say nothing. I shall be with her early tomorrow.

SOPHIE: Tomorrow, my dear brother-in-law.
(Exit.)

SCENE IX

ALBERT: She loves me! She thinks of me: What a prayer of thankfulness and love rises to my lips Ah! When one returns after an absence, Monte de mon cœur à ma bouche!

Ah! comme à l'heure du retour
Un rien nous émeut et nous touche.
Et comme tout possède un charme!
Je voudrais qu'en rentrant
Charlotte retrouvât les pensers que je laisse:
Tout mon espoir et toute ma tendresse!
(Il s'éloigne.)

SCENE X.

Charlotte et Werther paraissent à la porte du jardin.

CHARLOTTE: Il faut nous séparer.
Voici notre maison:
C'est l'heure du sommeil.

WERTHER: Ah! pourvu que je voie
Ces yeux toujours; ces yeux, mon horizon,
Ces doux yeux, mon espoir et mon unique joie,
Que m'importe à moi le sommeil!
Les étoiles et le soleil
Peuvent bien dans le ciel tour à tour reparaître,
J'ignore s'il est jour, s'il est nuit, et mon être
Demeure indifférent à ce qui n'est pas toi!

CHARLOTTE: (souriant.) Mais vous ne savez rien de moi.

WERTHER: Mon âme a rencontré votre âme.
Je vous ai vue assez
Pour savoir quelle femme
Vous êtes!

CHARLOTTE: Vous me connaissez?

WERTHER: (grave et tendre).
Vous êtes la meilleure ainsi que la plus belle
Des créatures . . .

CHARLOTTE: (confuse) Non!..

WERTHER: Faut-il que j'en appelle
A ceux que vous nommez vos enfants?

CHARLOTTE: (pensive et se rapprochant de Werther.) Hélas!
oui . . .
Mes enfants . . . vous avez dit vrai!.. C'est que l'image
De ma mère est présente à tout le monde ici.
Et pour moi, je crois voir sourire son visage
Quand je prends soin de ses enfants . . . de mes enfants.
Ah! je souhaiterais que dans cette demeure
Elle revînt et vît, an moins quelques instants,
Si je tiens les serments faits à la dernière heure.
Chère, chère maman, que ne peux-tu nous voir?

WERTHER: O Charlotte, ange devoir,
La bénédiction du ciel sur toi repose!

how everything interests, touches one and possesses a penetrating charm. I wish that when we meet, Charlotte could know all the thoughts that I have had of her, all my hopes and all my tenderness.
(Exit.)

SCENE X

(Enter Charlotte and Werther.)

CHARLOTTE: Our ways divide; here is our house. It is time for sleep.

WERTHER: Asleep–and can it be your eyes
With lids downcast in slumber deep.
Can so conceal their dear blue skies?
I cannot think of them–asleep.
The golden sun may cease to shine,
The stars to sparkle over the sea
I only know those eyes of yours
Are sun and stars and sky to me.

CHARLOTTE: But you know nothing of me.

WERTHER: 'Tis fate I have seen you; It is enough to make me know you

CHARLOTTE: You know–

WERTHER: That you are the best and the most beautiful of women.

CHARLOTTE: No!

WERTHER: Shall I call the little ones you call yours to testify?

CHARLOTTE: My children? You say truly. They recall the image of my mother. I seem to see her smiling above me when I am caring for them–for my children. Ah I wish that she could come back to this old dwelling, if only for an instant to see that I have kept my oath made in her last hour. Dear, dear mother, if you could only see us.

WERTHER: Oh, Charlotte, angel of devotion. The blessings of Heaven be upon you.

CHARLOTTE: Si vous l'aviez connue!..Ah! la cruelle chose De voir ainsi partir ce qu'on a de plus cher!
Quels tendres souvenirs et quel regret amer!
Pourquoi tout est-il périssable?
Les enfants ont senti cela très vivement;
Ils demandent souvent, d'un ton inconsolable,
Pourquoi les hommes noirs ont emporté maman.

WERTHER: Douce extase! ô bonheur! Je donnerais ma vie
Pour garder à jamais ces yeux, ce front charmant,
Cette bouche adorable, étonnée et ravie,
Sans que nul à son tour les contemple un moment! . . . Le céleste sourire!..Je vous aime et je vous admire!

CHARLOTTE: Nous sommes fous! . . . rentrons!

WERTHER: (d'une voix altérée et la retanant.) Mais nous nous reverron? . . . (Voix du bailli appellant: Charlotte!)

SCENE XI

Werther, Charlotte, Le Bailli:

LE BAILLI: (accourant, monte rapidement les marches de la terrasse et disparaît dans la maison.) Charlotte! . . . Albert est de retour! . . .

WERTHER: (dans le plus grand trouble.) Ah! votre père . . . Ce retour et ce nom! . . .

CHARLOTTE: (à demi voix.) Oui; celui que ma mère M'a fait jurer d'accepter pour époux. Dieu n'est témoin qu'un instant, près de vous, J'oubliai le serment que ce nom me rappelle.

WERTHER: A ce serment restez fidèle! . . . Moi, j'en mourrai, Charlotte! . . . (Charlotte, qui a gravi les marches du perron. se retourne une dernière fois avant de disparaître à son tour dans la maison.)

WERTHER: (seul, désespéré.) Un autre son époux!

ACTE DEUXIÈME

SCENE I

A Wetzlar.

Johann et Schmidt ensemble et le verre en main.

CHARLOTTE: If you had seen her fluttering breath
Die out at last! Her gentle brow
Grow cold and white and stern in death–
You'd weep–you'd weep as I do now.
Ah Why must all things fade?
My little sisters cannot see
Why death is such a mystery.

WERTHER: Oh ecstasy Oh, dream divine–
If I were yours and you were mine?
How pure, how fair you are.
Your little tender mouth, your eyes–
They speak to me of Paradise,
Of love–the guiding star.

CHARLOTTE: We are mad! Let us part!

WERTHER: But we must meet again?
(Baillie's voice is heard: Charlotte!)

SCENE XI

BAILLIE: Charlotte! Albert has come back.

WERTHER: Ah, your father. The return of whom–

CHARLOTTE: He whom my mother made me promise to accept for my husband. God witnessed, but for a moment, that I forgot my sacred oath in your presence. The name of Albert now recalls it.

WERTHER: If you keep that oath, Charlotte, I shall die.
(Charlotte exit.)

WERTHER: (alone). Another–to be her husband.
(Curtain.)

ACT II

SCENE I

(At Wetzlar.)

JOHANN: L'admirable journée!
De ce joyeux soleil, j'ai l'âme illuminée!
Qu'il est doux de vivre, quand l'air
Est si léger, le ciel si bleu, le vin si clair!

SCHMIDT: Allez! chautez l'office et que l'orgue résonne!
De bénir le Seigneur, il est bien des façons.
Moi je le glorifie en exaltant ses dons.

JOHANN: Oui, gloire à Celui qui nous donne
De si bon vin et fait l'existence si bonne!
Du monde! encore du monde! on vient de tous côtés!
Le pasteur verra bien fêté
Ses cinquante ans de mariage!

SCHMIDT: C'est bon pour un pasteur cinquante ans de ménage.
Dieu le soutient! Mais moi, je n'aurais pu jamais
En supporter autant . . .
(Charlotte et Albert paraissent.)

JOHANN: Et cependant j'en sais
Qui ne s'effraieraient guère
De semblable félicité.
(Les désignant.)
Tieus! ceux-là, par exemple!..

SCHMIDT: Eh bien! à leur santé
Allous vider encore un verre!
(Ils rentrent tous les deux dans la Wirthschaft.)

SCENE II

Albert, Charlotte.

ALBERT: (avec tendresse.) Trois mois! voici trois mois que nous sommes unis!
Ils ont passé bien vite et pourtant il me semble
Que nous avons vécu toujours ensemble!

CHARLOTTE: (doucement.) Albert!

ALBERT: Si vous saviez comme je vous bénis!
Mais moi, de cette jeune fille,
Que naguère entourait
Tant de calme bonheur au foyer de famille,
Ai-je fait une femme heureuse et sans regret?

CHARLOTTE: Quand une femme a près d'elle à toute heure
Et l'esprit le plus droit et l'âme la meilleure
Que pourrait-elle regretter?

ALBERT: Ah! la douce parole et comme à l'écouter
Je me sens tout heureux et j'ai l'âme ravie!
(Ils sortent.)

JOHANN: What a charming day! I love this sunshine. Ah Life is a pleasant thing when the air is so balmy, the sky so blue, and the wine so pure.

SCHMIDT: Go on! Sing the office while the organ sounds! It is a good thing to praise the Lord. I glory in extolling his gifts.

JOHANN: Yes, let us praise Him who has given us good wine and a pleasant life. Ah! people come from every side to gaily celebrate the pastor's golden wedding.

SCHMIDT: It's a good thing for a pastor to be fifty years married: the Lord favors it. As for me, I couldn't stand it so long.
(Charlotte and Albert appear.)

JOHANN: And yet married life is not always war under the semblance of felicity. As for instance (pointing to Charlotte and Albert), those two.

SCHMIDT: Good Let us drink to their health. We'll empty another glass.
(Exit.)

SCENE II

ALBERT: Three months! Three months since our union. They have passed quickly, and yet it seems to me that we have always been together.

CHARLOTTE: Albert!

ALBERT: If you only knew how I bless you! But the young girl, but lately surrounded with all happiness in her own family, have I made her contented without regret?

CHARLOTTE: When a woman has always with her the sense of doing right, of loving what is good, what should she regret?

ALBERT: Ah when I hear you talk like that it makes me very happy and delights my soul.
(Exit.)

SCENE III

WERTHER: Un autre est son époux! Ô Dieu, Dieu de bonté,
Si tu m'avais permis de marcher dans la vie
Avec cet ange à mon côté,
Mon existence entière
N'aurait jamais été
Qu'une ardente prière . . .
Et maintenant, parfois, j'ai peur de blasphémer!
(Douloureusement.)
C'est moi qu'elle pouvait aimer!
J'aurais pressé sur ma poitrine
La plus belle, la plus divine
Créature que Dieu lui-même ait su former!
C'est moi qu'elle pouvait aimer!
Lorsque s'ouvrait le ciel qui s'illumine
Soudain. je l'ai vu se fermer! C'est moi qu'elle pouvait aimer!
Tout mon corps en frissonne, et tout mon être en pleure!

SCENE IV

Werther, Johann, Schmidt, Brülhmann.
(Johann et Schmidt reparaissent sur le seuil de la Wirthschaft.)

SCHMIDT: (à Brülhmann.)
Si . . . Kathchen reviendra, je vous dis! . . . A quelle heure.
Et quel jour aura lieu ce retour
Qu importe, elle reviendra . . .

JOHANN: Tu l'entends!
Des fiancailles de sept ans
Ca ne peut pas s'oublier de la sorte!

SCHMIDT: Dépêchons! j'entends le signal . . .
Si nous manquons l'office, au moins, ouvrons le bal!
(Ils sortent, en trébuchant.)

SCENE V

Werther, Albert.

ALBERT: Au bonheur qui remplit mon âme,
Ami, parfois il vient se mêler un remord.

WERTHER: (étonné.) Un remord?

ALBERT: (avec franchise.) Je vous sais un cœur loyal et fort;
Mais celle qui devint mas femme
Vous apparût un jour
Qu'elle était libre encore, et peut-être près d'elle
Avez-vous fait un rêve envolé sans retour!
A la voir si douce et si belle,
Je connais trop le prix du bien qui m'est donné
Pour ne comprendre pas que sa perte est cruelle . . .
Comprende ce tourment, c'est l'avoir pardonné . . .

SCENE III

WERTHER: Wedded to another Oh, God of mercy if you had permitted me to pass my life with such an angel by my side, my whole existence would have been one prayer. And now there are times when I fear I blaspheme. She could have loved me. I might have pressed to my bosom the loveliest, the most divine creature that God ever made. She could have loved me! I have had one lightning glimpse of Paradise! She could have loved me! At the thought I tremble and weep.
(Enter Schmidt and Johann.)

SCENE IV

SCHMIDT: Yes, Kathchen will come back, I warrant. But when she'll come back–matters not.

JOHANN: A seven years' engagement can't be forgotten in that fashion.

SCHMIDT: Hurry I hear the signal. If we miss the ceremony, don't let's miss the dance.
(Exit.)

SCENE V

(Enter Albert and Werther.)

ALBERT: My friend, remorse sometimes mingles with the happiness that fills my soul.

WERTHER: Remorse?

ALBERT: I know that your heart is strong and loyal. But she who is now my wife will cross your path some day as if she were still free and, perhaps, when near her, seeing her so sweet and so beautiful, dreams may come. I know so well the value of what I have gained that I can comprehend the misery of its loss. To understand is to forgive.

WERTHER: Vous l'avez dit: mon âme est loyale et sincère,
Si j'avais du passé trop amer souvenir,
Retirant cette main de la main qui la serre,
Je fuirais loin de vous pour ne plus revenir.
Mais, comme après l'orage une onde est apaisée.
Mon cœur ne souffre plus de son rêve oublié,
Et celui qui sait lire au fond de ma pensée
N'y doit trouver jamais que la seule amitié!
Et ce sera ma part de bonheur sur la terre!
(Sophie accourt, des fleurs dans les mains.)

SCENE V

Les Mêmes, Sophie.

SOPHIE: (à Albert, gaîment.)
Frère, Voyez le beau bouquet!
J'ai mis, pour le pasteur, le jardin au pillage.
Et puis on va danser . . . Pour le premier menuet,
C'est sur vous que je compte . . . Oh! le sombre visage!
Mais aujourd'hui, monsieur Werther,
Tout le monde est joyeux, le bonheur est dans l'air
Du gai soleil, plein de flamme,
Dans l'azur resplendissant,
La pure clarté descend
De nos fronts jusqu'à notre âme,
Et l'oiseau que monte aux cieux,
Dans la brise qui soupire,
Est revenu pour nous dire
Que Dieu permet d'être heureux.

WERTHER: (à part.) Heureux! pourrai-je l'ètre encore?

ALBERT: (à Sophie.) Va porter ton bouquet, chère petite sœur, Je te rejoins . . .
(Sophie s'éloigne de quelques pas.)
(A Werther.)
Werther, nous parlons de bonheur!
On le cherche bien loin, on l'appelle, on l'implore,
Et voici que peut-être il passe en nos chemins,
Un sourire à lèvre et des fleurs dans les mains.

SOPHIE: (sur le seuil du presbytère, à Albert.) Frère, revenez vite.
Pour le premier menuet, je vous invite,
Vous entendez, monsieur Werther!
Tout le monde est heureux, le bonheur est dans l'air!
(Albert a rejoint Sophie et disparaît avec elle.)

WERTHER: My friend, if I have dreamed too late,
I ask forgiveness.
Here's my hand.
I will not follow after fate
I go to some for alien land.
And if these haunting fancies flee
Or fade away and leave no trace
I shall return ennobled, free
To meet you, greet you, face to face
(Enter Sophie.)

SCENE V

SOPHIE: Oh, brother, see this pretty nosegay. I have quite robbed the garden for the pastor. And they're going to dance. I count on you for the first minuet. Why, what a gloomy countenance But today, Herr Werther, all the world is gay.
Happiness is in the very air.
The bright sun, high above,
The clear and balmy air
Breathe everywhere of love;
The whole wide world is fair.
The gentle whispering breeze,
The bird upon the wing,
The silent sexéd trees
Feel love's eternal spring.

WERTHER: Happy? Can I ever again be happy?

ALBERT: (to Sophie). Go present your nosegay, dear little sister. I will rejoin you.
(Sophie retires.)
Werther, we steep of happiness; we seek it afar; we call it; we implore it; and perhaps it stands in our way with a smile on its lips and flowers in its hands.

SOPHIE: Make haste, brother, I shall keep the first minuet for you. You hear, Herr Werther. All the world is gay. Happiness is in the very air. (Exeunt.)

SCENE VI

WERTHER: (seul d'abord, puis Charlotte.) Ai-je dit vrai? L'amour que j'ai pour elle N'est-il pas le plus pur comme le plus sacré?
En ce coeur, malgré lui rebelle,
Un coupable désir est-il jamais entré?
Oui! je mentais! . . . ô Dieu! souffrir sans cesse,
Ou bien toujours mentir!
C'est trop de honte et de faiblesse!
Je dois, je veux partir!
(Charlotte a paru sur le seuil du temple et se dirige vers le presbytère. Werther l'apercoit, très ému.)
Partir! Non! je ne veux que me rapprocher d'elle!

CHARLOTTE: (sans remarquer Werther.) Comme on trouve en priant une force nouvelle!

WERTHER: (de loin.) Charlotte! . . .

CHARLOTTE: (se détournant, simplement.) Vous venez aussi chez le pasteur?

WERTHER: (se rapprochant, tristement) A quoi bon? pour vous voir danser avec un autre!
Ah! qu'il est loin ce jour plein d'intime douceur
Où mon regard a rencontré le vôtre
Pour la première fois; . . . où nous sommes tous deux
Demeurés si longtemps . . . tout près . . . sans nous rien dire . . .
Cependant que tombait des cieux
Un suprême rayon qui semblait un sourire
Sur notre émoi silencieux!

CHARLOTTE: (froidement.) Albert m'aime et je suis sa femme! . . .

WERTHER: (avec emportement) Albert vous aime! . . . Qui ne vous aimerait? . . .

CHARLOTTE: (plus doucement.) Werther! . . . N'est-il donc pas
D'autre femme ici-bas
Digne de votre amour et libre d'elle-même?
Je ne m'appartiens plus; pourquoi donc m'aimez-vous?

WERTHER: Eh! demandez aux fous
D'où vient que leur raison s'égare!

CHARLOTTE: (resolument.) Eh bien! puisqu'à jamais le destin nous sépare
Eloignez-vous, partez! partez! . . .

WERTHER: Quel mot Ai-je entendu?

CHARLOTTE: (gravement.) Celui qu'il faut
De moi que l'on entende!

WERTHER: (violemment.) Eh! qui donc le commande?

CHARLOTTE: Le devoir!
(Plus doucement.)
L'absence rend parfois la douleur moins amère.

WERTHER: Ah! me donner l'oubli n'est pas en son pouvoir!

CHARLOTTE: (plus douce encore) Pourquoi l'oubli?..Pensez à Charlotte, au contraire Pensez à son repos; soyez fort, soyez bon.

WERTHER: (apaisé peu à peu.) Oui! . . . j'ai pour seul désir que vous soyez heureuse Mais ne plus vous revoir, c'est impossible, non.

CHARLOTTE: Ami, je ne suis pas à ce point rigoureuse
Et ne saurais vouloir un exil éternel.
Vous reviendrez . . . bientôt . . . tenez . . . à la Noël!

WERTHER: (suppliant.) Charlotte!

CHARLOTTE: (s'éloignant.) A la Noël!
(Elle disparait.)

SCENE VII

(Werther veut la rappeler, mais il revient sur ses pas, découragé, abattu.)

WERTHER: Oui, ce qu'elle m'ordonne
Pour son repos, je le ferai;
Et si la force m'abandonne,
Ah! c'est moi, pour toujours, qui me reposerai!
(Songeant fiévreusement.)
Pourquoi trembler devant la mort . . . devant la nôtre?
On lève le rideau; puis on passe de l'autre
Côté! Voilà ce qu'on nomme mourir.
Offensons-nous le ciel en cessant de souffrir?
Lorsque l'enfant revient d'un voyage avant l'heure,
Bien loin de lui garder quelque ressentiment,
Au seul bruit de ses pas tressaille la demeure,
Et le pére, joyeux, l'embrasse longuement.
O Dieu qui m'a créé, serais-tu moins clément!
Non! tu ne saurais pas, dérobé sous tes voiles,
Rejeter dans la nuit tou fils infortuné!
Devinant ton sourire au travers des étoiles,
Il reviendra vers toi d'avance pardonné!
Père! Père!
Que je ne connais pas, en qui pourtant j'ai foi,
En qui j'espère.

SCENE VI

WERTHER: Have I spoken truly? Is not the love I feel for her pure and sacred? No wish has ever entered this rebellious breast? Yes! I have lied. Oh Heaven! To suffer eternally–or to lie eternally. It is too shameful and weak. I must–will go away.
(Sees Charlotte.)
Go away? No! I only wish to be near her!

CHARLOTTE: (aside). What new strength comes to us from prayer!

WERTHER: Charlotte!

CHARLOTTE: Are you also going to the pastor's?

WERTHER: Why should I? To see you dance with another? Ah! There was once a golden day,
How long ago–how far away
How precious is its memory–
This day that never more can be.
We sat enthralled and neither spoke,
And love alone the silence broke.
The sunshine fell on you and me.

CHARLOTTE: Albert loves me and I am his wife.

WERTHER: Albert loves you! Ah who would not love you?

CHARLOTTE: Is there no other woman who is free and worthy of your love? I am not my own mistress. Why do you love me?

WERTHER: Ask a madman why his reason wanders!

CHARLOTTE: Then, since fate divides us, leave me! Go!

WERTHER: What do I hear?

CHARLOTTE: The only word that I should speak and you listen to.

WERTHER: What do you ask of me?

CHARLOTTE: Your duty! Absence will assuage your grief.

WERTHER: It cannot make me forget.

CHARLOTTE: Why should you forget? Think of Charlotte as of a friend. Be strong! Be noble!

WERTHER: Your happiness is my sole wish. But to see you no more–I cannot bear it.

CHARLOTTE: And I do not exact eternal absence. Come back—at Christmas.

WERTHER: Charlotte!

CHARLOTTE: At Christmas!

SCENE VII

WERTHER: We know that all who lived have died
It is in the circle of the soul.
It is but to cross the silent tide.
It is but to reach ambition's goal.
As when a little child has strayed
And stands reluctant at the door,
How glad the Father's heart is made,
To have him back once more.
Oh, God who created me, receive me so,
To him who dwells and reigns on high,
And smiles through mist and starry space,
From out the night I send my cry–
That before I ask–he'll grant me grace.
Father! Father! I do not know you, but I trust, in whom I hope–call me.
I will obey her, for her own peace; and if any strength fail me, my peace shall be eternal.

Appelle-moi!
(Werther va s'éloigner, lorsque paraît Sophie sur le seuil du presbytère.)

SCENE VIII

Werther, Sophie, puis Charlotte, Albert et tout le cortège.

SOPHIE à WERTHER: Mais venez donc! le cortège s'approche,
Et soit dit sans reproche.
C'est vous seul qu'ou attend!

WERTHER: (brusquement.) Pardonnez-moi; je pars!

SOPHIE: Vous partez!

WERTHER: A l'instant!

SOPHIE: Mais sans doute . . .
Vous reviendrez . . . demain . . .
bientôt . . .

WERTHER: (violemment.) Jamais!
Adieu!
(Il s'enfuit.)

SOPHIE: (très émue, l'appelant et courant après lui jusqu'à la route.) Monsieur Werther! . . . Au tournant de la route
Il disparaît . . . plus rien!
(Fondant en larmes.)
Mon Dieu!
Tout à l'heure
J'étais si joyeuse!
(Le cortège de la Cinquantaine paraît. On vient de différents côtés.)

CHARLOTTE: (apercevant Sophie et accourant près d'elle.) Ah!
qu'est ce donc: elle pleure!

SOPHIE: Ah! soeur! monsieur
Werther est parti! . . .

CHARLOTTE: Lui!

SOPHIE: Et pour toujours! . . . A l'instant méme
Il vient de me le dire. et puis il s'est enfui
Comme un fou!

CHARLOTTE: (à part.) Pour toujours!

ALBERT: (sombre et regardant Charlotte.)
Il l'aime!

ACTE TROISIÈME

SCENE I

(La maison d'Albert.)

CHARLOTTE: (seule.) Werther! Werther . . . Qui m'aurait dit la place aujourd'hui. Depuis qu'il est parti, magré moi, tout me lasse Et mon âme est pleine de lui! Ces lettres . . . ah! je les relis sans cesse . . . Avec quel charme, mais aussi quelle tristesse. Je les devrais détruire . . . je ne puis!
(Lisant.)
'Je vous écris

SCENE VIII

(Enter Sophie.)

SOPHIE: Why don't you come? The wedding party draws near and you are the only absent one.

WERTHER: Forgive me. I am going away.

SOPHIE: Going away?

WERTHER: This moment.

SOPHIE: But you will come back soon? To-morrow?

WERTHER: Never! Farewell!
(Exit.)

SOPHIE: Herr Werther. Ah he vanishes around the bend of the road. Oh dear–and I was so happy.
(Procession appears.)
(Enter Charlotte.)
What's this?–weeping.

SOPHIE: Oh, sister! Herr Werther is gone.

CHARLOTTE: He?

SOPHIE: And forever. This moment he bade me farewell and fled madly from my sight.

CHARLOTTE: (aside.) Forever!

ALBERT: He loves her.
(Curtain.)

ACT III

SCENE I

(The Home of Albert.)

CHARLOTTE: (alone.) Werther! Werther! Who could have told me that he should hold such a place in my heart today. Since he has left me, my mind is full of him. These letters–Ah I read them over and over again with delight–and with sadness. I should destroy them–but I cannot (Reads)
I write today

De ma petite chambre;
Un ciel gris
Et lourd de décembre
Pèse sur moi, comme un linceul . . .
Et je suis seul, seul, toujours seul!'
Non, Werther, dans leur souvenir
Votre image reste vivante,
Et quand vous
reviendrez . . . Mais doit-il revenir!
Ah! ce dernier billet me glace et m'épouvante!
Personne près de lui! . . . Pas un seul témoinage
De tendresse . . . ou pitié! Comment
M'est venu ce triste courage
D'ordonner cet exil et cet isolement!
(Elle a pris une autre lettre et l'ouvre.)
'Des cris joyeux d'enfants montent sous ma fenêtre,
Et je pense à ce temps si doux
Où tous vos chers petits jouaient autour de nous.
Ils m'oublieront peut-être!'
'Tu m'as dit: A Noël! et j'ai crié: Jamais!
On va bientôt connaître
Qui de nous deux disait vrai! . . . Mais . . .
Si je ne dois reparaître
Au jour fixé, devant toi,
Ne m'accuse pas, pleure-moi!
Qui, de ces yeux si pleins de charmes,
Ces lignes, tu les reliras,
Tu les mouilleras de tes larmes,
O! Charlotte, tu frémiras!'
(Sophie entre.)

SCENE II

Charlotte, Sophie.

SOPHIE: (gaiement.) Bonjour, grande soeur! je viens aux nouvelles,
Sans attendre que tu m'appelles . . .
On ne te voit plus. Albert est absent
Et le père est très mécontent.

CHARLOTTE: (encore préoccupée.) Enfant! . . .

SOPHIE: (prenant Charlotte par la taille.) Mais souffres-tu?

CHARLOTTE: Pourquoi cette pensée?

SOPHIE: Cette main est glacée
Et tes yeux sont rougis, je le vois bien.

CHARLOTTE: (avee embarras.)
Non, ce n'est rien!
Je me sens quelquefois un peu triste . . . . isolée.
Mais si d'un vague émoi mon âme était troublée.
Je ne m'en souviens plus maintenant . . . et tu vois.
Je souris . . .

In my lonely room.
The sky is gray;
December's gloom
Has found my hopes, my fancies flown.
I am always alone, dear, always alone.
All alone! No one to witness his pity or tenderness. How could I have had courage to condemn him to exile, to this loneliness.
(Reads another letter.)
Below my window the children cry.
They bring back many a game
I've had with your children in days gone by–
And now–they're forgetting my name.
No, Werther; in their remembrance your image still lives. And when you come back–but should you come back—-Ah This last note chills and terrifies me!
That blessed day–the day you set
For my return to you again,–
Can never dawn! Could I forget
The past with all its grief and pain?
I could not, dear one, though I tried.
And then–the memories of the place
Wherein I saw you as a bride
In all your beauty, youth and grace
If your dear form no more I see,
Accuse me not–but pity me!

SCENE II

(Enter Sophie)

SOPHIE: Good morning, my big sister! I have news for you. I don't wait to be sent for, you see. You never come out now-a-days, and Albert is away too. Our father is displeased.

CHARLOTTE: Child!

SOPHIE: Are you ill?

CHARLOTTE: Why do you think so?

SOPHIE: Your hand is as cold as ice, and your eyes bloodshot.

CHARLOTTE: It is nothing! Sometimes I feel a little sad–lonely. But if my soul were troubled by some vague emotion–I have forgotten it–you see, I smile.

SOPHIE: (câline.) Ce qu'il faut, c'est rire, rire encore. Comme autrefois.	SOPHIE: But you must laugh, as you used to.
CHARLOTTE: (à part.) Comme autrefois!	CHARLOTTE: (aside.) As I used to.
SOPHIE: (gaiemet) Ah! le rire est béni, joyeux, léger, sonore! Il a des ailes; c'est un oiseau de l'aurore! C'est la clarté du coeur qui s'échappe en rayons! Ecoute! je suis d'âge à savoir les raisons De bien des choses! Qui! tous les fronts ici sont devenus moroses Depuis que Werther s'est enfui! Mais pourquoi laisser sans nouvelles Ceux qui lui sont restés fidèles?	SOPHIE: Laughter is blessed by God, the God who reigns on high. It is the smile of the happy heart! It has wings to soar and fly, It is the light of the joyous soul that escapes in beams of cheer, In rays of sound and mirth. There is no laughter here. Since Werther went away. A spell seems over all. And those who love you best? Can they not win your true - Your old self back once more. Ah, Charlotte, have not we, Who share with you your grief,–who love you so, and see You fade and weep and mourn,–some power to comfort you?
CHARLOTTE: (se dégageant des bras de Sophie, se lève, à part.) Tout, jusqu'à cet enfant, tout me parle de lui!	CHARLOTTE: Everything! Even this child reminds me of him.
SOPHIE: (revenant à Charlotte.) Des larmes! Oh! pardonnne, je t'en prie! Oui, j'ai tort de parler De tout cela . . .	SOPHIE: Tears! Ah, forgive me, I pray. It was wrong to speak of this.
CHARLOTTE: (ne se contraignant plus.) Va! laisse couler les larmes Elles font du bien, ma chérie! Les larmes qu'on ne pleure pas Dans notre âme retombent toutes, Et de leurs patientes gouttes Martèlent le coeur triste et las. Sa résistance enfin s'épuise; Le coeur se creuse et s'affaiblit: Il est trop grand, rien ne l'emplit; Et trop fragile, tout le brise!	CHARLOTTE: Go! Let them flow. It does me good to weep, darling. What bitter tears we shed in grief, That comes at memory's haunting call But sadder far beyond belief Are tears that never, never fall! The tears that spring from out the heart Are never dry–the source is deep. Ah She who plays the saddest part Is she who–cannot–will not–weep.
SOPHIE: (effrayée.) Tiens, Charlotte, crois-moi, ne reste pas ici . . . Viens chez nous; nous saurons te faire Oublier ton souci; Le père A fait apprendre à ses enfants De magnifiques compliments Pour la Noël . . .	SOPHIE: Come with us, Charlotte. Do not stay here. Come with us. We will find a way to make you forget your troubles. Father has made the children learn magnificent Christmas greetings.
CHARLOTTE: (à part, très troublée.) Noël! oh! cette lettre: (Repétant d'un ton sombre.) 'Si tu ne me vois reparaître, Au jour fixé, devant toi. Ne m'accuse pas; pleure-moi!'	CHARLOTTE: Christmas Oh, that letter. (Reads.) If I shall not see you anymore, Accuse me not–but pity for me!
SOPHIE: (revenant vers Charlotte.) Alors, c'est convenu! tu viendras . . .	SOPHIE: Then it's all settled? You'll come.
CHARLOTTE: Oui . . . peut-être . . .	CHARLOTTE: Perhaps!
SOPHIE: Non! non! certainement!	SOPHIE: No, no. Certainly.
CHARLOTTE: (essayant de sourire.) Certainement . . .	CHARLOTTE: Certainly, then.
SOPHIE: Bien vrai!	SOPHIE: You're sure?
CHARLOTTE: J'irai, je te le promets, mignonne . . .	CHARLOTTE: I promise you, darling, that I will come.
SOPHIE: Tu viendras!	SOPHIE: You will come?
CHARLOTTE: Oui! j'irai! . . . Que je t'embrasse encore! (Sophie s'éloigne.)	CHARLOTTE: Yes. Kiss me once more. (Exit Sophie.)

SCENE III

Charlotte, puis Werther
CHARLOTTE: La force m'abandonne! Seigneur Dieu, Seigneur! J'ai fait et veux faire Toujours mon devoir! En toi seul j'espère. Car bien rude est l'épreuve et bien faible mon coeur! Seigneur Dieu, Seigneur! Tu lis dans mon âme; hélas! tout la blesse! Si mes pleurs t'offensaient, j'en demande pardon; Viens à mon secours – ô Dieu fort! Dieu bon! Prends pitié de moi! soutiens ma faiblesse! (Werther paraît.) Ciel! Werther!	CHARLOTTE: My strength fails me. Oh, God! To whom I kneel, You know all I feel. I never swerved from you. Do but comfort me– Hear my appeal If tears offend you, Lord of light, Send down your grace into the night Within my soul! In deep despair I beg–command you–heed my prayer! (Werther appears.) Heavens! Werther!
WERTHER: Oui, c'est moi . . . je reviens . . . et pourtant . . . Loin de vous . . . je n'ai pas laissé une heure, Un instant, Sans dire que je meure Plutôt que la revoir . . . Puis, lorsque vînt le jour Que vous aviez fixé pour le retour . . . Je suis parti . . . sur le seuil de la porte Je résistais encore . . . je voulais fuir . . . Qu'importe D'ailleurs tout cela . . . me voici!	WERTHER: Yes. It is I! I have come back. Notwithstanding that when away from you, I have not passed an hour, an instant without telling myself that I would rather die than see you again. Well, when the day came that you had fixed for my return, I left—even at the gate I hesitated again—I wished to fly—what do all these struggles amount to—I am here.
CHARLOTTE: Pourquoi cette parole amére? Pourquoi ne plus revenir, quand ici Chacun vous attendait . . . mon pére . . . Les enfants . . .	CHARLOTTE: Why do you speak so, my friend? Why should you not come back? Everyone awaits you—my father—the children—
WERTHER: (s'approchant). Et vous? vous aussi?	WERTHER: And you—you also?
CHARLOTTE: Voyez la maison est restée Telle que vous l'avez quittée A la revoir ainsi Ne vous semble-t-il pas qu'elle s'est souvenue?	CHARLOTTE: Yes! The house is just as it was when you left. Doesn't it seem to give you a welcome?
WERTHER: Oui, Je vois . . . Ici, rien n'a changé . . . que les coeurs Toute chose est encore á la place connue. Voici le clavecin qui chantait mes bonheurs Ou qui tressaillait de ma peine Alors que votre voix accompagnait la mienne. Ces livres sur qui tant de fois Nous avons incliné nos têtes rap-	WERTHER: Yes, I see? Nothing is changed here—except hearts. Everything is in the familiar place. There is the harpsichord that pleased my merry hours or responded to my sad moods,—then your voice accompanied mine. These books—how many times have we bent our heads together over them. (Looks at pistols.) And these weapons—one day my prochées. (Allant au secrétaire sur lequel est placée la boîte aux pistolets.) Et ces armes . . . un jour ma main les a touchées. Déjá, j'étais impatient Du long repos anquel j'aspire! . . .	hands sought them. Already I had become impatient for the long, breathless sleep.

CHARLOTTE: Et voici ces vers d'Ossian Que vous aviez commencé de traduire.	CHARLOTTE: And here are the poems of Ossian that you commenced to translate.
WERTHER: (prenant le manuscrit.) Traduire . . . Ah bien souvent mon rêve s'envola Sur l'aile de ces vers, et c'est toi, cher poête, Qui, bien plutôt, étais mon interpréte! Toute mon âme est lá "Pourquoi me réveiller, ô souffle du printemps? Sur mon front je sens tes caresses. Et pourtant bien proche est le temps Des orages ct des tristesses Demain, dans le vallon, viendra le voyageur, Se souvenant de ma gloire premiére. Et ses yeux vainement chercheront ma splendeur: Ils ne trouverout plus que deuil et que misère!"	WERTHER: Translate! Ah! how often my dreams have soared on the wings of these poems, and it is you; dear poet, who often interpreted my feelings! All my soul is there Oh wake me not, breath of spring, breath of spring. Let me dream on, as one who knows Bleak winter with its chill and snows, And dreads awakening. The stranger found me fair to see— And now—in scorn, he passes me, To see so sad a thing!
CHARLOTTE: (trés troublée.) N'achevez pas! Hélas! Ce désespoir . . . ce deuil . . . on dirait . . . il me semble! . . .	CHARLOTTE: No more! Alas! This despair—this mourning—it appeals to me.
WERTHER: Ah ciel ai-je compris . . . Dans cette voix qui tremble . . . Dans ces yeux remplis De larmes, n'est-ce pas un aveu que je lis! . . . A quoi bon essayer de nous tromper encore.	WERTHER: Ah! Heaven! Do I understand correctly? In your trembling voice—in your eyes filled with tears—is it not an avowal that I see? And we were deluding ourselves with our good endeavors.
CHARLOTTE: Je vous implore!	CHARLOTTE: I implore you!
WERTHER: Va nous mentions tous deux en nous disant vainqueurs De l'immortel amour qui tressaille en nos coeurs. Ah ce premier baiser, mon rêve et mon envie, Bonheur tant espéré qu'aujourd'hui j'entrevois, Il brûle sur ma lèvre encore inassouvie Ce baiser demandé pour la premiére fois!	WERTHER: There All the lies between us are over. Immortal love has driven them from our hearts. The first long lingering kiss Burns in my eager soul— yet I know it's bliss— Love is beyond control!
CHARLOTTE: (défaillante.) Werther?	CHARLOTTE: Werther?
WERTHER: Ah ma raison s'égare. Tu m'aimes . . .	WERTHER: Ah My reason deserts me You love me
CHARLOTTE: (le repoussant.) Non . . . tout ce qui nous sépare Ne peut être oublié!	CHARLOTTE: No. We must separate. We must forget.
WERTHER: (se jetant á ses pieds.) Tu m'aimes! . . . tu m'aimes! . . .	WERTHER: You love me, you love me.
CHARLOTTE: Pitié!	CHARLOTTE: Pity me!
WERTHER: Je t'aime! . . . Il n'est plus de remords, il n'est plus de tourment.	WERTHER: I love you—No more remorse, no more torment.
CHARLOTTE: (éperdue.) Seigneur clément, Défendez-moi contre moi-même.	CHARLOTTE: Merciful Savior, defend me against myself.
WERTHER: Hors de nous rien n'existe et tout le reste est vain Mais l'amour, seul est vrai, car c'est le mot divin. Défendez-moi, Seigneur	WERTHER: Except ourselves, nothing exists. Everything is void. Love alone is real, for it is the word of God.
	CHARLOTTE: Defend me, Lord.
WERTHER: Viens!	WERTHER: Come with me!
CHARLOTTE: (dans les bras de Werther.) Ah! pitié!	CHARLOTTE: Pity!
WERTHER: Je t'aime!	WERTHER: I love you.
CHARLOTTE: (se redressant, affolée.) Ah! moi! moi! dans ses bras!	CHARLOTTE: Ah I—I—In his arms!
WERTHER: (suppliant.) Pardon!	WERTHER: Pardon me.
CHARLOTTE: (résolument.) Vous ne me verrez plus . . .	CHARLOTTE: You shall see me no more.
WERTHER: Grâce, Charlotte! . . .	WERTHER: Have mercy, Charlotte.
CHARLOTTE: Non! C'est vous, vous que je fuis l'âme désesperée. Adieu, pour la derniére fois!	CHARLOTTE: No. It is from you that my desperate soul is flying. Good by—for the last time.
WERTHER: (se précipitant sur ses pas.) Mais non! c'est impossible . . . écoute-moi . . . ma voix Te rappelle . . . reviens . . . Tu me seras sacrée! Rien! . . . pas un mot . . . elle se tait. Soite adieu doue! Charlotte a dicté mon arrêt! Prends le deuil, ô nature! Ton fils, ton bien-aimé, ton amant va mourir, Emportant avec lui l'éternelle torture! Ma tombe peut s'ouvrir! (Il s'enfuit.)	WERTHER: No. It is impossible! Listen to me; let my voice recall you. Come back! You shall be sacred to me. Nothing—not one word—I will keep silent. So be it. Farewell, then! Charlotte has condemned me. Nature, make room within your breast For one who bore the stings of grief, Now bears them with him of the tomb— His only—last relief. (Exit.)

SCÈNE IV

SCENE IV

Albert, puis Charlotte.	(Enter Albert.)
ALBERT: (entrant, préoccupé, sombre.) Werther est de retour . . . on l'a vu revenir . . . Personne ici . . . la porte ouverte sur la rue . . . Charlotte! . . .	ALBERT: Werther has returned. He has been seen—Nobody here—The street door open—Charlotte!
CHARLOTTE: (poussant un cri á la vue de son mari.) Ah!	CHARLOTTE: Ah!
ALBERT: Qu'avez-vous?	ALBERT: What is the matter?
CHARLOTTE: (de plus en plus troublée.) Rien! . . .	CHARLOTTE: Nothing.
ALBERT: Pourtant vous voilá Troublée, émue . . .	ALBERT: Then why are you so agitated?
CHARLOTTE: Oui! . . . la surprise . . .	CHARLOTTE: The surprise—
ALBERT: (presque violent.) Et qui done était lá?	ALBERT: And who has been here?
CHARLOTTE: Qui? lá . . .	CHARLOTTE: Who—here?

ALBERT: Répondez! (Un domestique est entré apportant une lettre.) Un message! De Werther . . .	ALBERT: Answer me. (Enter Servant.) A note–From Werther.
CHARLOTTE: Dieu!	CHARLOTTE: My God!
ALBERT: (lisant, sans perdre Charlotte de vue.) "Je pars pour un lointain voyage . . . Voulez-vous me prêter vos pistolets?"	ALBERT: (reads). "I am going on a long journey. Will you lend me your pistols?"
CHARLOTTE: (à part, se sentant défaillir.) Il part!	CHARLOTTE: He goes—
ALBERT: (continuant.) "Dieu vous garde tous deux."	ALBERT: (reading). "God keep you both."
CHARLOTTE: (à part, avec terreur.) Ah l'horrible présage!	CHARLOTTE: Ah! Horrible presentiment.
ALBERT: (à Charlotte, froidement.) Donnez-les-lui! . . .	ALBERT: Give them to him.
CHARLOTTE: (reculant épouvantée.) Qui? moi?	CHARLOTTE: Who?–I?—
ALBERT: Sans doute . . .	ALBERT: Why not?— (The servant takes the pistols.)
CHARLOTTE: (comme fascinée par le regard de son mari, se dirige vers le secrétaire où est déposée la boîte au pistolets.) Quel regard! Dieu! tu ne voudras pas que j'arrive trop tard! (Elle sort désesperée.)	CHARLOTTE: (aside). How he looks at me! God! You would not let me reach Werther–too late. (Exits.) (Curtain.)

■ ACT IV

SCÈNE I

SCENE I

La nuit de Noël. La morte de Werther.	(Christmas night scene changes from exterior to Werther's study.)
Werther puis Charlotte.
CHARLOTTE: (entrant brusquement et appelant, avec angoisse.) Werther! . . . Rien! . . . (Tout à coup, elle apercoit le corps de Werther et se jette sur lui, puis pousse un cri et recule, épouvantée.) Dieu! du sang! Non! non! c'est impossible! Il ne peut ètre mort!—Werther! Werther! reviens à toi! Réponds! réponds!— Ah! c'est horrible!	CHARLOTTE: (calling). Werther—No answer! (Throws herself on the body of Werther.) My God! Blood! No, no! It is impossible. He cannot be dead! Werther! Werther! Come to your senses! Answer me! Answer me! Ah, this is horrible.
WERTHER: (ouvrant les yeux, reconnaissant Charlotte.) Qui parle? . . . Charlotte, ah! c'est toi, pardonne-moi!	WERTHER: Who speaks?—It is you. Pardon me.
CHARLOTTE: Te pardonner, quand c'est moi qui te frappe, Quand le sang qui s'échappe De ta blessure, c'est moi qui l'ai versé! . . .	CHARLOTTE: Pardon you?–when it is I who have killed you. I who have spilled the blood which flows from your wounds?
WERTHER: (qui s'est soulevé un peu.) Non! Tu n'as rien fait que de juste et de bon! Mon âme reconaissante Te bénit pour cette mort Qui te garde innocente Et m'épargne un remord!	WERTHER: No! You have done only what is just and right! From my soul I feel the blessing of my death–which saves your innocence and my remorse.
CHARLOTTE: (affolée et se tournant vers la porte.) Mais il faut du secours!	CHARLOTTE: We must have help.
WERTHER: (se soulevant sur un genou.) Non! n'appelle personne . . . Tout secours serait vain! Donne Seulement ta main . . . Vois! . . . je n'ai pas besoin d'autre aide que la tienne! Et puis, il ne faut pas qu'on vienne Encore ici Nous séparer . . . On est si bien ainsi! A cette heure suprême: Je suis heureux; je meurs en te disant Que je t'adore! . . .	WERTHER: No! Call no one. All assistance will be vain. I only need your hand. See—I have need of no other aid but yours. And besides, it is better that no one comes to separate us again. In this supreme hour I am happy. I die telling you that I adore you.
CHARLOTTE: (avec élan.) Et moi, Werther, et moi je t'aime!	CHARLOTTE: And I, Werther, and I, I love you.
WERTHER: Dieu puissant!	WERTHER: Father almighty!
CHARLOTTE: Qui, du jour même Où tu parus devant mes yeux, J'ai senti qu'une chaine Impossible à briser nous liait tous les deux A l'oubli du devoir j'ai préféré ta peine Et pour ne pas me perdre, hélas je t'ai perdu Mais si la mort approche, avant qu'elle te prenne.. Ah ton baiser, du moins, je te l'aurait rendu Que ton âme en mon âme eperdument se fonde Qu'elle oublie, à jamais, en ce baiser, le monde Les maux, les douleura, tout . . .	CHARLOTTE: But death cannot unlink the chain Of love like ours. It was to be No you shall smile on me again. Werther Your spirit lives in me. And when we meet in Heaven above. And lose ourselves in boundless bliss, In memory of our earthly love We'll consecrate this last sad kiss, Now death has set a captive free And soul to soul at last are we— Waiting God's great eternity!
WERTHER ET CHARLOTTE ENSEMBLE: Oublious tout! (Voix des enfants dans la maison du bailli.) VOIX DES ENFANTS: Noël!	WERTHER AND CHARLOTTE: Let us forget everything. (Voices of children heard.) Christmas!
CHARLOTTE: (douleureusement.) Ces cris joyeux, ce rire en ce moment cruel!	CHARLOTTE: These joyous cries, this laughter in this cruel moment.
VOIX DES ENFANTS: (an dehors.) Jésus vient de naître Voici notre divin maître Rois et bergers d'Israël. Noël! . . .	(CHILDREN'S VOICES): Christmas! Jesus came this day To lead us in the heavenly way. Israel's king and shepherds all Heard the startled Magis' call— Christmas!
WERTHER: (se soulevant un peu, avec une sorte d'hallucination.) Ah les enfants . . . les anges . . . oui, Noël, C'est le chant de la délivrance, C'est l'hymne de pardon Redit par l'innocence!	WERTHER (his mind wanders).—Ah! The children—the angels—Yes, Christmas! This is the song of deliverance, of pardon repeated by the innocent.
CHARLOTTE: (se rapprochant, effrayée de ce délire qui commence.) Werther!	CHARLOTTE: Werther!
WERTHER: (de plus en plus halluciné.) Pourquoi ces larmes? . . . Crois-tu donc Qu'en ce instant ma vie est achevée? Elle commence, vois-tu	WERTHER: Why these tears? Do you not know that at this instant I have achieved all? Life begins! See I go to my Father and yours. He will comfort me until you come.

bien . . . Voici que je m'en vais vers mon père . . . et le tien! Il me consolera jusqu'à ton arriv́e!
VOIX DE SOPHIE: Dieu permet d'être heureux! Le bonheur est dans l'air tout le monde est joyeux!	(VOICE OF SOPHIE): The bright sun high above; the clear and balmy air, Breathe everywhere of love; the whole wide world is fair!
VOIX DES ENFANTS: Noël! Noël!	(CHILDREN'S VOICES.): Christmas! Christmas!
WERTHER: Dieu permet d'être heureux! . . .	WERTHER: The whole wide world is fair—
CHARLOTTE: (le regardant avec angoisse.) Ses yeux se ferment . . . sa main se glace . . . Il va mourir . . . mourir . . . ah pitié. Grâce! Je ne veux pas . . . je ne veux pas . . . Werther, réponds . . . tu peux encore m'entendre. La mort entre mes bras N'osera pas te prendre Tu vivras . . . Tu vivras . . . vois je ne crains plus rien . . .	CHARLOTTE: His eyes are closing—his hand is cold—he is dying. dying. Ah Pity—grace! It cannot be! This cannot be! Werther! Answer me! Can you not hear me? Death dare not take you from my arms! You shall live! You shall live I fear nothing.
WERTHER: (d'une voix éteinte.) Ah . . . Charlotte . . . je meurs . . . oui . . . mais écoute bien. Là-bas, au fond du cimetière, Il est deux grand tilleuls . . . C'est là Que je voudrais reposer . . . Si cela M' était refusé, si la terre Chrétienne est interdite au corps d'un malheureux, Près du chemin ou dans le vallon solitaire Allez placer ma tombe . . . en détournant les yeux Le prêtre passera . . . Mais à la dérobée Quelque femme viendra visiter le banni Et d'une pure larme en son ombre tombée Le mort, le pauvre mort, se sentira béni!	WERTHER: Ah, Charlotte—I am dying, yes—Listen— Within the vale below Two stern old lindens grow; Beneath their sacred shade Bid my new grave be made. Yet if God's priests, more stern than He, Refuse a sinner soil so blest, Till day shall break and shadows flee, Beside some woodland path. I'll rest. And though the church may scorn the dead, Some fair sweet soul one tear may shed— Then shall my tomb be hallowéd.
CHARLOTTE: Ah!	CHARLOTTE: Ah!
VOIX DES ENFANTS: Jésus vient de naître Voici notre divin maître . . . Noël!	(VOICES OF CHILDREN:) Christmas! Jesus came this day To lead us in the heavenly way. Christmas!
CHARLOTTE: (appelant désespérément.) Werther! . . . Tout en fini! . . .	CHARLOTTE: Werther—All is ended!

Thaïs (1894)

MUSIC BY JULES MASSENET ■ LIBRETTO BY LOUIS GALLET ■ BASED ON THE NOVEL BY ANATOLE FRANCE

First performed at the Paris Opéra on March 16, 1894, this three-act comédie-lyrique, is set to a libretto by Louis Gallet (based on Anatole France's novel). At the refuge of the Cenobites along the banks of the Nile, Athanaël bemoans the corruption of Alexandria's inhabitants which he blames on Thaïs, a beautiful courtesan. He sees her in a dream and decides to save her from her sins. Thaïs is expected as Nicia's guest that evening; Nicias invites Athanaël to join them. Thaïs tries to seduce him, but he angrily rejects her. Athanaël comes to see Thaïs. She is terrified of becoming an old woman, and he tries to convince her to give up the dissolute life she is leading. He almost succeeds in persuading her, but she changes her mind. Athanaël falls asleep on the stairs leading to her house. Now deeply moved by what he has said, she asks him how she may be saved. He urges her to go the convent. He offers to take her if she will agree to burn everything from to her previous life. She sets fire to her home and leaves, dressed in a simple woolen tunic. Athanaël entrusts Thaïs to the nuns at the convent and departs. Back at the Cenobite retreat, he is unable to forget her. Palémon, an elderly Cenobite, chides him, reminding him that he must resist temptation. Athanaël prays and falls asleep, and dreams that Thaïs is dying, surrounded by nuns. He goes to see her one last time, arriving at her bedside just before she dies. She thanks him for all he has done. He tells her of his love for her, but she doesn't understand what he is saying. She dies thinking of heavenly forgiveness.

■ ACTE PREMIER	■ ACT I
PREMIER TABLEAU	SCENE I
(La Thébaïde.—Les cabanes des Cénobites aux bords du Nil. Ce n'est pas encore la fin du jour; douze Cénobites et le vieux Palémon sont assis autour d'une longue table. au milieu, Palémon préside le frugal et paisible repas. Une place est vide, celle d'Athanael).	(The Thebald. Huts of the Cenobites on the bank of the Nile. It is the declining day. Twelve Cenobites and old Palemon are seated at a long table. In their midst Palemon presides at the frugal and peaceful repast. One seat is empty, that of Athanael).
UN CENOBITE: Voici le pain.	A CENOBITE: Here is bread.
UN AUTRE: Et le sel.	ANOTHER: And salt.
UN AUTRE: Et l'hysope.—	ANOTHER: And hyssop.
UN AUTRE: Voici le miel.	ANOTHER: Here is honey.
UN AUTRE: Et voici l'eau.—	ANOTHER: And here is water.
PALEMON: (se levant, avec onction). Chaque matin le ciel répand sa grâce—sur mon jardin, ainsi qu'une rosée.—Bénissons Dieu dans les biens qu'il nous donne—et prions-le qu'il nous garde en sa paix!—	PALEMON: (rising with unction). Each morning Heaven spreads its mercies—on my garden as a dew.—Let us thank God for the things that He gives us—and let us pray that He keep us in peace!—
LES CENOBITES: (presque murmuré). Que les noirs démons de l'abîme—s'écartent de notre chemin!— (Paisiblement les Cénobites continuent leur repas).	THE CENOBITES: (almost in a murmur) That the black demons of the abyss—leave our path clear!— (Quietly, the Cenobites continue their repast.)
UN CENOBITES: (rompant le silence). Sur Athanael, notre frère,—étends, Seigneur, la force de ton bras!—	A CENOBITE: (breaking the silence.) Upon Athanael, our brother—extend, oh Lord, the strength of your arm!—
PLUSIERS CENOBITES: (avec regret). Athanaël! . . .	SEVERAL CENOBITES: (with regret). Athanael! . . .
D'AUTRES CENOBITES: (de même). Bien longue est son absence! . . .	OTHERS: (same tone). His absence is very long! . . . —
D'AUTRES: (avec intérêt). Quand donc reviendra-t-il? . . . —	OTHERS: (interested). But when will he return?—
PALEMON: (mystérieusement). L'heure de son retour est proche . . . —Un songe, cette nuit, me l'a montré vraiment—hâtant vers nous sa marche!—	PALEMON: (mysteriously). The hour of his return is near . . . —A dream, this night showed him truly to me—hastening his march toward us!—
LES CENOBITES: (avec foi). Athanaël est un élu de Dieu! . . . —(Pieusement.) Il se révèle dans les songes! . . . — (Athanael paraît; il s'avance lentement comme épuisé de fatigue et de chagrin).	THE CENOBITES: (with faith). Athanael is an elect of God! . . . (Piously) He reveals Himself in dreams! . . . — (Athanael appears; he advances slowly, as if exhausted with fatigue and sorrow.)
LES CENOBITES: (avec respect). Le voici! Le voici!	THE CENOBITES: (with respect). He is here! he is here!
ATHANAEL: (au milieu d'eux, douloureusement). La paix soit avec vous!—	ATHANAEL: (in their midst, painfully). Peace be with you!—
PALEMON ET LES CENOBITES: Frère, salut! (Tous s'empressent autour de lui.) La fatigue t'accable!—la poussière couvre ton front . . . —repose-toi! . . . reprends ta place! . . . —mange, bois!—	PALEMON AND THE CENOBITES: Brother, salutation (all gather about him). Fatigue crushes you—dust stains thy forehead . . . —Rest . . . take your place once more!—eat, drink!—
ATHANAEL: (il s'est assis avec accablement et repousse doucement les mets qu'on lui présente). Non! mon coeur est plein d'amertume . . . —Je reviens dans le deuil et dans l'affliction! . . . —La ville est livrée au péché! . . . —une femme, Thaïs, la remplit de scandale—et par elle l'enfer y gouverne les hommes!—	ATHANAEL: (he sits down, overcome with fatigue, gently declining the food they offer him). No! my heart is full of bitterness . . . —I return in mourning and affliction . . . —The city is given over to sin! . . . —A woman, Thais, fills it with scandal—and, through her, hell there governs men!—
LES CENOBITES: (avec une curiosité calme et simple). Quelle est cette Thaïs?	THE CENOBITES: (with calm and simple curiosity). Who is this Thais?

ATHANAEL: (sortant un peu de sa torpeur). Une prêtresse infâme—du culte de Vénus . . . (Humblement, et comme se souvenant d'un passé lointain.) Hélas! enfant encore—avant qu'à mon coeur la grâce ait parlé,—je l'ai connue! . . . (Plus sombre, plus agité.) Un jour, je l'avoue à ma honte,—devant son seuil maudit, je me suis arrêté . . . —mais Dieu m'a préservé de cette courtisane—et j'ai trouvé le calme en ce désert,—maudissant le péché que j'aurais pu commettre! . . . Ah! mon âme est troublée—La honte de Thaïs et le mal qu'elle fait—me causent une pein amère;—et je voudrais gagner cette âme à Dieu!—

PALEMON: (simplement, sagement). Ne nous mêlons jamais, mon fils, aux gens du siècle;—craignons les pièges de l'Esprit;—voilà ce que nous dit la sagesse éternelle.—(La nuit vient peu à peu.) La nuit vient; prions et dormons!—

LES CENOBITES: (avec une crainte mystérieuse, les mains jointes, se séparent, tout en priant). Que les noirs démons de l'abime—s'écartent de notre chemin!—Seigneur, bénis le pain et l'eau.—Bénis les fruits de nos jardins.—Donne-nous le sommeil sans rêves—et l'inaltérable repos!—
(Athanael s'est étendu devant sa cabane, la tête appuyée sur un petit chevalet de bois, les mains jointes).

ATHANAEL: (seul, dans l'omber). O Seigneur, je remets mon âme entre tes mains.—
(Il s'endort.)
(Nuit presque noire. Aprés un instant de calme, au milieu des ténèbres, une blancheur se fait; dans un brouillard apparaît l'intérieur de théâtre, à Alexandrie; foule immense sur les gradins. En avant se trouve la scène sur laquelle Thaïs, à demi vêtue, mais le visage voilé, mime les amours d'Aphrodite.—Dans le théâtre d'Alexandrie, immenses acclamations d'enthousiasme trés prolongées.—Effet extrêment lointain.—On peut distinguer, le nom de Thaïs hurlé par la foule.—Les acclamations augmentent jusqu'à la fin de la vision, la mimique s'accentuant de plus en plus.—La vision disparaît subitement; le jour revient.—Aurore).

ATHANAEL: (qui s'est éveillé peu à peu, se lève; avec épouvante et colère). Honte! horreur! ténèbres éternelles!—Seigneur, assiste-moi!—(Il s'est jeté à terre et il y reste proterné.) Toi qui mis la pitié dans nos âmes,—Dieu bon, louange à toi!—J'ai compris l'enseignement de l'ombre,—je me lève et je pars!—(Il s'est relevé avec enthousiasme.) Car je veux délivrer cette femme—des liens de la chair!—Dans l'azur, je vois penchés vers elle—les anges désolés!—N'est-elle pas, Seigneur, le souffle de ta bouche!—Ah! plus elle est coupable et plus je dois la plaindre!—Mais, je la sauverai, Seigneur! Donne-la-moi—et je te la rendrai pour la vie éternelle!—(Il appelle ses frères qui reparaissent et se pressent autour de lui.) Frères, levez-vous tous! venez!—ma mission m'est revélée!—Dans la ville maudite il faut que je retourne . . . —Dieu défend que Thaïs s'enfonce davantage—dans le gouffre du mal!—et c'est moi qu'il choisit pour la lui ramener!—(Athanael s'incline devant Palémon.)

PALEMON: (à Athanael avec une douce expression). Ne nous mêlons jamais, mon fils, aux gens du siècle.—Voilà la sagesse éternelle! . . . — (Les Cénobites qui ont entouré Athanael l'accompagnent jusqu'à la route, puis, s'agenouillant par groupes, ils répondent à Athanael dout la voix se perd dans les solitudes du desert).

LA VOIX D'ATHANAEL: (déjà éloignée). Esprit de lumière et de grâce,—arme mon coeur pour le combat.—

LES CENOBITES: (à genoux). Arme son coeur pour le combat.—

LA VOIX D'ATHANAEL: (encore plus éloignée). Et fais-moi fort comme l'archange—contre les charmes du démon.

LES CENOBITES: (comme un murmure). Et fais-le fort comme l'archange—contre les charmes du démon!—
(Le rideau s'abaisse lentement).

DEUXIEME TABLEAU

(La terrasse de la maison de Nicias à Alexandrie.—Cette terrasse domine la ville et la mer; elle est ombragée de grands arbes; à droite, vaste tenture derrière laquelle se trouve la salle préparée pour le banquet).

(Lentement, Athanael paraît et s'arrête au fond; à sa vue, un serviteur se léve sous le portique, et marche à sa rencountre).

LE SERVITEUR: Va, mendiant, chercher ailleurs ta vie!—Mon maître ne recoit pas les chiens comme toi!—

ATHANAEL: (recovering from his torpor). An infamous priestess—of the worship of Venus (humbly as if remembering the long gone past). Alas, when still a child—before that to my heart grace had yet spoken,—I had known her!(sombre and excited). One day, I say it to my shame, I had stopped before her accursed doorstep . . . —but God had preserved me from this courtezan—and I found calm in this desert,—cursing the sin that I might have committed . . . —Ah my soul is troubled . . . —the shame of Thais and the harm that she has done—cause me bitter pain—and I would win this soul to God!—

PALEMON: (simply, sagely). Let us never meddle, my son, with the people of the time . . . let us fear the traps of—the Spirit;—this is what eternal wisdom tells us (night begins to fall). Night comes; let us pray and sleep.

THE CENOBITES: (with a mysterious fear, hands clasped, separate while they pray). May the black demons of the abyss—move from our way. Lord bless the bread and the water. Bless the fruits of our gardens—give us the sleep without dreams—and the unalterable rest—
(Athanael has stretched himself before his hut, his head on a wooden pallet, his hands clasped.)

ATHANAEL: (alone in the shadow). Oh, Lord, I place my soul in your hands—(he sleeps). (Night is almost black. After a moment of calm in the midst of the darkness light is seen; in a mist appears the interior of the theatre at Alexandria. Immense crowd, in rows. In foreground the state on which Thaïs, half clothed, but, the face veiled, mimics the lovers of Aphrodite. In the theatre of Alexandria great, very prolonged, acclamations of enthusiasm. The effect is of great distance. The name of Thaïs, howled by the mob, can be distinguished. The acclamations increase to the end of the vision, the mimicry being more and more accentuated. The vision disappears; suddenly day begins. Dawn).

ATHANAEL: (who gradually awakes, rises. With fear and anger). Shame! horror! eternal darkness!—Oh Lord, assist me—(He throws himself prone and remains thus). You who put pity in our souls.—Good God, praise!—I have understood the teaching of the darkness—I rise and go. (He has risen with enthusiasm). For I will deliver this woman—from the thraldom of the flesh. In cerulean heights I see leaning toward her—the angels sorrow stricken—Is she not, Lord, the breath of your mouth—Ah the more guilty she the more I compassionate her!—But I will save her, Lord! Give her to me—and I shall give her back to you for life eternal!—(He calls his brothers who reappear and press about him). Brothers, rise all of you! come—My mission is revealed to me—I must return to the accursed city . . . —God forbids that Thaïs should sink deeper—in the pit of wickedness! and I am the one He chooses to bring her back! (Athanael bows before Palemon.)

PALEMON: (to Athanael, with a gentle expression). Let us never meddle, my son, with the people of this time—That is the eternal wisdom.—
(The Cenobites who have surrounded Athanael, accompany him to the road, then kneeling by groups, they respond to him as his voice is lost in the solitude of the desert.)

THE VOICE OF ATHANAEL: (far away). Spirit of light and grace—strengthen my arm for the combat—

THE CENOBITES: (on their knees). Arm his spirit for the combat.

THE VOICE OF ATHANAEL: (still further). And make me stronger than the archangel—against the charms of the demon.

THE CENOBITES: (like a murmur). And make him stronger than the archangel—against the charms of the demon!—
(The curtain falls slowly).

SCENE II

(The terrace of the house of Nicias at Alexandria. The terrace dominates the town and sea. Shaded with great trees. At right, vast drapery, behind which is the banqueting room.)

(Slowly Athanael appears and stops at rear. Seeing him, a servant rises under the portico and comes to meet him.)

THE SERVANT: Go, beggar, get your living elsewhere—My master does not receive dogs like you!—

ATHANAEL: (doucement). Mon fils, fais, s'il te plaît, ce que je te commande.—Je suis l'ami de ton maître, et je veux—lui parler à l'instant.

LE SERVITEUR: Hors d'ici, mendiant!—(Il lève sur Athanael son bâton.)

ATHANAEL: (fermement et avec calme). Frappe, si tu le veux, mais avertis ton maître.—Va.
(Se serviteur recule, s'incline et disparaît).

ATHANAEL: (seul, après avoir un instant contemplé la ville). Voilà donc la terrible cité!—Alexandrie, où je suis né dans le péché;—l'air brillant où j'ai respiré—l'affreux parfum de la luxure!—Voilà la mer voluptueuse—où j'écoutais chanter la sirène aux yeux d'or!—Oui, voilà mon berceau selon la chair,—Alexandrie!—Mon berceau, ma patrie! . . . —De ton amour j'ai détourné mon coeur! . . . —pour ta richesse je te hais!—pour ta science et ta beauté—Je te hais! je te hais!—Et maintenant je te maudis—comme un temple hanté par les esprits impurs!—Anges du ciel, souffles de Dieu,—venez! parfumez du battement de vos ailes—l'air corrompu qui va m'environner!—
(On entend des voix et des rires.—Presque aussitôt, Nicias paraît et s'avance, les bras appuyés sur les épaules de Crobyle et de Myrtale, deux belles esclaves rieuses. A la vue D'Athanael, il s'arrête, les quitte et s'approche les bras ouverts).

NICIAS: (avec vivacité). Athanaël, c'est toi! mon condisciple,—mon ami, mon frère! oh! va! je te reconanis,—bien qu'à la vérité—tu sois bien plus semblable à la bête qu'à l'homme!—Embrasse-moi donc; sois le bienvenu.—Tu quittes le désert?—tu nous reviens?

ATHANAEL: O Nicias!—je ne reviens que pour un jour, que pour une heure!—

NICIAS: Dis-moi tes voeux!—

ATHANAEL: Nicias, tu connais cette comédienne,—Thaïs, la courtisane?—

NICIAS: (riant). Certes, je la connais! pour mieux dire, elle est mienne—encore pour un jour!—J'ai vendu pour elle mes vignes—et ma dernière terre et mon dernier moulin,—et composé trois livres d'élégies;—et cela ne compte pour rien!—Je voudrais la fixer que je pedrais ma peine:—son amour est léger et fuyant comme un rêve! Athanaël, qu'attends-tu d'elle?—

ATHANAEL: Je veux la remener à Dieu!

ATHANAEL: (gently). My son, do, if you please what I command you.—I am the friend of your master and I must—speak to him at once.

THE SERVANT: Out of here, beggar.
(He is about to strike Athanael with his stick.)

ATHANAEL: (firm and calmly). Strike if you will but tell your master.—Go.
(The servant steps back, bows and disappears.)

ATHANAEL: (after having contemplated the city.) There is the terrible city!—Alexandria, where I was born in sin;—the brilliant air where I breathed—the perfume of luxury—There is the voluptuous sea—where I listened to the siren of the golden eyes!—Yes, there is my cradle according to the flesh,—Alexandria! My cradle, my country!—I turn my love away from you!—for your riches I hate you—for your science and your beauty—I hate you! I hate you!—and now that I curse you—as a temple haunted by impure spirits!—Angels of heaven breath of God,—come perfume with the whirring of your wings—the corrupt air that is about to surround me.
(Voices and laughter are heard.—Soon after Nicias appears and advances, leaning on the shoulders of Crobyle and Myrtale, two beautiful, smiling slaves. At the sight of Athanael, he stops, quits them and approaches with open arms.)

NICIAS: (with vivacity). Athanael, it's you! my co-disciple—my friend, my brother oh, I know you—though in sober truth—you're much more like a beast than a man—Embrace me, you're welcome—you would quit the desert? You will come back to us?

ATHANAEL: Oh Nicias!—I return just for a day, just for an hour.

NICIAS: Tell me your wishes!

ATHANAEL: Nicias, you know this comedienne,—Thais, the courtezan?—

NICIAS: (laughing). Of course, I know her! to say more, she is mine—for yet a day!—I have sold, for her, my vines—and my last estate and my last mill,—and composed three books of elegies;—and that counts for nothing!—I would retain her that I'd lose my pains:—her love is light and fitful as a dream! Athanael, what would you do with her?

ATHANAEL: I would lead her back to God.

NICIAS: (éclatant de rire). Mon pauvre ami!—crains d'offenser Vénus dont elle est la prêtresse.—

ATHANAEL: (avec plus de force). Je veux la ramener à Dieu! Va, Nicias,—j'arracheria Thaïs à ces amours immondes—et je la donnerai pour épouse à Jésus.—Pour entrer dans un monastère—Thaïs va me suivre aujourd'hui!—

NICIAS: (à l'oreille d'Athanael et en riant). Crains d'offenser Vénus, la puissante déesse!—Elle se vengera!

ATHANAEL: Dieu me protégera.—(Après un temps.) Où puis-je voir cette femme?

NICIAS: Ici même!—Pour la dernière fois—elle y doit souper avec moi—en très joyeuse compagnie!—Elle joue aujourd'hui;—en sortant du théâtre, elle viendra.—

ATHANAEL: Prête-moi donc, ami, quelque robe d'Asie—afin que dignement je puisse figurer à ce festin que tu vas lui donner.—

NICIAS: Crobyle et Myrtale, mes chères,—hâtez-vous de parer mon bn Athanaël.—
(Tandis que Nicias et Athanael se sont assis et s'entretiennent amicalement, Myrtale a frappé dans ses mains; le serviteur a paru auquel elle donne un ordre. Il sort et revient aussitôt avec des esclaves portant un coffret dont Crobyle et Myrtale tirent les objets qui doivent servir à la toilette D'Athanael, ainsi qu'un miroir de métal.
(Puis, elles commencent à lui verser sur la tête des parfums, à lui accomoder les chevuex et la barbe. Nicias souriant, les regarde faire).

NICIAS: Je vais donc te revoir brillant comme autrefois!—

ATHANAEL: Oui, j'emprunte à l'Enfer des armes contre lui.—

NICIAS: Philosphe orgueilleux, lâme humaine est fragile.—

ATHANAEL: Je ne crains pas l'orguel quand le Ciel me conduit.—

CROBYLE: (à Myrtale, à part). Il est jeune!

MYRTALE: (à Crobyle, même jeu). Il est beau!

CROBYLE: Sa barbe est un peu rude!

MYRTALE: —Ses yeux sont pleins de feu!

CROBYLE: Ce bandeau lui sied bien!—

MYRTALE ET CROBYLE: Cher Satrape, voici tes bracelets!

MYRTALE: Tes bagues!—

CROBYLE: Donne tes bras!

NICIAS: (bursting out laughing). My poor friend—fear to offend Venus of whom she is the priestess.—

ATHANAEL: (with more force). I would bring her back to God! there, Nicias—I shall tear Thais from these filthy amours—and shall give her for spouse to Jesus—To enter a monastery—Thais will follow me today!—

NICIAS: (at the ear of Athanael, laughing). Fear offense to Venus the powerful goddess!—She will avenge herself.

ATHANAEL: God will protect me(after a lapse). Where can I see this woman?

NICIAS: Here!—For the last time—she is to sup with me—in very joyous company.—She plays today—on leaving the theatre, she will come.—

ATHANAEL: Lend me then, friend, some robe of Asia—that I may assume decent appearance—at this festivity that you will give her.—

NICIAS: Crobyle and Myrtale, my dears,—hasten to embellish my good Athanael.—
(While Nicias and Athanael have seated themselves and amicably entertain one another, Myrtale has clapped her hands. Servant appears to whom she gives an order. He exits and returns with slaves carrying a coffer, from which Crobyle and Myrtale draw out things that will serve for the toilet of Athanael, as well as a mirror of metal. Then they begin to pour perfumes over his head and to arrange his hair and beard. Nicias, smiling, looks on).

NICIAS: I am then to see you again brilliant as of yore!—

ATHANAEL: Yes, I borrow from Hell arms against itself.—

NICIAS: Proud philosopher, the human soul is fragile.—

ATHANAEL: I fear not pride when Heaven leads me.—

CROBYLE: (to Myrtale, aside). He is young!

MYRTALE: (to Crobyle, aside). He is handsome!

CROBYLE: His beard is a trifle rude!

MYRTALE: —His eyes are full of fire.

CROBYLE: This band becomes him well—

MYRTALE AND CROBYLE: Dear Satrap, here are your bracelets.

MYRTALE: Your rings.—

CROBYLE: Lend your arms.

MYRTALE: Tes doigts!	MYRTALE: Your fingers.
MYRTALE ET CROBYLE: (à part). Il est jeune, il est beau!—Ses yeux sont pleins de feu!—	MYRTALE AND CROBYLE: (aside). He is young and handsome!—His eyes are full of fire!—
MYRTALE: (continuant la toilette). La robe, maintenant!	MYRTALE: (continuing the toilet) Now, the robe.
CROBYLE: (avec câlinerie). Quitte ce noir cilice!—	CROBYLE: (playfully). Give up this black cowl!—
ATHANAEL: (se levant comme pour leur échapper). Ah! femmes, pour cela, jamais!—	ATHANAEL: (rising so as to escape them). As for that, women, never!—
CROBYLE ET MYRTALE: (d'abord effarouchées par le brusque refus reviennent auprès de lui). Soit! (Lui passant une robe brodée par-dessus sa tunique.) Cache tes rigueurs sous cette robe souple!—	CROBYLE AND MYRTALE: (at first frightened by the savage refusal, come toward him again). Very well (passing an embroidered robe over his tunic). Hide your rigors under this yielding stuff.—
NICIAS À ATHANAEL: Ne t'offense pas de leur raillerie,—ne baisse pas devant elles les yeux!—admire-les plutôt!	NICIAS: (to Athanael). Take no offense at their raillery. Do not lower your eyes before them—rather admire them.
ATHANAEL: (à lui-même). Viens, esprit de lumière!—arme mon coeur pour le combat!—contre les charmes du démon!—	ATHANAEL: (to himself). Come, spirit of light—strengthen my arm for the combat against the charms of the demon.—
CROBYLE ET MYRTALE: (à part). Il est beau comme un jeune dieu!—Si Phoebé le rencontrait,—sa divinité farouche—s'humaniserait!— (Continuant la toilette).	CROBYLE AND MYRTALE: (aside). He is handsome as a young god—If Phoebe should encounter him—her fierce divinity—would be humanized. (Continuing the toilet).
MYRTALE: (à Athanael). Laisse-nous te chausser de ces sandales d'or!—	MYRTALE: (to Athanael). Let us invest you with these sandals of gold—
CROBYLE: Laisse-nous te verser ce parfum sur les joues.—	CROBYLE: Let us pour this perfume on your cheeks.—
CROBYLE ET MYRTALE: (à part). Il est beau comme un jeune dieu!— (Grandes acclamations lointaines et prolongées). (Au bruit des acclamations, Nicias est remonté vers la terrasse, et il a regardé du côté de la ville).	CROBYLE AND MYRTALE: (aside). He is handsome as a young god.— (Great acclamations far off and prolonged. At the sound, Nicias mounts the terrace and looks in direction of the town).
NICIAS: (revenant vers Athanael, en souriant). Garde-toi bien! Voici ta terrible ennemie!— (Des groupes d'histrions et de comédiennes mêlés à des philosophes amis de Nicias paraissent sur la terrasse, précédant la venue de Thaïs).	NICIAS: (returning to Athanael, smiling). Guard yourself well! Here is your terrible enemy!— (Groups of histrions and comediennes, intermingled with philosophers, friends of Nicias, precede the coming of Thaïs).
HISTRIONS, COMEDIENNES, PHILOSOPHES: (entourant Thaïs et s'inclinant devant elle). Thaïs! soeur des Karites!—Rose d'Alexandrie!—Belle silencieuse!—Thaïs! tant désiree!—Thaïs!—Thaïs! Thaïs!—	HISTRIONS, COMEDIENNES PHILOS: (surrounding Thaïs and bowing before her). Thaïs! sister of the Karites—Rose of Alexandria—Oh silent Beauty—Thaïs all desired!—Thaïs! Thaïs! Thaïs!
NICIAS: (accueillant ses hôtes et leur désignant la salle du banquet dont les esclaves soulèvant les tentures.) Thaïs! Chère Thaïs!—Hermodore! Aristobule!—Callicrate! Dorion!—mes hôtes! mes amis! les dieux soient avec vous!— (Tous se rendent dans la salle. Thaïs a été retenue doucement par Nicias au moment où elle se disposait à suivre ses amis. Nicias tombe assis; Thaïs est près de lui; celle-ci reste debout).	NICIAS: (receiving his guests and designating the banquet hall, of which slaves lift the draperies). Thaïs, dear Thaïs,—Hermodore! Aristobule—Callicrate—Dorian!—My guests, my friends; the gods be with you!— (All go to banquet room. Thaïs has been gently detained by Nicias at the moment when she was about to follow his friends. Nicias falls on a seat. Thaïs, near him, remains standing).
THAÏS: C'est Thaïs, l'idole fragile—qui vient pour la dernière fois—s'asseoir à ta table fleurie . . . —Demain, je ne serai pour toi plus rien qu'un nom! . . . —	THAÏS: It's Thaïs, the fragile idol—who comes for the last time—to sit at your enflowered table . . . —Tomorrow, I shall be nothing for you but a name!—
NICIAS: Nous nous somes aimés une longue semaine . . . —C'est beaucoup de constance, et je ne me plains pas . . . —et tu vas t'en ailer, libre, loin de mes bras . . . —	NICIAS: We have loved each other one whole, long week—It is great constancy and I do not complain . . . —you are about to go, free, far from my arms . . . —
THAÏS: Pour ce soir, sois joyeux.—Laissons s'épanouir les heurs bienheureuses,—et ne demandons rien plus rien à cette nuit—qu'un peu de folle ivresse et de divin oubli.—Demain . . . je ne serai pour toi plus rien qu'un nom . . . — (Quelques philosophes, parmi lesquels se trouvre Athanael, sortent de la salle tout en discutant gravement.—Athanael s'est détaché du groupe: il demeure immobile dans une attitude sévère, en regardant Thaïs).	THAÏS: For tonight, be joyful.—Let the happy hours fade away—and let us ask nothing, nothing more from this night—than a little mad bliss and divine forgetfulness.—Tomorrow—I shall be no more to you than a name.— (A few philosophers, among them Athanael, leave the banquet room gravely arguing. Athanael detaches himself from the group. He stands still, severely looking at Thaïs).
THAÏS: (à Nicias). Quel est cet étranger dont le regard farouche—s'attache ainsi sur moi?— Je ne l'ai jamais vu paraître en nos festins . . . —d'où vient-il? quel est-il?—	THAÏS: (to Nicias). What is this stranger, the fierce eyes of whom—look on me thus—I have not seen him at our feasts—Whence comes he? Who is he?
NICIAS: (asez bas et négligemment). Un philosophe à l'âme rude!—un solitaire du désert!—Il est ici pour toi; prends garde!—	NICIAS: (low and negligently). A philosopher of rude soul—a solitary of the desert.—He comes here for you; take care!—
THAÏS: Qu'apporte-ti-il? L'amour?	THAÏS: What does he bring? Love?
NICIAS: Nulle faiblesse humaine—ne saurait amollir son coeur.—Il veut te convertir à sa sainte doctrine.—	NICIAS: No human weakness—could soften his heart.—He would convert you to his sacred doctrine.
THAÏS: Qu'enseigne-t-il?	THAÏS: What teaches he?
ATHANAEL: (s'avançant). Le mépris de la chair,—l'amour de la douleur,—l'austère pénitence!—	ATHANAEL: (advancing). Contempt of the flesh—love of pain—austere penance.—
THAÏS: (après l'avoir regardé longuement). Va; passe ton chemin! je ne crois qu'à l'amour—et nulle autre puissance—ne pourrait rien sur moi!—	THAIS: (gazing at him long). Go, pass on your way. I believe but in love—and no other power—can swerve me from it!—
ATHANAEL: (va vers elle et dit avec éclat). Ah! ne blasphème pas! (Les philosophes cessent leur entretien et descendent. Tous les invités, ont quitté la salle du banquet, et, se joignent, à Thaïs et à Nicias).	ATHANAEL: (going toward her, exclaiming). Ah! blaspheme not. (The philosophers cease their talk and come down. All the guests have left the banquet room and joined Thaïs and Nicias).
THAÏS: (à Athanael, avec une sorte de câlinerie ironique). Qui te fait si sévère—et pour-quoi démens-tu la flamme de tes yeux?—Quelle triste folie—te fait manquer à ton destin?—Homme fait pour aimer, quelle erreur est la tienne!—Homme fait pour savoir, qui t'aveugle à ce point!—Tu n'as pas effleuré la coupe de la vie!—Tu	THAÏS: (to Athanael, with ironic playfulness). Who makes you so severe—and why forswear the flame of your eyes? What sorrowful folly—makes you fail in your destiny—Man made for love, what error is yours—Man made for knowledge, who blinds you to this extent?—You have not tasted of the cup of life—you have not spelled n'as épelé l'amoureuse sagesse!—Assieds-toi près de nous, couronne-toi de roses,—rien n'est vrai que d'aimer, tends les bras à l'amour!—

NICIAS ET LA FOULE: Assieds-toi près de nous, couronne-toi de roses,—rien n'est vrai que d'aimer, tends les bras à l'amour!—

ATHANAEL: (ardemment). Non! je hais vos fausse ivresses!—Non! ici, je me tais, mais j'irai, pécheresse,—j'irai dans ton palais te porter le salut—et je vaincrai l'Enfer en triomphant de toi!—

THAÏS, NICIAS, LA FOULE: Couronne-toi de roses!—rien n'est vrai que d'aimer, tends les bras à l'amour!—

ATHANAEL: (se dispose à s'éloigner; il dit avec autorité). J'irai dans ton palais te porter le salut!—

NICIAS, LA FOULE: Ose venir, toi qui braves Vénus!—

THAÏS: (se disposant à reproduire la scène des amours d'Aphrodite à Athanael, avec provocation). Ose venir, toi qui braves Vénus!! . . . — (Des esclaves s'apprêtent à détacher les vêtements de Thaïs.—Athanael a fui avec un geste d'horreur).

■ ACTE DEUXIEME

PREMIER TABLEAU

(Chez Thaïs.—Une figure de Vénus est au premier plan.—Il y a, devant la stèle, un brûle-parfums. Le sol est couvert de tapis de Byzance, d'oreillers brodés et de peaux de lions lybiques. Grands vases d'onyx d'où s'élancent des perséas en fleurs).

(Thaïs paraît, accompagnée de quelques histrions et d'un petit groupe de comédiennes.—Bientôt elle les éloigne tous d'un geste).

THAÏS: (seule, avec lassitude et amertume). Ah! je suis fatiguée à mourir! . . . Tous ces hommes—ne sont qu'indifférence et que brutalité.—Les femmes sont méchantes—et les heures pesantes!—J'ai l'âme vide . . . Où trouver le repos? . . . —Et comment fixer le bonheur!—(Rèveuse, elle prend un miroir.) O mon miroir fidèle,—rassure-moi; dis-moi que je suis toujours belle,—que je serai belle éternellement;—que rien ne flétrira les roses de mes lèvres,—que rien ne ternira l'or pur de mes cheveux;—dis-moi que je suis belle et que je serai belle—éternellement! éternellement!—(prêtant l'oreille, comme si une voix lui parlait dans l'ombre.) Ah! tais-toi, voix impitoyable,—voix qui me dis: Thaïs, tu vieilliras!—Un jour, ainsi, Thaïs ne serait plus Thaïs! . . . —Non! non! je n'y puis croire;—et s'il n'est point pour garder la beauté—de secrets souverains, de pratiques magiques,—toi, Vénus, réponds-moi de son éternité!—(S'adressant à l'image de Vénus, avec dévotion.) Vénus, invisible et présente! . . . —Vénus, enchantement de l'ombre!—réponds-moi! . . . —Dis-moi que je suis belle et que je serai belle—éternellement!—que rien ne flétrira les roses de mes lèvres,—que rien ne ternira l'or pur de mes cheveux;—dis-moi que je suis belle et que je serai belle—éternellement!—éternellement!—éternellement!—
(Elle apercoit Athanael qui est entré silencieusement et s'est arrêté sur le seuil).

THAÏS: (avec charme). Etranger, te voilà comme tu l'avais dit . . . !—

ATHANAEL: (murmurant une prière). Seigneur, fais que son radieux visage—soit comme voilé devant moi!—fais que la force de ses charmes—ne triomphe pas de ma volonté!—

THAÏS: (avec un sourire). Allons parle, à présent!—

ATHANAEL: On dit qu'aucune femme ne t'égale!—Et c'est pourquoi j'ai voulu te connaître,—et c'est pourquoi, te voyant, j'ai compris—combien il me serait glorieux de te vaincre!—

THAÏS: Tes hommages sont hauts; ton orgueil les dépasse—Présomptueux, prends garde de m'aimer!—

ATHANAEL: (avec chaleur). Ah! je t'aime, Thaïs, et j'aime à te le dire,—mais je t'aime, non comme tu l'entends!–moi, je t'aime en esprit, je t'aime en vérité,—je te promets mieux qu'ivresse fleurie—et songes d'une brève nuit;—cette félicité qu'aujourd'hui je t'apporte—ne finira jamais! . . .

THAÏS: Montre-moi donc ce merveilleux amour!—Un amour vrai n'a qu'un language: les baisers.—

ATHANAEL: Thaïs, ne raille pas! L'amour que je te prêche—c'est l'amour inconnu!

THAÏS: (légèrement). Ami, tu viens bien tard;—je connais les ivresses.—

ATHANAEL: L'amour que tu connais n'enfante que la honte.—Celui que je t'apporte est le seul glorieux!—

amorous wisdom?—Sit by us, we'll crown you with roses—nothing is true but loving, spread out your arms to love!—

NICIAS AND THE CROWD: Sit near us, we'll crown you with roses—nothing is true but loving, extend your arms to love.

ATHANAEL: (ardently). No. I loathe your false intoxication—No, here I am silent, fair sinner, but I shall go—I shall go to thy palace and carry salvation—and I shall vanquish Hell in triumphing over thee!—

THAÏS, NICIAS, THE CROWD: We'll crown you with roses—nothing is true but loving—spread out your arms to love.

ATHANAEL: (about to go; he says with authority). I shall go in your palace and bring you salvation.

NICIAS AND THE CROWD: Dare it, you who braves Venus!—

THAÏS: (disposing herself to reproduce scene of loves of Aphrodite, to Athanael with provocation.) Dare to come, you who braves Venus! . . . — (Slaves prepare to detach the robe of Thaïs. Athanael escapes with a gesture of horror).

■ ACT II

SCENE I

(At the house of Thaïs. A figure of Venus is in the foreground. Before it a censer. The floor is covered with rugs of Byzantium, embroidered pillows and lion skins. Onyx vases full of flowers).

(Thaïs appears, accompanied by some actors and a group of comediennes. Soon she dismisses them with a gesture).

THAÏS: (alone, with lassitude, bitterly). Ah, I am tired to death . . . All these men—are but indifference and but brutality.—The women are wicked—and the hours heavy!—My soul is empty . . . where find peace?—And how assure happiness (dreamily, she takes a mirror). Oh, my faithful mirror—reassure me; tell me that I am always beautiful—that I shall be beautiful eternally;—that nothing shall tarnish the roses of my lips,—that nothing shall dull the pure gold of my hair;—tell me that I am beautiful and that I shall be beautiful—eternally, eternally!—(Listening as if a voice spoke in the shadows). Oh, be quiet, unpitying voice—voice that to me says: 'Thaïs, you will grow old!'—Some day then, Thais would no longer be Thaïs!—No! No! I cannot believe it;—and if there are not, to safeguard beauty,—sovereign secrets and magic practices,—Venus, answer me for its eternity—(addressing the image of Venus, with devotion). Venus invisible and ever present! Venus enchantment of the gloom—answer me!—Tell me that I am beautiful and that I shall be beautiful—eternally—that nothing shall tarnish the roses of my lips,—that nothing shall dull the pure gold of my hair;—tell me that I am beautiful and that I shall be beautiful—eternally—eternally—eternally!—
(She perceives Athanael, who has entered silently and who remains at the door).

THAÏS: (with charm). Stranger, you're here as you said you'd be.

ATHANAEL: (murmuring a prayer). Lord, have it that her radiant visage—be as veiled before me—make it that the strength of her charms—do not triumph over my will!—

THAÏS: (smiling). Come speak at once.—

ATHANAEL: It is said that no woman equals you!—It is for this I wished to know you—and why, seeing you, I understood—how glorious it would be to vanquish you—

THAÏS: Your homage is great; Your pride greater.—Presumptuous, beware in case you might love me.—

ATHANAEL: (hotly). Ah, I love you. Thais, and I like to tell you so—but I love you not as you understand!—for me, I love you in spirit, I love you in truth—I promise you better than flowery bliss—and dreams of a brief night—this felicity that I bring you today—will never end!—

THAÏS: Show me then this marvelous love!—A true love has but one language; Kisses.—

ATHANAEL: Thaïs, rail not! The love that I preach to you is the unknown love—

THAÏS: Friend, you come very late. I know every bliss.—

ATHANAEL: The love that you know begets only shame—That which I bring you is the only glorious love!—

THAÏS: Je te trouve hardi d'offenser ton hôtesse.—

ATHANAEL: T'offenser! . . . je ne songe—qu'à te conquérir à la vérite!—(Avec un enthousiasme croissant.) Ah! qui m'inspirera des discours embrasés—pour qu'à mon souffle, ô courtisane,—ton coeur fonde comme une cire!—Qui pourra te livrer à moi—et qui changera ma parole—en un Jourdain dont les flots répandus—Prépareront ton âme à la vie éternelle.—

THAÏS: (le regarde avec un vague sentiment de crainte). A la vie éternelle! . . .

ATHANAEL: A la vie éternelle! . . .

THAÏS: (prenant une résolution, mais d'abord tout en tremblant). Eh bien, fais-moi connaître—tout cet amour mystérieux,—je t'obéis . . . je suis à toi! . . .
(Thaïs, avec une spatule d'or, puise dans une coupe quelques grains d'encens qu'elle jette dans le brûle-parfums.)

ATHANAEL: (à part, avec fièvre). vn tumulte effrayant s'élève en ma pensée! . . . —Seigneur, fais que son radieux visage—soit comme voilé devant moi! . . . — (Une fumée légère enveloppe Thaïs en même temps que la Déesse, et elle murmure une sorte d'incantation mystérieuse).

THAÏS: Vénus, invisible et présente!—Vénus, enchantement de l'ombre!—

ATHANAEL: (à part, priant avec ardeur). Fais que la force de ses charmes—ne triomphe pas de ma volonté.—

THAÏS: Vénus, éclat du ciel et blancheur de la neige!—Splendeur, Volupté, Douceur! . . .

ATHANAEL: (Déchire, arrache sa robe d'emprunt sous laquelle il a gardé son cilice). Je suis Athanaël, moine d'Antinoé!—Je viens du saint désert et je maudis la chair—et me voici devant toi, femme—comme devant un tombeau;—et je te dis: Thaïs, lève-toi, lève-toi!—

THAÏS: (pâle d'épouvente, pleurant et gémissant, se jette aux pieds d'Athanael). Ne me fais pas de mal. Parle, que me veux-tu?—Je sais que les saints du désert détestent celles qui s'asservissent aux hommes!—pourtant ne me méprise pas;—je n'ai pas plus choisi mon sort que ma nature;—et ce n'est pas ma faute enfin si je suis belle! . . . —Ne me fais pas mourir! Ah! je crains tant la mort!—

THAÏS: I find you bold to offend your hostess.

ATHANAEL: Offend you! I would not dream—but to make you yield to truth (With increasing enthusiasm.) Ah! who will inspire me with words of fire—so that at my breath, oh courtezan—your heart melts like wax!—Who is able to deliver you to me—and who will change my words—to a Jordan the widening waves of which shall prepare your soul for the life everlasting.—

THAÏS: (looking at him with a vague sentiment of fear). For the life everlasting!—

ATHANAEL: For the life everlasting!

THAÏS: Well, then, let me know—all this mysterious love,—I obey you . . . I am yours! . . .
(Thaïs, with a spatula of gold, takes from a cup a few grains of incense which she throws in the censer).

ATHANAEL: (aside, feverishly). A frightful tumult arises in my mind . . . —Lord, have it so that her radiant visage—be as veiled before me!—
(A light mist envelopes Thaïs as well as the goddess and she murmurs a sort of mysterious incantation).

THAÏS: Venus, invisible and here present—Venus, enchantment of the darkness.

ATHANAEL: (aside, praying with ardor). Make it so that the force of her charms—shall not triumph over my will.

THAÏS: Venus, descend and reign!—Venus, flash from heaven and white as snow—Splendor, Voluptuousness, Gentleness!

ATHANAEL: (tearing away his borrowed robe, under which he has kept his cowl). I am Athanael, monk of Antinous! I come from the sacred desert and I curse the flesh—and I curse the death that possesses you—and I am here before you, woman—as before a tomb; and I say to you: Thaïs, arise, arise!

THAÏS: (pale with fear, weeping, groaning, throws herself at the feet of Athanael). Do not harm me. Speak! what would you?—I know that the saints of the desert—detest those who lend themselves to men!—Yet, do not despise me; I no more chose my lot than my nature;—and it is, after all, not my fault if I am beautiful!—Do not make me die—Ah! I so fear death.—

ATHANAEL: (avec enthousiasme). Non, tu vivras de la vie éternelle;—sois à jamais la bien-aimée—et l'épouse du Christ dont tu fus l'ennemie.—

THAÏS: (avec ardeur et joie). Je sens une fraîcheur en mon âme ravie—Je frissonne et demeure charmée! . . . —Quel pouvoir est le sien?

LA VOIX DE NICIAS: (au loin et se rapproche graduellement). O Thaïs, idole fragile,—je veux une dernière fois—l'amour de ta lèvre fleurie! . . . —

THAÏS: (écoutant avec un sentiment de répulsion). Ah! Nicias! . . . encor! . . . (Avec agitation.) Mon âme n'est plus mienne.—M'aimer! . . . (Avec dédain.) Il n'a jamais aimé personne . . . —il n'aime que l'amour! . . .

ATHANAEL: Tu l'entends?

THAÏS: (avec énergie). Eh bien, va!—Dis-lui que je déteste—tous les riches, tous les heureux! . . . —qu'il m'oublie, entends-tu! Dis-lui que je le hais! . . . —

ATHANAEL: (avec autorité). A ton seuil, jusqu'au jour, j'attendrai ta venue! . . . —

THAÏS: (avec un dernier mouvement de révolte). Non! . . . je reste Thaïs, Thaïs la courtisane.—Je ne crois plus à rien et je ne veux plus rien.—Ni lui, ni toi, ni ton Dieu!
(Elle est prise d'un rire nerveux, qui s'achève en des sanglots, et se jette le visage dans ses coussins, tandis que lui s'éloigne).
(Les rideaux se ferment lentement).

MEDITATION RELIGIEUSE.—SYMPHONIE.

DEUXIEME TABLEAU

(Avant le jour.—Sur une place, devant la maison de Thaïs.—Sous le portique, une petite statuette d'Eros; devant l'image, une lampe allumée.—Au bas des degrés du portique dort Athanael.—Au fond, à droite, une maison dans laquelle sont réunis Nicias et ses amis; les baies sont éclairées).

(Après un temps, la porte de la maison de Thaïs s'ouvre. Thaïs paraît; elle prend la lampe, qu'elle élève audessus de sa tête pour voir sur la place. Elle apercoit Athanael, repose la lampre et revient vers lui).

THAÏS: (se penchant vers Athanael mystérieusement.) Père, Dieu m'a parlé par ta voix! me voici!—

ATHANAEL: (with enthusiasm) No, you shall live of the life everlasting—be forever the well beloved—and the spouse of the Christ of whom you were the enemy.—

THAÏS: (with ardor and joy). I feel a freshness in my ravished soul!—I shiver and remain as one charmed!—What would you do?

THE VOICE OF NICIAS: (in the distance, gradually approaching). Oh, Thaïs, fragile idol—I want for one last time—the love of your fragrant lip!—

THAÏS: (listening, with a sentiment of repulsion). Ah, Nicias! again—(agitated) My soul is no more mine.—Love me! (with disdain). He has never loved anyone.—He loves only love! . . .

ATHANAEL: Do you hear?

THAÏS: (with energy). Well then, go—Tell him that I detest—all rich men, all happy ones!—That he must forget me! Tell him that I hate him!—

ATHANAEL: (with authority). On your doorstep until dawn, I shall await your coming!—

THAÏS: (with a last movement of revolt). No! I remain Thaïs, Thaïs the courtezan—I believe in nothing more and I want nothing more.—Not him, not you, not your God!
(She laughs nervously, which ends in sobs and throws herself face down on the pillows, while he departs. The curtains come together slowly).

RELIGIOUS MEDITATION.—SYMPHONY.

SCENE II

(Before daylight.—A square facing the house of Thaïs. Under the portico a small statuette of Eros; facing it a small lighted lamp. On the last of the steps of portico, Athanael sleeps. At rear, on right, a house in which are Nicias and his friends. The windows are lighted).

(After a time the door of Thaïs opens. She appears; she takes the lamp, which she extends over her head to view the square. She perceives Athanael, puts down the lamp and comes to him).

THAÏS: (leaning over Athanael, mysteriously). Father, God, has spoken by your voice! I am here.

ATHANAEL: (se levant, à Thaïs, mystérieusement). Thaïs, Dieu t'attendait!	ATHANAEL: (rising, to Thaïs, mysteriously). Thaïs, God awaited you!
THAÏS: (avec humilité). Ta parole est restée—en mon coeur comme un baume divin.—J'ai prié, j'ai pleuré . . . —il s'est fait en mon âme une grande lumière.—Ayant vu le néant de tout volupté,—vers toi je viens, ainsi que tu l'as commandé.—	THAÏS: (humbly). Your word has remained—in my heart as a balm divine.—I prayed, I wept . . . —There took place in my soul a great light.—Having seen the nothingness of all passion,—I come toward you as you command.—
ATHANAEL: Va, courage, ô ma soeur!—l'aube du repose se leve! . . .	ATHANAEL: Courage, oh my sister! the dawn of rest begins . . .
THAÏS: (humblement). —Que faut-il faire? . . .	THAÏS: (humbly). —What am I to do?
ATHANAEL: —Non loin d'ici vers l'occident,—il est un monastère où des femmes élues—vivent pareilles à des anges—dans un parfait recueillement:—pauvres, pour que Jésus les aime,—modestes, pour qu'il les regarde,—et chastes pour qu'il les épouse!—C'est là que je te conduirai.—A leur pieuse mère, Albine,—je te consacrerai!—	ATHANAEL: Not far from here, toward the West,—there is a monastery, where the elect among women—live similar to the angels—in a perfect introspection:—poor, that Jesus may love them,—modest, that he may look upon them,—chaste that he may espouse them!—it is there I shall conduct you.—To their pious mother Albine,—I shall consecrate you!—
THAÏS: Albine, fille des Césars!	THAÏS: Albine, daughter of the Caesars!
ATHANAEL: (simplement). Et la servante—la plus pure du Christ!—(Avec mystère.) Là, je t'enfermerai dans l'étroile cellule—jusqu'au jour où Jésus te viendra délivrer!—(Avec un enthousiasme grandissant.) Va! n'en doute pas! Il viendra lui-même—et quel tressaillement dans la chair de ton âme—quand tu sentiras sur tes yeux—se poser ses doigts de lumière—afin d'en essuyer les pleurs!	ATHANAEL: And the servant—the purest, of Christ!—(Mysteriously.) There, I shall shut you up in the narrow cell—until the day that Jesus shall come to deliver you! (With increasing enthusiasm.) Ah, do not, do not doubt it, he will himself come—and what trembling in the flesh of your soul—when you feel on your eyes—the touch of his fingers of light—so as to wipe away the tears!—
THAÏS: (avec joie). Ah mène-moi, mon uère, à la maison d'Albine!	THAÏS: (joyfully). Oh, take me, my father, to the abode of Albine.
ATHANAEL: —Oui. Mais, d'abord, anéantis—ce qui fut l'impure Thaïs:—ton palais, tes richesses,—tout ce qui proclame ta honte!—Brûle tout! anéantis tout!—	ATHANAEL: Yes, but first destroy—all that was the impure Thaïs:—your palace, your wealth,—all that proclaims your shame! Burn all, destroy all!—
THAÏS: (résignée). Père, qu'il en soit ainsi.—(Elle se dirige vers la maison, puis s'arrête devant la petite image d'Eros.) Je ne veux tien garder de mon passé,—rien que cela . . . (Prenant l'image qu'elle présente à Athanael.) Cette image d'ivoire,—cet enfant, d'un travail antique et merveilleux,—c'est Eros! c'est l'amour! Considère, ô mon père,—que nous ne le pouvons traiter cruellement.—L'amour est une vertu rare,—j'ai péché, non par lui, mais plutôt contre lui.—Ah! je ne pleure pas de l'avoir eu pour maître,—mais d'avoir méconnu sa volonté!—Il défend qu'une femme—se donne à qui ne vient point en son nom:—et c'est pour cette loi qu'il convient qu'on l'honore.—Prends-le, pour le placer dans quelque monastère,—et ceux qui le verront se tourneront vers Dieu.—car l'amour nous élève aux célestes pensées—(Après un temps.) Quand Nicias m'aimait, il m'offrit cette image.—	THAÏS: (resigned). Father, so be it,—(she goes toward house but stops before the image of Eros). I will keep nothing of my past,—nothing but this. (Taking the image which she presents to Athanael). This ivory image,—this child of a fashion antique and marvelous, it is Eros, it is Love. Consider, oh my father,—that we cannot treat it cruelly.—Love is a rare virtue,—I have sinned, not by him, but rather against him.—Ah, I do not weep to have had him for master,—but to have misconceived his will!—He forbids that a woman—should give herself to whoever comes not in his name;—and it is for this that he claims to be honored.—Take it, and place it in some monastery,—those who see it will turn themselves toward God,—for love, raises us to heavenly thoughts—(Pauses). When Nicias loved me he gave me this image.—
ATHANAEL: (avec une explosion de colère). Nicias! ah! maudis la source empoisonnée—d'où te vient ce présent! qu'il soit anéanti.—(Il a saisi la statuette qu'il jette violemment sur le pavé où elle se brise.) Et tout le reste à la flamme, à l'abime!—Viens, Thaïs—que tout ce qui fut toi retourne à la poussière,—à l'éternel oublie!—	ATHANAEL: (explosion of anger). Nicias! then curse the poisoned source—that brought this present! Destruction to it!—(He seizes the statuette, throws it violently on the pavement where it is smashed). And all the rest to the flames, to the abyss!—Come, Thaïs—that all which was you returns to dust,—to eternal forgetfulness!—
THAÏS: Que tout retourne à la poussière—à l'éternel oubli!—Viens!	THAÏS: That all returns to dust—to eternal forgetfulness!—Come.
ATHANAEL: Viens! (Quand Thaïs et Athanael sont sortis, paraissent Nicias et tous les personnages du second tableau.—Ils descendent joyeusement.—Nicias les mène, très animé).	ATHANAEL: Come. (When Thaïs and Athanael have gone, Nicias and all the personages of the second scene appear. They descend joyously. Nicias leads them, very animated).
NICIAS ET LE CHOEUR: —Suivez-moi tous, amis!—La nuit n'est pas finie!—Le jeu m'a rendre trente fois le prix—dont je payai la beauté de Thaïs!—Donc, réjouissons nous, encore, encore, encore! —Evohé! —Appelez les danseuses d'Asie—les psylles et les baladins!—Faisons durer jusqu'à l'aurore-les danses, les jeux et les cris! —Evohé! Frappons aux portes des tavernes.—Allumons des flambeaux.—Faisons honte au soleil!—Qu'on serve des vins à la neige!—Qu'on jette là d'épais tapis!—A mes côtes, Crobyle, et toi, Myrtale! —Evohé! —Rien n'est vrai que la vie! —Rien n'est sage que la folie! —Evohé! (On a dans un grand mouvement, exécuté les indications de Nicias.—Il tombe paresseusement parmi les coussins.—Autor de lui, Crobule, Myrtale, les femme, les histrions) DIVERTISSEMENT. (Après plusieurs danses, paraît la Charmeuse).	NICIAS AND THE CHORUS: Follow me, all my friends! The night is not over!—The game has given thirty times the price—that I paid for the beauty of Thaïs!—Then, let us rejoice, again, again, again! —Evoh'e! —Call in dancers of Asia—the pyslles and the baladins,—Let it last until dawn—dances, games and shouts! —Evoh'e! Let us knock on the doors of the taverns.—Light the torches.—Let us shame the sun!—That wine with snow be served.—That thick rugs be laid here!—To my side Crobyle and Myrtale! —Evoh'e! —Nothing is true but life! —Nothing is wise but folly! —Evoh'e! (The orders of Nicias have been carried out. He falls lazily among the pillows. Around him are Crobyle, Myrtale, the women and the actors). (Diversion). (After several dances, appears the Charmer).
NICIAS: (à l'apparition de la Charmeuse). Voilà l'Incomparable! Prends la lyre, Crobyle, et, toi, prends la cithare,—Myrtale! Et toutes deux chantez—le cantique de la Beauté. (Alors Crobyle et Myrtale chantent en s'accompagnant de leurs instruments; tandis que la Charmeuse développe ses poses lentes et ses pas légers).	NICIAS: (at her apparition). There is the Incomparable! Take the lyre, Crobyle and thou, the cythera, Myrtale, and both of you sing—the canticle of Beauty. (Crobyle and Myrtale sing to the accompaniment of their instruments. Meanwhile the Charmer develops her slow poses and her light steps).

CROBYLE ET MYRTALE:
I
Celle qui vient est plus belle Que la reine de Saba
Qui dansait sur des miroirs!
II
Et de l'ombre de ses voiles
Partent les traits de sa voix
Comme des flèches de feu!
III
Elle a le teint d'ambre pâle,
Les lèvres couleur de sang,
Et ses yeux sont pleins de nuit!
IV
Elle vient, aérienne,
Flexible comme un roseau,
Légère comme un oiseau!
V
Ses regards jettent des chaînes,
Qui font les hommes captifs,
Ses beaux regards alanguis!
VI
Elle entraîne, elle caresse,
Elle a le charme mortel,
A qui nul n'a résisté!
VII
Comme une idol impassible
Elle va sans rien savoir
De son effrayant pouvoir!
(A ce moment, Athanael sort vivement de la maison, une torche allumée à la main).

NICIAS: (avec ironie). Eh! c'est lui! . . . c'est Athanaël!—

AMIS: Athanaël!—Salut, sage des sages!—Thaïs a donc désarmé ta raison?—(En riant.) Ah! ah! Voyez sa face glorieuse!—

ATHANAEL: (jetant sa torche sur le sol). Ah! taisez-vous! Thaïs est l'épouse de Dieu,—elle n'est plus à vous! La Thaïs infernale—est morte à tout jamais . . . et la Thaïs nouvelle,—la voici! (Paraît Thaïs, les cheveaux défaits, vêtue d'une tunique de laine. Ses esclaves la suivent attristées, regardant vers la maison d'où montent de légères fumées que vont bientôt suivre des lueurs d'incendie et des flammes.—La foule attirée par les cris et les rires envahit la place).

ATHANAEL: (à Thaïs). —Viens, ma soeur, et fuyons à jamais cette ville;

LA FOULE: (s'interposant). —Ah! jamais! non! jamais!

LA FOULE ET LES AMIS DE NICIAS: L'emmener! que dit-il?—

THAÏS: Il dit vrai!

NICIAS: Thaïs! tu nous quitterais!—Est-ce possible? (Nicias a pris le bras de Thaïs).

ATHANAEL: (la lui arrachant). Impie!—crains de mourir si tu touches à celle-ci.—Elle est sacrée! elle est la part de Dieu!—(Prenant Thaïs, près de lui). Passage!

CROBYLE AND MYRTALE:
I.:
She who comes is finer
Than the Queen of Sheba
When dancing on the mirrors!
II.:
From the shade of her veils
Leap the darts of her voice
Like arrows of fire!
III.:
She has the tint of pale amber,
And lips of blood color,
And her eyes are full of night!
IV.:
She comes aeriel,
Flexible as a reed,
And light as a bird!
V.:
Her looks cast the chains,
That make captives of men,
Those fine looks so languid!
VI.:
She leads on, she caresses,
She has the mortal charm,
To which none has resisted!
VII.
Like an idol impassive
She will know nothing
Of her fearful power.
(At this moment Athanael comes quickly from the house, a lighted torch in his hand).

NICIAS: Ah, it is he . . . it is Athanael!—

FRIENDS: Athanael!—salutation, wise of the wise—Thaïs then has robbed you of reason?—(laughing) Ha, ha, see his face, how glorious!—

ATHANAEL: (throwing his torch on ground). Be silent. Thaïs is the spouse of God,—She is no longer yours! The infernal Thaïs—is dead forever . . . and the new Thaïs,—is here! (Thaïs appears, hair in disorder and meanly clad, her slaves sadly follow her, looking at the house from which smoke arises, to be followed shortly by gleams of fire and flames. The crowd, attracted by the cries and the laughter, invade the scene).

ATHANAEL: (to Thaïs). —Come, my sister, and let us fly this town forever;—

THE CROWD: (interposing). —No never, oh never!

THE CROWD AND FRIENDS OF NICIAS: Take her away! What does he say?

THAÏS: He speaks true.

NICIAS: Thaïs, you would leave us—Is it possible? (Nicias holds Thaïs by the arm).

ATHANAEL: (tearing her away). Impious!—fear death. Do not touch this one—She is sacred, she is the share of God—(taking Thaïs to him.) Make way!

LA FOULE: (excitée). Non! Que lui veut donc cet homme!—Qu'il retourne au désert!

UN PETIT GROUPE DE GENS DU PEUPLE: (menacant Athanael). Va-t'en! Cynocéphale!—

LA FOULE: (par groupes). Nous reprendre Thaïs!—Eh! de qui vivrons-nous?—Mes robes! mes colliers! mes chevaux! mes bijoux!—qui nous paiera! Pour qui donc sont les lois!—Il nous vole Thaïs!

LES FEMMES AFFOLEES: (désignant la maison incendiée). La flamme! l'incendie!—le palais brûle!

LA FOULE: (hurlante). Qu'elle reste!—et lui qu'on l'assomme! aux corbeaux!—au gibet! à l'égout!—

UN HOMME DU PEUPLE: (jetant une pierre à Athanael qu'il blesse au front). Tiens, satyre, à toi!—

ATHANAEL, THAÏS: (très calme, regardant la foule). Ah! mourons, si c'est notre heure!—Achetons-en un instant—une éternelle allégresse—au prix de tout notre sang!—

LA FOULE: (avec fureur). A mort!

NICIAS: (parvenant à s'interposer). Arrêtez! de par tous les dieux!—voilà de quoi vous apaiser! (Il jette de l'or à poignées.)

LA FOULE: (Tous se précipitent sur l'or qu'ils se disputent.) De l'or!

NICIAS: (à Athanael et à Thaïs). Allez!—Adieu, Thaïs, en vain tu m'oublieras;—ton souvenir sera le parfum de mon âme! . . . —(Nicias jette de nouveau de l'or.) (Nouvelles clameurs de la foule.—Athanael et Thaïs s'enfuient. Le palais brûle).

ACT TROISIEME

PREMIER TABLEAU

('Oasis.—Sous les palmeirs, un puits. Plus loin, pour les voyageurs, un abri dans la verdure. Plus loin encore, à la lisière du sable, incendié de soleil, les cellules blanches de la retrait d'Albine).

(Le soleil est très haut; sous les palmiers, une à une quelques femmes viennent en silence, descendent au puits, en romontent et s'éloignent. Après un instant, Thaïs et Athanael paraissent. Thaïs, accablée de fatigue se soutient à peine).

THE CROWD: (excited). No! what does this man want of her?—Let him return to the desert.

A LITTLE GROUP OF COMMON PEOPLE: (threatening Athanael). Go away! Cynocephalus—

THE CROWD: (by groups). Take from us Thaïs!—And from whom shall we live?—My robes! my necklaces! my horses! my jewels!—Who will pay us? For whom then are the laws?—He is robbing us of Thaïs.

CRAZY WOMEN: (pointing to house in flames). Flames, fire!—The palace burns!

THE MOB: (howling). Let her stay.—As for him, brain him. To the crows! to the scaffold! to the gutter!—

A MAN OF THE PEOPLE: (throwing a stone at Athanael that wounds him in forehead). There, satyr, for you.—

ATHANAEL AND THAÏS: (very calm, looking on crowd). Let us die if it is our hour!—Let us purchase in an instant—an eternal triumph—at the price of all our blood!—

THE CROWD: (with fury). Death!

NICIAS: (managing to interpose). Stop! by all the gods!—Here is something to appease you. (He throws handfuls of gold).

THE MOB: (Throwing themselves on the gold and fighting over it). Gold!—

NICIAS: (to Athanael and Thaïs). Go!—Farewell, Thaïs, in vain will you forget me;—remembrance will be the perfume of my soul!—(Nicias throws more gold). (Renewed clamor of the mob.—Athanael and Thaïs escape. The palace burns).

ACT III

SCENE I

(The Oasis.—Under the palms, a well. Further, for travelers, a shelter amid the verdure. Further still, on the edge of the sand, the white cells of Albine's retreat).

(The sun is high; under the palms, one by one, some women come in silence, descend to the well and return again. After a while Thaïs and Athanael appear. Thaïs is overcome by fatigue and hardly endures).

THAÏS: L'ardent soleil m'écrase,—comme un fardeau trop lourd!—Ah! je succombe au poids du jour!—Arrêtons nous!

ATHANAEL: Non! Marche encore!—Brise ton corps, anéantis ta chair!

THAÏS: (humblement). —Père, tu dis vrai. Ma torture,—je l'offre au divin rédempteur.

ATHANAEL: —Seul, le repentir nous épure.—Marche! Ce corps parfait, que tu livras—aux païens, aux infidèles,—(Avec un furie soudaine.) à Nicias! Dieu l'avait pourtant formé—pour qu'il devint sontabernacle!—Et maintenant que tu conanis la vérité.—tu ne peux plus unir tes lèvres,—tu ne peux plus joindre tes mains,—sans concevoir le dégoût de toi-même.

THAÏS: (humblement). —Père, tu dis vrai.

ATHANAEL: Marche! Expie!

THAÏS: —Sommes-nous loin encore de la maison de Dieu?

ATHANAEL: (avec rudesse). —Qu'importe? Marche!

THAÏS: (chancelante). Je ne puis!—Pardon, vénéré père! (Comme elle va défaillir, il la soutient dans ses bras, puis la fait asseoir à l'ombre. Il la contemple un instant. Tout à coup alors l'expression de son visage s'adoucit).

ATHANAEL: —Ah! des gouttes de sang coulent de ses pieds blancs.—La pitié s'émeut en mon âme!—Pauvre enfant, pauvre femme!—O sainte Thaïs! O ma soeur! . . . —J'ai trop prolongé cette dure épreuve.—Pardonne-moi! (Il se prosterne. Il pleure. Il baise les pieds saignants de Thaïs. Avec adoration). —O sainte, très sainte Thaïs!

THAÏS: —Ta parole a la douceur d'une aurore!—Marchons maintenant!

ATHANAEL: (la retenant avec douceur) Pas encore.—De l'eau fraîche, des fruits—te rendront quelque force.—Attends que je descende vers le puits,—que j'aille vers la halte hospitalière.—Vois, là-bas, ces cellules blanches:—c'est le couvent d'Albine, où nous allons.—Le but est proche. Espère, prie! (Il s'éloigne lentement; va vers l'abri sous le feuillage, rapporte des fruits dans une corbeille, puis descend ver le puits).

THAÏS: (seule). —O messager de Dieu, si bon dans ta rudesse,—sois béni, toi qui m'as ouvert le ciel.—Ma chair saigne, et mon âme est pleine d'allégresse.—Un air léger baigne mon front brûlant.—Plus fraîche que l'eau de la source,—plus douce qu'un rayon de miel,—ta pensée est en moi, suave et salutaire—et mon esprit, dégagé de la terre—plane déjà dans cette immensité.—Sois béni, très vénéré père! (Athanael revient).

ATHANAEL: —Baigne d'eau tes mains et tes lévres.—Goûte à ces fruits, apaise cette fièvre—qui fait étinceler tes yeux!—Ta vie est maintenant mon trésor précieux,—elle m'appartient; Dieu me la confie. (Il répand l'eau sur les mains de Thaïs, approche la coupe de ses lèvres. Elle boit, puis, élevant vers lui la coupe).

THAÏS: Bois à ton tour!

ATHANAEL: Non? à te voir revivre,—je goûte une douceur meilleure et je m'enivre—rien que de ton mal apaisé!—douceur ineffable!

THAÏS: O divine bonté! (Il lui présente les fruits. Tandis qu'elle mange, il va de nouveau remplir la coupe d'eau et la lui rapport. Scène muette, durant laquelle s'élève à distance une lente psalmodie, qui va se rapprochant graduellement, jusqu'à l'entrée en scène d'Albine et des filles blanches).

VOIX: (à distance). Pater noster, qui es in coelis . . . Panem nostrum quotidianum da nobis.

THAÏS: —Qui vient!

ATHANAEL: Ah! Providence divine!—Voici la vénérable Albine—et ses soeurs rapportant le pain noir du couvent.—Elles viennent vers nous et marchent en priant.

LES VOIX: (très proches). —Et ne nos inducas in tentationem,—sed libera nos a malo. (Albine et ses compagnes paraissent).

ATHANAEL: Amen! (A la vue d'Athanael, Albine, s'est arrêtée, ainsi que les filles blanches, avec de grandes marques de respect. Thaïs qui s'est levée, est aux côtés d'Athanael).

ATHANAEL: (à Albine). —La paix du Seigneur soit avec toi, sainte Albine.—J'apporte à ta ruche divien—une abeille que j'ai, par la grâce d'en haut,—trouvée un jour perdue en un chemin sans fleurs.—Dans le creux de ma main je l'ai prise, très frèle.—De mon souffle je l'ai réchauffée et voici—que pour la consacrer à Dieu je te la donne. (Thaïs s'est agenouillée devant Albine).

ALBINE: —Ainsi soit-il!—Venez ma fille. (Elle prend Thaïs dans ses bras).

THAÏS: The ardent sun stifles me,—like a load that is too great!—Ah, I give way to the weight of the day.—Let us stop.

ATHANAEL: No, walk on!—Break your body, destroy your flesh!

THAÏS: (humbly). —Father, you speak truly. My torture,—I offer to the divine Redeemer.

ATHANAEL: —Only repentance purifies us—Walk! This perfect body that you gave—to pagans and infidels,—(with sudden fury.) To Nicias! Ah, yet God formed it—that it should become his tabernacle—and now that you know the truth,—you can no longer unite your lips—you can no longer join your hands,—without conceiving disgust at yourself.

THAÏS: (humbly). —Father, you speak truly.

ATHANAEL: Walk! Expiate!

THAÏS: —Are we far from the house of God?

ATHANAEL: (rudely). —What matters it? Walk!

THAÏS: (swaying). I cannot.—Pardon, venerated father. (As she is about to fall, he holds her in his arms, then seats her in the shade. He contemplates her a moment. All at once the expression of his face softens).

ATHANAEL: —Ah, drops of blood flow from her white feet—. Pity moves my soul.—Poor child, poor woman!—Oh saint Thaïs, oh my sister!—I have prolonged this hard trial too much.—Forgive me. (He prostrates himself. He weeps. He kisses the bleeding feet of Thaïs. With adoration). Oh ~~saint~~, very saint Thaïs!

THAÏS: —Your words resemble the softness of the dawn.—Now let us go on.

ATHANAEL: (detaining her gently). Not yet.—Fresh water, fruits—will give you strength.—Wait until I go down to the well,—to the hospitable halting place.—Look, over there, those white cells:—it is the convent of Albine, where we go.—Our object is near. Hope, pray! (He passes on slowly, goes to the shelter under the trees, and brings back fruit in a basket, then descends to well).

THAÏS: (alone). —Oh messenger of God, so good in your rudeness,—Blessed be you that has opened Heaven to me.—My flesh bleeds and my heart is full of happiness.—Light breezes bathe my burning forehead.—Fresher than spring water—softer than a ray of honey—Your thought is in me, suave and salutary—and my spirit, disengaged from Earth—floats already in this immensity.—Blessed be you, father, most venerated.

ATHANAEL: (returns). —Bathe your hands and lips in water.—Taste these fruits, appease this fever—that sparkles in your eyes.—Your life is now my precious treasure,—it, to me, belongs; God confides it to me. (He pours water on her hands, puts the cup to her lips. She drinks and then presents cup to him).

THAÏS: —Drink in turn.

ATHANAEL: No, to see you revive,—I taste a softer pleasure and I rejoice—from nothing but your pain appeased.—Oh, ineffable sweetness!

THAÏS: Oh, divine goodness! (He presents the fruits to her. While she eats he goes once more to the well and brings water. In the distance is heard a slow psalmody, that gradually approaches, until the entrance on scene of Albine and the White Ladies).

VOICES: (in distance). Pater noster, qui es in coelis . . . Panem nostrum quotidianum da nobis.

THAÏS: Who comes?

ATHANAEL: Oh, divine Providence! Here is the venerable Albine—and her sisters bringing the black bread from the convent—They come toward us and pray as they walk.

VOICES: (nearby). Et ne nos inducas in tentationem,—sed libera nos a malo. (Albine and her companions appear.)

ATHANAEL: Amen! (At sight of Athanael, Albine has stopped and also the White Ladies, with every mark of respect. Thaïs, who has risen stands beside Athanael).

ATHANAEL: (to Albine.) —The peace of the Lord be with you, Saint Albine.—I bring to your divine hive—a bee that I, by the favor of the grace on high—found one day, lost on a flowerless way.—I took her in the hollow of my hand very frail. I warmed her with my breath and here—to consecrate to God, I give her to you. (Thaïs kneels before Albine.)

ALBINE: —So be it.—Come, my daughter. (She takes Thaïs in her arms.)

ATHANAEL: —Je n'irai pas plus loin. Mon oeuvre est accomplie!—Adieu, chère Thaïs—reste recluse en 'létroite cellule.—Fais pénitence et prie, à chaque heure, pour moi!

THAÏS: (lui prenant les mains). —Je baise tes mains secourables—je pleure à te quitter—ô toi qui m'as rendue à Dieu!

ATHANAEL: —O parole touchante!—O larmes adorables!—Bienheureuse la pécheresse—gagné à l'éternel amour! (Avec exaltation.) —Que son visage est beau! Quel rayon d'allégresse—émane de ses yeux!

THAÏS: —Adieu, mon père, adieu! . . . —Pour toujours!

ATHANAEL: (comme frappé). Pour toujours?

THAÏS: Dans la cité céleste,—nous nous retrouverons.

ALBINE et LES FILLES BLANCHES: Amen!
(Elles s'éloignent).

ATHANAEL: (seul) —Elle va lentement parmi les filles blanches. —Les palmiers inclinenet leurs branches—comme pour rafraîchir son front —et les jours, les ans passeront—sans qu'elle m'apparaisse encore. (Un cri d'angoisse). Je ne la verari plus! . . . je ne la verrai plus! . . . je ne la verrai plus! . . .
(Appuyé sur son bâton, il regarde encore vers le chemin qu'a pris Thaïs. La toile tombe).

DEUXIEME TABLEAU

(La Thébaïde.—Les cabanes des Cénobites au bord du Nil.—Les Cénobites regardent le ciel avec une vague terreur.—Rafales lointaines du simoun).

LES CENOBITES: Que le ciel est pesant! quelle torpeur accable—les êtres et les choses!—On entend au loin le cri du chacal!—Le vent va déchaîner ses meutes rugissantes—avec le tonnerre et l'éclair!—

PALEMON: (aux Cénobites). Rentrons dan nos cabanes—et nos grains et nos fruits!—Redoutons une nuit d'orage—qui les disperserait!—

UN CENOBITE: Athanaël! . . . qui l'a vu? . . .

PALEMON: Depuis vingt jours qu'il nous est revenu,—mes frères, je crois bien qu'il n'a mangé ni bu!—Le triomphe qu'il a remporté sur l'enfer—semble l'avoir brisé de corps et d'âme!—
(Athanael sort de sa cabane).

ATHANAEL: I shall go no further. My work is accomplished! Farewell, dear Thaïs—remain secluded in the narrow cell.—Do penance and pray, each hour, for me.

THAÏS: (taking his hands). —I kiss your helping hands—I weep to leave you—Oh you that gave me to God.

ATHANAEL: —Oh touching words!—Oh adorable words!—Happy indeed is the sinner—saved for the eternal love (with excitation). How beautiful is her visage. What a ray of joy emanates from her eyes.

THAÏS: —Farewell, my father, farewell . . . —forever.

ATHANAEL: (shocked). Forever?

THAÏS: We shall find one another again in the celestial city.

ALBINE AND THE WHITE LADIES: Amen!
(They move away).

ATHANAEL: (alone). —She moves slowly among the White Ladies. —The palms lower their branches as if to refresh her forehead—and the days and the years will pass—that she will never appear to me again (A cry of anguish.) I shall see her no more . . . I shall see her no more!—
(Leaning on his stick he looks at the road Thaïs has taken. The curtain falls).

SCENE II

(The Thebald. Huts of the Cenobites on the bank of the Nile. These look on the heavens with a vague terror. Distant sounds of the simoon).

THE CENOBITES: How heavy the air is. A torpor overwhelms us—human beings and all things.—We hear in the distance the cry of the jackal.—The wind will unchain its howling bands—with thunder and the lightning!—

PALEMON: (to the Cenobites). Let us put both our grains and our fruits in our huts.—We fear a night of storm would disperse them.—

A CENOBITE: Athanael . . . who has seen him? . . .

PALEMON: For the twenty days since he has returned,—my brothers, I think he has not eaten nor drunk.—The triumph he has had over hell—appears to have broken him body and soul.—
(Athanael comes from his hut.)

LES CENOBITES: (avec respect). C'est lui qui vient!
(Athanael passe au milieu d'eux comme s'il ne les voyait pas).

UN GROUPE: Sa pensée est absente . . . —

UN AUTRE GROUPE: Elle est auprès de Dieu!

LES CENOBITES: (en s'éloignant). Respectons son silence . . . —laissons-le seul! . . .

ATHANAEL: (à Palémon, avec humilité). Demeure auprès de moi;—il faut que je confesse—le trouble de mon âme à ton âme sereine.—Tu sais, ô Palémon, que j'ai reconquis l'âme—de celle qui fut l'impure Thaïs.—Une orgueilleuse joie a suivi ce triomphe—et je suis revenu vers ce désert de paix! . . . Eh bien, en moi, la paix est morte! . . . —En vain, j'ai flagellé ma chair,—en vain je l'ai meurtrie! un démon me possède!—La beauté de la femme hante mes visions!—Je ne vois que Thaïs, ou mieux, ce n'est pas elle,—c'est Hélène et Phryné, c'est Vénus Astarté,—toutes les splendeurs et toutes les voluptés—en une seule créture!—
(Il tombe comme écrasé de honte aux pieds de Palémon).

PALEMON: (doucement et simplement). Ne t'avais-je pas dit:—"Ne nous mêlons jamais, mon fils, aux gens du siècle,—craignons les pièges de l'esprit!"—Ah! pourquoi nous as-tu quittés? . . . Que Dieu t'assisste!—Adieu!—
(Athanael se lève.—Palémon l'embrasse et s'éloigne.—Athanael seul s'agenouille sur sa natte.—Après quoi, il s'allonge et s'endort. Après un temps, la forme de Thaïs apparaît, lumineuse, dans l'ombre).

THAÏS: (à Athanael, avec un grand charme). —Qui te fait si sévère,—et pourquoi démens-tu la flamme de tes yeux?—

ATHANAEL: (comme en rêvant). Thaïs! . . .

THAÏS: Quelle triste folie—te fait manquer à ton destin?—Homme fait pour aimer, quelle erreur est la tienne!—

ATHANAEL: (se levant). Ah! Satan! arrière! . . . ma chair brûle!

THAÏS: —Ose venir, toi qui braves Vénus!—

ATHANAEL: (éperdu). —Je meurs!
Thaïs! . . . Viens! . . . — (Rires stridents de Thaïs dont l'image disparaît subitement).
(Le ciel s'éclaircit.—Une vision nouvelle montre à Athanael le jardin du monastère d'Albine.—A

THE CENOBITES: (with respect). He is coming!
(Athanael passes amid them without seeing.)

A GROUP: His thoughts are far off . . . —

ANOTHER GROUP: They are near to God.

THE CENOBITES: (moving away). Let us respect his silence . . . —We will leave him alone.

ATHANAEL: (to Palemon, with humility). Remain by me;—I feel I must confess—the trouble of my soul to your serene soul.—You know oh Palemon, I regained the soul—of that was the impure Thaïs.—A proud joy had followed this triumph—and I came back to this desert of peace . . . —Well then, peace is dead in me . . . —In vain I flagellated my flesh,—in vain I bruised it; a demon possesses me. The beauty of the woman haunts my visions,—I only see Thaïs, or rather it is not she,—Helen and Phryne. Venus Astarte.—all the splendors and the enjoyments—in one single creature!—
(He falls stunned with shame at Palemon's feet).

PALEMON: (gently and simply). Did I not tell thee:—"Let us never meddle, my son, with the people of the time,—let us fear the traps of the Spirit." Ah, why did you leave us? . . . May God assist you. Adieu.—
(Athanael rises.—Palemon embraces him and goes . . . Athanael alone, kneels on his mat. After which, he stretches out and sleeps. After a time, the form of Thaïs appears, luminous in the gloom).

THAÏS: (to Athanael with great charm). —What makes you so severe,—and why do you deny the flame of your eyes?—

ATHANAEL: (dreaming). Thaïs! . . .

THAÏS: What sad folly—makes you false to your destiny?—Man made to love, what error is yours?—

ATHANAEL: (rising). Ah Satan! away, my flesh burns.

THAÏS: —Dare to come, you that braves Venus.

ATHANAEL: (beside himself). —I die, Thaïs! . . . Come! . . . — (Strident laughter of Thaïs who disappears. The sky clears. A new vision shows to Athanael the garden of the monastery of Albine.—In the shadow of a fig tree, Thaïs is stretched out motionless.—

l'ombre d'un grand figuier, Thaïs est étendue immobile.—Autour d'elle sont agenouillées les Filles blanches du Monastère).

ATHANAEL: (apercevant la vision. Avec un cri d'épouvante et reculant). Ah! . . .

LES VOIX: Une sainte est près de quitter la Terre.—Thaïs d'Alexandrie—va mourir! Thaïs va mourir!—

ATHANAEL: (avec égarement). Thaïs va mourir! Thaïs va mourir! . . . —(Avec une passion furieuse). Alors, pour quoi le ciel, les êtres, la lumière!—A quoi bon l'univers!—Thaïs va mourir! Ah! la voir encore! La revoir! la saisir! la garder! . . . je la veux! Oui, fou, fou que je suis de n'avoir pas compris—qu'elle seule était tout! . . . qu'une de ses caresses—valait plus que le ciel! Oh! je voudrais tuer tous ceux qui l'ont aimée!—Non, Thaïs, ne meurs pas! Non! je vais te reprendre!—Sois à moi! sois à moi!
(Il s'élance et disparaît dans la nuit).
(Obscurité complète.—Nuages envahissants, éclairs sinistres.—Tonnerre La musique continue jusqu'au changement).

TROISIEME TABLEAU

(Le jardin du monastère d'Albine.—A l'ombre d'un grand figuier, Thaïs est étendue, immobile, comme morte.—Ses compagnes et Albine sont autour d'elle).

LES FILLES BLANCHES DU MONASTERE: (à genoux). Seigneur, ayez pieié de moi—selon votre mansuétude!—effacez mon iniquité—selon votre miséricorde!—

ALBINE: (à part, contemplant Thaïs). Dieu l'appelle, et, ce soir, la blancheur du linceul—aura voilé ce pur visage!—Durant trois mois, elle a veillé, prié, pleuré;—son corps est détruit par la pénitence,—mais ses péchés sont effacés!—

LES FILLES BLANCHES: Seigneur, ayez pitié de moi—selon votre mansuétude!—
(Athanael, paraît à l'entrée du jardin. Ayant été apercu par Albine, il contient son émotion et s'arrête humblement. Albine est allée au-devant de lui avec respect.—Les filles blanches forment un groupe qui tout d'abord dérobe à Athanael la vue de Thaïs).

Around her are kneeling the White Ladies of the Monastery).

ATHANAEL: (perceiving the vision, terror stricken). Ah! . . .

THE VOICES: A saint is about to quit the Earth.—Thaïs of Alexandria is about to die.—

ATHANAEL: (wildly). Thaïs must die! Thaïs must die . . . (With furious passion.) Then, why Heaven, human beings, light?—Of what good is the universe?—Thaïs must die. Oh, to see her again. To see her, hold her, keep her! . . . I must have her. Yes, fool that I was, not to have understood—that she alone was all, that one of her caresses was worth more than Heaven! Oh I would kill all those who have loved her! No, Thaïs, do not die. No, I'll come to take you.—Be mine, be mine!
(He rushes into the night. Complete obscurity. Thunder. Music continues).

SCENE III

(The garden of the monastery. In the shade of a fig tree, Thaïs stretched, as if dead. Her companions and Albine surround her).

WHITE LADIES OF THE MONASTERY: (kneeling). Lord have pity on me—according to your grace!—Wipe out my iniquity—according to your mercy.—

ALBINE: (aside, looking at Thaïs). God calls her and tonight the whiteness of the winding-sheet—will have hidden this pure face.—During three months, she has watched, prayed, wept; her body is destroyed by penance,—but her sins are effaced!—

THE WHITE LADIES: Lord, have pity on me—according to your grace!—
(Athanael appears at entrance of garden. Being seen by Albine, he restrains his emotion and stops, humbly. Albine has gone toward him with respect. The White Ladies form a group which at first conceals from Athanael the sight of Thaïs).

ALBINE: (à Athanael, simplement). Sois le bienvenu dans nos tabernacles,—ô père vénéré!—car sans doute tu veins pour bénir cette sainte—que tu nous as donnée . . . —

ATHANAEL: (avec un égarement qu'il essaie de contenir). Oui . . . Thaïs! . . .

ALBINE: Ayant fait—ce que ton esprit pur lui commanda de faire,—voici qu'elle va voir l'éternelle lumière!— (Athanael l'apercoit).

ATHANAEL: Thaïs! . . . Thaïs! . . . (Ecrasé de douleur, il est tombé prosterné. Albine et ses filles blanches s'élognent de un peu pas Athanael s'est trové sur les genoux et se trouve pres de Thaïs).

ATHANAEL: (basse et douloureusement). Thaïs! . . . —

THAÏS: (ouvrant ses yeux et regardant Athanael). C'est toi mon père . . . —Te souvient-il du lumineaux voyage—lorsque tu m'as conduite ici? . . . —

ATHANAEL: (avec attendrissement). J'ai le seul souvenir de ta beauté mortelle!

THAÏS: —Te souvient-il de ces heures de calme—dans la fraîcheur de l'oasis! . . .

ATHANAEL: (avec ardeur). Ah! je me souviens seulement—de cette soif inapaisée—dont tu seras l'apaisement . . .

THAÏS: Surtout te souvient-il de tes saintes paroles—en ce jour—où par toi j'ai connu le seul amour! . . . —

ATHANAEL: Quand j'ai parlé, t'ai menti . . . —

THAÏS: Et la voilà l'aurore!—et les volià les roses de l'éternel matin!—

ATHANAEL: Non! le ciel . . . rien n'existe . . . —rien n'est vrai que la vie et que l'amour des êtres . . . —Je t'aime! . . .

THAÏS: Le ciel s'ouvre!—Voici les anges, les prophètes . . . et les saints! . . . —ils viennent avec un sourire—les mains toutes pleines de fleurs!–

ATHANAEL: Entends-moi donc, ma toute aimée! . . . —

THAÏS: (debout, frissonnate). Deux séraphins aux blanches ailes—planent dans l'azur!—et comme tu l'as dit, le doux consolateur—posant sur mes yeux ses doigts de lumière—en essuie à jamais les pleurs! . . .

ATHANAEL: (de plus en plus exalté). Viens! dis-moi: je vivrai! je vivrai!

ALBINE: (to Athanael, simply). You are welcome in our tabernacles,—oh venerated father—for, no doubt. You come to bless this saint—whom you gave us . . . —

ATHANAEL: (with a wildness he tries to contain). Yes . . . Thaïs! . . .

ALBINE: Having done—what your pure spirit commanded her to do,—she is now about to see the eternal light.—(Athanael sees Thaïs)

ATHANAEL: Thaïs! . . . Thaïs! . . . (Broken with grief he falls. Albine and the White Ladies move away a little. Athanael has dragged himself on his knees close to Thaïs).

ATHANAEL: (low and sorrowfully). Thaïs! . . .

THAÏS: (opening her eyes and seeing Athanael). It's you, my father! . . . Do you remember the luminous voyage,—when you brought me here? . . . —

ATHANAEL: (tenderly). I have alone the memory of your mortal beauty!

THAÏS: —Do remember those hours of calm—in the freshness of the oasis?—

ATHANAEL: (with ardor). Ah, I remember only—this unappeased thirst of which you alone shall be the appeasement.

THAÏS: Above all, do you remember your saintly words—on that day—when through you I knew the only love? . . . —

ATHANAEL: When I spoke, I lied to you . . . —

THAÏS: And there is the dawn;—and there are the roses of the eternal morning!—

ATHANAEL: No. Heaven—nothing exists . . . —nothing is true but life and the love of beings . . . —I love you!

THAÏS: Heaven opens itself.—Here are the angels, the prophets, and the saints! . . . —they come smiling—their hands all full of flowers!—

ATHANAEL: Listen to me, my all beloved!—

THAÏS: (standing, trembling). Two seraphim with wings of white—soar in the azure—and as you said, the gentle Consoler—placing on my eyes His fingers of light—wipes away the tears forever! . . . —

ATHANAEL: (more and more exalted). Come, say to me: 'I shall live, I shall live'!—

THAÏS: Le son des harpes d'or m'enchante!—de suaves parfums me pénètrent! . . . Je sens—une exquise béatitude—endormir tous mes maux!—Ah! Le ciel! je vois Dieu! . . . —

THAÏS: The sound of the harps of gold, enchants me—soft perfumes penetrate my being . . . I feel—an exquisite beatitude—put all my ills to sleep—
Ah! . . . Heaven! . . . I see

(Ells meurt.)
(Athanael avec un cri terrible se jette à genoux devant elle)

FIN.

God! . . . —
(She dies).
(Athanael with a terrible cry falls prostrate beside her).

Cendrillon (1899)

Cinderella

MUSIC BY JULES MASSENET ■ LIBRETTO BY HENRI CAIN ■ BASED ON THE STORY BY CHARLES PERRAULT

This four-act conte de fées with six tableaux, set to a libretto by Henri Cain (based upon Charles Perrault's fairy story Cinderella), premiered at the Opéra-Comique in Paris on May 24, 1899. The opera begins at the home of Madame de la Haltière. The Prince of the kingdom is giving a grand ball which will be attended by Noémie and Dorothée, Madame de la Haltière's daughters. Lucy, her stepdaughter (also known as Cendrillon), will not be attending. The family leaves for the ball and Cendrillon falls asleep. She has a dream in which she is magically able to go to the ball and is fêted by all as a great beauty. A fairy waves a magic wand and turns Cendrillon's rags into a beautiful gown. As Cendrillon rushes off to the ball, she is warned that she must be home by midnight. The Prince is alone as he has not yet met the girl of his dreams. He is totally uninterested in Cendrillon's stepsisters. A beautiful woman appears, and the Prince falls in love with her immediately. He begs her to tell him who she is, but she tells him that he must never learn her identity. He tries to keep her there, but at the stroke of midnight she runs away. In her flight she loses one of her glass slippers. Cendrillon returns to Madame's house and collapses, weeping. The stepsisters return and tell Cendrillon about the mysterious guest. Cendrillon thinks that the Prince must doubt her innocence and decides to run away to the farm where she and her father, Pandolfe, lived after her mother's death. Cendrillon, in the fairies' forest, asks the fairy to comfort her. The Prince finds her there and offers her his heart as a token of his love, and the fairies put them both to sleep. Cendrillon is now back in her own room, having been found unconscious in the forest. She is recovering from a long illness, and during her fever her father says she spoke of love and a shoe. The voice of a herald announces that the Prince will receive young maidens to try on the slipper lost by the mysterious guest. Cendrillon realizes that she did not dream about the ball after all. Once all of the maidens have tried on the slipper, the fairy leads Cendrillon, who carries the heart given to her by the Prince, to him. The crowd watches in excitement as the Prince embraces his true love.

■ ACTE PREMIER	■ ACT I
SCÈNE PREMIÈRE	SCENE I
Chez Madame de la Haltière	HOME OF MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE.
(Vaste chambre. Grande cheminée avec son âtre.)	A large room. Big fireplace.
(Coups de sonnette répépés. Des Domestiques troublés, ahuris ne savent qui entendre. Quelques-uns courent, affolés.)	Repeated ringing of a bell. Servants in a flurry. Know not whom to wait upon. Some rush about distracted.
DOMESTIQUES, SERVITEURS: (hommes et femmes). On appelle, on sonne! On carillonne! Que de scènes! Que de cris! Nous sommes ahuris! On appelle, on sonne! C'est par ici! non! c'est par là! On ressonne, on recarillonne! Voilà, voilà, On y va! Mieux vaudrait servir le diable en personne Que cette femme-là! . . . (Les uns aux autres) O mon cher, ô ma chère! C'est une mégère! (A la vue de Pandolfe, qui paraît, tous s'arrêtent, troublés, interdits.) Monsieur!	SERVANTS, MEN AND WOMEN: They call, they ring! And ring again! What scenes! What shouts! We are befuddled! They call, they ring! Not here! no! nor there! They ring again, again. There now, there now, They are coming! Better serve the devil himself Than that woman! . . . (to one another) O my dear, my dear! She is a vixen! (At sight of Pandolfe, who appears, they all stop troubled and bewildered). The master!
PANDOLFE: Continuez. Ce n'est que moi. Pourquoi Vous taisez-voux? Pas besoin de prudence; ne soyez pas ainsi troublés par ma présence Et dites, que se passe-t-il?	PANDOLFE: Go on. It is only I. Why be silent? no need for prudence, Do not be troubled by my presence. Tell me, what is happening?
LES DOMESTIQUES: Monsieur, chacun proclame Que monsieur est gentil, très gentil, très gentil! Mais c'est madame! Ah! madame! ah! madame!	THE SERVANTS: Master, every one proclaims That you are kind, very kind, very kind! But the mistress! Ah the mistress! ah, the mistress!
PANDOLFE: Hein! Qu'est-ce à dire? (A part) Au fond, ils ont raison! (Nouveaux et très forts coups de sonnette.) Allez, allez . . . on vous réclame!	PANDOLFE: Well! What do you mean? (Aside) Really, they are right! (The ringing of the bell begins again, stronger). Go, go . . . you are wanted!
LES DOMESTIQUES: Monsieur est si gentil, si gentil . . .	THE SERVANTS: Master is so kind, so kind . . .
PANDOLFE: Eh, c'est bon! (En sortant, les domestiques se retournent en disant: "Mais c'est madame! Ah! Madame!")	PANDOLFE: Ah, well! (As they go out the servants turn and say: "But the mistress, Ah, the mistress".)
SCÈNE II	SCENE II
PANDOLFE: Du côté de la barbe est la tout-puissance . . . Oui, je devrais le faire voir Et savoir Obtenir de ma femme un peu	PANDOLFE: Power lies with the bearded one . . . Yes, I must make her see it and know it.—

d'obéissance.
Hélas! voulouir n'est pas pouvoir!
Pourquoi, grands dieux, veuf et tranquille,
Vivant chez moi, loin de la ville,
Exempt de soucis et d'émois
Près de ma fillette adorable
Ai-je quitté ma ferme et nos grands bois!
Pourquoi? Pou m'en aller tenter le diable, En étant le mari
Re-mari, très marri
D'une comtesse fière et d'humeur redoutable
Qui m'apportait en dot, non! c'est épouvantable,
Deux belles filles, deux! mon sort est lamentable!
A les chérir, je suis condamné par la loi!
Ombre de Philémon, plaignez-moi! plaignez-moi!
Mon sort est vraiment effroyable!
Encore, si j'étais seul à gémir, mais non,
Pour toi, c'est l'abandon,
O ma fillette!
Ah! que je souffre en te voyant, Lucette, Sans affiquets, ni collerette,
Te cacher pour venir me donner un baiser,
Sans un regard pour m'accuser
Quand au logis, seulette
Je te laisse pendant le bal!
Que veux-tu! Je sens que c'est mal!
Mais si ma femme gronde et rage
Je tremble et je ne peux résister à l'orage!
(Avec agitation et nervosité)
Ah! par ma foi,
Ce sera pénible, peut-être,
Mais il faudra qu'un jour, chez moi,
(Avec autorité)
Je finisse par être maître!
(Les domestiques entrent, précédant Madame de la Haltière et ses deux filles.)

PANDOLFE: (changeant de ton et s'enfuyant). Ma femme! hélas! Partons! Vouloir n'est pas pouvoir!

SCÈNE III

Madame de la Haltière et ses filles.

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (à ses filles, avec une importance comique). Faites-vous très belles, ce soir; J'ai bon espoir.

NOÉMIE ET DOROTHÉE: Pourquoi, maman?

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE:
Peut-on jamais savoir?
Faites-vous très belles, ce soir!
(A part)
Non, cela n'aurait rien qui me puisse surprendre . . .
Car c'est plus d'une fois
Que l'on a vu des rois . . .

Obtain from my wife a little obedience.
Alas! to wish is not to do!
Why on earth, in my peaceful life as widower,
Living far from the city,
Free from care and strife,
With my dear little daughter,
Did I leave my farm and the beautiful woods.
Why? To go and tempt the devil, as the husband,
The second husband
Of a proud and haughty Countess
Who brought me as her dowry
—No! it is abominable!—
Two step-daughters, two! oh my lot is pitiable!
The law compels me to support them!
Shade of Philemon, pity, pity me!
My lot is truly lamentable!
And if it was only I who suffered, but no,
For you it means desertion,
Oh, my daughter!
Ah, how I suffer, Lucette, seeing you without collar or trinket.
Hiding to give me a kiss,
Never a look of reproach,
When alone in the house
I leave you during the ball!
What can I do! I feel how cruel it is!
But if my wife gets in a rage
I tremble and succumb to the storm!
(With agitation and nervousness)
Ah! on my faith,
It would be dreadful, perhaps,
But some day I must really
(With determination)
Assert my power.
(The servants enter, preceded by Madame de la Haltière and her two daughters.)

PANDOLFE: (changing his tone and making his escape). My wife! Alas! We must go! To wish is not to do!

SCENE III

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE AND HER DAUGHTERS.

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (to her daughters, with comical importance). Make yourselves very beautiful, tonight,
I have great hopes.

NOEMIA AND DOROTHY: Why, mama?

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: One can never know.
Make yourselves very beautiful tonight!
(aside)
No, it would not surprise me though . . .
Since more than once
We have seen kings . . .

NOÉMIE ET DOROTHÉE: Quoi donc, maman? Plus d'une fois
Qu'est-ce donc qu'ils ont fait, les rois?

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: A tout nous devons nous attendre.

NOÈMIE ET DOROTHÉE: Nous attendre à tout? Mais pourquoi?

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE:
Parce qu'on va, ce soir, vous présenter au roi!

NOÈMIE ET DOROTHÉE: Ah! quel bonheur! nous allons voir le roi!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: Il vous remarquera, j'espère!

NOÈMIE ET DOROTHÉE: Alors, qu'est-ce qu'il faudra faire?

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: Il faudra faire comme moi!
Le bal est un champ de bataille

NOÈMIE ET DOROTHÉE: Comment, Maman,
Le bal est un champ de bataille? . . .

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: Tenez-vous bien,
Ne perdez rien De votre taille,
Pas de mouvements trop nerveux . . .

NOÈMIE ET DOROTHÉE: Non, maman!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: A-t-on bien frisé vos cheveuz?

NOÈMIE ET DOROTHÉE: Oui, maman!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (à part avec volubilité, comme se parlant à elle-même). Car je ne veux, ni ne puis me résoudre,
A croire qu'il existe seulement
Dans la roman
Le coup de foudre!

NOÈMIE ET DOROTHÉE: Le coup de foudre!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (à ses filles). Prenez un maintien gracieux En arrondissant votre bouche.
Bien! N'ayez pas l'aire trop farouche!

NOÈMIE ET DOROTHÉE: Voilà, maman!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: Parfait! on ne peut mieux!
Ne soyez pas banales!
Ni trop originales!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE:
Faites-vous très belles ce soir!
Quel succès nous allons avoir!
Mais vous ne devez pas savoir
Quel est mon espoir!

NOÈMIE ET DOROTHÉE: Nous serons très belles ce soir!
Quel succès nous allons avoir!
Et nous croyons déjà savoir
Quel est votre espoir!

NOEMIA AND DOROTHY: What is it, mama? More than once
What did they do, the kings?

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: We must expect everything.

NOEMIA AND DOROTHY: Expect everything? But why?

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: Because this evening you will be presented to the king!

NOEMIA AND DOROTHY: Ah! what luck! We shall see the king.

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: I hope he will notice you!

NOEMIA AND DOROTHY: Then, what must we do?

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: Do as I do!
The ball room is a battle field . . .

NOEMIA AND DOROTHY: How, Mama,
The ball room is a battle field? . . .

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: Carry yourselves well,
Be careful of your figures,
And don't get too nervous . . .

NOEMIA AND DOROTHY: No, mama!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: Have they curled your hair?

NOEMIA AND DOROTHY: Yes, mama!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE:
(aside, volubly, as if speaking to herself). For I do not wish, nor can I bring myself
To believe that it is only
In romance
That the unexpected happens!

NOEMIA AND DOROTHY: The unexpected!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (to her daughters). Assume a gracious manner,
And smile pleasantly.
Good! Don't appear too haughty!

NOEMIA AND DOROTHY: There, mama!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE:
Splendid! could not be better!
Don't be commonplace!
Nor too original!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE:
Make yourselves beautiful this evening!
What success we shall have!
But you do not know
How much I hope!

NOEMIA and DOROTHY: We will be beautiful this evening!
What success we shall have!
And we already know
How much you hope!

SCÈNE IV

Les memes, Les Domestiques.

LES DOMESTIQUES: (affairés). Madame, ce sont les modistes.

D'AUTRES: Madame, ce sont les tailleurs.

D'AUTRES: Madame, ce sont les coiffeurs.

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (avec ostentation). Qu'on introduise ces artistes!
(Pendant que les modistes, les coiffeurs et les tailleurs s'occupent de la toilette des trois femmes.)
De sa robe, il faut que les plis
Soient plus légers, plus assouplis.
(A ses filles)
Qu'en dites-vous? . . . La ligne est pure . . .
Très bien cela. Cette coiffure
Est concordante à la figure!

LES DOMESTIQUES: (au fond, pouffant de rire). Cheveux garantis sur facture.

NOÈMIE ET DOROTHÉE: (s'interrogeant mutuellement). Sommes-nous bien ainsi? Oui, véritablement Sans compliment, C'est charmant! C'est charmant!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: Charmant!

NOÈMIE ET DOROTHÉE: (flattant leur mère). Un éblouissement!

LES DOMESTIQUES: (au fond, même jeu). Est-elle fagotée?

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (flattant ses filles). Un émerveillement!

LES DOMESTIQUES: (au fond, même jeu) Et Noémie! Et Dorothée?

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (et ses deux filles). On en parlera sûrement!

LES DOMESTIQUES: (même jeu). Oui, oui, sûrement!
(Les fournisseurs sont reconduits par les domestiques).

PANDOLFE: (entrant en grande toilette) Félicitez-moi donc de mon exactitude.

NOÈMIE ET DOROTHÉE: Oui . . . ce n'est pas votre habitude.

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: Vous êtes toujours en retard Enfin . . . cette fois . . . par hasard . . .

NOÈMIE ET DOROTHÉE: (se montrant avec prétention). Ne sauriez-vous trouver un mot aimable à dire En voyant nos beautés? . . .

SCENE IV

THE SAME. THE SERVANTS.

THE SERVANTS: (busy). Madame, the dressmakers.

OTHERS: Madame, the tailors.

OTHERS: Madame, the hairdressers.

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (ostentatiously). Let these artists enter!
(The dressmakers, tailors and hairdressers become busy with the toilets of the three women)
Your robe must have the plaits
Hang lighter, in graceful lines.
(To her daughters)
What think you? . . . Is the linen fine . . .
That is very nice. The headdress
Is becoming to the figure!

THE SERVANTS: (at rear, stifling with mirth). The hair is as per invoice.

NOEMIA AND DOROTHY: (mutually examining each other). Do we look well this way? Yes, without doubt, or compliment,
It is charming! It is charming!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: Charming!

NOEMIA AND DOROTHY: (flattering their mother). A marvel!

THE SERVANTS: (at rear, same manner). Isn't she a fright?

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (flattering her daughters). Ravishing!

THE SERVANTS: (at rear, same play). And Noemia! And Dorothy!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (and her two daughters). They will talk of it surely!

THE SERVANTS: (same play). Yes, yes, surely!
(The workwomen are conducted away by the servants).

PANDOLFE: (entering in grand attire). Congratulate me on my promptness.

NOEMIA AND DOROTHY: Yes . . . it is not your habit.

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: You are always late,
At last . . . for once . . . by chance . . .

NOEMIA AND DOROTHY: (showing themselves off, pretentiously). Can you not find a word of commendation
When you see our beauty? . . .

PANDOLFE: (préoccupé). Excusez-moi . . . j'admire . . .
(A part, pendant que les trois femmes se pavanent)
Ne disons rien, restons tranquille en notre coin,
Ne voulant de près ou de loin
Ajouter même une parole,
Un doux espoir me soutenant,
Me caressant, me consolant . . .
(Montrant sa femme, joyeusement)
On va l'enfermer, elle est folle!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (brusquement). Eh! bien! Qu'avez-vous donc? Vous restez comme un pieu Planté là!

NOÉMIE: Venez donc!

DOROTHÉE: Et partons!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: Venez vite!

PANDOLFE: Tout de suite! de suite!
(A part, avec émotion)
Ma Lucette . . . je pars sans t'avoir dit adieu! . . .
Je te laisse encore seule . . . ô ma pauvre petite!
Je pars sans même oser
Te donner un baiser!
Sans bercer ta tristesse
D'un seul mot de tendresse! . . .

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (regardant ses filles). Quand le prince aura vu leurs attraits enchanteurs, La fortune est à nous . . . Le trône et ses grandeurs!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE, NOÈMIE ET DOROTHÉE: De la race
De la prestance,
De l'audace,
De l'élégance,
De la finesse,
Ensorcelante,
Une souplesse
Un peu troublante,
Lèvre mutine
Et délicate,
Le mot qui flatte,
Grâce assassine,
Des yeux de chatte.
Elles ont tout, oui, vraiment tout!
Le prince est pris, s'il a du goût!
(Sortie générale. Les domestiques emportant les candélabres et les flambeaux pour accompagner le départ.—Obscurité.)

PANDOLFE: (preoccupied). Excuse me . . . I admire . . .
(aside, while the three women strut along).
Let's say nothing, but stay quiet in our corner,
Not wishing near or far
To add one word even,
A sweet hope sustaining me,
Caressing me, consoling me.
(Pointing to his wife, merrily)
They will lock her up, she is mad!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (brusquely). Well! What is wrong with you? You stand there.

NOEMIA: Come along!

DOROTHY: Let us go!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: Hurry!

PANDOLFE: Immediately! Immediately!
(Aside, with emotion)
I go, my Lucette, without bidding you farewell!
I leave you alone again . . . O my little one!
I go without daring
Even to kiss you!
Without comforting you
With a single word of tenderness.

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (looking at her daughters). When the prince sees their enchanting attractions,
Fortune is ours . . . the throne and its splendors!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE, NOEMIA AND DOROTHY: Of birth, Deportment,
Audacity
And elegance,
Daintiness,
Bewitchment,
Carriage
Distracting,
Pouting lips
And delicate,
The word that flatters,
Grace assassinates,
Cats' eyes
They have all of these, yes all!
The prince is captured, if any taste he has!
(All go out. The servants carry with them the candle sticks. Obscurity.)

SCÈNE V

CENDRILLON: (paraissant). Ah! que mes soeurs sont heureuses!
Pour elles
C'est chaque jour nouveau plaisir!
Elles n'ont pas le temps de former un désir . . .
Et le bonheur aussi, je crois, les rend plus belles! . . .
Elles vont à la cour . . . à la cour . . . ! oh! ce bal! . . .
On y viendra de toutes les prov-

SCENE V

CINDERELLA: (appearing). Ah! how happy my sisters are! For them
Each day brings some newer pleasure!
They have scarcely time to form a wish . . .
And fortune, too, I think, makes them beautiful!
They go to court! Oh, that ball! . . .
From everywhere they'll come to inces;

Tous les seigneurs seront au moins marquis ou princes
A l'entour du trône royal!
Et mes soeurs seront là . . . tandis que moi . . . je rêve . . .
Et j'ai tort, oui, j'ai tort. Ces rêves-là font mal!
Ma besogne est là qu'il faut que j'achève!
Reste au foyer, petit grillon,
Car ce n'est pas pour toi que brille
Ce superbe et joyeux rayon . . .
Ne vas-tu pas porter envie au papillon?
A quoi penses-tu, pauvre fille?
Travaille, Cendrillon,
Résigne-toi, Cendrille!
C'est une joie aussi de faire son devoir!
Débarrassons la table et rangeons le dressoir!
Je suis décidément paresseuse ce soir.
J'ai beau vouloir . . . j'entends toujours des bruits de fête
Dont les échos troublants bourdonnent dans ma tête . . .
Reste au foyer, petit grillon,
Car ce n'est pas pour toi que brille
Ce superbe et joyeux rayon . . .
Ne vas-tu pas porter envie au papillon?
A quoi penses-tu, pauvre fille?
Résigne-toi, Cendrille,
Travaille, Cendrillon!
Voyons, j'ai bien fait tout ce que j'avais à faire.
Je puis me reposer.
Comme la nuit est claire!
Les étoiles ont l'air de me sourire, aux cieux!
C'est étrange! on dirait que le sommeil m'accable!
Je ne suis plus à l'âge où le marchand de sable
Venait si tôt, jadis, fermer mes yeux!
Dormons; souvent on est heureux
Quand on dort . . . et qu'on fait des songes merveilleux!
(En s'endormant, Cendrillon dit encore:)
Reste au foyer petit grillon
Fésigne-toi! Résigne-toi!

SCÈNE VI

Cendrillon endormie, La Fée, puis Les Esprits et Les Follets.

LA FÉE: (apparaissant, à Cendrillon, endormie) Douce enfant, ta plainte légère
Comme l'haleine d'une fleur,
Vient de monter jusqu'à mon coeur.
Ta marraine te voit et te protège . . . espère! . . .

VOIX LOINTAINS: Espère!

LA FÉE: Sylphes, lutins, follets, accourez à ma voix,
De tous les horizons, à travers les espaces . . .

it;
The lords, at least, will surely be marquises and princes
Around the royal throne!
And my sisters will be there . . . while I . . . I dream.
And I do wrong, yes wrong . . . These dreams are bad!
My work is here, I must perform it!
Stay by the fireside, little cricket,
For it is not for you that shines
That superb and joyous ray . . .
Do not go and envy the butterfly?
Of what do you think, poor girl?
Work, Cinderella,
Resignation, Cinderella.
Pleasant it also is to do your duty!
Let us clear the table and wash the dishes!
I feel decidedly lazy tonight.
I wish in vain . . . I still hear the sounds of merriment
Whose disturbing echos burden my head . . .
Stay by the fireside, little cricket,
For it is not for you that shines
That superb and joyous ray . . .
Do not go and envy the butterfly?
Of what do you think, poor girl?
Resignation, Cinderella,
Work, Cinderella!
See, I have done all I had to do.
I can go to bed.
How clear the night is!
The stars appear to smile on me, from heaven!
Strange! one would think sleep weighed on me!
No longer am I of the age when the Sandman
Came so early, as he used to do, to close my eyes.
Let us sleep; often is one happy
When asleep . . . and dreaming marvelous dreams!
(As she goes to sleep, Cinderella still says.)
Stay by the fireside, little cricket,
Resignation! Resignation!

SCENE VI

CINDERELLA, asleep, THE FAIRY, then SPIRITS AND GOBLINS.

THE FAIRY: (appearing, to Cinderella, asleep). Sweet child, your gentle complaint
Like the breath of a flower,
Has reached my heart,
Your Godmother sees and protects you . . . hope!

DISTANT VOICES: Hope!

THE FAIRY: Sylphs, goblins, spirits, come at my bidding
From out the air, through spaces vast . . .

(Les esprits et les follets apparaissent)
Suivez exactement mes lois.
Apportez-moi tous vos talents, toutes vos grâces!
Je veux que cette enfant charmante, que voici,
Soit aujourd'hui hors de souci
Et que par vous, splendidement parée,
Elle connaisse enfin le bonheur à son tour . . .
Je veux qu'aux fêtes de la cour
Elle soit la plus belle et la plus admirée.

LA FÉE: O Cendrillon, ma fleur d'innocence et d'amour,
Sur toi je veille!

CENDRILLON: (endormie). Vision ravissante! Étonnante merveille!

LES ESPRITS: Cendrillon, tu seras la beauté sans pareille!

LA FÉE: (aux follets). Pour en faire un tissu magiquement soyeux
Dont vous composerez sa robe,
Que votre main adroitement dérobe
Aux astres radieux
La subtile splendeur de leurs rayons joyeux,
A l'arc-en-ciel ses harmonies,
Au clair de lune empruntez ses pâleurs,
Et que pour son bouquet soient par vous réunies
En un philtre d'amour les plus douces senteurs.
(A un groupe de follets).
Et vous, préparez l'attelage!
(A un follet)
Toi, tu seras cocher.

UN ESPRIT: Et moi?

LA FÉE: Tu seras page!
(A d'autres)
Et vous serez les postillons!

LA FÉE ET LES ESPRITS: (aux follets). Tous les petits oixeaux vous prêteront leurs ailes,
Les coursiers seront les insectes frêles,
Les phalènes, les papillons
Et les légères demoiselles. Habiles artisans,
Fournissez-nous des pierreries
En butinant dans les prairies,
Coccinelles et vers luisants!
Que les moucherons et les scarabées
Égalent des rubis les purs scintillements.
Aux larmes de la nuit, sur les rose pâmées
Donnez l'éclat des diamants.
Vous cacherez des lucioles,
Pour éclairer tout son chemin,
Au fond des tremblantes corolles
Des tulipiers et du jasmin.

LA FÉE: (à Cendrillon, toujours endormie). Tout est donc prêt.
Éveille-toi, petite!

(Spirits and goblins appear.)
Follow my commands exactly,
Bring me all your talents, all your graces!
I wish this charming child
Free from all care today,
And that you dress her splendidly,
So happy she may be at last . . .
At court I wish her to appear
The prettiest and most admired.

THE FAIRY: O Cinderella, my flower of purity and love,
I watch over you.

CINDERELLA: (asleep). Ravishing vision! Astonishing marvel.

THE SPIRITS: Cinderella, you will be beauty itself!

THE FAIRY: (to the goblins). To make the finest silken fabric, Needed for her gown,
Your hands must rob
The brightest stars
Of the subtle splendor of their brilliant rays.
And the harmonies of the rainbow take.
And the paleness of the moonlight too.
And for her bouquet you must gather
In love's philtre the sweetest essences.
(To a group of goblins)
And you, prepare the escort!
(To a goblin)
You shall be the coachman.

A SPIRIT: And I?

THE FAIRY: You shall be the page!
(To others)
And you will be the postillions!

THE FAIRY AND THE SPIRITS: (to the goblins). All the birds will lend their wings,
The horses will be feeble insects,
Moths and butterflies
And nimble dragon-flies. Clever workers
Furnish us the jewels
Stealing from the meadows
Lady bugs and glossy worms!
Let the gnats and beetles
Match the purest rubies scintillating.
The tears of night, on drooping roses
Give the brilliancy of diamonds.
You will catch the fireflies
To light your path,
Searching in the trembling corols,
Of the tulip trees and jasmines.

THE FAIRY: (to Cinderella, still asleep). Everything is ready now, Awake, little one!

LES ESPRITS: (à Cendrillon) C'et ta marraine qui t'invite,
O Cendrillon! ô fleur d'amour!
On t'attend au bal de la Cour!
Tes voeux sont exaucés. Eveille-toi, petite!

CENDRILLON: (en rêvant). Enfin . . . je connaîtrai le bonheur à mon tour!
(Tristement)
On ne va pas au bal, à la cour, en guenille . . .
(Avec ravissement)
Que vois-je? Suis-je folle?
(Avec stupeur et joie, en se voyant superbement parée.)
Est-ce de l'or qui brille?
A la place de mon haillon,
Cette robe splendide et ce manteau qui traîne!
Ah! je ne suis plus Cendrillon!
Ni Lucette! . . . je suis princesse . . . je suis reine . . .
(A la fée avec effusion.)
Merci, merci, bonne marraine!

LA FÉE: Écoute bien. Quand sonnera minuit,
Ici, je veux que tu sois revenue.
Donc, par quelque plaisir que tu sois retenue,
Du bal tu partiras sans bruit.

LES ESPRITS: Quand sonnera minuit . . .

CENDRILLON: Je serai revenue . . .

LA FÉE ET LES ESPRITS: Souviens-toi bien.

CENDRILLON: A l'heure convenue.
(Cendrillon, sur le point de partir, s'arrête et avec un découragement soudain.)
Mais hélas! c'en est fait déjà de mes bonheurs!

LA FÉE: Que dis-tu?

CENDRILLON: Ma mère et mes soeurs
Sont à ce bal . . . Je serai reconnue. Et . . .

LA FÉE: Calme tes vaines frayeurs.
Cette pantoufle mignonne Que je te donne,
Est un talisman précieux
Qui rendra ma Lucette inconnue à leurs yeux.
En route, maintenant, en route, le temps presse
(Montrant le carrosse)
Voici ton carrosse, princesse!

CENDRILLON: (avec une joie naïve) Qu'il est joli! . . . qu'il est petit!

LA FÉE: Tous les esprits
Lutins, follets, seront à tes ordres.

CENDRILLON: (avec une gaieté débordante). Je ris!
Ne fût-ce qu'une fois, qu'une heure dans ma vie,
Moi qui ne connaissais encore que les mépris,

THE SPIRITS: (to Cinderella). It is your godmother who invites you,
O Cinderella! Flower of love!
At the court ball they await you!
Your wishes are granted. Awake, little one!

CINDERELLA: (dreaming). At last . . . I shall know happiness too!
(sadly)
One cannot go to the ball, at court, in rags . . .
(rapturously)
What do I see? Am I mad?
(With stupefaction and joy, seeing how she is dressed.)
Is this gold that glitters?
Instead of my rags,
This splendid robe and this mantle with train!
Oh! I am no longer Cinderella!
Nor Lucette! . . . I am a princess . . . I am a queen . . .
(To the Fairy effusively)
Thanks, thanks, kind godmother!

THE FAIRY: Listen carefully, when midnight sounds,
Here I wish you to return.
However great the pleasure that detains you then,
From the ball retire quietly.

THE SPIRITS: When midnight sounds . . .

CINDERELLA: I will return . . .

THE FAIRY AND THE SPIRITS: Do not forget.

CINDERELLA: At the hour fixed.
(Cinderella, on the point of going out, stops, suddenly discouraged.)
But alas! My happiness already ends!

THE FAIRY: What do you mean?

CINDERELLA: My mother and sisters
Are at the ball . . . I will be recognized. And . . .

THE FAIRY: Calm your idle fears.
This tiny slipper that I give you,
Is a talisman most precious
That will make my Lucette to their eyes unknown.
Now go, be off, time presses.
(Pointing to the carriage).
Behold your coach, my Princess!

CINDERELLA: (with naive joy). How pretty it is! . . . how small it is!

THE FAIRY: All the spirits,
All the goblins will obey you.

CINDERELLA: (with excessive gaiety). I laugh!
If only for once in my life, for a single hour,
I who have known only scorn until now

Des plus belles j'aurai pu mériter l'envie!
Je ris! Je ris!

LA FÉE ET LES ESPRITS: Partez, madame la princesse,
Le coeur content, le front joyeux!
Mais, fidèle à votre promesse,
Minuit sonnant, soyez de retour en ces lieux!

CENDRILLON: Fidèle à ma promesse,
A minuit, je serai de retour en ces lieux!

LA FÉE ET LES ESPRITS: Partez! partez! madame la princesse!

FIN DE L'ACTE PREMIÈR.

■ ACTE DEUXIÈME

SCÈNE PREMIÈRE

Chez Le Roi.

(La salle des fêtes et les jardins du palais. Le tout brillamment illuminé.)

Le Prince Charmant. Auprès de lui trois musiciens, [luth, viole d'amour et flûte de cristal] font entendre pendant toute la scène comme un concert mystérieux. Le Surintendant des Plaisirs, avec un groupe de Courtisans, saluant Le Prince, puis Les Docteurs et Les Ministres.

LE SURINTENDANT: (au prince).
Que les doux pensers sur vos lèvres
Viennent éclore souriants.
Laissez la tristesse et ses fièvres,
Fuyez les chagrins décevants.
Noble prince,
Répondez!

LES COURTISANS: (entre eux).
Non. Il ne nous répond rien.

LE SURINTENDANT: Messieurs, je crois qu'on nous évince.

TOUS: Aucun moyen
De prolonger cet entretien.
Pauvre Prince!
(Ils se retirent et sont remplacés par un groupe de docteurs).

LE DOYEN DE LA FACULTÉ: (au Prince). Par Hippocrate et docta lex
Volumus vos auscultare,
Chère Altesse, atque drogare
Suivant les règles du Codex.
Noble Prince
Écoutez.

LES DOCTEURS: (entre eux).
Non. Il n'écoutera rien.

LE DOYEN: Messieurs, je crois qu'on nous évince.

TOUS: Aucun moyen
De prolonger cet entretien.
(Les docteurs s'éloignant font place au groupe des ministres.)

Will merit the envy of the most beautiful ones.
I laugh! I laugh!

THE FAIRY AND THE SPIRITS:
Go, Madame the Princess,
With happy heart and smiling face!
But remember to keep your promise,
At midnight you must return!

CINDERELLA: I'll remember my promise,
At midnight I will return!

THE FAIRY AND THE SPIRITS:
Go! Go! Madame the Princess!

END OF ACT I.

■ ACT II

SCENE I

THE KING'S COURT.

(The Court room and gardens of the Palace, all brilliantly illuminated.)

Prince Charming. Around him three musicians (lute, love violin and cristal flute) compose a mysterious Concert during the entire scene. The Guardian of Pleasures with a group of Courtiers, saluting the prince, then the Doctors and Ministers.

THE GUARDIAN: (to the Prince).
May sweet thoughts on your lips
Break ever smilingly.
Leave sadness and its gloom,
Fly from deceptive sorrow.
Noble Prince,
Reply!

THE COURTIERS: (to each other).
No! He answers nothing.

THE GUARDIAN: Gentlemen, I think we are dismissed.

ALL: No means
Of entertaining further.
Poor Prince!
(They retire aside and are replaced by a group of doctors.)

THE DEAN OF FACULTY: (to the Prince). By Hippocrates and docta lex
Volumus vos auscultare,
Dear Highness, atque drogare.
Following the rules of the Codex.
Noble Prince,
Listen.

THE DOCTORS: (among themselves). No, he will hear nothing.

THE DEAN: Gentlemen, I think we are dismissed.

ALL: No means
Of entertaining further.
(The Doctors retire aside and make place for a group of ministers.)

LE PREMIER MINISTRE: (au Prince). Nous sommons Votre Seigneurie
De venir s'amuser au bal
Et de chasser sa rêverie,
Aux termes d'un décret royal.
Noble Prince,
Consentez.

LES MINISTRES: (entre eux). Non. Il ne consent à rien.

LE PREMIER MINISTRE: Messieurs, je crois qu'on nous évince.

TOUS: Aucun moyen
De prolonger cet entretien.

LES TROIS GROUPES: (légèrement, changeant de ton, avec indifférence, en s'éparpillant). Pauvre Prince!
Pauvre Prince! Pauvre Prince!

SCÈNE II

LE PRINCE CHARMANT: (seul).
Allez, laissez-moi seul . . . seul avec mes ennuis . . .
Coeur sans amour, printemps sans roses!
Pour moi, tous les jours sont moroses
Et moroses toutes les nuits! . . .
Pourtant, de doux frissons glissent par tout mon être . . .
Si, me tendant les bras, je la voyais paraître,
Celle que veut mon âme! Enivré, radieux,
Je lui dirais dans mon ivresse:
"De nous l'amour fera des dieux,
Je suis à toi. Prends ma jeunesse!"
Mais je vis triste et seul, le coeur brisé d'ennuis . . .
Pour moi, tous les jours sont moroses
Et moroses toutes les nuits! . . .
Coeur sans amour! Printemps sans roses!
Ah! si je la trouvais, oubliant la grandeur,
Dédaigneux des richesses,
Du trône je prendrais en pitié la splendeur.
Pour ne plus rien goûter que nos chères tendresses!

SCÈNE III

LE PRINCE CHARMANT. Entrée du Roi et de la COUR.

LE ROI: Mon fils, il vous faut m'obéir.
Vous allez voir à cette fête
Les filles de noblesse! Or, vous devrez choisir
Celle qui vous fera le mieux tourner la tête,
Et l'épouser . . . Mon fils, tel est mon bon plaisir!

PREMIÈRE ENTRÉE: (Les Filles de Noblesse.)

THE PRIME MINISTERS: (to the Prince). We summon Your Lordship
To the amusements of the ball,
To drive your pensive thoughts away,
By royal decree.
Noble Prince,
Consent.

THE MINISTERS: (among themselves). No. He consents to nothing.

THE PRIME MINISTER: Gentlemen, I think we are dismissed.

ALL: No means
Of entertaining further.

THE THREE GROUPS: (lightly, changing their tone, with indifference and dispersing). Poor Prince!
Poor Prince! Poor Prince!

SCENE II

PRINCE CHARMING: (alone).
Go, leave me alone! . . . alone with my boredom . . .
Heart without love, spring without roses!
All days for me are sombre
And sad all my nights! . . .
Yet, sweet emotions flit through my being . . .
If, her arms extending, I should see her come,
Her whom my soul desires! Elated, jubilant,
I would tell her in my ardor
"Love shall make us as the gods,
I am yours; accept my youth!"
But alone and sad I live, my heart oppressed by boredom . . .
All days to me are sombre,
And sad all my nights,
Heart without love, spring without the rose.
Ah! If I found her, forgetting grandeur,
Scorning riches,
I'd take its splendor from the throne,
Henceforth to enjoy only our sweet caresses.

SCENE III

PRINCE CHARMING. THE KING and COURT enter.

THE KING: My son, you must obey me.
At this entertainment you will see
The daughters of the nobility! You must choose
The one that turns your head the most
And marry her . . . My son, such is my pleasure!

FIRST ENTRY:
(Daughters of the Nobility.)

DEUXIÈME ENTRÉe: (Les Fiancés.)

TROISIÈME ENTRÉE: (Les Mandores.)

QUATRIÈME ENTRÉE: (La Florentine.)

CINQUIÈME ENTRÉE: (Le Rigodon du Roy.)
(Entrent Madame de la Haltière, ses deux filles, Pandolfe, le Surintendant, le Doyen et le premier Ministre. Aussitôt après les révérences.)

LE DOYEN, LE SURINTENDANT ET LE PREMIER MINISTRE: (Aux trois femmes) Ah! vous êtes on sa présence!
Par votre superbe prestance
Jouez de tous vos attraits,
C'est l'instant où jamais!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE, SES DEUX FILLES ET PANDOLFE: (Confidentiellement entre elles).
Ah! nous sommes en sa présence!
Par notre superbe prestance
Jouons de tous nos attraits,
C'est l'instant où jamais!
(Pendant la danse à laquelle prennent part madame de la Haltière et ses deux filles.)

PANDOLFE: (à part dans le plus grand trouble). Que je suis donc ému! Mon auguste maître,
Sa Majesté, va me parler
Elle m'a reconnu . . . peut-être . . .
Ah! je voudrais bein m'en aller!
(Pendant la danse, quand les couples se rencontrent.)

NOÈMIE ET DOROTHÉE: (à leur mère, rapidement, en passant).
Maman, nous sommes angoissées . . .

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (à ses filles, même jeu). Ne soyez pas embarrassées . . .
Le prince vient . . . c'est le moment . . .

DOROTHÉE: Je défaille . . . Ah! maman!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: Vos robes vont être froissées!
(Cendrillon paraît. Le Prince, qui semblait l'attendre, la contemple de loin, en extase.—Grand étonnement de toute l'assistance. Stupeur et dépit des dames de la Haltière. Chacun observe tour à tour Cendrillon qui s'avance lentement.)

LA FOULE: Voyez! L'adorable beauté!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE ET SES FILLES: (avec dépit). Le prince paraît transporté!

SECOND ENTRY:
(The Lovers.)

THIRD ENTRY
(The Mandores.)

FOURTH ENTRY:
(The Florentine.)

FIFTH ENTRY:
(The King's Rigadoon.)
(Enter Madame de la Haltière, her two daughters, Pandolfe, the Guardian, the Dean, the Prime Minister. Immediately after, homage is paid.)

THE DEAN, THE GUARDIAN AND THE PRIME MINISTER: (to the three women). Ah! You are in his presence!
Through your superb deportment
Enhance all your charms,
It is now or never!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE, HER TWO DAUGHTERS AND PANDOLFE: (Confidentially and among themselves). Ah! in his presence we are!
Through our superb deportment
Enhance all our charms,
It is now or never!
(During the dance in which Madame de la Haltière and her two daughters take part).

PANDOLFE: (aside, in great trouble). How moved I am! My august master,
His Majesty, will speak to me.
Perhaps already he recognizes me . . .
Ah! I would like to get away!
(During the dance, when the couples come together).

NOEMIA AND DOROTHY: (to their mother, rapidly, as they pass). Mama, we are distressed . . .

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (to her daughters, same play) Don't be embarrassed . . .
The Prince is coming . . . it is the moment . . .

DOROTHY: I am fainting . . . Ah! mama!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: Your gowns will be crushed!
(Cinderella appears. The Prince, who seems to be awaiting her, looks at her from a distance, in ecstasy. Great astonishment of the assembly. Stupefaction and chagrin of the de la Haltière ladies. Each in turn observes Cinderella, who advances slowly.)

THE CROWD: Look! The adorable beauty!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE AND HER DAUGHTERS: (spitefully).
The Prince appears transported!

LA FOULE: (entre groupes). Qui la connaît?
Personne!
Rien ne la trouble et ne l'étonne . . .
Elle est exquise en vérité!

LA FOULE: O la surprenante aventure!
O la charmante créature!
La voilà
Notre reine future!
Saluons-la!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE, ET SES FILLES: (avec dépit). O la décevante aventure!
O la bizarre créature!
Est-ce là
Notre reine future!
Évitons-là!

PANDOLFE, LE DOYEN, LE SURINTENDANT ET LE PREMIER MINISTRE: O la surprenante aventure!
O la charmante créature!
C'est bien là
Notre reine future!
Saluons-là!

LE ROI: O la suprenante aventure!
O la charmante créature!
La voilà!
C'est la reine future!
Saluez-la!
(Le Prince s'est rapproché de Cendrillon.)
(Le Roi, ravi, fait retirer tout le monde avec discrétion de l'autre côté, Madame de la Haltière éloigne ses filles avec un geste de pudeur offensée, puis retourne vivement chercher son mari qui était resté en contemplation devant la beauté de l'inconnue, et elle le fait partir d'un air d'autorité scandalisée.)

SCÈNE IV

Le Prince, Cendrillon, La Fée.

LE PRINCE: (à Cendrillon). Toi qui m'es apparue,
O beau rêve enchanteur, beauté du ciel venue
Ah! par pitié, dis-moi de quel nom te salue,
O Reine, la céleste cour
Qui, dans le paradis, t'invoque avec amour . . .
Par pitié, dis-le moi! Toi qui m'es apparue!

CENDRILLON: Pour vous, je serai l'Inconnue!

LE PRINCE: Beauté du ciel venue
Qui donc es-tu . . . ?

CENDRILLON:
L'Inconnue! . . .
Vous l'avez dit, je suis le rêve et dois passer
Sans qui'il en reste trace,
Comme s'efface

THE CROWD: (in groups). Who knows her?
No one!
Nothing troubles or surprises her . . .
She is in truth exquisite!

THE CROWD: O surprising adventure!
O charming creature!
See her!
Our future queen!
Salute her!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE AND HER DAUGHTERS: (spitefully). O deceptive adventure!
O strange creature!
Is that
Our future queen!
Avoid her!

PANDOLFE, THE DEAN, THE GUARDIAN AND THE PRIME MINISTER: O surprising adventure!
O charming creature!
She surely is
Our future queen!
Salute her!

THE KING: O surprising adventure!
O charming creature!
See her!
The future queen!
Salute her!
(The Prince has approached Cinderella. The King, delighted, commands all to retire discretely to the other side of the room. Madame de la Haltière moves away with her daughters in offensive dignity, then turns quickly in search of her husband who had remained in contemplation of the unknown beauty, and with an air of scandalized authority, compels him to leave.)

SCENE IV

THE PRINCE, CINDERELLA, THE FAIRY.

THE PRINCE: (to Cinderella).
You who have appeared to me,
O enchanting dream, beauty from heaven descended,
Ah! in mercy, tell me, by what name are you saluted,
O Queen, in the celestial court
Which, in paradise, invokes you with its love . . .
In mercy, tell me! You who have appeared to me!

CINDERELLA: To you I will remain The Unknown!

THE PRINCE: Beauty from heaven descended
Who then are you? . . .

CINDERELLA: The Unknown! . . .
As you said, I am a dream and must fade
Leaving no trace behind,
As vanishes
A reflection of the sky when seen to

Un reflet du ciel que l'on voit glisser
Sud l'eau, que le vent ride et pousse.
Et qui bientôt ira se perdre dans la mousse . . .

LE PRINCE: Je te perdrais, moi, non . . . non . . . plutôt le trépas!
Qui que tu sois, partout, je veux suivre tes pas . . .

CENDRILLON: Non, je vais fuir, hélas!
Et vous ne me reverrez pas! . . .

LE PRINCE: Ah! cette parole cruelle,
Est-ce bien toi qui l'as dite? Comment
Ta lèvre si douce peut-elle
La prononcer? Ton oeil candide la dément . . .

CENDRILLON: (tendrement).
Vous êtes mon prince Charmant,
Et, si j'écoutais mon envie,
Je voudrais consacrer ma vie
A vous complaire seulement . . .
Vous êtes mon prince Charmant.
Vous êtes mon prince Charmant,
Et mon âme gémit, blessée
Jusqu'à mourir à la pensée
De vous attrister seulement . . .
Vous êtes mon prince Charmant.

LE PRINCE: Eh bien, laisse ta main dans la mienne pressée
Car, si de toi j'étais abandonné,
Lors, je serait ton prince infortuné!

CENDRILLON: (à part, très émue). Sa voix est comme une harmonie
Qui ravit mon oreille et tient mon coeur charmé . . .

LE PRINCE: Ah! reste et prends pitié de mon coeur alarmé! . . .
Éveille en mon esprit la douceur infinie
Et le charme innocent de l'avril embaumé!

CENDRILLON: Oui, du seul souvenir de cette heure bénie,
Mon esprit restera pour toujours embaumé! . . .

LE PRINCE: Je t'aime et t'aimerai toujours . . .

CENDRILLON: (Elle écoute anxieuse le premier coup de minuit qui sonne au loin.) Ah! je frissonne!

LE PRINCE: (tendre et pressant).
Rien ne m'éloignera de toi . . . rien, ni personne!

CENDRILLON: (se détachant peu à peu des étreintes du Prince).
L'heure! déjà! mon Dieu! déjà l'heure qui sonne! . . .

glide
Over water, when roughened by the breeze,
Soon lost within the shadow of the mossy bank.

PRINCE: I shall lose you,
no . . . ah, no . . . sooner death!
Wherever you go I shall follow you . . .

CINDERELLA: No, I shall flee, alas!
And you shall not find me! . . .

THE PRINCE: Ah! that cruel word,
Is it you who speak it? How
Can lips so sweet pronounce it?
Your candid eye belies it . . .

CINDERELLA: (tenderly). You are my prince Charming,
And if I hearkened to my wish,
I would consecrate my life
To pleasing only you . . .
You are my Prince Charming,
My Prince Charming you are,
And my soul sighs, wounded
Even unto death, at thinking
I could cause you sadness even . . .
You are my Prince Charming.

THE PRINCE: Then, let your hand lie close in mine,
For, if I am abandoned by you,
Then, I shall be your luckless Prince! . . .

CINDERELLA: (aside, much moved). His voice is like sweet harmony
That my ear enravishes and holds my heart enchanted . . .

THE PRINCE: Ah! stay and have mercy for my afrighted heart! . . .
Wake in my spirit infinite sweetness
And the pure charm of perfumed April . . .

CINDERELLA: Yes, by the recollection of this happy hour,
My spirit ever shall remain perfumed! . . .

THE PRINCE: I love you and shall ever love you . . .

CINDERELLA: (she listens anxiously to the first strokes of midnight which sound afar off). Ah! I shudder!

THE PRINCE: (tender and urging). Nothing shall take me from you . . . nothing, nor any one!

CINDERELLA: (releasing herself by degrees from the embrace of the Prince). The hour! already! my God! already the hour sounds! . . .

LE PRINCE: L'heure? Qu'importe l'heure? Il la faut oublier!
Je suis à tes genoux pour te mieux supplier!
Je t'aime!
(Cendrillon s'enfuit. La Fée, voilée, surgit rapidement. Elle arrête le Prince Charmant qui allait s'élancer à la poursuite de Cendrillon, puis disparaît immediatement.)

LE PRINCE: (avec saisissement et égarement). Suis-je fou? . . .
(On danse comme si rien ne s'était passé, et tout s'aperçoit du bal comme à travers un brouillard.)

LE PRINCE: (à lui-même avec désespoir). Qu'est-elle devenue?
(Pendant les danses.)
Inconnue! Inconnue! O céleste Inconnue!

FIN DE L'ACTE DEUXIÈME.

ACTE TROISIÈME

Premier Tableau

SCÈNE PREMIÈRE

(Comme au premier acte.)

CENDRILLON: (Cendrillon paraît. Furtivement, puis avec agitation.) Enfin, je suis ici . . .
La maison est déserte . . .
A revenir, j'ai réussi
Sans être découverte.
Mais que de peine et de souci! . . .
Fuyant dans la nuit solitaire
Par les terrasses du palais,
En courant j'ai perdu ma pantoufle de verre! . . .
Marraine, voudrez-vous me pardonner jamais? . . .
Oui, car pour tenir ma promesse,
J'ai fait tout ce que je pouvais.
Vous avez dû voir ma détresse
Quand, tremblante, je me sauvais
Dans mes habits de pauvresse.
A l'heure dite je fuyais
Parmi les noires avenues,
Et je voyais
Se dresser de grandes statues . . .
Ah! quel effroi!
Blanches sous les rayons de lune! . . .
Leurs yeux sans regard se fixaient sur moi,
Elles me montraient du doigt
Se riant de mon infortune.
Dans les profondeurs du jardin
Je m'égarais . . . tout était sombre . . .
Je courais toujours, puis m'arrêtais soudain.
J'avais peur de mon ombre!
Interrogeant les horizons,
Craignant partout des trahisons

THE PRINCE: The hour? What matter the hour? Let us forget it!
I am here at your knees to beseech you more!
I love you!
(Cinderella makes her escape. The Fairy, veiled, suddenly rises up. She stops Prince Charming who was about to hasten after Cinderella, then she immediately disappears).

THE PRINCE: (bewildered). Am I mad? . . .
(The dance is resumed the same as if nothing had happened and everything is seen as through a mist.)

THE PRINCE: (to himself, in despair.) What has become of her?
(During the dance)
Unknown! Unknown! O heavenly Unknown!

END OF ACT II.

ACT III

First Tableau

SCENE I

(As in the first act.)

CINDERELLA: (Cinderella appears. Furtively, then with agitation.) Here I am at last . . .
The house is deserted . . .
I returned safely
Without being seen.
But what trouble and care! . . .
Fleeing in the lonely night
Across the palace terraces,
Running I lost my glass slipper! . . .
Godmother, will you ever pardon me? . . .
Yes, for I kept my promise,
I did all I could to keep it.
You must have seen my great distress.
When, so troubled, I escaped
In my poor old garb.
At the very hour I fled
Through the dark avenues,
And I saw
Great white statues there . . .
Oh, how frightened I was!
Ghost-like in the moonlight! . . .
Their eyes unseeing fixed upon me,
They pointed at me,
Mocking my misfortune.
In the depths of the garden
I lost my way . . . it was so dark . . .
Still, I ran, then stopped, suddenly.
My shadow frightened me!
Searching the horizon,
Fearing treachery everywhere,
I crept along the houses,
Dreading to cross the square . . .

Je glisse le long des maisons,
N'osant pas traverser la place . . .
Un grand bruit éclate et me glace
De sinistres frissons . . .
C'était le carillon du beffroi dans l'espace! . . .
Réconforant mon coeur
Il me disait dans son language:
Je veille, calme ta frayeur,
Reprends courage!
(Avec un découragement subit, regardant autour d'elle.)
Mais c'en est fait, hélas! du bal et des splendeurs! . . .
Et je n'entendrai plus les paroles si tendres
Qui me berçaient d'espoirs menteurs
(Machinalement, elle se rapproche de la cheminée et montrant le foyer éteint.)
Mon bonheur s'est éteint . . . il n'en reste que cendres! . . .
Résigne-toi, petit grillon
Car ce n'est pas pour toi que brille
Le superbe et joyeux rayon . . .
Résigne-toi, Cendrille . . .
(Comme sortant d'un rêve, subitement et avec frayeur.)
Ah! j'entends revenir mes parents et mes soeurs! . . .
A tous il faut cacher mes pleurs . . .
(Elle se sauve dans sa chambre.)

SCÈNE II

Madame de la Haltière, Noémie, Dorothée, Pandolfe.

(L'entrée de Madame de la Haltière et de ses deux filles est tumultueuse. Une grosse discussion est déchaînée. Pandolfe essaie de se disculper, mais il est accablé par les trois femmes.)

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (furibonde, à Pandolfe.) Vous êtes, je vous le déclare, Un sot, un faquin, un ignare,
Un portefaix,
Un grand dadais,
Un pauvre sire,
J'ose le dire . . .
Dans le seul but de me contrarier
Vous avez le front de nier
Que cette fille,
Cette guenille,
Cette guenon,
Cette chiffon,
Que vous dirais-je encore?
Etait une pécore.
Rien en un mot, et moins que rien!

NOÉMIE ET DOROTHÉE: Ah! maman! que vous parlez bien!

PANDOLFE: Pourquoi tant vous mettre en colère?

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: Espérez-vous que, pour vous plaire,
Je vais me taire?
Non, mais voyez un peu, quelle au-

A great noise scared me,
Freezing my blood . . .
It was the clock in the belfry far above me! . . .
Comforting my heart,
It told me in its language:
I keep watch, fear nothing,
Regain your courage!
(Suddenly discouraged, looking about her.)
But it is all over, alas! the ball and its splendors! . . .
I will never hear again such tender words
Which filled me with deceptive hopes . . .
(Mechanically, she approaches the chimney corner and points to the ashes.)
My happiness is extinguished . . . only the ashes remain! . . .
Resignation, little cricket,
It is not for you it shines,
That superb and joyous ray . . .
Resignation, Cinderel . . .
(As if awakening from a dream, suddenly and with fear.)
Ah! I hear my parents and my sisters coming back! . . .
From all I must conceal my tears . . .
(She escapes into her room.)

SCENE II

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE, NOEMIA, DOROTHY, PANDOLFE.

(Madame de la Haltière and her daughters enter boisterously. A noisy discussion starts. Pandolfe tries to excuse himself, but he is overwhelmed by the three women.)

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (furiously to Pandolfe). I do declare, you are A fool, a puppy, a numskull,
A street-porter,
A dolt,
A sad fellow,
I mean it . . .
Simply to contradict me
You had the nerve to deny
That that girl,
That rag,
That fright,
That thing,
What more can I call her?
Was a fool.
In short a good-for-nothing!

NOEMIA AND DOROTHY: Ah! mama! How rightly you speak!

PANDOLFE: Why do you get so angry?

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: Do you think, to please you,
I will shut my mouth?
No, but what a nerve she had,
That worthless adventuress! . . .

dace elle avait
Cette maudite aventurière! . . .
Aussi, notre prince a bien fait . . .

PANDOLFE: (s'apercevant que Cendrillon chancelle et est prête à défaillir.) Mais ma fille pâit . . .
(A Cendrillon.)
Qu'as-tu, ma pauvre enfant?
(Aux trois femmes.)
Assez de vos caquets! . . .

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: Qu'un homme est énervant!

PANDOLFE: (tout à Cendrillon). Mon Dieu! la force l'abandonne?
(Aux trois femmes avec force.) Sortez!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (suffoquée, se retournant). Hein! Quoi?

PANDOLFE: (plus accentué encore). Je vous l'ordonne! . . .

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (à ses filles) Ah! mes filles, venez; par ma foi, c'en est trop!
(A Pandolfe).
Je ne vous connais plus . . . vous êtes un rustaud!

TOUTES LES TROIS: Un rustaud! . . . Un lourdaud!

PANDOLFE: (violemment.).
Vous, sortez au plus tôt . . .
(Les trois femmes ont, en même temps, trois attaques de nerfs. Furibond).
Vous pouvez trépigner! . . . Je vous jette à la porte!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE ET SES DEUX FILLES: Rétractez, insolent!

PANDOLFE: Le diable vous emporte!
(Les trois femmes sortent comme des furies.)

SCÈNE III

Pandolfe, Cendrillon.

PANDOLFE: (à Cendrillon, presque évanouie dans les bras de son père). Ma pauvre enfant chérie, ah! tu souffres donc bien . . .
Va, repose ton coeur douloureux sur le mien . . .
Et laisse-toi bercer dans mes bras, ma petite! . . .
Je t'ai sacrifiée, en venant à la Cour.
Mais tu pardonneras, quant nous rirons un jour,
De mon ambition maudite . . .
Viens, nous quitterons cette ville
Où j'ai vu s'envoler ta gaieté d'autrefois
Et nous retournerons au fond de nos grands bois,
Dans notre ferme si tranquille.
Là, nous serons heureux
Tous les deux
Bien heureux!

Our Prince did well . . .

PANDOLFE: (seeing Cinderella stagger and ready to faint.) But my daughter is pale.
(to Cinderella).
What ails you, my poor child?
(To the three women).
Enough of your prattle! . . .

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: How a man gets on your nerves!

PANDOLFE: (to Cinderella). My God! her strength deserts her!
(To the three women).
Get out!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (suffocating, turning around). Hey! What!

PANDOLFE: (more emphatically). I command you to!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (to her daughters). Ah! my daughters, come, faith, it is too much!
(To Pandolfe).
I don't recognize you . . . you are unmannerly!

ALL THREE: Unmannerly! . . . Unmannerly!

PANDOLFE: (violently). Get out of here at once . . .
(The three women have simultaneously an attack of nerves. Furiously).
You can stamp your feet! . . . I throw you out!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE AND HER TWO DAUGHTERS: Take it back, insolent!

PANDOLFE: The devil take you.
(The three women go out like furies).

SCENE III

Pandolfe, Cinderella.

PANDOLFE: (To Cinderella, almost fainting in his arms). My poor dear child, ah! You suffer so . . .
Come, repose your grieving heart on mine . . .
And let me cradle you in my arms my love!
I have sacrificed you going to the Court.
But you will pardon me, when we shall laugh one day,
At my cursed ambition . . .
Come, we shall leave this town
Where I have seen your gaiety take wings
And will return to the shade of our dear woods,
On our peaceful farm.
There, we shall be happy.
Both of us

Le matin, nous irons, comme deux amoureux,
Cueillir les blancs muguets . . .

CENDRILLON: Et les liserons bleus,
Dès que les cloches argentines
S'éveilleront . . .

PANDOLFE: Sonnant matines!

CENDRILLON: Le soir, nous entendrons le chant si doux, si frais,
Du rossignol des nuits . . .

PANDOLFE: Au profond des forêts.

ENSEMBLE: Oui nous quitterons cette ville
Où nous vu s'envoler notre gaîté d'autrefois.
Et nous retournerons au fond de nos grands bois,
Dans notre ferme si tranquille.
Là, nous serons heureux
Tous les deux,
Bien heureux!

CENDRILLON: Maintenant, je suis mieux et je me sens renaître
Tu peux me laisser seule.

PANDOLFE: Oui, si tu veux promettre
De ne plus être triste et de ne plus pleurer:
Pour nous sauver d'ici je vais tout préparere!
(Il sort.)

SCÈNE IV

CENDRILLON: (seule). (Avec résolution) Seule, je partirai, mon père.
Le poids de mon chagrin serait trop lourd pour toi.
Je ne veux pas te voir souffrir de ma misère! . . .
(Puis, sous le coup d'une idée fixe.)
Non . . . je ne peux plus vivre . . . Il a douté de moi,
Lui! . . . mon doux maître et mon seul roi! . . .
Lui que j'adore! . . . Il me renie et me repousse! . . .
Pourtant, sa voix était bien douce,
Pourtant, ses yeux étaient bien doux!
O mes rêves d'amour, hélas! envolez-vous!
(Enveloppant la chambre d'un long regard.)
Adieu, mes souvenirs de joie . . . et de souffrance,
Qui, malgré tout, me parliez d'espérance! . . .
Témoins et compagnons de mon si court destin! . . .
Partez, mes tourterelles,
Pour qui chaque matin,
J'allais, par les venelles,
Cueillir le vert plantin . . .
Je ne vous verrai plus, fleurs d'aube printanière . . .
(Allant à la cheminée.)

Very happy!
In the morning we shall go, like lovers,
To gather white May-lilies . . .

CINDERELLA: And blue bindweed
As soon as the silvery bells
Shall awake . . .

PANDOLFE: Calling to matins!

CINDERELLA: In the evening, we shall hear the sweet and gentle
Nightingale sing in the night . . .

PANDOLFE: In the depths of the forest.

TOGETHER: Yes, we will leave this town
Where we have seen our gaiety take wings
And we will return to the shade of our dear woods,
On our peaceful farm.
There, we shall be happy
Both of us,
Very happy!

CINDERELLA: Now, I am better and my senses return,
You can leave me alone.

PANDOLFE: Yes, if you will promise—
To be sad no more, nor weep no more,
I'll go get ready to escape from here!
(He goes out).

SCENE IV

CINDERELLA: (alone). (with resolution). Alone, I shall go, my father.
The weight of my shame will bear you down.
I wish not that you see my misery . . .
(Then, struck with a fixed idea).
No . . . I can live no longer. He doubts me,
He! . . . my lover and my only king!
Him whom I adore! . . . He denies me and repulses! . . .
Yet, his voice is very sweet,
And his eyes are very soft,
O my dream of love, alas! dispelled!
(Casting a long look around the room).
Adieu, pleasant memories . . . and sad,
Memories that spoke to me of hope!
Witnesses and companions of my too brief fate! . . .
Go, my turtle-doves,
For whom each morning,
I went through the lanes
To gather green herbs.
I shall never see you again, flowers of springtime . . .
(Going to the chimney).
Nor you, my old familiar nook . . .
(Detaching the little branch hanging in the chimney).

Ni toi, ma place familière . . .
(Détachant la petite branche pendue à la cheminée.)
Que je t'embrasse encor, tout séché, tout jauni,
Relique d'un beau jour, humble rameau béni.
(Avec un sentiment très profond.)
Comme on aime ce que l'on quitte! . . .
Adieu, le grand fauteuil
Où, quand j'étais petite,
Avant de m'être vue, en ma robe de deuil,
Je courais me blottir, bien vite,
Frileusement,
Sur les genoux de ma maman
Au sourire indulgent, plein de mélancolie . . .
De maman . . .
(Avec des larmes.)
De maman, si bonne et si jolie! . . .
Qui fredonnait en me berçant:
"C'est l'Angelus,
Dors, mon petit ange,
Dors, comme Jésus
Dormait dans la grange."
(La nuit, qui venait de commencer un peu, s'assombrit plus rapidement; le tonnerre gronde, l'éclair brille.)
(Avec un subit désespoir.)
Ah! puisque tout bonheur me fuit,
Montant par les roches sacrées,
Sans crainte, j'irai dans la nuit,
Malgré les revenants et le follet qui luit . . .
(Avec décision.)
J'irai mourir sous le chêne des Fées! . . .
(Elle s'enfuit rapidement dans la nuit qui est devenue complète.)

FIN DU PREMIER TABLEAU.

(Le deuxième tableau apparaît en se dégageant peu à peu dans l'ombre.)

■ Deuxième Tableau

SCÈNE PREMIÈRE

Chez la Fée.

(Un grand chêne, au milieu d'une lande pleine de genêts en fleurs.—Au fond la mer.—Nuit claire.—Lumière très bleutée.)

VOIX LONTAINES DES ESPRITS; danse silencieuse des gouttes de rosée, accompagnée par la VOIX DE LA FÉE.

LA VOIX DE LA FÉE: Ames ou follets, Fugitives chimères,
Lueurs éphémères,
Glissez sur les bruyères!
Flottez sur les genêts!

Let me kiss you again, all dried, all yellowed,
Relic of a happy day, poor little twig.
(With very deep sentiment).
How we love what we must leave!
Adieu, big armchair,
In which, when I was small,
Before I wore my sombre garb of grief,
I ran to hide my face,
Roguishly,
On my mother's knees.
Her smile of kindness, mingled with sadness . . .
My mother . . .
(Tearfully).
My good, pretty mother!
Humming as she cradled me: "It is the Angelus,
Sleep my little angel,
Sleep, as Jesus
Slept in the manger."
(Night which has begun to fall, darkens rapidly; thunder rolls, there are flashes of lightning.)
(With sudden despair).
Ah! since all happiness has fled,
Scaling the sacred rocks,
Without fear, I shall go into the night,
Despite the ghosts and goblins that prowl . . .
(With decision).
I shall go and die beneath the Fairies' Oak.
(She runs out into the night which has completely closed in).

END OF FIRST TABLEAU.

(The second tableau appears gradually out of the shadows.)

■ Second Tableau

SCENE I

AT THE FAIRY'S.

A large oak, in the centre of a moor covered with flowering broom.—At rear the sea.—A clear night.—The atmosphere is very blue.

Distant Voices of the Spirits; silent dance of dew drops, accompanied by the Voice of the Fairy.

VOICE OF THE FAIRY: Ghosts or goblins,
Wandering chimeras,
Ephemeral glimmers,
Glide over the heath!
Skim over the broom!

CHOEUR INVISIBLE DES ESPRITS: (en écho). Glissez sur les bruyères
Flottez sur les genêts.
(La Fée paraît dans les branches du chêne.)

TROIS ESPRITS: (accourant). Mais là-bas, au fond de la lande obscure, Par le chemin, on voit venir
Sur le doux tapis de verdure,
Une enfant qui semble gémir . . .

TROIS ESPRITS: (accourant). Regardez au fond de la lande obscure! . . .

LA FÉE: (dans les branches du chêne). Et, de l'autre côté, voyez-vous pas, mes soeurs, Ce pauvre garçon tut en pleurs?

LES SIX ESPRITS: Narguant les dangers, la froidure,
Ce sont de jolis amoureux . . .
Comme ils sont malheureux!
D'ombre voilées
Invisibles pour eux,
Mes soeurs, écoutons bien leurs plaintes désolées.

LA FÉE: (étendant le bras). A fin qu'ils ne puissent se voir, Sylvains, obéissez au magique pouvoir!
Entre le Prince et son aimée,
Fermez-vous, une muraille embaumée! . . .
(Les esprits s'éloignent doucement.—La Fée se dissimule dans les branches et devient invisible.—Un mur de feuillage et de fleurs magiques sépare le milieu de la scène.)

SCÈNE II

Cendrillon et le Prince Charmant, entrent chacun de leur côté. Ils s'agenouillent sans se voir. Ils sont séparés par les fleurs et ils adressent leur prière à la Fée.)

CENDRILLON: A deux genoux,
Bonne marraine,
J'implore mon pardon de vous
Si je vous ai fait moindre peine.

LE PRINCE: Je viens à vous,
Puissante reine,
Et vous demande à deux genoux
De vouloir terminer ma peine.

CENDRILLON: (à la Fée avec ardeur). Bonne marraine,
A deux genoux
J'implore mon pardon de vous
Si je vous ai fait moindre peine.

LE PRINCE: (à la Fée avec ardeur). Puissante reine, Je viens à vous
Et vous demande à deux genoux
De vouloir terminer ma peine.

INVISIBLE CHORUS OF SPIRITS: (echoing). Glide over the heath,
Skim over the broom.
(The Fairy appears in the branches of the oak).

THREE SPIRITS: (hastening). But yonder, across the darkened moor,
By the path there comes
A child that seem to moan
Down the soft green grass . . .

THREE SPIRITS: (hastening). Look across the darkened moor! . . .

THE FAIRY: (in the branches of the oak). And from the other side, see, my sisters,
That poor boy in tears?

SIX SPIRITS: Defying the dangers, the cold,
They are pretty lovers . . .
How unhappy they are!
Veiled shadows
Invisible to them,
My sisters, heed their wailing.

THE FAIRY: (extending her arms). That they may not see each other,
Sylvans, obey the magic power!
Between the Prince and his beloved,
Raise a perfumed wall!
(The spirits move away softly.—The Fairy conceals herself in the branches and becomes invisible.—A wall of foliage and magic flowers parts the scene in two).

SCENE II

CINDERELLA AND PRINCE CHARMING. (They enter on either side. They kneel without seeing each other. They are separated by the flowers and address their prayer to the Fairy.)

CINDERELLA: On both knees,
Kind Godmother,
I implore your pardon
If I have caused you pain.

THE PRINCE: I come to you,
Powerful queen,
And ask you on both knees
To end my pain.

CINDERELLA: (to the Fairy, with ardor). Kind Godmother,
On both knees
I implore your pardon
If I have caused you pain.

THE PRINCE: (to the Fairy, with ardor). Powerful queen,
I come to you,
And ask you on both knees
To end my pain.

LE PRINCE: (à la Fée). Vous qui pouvez tout voir
Et tout savoir
Vous n'ignorez pas ma souffrance . . .
Vous n'ignorez pas comment
Pendant un trop court moment
Du plus divin bonheur j'ai conçu l'espérance!
Ah! ce bonheur, je l'ai vu de mes yeux!
Ce fut un éclair radieux
Dont mon âme fut traversée,
Dont mon regard fut ébloui.
Et un instant, hélas! tout s'est évanoui,
Et j'en garde un mortel regret dans ma pensée!

CENDRILLON: (qui a écouté palpitante). Une pauvre âme en grand émoi
Est là qui prie et désespère . . .
Puisqu'il n'est plus pour moi
Que tristesse et misère,
Que je souffre en rachat de ce coeur tant meurtri . . .
Marraine, frappez-moi. Mais que lui soit guéri!

LE PRINCE: (ayant entendu cette prière). Pauvre femme inconnue,
Doux ange de bonté
Dont un enchantement me dérobe la vue,
Je te bénis pour ta sublime charité!
Pauvre femme inconnue!

LE PRINCE: (avec effusion). Suis-je assez malheureux!
Mais celle que j'aime est si belle Que tu dirais, voyant ses yeux:
Pas une étoile n'étincelle
Plus pure au firmament des cieux!
Asservissant la terre et l'onde,
Pour la revoir et la chérir,
Pour la reconquérir,
Je soumettrai le monde.

CENDRILLON: (radieuse). Vous êtes le Prince Charmant!

LE PRINCE: Toi qui as eu pitié de ma détresse extrême
Qui donc es-tu m'interrogeant?

CENDRILLON: Je suis Lucette qui vous aime . . .

LE PRINCE: (avec ivresse). Ineffable ravissement!

CENDRILLON: Vous êtes mon Prince Charmant!

LE PRINCE: (en adoration, avec la plus profonde emotion). Tu me l'as dit, ce nom que je voulais connaître, Lucette, de ton doux secret, me voilà maître . . .
De tes lèvres, mon âme a recueilli l'aveu . . .

CENDRILLON: (à part) Sa chère voix d'extase me pénètre . . .
Mais l'entendre, hélas! c'est trop peu!

LE PRINCE: (à la Fée avec ardeur). Bonne fée, à mes yeux, laissez-la reparaître . . .
Laissez-moi la revoir . . . et recevez mon voeu;
A la branche du chêne enchanté, bonne fée,
Je suspendrai mon coeur, pur et sanglant trophée . . .
Laissez-moi la revoir! . . . Laissez-moi la revoir!

THE PRINCE: (to the Fairy). You who can see all things
And know all things,
You are not ignorant of my suffering,
Nor ignorant of how,
For a brief moment,
I conceived the hope of divine happiness . . .
Ah! that happiness, I saw it plainly!
It was a brilliant ray,
Which entered my very heart,
And by which my eyes were dazzled.
In an instant, alas! all vanished,
And in my mind I keep a deep regret!

CINDERELLA: (who has listened with heaving bosom). A poor soul in great distress
Here prays in desperation . . .
Since he is henceforth for me
Only sadness and misery,
Let me suffer instead of this pour wounded heart . . .
Godmother, strike me down. But let him be cured!

THE PRINCE: (having heard this prayer). Poor unknown girl,
Sweet Angel of goodness
Snatched from my sight by enchantment,
I bless you for your great charity!
Poor unknown girl!

THE PRINCE: (with effusion). I am so unhappy!
But she whom I love is so beautiful,
You would say, if you saw her eyes:
No star shines
Purer in heaven!
Through land and sea,
To see her again and cherish,
To conquer her again,
I will overcome the world.

CINDERELLA: (radiant). My Prince Charming you are!

THE PRINCE: You, who have taken pity on my distress,
Who is speaking!

CINDERELLA: I am Lucette who loves you . . .

THE PRINCE: (with ecstasy). Ineffable joy!

CINDERELLA: You are my Prince Charming!

THE PRINCE: (in adoration, with strongest emotion). You have told me the name I wished to know, Lucette, I am now the master of your sweet secret . . .
From your lips my soul has won avowal . . .

CINDERELLA: (aside). His sweet voice fills me with ecstasy
But, alas! to hear him is not enough.

THE PRINCE: Her sweet voice fills me with ecstasy
But, alas! to hear her is not enough.
(to the Fairy, with ardor). Good Fairy, let her reappear to me . . .
Let me see her again . . . and receive my vow;
On the branch of the enchanted oak, Good fairy,
I will hang my heart, a pure and bleeding trophy . . .
Let me see her again! . . .
Let me see her again! . . .

LA FÉE: (apparaissant de nouveau dans les branches du chêne). J'accepte ton serment. J'exauce ton espoire.

LE PRINCE: (revoyant Cendrillon). Lucette! ma Lucette! ah! je t'ai retrouvée!

CENDRILLON: (dans les bras du Prince, tendrement et innocemment.) Vous êtes mon Prince Charmant!

LE PRINCE: Viens! viens! mon âme est comme au ciel ravie!
Je jure que tout la vie
A vous aimer fidèlement!

CENDRILLON: A vos douces lois asservie,
Je consacre tout ma vie
A vous aimer fidèlement!
(Un sommeil magique s'empare d'eux et ils s'endorment bercés par la voix des Esprits. Les Esprits et les Gouttes de Rosée apparaissent de tous côtés et s'avancent silencieusement.)

LES ESPRITS: (aux deux amants). Dormez! rêvez!

LA FÉE: (toujours dans les branchs du chêne). Aimez-voux, l'heure est brève;
Vous croirez, tous les deux, n'avoir fait qu'un beau rêve! . . .

LES ESPRITS: Dormez!
Rêvez!

FIN DE L'ACTE TROISIÈME.

THE FAIRY: (again appearing in the branches of the oak). I accept your vow, I grant your wish.

THE PRINCE: (seeing Cinderella again). Lucette! my Lucette! ah! I have found you again!

CINDERELLA: (in the Prince's arms, tenderly and innocently). You are my Prince Charming!

THE PRINCE: Come! Come! my soul is jubilant!
I swear that all my life
I shall love you faithfully!

CINDERELLA: To your sweet rule,
I consecrate my life
I shall love you faithfully!
(A magic sleep comes over them and they are lulled to rest by the voices of the Spirits. The Spirits and Dew Drops appear from all sides, advancing silently.)

THE SPIRITS: (to the two lovers). Sleep! dream!

THE FAIRY: (still in the branches of the oak). Love each other, the hour is brief;
You both will believe it was only a beautiful dream! . . .

THE SPIRITS: Sleep!
Dream!

END OF ACT THREE.

■ ACTE QUATRIÈME

■ Premier Tableau

SCÈNE PREMIÈRE

(La Terrasse de Cendrillon.—Matinée de printemps.)

Pandolfe, affectueusement attentif et presque à voix basse pendant que Cendrillon sommeille.

PANDOLFE: O pauvre enfant! depuis que l'on t'a ramenée
Des bords du ruisselet où nous t'avons trouvée
Gisant près des roseaux, glacée, inanimée . . .
Voilà des jours . . . des mois . . . quel souvenir affreux,
Quelle angoisse cruelle!

■ ACT IV

■ First Tableau

SCENE I

(Cinderella's Terrace.—A spring morning.)

Pandolfe, affectionately attentive and in a low voice while Cinderella sleeps.

PANDOLFE: O poor child! since we found you
By the banks of the stream, frozen and unconscious . . .
Days and months have passed . . . how terrible
And how cruel our anguish!
In taking you death might have taken us both . . .

En te prenant, la mort nous aurait pris tous deux . . . Mais la mort n'osa pas en te voyant si belle.	But death dared not touch one so beautiful.—
CENDRILLON: (s'éveillant, à son père). Je n'étais rendormie . . . Et toi, tu restais là . . . Me soignant sans repos . . .	CINDERELLA: (awaking, to her father). I have been sleeping again . . . and you have stayed by me Watching while I slept.—
PANDOLFE: Ah! mon enfant chérie, Ne me plains pas. Je suis bien heureux; te voilà Vaillante, maintenant, et tout à fait guérie. (Mouvement de Cendrillon). Reste calme . . . il te faut encore ménager.	PANDOLFE: Ah! my dear child, Do not blame me. I am very happy; Now you are brave again and quite recovered. (Cinderella makes a movement) Rest calmly . . . we must still cradle you.
CENDRILLON: (l'interrogeant doucement, mais gentiment et résolument). Dis-moi la vérité!	CINDERELLA: (gently interrogating him, but resolute). Tell me the truth!
PANDOLFE: (embarrassé). Pourquoi m'interroger?	PANDOLFE: (embarrassed). Why ask me?
CENDRILLON: (sérieuse). J'étais donc insensée.	CINDERELLA: (seriously). Was I then so foolish . . .
PANDOLFE: (fêné). A quo vas-tu songer?	PANDOLFE: (awkwardly). Of what do you think?
CENDRILLON: Alors, père, c'était comme si ma pensée M'avait tout à coup délaissée . . .	CINDERELLA: Father, it seems as though my mind Had suddenly left me . . .
PANDOLFE: Tu riais, tu pleurais Sans motif et sans trêve . . . Tu vivais comme dans un rêve . . . Comme au hasard tu murmurais Des mots confus . . .	PANDOLFE: You did laugh and weep. Needlessly and without pause . . . You lived as in a dream . . . Fitfully you did murmur Confused words . . .
CENDRILLON: Quoi donc?	CINDERELLA: What?
PANDOLFE: Pauvre enfant, tu souffrais! . . .	PANDOLFE: Poor child, you did suffer! . . .
CENDRILLON: Et je parlais? . . .	CINDERELLA: And I talked?
PANDOLFE: Du bal de la cour . . . oui, vraiment! . . . Et surtout du Prince Charmant, Du Prince que tu n'as jamais vu seulement . . . De brillant avenir . . . et de promesses folles . . . D'un grand chêne enchanté . . . d'un petit coeur sanglant . . . D'une pantoufle en verre . . . et de riche parure . . . (Volant la faire rire.) Tu voyais des lutins qui traînaient ta voiture! . . .	PANDOLFE: Of the court ball . . . yes, really! . . . And especially of Prince Charming, The Prince whom you have never seen . . . Of a brilliant future . . . and of wild promises . . . Of a great enchanted oak . . . of a bleeding heart.— Of a glass slipper . . . and of rich attire . . . (Trying to laugh). You did see goblins drawing your coach! . . .
CENDRILLON: (anxieuse). Quoi! Rien de tout cela ne serait arrivé! . . .	CINDERELLA: (anxiously). What! nothing like that happened to me! . . .
PANDOLFE: Rien, ma chère fillette! . . .	PANDOLFE: Nothing, my dear girl! . . .
CENDRILLON: Hélas! j'ai donc rêvé! . . .	CINDERELLA: Alas! I have only dreamed! . . .
PANDOLFE: Tu riais . . .	PANDOLFE: You laughed . . .
CENDRILLON: Je pleurais Sans motif . . .	CINDERELLA: I wept Needlessly . . .
PANDOLFE: Et sans trêve.	PANDOLFE: And without pause.
CENDRILLON: Je vivais comme dans un rêve . . . Et je parlais?	CINDERELLA: I lived as in a dream . . . And I talked? . . .
PANDOLFE: De riche parure!	PANDOLFE: Of rich apparel! . . .
CENDRILLON: D'un petit coeur sanglant . . .	CINDERELLA: Of a bleeding little heart . . .
PANDOLFE: Et surtout du Prince Charmant!	PANDOLFE: And especially of Prince Charming! . . .
CENDRILLON: Du Prince . . .	CINDERELLA: Of the Prince . . .
PANDOLFE: Que tu n'as jamais vu seulement.	PANDOLFE: That you have never seen.
CENDRILLON: Je croyais aux lutins . . .	CINDERELLA: I thought of goblins . . .
PANDOLFE: (en riant) Qui traînaient ta voiture!	PANDOLFE: (laughing). That drew your coach!
CENDRILLON: Rien de cela n'est arrivé! . . .	CINDERELLA: Nothing like that happened! . . .
PANDOLFE: Oui! tout cela tu l'as rêvé!	PANDOLFE: Yes! You dreamed it all.
CENDRILLON: (attristée, mais convaincue par son père). Mon papa! J'ai rêvé!	CINDERELLA: (saddened, but convinced by her father). My father! I have dreamed! . . .

tends . . .
Pour éviter cris et gourmades,
Viens retrouver tes camarades! . . .
Profitons du beau temps!
(Il emmène doucement Cendrillon)
Tous tes chagrins sont finis, je l'espère!

CENDRILLON: (en sortant avec lui). Comme vous êtes bon, mon père!

SCÈNE III

Entrée tumultueuse de Madame de la Haltière, Noémie, Dorothée, puis les Domestiques.

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (à tous, avec importance). Avancez!
Reculez! Apprenez qu'aujourd'hui
L'ordre de notre Roi convoque près de lui
Les princesses sans nombre à appel venues
De régions qui sont ou ne sont pas connues.
Il en vient du Cambodge,
Il en vient du Japon, de l'Espagne et de Tyr,
Des bords de la Tamise et du Guadalquivir,
Il en vient du Cambodge,
Il en vient de Norvège . . .
Et tout à l'heure, ici, passera le cortège
(Changeant de ton).
Puis . . . comme le ciel clair succède à l'ouragan,
La source murmurante au fracas du torrent,
Vous verrez sur la fin s'avancer noblement,
Comme une vision idéale et céleste,
Trois femmes au maintien radieux et modeste.
(Comme devant la plus suave des apparitions).
Alors, vous entendrez un long frémissement,
Car le peuple dira; "Voyez ces inconnues,
Pour le Prince Charmant, du ciel bleu descendues" . . .
Sans penser que ce sont deux filles et moi,
Nous rendant au palais pour saluer le Roi.
(Roulements de tambours et sonneries de trompettes dans la rue.)

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: C'est le héraut du Roi!
(Tous se précipitent au balcon, Mêlée).

PANDOLFE: (joyfully). Ah! It is my wife who comes . . .
To escape from her scolding,
Come, let us join your companions! . . .
Enjoy the beautiful weather!
(He gently leads away Cinderella).
All your griefs are over, I hope!

CINDERELLA: (going out with him). How good you are, my father!

SCENE III

Noisy entry of Madame de la Haltière, Noemia, Dorothy and the Servants.

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (to all, impatiently). Go on! Move back! Don't you know that today
The King summons to him
Every princess from wherever she may come,
Be it Japan or Spain or Tyre,
From the banks of the Thames or Guadalquivir,
From Cambodia—or from Norway . . .
Past here the procession will go.
(Changing her tone.)
Just as clear weather follows the storm,
The murmuring brook, the roar of the torrent,
You will see in the rear, advancing nobly,
Like heavenly visions, no less,
Three women radiantly and modestly robed.
(as if in the presence of the sweetest of apparitions.)
Then, you will hear a long murmur of voices,
For the people will say: "Behold these unknown ladies, Sent for Prince Charming expressly from heaven . . . "
Not thinking they are my two daughters and I,
Going to the palace to greet the King.
(A sound of drums and the sound of trumpets in the street.)

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: It is the King's herald!
(All rush to the balcony, mingling together.)

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (bousculant ceux qui encombrent.) Eh bein! s'il vous plaît, après moi!
(Cendrillon vient d'entrer sans être aperçue des personnes présentes. Elle écoute anxieuse.)

LA VOIX DU HÉRAULT: (dans la rue). Bonnes gens, vous êtes avertis qu'aujourd'hui même, le Prince va recevoir en personne dans la grande cour du Palais, les Princesses qui viennent essayer la pantoufle de verre perdue par la femme inconnue dont le départ a déchiré le coeur du fils du Roi et dont l'absence le fait mourir de langueur et de désespoir . . .

VOIX: (dans la rue). Hurra! le cortège s'avance!

CENDRILLON: (frappée). Mon rêve était donc vrai!
Maintenant, j'en ai l'assurance,
Si mon ami me revoyait, chère espérance,
A mon aspect il revivrait . . .
Je sais qu'il m'aime . . .
Il me l'a dit . . . il me l'a dit lui-même.
O marraine, venez à mon appel fervant!
Et faites-moi revoir mon doux prince Charmant!
(Pendant que les acclamations rdoublent au dehors et au balcon, derrière Cendrillon apparaît la Fée.)
(La musique joue jusqu'au changement.—Marche des Princesses.)

Salut aux Altesses!

LE PRINCE CHARMANT: (d'une voix faible). Posez dans son écrin, sur un coussin de fleurs,
La pantoufle d'azur déteinte par mes pleurs.
(Avec fièvre, se soutenant à peine.)
Au'à mon regard avide enfin elle apparaisse . . .
La divin princesse
Qui croit pouvoir la réclamer . . .
Je ne puis vivre encor que si je puis

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (shoving aside those who crowd her.) Here! if you please, after me!
(Cinderella has just entered unseen by those present. She listens anxiously.)

THE HERALD'S VOICE: (in the street). Good people, you are informed that today the Prince will receive in person in the great Court of the Palace, the Princesses who are coming to try on the glass slipper lost by the unknown woman whose departure has distressed the King's son and from whose absence has caused him to languish and despair . . .

VOICES: (in the street). Hurrah! The procession is coming!

CINDERELLA: (impressed). Then my dream was real!
Now, I am sure of it,
If my friend behold me again, dear hope,
At the sight of me he will revive . . .
I know that he loves me . . .
He told me so . . . he told me himself.
O Godmother, come at my earnest appeal!
And make me see my sweet Prince Charming again!
(While the acclamations redouble without and on the balcony, behind Cinderella the Fairy appears.)
(The music plays during the change of scenery "March of the Princesses.")

THE KING'S COURT.

The Court of honor.—Bright sunlight.—The Princesses are assembled.

THE SAME PERSONS, PRINCE CHARMING, THE PRINCESSES, THE KING, THE FAIRY, THE CROWD.

THE CROWD: Long live the Princesses!
Long live the Highnesses!

PRINCE CHARMING: (in a weak voice). In its casket on a cushion of flowers, Place the blue slipper, my tears besprinkled.
(Feverishly sustaining himself with difficulty).
To my hungry gaze may she at last appear,
My divine princess,
Who thinks to claim it . . .
I can live no longer if I may not love her!

l'aimer!
(Les princesses s'avancent. Il les regarde anxieusement. Mais il les arrête, d'un geste triste et très doux, avant qu'elles n'arrivent jusqu'à la pantoufle de verre.)

LE PRINCE CHARMANT: Chacune de vous est bien belle,
Mais je cherche, et ce n'est pas elle!
Il faudra donc que rien n'apaise ma douleur
Il faudra donc que sans baisers reste ma lèvre!
Point ne se calmera ma fièvre.
On ne m'a pas rendu mon coeur!
(est prêt à s'évanouir.)

LA FOULE: (anxieuse). Sur sa tête pâlie
Quelle mélancolie!

LE ROI: (avec émotion). Ses yeux vont se fermer. Parle-moi, mon enfant!

LA FOULE: (avec recueillement).
Dans un appel fervent
Tout un peuple supplie.
Nous implorons les cieux!

LA FOULE: (interdite et comme un murmure). Enchantement! merveille!

LA FOULE: Voyez la beauté sans pareille!

LA FÉE: (au Prince, lui montrant Cendrillon). Prince Charmant, rouvrez les yeux!
(Le Prince voit Cendrillon et la désigne du doigt en tremblant dans une joie d'extase.)

LE PRINCE: Ah! c'est elle, c'est ma Lucette! . . .

CENDRILLON: (simplement).
Cendrillon, la pauvrette! . . .
(Elle va vers le prince qui l'attend joyeux et timeide; en lui rendant son coeur.)

(The princesses advance. He looks at them anxiously; but he stops them with a sad, yet gentle gesture, before they reach the glass slipper.)

PRINCE CHARMING: Each of you is beautiful,
But still I seek for her!
Shall nothing then appease my grief,
Shall my lips no kisses ever know!
Shall my fever never end?
They have not returned my heart to me?
(He almost faints).

THE CROWD: (anxiously). On his pale countenance
What melancholy broods!

THE KING: (with emotion). His eyes are closed. Speak to me, my son!

THE CROWD: (drawing back). In a fervent appeal
All people beseech.
We implore the heavens!

THE CROWD: (puzzled and like a murmur.) Enchantment! Marvel!

THE CROWD: See the matchless beauty!

THE FAIRY: (to the Prince, showing him Cinderella). Prince Charming, open your eyes!
(The Prince sees Cinderella and points to her with a trembling finger, in an ecstasy of joy).

THE PRINCE: Ah! it is she, it is my Lucette! . . .

CINDERELLA: (simply). Cinderella, the poor girl! . . .
(She goes towards the prince who awaits her joyfully; returning him his heart.)

Vous êtes mon Prince Charmant
Laissez-vous renaître à la vie . . .
C'était là toute mon envie . . .
Reprenez-le ce coeur sanglant . . .
Vous êtes mon Prince Charmant.

LE PRINCE: Ah! garde-le, chère maîtresse!
De tes yeux, la douce caresse
Fait renaître ce coeur flétri.

LA FÉE: Avril pour eux a refleuri!

LE PRINCE ET CENDRILLON: Avril pour nous a refleuri!

LA FOULE: (joyeuse). Honneur à notre souveraine!
(Pandolfe arrive avec Madame de la Haltière et ses filles, les trois dames sont accompagnées par le Doyen, le Surintendant et le premier Ministre. Pandolfe se précipite vers Cendrillon qui s'élance vers son père.)

PANDOLFE: Grands dieux! . . . c'est . . .

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (écartant vivement son mari et recevant dans ses bras Cendrillon qu'ell câline). Ma fille!

PANDOLFE, NOÉMIE ET DOROTHÉE, LE DOYEN, LE SURINTENDANT ET LE PREMIER MINISTRE: (stupéfiés). Ah! quel aplomb est le sien!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (continuant et accentuant). Lucette que j'adore!

PANDOLFE: (au public). Ici tout finit bien.
Voici nos amoureux maintenant hors de peine.

TOUS: (au public, en saluant ou en faisant la belle révérence). La pièce est terminée. On a fait de son mieux
Pour vous faire envoler par les beaux pays bleus.

FIN.

You are my Prince Charming,
Return to life again . . .
All my desire is there . . .
Take back this bleeding heart . . .
You are my Prince Charming.

THE PRINCE: Ah! keep it, mistress dear!
Your eyes, your sweet caress
Will cure this wounded heart.

THE FAIRY: April has bloomed for them.

THE PRINCE AND CINDERELLA:
April for us has bloomed!

THE CROWD: (joyfully). All honor to our sovereigns!
(Pandolfe arrives with Madame de la Haltière and her daughters; the three ladies are accompanied by the Dean, the Guardian and the Prime Minister. Pandolfe rushes toward Cinderella who hastens to meet her father.)

PANDOLFE: Great Heavens! . . . it is . . .

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (quickly thrusting her husband aside and receiving Cinderella into her arms, and fondling her.) My daughter!

PANDOLFE, NOEMIA, DOROTHY, THE DEAN, THE GUARDIAN AND THE PRIME MINISTER: (stupefied). Oh! what assurance she has!

MADAME DE LA HALTIÈRE: (continuing with emphasis). Lucette whom I adore!

PANDOLFE: (to the public) Here all ends well.
Behold our lovers now out of trouble.

ALL: (to the public, bowing low).
So ends the play. We have done our best
To take you all through Fairy Land.

THE END.

Don Quichotte (1910)

Don Quixote

MUSIC BY JULES MASSENET ■ LIBRETTO BY HENRI CAIN

This five-act opera, set to a libretto by Henri Cain (based on Jacques Le Lorrain's play Le Chevalier de a Longue Figure, after Cervantes' romance), premiered at the Théâtre du Casino in Monte Carlo on February 19, 1910. In a square in front of Dulcinée's house, the people are singing praises to her beauty. Don Quichotte, a knight, and his companion, the comical Sancho, enter on horseback. As he serenades Dulcinée, Juan, her lover, becomes jealous, and Dulcinée prevents them from duelling. Amused by Don Quichotte, she agrees to give him her love if he can retrieve a necklace of hers that was stolen by a band of thieves. The famous fight with the windmill ensues on the way to the camp. Arriving there, Don Quichotte attacks the thieves as Sancho retreats. They capture the gallant knight, who expects to die at their hands, but they are moved by his courage, his politeness and his love for Dulcinée; the thieves give him her necklace and set him free. Dulcinée is ecstatic when Don Quichotte returns with the necklace. She embraces him, and he begs her to marry him. Touched by his love, she shatters his illusions, telling him of her many, well hidden faults. Don Quichotte is now in a forest, quickly approaching death. He tells Sancho that he is giving him the most beautiful island in the world as he promised during their travels together. Feverish, he sees his beloved before him one last time. His lance falls from his hand, and he dies, a tragic figure dressed in a rusty suit of armor.

■ ACTE PREMIER	■ ACT I
LE JOUR DE LA FERIA (La scène représente une place publique en Espagne.) (A droite, une hôtellerie.) (A gauche, la demeure de la Belle Dulcinée.) (Foule, grand mouvement, danses, beuveries.) (On danse.) (Acclamations de la foule.)	SPAIN: A FESTIVAL (A public square. On the right, an Inn. On the left, the house of the lovely Dulcinea.) (A gay and animated Crowd, singing, dancing and making merry.)
JUAN, RODRIGUEZ, GARCIAS, PEDRO:) (sous le balcon de Dulcinée) Belle, dont le charme est l'empire, Faites l'aumône d'un sourire Et d'un regard de vos grands yeux A nos pauvres coeurs amoureux; Dulcinée, enchantresse, Pour un instant Délaisse Le nouvel amant Que t'a choisi ta fantaisie, Et parais Devant tes sujets, Ô Dulcinée! ô souveraine! Gentille Reine! (On danse.)	PEDRO, GARCIAS, RODRIGUEZ AND JUAN: (beneath Dulcinea's balcony.) Lady, Queen of earth in your splendor, Smile upon us, of your mercy, Deign that one glance of your sweet eyes Will soothe and heal our love-stricken hearts; Dulcinea, lovely sorceress, Set aside For awhile This new lover of yours, This victim and slave of your fancy! And let your subjects Gaze on you, Oh, Dulcinea, Queen transcendent, Beautiful Empress! (They dance.)
LA FOULE: Vivat! Anda! pour notre Reine!	CROWD: Vivat! Anda! beautiful Queen!
DULCINÉE: (apparaissant au balcon et répondant à la foule amusée.) Quand la femme a vingt ans, la majesté suprême Ne doit pas avoir grands attraits! L'on possède un beau diadème, Mais après, mes amis, après? . . . On vit dans une apothéose, Nos jours sont de gloire entourés, Mais il doit manquer quelque chose . . . Ou quelqu'un . . . comme vous voudrez.	DULCINEA: (appearing on the balcony, to the crowd, amused.) When her years are twenty, woman pines not for glory, Nor for queenly joys of a throne! Though she wears a crown and a sceptre, Yet there must come a day— And then? What then? All is glitter and all is splendor, She reigns throned in glory supreme, But she frets for the lack of something— Or some one—take your choice!
TOUS: Vivat pour Dulcinée, Fantasque et fêtée!	ALL: Long live Dulcinea, Our fanciful Beauty!
DULCINÉE: (rieuse.) D'hommages, l'on vous environne Durant le jour; oui, mais, la nuit, Parce qu'on porte une couronne, Le temps divin d'amour s'enfuit. Et pour calmer le coeur morose Et les ennuis exaspérés, Il doit bien manquer quelque chose . . . Ou quelqu'un . . . comme vous voudrez.	DULCINEA: (merrily) When her years are a score This Queen may be honored and flattered, Morn till evening; yes, but in lonely night— Because she is caged in this splendor, Love's rare moments slip by. And to soothe her poor heart so heavy, And so weary in lassitude, She will thankfully turn to something— Or some one—you may take your choice!
TOUS: Vivat pour Dulcinée, Fantasque et fêtée! . . .	ALL: Long live Dulcinea, Our fanciful Beauty!
DULCINÉE: (Joyeuse.) Amis, à tous ici . . . Merci! (Elle disparait pendant les acclamations joyeuses de la foule qui se répand sur la place.)	DULCINEA: (gratefully.) Dear friends, to you, to all, My thanks! (She disappears, amid the acclamations of the crowd, which begins to open out.)

RODRIGUEZ: (légèrement.) Dulcinée est certes jolie,
Mais on doit l'aimer seulement
Comme on cueille une fleur, un matin de printemps,
Autrement, c'est folie!

JUAN: (avec un soupir attristé.)
Je l'adore pourtant,
Cette perverse enchanteresse.

RODRIGUEZ: (avec pitié.) Si tu l'aimes d'amour fervent . . .
Mon pauvre ami, que de tristesse
Tu te réserves!

JUAN: (attristé.) Ah!
(Très au loin, on entend des rires et un choeur éloigné:)
"Vive le Chevalier
Don Quichotte de la Manche!"
Etc.
((Voir plus loin les paroles.))

RODRIGUEZ: (rieur, ayant regardé au loin pour se rendre compte d'où venaient ces rumeurs joyeuses.) Pour te désennuyer, Regarde Don Quichotte et son gros écuyer.

JUAN: (avec un rire méprisant, sans même se retourner.) Ce fantoche grotesque,
Ce vieux fou pédantesque,
Qui déclare que Dulcinée
Est la "Dame de sa pensée," Tandis que celle-ci
Se rit de lui.

RODRIGUEZ: (avec fermeté.)
Tant pis! car il est brave et franc comme une lame.

JUAN: (moqueur.) Et beau!

RODRIGUEZ: (sincère.) De la beauté merveilleuse de l'âme.

JUAN: (méprisant.) Il n'est qu'extravagant,
Toqué, cocasse, inélégant.

RODRIGUEZ: Mais il secourt la veuve et les enfants sans mère.

JUAN: Apôtre halluciné!

RODRIGUEZ: Porté par la chimère,
Il parcourt plaines et vallons,
Escalade les pics, poursuit les chemins longs.

JUAN: (ricanant.) Ah! c'est un être exquis! . . .

RODRIGUEZ: (sérieux.) De très haute envergure
Que le bon Chevalier . . .

JUAN: (moqueur, achevant la phrase.) De la Longue Figure!
(Arrivée de Don Quichotte et de Sancho. Don Quichotte est monté sur Rossinante, il a la lance au poing. Sancho est sur son grison. Entrée comique. Les enfants les entourent en faisant la roue, en

RODRIGUEZ: (lightly.) Dulcinea is fair as a blossom,
But a man should love her no more
Than a flower that is plucked on a morning in spring;
To do more would be folly!

JUAN: (with a doleful sigh.) Yet I love and adore
This wayward and enchanting beauty.

RODRIGUEZ: (pityingly.) If your love is so desperate—
To what misery must you be fated,
Poor love-sick boy!

JUAN: (dejected.) Ah!
(Laughter and shouting heard in the distance.)
"Here's to Don Quixote," etc.

RODRIGUEZ: (laughing, having ascertained the cause of the merriment.) To cure your dumpish mood,
See yonder Don Quixote and his fat esquire.

JUAN: (with a scornful laugh.)
That fantastic old waxwork,
That pedantic old numskull,
Who proclaims the fair Dulcinea
As the "Lady of his thoughts!"
While she only mocks
And jeers at him.

RODRIGUEZ: (with emphasis.) It is ill!
For he is brave, and chivalrous and noble—

JUAN: (with a laugh.) And handsome!—

RODRIGUEZ: (with sincerity.)
Within his soul shines a transcendent beauty.

JUAN: (sneering.) Come, he's a shatter-pate,
A dolt, a loon, a clumsy fool.

RODRIGUEZ: He rescues lonely widow and defenceless orphan.

JUAN: A mad, blundering clown!

RODRIGUEZ: Inspired by some fine frenzy,
He roams and scours the vale and plain,
Scaling mountain and peak, careening far and wide.

JUAN: (laughing.) A truly precious fool!

RODRIGUEZ: Full of high aspiration
Is this large-hearted Knight—

JUAN: (sarcastically finishing the sentence.) Of the Rueful Countenance!
(Entrance of Don Quixote, mounted on Rosinante, lance in rest. Sancho rides his ass, Dapple: Children precede them, turning cart-wheels, the crowd welcome dansant une ronde. La foule s'amuse en les acclamant. Les bonnets sautent en l'air. Don Quichotte est revêtu de sa vieille armure, casqué de son armet. Clinquaille moyen âge.)

LA FOULE: (entourant Don Quichotte impassible et Sancho radieux.) Vive le Chevalier
Don Quichotte de la Manche!
Vive son écuyer,
Le fidèle et bon Sanche!
Vivat pour Rossinante . . . et l'âne . . . . et l'écuyer!
Allégresse!
Allégresse!

DON QUICHOTTE: (sur son cheval, brandissant sa lance, ravi, à Sancho.) C'est merveille de voir comme l'on me connaît!
(Don Quichotte descend de cheval. Sancho de son âne. Les deux montures sont remises à un valet.)

SANCHO: (la bouche s'épatant d'un énorme rire.) Même moi, gros benêt, Je prends ma large part des vivats qu'on adresse.
(Ils serrent joyeusement les mains tendues.)
Des pauvres, en loques, viennent, tendant leurs chapeaux rapiécés.)

DON QUICHOTTE: (à Sancho.)
Sancho, vide ta poche, et réjouis ces gueux,
Car il faut qu'aujourd'hui nous soyons tous heureux!
(Brandissant sa lance, les yeux au ciel.)
Vivent les Séraphins, les Archanges, les Trônes!

SANCHO: (piteux.) Notre pauvre souper qui se fond en aumônes.
(Il distribue l'argent à toute la canaille qui est accourue.)

DON QUICHOTTE: Donne à profusion, mon fils, sois généreux
Et tâche, comme moi, d'être jeune . . . amoureux.
(Avec enthousiasme—entouré par la foule—jeune, ardent.)
Ah! c'est beau la jeunesse, et bon quoi qu'on en dise!
Cette gaîte m'emparadise!
Je voudrais que la joie embaumât les chemins,
La bonté, le coeur des humains,
Qu'un éternel soleil illuminât les plaines,
Que les bois éventés par de fraîches haleines
N'eussent que des parfums et des fruits savoureux,
Des ruisseaux chantant clair et que tout fût heureux!
(Un défilé passe devant Don Quichotte. On rechante: "Vive Don Quichotte de la Manche." On lui jette des brassées de fleurs. Hur- them boisterously, throwing hats and caps in the air, etc. Don Quixote wears his old-fashioned armour and morion. Don Quixote sits impassive and Sancho beams with delight as the crowd surround them.)

CROWD: (enthusiastically.) Long live the worthy Knight,
Don Quixote de la Mancha!
Here's to the good and faithful Sancho!
And Rosinante too–the ass—the portly squire!
All acclaim them!

DON QUIXOTE: (mounted, poising his lance, says delightedly to Sancho.) It is a marvel to note how all the world knows me!
(Don Quixote and Sancho dismount; a servant takes charge of the two animals.)

SANCHO: (with a broad grin and a fat laugh.) Even I, portly fool,
I share in full and goodly measure this grand welcome.
(They gleefully shake the hands stretched out to them; beggars, ragged, maimed, and halt, hold out their tattered hats for alms.)

DON QUIXOTE: (to Sancho.) Sancho, turn out your wallet, and let these beggars feast,
For on this day I wish that every heart is glad!
(Raising his lance and gazing upward.)
Hail, angels and saints, Archangels, heavens!

SANCHO: (woefully.) No soup for us tonight, we must go empty.

DON QUIXOTE: (while Sancho distributes money to the Riff-Raff.) Give now, freely, freely!
And stint them not, my son!
Take example from me, cling to youth—live for love!
(With enthusiasm, surrounded by a young and eager crowd.)
Ah! Good and sweet is youth, though there are fools that flout it!
This laughter fills me with rejoicing!
Come, gladness, and make our pathways sweet with perfume,
Oh, kindness, cleanse the heart of man,
Come, endless sunshine, and illumine plain and meadow!
Oh, woods, lightly sway in the gentlest of zephyrs,
Streamlets, sing aloud; all the world, shout for joy!
(Loud applause, Don Quixote is pelted with flowers; a regular pro- rabs frénétiques. La place se vide peu à peu. Le crépuscle commence.)

DON QUICHOTTE: (envoie un long baiser à la fenêtre de Dulcinée et montrant le balcon, il chante:) "O Dulcinée!
"Voici l'heure fortunée! . . . "

SANCHO: (l'interrompant.) Vous allez ameuter alcade, régidor,
(Riant.)
Peut-être réveiller le Cid Campéador! . . .
Maître, je serais fier de voir la noble dame,
Mais c'est plus fort que moi, mon gosier me réclame.
Cette rouge lueur qui me clignote au loin:
C'est l'auberge où j'aurai grand soin
De me soûler, non d'allégresse,
Mais de la vraie et bonne ivresse!

DON QUICHOTTE: (avec froideur.) Laisse-moi.

SANCHO: (goguenard.) Seigneur! Sous ce balcon, goûtez votre bonheur, (Lui retirant son bonnet.)
Je suis votre assoiffé, mais humble serviteur.
(Sancho s'en va, tout en chantant un vieux refrain:)
"Ah! comme on vous héberge
Dans cette auberge! . . . "
(La nuit très bleue, très claire, tombera tout doucement. Sous un rayon de lune, Don Quichotte est resté absorbé dans sa contemplation, devant le balcon de Dulcinée; il esquisse une ritournelle sur sa mandoline. Sancho, au son de la mandoline est revenu sur ses pas et, désignant de loin Don Quichotte, il dit avec grandiloquence:)
Cet homme a fait le voeu, prononcé le serment
D'être jusqu'à la fin, étonnant, stupéfiant . . .
(Puis il s'éloigne rapidement)

DON QUICHOTTE: (seul, très amoureusement.) Quand apparaissent les étoiles
Et quand la nuit du fond des cieux
Couvre la terre de ses voiles . . .
Je fais ma prière à tes yeux!
Dans la fleur . . .
(Il est interrompu par Don Juan.)

JUAN: (railleur, lui coupant la parole.) Qu'est cela, mon beau mandoliniste?

DON QUICHOTTE: (ingénument.) Une chanson d'amour.

JUAN: Est-elle gaie ou triste?

cession passes before him, with shouts of: "Long live Don Quixote!" The stage now gradually empties: Twilight begins to fall.)

DON QUIXOTE: (throws a long kiss to Dulcinea's window.) Oh, Dulcinea!
The hour of joy!

SANCHO: Would you provoke to wrath alcaid or regidor,
(With a laugh.)
Perchance awake the Cid, mighty Campeador?
Sir Knight, right proud were I to see this noble lady.
But stronger than my will, my stomach grows impatient—
Yonder cheery red glow winks at me from afar.
It is the hostel, there shall I regale
My pressing needs, not with romancing.
But good and downright heavy drinking!

DON QUIXOTE: (curtly.) Be gone!

SANCHO: (bantering.) My lord,
Beneath that balcony enjoy your sweets.
(Taking off his cap)
Your thirsty liegeman, sir, but humble still withal.
(Sancho goes out, singing an old burden.)
Ah! Good food and good housing,
Mirth and carousing!
(Night falls gently, blue and serene. Don Quixote, absorbed in contemplation before Dulcinea's balcony, breaks the silence with a ritournelle on his mandoline. Hearing the mandoline, Sancho comes back, and, pointing to Don Quixote, says pompously:)
That man has vowed and sworn
To amaze and stupefy mankind—
(He goes out hurriedly.)

DON QUIXOTE: (alone, passionately.) When the stars in countless number,
When the night's veil beclouds the skies,
When the earth falls to rest and slumber—
Here I breathe my prayer to your eyes!
To your tender lips—
(He is interrupted by Juan.)

JUAN: (breaking in with a polite sneer.) What may that be, gallant mandoline-player?

DON QUIXOTE: (simply.) It is a song of love.

JUAN: A song of joy or sadness?

DON QUICHOTTE: (avec enthousiasme.) Elle peut être l'une et l'autre également,
Car c'est une chanson d'amant;
Pour ma Dame d'Amour: la Belle Dulcinée!

JUAN: (insolent.) Vieux fou, je vous défends . . .

DON QUICHOTTE: (bondissant sous l'insulte.) Avez-vous une épée?

JUAN: (dégaînant.) A me servir, monsieur, elle est trop occupée
Pour me quitter jamais.

DON QUICHOTTE: (dégaînant à son tour.) Que la chanson du fer
Remplace le refrain qui montait pur et clair
Vers vous, étoiles innocentes! . . .
(Ils commencent à ferrailler. Soudain Don Quichotte se frappe le front, remet son épée au fourreau.)
Oh! pardon, cher monsieur, des rimes sont absentes
Au cantique d'amour que j'allais réciter;
Avant de vous tuer, je tiens à les chanter.
(Dulcinée, à son balcon, à moitié cachée, répète les paroles de l'inconnu qui chante, sans être vue ni de lui ni de Juan. Don Quichotte continue perdu dans son rêve.)
Et c'est dans la fleur de tes lèvres
Qui ne sauraient jamais mentir
Qu'Amour tout palpitant de fièvres
S'est fait un nid pour s'y blottir.
(Il termine sa ritournelle, puis il envoie un baiser vers la fenêtre de Dulcinée qui vient de quitter son balcon. Il rejette sa mandoline derrière son dos et tire son épée. Les deux adversaires se remettent en garde. Intervention de Dulcinée qui sépare les épées d'un coup d'éventail, et passe entre les combattants.)

DULCINÉE: (gaie à Don Quichotte en s'éventant.) Tiens! c'est vous qui lanciez des vers à ma fenêtre?

DON QUICHOTTE: (simple et ravi.) C'est moi!

DULCINÉE: (légèrement.) Les strophes sont d'un maître.
(Désignant la mandoline.)
Et vous jouez, mon cher, de ce noble instrument
Comme de votre épée, avec un air charmant.

JUAN: (jaloux.) Madame!

DULCINÉE: (à part, à Juan en lui souriant.) Riez donc, grand jaloux que vous êtes! . . .
(Revenant vers Don Quichotte ravi.)
J'aime paladins et poètes,
L'amour est avec eux d'une distinc-

DON QUIXOTE: (with enthusiasm.) It is a song sad and joyful too, or one, or both.
For is it not a lover's song
For my Lady of Love, the Princess Dulcinea?

JUAN: (insolently.) Old fool, I forbid—

DON QUIXOTE: (starting at the insult.) Do you carry a weapon?

JUAN: (drawing.) No sword of mine, good sir, has the time to be idle,
And here it serves my need.

DON QUIXOTE: (also drawing.) The music of our swords
Shall now supplant that song which arose pure and clear
To seek the stars lofty and stainless!
(They cross swords. Suddenly Don Quixote claps his hand to his forehead and sheathes his sword.)
Your pardon, good sir, a rhyme or two is wanting
To the love-serenade I had set out to sing.
I would finish my task before I settle with you.
(Dulcinea, half-hidden, on the balcony, repeats the words of the unknown singer, unobserved by Juan and Don Quixote; Don Quixote continues his rhapsody.)
And to your lips so tender
Sweet as a flower, too pure to lie,
Love faint and fluttering—seeking a nest, weary will hie—
Yield him to them, in eager surrender!
(As he finishes, Dulcinea comes down from the balcony. He tosses his mandoline behind his back, and draws. The combatants cross swords again. Dulcinea intervenes, knocks up the weapons with her fan, and separates the combatants.)

DULCINEA: (to Don Quixote, fanning herself.) Ah! it was you I heard singing just under my window!

DON QUIXOTE: (artlessly, in rapture.) It was I.

DULCINEA: (lightly.) You are truly a poet.
(Pointing to the mandoline.)
It would seem you wield this noble weapon, too.
No less than your good sword, with charming skill and grace.

JUAN: (jealous.) My lady!

DULCINEA: (aside to Juan, smiling at him.) Laugh with me, It is ill to be jealous!—
(Turning again to the delighted Don Quixote.)
None save the paladin and poet
Can write or sing of love

tion
Parfaite et qui contraste avec la passion
Dont un autre amant nous opprime.
(Don Quichotte ferme les yeux; bas à Juan qui s'avancait jaloux, furieux.) Délicieusement
d'ailleurs . . . et c'est un crime
Que je te pardonne.
(Elle lui envoie un baiser du bout de son éventail.)

JUAN: (fiévreusement.)
Ah! . . .

DULCINÉE: (l'arrêtant dans son élan d'amour.) Mais allez me chercher
Ma mantille.

JUAN: (furieux, montrant Don Quichotte toujours extasié.) Mais . . .

DULCINÉE: (hautine, presque méchante.) Quoi?
(Puis souriante à Juan derrière son éventail, en haussant les épaules.) Laissez-moi m'amuser!
(Juan sort, malheureux de la coquetterie de la belle.)

DON QUICHOTTE: (rouvrant les yeux, regardant avec stupeur partir Juan. Surpris, à Dulcinée.) Comment!
Vous m'empêchez
De couper la gorge à mon adversaire?

DULCINÉE: (paraissant trembler.) Que dites-vous?
Qu'alliez-vous faire?

DON QUICHOTTE:
(majestueux.) Mais l'occire à l'instant.

DULCINÉE: (gentiment.) Vous êtes, monseigneur, plus que compromettant.
Pour un peu de musique, un brin de poésie,
Vous auriez donc la fantaisie
De répandre du sang!
Que non! . . .
Je veux modérer votre ardeur.
(Le frôlant au passage.)

DON QUICHOTTE: (tremble de joie, mais cherche à paraître implacable.) Le nom
De cet homme?

DULCINÉE: (ayant l'air de supplier.) Qu'importe!
Il est de mon cortège.
Pitié, mon chevalier!
Ma bonté le protège,
Il est de mes amis, attachés à mes pas.

DON QUICHOTTE: (tranquille.)
Vous n'avez aujourd'hui qu'ajourné son trépas!

With your true consummate perfection,
You have no jealous fancy and caprice
That fret me in one other lover—
(Aside to the jealous Juan, while Don Quixote closes his eyes.)
Charming and sweet in all but this—
Yet is is a fault I cannot pardon.
(Throws him a kiss on the tip of her fan.)

JUAN: (passionately.) Ah!—

DULCINEA: (cutting short his outburst.) Go within now and bring me
My mantilla.

JUAN: (discontentedly pointing to Don Quixote still ecstatic.)
But—

DULCINEA: (haughty and mischievous.) But?— (Then smiling at Juan behind her fan, with a shrug.)
Do not grudge me my jest!
(Juan goes out, ill-pleased with Dulcinea's coquettish humor. Don Quixote opening his eyes, is amazed to see Juan go; he says to Dulcinea, in surprise)

DON QUIXOTE: How now?
Must I be thwarted
In cutting down my rival?

DULCINEA: (feigning fright.)
What do you mean?
What was your purpose?

DON QUIXOTE: (grandly.) Why, to strike him dead.

DULCINEA: (prettily.) Most brave and worthy knight is your mood too fiery!
For one short strain of music—
One simple little poem—
Would you indulge a mad fantastic whim
For the shedding of blood?—
No, no!
(Following up her advantage.)
I would I could make you relent.

DON QUIXOTE: (trembling with joy, but trying to appear implacable.) The name of this fellow!
His name!

DULCINEA: It matters not!
(Pleading.)
It is but a poor admirer—
Be kind, my gentle knight!
He is a friend devout, and one who serves me well—

DON QUIXOTE: (quietly.) He is spared for now, but before long he shall die!
(Dulcinea makes a show of emotion, and puts a hand to his lips with a sweet smile.)

DULCINÉE: (paraissant troublée, lui mettant la main sur la bouche et lui faisant un doux sourire.)
Vous me faites pleurer . . .
Puis-je vous croire encore? . . .

DON QUICHOTTE: (balbutie, étranglé d'émotion.)
Moi . . . mais . . . je vous adore!
(Avec force, largement.)
Pour vous choyer et vous servir,
Je vous offre un château sur le Guadalquivir.
Les jours y passeront duvetés de tendresse,
Parfumés d'idéal et fleuris de caresses!

DULCINÉE: (avec élan.)
Alors . . . vous devriez,
O mon héros superbe, à l'âme valeureuse,
Pour me voir très heureuse,
Tenter de ravoir le collier
Qu'hier, sur ma poudreuse,
Le bandit Ténébrun osa me dérober . . .

DON QUICHOTTE: (fièrement.)
Devrais-je succomber,
Demain, je partirai l'âme claire et joyeuse,
Heureux de vous donner cette preuve d'amour.
(Dulcinée reprend les paroles de Don Quichotte.)

DULCINÉE: (follement coquette et prometteuse.) Si vous êtes vainqueur! . . .
Vous verrez au retour! . . .
(Don Quichotte pose la main sur son coeur et met un genou en terre devant Dulcinée dont il baise la main. On entend les amoureux de Dulcinée conduits par Juan qui rapporte la mantille de la Belle. A Don Quichotte.)
Mais voici mes amis . . .
Don Quichotte est légèrement interloqué en voyant Dulcinée prendre le bras de Juan.)

DULCINÉE: (à Don Quichotte, jouant la sévérite. Souvenez-vous . . . Messire!)

DON QUICHOTTE: (avec un sentiment d'étonnement.) Partir . . . avec celui? . . .

DULCINÉE: (rieuse et faisant la grosse voix.) Que vous vouliez occire!
(Lui rappelant sa promesse.)
Vous aviez pardonné . . .

DON QUICHOTTE: (avec un geste de condescendance, laisse tomber un "oui" plein d'indulgence.)
Oui.

DULCINÉE: (follement prometteuse à Don Quichotte radieux.)
Au retour . . . grand ami! . . .
(Dulcinée va rejoindre ses amis

DULCINEA: I weep for your words—
Can I believe and trust you?—

DON QUIXOTE: (stammering, choking with emotion.) Me?—
But—
I do adore you!
(With great vigour and warmth.)
For your behest I'd give my all,
I offer you my keep on broad Guadalquivir,
There let us while the hours, rapt in dalliance enchanting,
In a dream of delight, and a feast of caresses!—

DULCINEA: (quickly.) Well then—
Now prove your boast,
My transcendental hero—My lion-hearted champion,
Would you make me truly happy—
Go forth then and win back for me my necklace—
That yester eve the brigand chief Tenebrun
Did dare to steal from me.

DON QUIXOTE: (proudly.)
Though death be my reward,
Tomorrow I go forth—
Well pleased to show you thus one small token of love.
(Dulcinea catches up his words.)

DULCINEA: And if you return in triumph,
You shall see when we meet!
(Don Quixote, with his hand on his heart, has knelt and is kissing Dulcinea's hand when the voices of the four admirers are heard, led by Juan with the mantilla. To Don Quixote.)
My friends are coming near!
(Don Quixote is somewhat disconcerted at seeing Dulcinea take Juan's arm.)

DULCINEA: (to Don Quixote, assuming severity.) Do not forget—
Your honor!

DON QUIXOTE: (in astonishment.) Would you—leave me—for him?

DULCINEA: (laughing, with mock solemnity.) Whom you have doomed to slaughter!
(Reminding Don Quixote of his promise.))
You have pardoned his fault—

DON QUIXOTE: (with a fine gesture of condescension, utters a magnanimous "Yes.") Yes.

DULCINEA: (to the radiant Don Quixote, making mischievous promises.) Until we meet—noble friend!

rieurs après avoir envoyé un baiser à Don Quichotte tremblant de bonheur.)

JUAN: (avec la bande joyeuse, ayant Dulcinée au bras.) Son amour vous amuse?

DULCINÉE: (s'amusant.) Il est drôle!
Je suis sa désse! . . .

JUAN: (s'esclaffant.) Sa muse! . . .
(Éclats de rire.)

DON QUICHOTTE: (montant sa garde, seul, grave, immobile, fier, la lance au poing, dans le silence.) Elle m'aime, c'est clair, et va me revenir
Bientôt avec des yeux mouillés de repentir.
Ah! son rire d'enfant, sa démarche onduleuse,
Son oeil tendre, câlin et sa voix enjôleuse!
Je ne bougerai pas, quoi qu'il puisse advenir:
Ma parole est sacrée, et je veux la tenir.
(Au loin, on entend la voix rieuse de Dulcinée. Tout est calme dans la ville.)

■ ACTE DEUXIÈME

Un lever d'aurore très rose dans la campagne. Les buées enveloppent encore le fond du théâtre. Les moulins sont invisibles dans le brouillard.)
(Don Quichotte entre sur Rossinante, sa lance à l'arcon; il joue de sa mandoline, et les yeux au ciel "cherche des rimes" pour des couplets, en l'honneur de Dulcinée.)
(Sancho suant, soufflant, conduit à la fois par bride Rossinante et le grison.)

DON QUICHOTTE: (cherchant, avec difficulté, ses rimes.) C'est vers ton amour Que je soupire . . . nuit et jour,
Ma Dulcinée,
Ah! ah!
Ma Dulcinée
Ah! ah!
Dame de ma pensée!
Ah! ah!
De toi mon âme est oppressée,
(Il semble heureux d'avoir trouvé sa rime au mot: pensée.
Ma Dulcinée,
Ah! ah! ah!
Mais j'ai vu ton émoi,
Ah! ah!
Je sais que tu penses à moi,
Ah! ah!
Ma Dulcinée,
Ah! ah!
Je crois en toi!
Ah! ah!
(Les yeux au ciel.)
Ah! ah!

(Dulcinea rejoins her laughing friends after throwing a kiss to the enraptured Don Quixote.)

JUAN: (to Dulcinea, taking her arm.) Does his passion divert you?

He is crazy!—
And he calls me his goddess!

JUAN: (convulsed.) His muse!
(Peals of laughter.)

DON QUIXOTE: (dignified, motionless and proud, lance in hand, alone in the silence.) Ah, she loves me, she will return to me
Weeping and penitent, craving grace.
Ah, she laughed as a child, and she moved as a goddess,
Bewitching me, while her voice coaxed and cajoled me!
I will not yield, though it cost me my life,
My word is sacred, I will stand by my pledge.
(In the distance Dulcinea is heard laughing. All is silent in the town.)

■ ACT II

Crimson dawn in the country. A haze still obscures the horizon. The windmills are blotted out by the mists.)
(Don Quixote enters on Rosinante, lance in sling; he is playing his mandoline and, with upturned gaze, searches for rhymes to couplets composed to Dulcinea. Sancho, panting and perspiring, leads Rosinante and Dapple.)

DON QUIXOTE: (racking his brain for rhymes.) To love you always—
My heart is yearning night and day!
Dulcinea!
Ah! ah!
Queen of beauty!
I worship you in duty!
Ah! ah!
By you my spirit is oppressed—
(Delighted at finding a rhyme to "oppressed.")
Lady blessed!
Ah! ah! ah!
I did see your trembling—
Ah! ah!
I know that you think of me!
Ah! ah!
Sweet Dulcinea!
Ah! ah!
I trust in you!
Ah! ah!
(In rapture.)
Ah! ah!
(Don Quixote dismounts, still absorbed in his poem. Sancho wipes his forehead and leads the animals to a thicket.)

(Don Quichotte continue son improvisation tout en descendant de cheval. Sancho s'essuie le front et va conduire les bêtes dans un fourré.)

SANCHO: (revenant, mécontent, exaspéré, interrompant les "Ah! ah!" de Don Quichotte.) Croyez-moi, Chevalier, nous nous sommes trompés,
Les ennemis qu'hier vous avez dissipés
En chargeant à grands cris de: "Vive Dulcinée Et mort aux mécréants!"
(Riant.)
C'était tout simplement la troupe combinée
De petits cochons noirs et de gros moutons blancs!

DON QUICHOTTE: (très calme, tout en tirant de sa poche de quoi écrire, commence à noter une chanson d'amour.) Tes paroles me font sourire . . .
(Don Quichotte est de suite dans le feu de sa composition.)

SANCHO: (lève les bras au ciel.) Enfin, il est heureux . . . respectons son délire.
(Mais il pousse un cri, se tâtant l'échine.)
Pour peu qu'on marche encor, à la fin de l'été
(Regardant Don Quichotte absorbé dans son travail et battant la mesure.)
Je lui rendrai des points pour la gracilité;
Tout se volatilise en moi, si cela dure . . .
(Geignant et se contemplant avec douleur.)
J'ai déjà resserré trois crans à ma ceinture!

DON QUICHOTTE: (ravi, composant son air.) Tra la la la la la!
Tra la la la!
(Sancho, subitement fou en l'entendant chanter, se frappe la tête avec son pain, saute en l'air, crie, montre les poings au ciel. Don Quichotte surpris le regarde avec stupeur.)
Deviens-tu fou, Sancho!

SANCHO: (éclatant.) Oui!
Tout de même . . . être ici!
(Il rage.)
Parce que Doña Dulcinée
Usant de son pouvoir . . .
(A part, en croquant rageusement dans son pain.)
La coquine damnée!
(Haut.)
Vous a dit un beau soir:
(Imitant une voix de femme.)
Qu'il existait dans la Sierra voisine
Un bandit qui pille, assassine . . .
Mais . . . qui lui déroba tel bijou de valeur.
(Avec sa voix naturelle, en colère.)

SANCHO: (comes back, annoyed to exasperation; he interrupts Don Quixote's apostrophes.)
Please your grace, good sir Knight, but I think we were fooled.
The foes that yesterday you scattered and routed,
And charged with shouts and cries of: "Long live Dulcinea!"
And "Death to rogues and thieves!"
(Laughing.)
Were no foes indeed, but simple harmless cattle,
A drove of small black pigs mixed with big white sheep!

DON QUIXOTE: (is quite calm; bringing tablets from his pocket, he begins jotting down a love-song.) Your suspicions make me smile—
(Don Quixote settles down to the throes of composition.)

SANCHO: (throwing up his arms.) At last—he's happy now—all respect to his frenzy.
(Gives a cry, feeling his backbone.)
It wants but little more, and before summer is over (Looking at Don Quixote, who is beating time, absorbed in his work.)
My portly shape will find itself more lean than his.
I shall evaporate in air—if this continues—
(Moaning and surveying his figure in distress.)
For I have tightened up three holes in my poor girdle!

DON QUIXOTE: (absorbed in composition,) La, la la la!
Tra, la, la, la!
(Sancho, suddenly maddened by the singing, strikes his forehead with his bread, gives a wild leap into the air, and shakes his fists.)
DON QUIXOTE: (looks at him, surprised and amazed.) Are you possessed, good Sancho?

SANCHO: (exploding.) Yes!
I am mad to be here!
(Raging.)
Because the Doña Dulcinea
Has ill-used her power—
(Aside, munching savagely.)
Curse that impudent sauce-box!—
(Aloud.)
And told you, that night,
(Mimicking a woman's voice.)
That in the neighbouring Sierra
Lived a bandit chief, a thieving cutthroat—
That he had plundered her of a jewel of worth.
(In his natural voice, angrily.)
For this we sally forth, hard on the heels of the thief!

Voilà que nous courons sus au hardi voleur!
Cette dame se rit de nous deux, mon bon maître.

DON QUICHOTTE: (avec sérénité.) Pour en parler ainsi, c'est ne pas la connaître, C'est ignorer son coeur.

SANCHO: (haussant les épaules en levant les bras au ciel.) Au contraire, seigneur!

DON QUICHOTTE: (calme, doux, souriant.) Mon Sancho, tu m'amuses.

SANCHO: (dans une explosion de colère et d'indignation.) Les femmes, chevalier, c'est tout mensonge et ruses!

DON QUICHOTTE: (bondissant, indigné.) Quoi?

SANCHO: (cette fois, têtu comme une mule en faisant signe qu'll ne démordra pas de son idée.) Oui.
(Puis se frottant les mains et clignant de l'oeil.)
Ce qui m'enchante en notre beau métier
C'est que j'ai pu laisser au logis ma moitié!
Ca me console, je le jure,
Quand je sens les nodosités
(Se passant les mains sur les reins.)
De mon asinesque monture
M'entrer dans les . . . rotondités
Dont m'a doté Dame Nature.
Comment peut-on penser du bien
(Avec une indignation comique, s'adressant à Don Quichotte incrédule, qui sourit avec pitié.)
De ces coquines, ces pendardes,
Ces menteuses, ces bavardes,
Dont la meilleure ne vaut rien?
Regardez cette dévote
(Sancho jouant la scène.)
Qui passe en baissant les yeux,
Et par les rues trotte, trotte,
Edifiant jeunes et vieux.
Tout à coup sous sa mantille
Pourquoi ce regard qui brille?
C'est qu'elle a vu s'entr'ouvrir
Une porte dérobée . . .
Par où va s'évanouir
La coquine embéguinée!
(Se tordant de rire.)
Et le mari se morfond,
Trouvant bien longue la messe,
Tout en se grattant le front
Qui le picotte sans cesse . . .
(Sentencieusement.)
La femme est un démon vicieux et malin
Créé pour le malheur du sexe masculin!
(S'enrageant.)
Qu'elles viennent d'Afrique,
D'Asie ou d'Amérique,
Qu'elles aient le nez fin,
Camus, aquilin,
Qu'elles soient brunes, rousses, blondes,
Plates, dodues, minces our rondes,
Nous sommes les souris de ces êtres félins,
(Avec énergie.)
L'homme est une victime, et les mairs . . . des Saints!
(Les brumes s'élèveront doucement; peu à peu les moulins apparaîtront.)

DON QUICHOTTE: (désignant le fond.) Homme de peu, regarde! . . .

SANCHO: (sursautant, regardant autour de lui.) Pourquoi?

DON QUICHOTTE: (désignant le premier moulin.) Sancho! . . .
En garde!
Vois là-bas se dresser dans le fond opalin
Ce terrible géant . . .

SANCHO: (aburi.) Maître, c'est un moulin!
(D'autres moulins apparaissent vaguement dans le fond.)

DON QUICHOTTE: (transporté d'une noble impatience.) Rustre, c'est les géants qui dans leur arrogance Tentent de m'arrêter.
Folle et leur insolence,
Je vais les châtier!

SANCHO: (avec pitié.) O fatale démence!
Le pauvre recommence!
(Il court chercher Rossinante qu'il ramène avec effarement.)

DON QUICHOTTE: (tirant son épée et lancant le défi au premier moulin.) Géant, monstrueux cavalier,
Si votre coeur n'est pas cuirassé de vaillance,
Faites-nous place, ou bien à la dague, à la lance,
Je vous porte un défi, moi le Haut-Chevalier!
(Les moulins se mettent à tourner. On entend leur tic-tac, Don Quichotte brandit son épée.)
Von grands gestes ne font qu'exalter mon courage!
Arrière! ou bien à l'instant
Je m'ouvre un large passage
Dans votre chair et votre sang!

SANCHO: (navré.) Mon Dieu! quelle folie!

DON QUICHOTTE: (s'élance sur Rossinante, l'enfourche, saisit ensuite sa lance, puis d'une voix tonnante.) Ecuyer, avec moi, dis que je les défie!

DON QUICHOTTE: (et Sancho, qui, tremblant de peur sous les regards furibonds de son maître, crie aussi fort qu'll peut.) Géant,

---

But my lady mocks us both, honored master.

DON QUIXOTE: (unruffled.) To rail upon her betrays your own folly—
You can not know her heart.

SANCHO: (with a shrug and a wave of his arms.) On the contrary, my lord!

DON QUIXOTE: (with a quiet smile.) No, good Sancho, you amuse me.

SANCHO: (exploding with anger and indignation.) A woman, honored Knight, is all deceit and lying!

DON QUIXOTE: (starting indignantly.) What?

SANCHO: (now obstinate as a mule and sticking to his point.) Yes!
(Then with a wink, rubbing his hands.)
It is my one joy in this mad pilgrimage
That I contrive to leave behind me—my wife!
It doth consoles me in discomfort,
When all those nodulated humps
(Rubbing his back.)
On Dapple's asinine old backbone
Stick into those rotundities
With which Dame Nature has endowed me.
What good can a man expect to find
(With comic indignation, to the smiling and incredulous Don Quixote.)
In saucy minxes, pert and brazen,
Deceitful hussies, shameless baggages,
The very best is not worth one straw!
See, here comes a woman saintly,
(Acting as he speaks.)
She goes by with downcast eyes,
Along the street moves tripping, tripping,
A model wife for all to see.
But behind her drawn mantilla—
Why this sudden glance that sparkles?
She has seen a secret gate
At a sign half open slyly—
Through the doorway disappears
This little jade infatuated!
(Squirming with laughter.)
Meantime her lord cools his heels,
He finds the Mass long and tedious,
Scratching his unhappy head
He frets and chafes unceasingly—
(Sententiously.)
A woman is a fiend and a plague and pestilence
Created for the ruin of us luckless men.
(Flying into a passion.)
Be she African, or Asian or American,
Be her nose long or short, a snub or a pug,
Or be she flaxen, dark or carroty,
Weedy, or fleshy, dumpy, bouncing,
The man is but a mouse to play with,
And the woman a cat.
(Beside himself.)
We men are helpless victims, and married men are Saints!
(The haze begins to lift, the windmills gradually become visible.)

DON QUIXOTE: (pointing to the horizon.) Craven of heart! Look yonder!

SANCHO: (startled, looking around him.) What is it?

DON QUIXOTE: (pointing to the first windmill.) Now, Sancho!
On guard!
Look—down there—a gaunt shape!
In the blue of the haze,
That huge monster's a giant—

SANCHO: (amazed.) Master, that is a windmill!
(Other windmills appear, dimly outlined.)

DON QUIXOTE: (magnificently impatient.) Blockhead, those forms are giants, that, haughty, proud and boastful, Dare to hinder me,
Dare to affront my knighthood;
I mean to punish them!

SANCHO: (pityingly.) A curse on this madness!
Once more the craze has got him—
(Runs to fetch Rosinante, bringing him back in bewilderment.)

DON QUIXOTE: (with drawn sword, hurling defiance at the first windmill.) Avaunt, monster foe, grisly knight!
Unless your heart is armed with triple brass of courage,
Stand aside now,
If not, in the combat, at the spearpoint,
Here I fling my gage, I, the Knight of Knights!
(The windmills begin to revolve: the whirring of the sails becomes audible; Don Quixote waves his sword.)
Your wild gestures serve to add fire to my courage,
Stand back! stand back! if not, in a trice,
Through your gross carcass steeped in blood
I'll carve and cleave me a pathway!

SANCHO: (aghast.) Good Lord!
This madness!

DON QUIXOTE: (leaps on to Rosinante's back, seizes his lance, then cries in a voice of thunder:) Now repeat, after me, Say I bid them all defiance!

DON QUIXOTE AND SANCHO: (who, cowed by his master, shouts at the top of his voice.) Avaunt! etc.

monstrueux cavalier,
Si votre coeur n'est pas cuirassé de vaillance,
Faites-moi place, ou bien à la dague, à la lance,
Je vous porte un défi, moi le Haut-Chevalier!

SANCHO: Faites-lui place, ou bien à la dague, à la lance,
Il vous port un défi, lui le Haut-Chevalier!
(Puis Don Quichotte bien couvert de son écu, la lance en arrêt, frappe furieusement les flancs de Rossinante et charge contre les moulins à vent aux cris répétés de: "Dulcinée! Dulcinée! pour toi, ma Dame de Beauté!" Tandis que le pauvre Sancho, à genoux, se lamente en criant: "Quel malheur! Au secours! Au secours! Mon bon maître! Hélas! Hélas! Jésus, Marie, venez le délivrer!" Le meunier, ahuri, paraît à la fenêtre du moulin. Le rideau se ferme très vite au moment où Don Quichotte fonce sur le moulin.)
(Le rideau se rouvrira et l'on apercevra Don Quichotte, accroché, par le fond de son haut de chausses, voltigeant par les airs, enlevé par une aile du moulin. On l'entendra toujours crier désespérément: "Dulcinée! Dulcinée pour toi, ma Dame de Beauté! . . . " Sancho poussera des cris en essayant de l'arrêter au vol. Soleil levant. Ciel incendié.)

■ ACTE TROISIÈME

DANS LA SIERRA)
(Le crépuscle rouge, magnifique. Fourrés à droite et à gauche. Profils vagues de montagnes.)

DON QUICHOTTE: (contemplé par Sancho, tenant par la bride Rossinante et le grison, est à quatre pattes; il regarde attentivement les traces du chemin. Il s'écrie radieux:) C'est ici le chemin que prennent les bandits Quand ils rentrent en leur taudis.
(Se relevant.)
Débâte le grison, desselle Rossinante,
(Les caressant.)
Peut-être fatigués par notre course ardente!
(Don Quichotte embrasse le museau de son cheval.)

(Don Quixote, crouching behind his shield, lance in rest, gives Rosinante a furious cut across his lean flanks, and charges the Windmills, with repeated cries of "Dulcinea! Dulcinea! This for thee, my Lady of Beauty!" Meanwhile Sancho, on his knees, groans and shouts: "Oh, oh! Help, help! My dear Master! Oh, oh! The Lord deliver him!" The bewildered miller appears at the windmill casement, and the curtain descends rapidly just as Don Quixote charges the sails.)
(When the curtain is raised again, Don Quixote is seen whirling round, entangled in the sails of the Windmill; he still cries desperately: "Dulcinea! Dulcinea! This for thee, my Lady of Beauty!" Sancho shrieks and attempts to catch him as he revolves. Sunrise in a flaming sky.)

■ ACT III

SIERRA
(The gorgeous red of a setting sun. Clumps of trees right and left. Mountains faintly outlined in the distance.)
(Don Quixote is on all fours, with his eyes fixed on footprints. Sancho watches him, holding Rosinante and Dapple; Don Quixote exclaims with delight:)

DON QUIXOTE: Here are tracks, it is the path by which the bandits come
In their passage to their retreat—
(Rising.)
Unharness your good Dapple, unsaddle Rosinante, (Patting them.)
For rest well earned by lightning speed of fiery gallop!
(Don Quixote rubs his cheek against Rosinante's muzzle.)

SANCHO: (très peu rassuré.) Ce lieu dégage une épouvante
Qui hérisse mon poil et celui du grison.
(Il tire les animaux au dehors, dans un pré.)
Allez, mes chers agneaux, brouter l'épais gazon!

DON QUICHOTTE: (tendant l'index.) Ne vois-tu rien qui bouge au fond de la clairière?

SANCHO: (poltron, prêt à fondre en larmes.) Seigneur, je voudrais bien revenir en arrière!
Maître, j'ai peur de l'ombre et des bruits angoissants
Dont s'emplissent la brande et les bois frémissants.
Que va-t-il se passer?

DON QUICHOTTE: (héroïque.)
Quelque chose d'immense!
Sancho . . . notre gloire commence!
(Solennel.)
Les preux, les paladins et les héros passés
Vont être, en un clin d'oeil, oubliés, éclipsés.
Je bous d'impatience héroïque et de fièvre.

SANCHO: Et moi, je tremble comme un lièvre.
Mais si l'on s'asseyait un brin?
Je suis fourbu . . .
Non d'avoir trop mangé, trop bu! . . .

DON QUICHOTTE: (stupéfait.)
S'asseoir!
Un chevalier qui tente l'aventure
Doit toujours paraître en posture
De déjouer la ruse et de parer le coup.

SANCHO: (s'allongeant sur l'herbe.) Je vous laisse le soin de veiller sur mon cou:
Qu'on ne le tranche point, seigneur, à l'improviste.

DON QUICHOTTE: Sois tranquille.

SANCHO: (s'allongeant davantage.) Je dors, vous . . . restez sur la piste.
(Le ciel devient plus sombre. Harassé de fatigue, Don Quichotte s'est endormi, debout, appuyé sur sa lance. Il rève . . . et murmure:
Quand apparaissent les étoiles . . .
(Bruit de pas.

DON QUICHOTTE: (se réveillant et envoyant un baiser au ciel. O mes rêves divins . . .
(Soudain il sursaute et regarde dans le fond.)
Cette fois ce sont eux!
(Joyeux et fier.)
Ils sont plus de deux cents, fils!

SANCHO: (not at all reassured.)
This spot exudes a ghostly horror
Which makes Dapple's grey bristles and mine stand on end.
(Taking the animals to a patch of turf.)
Come on, my little dears, and browse upon the turf!

DON QUIXOTE: (pointing a forefinger.) Look yonder down the glen, do you see something moving?

SANCHO: (frightened, almost in tears.) My lord, I vow we would do well to be returning!
Master, the creeping shadows and ghostly sounds
Of the brushwood and bracken harrow my soul!
Tell me, what can it mean?

DON QUIXOTE: (grandly.) Something great and stupendous!
Sancho,—the dawn of our glory is breaking!
All knights, all paladins of bygone chivalry
Shall now be put to shame in a flash, and eclipsed.
Heroic frenzy rages in me like a fever!

SANCHO: And I am trembling like a rabbit.
But—shall we not sit down awhile?
My knees are shaky—not from surfeit of meat or drink!

DON QUIXOTE: (scandalized.)
Sit down?
The prudent knight consigned to deed of venture
Holds him upright and prepared
To guard against a snare and foil a crafty foe.

SANCHO: (stretching his limbs on the grass.) To you I leave the task to guard my head from harm:
Let no man cut if off, my Lord, without my permission!

DON QUIXOTE: Rest in peace.

SANCHO: (stretching himself at full length.) I sleep, you—remain on guard.
(The sky begins to darken. Worn out with fatigue Don Quixote goes off to sleep standing, leaning on his spear. He dreams and murmurs:)
When the stars gleam in countless number—
(Footsteps heard.)

DON QUIXOTE: (waking and throwing a kiss to heaven.) It was of heaven I did dream—
(Suddenly, standing bolt upright, he scans the horizon.)
At last, it is they!
(Happy and proud.)
There are more than two hundred!

SANCHO: (piteux, arrivant tremblant près de Don Quichotte. Il se signe.) Et nous sommes deux!	SANCHO: (in a pitiable state of terror, runs to Don Quixote, and crosses himself.) We are only two!
DON QUICHOTTE: Nous les vaincrons, s'il plaît à la cause servie.	DON QUIXOTE: If it seem good to the cause that we serve, we shall conquer—
SANCHO: (fou de terreur.) Maître, j'ai les bras courts et je tiens à la vie!	SANCHO: (wild with terror.) Master, I'm weak and frail, and I cling to my life!
DON QUICHOTTE: (riant.) Va te cacher, mon fils, au plus noir des forêts.	DON QUIXOTE: Go hide in the depths of the forest!
SANCHO: (en se sauvant.) Ah! si j'avais moins peur, quel héros je ferais! Il disparaît.)	SANCHO: (making off.) Ah! Were I less afraid, what a hero I should be! He vanishes.
DON QUICHOTTE: (d'une voix tonitruante, aux brigands qui sont en face de lui.) Halte-là! rendez-vous, gens de peu, valetaille, Ou je vous charge et je vous taille. (Bataille. Cris. Au milieu de la bagarre, la voix de Don Quichotte domine avec ces mots: "Dulcinée! . . . Dame de mes pensées!" En un clin d'oeil il est renversé et solidement maintenu.)	DON QUIXOTE: (in a voice of thunder, to the brigands confronting him.) Halt, I say! and surrender, craven curs, filthy vermin! Else I charge and hew you down! (A struggle—shouts—above the din Don Quixote is heard crying "Dulcinea! Lady-of-my-thoughts!" In a twinkling Don Quixote is thrown and bound.)
LE CHEF: Voilà, certe, un gaillard d'une audace superbe! Si nus avions été brins d'herbe, Il nous eût tous fauchés du coupant de son fer! Mais d'où sort-il? Du Purgatoire ou de l'Enfer? (Le chef s'immobilise à l'écart et ne quitte plus des yeux Don Quichotte, impassible.)	CHIEF BANDIT: A fine brave fellow, I believe! Had we been blades of grass, The swish of his sword would have mown us down! But where does he come from? From Purgatory or from hell? (The Chief stands motionless apart, his eyes fixed on the impassive Don Quixote.)
UN BANDIT: A quelle sauce allons-nous mettre sa chair rance?	A BANDIT: What sauce for this tough old morsel?
DEUXIÈME BANDIT: Remarque son indifférence.	SECOND BANDIT: See how proud he is.
PREMIER BANDIT: (à Don Quichotte. Indique-nous ton choix. (Don Quichotte hausse les épaules sans répondre.)	FIRST BANDIT: (to Don Quixote.) Name your choice. (Don Quixote shrugs his shoulders without replying.)
TROISIÈME BANDIT: (le bousculant.) Nous feras-tu l'honneur De répondre aux larrons que nous sommes, seigneur? (Silence hautain de Don Quichotte.)	THIRD BANDIT: (jostling him.) Will you condescend to answer us poor thieves, my lord? (Don Quixote is scornfully silent.)
PREMIER BANDIT: (le souffletant.) Voilà pour ta morgue imbécile. (Hilarité générale.)	FIRST BANDIT: (cuffs him.) That for your silly churlishness. (General laughter.)
QUATRIÈME BANDIT: (même jeu.) Voilà qui te rendra la langue plus facile.	FOURTH BANDIT: (does the same.) This will loosen your tongue.
LE CHEF: (énervé.) Il faut en finir! Saignez-le, brûlez-le, pendez-le: qu'on m'évite Le trouble où son regard me plonge . . . Faites vite! (Quelques-uns allument un feu.)	CHIEF: (unnerved.) Enough! Stab him! Burn him, hang him! Rid me of that strange look that troubles me— Finish him! (Some bandits busy themselves lighting a fire. Others sing and dance around the calm and impassive Don Quixote, whom the Chief watches with bewilderment.)
LES BANDITS: (chantant et dansant autour de Don Quichotte impassible et calme que le chef contemple avec stupeur.) Voir un corps long comme un jour sans pain Pendre à la branche d'un pin Est un spectacle cocasse! (Rires.) Ah! Ah! Ah! Le repas fait avec sa carcasse Sera pour les corbeux un plus maigre régal Qu'un corps d'hidalgo colossal! (Rires.) Ah! Ah! Ah!	BANDITS: This lean lank body, long as a hungry day, Hung on the bough of a pine, Invites to jesting and laughter! (Laughing.) Ha! ha! ha! ha! Meat is scarce on his old bony carcass, Most disappointing meal for the carrion crows! Not so plump or sweet as a fine fat hidalgo! (Laughing.) Ha! ha! ha!
DON QUICHOTTE: (les mains jointes, loin de tout, faisant sa prière.) Seigneur, recois mon âme, elle n'est pas méchante, Et mon coeur est le coeur d'un fidèle chrétien. Que ton oiel me soit doux et ta face indulgente! Étant le chevalier du droit, je suis le tien. (Le chef est visiblement ému. Don Quichotte se relève. Les bandits se regardent confondus, interdits.)	DON QUIXOTE: (apart, with hands bound, offers up a prayer.) O Lord, receive my spirit, not wholly vile or worthless, For my heart is faithful to you; Deal kindly with me, judge me in mercy! Since I do stand for truth and right, I stand for you! (The Chief is visibly affected. The other bandits exchange glances of amazement and bewilderment.)
LE CHEF: (d'une voix grave.) Vraiment je crois rêver, voyant ta face pâle, Tes grands traits innocents d'où le divin s'exhale Et tes yeux fulgurants de sublimes clartés! Où vas-tu? Que veux-tu?	CHIEF: (awed.) I seem to dream of a truth, in looking upon your pallor, Those fine inspiring features, suffused with sancity, Those eyes that flash sublime and transparent! Where are you going? What is your mission?
DON QUICHOTTE: (fièrement.) Qui je suis? Ecoutez! Je suis un chevalier errant et qui redresse Les torts; un vagabond inondé de tendresse Pour les mères en deuil, les gueux, les opprimés, Pour tous ceux qui du sort ne furent pas aimés. Je suis fou de soleil ardent, d'air pur, d'espace, J'adore les enfants qui rient lorsque je passe, Et ne déteste point les bandits, quant ils ont De la force au jarret et de l'orgueil au front. (D'un effort il brise ses liens puis dresse sa grande taille.) Et me voici debout, jouant un nouveau rôle, Libre dans mon effort comme dans ma parole; Et je vous dis ceci, moi "le Haut-Chevalier": C'est qu'il faut à l'instant me rendre le collier Pris au cou délicat d'une femme adorée. Le joyau, lui, n'est rien, mais la cause est sacrée.	DON QUIXOTE: (proudly.) The True Knight-Errant, sirs, am I, Who guards the good, and rights the wrong; A wanderer whose heart overflows with tenderness For the mother that mourns, the poor, weak and oppressed, For all whom fate denies the precious boon of love. I am fey with the flaming sun, the air, the heavens! I love the little child that crows aloud to see me, Nor do I bear ill-will to a bandit, be he fearless, And stalwart of limb and brave and proud of mien. (With a supreme effort he breaks his bonds and draws himself up to his full height.) Here I stand erect, you see me, in new guise, I stand free and unfettered in speech as in movement, And this I here demand, I, the Knight of all Knights: Now must you yield to me that necklace which you have, Filched from the fair slender throat of a maid whom I worship. Gems are dross, nothing to me, but the cause I serve is holy.

PREMIER BANDIT: Ah! je me sens trembler! (Le chef retire de sa ceinture le collier qu'il remet à Don Quichotte respectueusement.)	FIRST BANDIT: Ah! My heart is strangely troubled! (The Chief draws the necklace from his girdle, bares his head and kneels; he surrenders the necklace to Don Quixote.)
LE CHEF: (se découvrant et mettant un genon en terra.) Voici. Le joyau dérobé, monseigneur!	CHIEF: The stolen jewel, Sire!
DON QUICHOTTE: (très simplement.) Bien, merci.	DON QUIXOTE: (quite simply.) Good. I thank you. (The other bandits also kneel.)
LE CHEF ET LES BANDITS: (s'agenouillant à leur tour, avec recoellien ent.) Et maintenant, sur nous, placez votre main pure, O noble Chevalier de la Longue Figure!	BANDITS: (fervently.) Before you go, we would pray, that you grant us your blessing, O great and noble Knight of the Rueful Countenance!
DON QUICHOTTE: (d'une voix éclatante; éclairé par l'éclat du feu allunti par les bandits, sa tète auréolée d'un dernier rayon.) Sancho, rustre au coeur timoré, Viens voir le miracle opéré! (Sancho sort timidement de l'ombre. Se montant jusqu'à la fin dans une fièvre de sublime exaltation.) Les manants, les pillards, fils du vol et du crime, Ceux que la peur redoute et que la force opprime, Les sans-logis, les gueux aux rires menacants, Ont deviné mon but, en ont saisi le sens! Courbés sous l'âpre vent qui vient des cimes hautes, Tremblants d'un grand frisson, regarde-les, mes hôtes, Les élus de mon coeur, mes fils prédestinés, Vois-les, comme ils sont beaux, dociles, fascinés! (Radieux, les mains étendues en avant comme pour bénir les bandits.)	DON QUIXOTE: (in a burst of enthusiasm; as he stands in the light throw by the Bandits' fire, a flaming aureole encircles his head.) Sancho, blockhead, craven of heart, Come see the Miracle performed! (Sancho crawls from his hiding-place in the shadows. In a rising frenzy of exaltation.) These poor wights, wretched thieves, born in crime, nursed in evil. Whom nothing but fear can chasten, whom nothing but force coerces, Vagrant strays, and rogues that mocked me with threats, These have divined my aim, and fathomed my intent! Struck down beneath the blast, laid low by wrath of heaven, They shiver cowering, my erstwhile savage hosts, Henceforth my chosen folk, my children fore-ordained, Behold! Devoted slaves, in homage to my thrall! (High-wrought and ecstatic, with hands outstretched in blessing.)

ACT QUATRIÈME

ACT IV

LA FÊTE DANS LE PATIO DE LA BELLE DULCINÉE Dulcinée, Rodriguez, Juan Pedro, Garcias, Foule Des Invités, Valets (Musique invisible. On danse au loin. Dulcinée est dans un angel du patio, entourée de galants; elle est pensive.)	FÊTE IN THE COURTYARD OF THE LOVELY DULCINEA'S HOUSE Dulcinea, Rodriguez, Juan, Pedro, Garcias, Guests, Servants. (Dance-music heard in the distance, groups appear from time to time, Dulcinea, pensive, sits in a corner, surrounded by admirers.)
JUAN: (chagrin, à Dulcinée.) Alors je n'ai plus rien, traîtresse, à espérer?	JUAN: (vexed, to Dulcinea.) And so—deceiver—there is no hope for me?—
DULCINÉE: (préoccupée, distraite.) Plus rien . . . mais Pepita saura te consoler.	DULCINEA: (preoccupied, absently.) No, none— But fair Pepita may console you still.
RODRIGUEZ: (s'empressant à son tour, galamment.) De ma grande détresse Quand aurez-vous pitié?	RODRIGUEZ: (gallantly seizing his opportunity.) Have my torment and anguish No power to move your heart?—
GARCIAS: (de même.) Et resterez-vous la maîtresse . . .	GARCIAS: (likewise.) Will you deign to be the beloved—
PEDRO: (terminant la phrase.) De celui qui souffre à vos pieds?	PEDRO: (finishing the phrase.) Of one who sighs and pleads to you?—
DULCINÉE: (nonchalamment.) Pauvres amis, vous m'ennuyez! (A part.) J'ai bien assez de ma tristesse . . . (Ils s'éloignent dépités. Des danses lentes et silencieuses continment a lointain.)	DULCINEA: (with indifference.) No, no, good friends—you weary me!— (Aside.) Enough for me is mine own sadness— (They withdraw in high dudgeon. Stately and noiseless, the distant dancing continues, to the accompaniment of invisible musicians.)
DULCINÉE: (dans un rêve.) Lorsque le temps d'amour a fui Que reste-il de nos bonheurs? . . . Que reste-ii donc des splendeurs Des soirs d'été, lorsque la nuit Dans ses voiles ensevelit L'or des courchants, l'éclat des fleurs? . . . (Les danses ont cessé dans le lointain; la musique s'est tue; toute la foule envahit le patio; Dulcinée s'est levée et est aussitôt entourée des amoureux qui s'empressent autour d'elle; mais voici que Rodriguez observe Juan se rapprochant de Dulcinée; même jeu de la part de Juan.)	DULCINEA: (musing.) When our brief hour of love has fled, Gone are those joys that make life sweet— Gone are those summer nights, When twilight grey, softly falling, Veils the nodding flowers closed in sleep— (The distant dancing has ceased, the music has stopped, the whole company swarms on to the stage. Dulcinea rises, and is quickly besieged by a host of admirers. Rodriguez and Juan observe each other trying to attract Dulcinea's attention.)
RODRIGUEZ ET JUAN: (à part.) Par fortune! serait-ce son tour? Aurait-il plus de chance en lui parlant d'amour?	RODRIGUEZ AND JUAN: (aside.) Is he favored, her choice of today? Will his suit better prosper if he tells of his love?
DULCINÉE: (à part, malicieusement.) Vous n'aurez pas de chance en me parlant d'amour. (Puis changeant de ton et d'allure.) Non! j'ai pour le moment le désir d'autre chose, Je rêve et je pleure sans cause; Ah! je suis très à plaindre, et c'est pitié vraiment De n'être pas ravie ayant de tels amants.	DULCINEA: (aside, with sly glances.) All your labor is vain if you whisper of love! (Changing her tone, with a new charm.) No! though I should be happy, yet something is wanting. I brood and I weep without reason, As one to be pitied, and a sad plight is mine Who can take no delight in this surfeit of lovers.
RODRIGUEZ: Que dit-elle?	RODRIGUEZ: What can she mean?
JUAN, PEDRO ET GARCIAS: Hein?	JUAN, PEDRO AND GARCIAS: Ha!
DULCINÉE: (étrange.) Autrement que par vous et . . . qu'à l'accoutumée, Ou . . . soyez imprévus, superbes, éclatants, Car c'est de l'inédit que mon rêve demande Et d'inconnus frisson mordant ma chair gourmande!	DULCINEA: (dully.) Would that men could but love in far different wise, In more novel a fashion— Now woo me like men, with passion fierce as the sun! For the glow of new ecstasy long have I hungered; For the thrill that is new am I faint to dying!
TOUS: Vivat pour Dulcinée Indomptable! Indomptée!	ALL: Long live fair Dulcinea! Undefeated, triumphant! (Dulcinea, picking up a guitar, sings with passion.)
DULCINÉE: (saisissant une guitare (avec un accent de fièvre).) Alza! ne pensons qu'au plaisir d'aimer, A la fièvre des heures brèves Où l'on sent le coeur se pâmer	DULCINEA: Alza! Live for love and love's joys alone, Live for passion all too soon over, Let souls enraptured, two as one, Melt in the kiss of maid and lover! Ollé!

Sous les baisers cueillis aux lèvres!
Ollé! que les yeux plongent dans les yeux.
Désirs, courez la pretentaine;
Et jeunes gens, qu'il vous souvienne
Que l'amour sourit aux audacieux.
Anda! ne pensons qu'aux minutes brèves
Où les âmes vont se pâmer
Sur les baisers pris sur les lèvres
Dans l'ivresse de s'adorer!
(Elle danse.)

TOUS: Alza!
Ollé!
Anda!
(Après les cris d'enthousiasme, des valets paraissent à la porte de la salle où aura lieu le souper dont on apercoit les tables somptueusement servies.)

LES INVITÉS: (en se rendant au souper.) L'aube bientôt va pourprer l'horizon! . . .
En soupant, verre en main, nous salûrons l'aurore,
Tandis que les vieux vins emporteront encore
Ce qui nous reste de raison.
(Les tentures se referment. Quelques instants après la sortie de tous. Sancho est introduit par deux laquais.)

SANCHO: (faisant l'important, au premier valet ahuri.) Annonce le grand don Quichotte de la Manche, Baron et Chevalier de la Longue Figure, (Au second valet.
Arrivant en Estramadure
Avec son écuyer le valeureux don Sanche.

LE PREMIER VALET: (intimidé par les regards de Sancho.) El señor . . . el señor Quichotte Estramadure . . .
(Il cherche son souffle.)

SANCHO: Idiot!

LE DEUXIÈME VALET: (finissant l'annonce.) Le Chevalier de la Longue Figure . . .

SANCHO: (avec un geste condescendant.) Mieux . . .
(Don Quichotte entre, compassé, solennel, sa salade sous le bras: il fait dans le salon vide un salut effarant que Sancho s'efforce en vain de reproduire, puis le chevalier pousse un soupir en ne voyant personne.)

LE DEUXIÈME VALET: (éclatant de rire, bas à son camarade.) Sont-ils drôles!
J'augure Que cet homme n'a rien mangé depuis deux ans!

LE DEUXIÈME VALET: Encor s'il nous faisait quelques riches présents!
(Ils ricanent.)

You that gaze and sigh in despair,
Feed the flame of passions that fire you,
You that are young, let this inspire you,
Love befriends him that fears not to dare!
Anda!
Live for love, for joys too soon over,
Let twin souls commingle as one,
Let love's glorious ecstasy won
Crown with its kisses maid and lover!
(She dances.)

ALL: Alza!
Ollé!
Anda!
(When the enthusiasm has subsided, servants appear at the doors of the supper-room, through which can be seen groaning tables.)

ALL: (making a move to the supper-room.) Soon will the dawn make the skies bright and clear!
Greet the new morrow with toasting and merriment!
Let good old wine work its will on our wits tonight,
Wine shall have all the wit left us!
(The curtains are drawn: some seconds after the general exit, Sancho is introduced by two menservants.)

SANCHO: (overweighted with importance, to the first servant, who gazes open-mouthed.) Announce the noble Don Quixote de la Mancha,
Baron, Duke, and Knight of the Rueful Countenance,
(To the second servant.)
Just come to Estramadura
Attended by his Squire, the valorous Don Sancho—

FIRST SERVANT: (cowed by Sancho's gaze.) The Señor—Quixote—Estramadura—(Gasping.)

SANCHO: Idiot!

SECOND SERVANT: (finishing.) Noble Knight of the Rueful Countenance—

SANCHO: (condescendingly.) Better!
(Don Quixote enters, stiff and formal, he sweeps the stage with an extravagant gesture of salutation which Sancho tries in vain to copy; he breathes a sigh of disappointment.)

FIRST SERVANT: (guffawing, aside to his fellow-servant.) What a sight!
I warrant that man has eaten nothing for two years!

SECOND SERVANT: Think of the handsome presents he will give us!
(They giggle.)

SANCHO: (s'apercevant de leur manège, court sur eux, furieux.) Que le Grand Chevalier rêve, chante ou soupire, Moi seul, entendez-vous, ai le droit de sourire!
(Ils disparaissent vivement.)

DON QUICHOTTE: (épanoui.) J'entre enfin dans la joie et l'immortalité!

SANCHO: (geignant.) Quand donc dans l'abondance et dans l'oisiveté?
Quand pourrai-je palper le plus mince pécule . . .

DON QUICHOTTE: (le réconfortant joyeusement.) Mais biens vont t'échoir, j'en jure par Hercule.
(Avec gravité.)
Pour ton dévoûment, ta vertu, Je songe à t'enrichir.

SANCHO: (ravi.) Enfin!

DON QUICHOTTE: (très sérieusement.) Que dirais-tu D'une île . . . ou d'un château festonné de tourelles, Ceint d'un parc, où le soir glissent des tourterelles?

SANCHO: (la figure épatée par un large sourire.) Ce rêve me sourit.
Mais dans combien de temps?

DON QUICHOTTE: (réfléchissant.) Ce soir . . . demain peut-être . . .

SANCHO: (paradant.) O bienheureux moment
Où, vêtu d'or, de brocatelles,
Le jabot fleuri de dentelles,
Devant mes gens je paraîtrai,
Moi, leur Seigneur et Maître, en habit chamarré!

DON QUICHOTTE: (avec assurance.) Radieuse pour nous s'ouvre la destinée!

SANCHO: (ravi, pousse un formidable:) Oh!

DON QUICHOTTE: (avec une tendre émotion.) D'abord, ce soir, j'épouse Dulcinée (Regard étonné de Sancho à cette nouvelle.)
Et l'emmène au pays charmant
Où tout est rêve, enchantment,
L'heure y coule exquise et se savoure toute.

SANCHO: (intrigué.) Où perche cet Eden?

DON QUICHOTTE: (avec mystère.) Moi seul en sais la route.
(Des domestiques soulèvent la tapisserie. Avec une indicible émotion:)
Mais, voici Dulcinée . . .
Ah! que je suis heureux!
Mon Sancho, tu vas voir cet accueil chaleureux!

SANCHO: (furious at their behaviour, rushes at them:) The great Knight dreams or sings or sighs,
It is mine, and mine alone, to smile!
(They vanish.)

DON QUIXOTE: (excitedly.) At last I taste of joy!
The sweets of immortality!

SANCHO: (grumbling.) But when may I expect a taste of plenteous ease?
And when shall I enjoy the handling of a stiver?

DON QUIXOTE: (joyfully reassuring him.) All of these shall be yours, I swear, by Hercules!
(Gravely.)
You have been loyal, faithful, true,
And you shall have riches.

SANCHO: (in rapture.) At last!

DON QUIXOTE: (in all seriousness.) What do you say to an island?
Or castle keep, with serrated battlements,
In a park, where doves at night sing songs of rapture?

SANCHO: (a broad smile coming over his face.) The picture pleases me.
But when shall these things be?

DON QUIXOTE: (reflecting.) Tonight—perhaps—tomorrow.

SANCHO: (strutting about.) Oh! great will be the day.
When, tired in brocatel and satin,
Broidered lawn and frills, lace and jewels,
I appear before my household,
As overlord and master, in gorgeous panoply!

DON QUIXOTE: (confidently.) To us the fates have opened out a glorious vista!

SANCHO: (fiercely exultant.) Oh! Oh!

DON QUIXOTE: (with tenderness and emotion.) This night I wed the lovely Dulcinea, (Sancho is staggered at this announcement.)
Then away to that fair domain—
Where souls enchanted—may find oblivion—
And the blissful ecstasy of amaranthine rapture.

SANCHO: (curious.) And where may this Eden be?

DON QUIXOTE: (mysteriously.) I alone know the secret.
(The curtains of the supper-room are drawn aside.)
DON QUIXOTE: (deeply moved.) Ah!—
It is she—
Dulcinea!—
I am happy now!

DULCINÉE: (rieuse, étonnée, s'avançant.) Tiens, c'est vous, chevalier . . .
Mais pas une blessure?
Quoi, sans un bras coupé, sans une égratignure?

DON QUICHOTTE: (souriant et calme avec un large geste.) Intact!
(Il reste un instant le bras levé dans sa fière attitude.)

DULCINÉE: (souriante, malicieuse.) Intact? . . .
(Gaiment.) Vivat!

RODRIGUEZ, JUAN, GARCIAS, PEDRO: (moqueurs, à Don Quichotte et Sancho.) On ne s'explique pas
Qu'à deux vous ayez pu vous tirer de ce pas.
Donnez, de vos exploits, la preuve, malepeste!

SANCHO: (désignant Don Quichotte.) Ne la voyez-vous pas, chers seigneurs, à son geste?

TOUS: (répètent avec insistance, à Don Quichotte.) Comment avez-vous pu vous tirer de ce pas?..
La preuve! . . .

DULCINÉE: (rieuse, mais incrédule aussi.) Auriez-vous les trente perles fines?

DON QUICHOTTE: (navré.) O mes illusions, mes croyances divines! . . .
Elle a douté! . . .
(Il exhume du fond de sa pauvre cape le collier qu'il tend d'un geste douloureux à Dulcinée.)
Voici, madame, le collier.

DULCINÉE: (stupéfaite, vivement.) Mon collier!

TOUS: Ah!

DULCINÉE: (folle de joie, sautant au cou de Don Quichotte après avoir mis son collier.) Mon Chevalier,
Il faut que je t'embrasse!
Les plus illustres faits des héros de jadis
Sont ici dépassés, même ceux d'Amadis!

TOUS: (regardant Don Quichotte.) Voyez de quels transports s'illumine sa face!

DON QUICHOTTE: (fou d'amour, s'avance vers Dulcinée.) Marchez dans mon chemin Et prêtez-moi l'appui léger de votre main:
A deux nous aimerons davantage le monde,

Now good squire, you shall see her delight at my coming!
(Goblet in hand, the guests crowd on to the stage, laughing and joking. Dulcinea catches sight of Don Quixote, she comes forward quickly and scrutinises him. General animation and amusement.)

DULCINEA: Ah, it is you, gallant Knight!—
But not one single wound?
Not one damaged limb, not one tiny scratch?—

DON QUIXOTE: (smiling and self-possessed, with a fine gesture.) Intact!

DULCINEA: (with a roguish smile.) Intact?
(Gaily.) Holà!

RODRIGUEZ, PEDRO, etc.: (together, mocking at Don Quixote and Sancho.) A pretty tale, indeed, that two like you Could come unharmed through such peril as that.
The burden rests on you to prove it, caballeros!

SANCHO: (pointing to his master.) Have you not proof enough, good masters, in his comportment?

ALL: (insisting, to Don Quixote.)
Unharmed in peril such as that?
Come, prove it!

DULCINEA: (also laughing incredulously, to Don Quixote.) Then have you really brought me back my pearls?

DON QUIXOTE: (crestfallen.)
Alas for my illusions, and my cherished hopes,
She doubts me!
(He extracts the necklace from his seedy cloak and sorrowfully hands it to Dulcinea.)
Here, my lady, is your necklace!

DULCINEA: (eagerly, dumbfounded.) My necklace?

ALL: Ah!

DULCINEA: (wild with delight, puts on her necklace and flings herself on Don Quixote's neck.)
Beautiful Knight!
For this I must embrace you!
All the heroes of old and their marvellous deeds
Are extinguished by you, even great Amadis!

ALL: (point to Don Quixote.)
What joy shines in his eyes—and illuminates his features!

DON QUIXOTE: (madly in love, advances to Dulcinea.) Life's journey is lonely,
Oh, guide and direct my path with a gentle hand,
Then shall you learn with me to make life worth living,

Le temps sera plus court, la moisson plus féconde . . .
Les maux dont geint l'humanité
Ont besoin de la femme et de sa charité!
Allons vers l'Idéal, montons à grands coups d'aile!
(En lui offrant la main.)
Soyez mon épouse fidèle!

DULCINÉE: (éclatant de rire.) Me marier, moi!
Que j'abandonne ma maison,
Ma ville!
eh!
mais . . . vous perdez la raison!
J'aime trop la folie et le rire,
Et l'amour, mon charmant empire,
Je vous estime fort!
Vous êtes un galant
Fantasque, glorieux, étrange infiniment . . .
Mais laissez-moi . . . très libre, en ma ville natale.
Me marier! ah! ah!

DON QUICHOTTE: (courbant la tête.) O réponse fatale!
Peu de mots ont suffi pour me désespérer.

DULCINÉE: (d'un geste lent, éloignant la foule. Sancho lui-même s'efface. Seule, avec Don Quichotte.) Oui, je souffre votre tristesse Et j'ai vraiment chagrin à vous désemparer;
Mais je dois vous désabuser . . .
Et en n'acceptant pas ce que vous proposez,
Vrai . . . je vous prouve ainsi ma sincère tendresse.
Vous . . . j'aurais de la peine, ami, de vous tromper . . .

DON QUICHOTTE: (très ému.) Dulcinée! Dulcinée! . . .

DULCINÉE: (émue, tristement, mais en souriant.) Car c'est ma destinée
De donner de l'amour à ceux dont le désir
Est d'avoir ou mon âme ou ma bouche à saisir.
(Avec un tendre élan.)
Puisque vous souffrez et que je suis impure,
Indigne, vengez-vous, lancez sur moi l'injure . . .
Mais restez avec nous . . .
(Don Quichotte tombe à genoux.)
Oui, restez à genoux . . .
Là, devant Dulcinée! . . .
Ah! restez avec nous! . . .

DON QUICHOTTE: (à deux genous, avec une infinie bonté.) O toi, dont les bras nus sont plus frais que la mousse,
Laisse-moi te parler
De ma voix la plus douce . . .
Avant de te quitter.
(Avec une gravité triste.)

The days shall fly swifter, Earth give more of its fullness—
The wounds that chafe the souls of men
Shall be healed by the love and charity of woman!
Away to the Perfect Life, triumphant soaring,
(Offering her his hand.)
Be mine adored, beloved wife!

DULCINEA: (laughing.) I! A lawful wife!
And would you bid me leave my home?
Surely—your senses are bewitched!—
My heart is given to folly, laughter, mirth
And love, they and I hold revel here.
I hold you well esteemed!
I know you for a brave fantastick,
Valiant, true, and passing strange indeed—
But leave me in freedom where I was born and nurtured.
A lawful wife! Ha! ha!

DON QUIXOTE: (with bowed head.) You have spoken my doom!—
Simple words, but enough, henceforth my heart is dead.

DULCINEA: (quietly dismisses her guests, Sancho makes himself scarce also. Alone with Don Quixote.) I, too, suffer, your anguish is mine,
And I am sorely pained to lose your gentle heart,
Yet must I undeceive you now,
That so denying you the answer you crave,
I may prove how sincere my affection is.
You,—dear friend, I should be unhappy deceiving you.

DON QUIXOTE: (deeply moved.)
Dulcinea!

DULCINEA: (with emotion, smiling bitterly.) For the fates have ordained me
To surrender in love unto all whose desire
Is to feast on my soul or my lips as they will.
(In an outburst of tenderness.)
Ah! since through unworthy, tainted me, you suffer
Exact the forfeit of revenge from me!—
But remain here with us!—
(Don Quixote falls on his knees.)
Yes, on your knees
At Dulcinea's feet!—Ah, leave us not!—

DON QUIXOTE: (on his knees, with infinite tenderness.) O lady, whose gleaming arms thrill me, soft as swan-down,
I would say to you
Words most gentle and tender—
Before I bid farewell.
(Grave and sad.)

Comme réponse à ma prière,
Pour m'avoir dit des vérites,
Femme, je te bénis: Reste toujours sincère
Tu m'as brisé le coeur . . . et je suis à tes pieds.
(Dulcinée se penche vers lui et l'embrasse au front avec ferveur en répétant les dernières paroles qu'elle lui a dites, puis, au bruit de la foule qui revient, elle quitte Don Quichotte et rejoint ses amis. Le chevalier se relève, soutenu par Sancho qui le premier, est entré et s'est élancé vers son pauvre maître.)

TOUS ET TOUTES: (revenant bruyamment, à Dulcinée.) Enfin, te revoilà! Rends-nous ton clair sourire!
(Le Chevalier, à bout de forces, s'assoit dans un coin. Pendant ce qui suit, Sancho reste près de Don Quichotte et essaie de le consoler; le chevalier cherche à sourire à Sancho.)

RODRIGUEZ: (en montrant Don Quichotte qui s'est relevé.) Non, ce n'est pas pour en médire . . .

JUAN: (moqueur, achevant la phrase.) Mais tu prends trop souci de cet être falot.

DULCINÉE: (rudement à Juan, déconcerté.) Si vous aviez son coeur, alors vous seriez beau!

JUAN: (à des amis.) C'est un fou simplement qui pose à la victime.

DULCINÉE: (interrompant Juan et très émue, envoyant avant de sortir un grand baiser au pauvre chevalier.) Oui, peut-être est-il fou . . .
Mais c'est un fou sublime!
(Elle sort.)

TOUS: (entre eux, après le départ de Dulcinée, éclatant de rire.)
Tout ca pour ce débris vermoulu du passée!
Pour ce corps de héron! Pour ce masque plissé!
(Sancho, frémissant sous les insultes, a cherché à empêcher son maître d'entendre; mais le coup est trop rude; Don Quichotte est prêt à fondre en larmes; il se lève, va vers la porte. Sancho énergique l'arrête dans son mouvement.)

SANCHO: (d'un geste terrible et d'une voix tonnante, à la foule qui demeure interdite.) Ca, vous commettez tous un acte épouvantable, Belles dames, seigneurs, en outrageant ici
Le héros admirable
Et hardi que voici.
Riez, allez, riez du pauvre idéologue
Qui passe dans rêve et vous parle d'églogue,
D'amour et de bonté somme autre-

Since in denying my petition
You have not hid the truth from me—
Lady, here I bless you,
True to yourself God keep you!
You have broken my heart—still do I kneel to you!
(Dulcinea bends down to Don Quixote and fervently kisses him on the forehead, repeating his words; then, hearing her guests returning, moves away and rejoins her friends. Don Quixote rises, assisted by Sancho, who is the first to enter and has hurried to his master's side.)

ALL: (rushing in and besieging Dulcinea.) Once more we find you here!
Now for us smile your sweetest!
(The Knight, at the end of his tether, sinks to a seat in the corner during the following. Sancho remains at his side, trying to console him. Don Quixote smiles feebly at Sancho in return.)

RODRIGUEZ: (indicating Don Quixote, who has arisen.) No, though I scorn to speak unkindly—

JUAN: (breaking in with a sneer.) Come, do not waste your charms on this foolish old loon.

DULCINEA: (sharply rebuking Juan, who winces.) If you had his great heart, indeed, you would be a man!

JUAN: (to his friends.) Just a madman, nothing more, who poses as a martyr!

DULCINEA: (with great emotion, cutting Juan short.) Yes, a madman, maybe—but—with the soul of an angel!—
(She goes out, throwing a kiss to the unhappy Knight.)

ALL: (bursting into laughter, after Dulcinea's exit.) All this for that moth-eaten, worm-eaten relic!
That moulting old stork!
That death's head and bones!
(Sancho, quailing under the shower of insults, tries to prevent his master from hearing; but the taunts are too brutal; Don Quixote, almost in tears, rises and makes a move towards the door. Sancho quickly detains him.)

SANCHO: (overawes the crowd with a menacing gesture and thunders a rebuke.) Stop!
You propose a crime that is wicked and cruel,
Gentle ladies, my lords, in reviling with scorn
This brave man, true and honest,
Great in heart and in soul.
Laugh on, and mock this poor champion of chimeras
Whose thoughts are noble dreams, and whose speech is an idyll
Of tenderness and love inspired by fois Jésus!

Moquez-vous sans pitié des ses bas décousus,
De son pourpoint usé, de ses chausses boueuses,
Vous, bas fripons, courtisans, gueuses,
Qui devriez tomber aux pieds
De l'être saint dont vous riez.
Viens, mon grand!
Viens! scrutons les profondeurs cachées;
Viens, viens! recommencons les belles chevauchées, Foncons sur tout lâcheté
Et donnons au malheur le pain de la bonté!
(Il embrasse son vieil ami lui a tendu les bras.)

ACTE CINQUIÈME

DANS LE CHEMIN RAVINÉ DE LA VIEILLE FORÊT (*C'est la nuit, Une nuit étoilée, très claire; Jupiter brille dans tout son éclat.
Don Quichotte repose, debout, contre un grand chêne.
Sancho le veille comme un enfant, il attise un feu de sarments qui réchauffera son "grand." Il retirera silencieusement sa grosse veste pour en couvrir les pieds du pauvre chevalier; puis sa prière s'élèvera attendrie et fervente.*)

SANCHO: O mon maître, ô mon grand! dans des splendeurs de songe
Que ton âme s'élève aux cieux loin du mensonge
Et que ton coeur si doux plane dans les clartés,
Où tout ce qu'il rêva devient réalité!

DON QUICHOTTE: (se réveillant, d'une voix douce.) Ecoute, mon ami, je me sens bien malade!
Délace mon pourpoint, enlève la salade
Qui recouvre le front basané qu'est le mien;
Mets ton bras sous mon cou, sois l'ultime soutien
De celui qui pansa l'humanité souffrante,
Et survécut à la Chevalerie errante.
(Sancho murmure: "Mon maître" pendant que Don Quichotte continue à parler (avec un doux sourire) à son brave Sancho.)
Sancho, mon bon Sancho, nous allons nous quitter . . . Ingrat, vas-tu me regretter? . . .
Déjà tes yeux revoient le village
Où tu fus enfant quant j'étais en âge . . .
Et te voici rêvant aux jolis prés, source divine!

Spare him not as you mock his shabby attire,
His doublet soiled and worn, and his hose patched and threadbare.
You—vulgar boors—underbred—ribald—
Scarce fit to grovel on your knees
To the saint whom you revile!
Come, my Prince!
We will probe unfathomed depths!
Once more we will sally forth together,
To smite and scourge the profligate,
And heal the suffering, with love and tenderness!
(He embraces his aged friend, who holds out his arms to him.)

ACT V

ROAD THROUGH THE GORGE OF AN ANCIENT FOREST
(It is night, starry and clear. Jupiter is at his brightest. Don Quixote is resting, leaning against the trunk of an oak. Sancho watches over him like a child; he makes a fire of sticks and faggots for his "Prince," covers the poor knight's feet with his cloak, then sings, simply, affectionately and fervently:)

SANCHO: Oh, my Lord, oh, my Prince!
Bright visions crown your dreaming,
May your spirit find rest in heaven from earthly falsehood,
And may your gentle soul soar through celestial realms,
Where all its dreamland forms become reality!

DON QUIXOTE: (waking, in a low voice.) Good Sancho, faithful friend, I am faint, I am dying!
Let my head rest on your arm, be the last to uphold
Him who championed the right, fought for the poor that suffered,
Outlived true chivalry, and survived the Knights-Errant!
(Sancho murmurs: "My master!" while Don Quixote continues with a smile.)
Good Sancho, faithful friend, we are fated to part—
Do you care, will you mourn for my loss?
Even now your eyes once more see the village
Of early childhood—
And you dream again of the forest and glades,
The silent woods, the broidered vales,
The all-compelling charms of the Aux bois mystérieux, aux vallons diaprés,

Aux charmes obsesseurs de la terre natale!

SANCHO: (désolé.) Non! non!

DON QUICHOTTE: (avec une infinie douceur.) Mais, mon pauvret, c'est la chose fatale!
Tu n'es qu'un homme enfin, tu veux vivre . . . et je meurs!

SANCHO: Mon maître! . . .

DON QUICHOTTE: (fièrement et simplement, en un suprême et sublime effort se redressant. Oui! je fus le chef des bons semeurs! J'ai lutté pour le bien, j'ai fait la bonne guerre!
(Il retombe . . . il étouffe . . .)
Sancho, je t'ai promis naguère
Des coteaux,
Des châteux,
Même une île Fertile . . .

SANCHO: (très doux.) C'était un simple îlot que je voulais avoir! . . .

DON QUICHOTTE: (souriant.)
Prends cette île qu'il est toujours en mon pouvoir
De te donner! . . .
Un flot azuré bat ses grèves.

hamlet that gave you birth!

SANCHO: (distraught) No! no!

DON QUIXOTE: (with infinite tenderness.) Ah, my poor friend, fate will brook no denial!—
You are only a man, you would live,—I must die—

SANCHO: (sobbing.) Oh, master!

DON QUIXOTE: (proudly and simply, straightening himself with a mighty effort.) Yes!
I was the prince of kindly men!
I strove to right the wrong, I fought for truth and honor!
(He reels and chokes.)
Good Sancho, of late I promised you
Boundless lands,
Castles fair,
Then an island,
A pleasance—

SANCHO: (gently.) A simple little islet was my heart's desire!—

DON QUIXOTE: (continuing with a smile.) Take that island, the sole possession that is still Mine own to give—wavelets blue and clear lave its margin—

Elle est belle, plaisante . . . et c'est l'île des Rêves! . . .
(Sancho pleure.)
Ne pleure pas, Sancho, mon bon, mon gros Sancho!

SANCHO: Laisses-vous délacer; comme dans un cachot Vous étouffez, mon grand, dans cet habit d'apôtre!

DON QUICHOTTE: (l'arrête. Je meurs . . . Fais ta prière et dis la pâtenôtre . . .
(Don Quichotte baisse la tête et défaille. Un court instant. Sancho avec précaution le cale contre l'arbre. le bon Sancho pleure. Don Quichotte reprend, désignant Jupiter à qui il tend les bras.)
L'Étoile! Dulcinée! . . . avec l'astre éclatant
Elle s'est confondue! . . . O Sancho, c'est bien elle,
La lumière, l'amour, la jeunesse immortelle,
Vers qui je vais, qui me fait signe, qui m'attend . . .
(Ses bras retombent. Il meurt. On entend un cri, puis sangloter Sancho qui embrasse son vieux maître adoré.)

FIN.

It is lovely, enchanting—
It is the Island of Dreams!
(Sancho weeps.)
No, Sancho, weep not so, my fine, my mighty Sancho!

SANCHO: Give leave to loose your mail, you are imprisoned like this,
Liked to be choked indeed, trussed in your champion's armor!

DON QUIXOTE: (waves him away.) I am dying—
Whisper a prayer and a last Pater-Noster—
(His head droops, he collapses. Sancho carefully props him up against the tree. Don Quixote continues, stretching out his arms to Jupiter.)
The Star!—
Dulcinea!—
With that bright shining star
Finds her soul sweet communion—
It is my Goddess!—
She is Light, she is Love, she is Beauty!—
I go to her—for she has called me—and awaits me!
(His arms drop lifeless, he dies. With a cry and a sob Sancho embraces his aged master.)

THE END

Sapho (1897)

Sappho

MUSIC BY JULES-ÉMILE FRÉDÉRIC MASSENET ■ LIBRETTO BY HENRI CAIN AND BERNÈDE ■ BASED ON THE NOVEL BY ALPHONSE DAUDET

This five-act pièce lyrique, set to a libretto by Henri Cain and Arthur Bernède (based upon Alphonse Daudet's novel) premiered at the Opéra-Comique in Paris on November 27, 1897. The story begins in the drawing-room of Caoudal's house. A masquerade ball is taking place there, and Caoudal and his friend, La Borderie enter with his guests. La Borderie says he is tired and tries to leave, only to be brought back by the female guests. Jean Gaussin, a young man from the country, is also a guest at the ball. Jean is about to depart when he hears Fanny, a model of Caoudal's, sing with the rest of the guests. Jean is homesick and yearns to leave just as he spots Fanny and falls in love with her at first sight. She manages to speak with him and finds out that he is not an artist, knows nothing of the artist's life and has just arrived from Provence. Afraid that he will find out about her past and anxious to be his friend, she talks him into leaving with her quietly. Caoudal sees Fanny leaving with Jean, calls some of his friends over, and they all laugh with pity for the innocent young man.

At Jean's lodgings in the Rue d'Amsterdam, he is at work with his father, Césaire. Césaire and Divonne, Jean's parents, came to Paris to find their son a job and take Jean's cousin, Irene, home with them. After his family returns to the country, Jean is not lonely for long. Fanny enters and finds him in a mood for company. She sees a statuette of Sappho by Caoudal for which she herself had been the model and almost reveals her identity to Jean. She stops herself in time and hums a melody which reminds Jean of his home. He declares his love for her and they pledge eternal devotion to each other. One year later, Jean and Fanny are husband and wife. He is more in love with her now and she is truly in love with him. She believes that she has left her old bohemian life behind forever. But things go awry when Caoudal and Jean meet, and Caoudal asks Jean if he is still living with "Sappho" (the name under which Fanny is know amongst the artists). Jean at first doesn't realize who this is, but soon he understands that the model of the statuette Caoudal gave him is in fact his beloved. He is disgusted by this, and he denies to Caoudal that Fanny is still with him. Caoudal tells him about Fanny's former life, including the fact that she has a child living with her father by a former lover. Jean is overcome with anger and expresses his hatred of Fanny. Fanny enters at this instant, and when she sees Caoudal and La Borderie with Jean and the look on Jean's face, she knows that she has been betrayed. Jean reviles her and she curses her old friends. She thinks that they have deliberately told Jean about her in order to take away the one happiness in her life.

Jean goes home to Provence. While his family tries to comfort him, Césaire enters and asks Divonne and Irene to go out for a while. When they do, he tells Jean that "Sappho" has come to see him. Césaire departs as Fanny enters. She can not stand being away from him. He is touched by her beauty and her pleas and is about to reconcile with her when his parents enter. Fanny begs her forgiveness from Divonne. As Jean goes away, she reaches out to him and leaves in tears. It is now winter, and Fanny is alone in the room where she and Jean lived together for that blissful year. She is sad, but she tears up Jean's letters and decides to devote herself to her child. Jean suddenly comes in as he could no longer stay away. He has come back to live with her, giving up everything else. When she calls him, "my love", he once again becomes jealous. He is reminded of Caoudal's story of another lover of Fanny's. He becomes tired, falls into a chair and goes to sleep. Fanny realizes that she and Jean can never live together again, writes him a farewell note, and leaves him as he sleeps.

■ ACTE I	■ ACT I
Un salon précédant l'atelier du sculpteur Caoudal—une nuit de bal costumé.	Large drawing-room, behind which is the studio of Caoudal, the sculptor.—A masked ball is in progress.
SCÈNE PREMIÈRE	SCENE I
Au lointain, dans l'atelier, bruit continu de conversations très animées, mêlées d'exclamations bruyantes dominant parfois un orchestre de faux tziganes installé dans cet atelier. Dans le salon, va-et-vient d'invités. Bientôt paraissent Caoudal et La Borderie, costumés et entourés d'amis et de petites femmes travesties.	From the studio, off, comes the continuous hum of animated conversation, mingled with sharp exclamations.—Some of the guests come into the room from the studio behind.—A make-believe Gypsy orchestra is playing noisily in the studio, off.
CAOUDAL: Eh! jeunesse, regardez-nous, Les vieux sont maintenant les plus gais, les plus fous.	CAOUDAL: Hey, my children! Hear, everyone! We may be old, but we have the fun!
LA BORDERIE: Je n'en puis plus!	LA BORDERIE: I'm quite worn out.
CAOUDAL: Tu veux filer peut-être? . . .	CAOUDAL: You would escape, no doubt!
LA BORDERIE: Je n'en puis plus, cher maître!	LA BORDERIE: Dear master, I am quite worn out.

CAOUDAL: Allons donc!
Regarde autour de toi . . .
(En charge.)
Bayadère à l'oeil noir, colombine charmante,
Andalouse gentille, arlequine troublante
Se donnent rendez-vous chez moi . . .
Ohé! jeunesse! . . .

TOUS: (sauf La Borderie). Ohé! jeunesse! . . .
Faisons les fous,
Amusons-nous!
Des baisers cueillons la caresse!

LA BORDERIE: Faites les fous!
Bonsoir!
Amusez-vous!
Mais laissez moi m'esquiver!

CAOUDAL: Empêchez-le de se sauver!

TOUS: Non, tu ne peux pas t'esquiver
Avant que le jour ne paraisse!

CAOUDAL: Et ça s'appelle la jeunesse!

LA BORDERIE: Caoudal a vingt ans!

CAOUDAL: Non! soixante printemps!

SCÈNE II

Caoudal, Jean, La Borderie et quelques invités.

CAOUDAL: (à Jean). Vous aussi, vous fuyez la danse?
Et pourtant, à votre âge, on est plein de vaillance . . .

JEAN: Je n'ai jamais dansé.
Et me sens tout embarrassé!

CAOUDAL: Ça vous change de la Provence?

JEAN: Ah! je ne puis dire combien!

LA BORDERIE: Té, mon petit, je le vois bien!

CAOUDAL: Allons! courage! confiance!

LA BORDERIE: Le premier pas est tout, et le reste n'est rien.

CAOUDAL: Connaissez-vous ces belles filles?

JEAN: Non, monsieur.

CAOUDAL: Comment les trouvez-vous?

JEAN: Mais, gentilles.

CAOUDAL: Faut-il vous présenter?

JEAN: Elles riraient de moi.
Les femmes me font peur!

UN GROUPE: Ah! ah! vraiment!

CAOUDAL: (To La Borderie).
Don't say that!
Wait a bit!
Look around you.
(Indicating the girls, who are listening.)
And tell me what you see: Bayadere dark of eye,
Columbine most enchanting, Andalusian divine.
Have all come here to sup with me:
Hurrah! for youth!

ALL: (except La Borderie). Hurrah! Hurrah! Do what we choose,
So it amuse!
And gather kisses while we may!
Hurrah! Hurray!

LA BORDERIE: Do what you choose; so it amuse!
Do what you choose,
But please let me get away!

CAOUDAL: We must not let him get away!

ALL: We must not let him get away!
No, not before the break of day!

CAOUDAL: And this is what they call their youth!

LA BORDERIE: Caoudal's twenty-one!

CAOUDAL: I'm sixty, my son!

SCENE II

Caoudal, Jean, La Borderie and some of the guests.

CAOUDAL: (to Jean). What! you too would escape the dance?
My dear boy, at your age one has courage to prance.

JEAN: I don't know how to dance,
I'm ashamed to take my chance.

CAOUDAL: It is different from your Provence!

JEAN: How different, you do not know!

LA BORDERIE: Hey, young man!
You here tonight?

CAOUDAL: Come, come!
Be brave, and advance.

LA BORDERIE: One step, and it is done.
It will then go all right.

CAOUDAL: But have you met these pretty ladies?

JEAN: I have not.

CAOUDAL: What do you think of them?

JEAN: Why—most charming.

CAOUDAL: Let me present you—come!

JEAN: No!
They would laugh, I know.
Girls put me in a fright.

SOME OF THE WOMEN: Ha! Ha!
Should we?

LA BORDERIE: Pourquoi?
C'est être un peu naïf, ma foi!

CAOUDAL: (à Jean). Venez-vous?

JEAN: Non, je reste!
(Tous se dirigent vers l'atelier, à l'exception de Jean.)

SCÈNE III

JEAN: (seul). Est-ce vraiment un songe,
Qui trouble mon esprit et déroute mon coeur?
Voilà donc ce qu'on nomme ici-bas le bonheur!
Mensonge!
(Tout le monde est rentré dans l'atelier; au dehors, cris: "Silence! Taisez-vous! chante!")
(Vieille Chanson dans la coulisse.)

LA VOIX DE FANNY: (puis les femmes et les hommes qui reconnaissent la vieille chanson de l'atelier).
La reine des modèles,
Le plus beau . . .
Qui pose sans ficelles,
C'est Sapho!
Zoé, Paulette, Angèle,
La grande Adèle
Et Rebecca,
Sont d'la p'tit' bièr' à côté d'ça!
Le plus beau,
C'est Sapho!
(On reprend en choeur, puis un ban formidable est exécuté par toute la foule.)

JEAN: Ce monde que je vois, ces chansons que j'écoute,
Tout dans ce bal me trouble et me déroute . . .
Qu'il est loin mon pays de clarté, de soleil!
Où mille fleurs odorantes,
Dans le couchant vermeil,
Exhalent par les airs leurs senteurs pénétrantes;
Où le Rhône bondit et roule impétueux
Ses flots couleur d'azur que jalousent les cieux.
Mon pays où le soir dans la verte oseraie,
L'on peut aller rêver sans que rien vous effraie,
Où l'on entend passer dans les grands arbres verts
Le vent, chantant plus fort durant les courts hivers . . .
Mon pays où tout dit l'amour et l'espérance,
Qu'il est loin de mes yeux! . . . Qu'elle est loin ma Provence!

LA BORDERIE: Why so?
A wee bit artless, that!

CAOUDAL: (to Jean). Will you come?

JEAN: I'll wait!
(All go into the studio, with the exception of Jean.)

SCENE III

JEAN: (alone; to himself). What are these dreams that rise,
And trouble so my soul, and my heart put to flight?
Here I see what they tell me is earthly delight:
What lies!
(All go into the studio; cries heard off: "Silence! Be still! Keep still! Sing!") (Old Song heard off).

VOICE OF FANNY: (also of the men and women who recognize the old studio song.) The queen of pretty poses,
As you know,
Who all her charms discloses,
Is Sappho!
Louise, Pauline, Angèle,
And big Adèle, if you prefer,
Are all cheap goods alongside of her!
That is so,
O Sappho!
(Noisy demonstration by the whole company.)

JEAN: These people that I see, and the songs that I hear,
All, at this ball, disturbs—fills me with fear.
Ah, but I'm far from home, from the land of the sun!
There, where my flowers now are blowing,
And, since the day was done,
Upon a purer air their sweet scent have been strowing:
Ah, but I'm far from my home, my dear land of the sun!
Where the Rhone bounds along, and rolls its waters by,
In waves that are so blue that they laugh at the sky;
My dear land, where at eve along the willow way one
May wander with one's thoughts, and there's naught to dismay one.
Where, if one hears at times among the tall, green trees
A wind that louder sighs, it is the winter breeze.
Dearest land, where all voiced the hopes that lay before me,
Ah, you are far from my sight, land of promise that bore me.

SCÈNE IV

Fanny, Caoudal, La Borderie, Hommes, Femmes, Etc.
De bruyantes exclamations gaies et prolongées, mêlées de rires, éclatent dans l'atelier.—Aussitôt, tous entrent en tumulte à la suite de Fanny.—Caoudal, La Borderie et quelques hommes très empressés.

DES HOMMES: Un baiser!

FANNY: Non!
Taisez-vous!

DES HOMMES: Un seul!

FANNY: Voyons!

DES HOMMES: Pour nous!

FANNY: (cherchant à se dégager de tous les hommes qui l'entourent). Allez, jolis farceurs, vrai, vous me faites rire!
Adorateurs, poètes, courtisans,
Amoureux, flatteurs, médisants,
Cachant mal votre jeu sous un charmant sourire!
Allez! jolis farceurs, vrai, vous me faites rire!
(Mouvements dans les groupes, impressions de mécontentement, de déceptions et d'indifférence aussi. Tous vont et viennent, Jean regarde Fanny avec trouble. Sa physionomie semble s'éveiller à un nouveau sentiment qui l'émeut et le transfigure.)

FANNY: (à Caoudal, lui montrant Jean). Quel est ce beau garçon?

CAOUDAL: (distrait). Je ne sais.

FANNY: Tiens, il faut
Que je lui parle!

CAOUDAL: Bien!
Allons . . . toujours Sapho!
(Il s'éloigne en riant.)

FANNY: (qui s'est rapprochée, à Jean). Comment vous nommez-vous?

JEAN: Jean Gaussin.

FANNY: De Provence?

JEAN: Ça s'entend?

FANNY: Pas beaucoup. Artiste, je le pense?

JEAN: Non, madame.

FANNY: Ah! tant mieux!
Mais pourquoi baissez-vous les yeux?
Je ne suis pas méchante . . .

JEAN: Vous vous moquez de moi.

SCENE IV

Fanny, Caoudal, La Borderie, men, women.
(Prolonged cries, gay and noisy, come from the studio.—Thereupon all enter in confusion, following Fanny: Caoudal, La Borderie, and the other men, eagerly.—They surround Fanny, with eager entreaties.)

THE MEN: A kiss!

FANNY: No, no!
Have done!

THE MEN: For me!

FANNY: Ah, please!

THE MEN: Just one!

FANNY: (trying to free herself from the men who surround her).
Go on!
You're a nice lot!
Yes, I shall die laughing!
Ha, ha!
Adores you!
Hypocrites!
Hypocrites!
Ha, ha!
And poets, lovers too!
What cheats!
O you wits!
But you can't hide your game with your smiles or your chaffing!
Ha, ha!
Ha, ha!
Ha, ha!
(The guests move about here and there, wearing expressions of displeasure, disappointment, or indifference.—Jean looks at Fanny, disturbed; his face seems to light up with some new feeling which moves and transfigures him.)

FANNY: (aside to Caoudal, pointing out Jean). Who is that handsome boy?

CAOUDAL: (absently). I don't know.

FANNY: What?
I must make his acquaintance!

CAOUDAL: Good!
Go on!
You're Sappho still!
(He goes away laughing.)

FANNY: (who has approached; to Jean). Tell me, what is your name?

JEAN: Jean Gaussin.

FANNY: From Provence?

JEAN: Does it show?

FANNY: Not so much!
An artist, I suppose?

JEAN: No, madame.

FANNY: Ah! I'm glad!
But why do you lower your eyes?
I am not really bad.

JEAN: Are you laughing at me?

FANNY: Moi, me moquer de toi!
Pas artiste! mais ça m'enchante!

LA BORDERIE ET CAOUDAL: (sortant de l'atelier). Le couvert est mis!

FANNY: (bas à Jean). A bientôt!

CAOUDAL: Hé! les amis!
(Entraînant un groupe de femmes et rentrant dans l'atelier.)
A table! à table!

TOUS: (en parodie).
Plaisir de la table,
Bonheur véritable!

LA VOIX DE CAOUDAL: (dans l'atelier). Sapho!

TOUS: Sapho!

FANNY: (haletante, barrant le passage à Jean qui veut rentrer dans l'atelier). N'y va pas!
Viens avec moi plutôt!
Viens donc!

JEAN: Mais . . .

FANNY: Viens, te dis-je.

JEAN: Je sens que malgré moi je vais où vont ses pas!

FANNY: Viens donc, m'ami . . .

JEAN: J'ai le vertige!
(Ils s'enfuient.)
(Cris dans l'atelier: Sapho! Sapho!)
(La grande tapisserie du fond est entièrement écartée. On aperçoit tous les invités assis à de petites tables . . . souper bruyant. Caoudal, comprenant la fuite de Fanny et de Jean, appelle autour de lui quelques amis; puis, ils échangent entre eux des gestes de commisération, tout en plaisantant. Au fond, les tziganes accentuent avec virtuosité une sorte de czardas.)

FIN DE L'ACTE PREMIER.

FANNY: I—making fun of you!
Not an artist!
Oh!
I'm so glad!

LA BORDERIE and CAOUDAL: (coming out of the studio). Supper's ready now!

FANNY: (whispering to Jean). Bye-and-bye!

CAOUDAL: (urging the guests to go into the studio). To supper!
To supper!

ALL: (in parody). Pleasures of the table,
They only are stable!

THE VOICE OF CAOUDAL: (from the studio). Sappho!

ALL: Sappho!

FANNY: (breathlessly, as she blocks Jean's way into the studio). Do not go!
Do not go!
No!
Come with me.
Yes, come—with me!

JEAN: But—

FANNY: Come, I say!

JEAN: Ah! I know, in spite of me, that where she goes, I go!

FANNY: Come, come, my dear!

JEAN: Ah!
I am dizzy!
(They go off.)
(From the studio come cries of "Sappho! Sappho!"—The great curtain at the back is drawn aside; all the guests are disclosed sitting at small tables: a gay supper.—Caoudal, who has noticed the departure of Fanny and Jean, calls some friends to him, and they jokingly exchange gestures of commiseration.—The gypsies at the back brilliantly execute a sort of czardas.)

END OF FIRST ACT.

■ ACTE DEUXIÈME

Le logement de Jean Gaussin, a Paris, Rue D'Amsterdam.

SCÈNE PREMIÈRE

Jean, Césaire.

JEAN: (chantonnant). O Magali, ma tant amado
Mete la testo au fenstroun.

CÉSAIRE: Escouto un pau aquesto aubado
De tambourin et de violoun.

JEAN: Vous vous donnez bien de la peine, Père . . .

■ ACT II

Lodgings of Jean Gaussin in the rue d'Amsterdam, Paris.

SCENE I

Jean, Césaire.

JEAN: (singing at his work). O Magali, beloved maidie,
Look out and let your face be seen.

CÉSAIRE: And listen while we serenade you
With violin and tambourine.

JEAN: Why, how much trouble you are taking, Father!

CÉSAIRE: Tais-toi!

JEAN: (regardant avec amour un tableau accroché au mur). Notre maison . . .
Avec ses bois de myrtes dans la plaine
Et ses vignes à l'horizon;
Maman Divonne est sur la porte.
En la voyant toujours, toujours devant mes yeux,
Je travaillerai mieux;
Sa présence me réconforte.

CÉSAIRE: A nous tu penseras souvent?

JEAN: Oui, Père.
Mais où donc est ma mère?

CÉSAIRE: Au couvent,
Pour y chercher Irène, l'orpheline,
Notre nièce.

JEAN: Ah! Je devine;
Vous l'emmenez?

CÉSAIRE: Nous l'adoptons.
Elle nous tiendra compagnie
Remplaçant le fils que nous regrettons.

JEAN: Pour toutes vos bontés,
Mère, soyez bénie!

SCÈNE II

Les Mêmes, Divonne, Irène.

DIVONNE: C'est nous!
Jésus!
Quelle villasse que ce Paris!
Que de tours et de pas!
Que de voitures, de brouhahas
Et ce monde qui passe et passe!
Tous ces gens-là font les pressés . . .
Si ça leur plaît, grand bien leur fasse! Tous ces gens-là sont insensés . . .
Que je préfère être là-bas!
Ah! bou Dïou que je suis lasse!
Eh! qué!
Rien n'est encore en place!
Pauvre petit!

CÉSAIRE: C'est fini n'gronde pas!

JEAN: Bonjour, Maman!

DIVONNE: Bonjour, pitchoun!
Té! c'est Irène,
Ta cousine!

IRÈNE: Mon cousin, bonjour.

DIVONNE: (à Jean). Hein! qu'en dis-tu? fraîche comme le jour,
Belle comme une reine!
Vous vous êtes connus jadis sur mes genoux . . .
(A Césaire.)
Césaire, il faudra partir tout à l'heure
Allons, nous,
En attendant, visiter la demeure,
Voir s'il ne manque rien.
(A Jean.)
Pécaïre!
Embrasse-moi, vaurien!
(Ils sortent.)

CÉSAIRE: Keep still!

JEAN: (looking affectionately at a picture which hangs on the wall).
Home that I love,
With all its groves of myrtle in the lowlands,
And its vineyards that rise above.
Mother Divonne is at the door,
And when I see her there each day anew,
How well I'll do my work,
For my courage she will restore.

CÉSAIRE: And you will often think of us?

JEAN: Yes, Father.
And now, where is my mother?

CÉSAIRE: At the convent.
She's gone to fetch Irene, a niece of ours,
Who is an orphan.

JEAN: Ah! I suppose—
You'll take her home?

CÉSAIRE: We shall adopt her;
With her we shall not be so lonely,
She will take the place of the son we lose.

JEAN: For all your loving care,
Mother, take my blessing!

SCENE II

The same, Divonne, Irene.

DIVONNE: At last!
Good Lord!
What a monstrous place
This Paris is!
How they go, how they come!
Ah!
Good Lord! and the crowds, how they race!
The time that I have had!
All these people must be mad!
Oh, how I wish I were at home!
Ah!
Lordy me!
But I am weary!
Eh, what! still all upset, my deary?
Oh, you poor boy!

CÉSAIRE: All is done!
Don't you scold!

JEAN: Good-morning, Mother!

DIVONNE: Good-morning, ducky!
Eh! here's Irene!
She's your cousin.

IRENE: Cousin Jean, good-day!

DIVONNE: (to Jean). Well, what do you say?
Sweet and fresh as the day,
And as fair as a queen!
You have sat, you and she,
Together on my knee!—
Césaire! we must all be off before long!
Let us go, while we have time,
For a look round the place
To see that nothing's wrong.
Come, Piggy-wig!
Give me a kiss, scapegrace!
(Divonne and Césaire go out.)

SCÈNE III

Jean, Irène.

JEAN: Chers parents!
(A Irène.)
Vrai, je vous envie
D'aller avec eux passer votre vie,
De revoir mon pays de clarté, de soleil,
Les vergers rougissants dans le couchant vermeil . . .
(A lui-même.)
Mon pays où tout dit l'amour et l'espérance . . .
Qu'il est loin de mes yeux!
Qu'elle est loin ma Provence!

IRÈNE: C'était bien gentil autrefois
Quand nous allions tous les deux par les bois,
Avec Blanchet, notre âne si fidèle;
Ses clochettes sonnaient, il allait trottinant . . .
J'étais bien fière sur la selle!

JEAN: Et moi donc!
Vous tenant
Par la main, je me disais: "Qu'elle est belle!"

IRÈNE: Et vous rappelez-vous quand nous nous amusions,
Pour imiter l'image de la Bible . . .

JEAN: A la fuite en Égypte!

IRÈNE: Où nous étions,
Vous saint Joseph, et moi sainte Marie.

JEAN: Je m'en souviens, petite amie.

IRÈNE: Puis nous nous sauvions,
Pour fuir l'ordre d'Hérode, un monarque terrible,
Qui faisait massacrer par ses centurions
Les pauvres innocents . . .

TOUS DEUX: Ah! que nous tremblions!

IRÈNE: Vous souvient-il aussi lorsque nous revenions?
Que c'était beau, dans la prairie,
D'écouter l'appel du courlis
Ou le vent qui sifflait ses joyeux frizzelis!

JEAN: Je m'en souviens, petite amie.

IRÈNE: Et quand venait la nuit,
Tous les contes de la veillée
Revivaient á nos yeux.
Alors au moindre bruit
Je prenais votre bras, frissonnante, effrayée,
Et, sans oser parler, tous deux nous rentrions.

IRÈNE ET JEAN: Comme nous tremblions!

SCENE III

Jean, Irene.

JEAN: Parents dear!
(To Irene)
Yes, I envy you
A life to be passed in peace with those two,
Where you'll see our dear home of the land of the sun,
(To himself.)
And hopes that lay before me.
Ah, you are far from my sight,
Land of promise that bore me!

IRENE: It was sweet when in our childhood
We would journey through the wood,
We would journey through the wood together!
And good Blanchette, our donkey so confiding,
And her bells used to ring,
As along she would swing:
Oh, how proud I felt when riding!—Ah!

JEAN: Yes, and I, with your hand held in mine,
I used to think: "She is lovely!"

IRENE: Do you remember, too the things we played?
We'd make believe we were the Bible story—

JEAN: Of the flight into Egypt—

IRENE: When we would be Saint Joseph you, and I the Virgin Mary.

JEAN: It all comes back, my little fairy!

IRENE: Then we would run away
From Herod, to escape that fearful monster gory,
Whose fierce centurions he had sent forth to slay
Poor little innocents!
JEAN: Ah, great was our dismay!

BOTH: Ah, great was our dismay!

IRENE: Do you remember, too.
As homeward we would stray,
How sweet it was upon the prairie,
To listen to the curlew's cry,
Or to the joyful breezes that went whisp'ring by?

JEAN: I do, indeed, my little fairy!

IRENE: And when the night closed round,
All the tales we were wont to hear
Would take shape in the dark, and then, at ev'ry sound,
I would cling to your arm, all a-tremble, full of fear;
And, too afraid to speak, we'd steal along our way!

BOTH: Ah! great was our dismay!

JEAN: Puis, sur le seuil, en arrivant,
Irène m'embrassait, gentiment, doucement . . .

IRÈNE: Une soeur, sans pécher, peut embrasser son frère,
Et vous l'étiez pour moi . . .

JEAN: Ai-je changé pour toi?

IRÈNE: Ah!

JEAN: Donc en t'embrassant, je ne peux te déplaire, dis?

IRÈNE: Non, puisqu'une soeur peut embrasser son frère.

JEAN: Comme autrefois . . .

IRÈNE: Comme autrefois dans la prairie,
Par les sentiers et par les bois.

JEAN: Comme autrefois, petite amie!
(Jean embrasse Irène sur le front, très chastement.)

SCÈNE IV

Jean, Irène, Divonne, Césaire.

DIVONNE: (paraissant sur le seuil de la porte en tenant une lampe allumée. A Césaire). Regarde-les, bon Dieu!

CÉSAIRE: L'on ne vous en veut pas!
Non! sangdiou! au contraire.

DIVONNE: Il faut nous dire adieu!

JEAN: Moi, je vous reconduis . . .

DIVONNE: Reste là, bien tranquille,
Devant ta table et ne va pas te déranger.
C'est le travail qui dans la grande ville
Te préservera du danger.

CÉSAIRE: O ma brave Divonne!

DIVONNE: Petit, voici ta lampe . . .
Elle est vieille, mais bonne . . .
Jadis à sa clarté,
Dans la sérénité
Des soirs d'automne,
Je cousais tes habits d'enfant . . .
L'âme en repos, le coeur content,
Lorsque tu dormais dans ta berce.
A sa lueur je t'ai surpris,
Derrière les rideaux de Perse,
Souriant comme un ange à ceux du paradis.
Pour la dernière fois, aujourd'hui je te donne
Ce doux nom de petit . . .

JEAN: Maman!

CÉSAIRE: Divonne!

DIVONNE: Adieu!
Travaille!
Espère et sois un homme
Sous l'oeil consolant du bon Dieu.

JEAN: And at the gateway, very oft,
Irene gave a kiss, very sweet, very soft—

IRENE: It is not wrong for a sister so to kiss her brother,
And that you were to me—

JEAN: And have I changed for you?

IRENE: Ah!

JEAN: So, if I kiss you, you will not be offended?
What?

IRENE: No—because a sister may kiss her brother—

JEAN: As long ago—

IRENE: As long ago together
Among the woods we used to do!

JEAN: As long ago—
(Jean kisses Irene on the forehead.)

SCENE IV

The same, Divonne, Césaire.

DIVONNE: (appearing at the door carrying a lighted lamp; to Césaire). Just look at them, good Lord!

CÉSAIRE: We are not finding fault!
No, my word! we approve!

DIVONNE: (to Jean). And now bid us good-bye!

JEAN: No. I must see you off!

DIVONNE: No—you stay here, you sit down
And be still before your table here,
And do not let us break the charm.
It is your work, here in this monstrous town,
That will keep you safe from harm.

CÉSAIRE: O, my splendid Divonne!

DIVONNE: My child, now here's your lamp!
It is my old one, and by it
Many a winter's night,
I've sat beneath its light
When all was quiet,
Making you a baby vest,
Peace in my soul, my heart at rest.
In the shadows soft and uncertain
Asleep my cradled baby lies
Behind his flowery muslin curtain,
Smiling up like an angel to those in Paradise!
So now, for the last time, my dear son,
I will call you that sweet name,
"Little One."

JEAN: Mamma!

CÉSAIRE: Divonne!

DIVONNE: Good-bye!
Be faithful!
Have courage to be a man
And live in the light of God's love!

JEAN: Ah! vous deux, comme
Je vous aime!

DIVONNE: (à Césaire). Eh! vas-tu pleurer aussi . . .

IRÈNE: (à Jean). Vous laisser seul ici . . .
C'est triste!

JEAN: Il le faut!
A bientôt, j'espère.

CÉSAIRE ET DIVONNE: Oui, mon enfant . . .
Allons, adieu!

JEAN: Adieu, chers parents . . . bonne mère . . .
(A Irène.)
Petite soeur . . .

IRÈNE: Pauvre grand frère!

DIVONNE, CÉSAIRE ET IRÈNE:
Nous prierons pour toi le bon Dieu.
Nous prierons pour vous le bon Dieu.

TOUS: A bientôt!
Adieu!
Adieu!

SCÈNE V

Jean seul, puis Fanny.

JEAN: (seul). Ils s'en vont, c'est la solitude!
Maintenant que je les ai vus
Et que j'ai respiré cet air de quiétude,
De bonheurs à peine entrevus,
Je voudrais retourner vers la chère demeure.
Ah! pourquoi faut-il se quitter,
Au moment où l'on a tant besoin de s'aimer?
J'ai froid au coeur, je m'attriste et je pleure!
Hélas! ils sont partis et déjà loin de moi.
Me voilà seul à Paris dans la foule,
Qui gronde autour de moi comme gronde la houle.
Tant de monde et personne à soi!
Ils reverront notre chère demeure!
J'ai froid au coeur, je m'attriste et je pleure!
(Il se dirige vers la table, et s'asseyant, avec un soupir.)
À l'ouvrage!
(Il veut lire, mais s'interrompt bientôt.)
Pauvre Maman!
Que n'es-tu donc toujours auprès de ton enfant
Pour lui dire si tendrement:
"C'est le travail qui dans la grande ville Te préservera."
Le travail serait facile
En t'écoutant!
Et mon bon père . . . et ma petite amie . . .
Elle est si douce, si jolie!
Son baiser de chaste pureté
A laissé son parfum tout embaumer

JEAN: Parents dear,
Whom I have loved so well!

DIVONNE: (to Césaire, aside). Well, so you'll cry a little, too?

IRENE: (to Jean). It is sad to leave you here, so lonely!

JEAN: You must, but not for long I hope!

CÉSAIRE and DIVONNE: Yes, my child!
Come!
Good-bye!

JEAN: Good-bye, parents dear!
Little sister; dearest mother!

IRENE: My poor big brother!

DIVONNE, CÉSAIRE and IRENE:
And we shall pray for you.

ALL: Farewell!
Farewell!

SCENE V

Jean alone, afterwards Fanny.

JEAN: (alone). They are gone!
Ah, but this is lonely!
Now, indeed, since they all were here,
And since I now have breathed, though for a moment only,
Breathed that reposeful, sweet, happy air.
I could wish to return to the home of my childhood:
Why, ah why are we torn apart,
When most one feels the need of love in one's heart?
In Paris here, all alone!
While unheeding the crowd goes surging by
With the sound of a torrent:
Millions round me, yet alone am I!
They will see all for which I here am sighing;
My heart is sick—I am sad, I am crying!
Alas! they now are gone, already far from me!
(Sits down to work, taking his books, etc.)
Now to work! (with a sigh.)
Ah, Mother dear!
Why are you not with me, your child, and ever near
To repeat, so sweet and clear:
"It is your work here in this monstrous city
That will keep you safe."
—My work would all be easy
If you were here!
And my good father, my little cousin, too,
She is so sweet, so true.
And her kiss, so innocent and chaste, mon âme . . .

Je pourrais être heureux, si j'en faisais ma femme . . .

FANNY: (entre sans frapper et s'approche doucement). Bonjour, m'ami!

JEAN: Comment! c'est vous Fanny!

FANNY: Moi-même!
Tu croyais que c'était fini?
Non pas, quand j'aime
C'est pour longtemps.
Si depuis quelque temps
J'avais cessé de te rendre visite,
C'est que je savais
Que tu recevais
Tes parents . . . et cette petite . . .
Pas mal du tout . . . ta soeur? . . . mon compliment . . .

JEAN: Non, ma cousine.

FANNY: (plus froidement). Elle est gentille.
Il n'y a qu'un moment,
J'ai vu s'éloigner ta famille,
Je guettais son départ et me voici!

JEAN: Ma mère a voulu m'installer ici . . .
Dans mon petit chez moi, pour que mieux je travaille.

FANNY: Je comprends . . . il faut que je m'en aille.

JEAN: J'ai travaillé parfois lorsque vous étiez là . . .

FANNY: (s'installant). Alors, je reste et serai sage.
Voilà!
(Examinant la pièce.)
De jolis meubles . . . le grand paysage . . .
Du caractère et de la vérité!

JEAN: C'est notre maison de là-bas!

FANNY: Sous cet arbre
Comme on serait bien abrité
Pour s'aimer là!
(Apercevant la Sapho de Caoudal.)
Tiens, vous avez ce marbre?

JEAN: C'est la Sapho de Caoudal
Ne le connais-tu pas?

FANNY:
Mais . . . oui . . . c'est bien possible . . .
J'ai contre tout artiste un haine invincible . . .
Faut jamais m'en parler!
(A part.)
Ils m'ont fait tant de mal!

JEAN: Pourtant, l'art c'est bien beau pour égayer la vie,
Rendre le coeur meilleur, la route plus fleurie.

Has cast a perfumed spell over my soul for life:—
How happy might I be, should she become my wife!

FANNY: (entering without knocking, and approaching him softly). Good-morning, dear!

JEAN: What!
Fanny!
Not you?

FANNY: It is, though!
Did you fancy that all was over?
No no!
Once given, my love will last!
If now, for some time past,
I've not been here, but have kept myself shady,
It is because I knew your parents both were with you,
And that little lady—
Your sister, eh?
Not bad!
My compliments!

JEAN: No, she's my cousin.

FANNY: (more coldly). She's very sweet:—
But a moment ago I saw them go off down the street:
I was waiting for that, and now appear!

JEAN: My mother thought best to install me here,
So I might have a home, for the work I am doing.

FANNY: Oh, I see!
That means, I must be going—

JEAN: I've often done some work when you were with me here.

FANNY: Well then, I'll stay; I shall be good—so there!
(Looking round the room.)
What handsome pieces—what a splendid landscape!
That has some force!
What truth is there revealed!

JEAN: Yes, that is our house and the grove.

FANNY: In the grove one could be so nicely concealed,
While making love.
(Seeing Caoudal's Sappho).
Ah, you've one of these statues?

JEAN: Yes, that is Caoudal's Sappho.
You know it, do you not?

FANNY: Why—yes—I may have seen it—
I have for every artist an invincible hatred!
Never name one to me.
(Aside.)
They have injured me so!

JEAN: And yet, art is good, to make our life the lighter,
Art lifts the heart on high, and our path of life seems brighter.

FANNY: Ce que j'appelle beau, c'est d'avoir tes vingt ans,
Et comme toi, m'ami, d'être fier, d'être brave,
Et de sentir son coeur si fort que nulle entrave
Ne s'en vienne arrêter ses sublimes élans.
Ce que j'appelle beau, c'est toute créature
S'élevant par l'amour au-dessus des rancoeurs
Ou subissant la loi d'éternelle nature,
Deux êtres réunis par le sang de leurs coeurs.
(Jean l'embrasse. Fanny montrant sa table et l'y conduisant.) Travaille!

JEAN: Viens!

FANNY: (le forçant à s'asseoir à sa table). Travaille!
(A part et assombrie.)
Est-ce un rêve . . .
Mensonger
Venant, comme l'oiseau léger,
Bercer mon coeur et le frôler?
N'est ce qu'un rêve mensonger,
Une caresse vaine et brève?
Pauvre Sapho! n'est-ce qu'un rêve?
(Elle commence à fredonner:)
O Magali, ma tant amado,
Mete la testo au fenestroun:
Ecouto un pau aquesto aubado
De tambourin et de violoun.
Ei plen d'estello aperamount,
L'auro es toumbado;
Mai lis estello paliran
Quand te veran!

JEAN: (qui a écouté, fasciné, court à Fanny). Le vieil air du pays! ô ma Fanny que j'aime,
Je voudrais t'entendre toujours
Chanter ainsi la chanson des amours.
En t'écoutant, je ne suis plus moi-même . . .
Je t'aime!

FANNY: Il m'aime!
Et cependant, il faut se dire adieu!
Mieux vaut en finir tout de suite . . .
Pourrais-je m'en aller ensuite?

JEAN: Tu n'es pas libre?

FANNY: Dieu!
Libre de tout amour, puisqu'à toi je me donne!

JEAN: Tu m'appartiens, Fanny!

FANNY: (grave). Je ne sui à personne.

JEAN: (inquiet). A personne!

FANNY: A toi seul si tu veux de moi!
Ah! garde-moi toujours là . . . toujours avec toi.

JEAN: Je suis pauvre.

FANNY: Ah, what I call the good, is to be twenty-one,
And like you, my friend, to be proud and noble,
To feel one's heart so strong, no fears nor any trouble
Can prevent or delay things superbly begun.
Yes, what I call the good, is any living creature
That can rise through its love high above petty arts,
And will submit alone to the law of its nature,
Ah, yes!
Two beings who are joined by the blood of their hearts!
(Jean kisses Fanny, who then leads him to his table.)
To work now!

JEAN: Come!

FANNY: (forcing him to sit down at his table). To work now!
(Aside, as if saddened.)
Do I dream an empty thing,
That like a bird would lightly wing
Its way into my heart, and sing?
Do I but dream an empty thing?
Alas!
A single kiss, to nothing streaming—
Poor Sappho—ah! am I dreaming?
(She begins to hum.)
O Magali, beloved maidie,
Look out and let your face be seen.
And listen while we serenade you
With violin and tambourine.
Full many a star in golden sheen
Shines on high, fair lady;
But all the stars will pale and flee
When they see you!

JEAN: (listens fascinated and runs to Fanny). It is the old country air!
It is you that I adore,
My Fanny, and would hear
For ever singing, as you do now,
That old love-song so dear!
When you I hear, I know myself no more!
I love you!
I love you!

FANNY: He love mes, but we two must say good-bye;
Best end this at once, and for ever—
If not, I could not leave you then, ah, never!

JEAN: Are you not free?

FANNY: I?
Free from all other love,
Since mine is yours alone.

JEAN: Then you belong to me!

FANNY: (seriously). I belong to no one.

JEAN: (anxiously). What, to no one?

FANNY: To you, then—that is, if you care!
Ah! keep me here with you, dear,
Oh, let me stay here, always here!

JEAN: I am poor—

FANNY: Qu'importe!

JEAN: Oh! non, c'est impossible!

FANNY: Pourquoi, dis, n'est-ce possible? . . .
Pendant que tu travaillerais,
Sans bruit, moi je m'occuperais
Du ménage,
Si bien que toi me regardant,
Fraîche et coquette en mon tablier blanc,
Tu m'en aimerais davantage.
Et le dimanche nous irions
Tous les deux, des chansons aux lèvres,
Près de l'étang de Villebon!
Nous perdre dans les bois de Meudon
Et de Sèvres,
Ah! comme nous ririons!
Puis, nous déjeûnerions
Sur l'herbe . . .
Et reprenant notre chemin . . .
Je te cueillerais une gerbe
De beaux lilas et de jasmin.

JEAN: Tu me cueillerais une gerbe
De beaux lilas et de pasmin.
Ah! laisse-moi t'aimer de toute ma tendresse,
Reste là dans mes bras, tes beaux yeux dans mes yeux.
Qui plus que nous peut être heureux!
Viens, ma Fanny, viens ma maîtresse!

FANNY: Ah! laisse-moi t'aimer de toute ma tendresse,
Je suis là, dans tes bras, tes chers yeux dans mes yeux.
Qui plus que nous peut être heureux!
De mes baisers, prends la caresse!

JEAN: Aimons-nous!

FANNY: Aimer est si doux.

ENSEMBLE: Voici la nuit, enfermons-nous!

FIN DE L'ACTE DEUXIÈME.

ACTE TROISIÈME

Dans le Jardin d'un Restaurant a Ville D'Avray, un Dimanche.

SCÈNE PREMIÈRE

Jean, Fanny (à la fenêtre d'un petit chalet du jardin.)

FANNY: Le beau soleil pour les amours!
(A Jean qui paraît à côté d'elle.)
Sortons-nous?

JEAN: Sortons?
(Il va pour l'embrasser.)

FANNY: Prends bien garde, . . .
Un vieux ménage . . . on nous regarde.

FANNY: What matter!

JEAN: Oh no, that is impossible!

FANNY: But why? come, tell me why it should be?
Say why?
While you are hard at work, you see,
I quietly shall busy be
With housekeeping;
In fact, no doubt when I am seen
In my coquettish apron clean,
You will love me best when I'm sweeping!
Our Sunday holiday we'd take
At Villebon beside the lake;
Or we will both get lost in the woods
Of Meudon, or at Sèvres!
In joy the hours will pass:
We'll lunch upon the grass,
And gaily, as we return on our way
For you I'll gather a bouquet,
Of every flower that blows in May.

JEAN: For me you'll gather a bouquet,
Of every flower that blows in May.
Ah, let me, dear, love you with all my affection!
Ah, you must stay in my arms,
Let your eyes look in mine:
Who else could know such love divine?
Come, my sweet mistress, Fanny mine!

FANNY: Ah, let me, dear, love you with all my affection!
Ah, I am here in your arms,
Let your eyes look in mine:
Who else could know such love divine?
Ah, take my kisses, take my love!

JEAN: I love you!

FANNY: It is sweet to love!

BOTH: Forever more, as time shall prove!

END OF SECOND ACT.

ACT III

In the garden of a restaurant at Ville d'Avray.
(On Sunday.)

SCENE I

Jean, Fanny (by the window of a small chalet in the garden.)

FANNY: (to Jean who appears beside her). Shall we go out?

JEAN: We will!
(about to kiss her.)

FANNY: Oh, take care!
So old a pair—
Some one might spy us!

JEAN: Un ménage d'un an!
Les jours
Ont passé vite!
Oh! Fanny, ma maîtresse!
Tu me prends tout entier.

FANNY: Non, pas encore assez!
Je te veux plus à moi, je veux que ma tendresse
N'ait plus le souci des instants passés.

JEAN: Voilà pourquoi cette campagne
Me plaît, car pendant la belle saison,
Dans notre petite maison,
Nous vivrons tous les deux bien seuls . . .

FANNY: Ta compagne
Chaque soir t'attendra . . .

TOUS DEUX: Lorsque son ami reviendra,
Dans les chemins où le soleil décline,
Nous irons en rêvant de baisers, de chansons,
Sous les bois dont la cime s'incline,
Au doux gazouillement des merles, des pinsons.

JEAN: (lui prenant la main et voulant l'attirer à lui.) Ah! Fanny!

FANNY: Voyons, soyons sages,
Donne-moi ton bras; te sentir ainsi,
Tout près de moi, comme ceci . . .
Je suis fière, m'ami.

TOUS DEUX: Viens, sur nos deux visages.
Plus radieux que ce beau jour.
Ceux qui passent liront notre fervent amour.
(Tous deux s'éloignent.)

SCÈNE II

(Au moment où Jean et Fanny disparaissent, entrent Caoudal, La Borderie, quelques Jeunes Gens et Jeunes Femmes.)
(Caoudal paraît au fond, il regarde l'enseigne du restaurant et fait signe, gaiement, aux amis que l'on ne voit pas encore. La Borderie le suit de près et agit de même.)

CAOUDAL: Par ici! par ici!

LA BORDERIE: Nous serons à merveille.

CAOUDAL: (montrant l'enseigne): "A la friture sans pareille!"

JEAN: You've been mine for a year!
The days fly swiftly by us!
Oh my dear, my Fanny,
You hold me all in all!

FANNY: No, not enough as yet!
You must be still more mine;
My love will not brook
Any yearnings for the past,
Nor permit regret!

JEAN: And that is why I shall be glad to come here;
Here, my love, when summer has come,
We'll live in our own little home,
And can have it all to ourselves.

FANNY: Your companion every night will be here,
And then,

BOTH: When her love shall appear,
In a dream full of kisses and song we shall roam
Through the woods, we shall roam in a dream
Where tree-tops above us are swaying,
And hear the murmuring stream
Where the chaffinches come—we shall roam in a dream!

JEAN: (taking her hand and trying to draw her to him). Fanny dear!

FANNY: Come come!
Don't disgrace us!
Let me take your arm,
Let me feel you there quite close to me,
That is the way—so!
There, I feel proud today!

BOTH: Come!
Now upon our faces,
Brighter than those bright skies above,
Those who see us will read
Our ardent, fervent love!
(They go off slowly.)

SCENE II

(As Fanny and Jean disappear, enter Caoudal, La Borderie and some young people.)
(Caoudal has appeared at the back. He looks at the sign of the restaurant and beckons gaily to his friends, who are not yet in sight. La Borderie follows him closely, and does the same.)

CAOUDAL: This way!
This way!

LA BORDERIE: This way!
This way!

CAOUDAL: (pointing to the sign, and reading). "The Sans Pareil Restaurant."—

LA BORDERIE: (même jeu). Ce restaurant
Est excellent.
(Apparaît alors toute la petite troupe des amis et amies, tous très gais, très bruyants.)

CAOUDAL, LA BORDERIE: Ohé! Patron.

TOUS: Ohé patron!

CAOUDAL: Qu'on se dépêche!
Nous avons tous la gorge sèche . . .

TOUS: Non! non! pas le garçon!
Le patron! le patron!

LE PATRON: Bonjour messieurs, bonjour mesdemoiselles.
Ah! monsieur Caoudal! voulez-vous déjeuner
Dans l'arbre ou bien sous les tonnelles?

CAOUDAL: Il s'agit de nous apporter . . .
De ton vin fameux entre mille.

LES HOMMES: Nous nous y connaissons, Corbleu!

CAOUDAL: Donne du blanc.

LES HOMMES: Mais pas du bleu!

LE PATRON: Ah! monsieur, soyez tranquille,
Vous serez bien servi!

CAOUDAL: Puis, ce soir pour dîner.
Nous reviendrons . . .
Que vas-tu bien nous cuisiner?

LE PATRON: Mais, ce que vous voudrez . . .

CAOUDAL: Une énorme friture!

LE PATRON: Deux poulets marengo . . .
Plus, un fort beau gigot.

CAOUDAL: Ce sera bon . . .

LE PATRON: Je vous le jure!

TOUS: (en charge). C'est entendu!
C'est convenu!

CAOUDAL: Quant à toi, tavernier du diable!
Si nous ne trouvons pas en nous mettant à table
Des mets délicats, onctueux, Délicieux,
Et copieux,
C'est toi qu'avec furie
Et frénésie,
Nous embrochons,
Découpons,
Et mangeons
A la sauce tartare.
Donc, agis de ton mieux
Si tu ne veux,
Par nos estomacs creux,
Être l'hôte du Styx ou de l'affreux Ténare!

LA BORDERIE: (continuing to read the sign). "This restaurant is quite the best."
(Enter the entire little troop of friends of both sexes, all very jolly and noisy.)

CAOUDAL and LA BORDERIE:
What ho!
The House!

THE FRIENDS: What ho!
The House!

CAOUDAL: Come, get a gait on!
You've got some thirsty throats to wait on!

ALL: No, no, no!
No waiters, no!
Send the Boss!
Send the Boss!

KEEPER OF RESTAURANT: Good-morning, Sirs!
Good-morning to you, ladies!
Ah, Monsieur Caoudal!
Which do you prefer—the tree-top,
Or below, where it's shady?

CAOUDAL: First, there's this:
Go bring us some wine,
Your marvelous wine, in a hurry!

THE MEN: We are all connoisseurs!
That's flat!

CAOUDAL: Let us have white—

THE MEN: Not if it's flat!

KEEPER OF RESTAURANT: Pray do not worry,
I've the best wine there is!

CAOUDAL: And tonight we will all come back to dine.
What have you in the way of fish?

KEEPER OF RESTAURANT: Ah—why, whatever you wish!

CAOUDAL: An enormous "friture!"

KEEPER OF RESTAURANT: Two nice chickens with ham.
Then a fine leg of lamb.

CAOUDAL: That will be good.

KEEPER OF RESTAURANT: You may be sure!

ALL: It is agreed! and understood!

CAOUDAL: As for you, caterer to the devil,
Unless we all shall find,
When we sit down to table,
Food that's to our mind,
Positive, comparative, superlative,
It is you whom we,
With fierce and frantic fury,
Tonight shall split
And roast as meat
On your own spit,
And shall eat
With a sauce tartare!
So do your best,
Unless you wish to fare
Through stomachs void and bare,
To play host on the Styx!—
Now you know where you are, sir!

TOUS: C'est toi qu'avec furie
Et frénésie,
Nous embrochons,
Découpons,
Et mangeons!

LE PATRON: C'est promis!

LA BORDERIE: (tragiquement). Il y va de ta vie!

CAOUDAL: Ecoute encore:
Il faut que notre table soit servie
A sept heures . . . ou la mort!

TOUS: Ou la . . .

LE PATRON: (pressé, il achève la phrase). Mort!
(aux garçons.)
Qu'on apporte d'abord
Des biscuits et du vin . . . qu'on se presse!
Allez . . . courez!
Dépêchez et servez!
(On apporte les verres et le vin.)

CAOUDAL: Attention! croyez en ma vieillesse
Qui regrette bien ses vingt ans,
Amusez-vous quand il est temps:
(Levant son verre.)
A la santé de la jeunesse!

TOUS: A la santé de la jeunesse!!!
(Des musiciens ambulants traversent la route au fond du jardin, ce qui permet aux joyeux compagnons d'esquisser un pas de quadrille. Mais bientôt les musiciens sont chassés par les garçons du restaurant et s'éloignent.)

SCÈNE III

Les Mêmes, Jean.

CAOUDAL: (apercevant Jean). Tiens, vous voilà!

JEAN: (saluant). Messieurs!

CAOUDAL: La rencontre opportune!
Ces cheveux, ce teint de soleil
Si jeune et si vermeil,
Pour eux je donnerais bien plus que ma fortune!

LA BORDERIE: Vous habitez par ici?

JEAN: Là, tout près!
J'aime les bois et leurs ombrages frais,
On vit mieux qu'à Paris, et tranquille on respire
L'air embaumé dans un calme infini.

CAOUDAL: Toujours avec Sapho?

JEAN: (très surpris, ne comprenant pas encore). Sapho!

CAOUDAL: Mais oui, Fanny!
Fanny Legrand, Sapho, le beau modèle.

LA BORDERIE and FRIENDS: It is you whom we,
With fierce and frantic fury,
Tonight shall split
And roast as meat
On your own spit,
And shall eat, etc.

KEEPER OF RESTAURANT: No mistake!

LA BORDERIE: (tragically). Your life pays the forfeit!

CAOUDAL: Once more draw near:
We wish to have our dinner
Laid before us at seven—or you die!

ALL: Or you—

KEEPER OF RESTAURANT: (hurriedly spoken). Die!
(To the waiters.)
Go and fetch, first of all,
Some biscuits and wine:
Make haste!
Don't crawl!
(They bring glasses and wine.)

CAOUDAL: Give ear to me: I'm old, but I'm truthful,
And wish I were twenty today;
Have the time of your lives while you may:
Let us drink, then, to all that's youthful!
(raising his glass.)

LA BORDERIE and FRIENDS: Let us drink now to all that's youthful!
Hurrah!
Hurray! and away!
(Some strolling musicians pass the restaurant, and stop at the back of the garden.—They go off, playing.—Jean appears, and is seen by Caoudal.)

SCENE III

The Same, Jean.

CAOUDAL: (to Jean). Ah! is it you?

JEAN: (greeting them). Good-day!

CAOUDAL: What a fortunate meeting!—
What a skin, what hair on his head!
So young, so rosy-red!
For those I would exchange
All fame and fortune fleeting!

LA BORDERIE: And do you live out here?

JEAN: There, quite near.
I love these woods, with shadows cool beneath;
What is Paris to this,
Where one breathes at one's leisure
Pure, fragrant air in such infinite peace?

CAOUDAL: And you're with Sappho still?

JEAN: (much surprised, failing to understand). Sappho?

CAOUDAL: Fanny, of course—
Fanny Legrand,
The lovely model, Sappho!

JEAN: (à part). Quoi!
Sapho!
Ma Fanny!
La Sapho!
C'était elle!
(Après avoir hésité.)
Non, c'est fini!
Je ne la vois plus.

CAOUDAL: Elle est jolie . . . et pire!
On ne la quitte pas facilement . . .
Elle s'attache à vous . . . et l'on souffre pour elle.
L'amour de Sapho causa plus d'un tourment.

LA BORDERIE: La rupture toujours fut terrible et cruelle.

JEAN: (à part). Ah! mon Dieu!

UN GROUPE D'AMIS: C'est bien vrai.

CAOUDAL: Vraiment.
En ménage, elle a peu de chance!
Et tenez, ce graveur . . .

LA BORDERIE: Froment!

CAOUDAL: N'eut-il pas la démence
De faire un faux billet, et ce fut la prison . . .
Ah! je la vois encore
Envoyant un baiser à ce pauvre garçon,
Criant: je t'aime, je t'adore!
Courage! nous nous reverrons!
M'ami, m'ami je suis ta femme,
Et de toute mon âme!
Oui, nous nous aimerons!

JEAN: (à lui-même, brisé). M'ami!

CAOUDAL: Fini, maintenant!

LA BORDERIE: Je l'espère!

CAOUDAL: Elle doit être chez son père . . .
A la campagne, avec son enfant.

LA BORDERIE: Oui, le fils de ce pauvre Froment.

JEAN: Son enfant!

CAOUDAL: Qu'avez-vous?

JEAN: Je mentais!
Auprès de cette femme,
Depuis un an, j'avilissais mon âme,
Grisé par le mensonge et lui donnant mon coeur!
Croyez-moi, je vous en conjure,
J'ignorais tout, ma parole d'honneur!
Je vous avais menti, mais, vrai Dieu!
Je vous jure
Que tout est fini désormais;
Je la méprise autant qu'autrefois je l'aimais.
(Fanny à ce moment apparaît radieuse.)

JEAN: (aside). What!
Sappho!
Fanny, she?
She, Sappho?
Can it be so?
(after some hesitation.)
No, that is past—
She's not with me now.

CAOUDAL: Pretty, at least—good measure!
It's sometimes rather hard to get away!
When she becomes attached, one's case is distressing.
Ah, Sappho! your love caused much pain in its day!

LA BORDERIE: And the breach, when it came, always painful, depressing!

JEAN: (aside). Oh my God!

THE FRIENDS: Eh, Sappho!

CAOUDAL: In all her affairs unlucky, chaotic!—
Then there was—that engraver—

LA BORDERIE: De Kay!

CAOUDAL: Who was so idiotic,
He counterfeited notes—that was jail, fast enough;
Oh, I can see her now,
Standing kissing her hand to the poor, silly muff,
And she: "I love you, I adore you!
Have courage! we must bear the pain!
My love! my love!
I am your wife,
Your wife—you're my soul and my life!
My love! yes! we shall meet again!"

JEAN: (to himself; overcome). My love!

CAOUDAL: But now, it is done!

LA BORDERIE: (laughing). Well, rather!

CAOUDAL: I fancy she is with her father;
She goes to see her child, I dare say.

LA BORDERIE: Yes, the son of that poor De Kay.

JEAN: Her child!

CAOUDAL: What's the matter?

JEAN: (breathlessly). It was a lie—yes!
For a year,
By living with this creature,
I have defiled my soul,
And have been drunk with lies,
While giving her control
Of my heart:
—I did not know—
Yes, I swear that is so!
I lied at first, I own,
But before God now I swear,
All's over and done—evermore,
I shall despise her
As much as I loved her before!
(At this instant Fanny appears, radiant.)

SCÈNE IV

Les Mêmes, Fanny.

CAOUDAL: (l'apercevant).
Grands dieux! Sapho!

JEAN: (se jetant sur elle). Sapho! quelle infamie!
Je t'ai tenue entre mes bras,
Et je t'appelais mon amie!
Non . . . non . . . je ne me doutais pas
Qu'une femme pouvait ainsi briser une âme!
Ah! j'ai honte! je souffre et je voudrais partir,
Rachetant mon erreur par un cruel martyr,
Et maudire à jamais le nom de cette femme.
Fanny, moi qui t'aimais, maintenant je sais tout,
Je connais d'aujourd'hui ton passé misérable
Que tu m'avais caché . . . tu te riais de moi . . .
En captivant mon coeur, tu surprenais ma foi;
Ma tendresse
Est changée en dégoût;
Redeviens la Sapho, redeviens leur maîtresse,
Tu m'entends, je sais tout!

FANNY: (à part). Ils ont parlé, les lâches!
(A Jean).
C'est fini, n'est-ce pas? . . . Tu te fâches,
C'est bon! retourne chez les tiens . . .
Il fallait que ça se termine,
C'est fait!
Va donc retrouver ta cousine . . .
Tu seras bien heureux là-bas,
A moi, tu ne penseras pas . . .
Tu vivras tranquille,
Entre ton papa, ta maman . . .
Allons . . . décampe,
file . . .
Je te donne congé . . . va-t'en!

JEAN: Eh bien! . . . je pars . . . brisé par la souffrance,
Je pars . . . pour ne plus te revoir,
Le coeur meurtri de honte et d'affreux désespoir!
Adieu bonheur, douce espérance!
Adieu!
(Jean s'éloigne précipitamment.)

FANNY: (terrifiée, courant après lui). M'ami! m'ami! Ils t'ont menti!
(Revenant sur le groupe formé par Caoudal, La Borderie et leurs amis.)
Mais, maintenant qu'il est parti,
Messieurs les beaux parleurs, les malins, les bravaches . . .
Non, je ne vous crains pas, vous êtes tous des lâches!

SCENE IV

The Same, Fanny.

CAOUDAL: (seeing her). Ye gods!
Sappho!

JEAN: (starts to rush at her). Sappho!
(to Fanny, very violently). Oh shame on you!
To me, to me who loved you so,
And poured my affection on you,
Yet I did not, could not know,
Alas! that a woman
Could be so cruel, so inhuman!
Ah! the shame!—
I suffer,
And I must leave this place,
Till my fault I redeem
In pain and in disgrace,
While for ever I curse
The name of such a woman!
Ah, Fanny, I loved you well!
Oh, Fanny! and today I know all:
For today I have heard
Of your hideous past
That you concealed from me;
You held my heart so fast,
You stole my faith most dear.—
Fanny! go laugh and jeer
At me!
All my love
Has been changed to gall!
Go, be Sappho once more,
Go and be as before!
Understand, I know all!

FANNY: (aside). Ah, they've told him, the cowards.
(To Jean:)
Here it ends, does it not?
You are angry—all right!
Go back where you belong,
It was time there should be an end:
It's done! go back to your dear little friend:
For me you need not have a thought.
You'll be happy in that sweet spot,
(ironically and vulgarly.)
Where you will not worry
Papa and Mamma, no doubt.
Go on! be off there! hurry!
You have got your discharge—get out!

JEAN: All right!
I'll go!
I'll go!
And I shall not return!
Good-bye!
(He goes quickly away.)

FANNY: (terrified, calls despairingly). My love! my love! it is a lie!
And now he's gone—but here I am.
(Advancing, and growing more excited.)
And so you had to tell,
Oh you beasts and blowhards!
No, I am not afraid,
You are a pack of cowards!

LA BORDERIE ET TOUS LES AMIS: Tu nous insultes, toi? (Rires moqueurs.)	ALL THE OTHERS: So, you insult us, you! (They laugh sneeringly.)
FANNY: Et vous savez pourquoi. Mon bonheur vous a fait envie; Cet enfant dont l'amour avait changé ma vie, Par votre faute m'a quittée! (A tous.) Ici, l'on s'est vanté Racontant tout, ma honte, ma misère, Étalant au grand jour autant de lâcheté! (A La Borderie.) Et toi, vipère, Toi qui m'a fais tant pleurer, tant souffrir, Ta haine est donc inassouvie, Puisqu'en brisant mon coeur qui se régénérait, Tu me prends plus que cache la vie! Je cachais mon amour, comme on un trésor, Vous me l'avez volé . . . mais je veux vivre encore, Pour vous maudire tous, pour me venger, peut-être . . . Et vous faire souffrir ce que souffre mon être.	FANNY: And you—know why—you do:— You hated—to see me—so happy.— And this boy, whose pure love Had changed my very nature, Through what you've done, has gone away— And here you've all made gay In telling him my story, my affliction, Laying bare your vile souls Here in the light of day! And you, vile creature! (To La Borderie.) You who caused me so much pain, so much grief, Is not your hatred sated yet, But you must break a heart Beginning to forget, And destroy more than my life, alas? For my love I concealed As a miser his gold, And this you stole from me: But I shall live, you'll see, And I shall curse you all, And make you suffer, too, As I myself have suffered!
TOUS: (avec un geste de révolte contre Fanny). Sapho!	ALL: (roused against Fanny). Sappho!
FANNY: (les bravant). Laissez-moi! Désormais, Mon âme est morte pour aimer . . . Mais, je vous hais! (S'élançant sur La Borderie qui souriait méchamment.) Canaille!	FANNY: (defying them). Let me go! From now on My heart is dead to love! But I can hate!— You blackguards!

ACTE QUATRIÈME

ACT IV

En Avignon. (Le domaine des Gaussin.—A droite, la maison.—Devant, un jardin de ferme, avec un puits à gauche.—Au fond, le Rhône et le panorama de Villeneuve.)	AT AVIGNON. (The homestead of the Gaussins.—To the right, the house.—In front a garden with a well on the left.—At the back the Rhone, and the country Villeneuve.)

SCÈNE PREMIÈRE

SCENE I

Jean, Irène, Césaire, Divonne sont à table, silencieux et inquiets de la tristesse de Jean. Bientôt, sur un signe de Divonne, Césaire et Irène se lèvent et s'éloignent.	Jean, Irene, Césaire, Divonne, are at table, silent and distressed at Jean's sadness. Presently at a sign from Divonne, Césaire and Irene get up and go off.
DIVONNE: (s'approchant alors de Jean). Eh bien?	DIVONNE: (going to Jean). And now?
JEAN: Mère!	JEAN: Mother!
DIVONNE: Pitchoun!tu de tournes, la tête! Ecoute-moi, voyons, qui t' arrête?	DIVONNE: My dear! You won't look at your mother! Answer me, come now! what's the bother?
JEAN: Je ne sais . . .	JEAN: I don't know.
DIVONNE: Vé, ne mens pas! Raconte un peu . . . là-bas Quelque chose, j'en suis bien sûre . . .	DIVONNE: Pooh! Do not lie! Come, tell me now; up there, I am sure, something strange befell you!
JEAN: Rien, rien, je vous assure . . .	JEAN: No, no! or I should tell you!
DIVONNE: Té, ce brusque retour! Tu te sauvais . . .	DIVONNE: Eh, then why not stay there? You ran away—
JEAN: Non, non!	JEAN: No, no!
DIVONNE: Quelque mauvaise femme Qui me prenait ton âme, Quelque méchant amour! Ne cache rien à ta maman Divonne . . . Tu sais comme elle t'aime, et qu'au fond elle est bonne.	DIVONNE: Some wicked girl, I know, dear, Who would not let you go, dear; Some wretched love-affair! So tell me all, for I shall not reprove you; You know that I am just, and you know that I love you!
JEAN: Eh bien, vous m'avez deviné . . . Mais c'est fini.	JEAN: Well then, what you say is the truth. But, it is past.
DIVONNE: Tu crois?	DIVONNE: You think?
JEAN: C'était une folie Qu'aujourd'hui je regrette et que j'oublie. Dites, Maman, m'avez-vous pardonné?	JEAN: I very much regret it, For I see it was folly, and shall forget it. Can you forgive such a madness of youth?
DIVONNE: Te pardonner, petit! C'est déjà fait, je t'aime . . . Et mon coeur, pour le tien, donnerait tout son sang.	DIVONNE: Can I forgive, my dear! Why, it is done: I love you, And my heart would pour out all its lifeblood for thine.
JEAN: Si vous lisiez au profond de moi-même Ah! vous verriez ce que le mien ressent.	JEAN: Could you but read all my thoughts, it would prove you How very grateful is this heart of mine.
DIVONNE: Une maman Devine tout, les chagrins, les alarmes.	DIVONNE: A mother quickly guesses A son's distress And his fears.
JEAN: Pour les partager.	JEAN: Suffers in his place!
DIVONNE: Oui, pour les chasser, Et d'un fils, effacer les larmes Par un baiser! Allons . . . pas de faiblesse, Et si par instants la tristesse Te prend encore, dis-moi tout, n'est-ce pas?	DIVONNE: Yes, or would efface And wipe away her loved one's tears In her embrace! But come! we must be brave, And if for a while you should have Times of sadness still, Tell me all, do you see?
JEAN: Ouvrez-moi donc bien grands vos bras . . .	JEAN: Then open wide your arms to me!
DIVONNE: Viens, mon petit, que je te presse Comme autrefois, Lorsque à ma voix Tu t'endormais chaque soir dans ta berce.	DIVONNE: Come, little one, and let me hold you, As long ago I'd hold you so, And sing to sleep, and in my arms enfold you. Be at rest, my darling child, No more regrets, nor any anger, And always now we'll stay together, Always keep each other's love! We shall, for ever, for ever!
JEAN: Comme autrefois, A votre voix, Je ne sens plus le chagrin qui m'oppresse.	JEAN: As long ago, as long ago, Your voice has ended all my trouble! It is done! It is done! No more regrets, nor any anger. Together! together! keep each other's love! We shall, for ever, for ever!

DIVONNE: Ah! calme-toi, mon pauvre enfant!

JEAN: Maman!
C'est fini, je n'ai plus ni regrets, ni colère . . .
Ensemble, nous resterons!

DIVONNE: Oh! comme nous nous aimerons!

TOUS DEUX: Oui, comme nous nous aimerons!

DIVONNE: Courons prévenir ton père;
Ah! qu'il sera joyeux
De voir enfin renaître dans tes yeux
L'espoir des jours meilleurs et des moments heureux!
Mon chéri . . .

JEAN: Ma bonne mère!
(Divonne sort.)

DIVONNE: But come, let us tell your father;
Ah! with what glad surprise
Will he perceive returning to your eyes
The hope of better days, and happy times to come!
Dearest son!

JEAN: My darling mother!
(Divonne goes off.)

SCÈNE II

Jean, Irène.

IRÈNE: (qui est rentrée, à Jean).
Vous souffrez donc?
Pourquoi songer ainsi?
Dites-moi . . .

JEAN: Pas à vous!

IRÈNE: Mais je suis votre amie . . .
Souvenez-vous, saint Joseph et Marie . . .
Quel est votre souci?
Si j'avais un jour quelque peine,
Pour la conter, ja m'en irais
Vers mon ami; je lui dirais
Le chagrin dont mon âme est pleine.
Sans doute, il me prendrait la main,
Il me dirait une parole
Qui fait sourire, vous console,
Et rend plus doux le lendemain.
Ce serait un rayon d'aurore
Qui dissiperait mes tourments.
Mon coeur refleurirait encore
Sous le clair baiser du printemps.

SCENE II

Jean, Irene.

IRENE: (who has entered, to Jean). Are you not well?
Why so sadly inclined?
Tell me all!

JEAN: Not to you!

IRENE: Am I not still your friend?
Please recollect, we were "Joseph and Mary!"
Now what is on your mind?
If some day my heart should be aching,
I'm very sure
That I should go and seek my friend,
And tell him all
The distress that my heart was breaking.
And he no doubt my hand would hold,
He'd bid me speak, and he would hear me,
And give some counsel that would cheer me,
And day would seem less dark and cold.
On my path would he sunshine pour,
Far away the clouds would he fling;
Ah, until my heart should bloom once more
Beneath the glowing kiss of the spring!

SCÈNE III

Les Mêmes, Césaire.

CÉSAIRE: (accourant). Jean!

JEAN: Mon père!

CÉSAIRE: (à Irène). Va-t'en vite
Retrouver Divonne!

IRÈNE: Mais qu'avez-vous?

CÉSAIRE: Rien! rien, obéis, ma petite!

SCENE III

The Same, Césaire.
(Césaire hurries in, in consternation.)

CÉSAIRE: (entering hastily). Jean!

JEAN: Why, Father!

CÉSAIRE: (to Irene). Run away,
Irene, and find Divonne!

IRENE: (anxiously). But—what is this?

CÉSAIRE: Go, go! run away, as I tell you!

IRÈNE: Vous semblez en courroux Et . . .

CÉSAIRE: Va donc, et laisse-nous!
(Irène sort.)

IRENE: Why, you seem to be cross!—And—

CÉSAIRE: Go, please go, and leave us here!
(Irene goes away.)

SCÈNE IV

Césaire, Jean.

CÉSAIRE: (à Jean). Mon pauvre enfant là! . . . chez nous, elle arrive!

JEAN: (comprenant). Elle est là?

CÉSAIRE: Te demandant.

JEAN: Sapho!

CÉSAIRE: Pour ignorer ton amour imprudent,
Je n'ai pas l'âme assez naïve.
Du courage, surtout!

JEAN: Oh! désormais,
Je serai courageux . . .
Je tremblais tout à l'heure . . .
Mais maintenant, qu'elle menace ou pleure,
Je ne faiblirai pas . . .
Père . . . je le promets!
(Césaire s'éloigne.)

SCENE IV

Césaire, Jean.

CÉSAIRE: (to Jean). Ah, my poor boy!
She has come, she is here!

JEAN: (with comprehension). She is here!

CÉSAIRE: And asks for you!

JEAN: Sappho!

CÉSAIRE: Ah, I am not such a simple old soul
As not to know your foolish passion.
Above all things, be brave!

JEAN: Oh! after this I shall be strong enough.
I've behaved like a coward,
But after this, though she should weep and threaten,
I never shall give way:
Father, I promise you!
(Césaire goes out.)

SCÈNE V

Fanny, Jean.
(Fanny, qui s'avance lentement, regarde autour d'elle. Elle aperçoit Jean, va vers lui très vite, puis tout à coup s'arrête. Un silence.)

FANNY: (très douce). Ne m'en veux pas d'être venue . . .
L'on ne se quitte pas sans les derniers adieux.
Loin de toi je souffrais d'une peine inconnue,
Maintenant, je te vois, je vais mieux.

JEAN: Je ne vous en veux pas.

FANNY: (avec douleur). Tu dis: vous!
Je suis lasse . . .
J'ai tant pleuré . . . je ne sais pas comment
Je suis vivante et parle encore en ce moment.
Toute autre en fut morte à ma place.
(Anxieusement.)
Je suis changée?
Oui, n'est-ce pas?

JEAN: Toujours vous habitez là-bas?

FANNY: Mais où veux-tu que j'aille?
J'ai là des souvenirs qui me font espérer . . .
Et parfois, cessant de pleurer
Ne pensant à rien, je travaille . . .
Quelquefois, le matin, je m'éveille en riant;

SCENE V

Fanny, Jean.
(Fanny comes in slowly and looks about her.—She sees Jean and runs towards him, as if to throw her arms about his neck.—She stops.—A pause.)

FANNY: (very sweetly). Oh, blame me not that I have sought you!
You left without a word to me, never a one;
I have known unendurable sorrow without you:
Now I see you again, it is gone!

JEAN: I am not blaming you.

FANNY: You are cold!
So much grieving
Has worn me out, and I do not know how
I still should be alive, and speak as I do now.
No one in my place would be living—
(Anxiously.)
And I have changed?
Yes! have I not?

JEAN: You still are living where you were?

FANNY: Why, where should I be going?
For there are all the hopes, that as memories I keep,
And sometimes, when I cease to weep,
With nothing, mornings, on my mind,
I do sewing;

C'est quand le ciel est pur et le soleil brillant.
Alors, je prends ma robe blanche,
J'arrange mes cheveux comme tu les aimais,
A la fenêtre je me mets
Et jusqu'au soir je me penche,
Pour guetter ton retour, pour entendre tes pas . . .
C'est en vain que j'espère, et m'ami ne vient pas!

JEAN: L'hiver est toujours triste . . . il serait préférable
De rentrer à Paris.

FANNY: Qu'y ferai-je, sans toi?
Ces gens que je connais, ce monde misérable
Où j'ai vécu, tout est pour moi
Un sujet de douleur et de cruel émoi.
Pendant un an je fus ta femme
Et j'entends rester à toi pour toujours;
Tu vas revenir, les beaux jours
Viendront à nouveau parfumer mon âme.
Viens, m'ami, je serai si douce
Et si bonne pour toi que ton coeur s'ouvrira,
Et que la main qui me repousse
Tendrement me caressera.
Ah! viens, car tu m'aimes encore . . .
Vois ma douleur . . . seul, tu peux l'apaiser . . .
Cède à mon amour qui t'implore,
Ta bouche ne saurait oublier mon baiser.

JEAN: Non, je ne puis!

FANNY: Pourquoi?

JEAN: Si grande est ma faiblesse
Que si je te suivais, je ne m'en irais plus.

FANNY: Vois mon chagrin, vois ma tendresse
Mon attachement!

JEAN: Espoirs superflus!
Et ton passé?

FANNY: (avec désespoir). Mais ce n'est pas ma faute . . .
Et je l'ai tant maudit qu'il devrait être mort!

JEAN: Il existe toujours et nous ôte,
A moi, le droit de vivre avec toi sans remord,
A toi, celui d'aimer sans scrupule et sans honte . . .
D'ailleurs, je dois partir.

And at times I awake with delight:—
That's when the sky is clear, and when the sun is bright;
I put on something fresh and white,
And I put up my hair in your favorite way,
And at the window I stay,
Waiting till it shall be night,
When I shall hear your step and see you coming home.
But in vain have I waited, my lover does not come.

JEAN: The winter is always dreary;
It would surely be better to back into town.

FANNY: Ah, how could I, without you!
The people that I knew, the miserable gutter
In which I lived, all, all for me
Is a story of pain and cruel misery!
For one sweet year I was your wife,
And yours I mean to remain forever;
And you will come back,
The happy days will come again
To renew my life!
Come, my love!
I shall love so well,
And so sweet will I be, that your heart will expand:
The hand with which you now repel me
Will tenderly caress my hand.
Come! for I know that you love me;
See how I grieve—you could console me yet.
Yield then to my love, I implore you,
These lips of yours can never forget
All my kisses!
Come, my love! come!

JEAN: No, I can not!

FANNY: But why?

JEAN: I can not!
If today I should heed you,
My weakness is so great, I'd never leave again!

FANNY: See my distress—

JEAN: No!

FANNY: See how I need you,
See how I cling to you!

JEAN: No!
Such hopes are in vain!
What of your past?

FANNY: (in despair). But—it was not my doing!
And I so hate it now, you know it's dead, of course:
Be kind!

JEAN: But your past does exist, even now, and destroys
My power to live with you and yet be free from remorse—
In you, the right to love free from shame and dishonor!
And now I ought to go—

FANNY: Je sais la vérité . . .
Ici, contre moi l'on te monte . . .
L'on veut te marier . . . et toi, sans volonté,
Faisant fi de mes pleurs, riant de ma détresse,
Tu brises froidement le coeur de ta maîtresse . . .
C'est mal!

JEAN: (violent). Tu dis . . .

FANNY: (humble). J'ai tort! . . . pardonne-moi . . .
Je crois, j'espère et je ne veux que toi . . .
Viens, m'ami, je serai si douce
Et si bonne pour toi que ton coeur s'ouvrira,
Et que la main qui me repousse
Tendrement me caressera.

JEAN: Tu sais bien que c'est impossible . . .
Que tout est fini désormais . . .

FANNY: Je t'aime!
Je t'aime! et jamais
Tu ne me fus plus cher; vois ma peine indicible,
Pitié! pitié!
Je tombe à tes genoux!

JEAN: (éperdument). Fanny!

SCÈNE VI

Les Mêmes, Césaire, Divonne.
(Césaire entre avec Divonne.)

CÉSAIRE: Mon fils, rentre chez nous!

JEAN: Ah! mon père!

FANNY: Je ne le quitte pas!
(Elle veut s'élancer sur Jean. Elle trouve Divonne en face d'elle.)

DIVONNE: Partez!

FANNY: Mais qui donc êtes-vous?

DIVONNE: Sa mère!

FANNY: (balbutiant). Ah! madame . . .
Pardonnez-moi . . . je ne savais . . .
(Fanny tend les bras à Jean que Césaire emmène. Fanny la voix coupée par les sanglots.)
Jean . . . là . . . je m'en vais . . .
(Elle s'éloigne en chancelant.)

DIVONNE: (détourne la tête, puis, très pâle, les yeux au ciel.)
La pauvre femme!

FIN DE L'ACTE QUATRIÈME.

FANNY: Oh, I can see it all!
These people have set you against me,
They've chosen you a wife, and you've no will at all;
You make light of my tears, you laugh at my distress,
And you can coolly break the heart of your mistress!
It's wrong!

JEAN: (angrily). What's that?

FANNY: (humbly). No, no!
Forgive me!
I hope—I trust you—and all I want is you!
Come, my love!
I shall love so well,
And so sweet will I be, that your heart will expand—
The hand with which you now repel me
Will tenderly caress my hand.

JEAN: No!
You know well—
It cannot be!
All's at an end, after this!

FANNY: I love you!
I love you!
And to me you never were more dear!
Mercy! ah, see how I suffer!
Forgive! forgive!
I beg upon my knees!

JEAN: (recklessly). Fanny!

SCENE VI

The Same, Césaire, Divonne.
(Césaire enters with Divonne.)

CÉSAIRE: My son!
Go into the house!

JEAN: Ah!
My father!

FANNY: (wishing to go to Jean, finds herself face to face with Divonne). I will not go away!

DIVONNE: You will!

FANNY: Who are you, if you please?

DIVONNE: His mother!

FANNY: (stammering). Ah! Madame, I beg your pardon—
I did not know—
(Stretching her arms to Jean; going off, her voice broken by sobs.)
Jean—there—I will go!

DIVONNE: (turning away her face and then raising her eyes to heaven).
Oh, poor woman!

END OF FOURTH ACT.

ACTE CINQUIÈME

C'est l'hiver. Dans la chambre déserte de la petite maison à Ville-d'Avray.
(Au fond porte vitrée donnant sur la campagne couverte de neige.)

SCÈNE PREMIÈRE

FANNY: (seule, pensive, triste, résignée). Demain, je partirai puisqu'il le faut . . .
Allons, mon coeur, ne meurs pas à la tâche . . .
Je pleure . . .
Vraiment! comme je suis lâche!
Pauvre Sapho!
A jamais j'ai perdu ma vie,
Toute espérance m'est ravie,
Tout bonheur a fui désormais.
Je disparais,
Du monde je m'exile,
Je ne dois rien espérer maintenant.
Oublier sera difficile,
Je l'aimais tant!
(Ouvrant le tiroir d'une commode.)
Ses lettres:
"Ma Fanny, ma femme bien aimée,
"Le temps est pur et clair . . . la campagne embaumée
"Nous appelle . . . demain . . .
(Les embrassant.)
Je vais encore pleurer . . .
Ne les relisons pas, mieux vaut les déchirer . . .
Un tas d'objets à lui . . . Ces pauvres fleurs fanées,
C'est lui jadis qui me les a données.
Faut-il avoir aimé pour un jour tant souffrir!
Faut-il avoir vécu de si douces journées,
Pour renoncer à tout, s'en aller . . . et mourir,
Sans l'espoir consolant des fautes pardonnées!
Je comprends aujourd'hui, j'aurais perdu son âme . . .
C'était le condamner à l'amère douleur,
J'aurais fait son malheur:
Hélas! je blasphémais en me disant sa femme!
Là-bas, un tout petit être, frêle, innocent,
M'appelle d'une voix qui m'attire et me touche.
Ce petit, c'est mon fils . . . cet être, c'est mon sang.
Je veux le retrouver, entendre de sa bouche
Ce doux nom de maman! Tout mon bonheur futur
Est là, je le sens bien, et dans l'espoir suprême
De faire de mon fils le coeur honnête et pur
Que je n'ai pas été moi-même.

ACT V

(Winter.—The dismantled room of the little house at Ville d'Avray.—At the back a glass door, showing the country covered with snow.)

SCENE I

FANNY: (Alone: pensive, sad, resigned). And now, seeing I must, at last I go.—
Break not, my heart, by your task overpowered.
I'm weeping—in truth, am I not a coward!
Ah, poor Sappho!
Now my life once for all is over,
My hopes can not again recover.
All my joy is gone: From now on
From all the world I'll hide me; I shall vanish,
For it is useless to hope—that I know.
Thoughts of him will be hard to banish,
I loved him so!
I loved him so!
(Opening the drawer of a bureau.)
His letters:—"My Fanny, my wife whom I adore,
The skies are bright and blue, and the country once more
Is calling! Tomorrow—" I'm going to cry again—
I'd better read no more, to keep them would be vain!
(Tears up the letters.)
And all these things of his, these sad and faded flowers,
He gave to me in those lost, happy hours!
Can one then only love but to mourn and to sigh?
Can one then only live a few moments in heaven,
But one must lose it all, go away, and die?
And without even the hope, one's sins have been forgiven!
Yet today I can see, I should have wrecked his life,
He would have been condemned to despair, or to worse,
For my love is a curse:
It was wicked of me, to call me his wife!
Yet there—is a helpless little one—and so good!
That wakens in my heart thoughts that draw me, yet grieve me:
For the child is my son, that being is my blood,
And I must go to him and teach him, ah! to give me
The sweet name of mamma! All happiness for me lies there,
It is my one hope—for me there is no other,
Except to give my son a heart sincere and pure,
Such as she never had—his mother!

SCÈNE II

Fanny, Jean.

JEAN: (entrant tout à coup). Fanny!

FANNY: (interdite). C'est vous?

JEAN: C'est moi!
Je ne pouvais rester plus longtemps loin de toi!

FANNY: Vous êtes revenu, pourquoi?

JEAN: Ma maîtresse chérie,
C'est toi qui me dis: vous, maintenant . . .

FANNY: Je t'en prie,
Laisse-moi . . .
Je m'en vais, Jean, tu dois m'oublier.

JEAN: (exaspéré). Si tu pars, c'est pour te lier
Avec un autre amant.

FANNY: Non! non! je te le jure.

JEAN: Ainsi, pour toi je fus parjure,
J'ai tout brisé, là-bas, pour revenir,
Le coeur des miens, mon avenir,
J'ai quitté notre vigne et nos beaux lauriers roses,
Oui, j'ai quitté de douces choses . . .
J'ai vu pleurer ma mère, et j'ai senti sa main
Me retenir encore au détour du chemin.
Tout s'écroule pour moi, rêve, amour, espérance!
Ah! tu veux m'oublier, partir . . . en ce moment!
Va, ne prolonge pas plus longtemps ma souffrance,
Et cours rejoindre ton amant.

FANNY: (avec élan). Ah! tu m'aimes encore!
Non, ne t'en défends pas, car je lis dans tes yeux
L'amour des jours passés, des jours délicieux.
Je reste, je t'adore!
(Ils restent un instant enlacés.)

FANNY: Mais tu pâlis, m'ami . . .

JEAN: Qu'as-tu dit?
M'ami! . . . rien que se mot rappelle
Un souvenir affreux!

FANNY: (éplorée). Vas-tu recommencer
A me tenailler l'âme en parlant du passé?
Est-ce donc pour cela que tu venais vers celle
Qui croyait au pardon, en sentant ton baiser.

SCENE II

Fanny, Jean.

JEAN: (entering suddenly). Fanny!

FANNY: (surprised). Not you!

JEAN: Yes, I!
I could not stay at home any longer without you!

FANNY: You mean you have come back; but why?

JEAN: Ah, my dearest, my dearest,
It is you who now are cold—cold to me.

FANNY: I must ask you, Jean, to leave me;
I must go, and you must forget.

JEAN: (forcibly). If you go, it must mean you've met
Of course, some other lover!

FANNY: No! no!
You must believe me!

JEAN: It is true!—and you could so deceive me?
I have destroyed my home, to come to you,
Their love for me, my future, too!
I've left our pleasant vines, with rosy laurels girted,
Yes, sweeter things have I deserted:
I've seen my mother weeping, her hand put out to stay;
I've felt upon my shoulder at the turn of the way;
All is crumbling away, the past and the future!
It is you that would forget, it is you that make the move.
Go!
Do not wait, I say, to prolong me my torture;
But go to meet your new love!

FANNY: (with spirit). Ah! you love me, still love me!
No, that you can't deny!
I read in your eyes
The light of love that in them lies!
I'll stay, then—I adore you, I adore you!
(They remain in each other's arms.)

FANNY: But you are pale, my love!

JEAN: What was that?
"My love!"
The words alone awaken
Those accurst memories!

FANNY: (tearfully). Oh, must you speak like this,
And crush my very soul by recalling the past?
And was it then for this
This course with one you've taken
Who believes you forgave,
When you gave her your kiss!

JEAN: Ah! . . . c'est vrai . . . je suis fou . . . (Il s'est dirigé vers le fauteuil sur lequel il s'est laissé tomber épuisé.)	JEAN: Ah, it is true—I am mad— (He sinks wearily into a chair.)
FANNY: Tu me fais peur, ta lèvre Tremble et tes yeux sont tout rouges de fièvre . . .	FANNY: You frighten me! Your lips are trembling, and your eyes Are red with fever.
JEAN: Je suis brisé . . .	JEAN: I am worn out—
FANNY: Calme-toi maintenant.	FANNY: You must rest. There, be still.
JEAN: Je n'avais plus dormi . . .	JEAN: I could not go to sleep—
FANNY: Repose doucement.	FANNY: I know—but now you will.
JEAN: Reste là . . .	JEAN: Do not go—
FANNY: Si tu veux.	FANNY: I will not.
JEAN: O ma Fanny! je t'aime!	JEAN: O Fanny mine, I love you!
FANNY: Oublie et sois heureux.	FANNY: Be happy, for all's forgot!
JEAN: Oui . . . c'est l'oubli . . . suprême!	JEAN: Yes! It is gone—for ever! (Fanny releases herself and goes to a little distance.)
FANNY: Comme il dort! (Après s'être dégagée et un peu éloignée de lui doucement.) Vais-je rester ici? Mais non, mieux vaut partir ainsi . . . . Gardant étroitement dans mon âme blessée Son cher baiser d'amour, sa dernière pensée! Jamais il n'oubliera, je le sens maintenant, Chaque baiser sera suivi d'un mot méchant. C'est l'heure! (Elle se dirige vers la table.) Allons! (Elle écrit.) Adieu m'ami, je par à tout jamais . . . Ne m'en veux pas, car je t'aimais . . . Je t'aime toujours et je pleure. J'accomplis mon devoir, et j'en suis toute fière. S'il est vrai que là-haut il existe un bon Dieu, Je pourrai maintenant lui faire une prière Et lui parler de toi . . . C'est tout! Adieu! (S'approchant de Jean endormi, la voix brisée.) Un baiser . . . le dernier, et de toute mon âme . . .	FANNY: How he sleeps!— Shall I stay here, or no? No, no! Far better I should go. While I can take away in my heart torn and riven His last dear kiss of love—when he thought he'd forgiven! But he would not forget, that I know well today; With every kiss some cruel word his lips would say. So come! Time's flying! (Writing.) Good-bye, my love! This is my last farewell; Ah, blame me not, I love you well! I love you still—I am crying: I have done what is right, even gladly and proudly. If it is true there's a God who dwells there on high, I can pray to Him now without fear, and devoutly. And I can pray for you:— No more! Good-bye! Just a kiss—it is the last, And I leave him—my life!
JEAN: (rêvant endormi). Ma femme!	JEAN: (dreaming). My wife!
FANNY: (anxieuse). Il se réveille? Non, non, toujours endormi. (En s'éloignant.) Adieu! adieu! m'ami! (Elle sort lentement en le regardant toujours.)	FANNY: Is he awaking? No, he does not move! Good-bye, good-bye, my love! (Going away.) (She goes out slowly, still looking at him.)

Gli Ugonotti (1836)

The Huguenots

MUSIC BY GIACOMO MEYERBEER ■ LIBRETTO BY EUGÈNE SCRIBE

This five-act opera, set to a libretto by Eugène Scribe (after Emile Deschamps), premiered at the Paris Opéra on February 29, 1836. In August, 1572, the Catholic Count de Nevers invites the Huguenot Raoul de Nangis to a banquet in accordance with the king's wishes that hostilities between the two groups come to an end. Raoul makes a toast to a mystery woman whom he defended from an attack. The mystery woman enters, and Raoul, who is in love with her, assumes that she is the Count' s mistress. She is actually Valentine de Saint-Bris, sent by the Queen to ask the Count to allow the betrothal of Valentine and Raoul. The Queen's page invites Raoul to a rendezvous with an anonymous lady. In the gardens of Chenonceaux, Marguérite de Valois suggests to the blindfolded Raoul that Valentine marry him. Valentine's father, de Saint-Bris, is a prominent Catholic leader, and the union would solidify the peace between the Catholics and the Huguenots. Valentine, now in love with Raoul, is happy to comply, but Raoul still believes her to be Count de Nevers' mistress and refuses to marry her. His decision insults the Catholics. In Paris, Valentine and the Count de Nevers are about to be married when Raoul challenges de Saint-Bris to a duel. Valentine hears of a plot to ambush Raoul at this duel and warns his servant, Marcel, who rounds up Raoul's followers; fighting between the Catholics and Huguenots breaks out. The Queen arrives and Raoul finally realizes the truth about Valentine. Raoul tries to talk to her, but has to hide when her father and de Nevers enter. De Saint-Bris wants to wipe out the Huguenots, but de Nevers refuses and is arrested. Raoul overhears the plan and leaves Valentine to warn his followers, who are celebrating the marriage of the King and Queen. At the Huguenot churchyard, Raoul finds Marcel mortally wounded; Raoul is determined to die with his servant. Valentine comes to Raoul, telling him of Nevers' death and that the Queen will pardon him if he renounces his faith. Raoul refuses, and Valentine chooses his faith over her own. They die together at the hands of her father's army.

■ ATTO I	■ ACT I
SCENA I	SCENE I
Sala nel Castello di Nevers, corrispondente a deliziosi giardini.—A destra una porta, che conduce agli appartamenti.—A sinistra una finestra, che si suppone guardar in un Oratorio.	A Salon in the Castle of Count de Nevers, opening onto a beautiful Garden.—On the right hand, a door opening to an inner apartment.—On the left, a window, supposed to command a view into a chapel.
Il Conte di Nevers, Tavannes, De Cossé, De Retz, Meru, Raul, ed altri Signori, seduti a tavola.	The Count de Nevers, Tavannes, De Cossé, De Retz, Meru, Raoul, and other Noblemen, seated at table.
CHOR.: Piacer della mensa, piacer della mensa, Piacer veritiero, piacer vetiero, Che guai non dispensa, Che guai non dispensa; Che sempre è sincer, che sempre è sincer. Beviam senza tema, Beviam senza te ma, Che Bacco è la stella, Che Bacco è stella, Bacco è La guida più bella, La guida più bella, la guida più bella, Di tutti i piacer, Di tutti i piacer.	CHOR.: Fill, fill, fill, fill, fill to the joys of the table; Crown, crown, crown, crown, crown every cup in foam, sir, Kill, kill, kill, kill, kill time as fast as we're able; Drown, drown, drown, drown, drown him in bright wine. Rosy Bacchus over our revels presiding, To his care our evening's pleasure confiding, To his care all, all confiding; While thus gaily onward the moments are gliding, All our souls to wine, sirs, we'll resign.
NEV: Della Turrena versate il vino.	NEV: Old care defying with joyous song,
TAV: A tazza piena, versiam da ber.	TAV: Beneath his bright banner we march along:
TUTTI: E nell' ebbrezza facciam tacer E la sagezza e il dispiacer.	ALL: We pour to him sparkling libations— Bacchus, bright Bacchus, we adore you.
NEV: Versate ancor del vino, e senza fren versate; sù via Raul, beviam a nostri amori. Ma, nel mirar quell' aria di langnore, scommetto che di già amor vi accende il core.	NEV: Come, let us touch glasses, Sir Raoul, and drink to those we love. Now, by your looks and your soft languishing tone, I know that you are already in love.
RAU: Che dite—a me?	RAO: Who—I?
NEV: Gioventù lo richiede. Ma sotto il suo poter doman me stringe Imene; promesso l'ho, per me non v' è più amor. E da questo momento io non potrei bastare di tante mie beltà il duolo a temperare.	NEV: But at your age you have a right to be so. For my own part, I marry tomorrow, and I must therefore forswear love, in doing which I feel that I shall cause desolation in the heart of many a fair one.
TAV: Ci narra, or sù, racconta, e poi ciascuno con fedele ragguaglio ne seguirà l'esempio.	TAV: Now, sirs, new zest to our feast to give, suppose we all in turn recount the history of our love lives.
NEV: Sì, la prova facciamo, e all' ospite novello il comminciare. (A Raul.)	NEV: Agreed, with all my heart! It is for the last newcomer to begin. (to Raoul.)
TUTTI: È ver!	ALL: Most true!
RAU: Lo faccio volontier: ma senza compromettere quella che ferito ha il mio cor.	RAO: I believe I am he; and I have no objection, sirs, so that all pass in honor.
NEV: Puoi dir almen chi sia.	NEV: Tell us first, then—who is she?
RAU: Altro non so.	RAO: I do not know.
NEV: Il nome suo?	NEV: Her name?
RAU: L'ignoro.	RAO: I am ignorant even of that.

NEV: Davver! Signori, udiam, il suo racconto; ci deve interessar.	NEV: Indeed! Gentlemen, silence, pray: the tale bids fair to be piquant.
RAU: Un di presso al castello dell' antica Amboise errava mesto e solo, quand' ad un tratto apparve una ricca lettiga, sul volger del sentiere. Un numeroso stuolo di giovani studenti l'investir, le grida lor, l'ardir ben mi fer noti i lor vili pensieri. Io mi slanciai, ciascun fugge lontano, allor timido avvanzo, oh qual soave vision, oh qual beltade, a miei sguardi apparì!	RAO: Not far from the old towers and time-worn ramparts of Amboise, I chanced to lose my way; when, at the turn of the road, I saw before me a richly-housed litter: a band of wild young students were discourteously crowding round it, and their shouts and insolent demeanor left me no doubt of their audacious projects. I rushed forward—at sight of me they fled: I advanced still nearer—ah! what an enchanting vision met my view!
RAOUL: Più bianca del più bianco relo, Più pura, più pura d'un giorno d' April, Un angel, ò vergindel cielo, La sua vista rapì il mio cor. Vergin divina, Quant' era belia! Malgrado me innanzi d'ella m'inchinai. Le dissi allor, Bell angel, dea, dea de gl'amor, Beltà dei ciel, Te voglio amar ognor, ognor, ognor, ognor, ognor, Te voglio amar, amar . . . oh! dea de gl'amor, Te vo glio amar, amar . . . amar!	RAOUL: Fairer far even than fairest lily, Than spring morn, more pure and more lovely and bright, An angel of heaven-born beauty Burst upon my ravished sight. Oh! she was charming past all expression! And as I bent my knee before her divine form, I faltered, I faltered, Fair angel, surely you come from heaven above, For evermore will I love none but you! Forever, forever, forever, will I love none but you! Forever will I love none but you, for ever, forever; No, none . . . but you.
TUTTI: È davver quel candore leggiadro, Se lo fan due begli occhi tremar.	ALL: I vow, his candor is really most charming— Bright eyes, how very bewitching!
RAU: Nell'ascoltarmi, un dolce riso Tradi gli affanni del suo bel sen; Legger potei sovra il suo viso Scritto il presagio d'ogni mio ben. Fiamma novella, ma fido amante, D'amor costante arde il mio cor. E dirò ognor, Bell'angiol, dea, etc.	RAO: Sweetly she smiled as I stood by her side, Sighing the love which even her tongue denied to speak; And in her eyes the love-light gleamed, And on her brow affection beamed, Bidding me hope to gain her love, Bidding me echo still the strain, Fairer than, etc.
TUTTI: È davver quel candore leggiadro, Se lo fan due bei lumi tremar. Entra Marcello.	ALL: I vow, his candor is really most charming— Bright eyes, how bewitching! (Enter Marcel.)
DE COS: (Attentamente guardando a Marcello.) Qua! mai strana figura quì veggio comparire?	DE COS: (Looking earnestly at Marcel.) But what strange-looking mortal here makes his appearance.
RAU: È un servo mio fedele, che mi vide fanciullo.	RAO: It is a faithful old follower, who from my childhood hath served me.
MAR: (Avvicinandosi a Raul.) Sir, Raul! con essi a mensa! Ah! Signore, disse il ciel, fuggi l'empio e il suo festin.	MAR: (Perceiving Raoul.) Sir Raoul! Eh! at table with them! Ah! dear master, we are told— "With the wicked feast you not nor have anything to do."
MER: (Ridendo.) C'Israele è desso un santo.	MERU: (Laughing.) It is a saint of Israel—
MAR: Si, nel campo Filisteo.	MAR: In the camp of the Philistines.
NEV E CORO: Che vuol dir?	NEV AND CHO: What said he?
RAU: Ah, perdono! religioso e guerriero gli avi mei l'educar, dalla sua prima età, e l'amore a spregiar, e il papa, e il suo poter. Marcel, non è così?	RAO: Pardon him! he knows no manners but those of a rough soldier, having been taught to hate the Pope and his power.
MAR: (Con satisfazione.) Pur troppo egli è così!	MAR: (With earnestness.) Truly, it is so!
RAU: Ma fedele, valente e in cor sensibile, gemma è gentil in ruvido metal. Orsù, vieni, ne servi. (A Marcello.) E non parlar—se pur ti tia possibile.	RAO: Still he loves me, and is sterling as an uncut diamond. (To Marcel.) Come, attend us, and be silent, if you can.
MAR: Obbedisco. (Da se.) Da lor come salvarlo?	MAR: I obey. (Aside.) How shall I guard his soul from their wiles?
NEV: (Bevendo.) Beviam, beviam a chi ne accende sene!	NEV: (Drinking.) Now, sirs we drink to our mistresses!
RAU: (Bevendo.) Si, al solo e dolce affetto del mio core!	RAO: (Drinking.) To her whom alone I adore!
DE COS: Beviam, beviamo al loro ardente amore.	DE COS: Yes, let us drink to their true love.
MAR: Deh vieni, divo amor, il salva tu dal mal, E di tua voce il suon mesci al canto infernal! O, tu che ognor in guardia stai Del giusto cha t'adora.	MAR: Had I great Calvin's voice, whoever might frown, I'd raise it high to drown their impious songs. Oh! you, who are our only guide And guard from every earthly ill—
NEV: Vieni, bevi!	NEV: Come, drink!
RAU: No, no!	RAO: No!
MAR: Umile o altero invano mai Alcun fedel t'implora!	MAR: Do not turn your face from us in each strait But protect us!
MERU: (A Raul.) Ma che dicendo va?	MERU: (To Raoul.) What's that?
RAU: (Con voce soffocata.) È la santa preghiera che noi diciamo ognor, ne' rischi e nel dolor.	RAO: (In an impressive voice.) That is the prayer that was written by Calvin which we offer when grief or danger threatens.
MAR: Per nostro mal, Contro di noi L'oste infernal Levossi ancor! Sommo Signor, Ne reggi e salva Dal suo furor.	MAR: The serpent tempter's net He spreads for his prey; He besets our path Our souls he would betray! Oh, do not forget your servants! But save us now, we pray!
DE COS: (Attentamente guardando a Marcello.) Ma, più lo vedo, e più ricordami un guerrier, che un di vicino alla Rochelle—?	DE COS: (Attentively regarding Marcel) If my eyes serve me, this is a soldier whom we encountered beneath the walls of Rochelle?
MAR: (Con piacere.) Mi rammentate voi?	MAR: (Much pleased.) You know me, then?
DE COS: Si, davver, per mia fe, questa ferita.	DE COS: Too well; and this scar—
MAR: (Con orgoglio.) Essa venia da me.	MAR: Was given to you by me.
RAU: Orsù, Marcel!	RAO: Peace, Marcel!
DE COS: (Lietamente.) E fu di buona guerra, e per darten la prova, mesciam beviamo insieme.	DE COS: (Gaily.) Ah, that was a good fight! Come, commemorate it in a glass!
MAR: Perdon, non posso ber.	MAR: Thank you: I cannot drink.
DE COS: (Ridendo.) No, con un infedel!	DE COS: (Laughing.) With a son of sin like me!
RAU: Grazia gli fate ancor.	RAO: No, excuse him, I pray you.
NEV: Ebben, se ber non vuol, che canti.	NEV: Well, if he won't drink, he must sing, sirs.
RAU: Ma, Signor—	RAO: But, gentlemen—
DE COS: Si, vogliam, che canti!	DE COS: Oh, yes, yes; he must sing!
MAR: Con piacere;—una vecchia canzone contro la fè di Roma, e la stirpe donnesca. Vo la sapete ben—la canzone guerresca; quella della Rochelle, quando al rumore,	MAR: Sirs, I will; an old Huguenot song against the snares of Rome and the dark wiles of woman. You, sirs, should know it well—it is our battle song; you heard it at Rochelle, it el suon di tamburi e cimballi, accompagnato dal piff, paff del fuoco de' fucili, cantava.

MARCEL: Finita è pe' frati, Abbasso i lor covi, De' finti beati Pietà non si provi! Al ferro ed al fuoco Lor tempii poniam; Al fuoco i tempii poniam, Al ferro al fuoco i tempii poniam. Battiamo, par sterminiam, uccidiam, distruggiam! Battiamo, par steminiam, uccidiam, distruggiam—Piff, paff, piff, Abbattiam—Piff, paff, piff, uccidiam! Piff, paff, piff, paff, paff, piff, paff, piff, paff, Che piangan, che moran, Ma grazia giammai, Che piangan, che moran, Ma grazia giammai; Nò, nò, nò! giammai! Nò, nò, nò, giammai! Nò, nò, nò, giammai! Nò, nò, nò, nò, nò, nò, nò, nò, nò, giammai!

CORO: Ha! ha! bontà senza par!
Mercè dell' avviso!

MAR: Mia man mai non trema
A' pianti di donna:
Sventura a chi piega
Innanzi a una gonna.
Tronchiam con l'acciar
L'incanto infernal.
Di donna l'amor
Fuggiamo, abborriamo:
Che piangan, che moran,
Ma grazia giammai!
Entra un servo del Conte di Nevers, dal fondo del teatro, conducendo una Dama coperta d'un velo. Ella scompare nei giardini, ed il servo si accosta al Conte, e gli parla sotto voce.

NEV: Ignota dama a me brama parlare! È cosa strana in vero come inseguito ia sono. Signori, perdonate, or m'è uopo partir, ma voi quívi restate del banchetto a gior che l'amor disturbò;—ma, che per quanto par, fra breve tornerà a blandir l'amistà.
(Nevers esce ed il Servo, accompagnato fino alla porta dagli, espiti, che ritornano in scena ridendo.)

TAV: L'avventura è stravagante.

DE RETZ: De' più belli è il suo destin.
(Alcuni Signori s'avvincinano alla finestra, e guardano nell'oratorio.)

RAU: (Guardando e maravigliato.) O, Cielo!

TUTTI: Che mai fù?

RAU: (A Marcello.) Ah! la vergin così giovine e bella, che e il mio braccio salvò, ond' or parlato v'ho, e quella!

TUTTI: E quella?

was sung amid the din of drums and trumpets; with a full accompaniment—piff, paff, piff, paff—bullets from our ranks, it rang out:

MARCEL: Old Rome and her revelries, Her pride and her lust, boys, The monks and their devilries, We'll grind them to dust, boys! Deliver to fire and sword their temples of Hell, Till of the black demons none live to tell, none live to tell, none live to tell. Down, down with them! Slay them all, every soul! Slaughter them! Down, down with them! Slay them all, every soul! Slaughter them—Piff, paff, piff; Slay them all, Piff, paff, piff, every soul! Piff, paff, piff, paff, paff, piff, paff, piff, paff, All vainly for aid or for mercy they call; No pity for them! No, they die, no, they die; No, slay all; slay all! No, no, no, slay all! No, no, no, slay them all! No, no, no, no, no, no, no, slay all!

CHO: Ha! ha! ha! what a dear lamb-like soul!
Have mercy on us, pray?

MAR: Woe to all defilers fair!
I never heed their shrieking—
Woe to the Dalilahs fair,
Who men's souls are seeking!
Deliver to fire and sword
Those children of hell,
Till of the black demons
None live to tell!
All vainly for aid or for mercy they call!
No pity for them! no, they die—slay all!
(Enter a Servant of the Count de Nevers from the back of the stage, leading a Lady, veiled. The Lady passes into the garden, the Servant comes forward, and whispers to the Count.)

NEV: A lady you say? Truly, the request I am in amongst them surpasses belief! Gentlemen, may I beg you will excuse me; but do not let me disturb you; continue, I pray, the feast we had begun, and which, though partially interrupted by love, shall be concluded in friendship.
(Exeunt De Nevers and Servant, followed to the doorway by the Guests, who afterwards return, laughing, to the front.)

TAV: This is a singular adventure.

DE RETZ: He is certainly in great luck.
(Several of the party approach the window, and peep into the adjoining Chapel.)

RAO: (With astonishment, after looking.) Oh, heaven!

ALL: What is it?

RAO: (To Marcel.) This lady, this young beauty, is the same I once saved, of whom I told you.

ALL: Are you sure?

RAU: Ah sì, certo ne son.
(Si vede nel fondo traversar il giardino Nevers, con una Donna coperta d' un velo, cui rispettosamente saluta, e lascia.)
Entra Nevers, in scena astratto e quasi senza accorgersi de' convitati, che gli aprono il passaggio, e subito dopo lui entra Urbano.

NEV: Paggio gentil, che cerchi in questo albergo?

URB: Nobil Signori, salute.

URBAIN: Nobil donna, e tanto onesta, Che far lieto un repotria, Messaggiero quì m' invia, Cavalier, cavalier, per un di voi. Senza nomarlo, si renda onor A chi fù degno Di tanto amor, Di tanto amor! A me credete, Mai niun signor A tanto gloria fù eletto ancor, a . . . tanta gloria, a tanta gloria eletto ancor.

Non temete inganno ò frode,
Cavalier, nel mio parlar.
Ora addio; e il Ciel vi regga
Nell' amare e nel pugnar.

NEV: Troppa virtù talora
Per verità importuna;
Ma, poichè infin non mi potrei sottrarre
Dai colpi di fortuna, porgi quel foglio a me.

URB: Siete voi Sir Raulfo di Nangis?

NEV: Che di' tù?

URB: È a lui che questo foglio io reco.

TUTTI: O Ciel!

MAR: (Con orgoglio.) È pel mio sire—eccolo là.

RAU: È per me?

URB: Sì, per voi.
(Presentandogli il foglio.)

RAU: (Lo prende e legge.) 'Prima che cada il di, Sir Raulfo di Nangis, Di corte un legno a prendervi verrà,
Voi sommesso obbedite; e posto agli occhi un vel
In silenzio partite—avrete tal coraggio.'
Andiam, a spese mie, quì ridere si vuole,
Potria caro costar ma ciò pur sia, m' arrendo—
Or leggete voi stesso.
(Presenta la lettera a Nevers, che le legge, e poi la dà ad un altro, e così passa per le mani di tutti.)

NEV: (Maravigliato.) Giusto Cielo!

MER: Qual sorpresa!

DE COS: Il suo stemma!

TAV: Le sue ciffre.

RAO: 'Tis she, I'm certain.
(De Nevers is seen to pass through the garden with a Lady veiled, whom he salutes respectfully, and takes leave.)
(Enter Nevers—pensively advances up the stage, without taking notice of his Visitors—all the Guests make way for him—Urbain enters after him.)

NEV: My gentl page, what brings you to my chateau?

URB: Nobel Signors, I salute you.

URBAIN: A most charming noble lady, whom kings might view with envy, has charged me with a message here, Cavaliers, cavaliers, to one of you. I do not name him; but honor be Unto the good knight, whoever he may be, whoever he may be! And until now, sirs, there never has been Mortal so favored by beauty's queen, Mortal so favored, so favored by beauty's queen.

Do not fear the least deception,
Noble knights, in my discourse;
Now farewell, may heaven kindly protect you in love or war.

NEV: The sky today rains females in a shower
On me, I think; but so it must be!
For to resist the sex I have no power;—
Give me the note—give it to me.

URB: Are you, then, Sir Raoul de Nangis?

NEV: What say you?

URB: I've brought this note for him.

ALL Ah! great Heaven!

MAR: (Proudly.) For my master! he is here—that is he!

RAO: What! for me?

URB: Yes, for you.
(Handing him the letter.)

RAO: (Reading.) 'Before the close of day, Sir Raoul de Nangis,
A carriage from the court will be wating for you,
Ascend in strictest silence; closely veil your eyes,
Trust to other guidance—unless your courge fails
Indeed! they seek to have a joke at my expense;
But it may cost them dearly!
Still, be it so—I do consent.
(Handing the letter to Nevers, who reads it, and in turn hands it to another, and so it passes through the hands of all.)

NEV: (Astonished.) Ah! great Heaven!

MER: Surprising!

DE C: Her Seal!

TAV: Her arms!

TUTTI: E, fia vero? la sua mano!
Certo ormai è il suo destin.
(Tutti si avvicinano a Raul, e gli serrano la mano.)

NEV: Voi sapete ch' io sono vostr' amico sincero.

MER. E DE COS: Se scortarvi—servirvi è mestiero.

DE RET, NEV. E TAV: Sì, sapremo, adoprarci davvero.

CORO: Voi penserete a noi, nol scorderete poi.

RAU: Qual cambiamento è questo?
Che posso, o miei signor?

TUTTI: Tutto.

URB. I SETTE SIGNORI E NEV: I piaceri, l' onor, l' opulenza
Compiran i desir, la speranza,
Dell' ardir, ed ognor la potenza,
Va per dritto a chi sa la colpir.

NEV: Ah! per voi, oh qual gloria novella!
La beltade in tal giorno v' appella.

RAU: (Solo) I piaceri, gli onor, l' opulenza!
Che vuol dir non intendo davver.

MAR: Che vuol dir questa gran differenza,
Per mia fè non intendo davver.

CORO: I piaceri, gli onor, l' opulenza,
Compiran la speranza, i desir.

MAR: Te Deum, laudamus!
E Sansone atterrava i Filistei.

TUTTI: (A Raul.) Ah! per te, o qual gloria novella!
La betade in tal giorno t' appella.
Portiamo alle stelle chi vince le belle.
O nostro compione, orsù parti, vola,
Ti spinge l' onore, l' amor ti consola;
Addio, parti, va!

SCENA II

Il teatro rappresenta il Castello ed i Giardini Chenonceaux, con una gran scalinata alla destra.

Margarita circondata dalle Damigelle, arrà appena finito la sua toletta.

MARG: O, vago suol della Turrena,
Erbette e fior, fresche sorgenti,
Chiaro ruscel che s' ode appena,
O, qual piacer di voi sognar!
O l' una, o l' altra fede vermiglio faccia il suolo,
In lor varia e divota opposizione,
De' ministri del cielo sia la morale austera,
D' un Dio supremo, santo timor.

ALL: Can it be true? Her hand!
Then now is his fortune made.
(All approach Raoul and shake him by the hand.)

NEV: You know that I have ever been your friend.

MER & DE COS: I am at your service, whenever required.

DE RET, NEV & TAV: I shall be happy to serve you.

CHO: You will not forget the promise you made.

RAO: How? what change is this?
I do not understand—what can I do?

ALL: Everything!

URB, KNIGHTS & NEV: Here pleasure, and honor, and wealth,
High power and rank, will be yours;
And all that ambition could crave,
In your fortune and state will combine.

NOVE: Ah, what glory now awaits you
You are chosen by beauty this day!

RAO: (Alone.) What? pleasure, and honor and wealth!
I cannot believe what they say.

MAR: I see the difference in their conduct,
Though I do not know what they design.

CHO: Pleasure, honor, and wealth will be his.
Oh, how happy such joys to combine.

MAR: We praise you, oh Heaven!
Samson overcame the Philistines.

ALL: (To Raoul.) Quick, away! for this beautiful that glory and love will be yours:
For he must be favored, for whom
Both beauty and fortune combine.
Then no longer stay here;—
Adieu, depart away!

SCENE II

The scene represents the Castle and Garden of Chenonceaux, with a broad flight of steps on the right hand.

Margaret is discovered, surrounded by her Maids, who have just finished her toilet.

MARY: Oh, lovely land of fair Touraine!
Your vine-clad hills, your sparkling fountains,
Your green banks, and your murmuring zephrys,
All fill my soul with peace and love!
Yet, for a difference in belief,
This fair scene may be stained by war,

MARG., URB. E UNA DAMA D' ONORE: Fosche chimere! forme severe!
Non v' appressate al nostro cuor;
Sotto, al mio regno, non avvi impegno;
Che far onore al dio d' amor.

CORO: Triste follie, riserbe vane,
Ite lontane dal nostro cor.
Sotto, il tuo, impero, non v' è pensiero.
Che render gloria al dio d' amor.

MARG: Sotto il mio impero,
Non v' è pensiero
Che di dar vanto
Al dio d' amor.

MARGARET: A questa voce sola Natura par più bella La terra l' aura, il ciel . . . D' amor favalla. La terra, l' aura, il cielo, D' amor si dè e favella; La terra, il cielo, la terra il ceil, Favella, favella, d' amor.

CORO: La terra, l' aura, il cielo, favellano d' amor.

URB: (Guardando a Margarita sospirando.) Oh! quanto dessa è bella, oimè!

MARG: Chi giunge?

URB: Ve', la più bella fra le damigelle,
(La dame si ritirano.)
Entra Valentina.

MARG: Valentina!—T' innoltra, e non tremare!

URB: Già tutto è per lei sola,—
Di già la favorita.

MARG: Afflitta io la trovai,
E il dolor sempre sa
In noi svegliar pietà.

URB: A! Più rider non vo'.
(Esce.)

MARG: (A Valentina.) Mia figlia, andiam, coraggio.
Dimmi che risultò dal tuo ardito viaggio.

VAL: Il Conte di Nevers mi promise e guirò
Di rifiutar mia man.

MARG: Or d' accordo saremo:
Fra poco un altro Imene
Conchiuder si potrà.

VAL: Che sento, o cielo?

MARG: Io ti vedo arrossir!
Dunque tu l' ami inver?

VAL: In non lo debbo amar, ma il padre mio—

MARG: Non temer, io di lui gli parlerò.

VAL: Sì—ma Raul?

Oh, that men could observe the moral,
To love and fear the all-powerful Being!

MARG, URB, & LADIES: But hence with sorrow!
Care we will banish;
Quick, let it vanish,
Far, far away.

CHO: Youth is a treasure,
Which while enjoying,
To love and pleasure
Our court we'll pay!

MARG: In the land where I reign,
From the mount to the main,
All re-echo the strain
That's devoted to love!

MARGARET: For at that word of power, Each Bird, each beast, each flower, All nature springs, rejoicing, Through earth and air and sky. The rippling stream repeats it, In gentle murmurs greets it; The winds, the waters, with tuneful voice echoing, echoing, reply.

CHO: All echo the strain that's devoted to love!

URB: (Looking towards Margaret and sighing.) Oh! how beautiful is she!

MARG: See, who comes here!

URB: More fair than all the maids of honor.
(The Maids of Honor retire.)
(Enter Valentina.)

MARG: It is Valentina! Approach and fear not!

URB: All sympathize with and would console her
Who is the favorite of her sovereign.

MARG: Yes, I have marked her sorrows:
Grief is indeed all powerful
To wake the heart to pity.

URB: Ah! I shall laugh no longer.
(Exit.)

MARG: (To Valentina.) Approach, my child, take courage,
And tell me now of your most bold adventure.

VAL: The Count of Nevers has, on his honor,
Promised to refuse my hand.

MARG: All will then be easy:
Leave everything to me.
I will soon arrange another match for you.

VAL: Oh, Heaven! what do I hear?

MARG: What, you blush!
Oh! I see you love him.

VAL: Nay—I must not venture—but my father—

MARG: Have no fear, I will confer with him.

VAL: Yes—but Raoul?

MARG: Ebben l' aspetto quì.

VAL: Ah! mai non oserò—

MARG: Allor per te son io che lo vedrò.
Reintrano le Damigelle d' Onore, seguite da Villanelle.

UNA DAM: Andiam, regina, in queste amene sponde
Del sol control l'ardor rifugio a ritrovar,
Del vivido ruscel o fortunate l' onde
Che d'un lucente vel il dono a voi puo far.
(Alcune si pongono a sedere sul margine del fiume, altre cantano, ed altre ballano.)

CORO DI VILLANELLE: Giovin beltà, sù questa riva,
Che ne difende dall' aura estiva
Possiam del dì sfidar l'ardor.
Mirate come son l' onde chiare;
Nel lor seno possiam trovare
Dolcezza all' alma, calma e ristor.
Entra Urbano, comparisce fra un gruppo di Damigelle.

MARG: Ancora quì! ma, quale audacia, Urbano?

URB: Ma non son io! è un cavalier.
(Valentina e le Damigelle dan segni di agitazione.

VAL: Un cavalier!

TUTTI: Un cavalier!

URB: Lasciate ogni timor, l' avventura ascoltate.

URBAIN: No, no, no, no, no, no! Caso egual giammai scommetto, No, non udiste ancor, Raccontar de un giovin paggio, No No, no, no, no, no, no! E le figlie del villaggio, Giammai non lo . . . scorderan! Circondato gran folla, Sorra gl' occha un relo, un velo nero. Ecco appar un cavalier! E simil ad ombra, a nube fuggente, Traversa lo spazio con piè leggier; Con gl'occhi ciascun, Seguendole va, E dicon dov'è? E poi dove andò, Che cosa cercò? E fan gran rumor! No, no, no, no, no. Caso egual giammai, scommelto, No, non udiste pria raccontar d' un giovin paggio.
Ah! . . . No, no, no, no, no, no! E le figlie del villaggio giammai, no lo scorderan.

Il gioco è bello davvero!
Ma sott' occhio sol ridiamo
Qualche arcan quì acoso sta;
Non dobbiam scoprir mistero
Che celar si studia amor,
L'amor scesso, re potente,
Fra le piante quì sovente
Corte tien.

CORO: Ah! il gioco è bello davvero!
Ma sott' occhio sol ridiamo,—
Un arcan quì si celò.
In tal dì, che mai pensar?

MARG: Know he is coming here.

VAL: Ah! never shall I dare—

MARG: Never! Then I must see him for you.
(Re-enter the Maids of Honor, followed by Village Girls.)

1ST LA: Come, rest beneath the verdant trees' broad shade,
And seek a shelter from the burning sun,
Where brooks meander through the grassy glade,
And crystal streams in cooling current run.
(Some go towards the river, and seat themselves upon the bank, others sing, and others dance.)

CHO. OF VILLAGE GIRLS: Youth and beauty may rest here,
Or sport beneath the shady vest
Of gently waving trees.
Sheltered from the burning sun,
Waves of purest crystal run,
And woo the freshening breeze.
(Enter Urbain, from amidst a group of Damsels.)

MARG: You here again! What assurance, Urbain!

URB: I come to announce the approach of a cavalier.
(Valentina and the Ladies show signs of agitation.)

VAL: A cavalier!

ALL: A cavalier!

URB: Calm your fears and listen to this adventure.

URBAIN: No, no, no, no, no, no! You have not heard, I will engage, So strange a tale as this told by a youthful page. No, no, no, no, no, no! And the maidens of the village Will not forget the vision: Crowds of persons flocked around him; Over his eyes a veil of black he'd bound him: Thus this cavalier appeared, Gliding like a shadow all around, With feet that do but lightly touch the ground: And young ones and old the vision behold, Saying, "what is it!" and then, "where is it? And whom does it seek?" It makes a great noise! No, no, no, no, no! you have not heard, I will engage, So strange a tale as this, told by a youthful page. Ah! . . . No, no, no, no, no, no! And the maidens of the village will not forget the vision.

Oh, what a joke!
But let us stem our laughter,
There must be some secret
That I cannot discover,
Which love would fain conceal.
Ah, Love!
That powerful king disports here will hold his court,
And amid these groves.

CHO: Oh, what a joke!
But let us stem our laughter.
Some secret here must be concealed,

Uno scherzo egli è d' amor.
Ah, davver un gioco egli è
Dell' astuto dio d' amor,
Che l' amore spesso quì
La sua corte tiene—ah! sì.

URB: (Ridendo.) Nulla vede il cavaliere.

CORO: (Ripetendo.) Nulla vede il cavaliere.

URB: A tenton cerca il sentiere.
Ragazzi a stuolo seguendo il van,
Gioco ne fan.

CORO: Ragazzi a stuol seguendo il van,
Gioco ne fan.

URB: Ma le suore lor
Gli gettan de' fior.

CORO: (Ridendo.) Ah, ah!

URB: No, no! giammai scommetto, etc.
E un gran corteggio ridente e bello!

CORO: Qual corteggio quanto è bello!

URB: Agli occhi un vel; dal lieto piè
Di giovin figlie seguito egli è.

CORO: Lo scherzo è bel,—oh, qual piacer?

URB: E già vicino è del castel.
O, qual mai festa vi si farà?

CORO: Ei vien costì

URB: O, qual mai festa?
E vien—costì—
Egli è già quì!
(Indicando verso la scala.)
Entra Raul, con gli occhi bendati—è condotto in scena della parte della scalinata.—Alcune Damigelle lo guar dando attentamente, e chi si ritira, e chi lo circonda.

MARG: È Raul de Nangis, il misterioso eroe.
Tanta lealtà, o Signor, merta il suo premio.
Della vostra, promessa io vi disciolgo;—
Levar potete il velo.

RAU: O Ciel! dove som io?
Illusione non è? non è prestigio agli occhi miei?

RAU: Beltà divina, incantatrice,
Che egual mai vidi in uman vel,
Parla ten prego mortale o dea,
In terra sono, oppur nel ciel?
Ah! mi rispondi un detto sol.

MARG: (Da se.) Della sua dolce ardente brama.
Appen comprendo tutto il fervor.
Quant' è leggiadro! Regina, o dama

That may this day, perhaps, be revealed.
Sly Cupid is playing his part,
And in jest will exert all his art.
The merry god disports here
And delight to hold his court
Amidst these groves and bowers.

URB: (Laughing.) Nothing can this knight behold.

CHO: (Repeating.) Nothing can this knight behold.

URB: But groping tries to find his way.
Groups of boys, with shouting noise,
Follow, in sport.

CHO: Troops of boys, with shouting noise,
Follow, in sport!

URB: But their sisters, in showers,
Throw on him sweet flowers.

CHO: (Laughing.) Ha, ha!

URB: You have not heard, etc.
An astonishing pageant, quite charming to see.

CHO: An astonishing pageant, quite charming to see.

URB: A veil conceals his eyes from view,
Yet the young maids pursue his form.

CHO: Oh, what a joke—this is a treat!

URB: Nigh to the castle he comes, we may see,
Oh, what a treat now for us there will be!

CHO: Yes, he approaches.

URB: Oh, what a treat!
He comes—he is near—
Behold! he is here! (Pointing towards the steps.)
(Enter Raoul, with his eyes bandaged—he is led from the steps to the front.—Some of the Ladies look at him attentively and retreat, while others surround him.)

MARG: It is Sir Raoul de Nangis, our mysterious hero.
Such loyalty deserves to be rewarded.
I absolve you from your oath;—
You may remove the veil.

RAO: Oh, Heaven! where am I?
Do I see rightly? Is it an illusion or a dream?

RAO: Beauty bright! divine enchantress!
Who to my raptured sight are given,—
Are you mortal, or are you goddess?
Am I on earth, or am I in Heaven?
Speak! oh speak, lovely being!

MARG: (Aside.) Ah! now indeed I well can all divine
She, too, has obeyed the voice of love!

Far non potria scelta miglior.	He's really charming; not queen nor princess Could ever have made better choice.
RAU: D' un umil cavalier, aggradite i servigi.	RAO: A humble cavalier begs his services to offer.
MARG: Dell' ubbidienza sua M' è duopo ancora un pegno.	MARG: But first of his obedience It is meet he give some token.
RAU: Lo giuro a vostri piè. Ogni vostro desir, obbedirò.	RAO: At your feet now hear me swear, In all things I'll be true to you!
MARG: (Da se.) Ah, d' una tal conquista, Se ne bramassi il vanto! Si, nulla è facil tanto; Ma no, or sol si dè! Poichè la sua bella Si fida al mio zelo, Piacergli per ella, E non gia per me.	MARG: (Aside.) Ah! if I were coquettish— Heaven! here's a situation! I declare I feel a palpitation;— But no, it would not do! On my faith relying, She is dying for him; And though it is rather trying, I will be true to her!
RAU: A voi la vita e il core, A voi la spada io sacro, Per cielo e per l' amore La morte affronterò.	RAO: To you my heart I proffer, My honor and my sword. And even death would suffer For heaven and my adored.
MARG: O, come, a quel suo ardore Mi batte il core in seno! Sperate, e lieti appieno Io rendervi saprò.	MARG: How strongly my heart beats,— How much I like his zeal! Believe me, sir, I only wish To seal your happiness.
RAU: Ah! poichè questa bella Riposa sul mio zel, Punire saprò quella Che mi mancò da fe. Entrano i Signori di Corte.—Cattolici si mettono da una parte, i Protestanti dell' altra.—La Regina presenta Raul a San Bris e Nevers, che gli fanno lieta accoglienza.—Un Gentiluomo della Corte presenta un foglio a Margarita.	RAO: Ah! since this lady confides And places her faith in me, I shall forget the beauty Who proved to be faithless. (Enter the Nobles of the Court.—The Catholics range themselves on one side, the Protestants on the other. The Queen presents Raoul to St. Bris and Nevers, who receive him with great courtesy.—A Gentleman of the Court presents a royal dispatch to Margaret.)
MARG: (A San Bris e Nevers, dopo aver letto in foglio.) Carlo, mio buon fratello, Che il vostro zel conosce, ambo a Parigi Questa sera vi vuol per un disegno Ch' io non conosco.	MARG: (To St. Bris and Nevers, after reading dispatch.) Charles, my good brother, Well knowing your great zeal, Wills that you both forthwith go to Paris, On private matters not revealed to me.
NEV. E SAN BRIS: Sommessi entrambi al suo desir noi ciamo.	NEV. & ST. BRIS: His will is our law,—we obey.
MARG: Sì, ma siate prima al mio. Grazie all' Imen che quì stringer desio, Ogni rancor obliando, è mestiero a ciascuno, Come a piè dell' altare, d' un inviolabil pace Il giuro pronunciare; e voi pure, o Signori, Un voto sol congiunga. (Raul, Nevers, San Bris, e i Signori si radunano presso Margarita e fanno il giuramento:—) Per la fè, l' onore, che i nostri avi esaltarò, Noi giuriam per l' acciaro che a no il ciel confidò, Per quel Dio, che punisce chi mentitor si fà, Innanzi a voi giuriamo un eterna amistà.	MARG: Yes, but first attend to mine. First swear that, by the marriage vow, Which each this day shall plight, No more shall enmity prevail,— No more each others' lives assail, In party feud or fight. (Raoul, Nevers, St. Bris, and the Nobles, gather round the Queen, and take the oath:—) We swear by our forefathers bold, The Queen, and all her powers, That kindly acts and generous thoughts Shall evermore be ours.
MAR: Per le fè, per l' onore, etc. Giammai non sia tra noi Nè amistà, nè pietà!	MAR: By my faith and hope I swear, etc., That kindly acts and generous thoughts, For them, can never be ours.
CHO: Noi giuriam, noi giuriamo, Per la fè, per l' onore, etc. Un eterna amistà.	CHO: By faith and honor we now swear, etc., That for each other friendly acts Shall alone be ours.
RAU. NEV. E SAN BRIS: Providenza, dolce madre, Fa che scenda sulla terra La concordia che ci serra In fraterna pace ognor!	RAO., NEV. & ST. BRIS: Great Providence! oh, gentle mother, Consecrate this holy rite, Once again our hearts unite, Make each respect his brother!
MAR: Providenza, dolce madre, Sul mio sire fa che scenda L' alma luce che lo renda Co' tuoi figli in pace ognor!	MAR: Great Providence! oh, gentle mother! To him I serve dispense the power, In this solemn trying hour, To guard the faith of each true brother!
MARG: Voglia il Cielo ascoltar, E benedir i giuramenti vostri!	MARG: May Heaven above your hearts direct, That so you may respect your oaths!
URB E DAMIGELLE: I giuramenti vostri Degni il Ciel benedir!	URB. & LADIES: The oath they've sworn, oh Heaven, bless, And ever in their hearts impress!
RAU. E NEV: Si, innanzi a voi giuriamo Al Cielo d' obbedir.	RAO. & NEV: Before you all we swear, this day to obey, The will of Heaven.
MAR: Guerra e morte, giammai Amità ne pietà.	MAR: War and death, but friendship never,— With them strife soon their oath will sever.
TUTTI: Innanzi a voi giuriam Pel Cielo di morir! (Esce San Bris.)	ALL: We swear, before great heaven on high, That for our faith we'd freely die! (Exit St. Bris.)
MARG: Or deggio presentar a vostri sguardi La bella fidanzata. La promessa a tenere de voi lieve sorà. Ricomparisce San Bris, conducendo Valentina verso Raul.	MARG: And now you shall be presented to the lady, Your beauteous betrothed. To fulfill your promise you will not find difficult. (Re-enter St. Bris, leading Valentina towards Raoul.)
RAU: (Con voce quasi soffocata.) Giusto Ciel! che mai veggio?	RAO: (With a stifled voice.) Great Heaven! what do I see?
MARG: Onde il terrore?	MARG: Why this astonishment?
RAU: È lei, è lei che iu un tal dì m' offrite?	RAO: What! is this the bride you would offer to me?
MARG: Con l'Imeneo, e l'amor.	MARG: Yes, to marry and to love.
RAU: Tradimento, o perfidia! Io sposo suo?—giammai, giammai!	RAO: What perfidy! what treachery! I her husband? never, never!
TUTTI: O, Cielo!	ALL: Oh, Heaven!
MARG., URB., VAL., E DAME: O, delir! qual oltraggio crudele! A spezzar chi lo sforza un tal nodo.	MARG., URB., VAL. & LADIES: What dire madness can possess him, To thus reject her hand?
RAU: Mi tradir, o perfidio crudele! Io per sempre rifiuto un tal nodo.	RAO: Perfidiously am I betrayed,— Her hand with scorn reject!
NEV. E SAN BRIS: O, rossor, qual affronto crudele! Di vendetta or la voce sol odo.	NEV. & ST. BRIS: Oh, what disgrace! what outrage deep! I live but for revenge.
MAR: All' onor per mostrarsi fedele, Si doveva spezzar questo nodo.	MAR: He by refusing thus her hand, Avenges the insult.

CORO: O, delir, qual oltraggio crudele,
Chi lo sforza a spezzar un tal nodo!

VAL: L' como io mai potei
Mertar cotanto oltraggio?
Vinta dal duol perdei
La speme ed il coraggio.

RAU: E soffrir io dovrei
Tant' ont e tanto oltraggio!

NEV. E SAN BRIS: Tremar, languir io sento
Il core a tanto oltraggio!

MARG., URB., VAL. E DAME: O deliro, o demenza!
Ite lontau da quì.

RAU: Non più Imen, tradimento, perfidia!
Ma l' oltraggio saprò col valore
Sì, più tardi saprò col valore
Lavar l' onta, far salvo l' onor.

NEV. E SAN BRIS: Mio furor sol col sangue fia calmo!
Sì, l' oltraggio saprò vendicar;—
Vien partiam, che purir l' offensore
A me tocca e far salvo l' onor.

MAR: Il mio core fa plauso al valore
Di Raul, che spezzò quest' Imene.
Ah! partiam, nel suo giusto furore,
Saprà bene far salvo l' onor.

VAL: Nel mio cor più non avvi speranza;
In un giorno il coraggio mancò;
Ho perduto la pace, l' amore,
E per me più non v' è che dolor.

MARG: D' un amor che ignorava il potere
Prese impero avvampò nel suo cor.

CORO: Ah, partiamo! Ei punir l' offensore
Saprà bene, e far salvo l' onor.

FINE DELL ATTO PRIMO.

ATTO II

SCENA I

Un prato sulle sponde della Senna.—A sinistra un osteria, presso la quale molti, giovani studenti, Cattolici sono seduti in compagnia delle loro belle.—A destra un altra osteria, ove sono varii Soldati Ugonotti che bevono e giocano a dadi.—Più verso il fondo l' esterno d' una Capella.—La scena è ingombra di gente d' ogni classe che va e viene.

CORO DI PASSAGGERI:
Quest' è giorno di festa,
Tregua diamo al lavor,
E in allegria modesta
Scordiam ogni dolor.

CORO DI SOLDATI UGONOTTI:
Rataplan, rataplan, rataplan!
(Imitando con le mani il battere del tamburo.)
Con la spada di battaglia
Che non teme la mitraglia
A' guerrieri della fè
Dissi andiam, venite a me.
Sono il vostro capitano,
A vi guido alla vittoria,
O del Cielo all' alma gloria;—
Presto andiam, venite a me.
A noi bravi Calvinisti,
Son le figlie de' papisti;
A noi gloria, a noi bottino,
A noi gioia, a noi buon vino.
Tutto al forte quì appartiene,
E il buon vin serbato in cella:
Per gli altari, e per le cene
Colmerà il nostro bicchier.
Rataplan, rataplan, rataplan! etc.
Sì, beviam, viva la guerra!
Sì, beviamo a Coligny.
In questa momento una Processione di giovane Figlie Cattoliche, compare a destra, accompagnando il corteggio dello sposalizio di Nevers e Valentina, che, sequiti da lor parenti ed amici, si diriggono verso la capella a manca.

LITANIE:
Ave Maria,
O Vergin pia,
Prega il Signor
Pel peccator!
Sempre sei stella
Nella procella,
E dall' error,
Ne salvi ognor!
Salve, o Maria,
O Vergin pia!
Entra Marcello in scena col capello in testa.

MAR: Il Signor di San Bris?

COR: Tu parlargli non puoi.

MAR: Perchè?

CORO: La fronte inclina!

MAR: Per qual ragion ciò fare?
Quivi non avvi altar.

CORO: Ah, l' empio!

BOIS: Egli ha ragion.

CORO: Rataplan, etc.

CHO: What madness! oh, what insult dire,
To thus reject her hand!

VAL: Oh, how have I deserved this stain,
This outrage at his hands?
Grief now dispels all hope while he brands
My brow with shame.

RAO: Oh, how can I endure this shame?
This outrage deep efface?

NEV. & ST. BRIS: My heart with bursting rage is filled,
At this severe disgrace!

MARG., URB., VAL. & LADIES: Oh, what outrageous madness!
Away, and leave this place!

RAO: Though treason and malice my hopes may overturn,
No power shall make me confirm this marriage.
No more shall I hold myself bound by my vow,
And the fury is vain that you wreak on me now.

NEV. & ST. BRIS: I tremble with rage when I think of the shame;
But mine be the task to avenge her fair fame.
His blood shall flow for this outrage in torrents,
For honor insulted has called for the blow.

MAR: It is the pride of his heart has his courage inspired,
It is a proper disgust that his feelings have fired;
There is honor and faith in breaking his vow,
And your fury is vain that you wreak on him now.

VAL: Oh, what have I done to deserve this great scorn?
My poor heart is breaking, and shaken each nerve;
I have lost at one blow all my heart held most dear,
And nothing can avail in my misery here.

MAR: Ah! she knew not how great the power of love,
In the heart that she gave so freely.

CHO: Ah, away! to punish this offender, we trust,
He knows how, and his honor thus save.

END OF THE FIRST ACT.

ACT II

SCENE I

A meadow on the banks of the Seine.—On the left an inn, near which several Catholic students and young girls are seated.—On the right another inn, where various Huguenots are seen drinking and playing at dice.—In the background, the exterior of a Chapel.—The back of the stage is crowded with persons of every description, passing to and fro.

CHORUS OF CITIZENS:
From our labors reposing,
With dance and with song,
In mirth and in revelry
The hours pass along.

CHORUS OF HUGUENOT SOLDIERS.:
Rataplan, rataplan, rataplan!
(Imitating with hands the beating of the drum.)
Upon the foe like lightning flying,
The Papal wolves to the death defying,
He cried, "Who would be free, follow me!
Your old faithful captain leads you,
To death or victory he precedes you—
to death or victory, follow me!"
Long live our captain—long live he!
Drink to our father, Coligny!
Warriors brave our armies swell,
Riches great our coffers tell,
While daughters of our foemen fell
Yield to our power.
To us belongs all strength in arms;
While store of wine our spirit charms,
And with its potent draughts inspired,
We pass the hour.
Rataplan, rataplan, rataplan!
Yes, war—drink to war!
A health to Coligny!
(At this moment a Procession of young Catholic maidens enters on the right, accompanying the bridal cortège of Nevers and Valentina, who, followed by their relations and friends, advance towards the chapel on the left.)

LITANY:
Ave Maria,
Oh, holy Virgin,
Look down upon us!
Raise your voice for us,
And pardon ask!
You can protect us,
You can direct us,
This is your task!
Ave Maria,
Oh, holy Virgin!
(Enter Marcel, without removing his hat.)

MAR: His lordship of St. Bris?

CHO: You cannot speak to him.

MAR: Why not?

CHO: Bend, sir, your knee!

MAR: Why should I do so?
I see no altars here.

CHO: Heretic!

BOIS: He is right.

CHO: Rataplan, etc.

CORO DI CATTOLICI: L' alme lor son già perdute:
O i profani ch' esser denno
Arsi in terra, e che salute
Non avranno estinti ancor.
(Danso.)
Entrano San Bris, Nevers, Maurevert, uscendo dalla Capella.

NEV: (A San Bris.) Per adempir ad un solenne voto,
Fin a stasera a piè del sacro altar
Rimanersi domanda Valentina in preghira;
Obbedirele voglio, e, degli amici insieme,
A riprender verro la sposa mia,
Per quindi accompagnarla al mio castello.
(Esce.)

SAN BRIS: Così s' estinguerà con queste illustra
Nodo l' oltraggio che Raul ne fece
Col suo rifuto; ma scordare nol posso;
S' ei s' offre a' colpi miei—

MAR: (Entrando con una lettera in mano, e con aria d' importanza.) Al Signor di Sant Bris, Il mio Signore questa lettera invia, ed io che.

SAN BRIS: (Interrompendolo.) Porgi!
E di Raul alfine ei tornera.
(Prende la lettera e legge.)

MAR: Con la Regina, tutti tre pocanzi
Lasciammo la Turrena, e giungemmo a Parigi.

SAN BRIS: E grazie al Ciel ne rendo!
Sfidare ei' m' osa, e mandami il cartello!

MAR: O, Cielo! qual sorpresa!

SAN BRIS: Quest' oggi istesso al Prè an Clercs, di notte
Quando l' ombre faran sgombre le vie,
Ei promette di venir.

MAU: Un Dio vendicatore
Lo spinge al suo destin!

SAN BRIS: (A Marcello.) L' aspetteremo.
(A Maurevert.) La sfida de Nevers
Si tenga ascosa in un giorno d' Imen correr non de?
In certame fatal periglio alcuno.

MAU: E voi neppur, per castigare un empio
Altri mezzi vi son che approva il Cielo.

SAN BRIS: E quai son dessi?

MAU: Meco venite, e chiara
L' opra saprete ch' oggi il Ciel prepara.
(Rientrano nella Capella.)
Comincia a Fare oscuro.—S' ode la campana del Coprifuoco.—

CHO. OF CATHOLICS: Their souls are wholly lost,
Profane and impious men,
Who ought to suffer once on earth,
And after death again.
(A Dance.)
(Enter St. Bris, Nevers and Maurevert, from the Chapel.)

NEV: (To St. Bris.) To fulfill a cherished vow,
At the altar's foot, in solemn prayer,
Valentina desires to linger silent there;
It is well; and followed by my numerous friends,
I will return to seek the joys most dear,
And bid her welcome home with heart sincere.
(Exit.)

ST. BRIS: And thus by this alliance great and politic,
May I punish Sir Raoul's insolent refusal;
But not so soon shall I forget it,
And should he cross my path—

MAR: (Entering with a letter in his hand, and with an air of importance.) For the Count de St. Bris
My master sends this letter, and bids me say—

ST. BRIS: (Interrupting him.)
Give it to me!
Sir Raoul has returned, then, at last.
(Takes and reads letter.)

MAR: With the Queen we three have lately quitted
Fair Touraine, and come to Paris.

ST. BRIS: And now I thank you Heaven!
He dares defy me, and sends a challenge!

MAR: Oh, Heaven! what do I hear?

ST. BRIS: At evening this day, near to the Pré-aux-Clercs,
When shades of night in peace shall wrap the spot,
He will come.

MAU: Here, then, he'll shortly be;
With Heaven's aid the wretch shall not escape!

ST. BRIS: (To Marcel.) We shall await him.
(To Maurevert.) Conceal this from De Nevers;
I would not on his bridal day
He should be mixed up in this fray.

MAU: Neither should you, for to punish such a crime
Heaven will surely divine some chastisement.

ST. BRIS: What do you say?

MAU: Heaven wills it; come, and you shall know
What means are in your reach to end your woe.
(Exeunt into the Chapel.) (Night comes on.—The Curfew-

Vari borghesi traversano la scena.—Un Arciero seguito bella veglia notturna fa la guardia.

L' ARC: Rientrate, abitanti di Parigi,
E nell' albergo suo ognun sen vada.
Partir è uopo da questo loco,
Che questa è l' ora del coprifuoco.

CORO: Rientrate, etc.
(La folla si desperde.—Soldati entrano in un osteria, i borghesi, le donne, e gli Studenti nell' alta.) Entrano San Bris e Maurevert, dalla Capella.

SAN BRIS: (Con mistero a Maurevert.) Or d' accordo noi siam, ben intendesti?

MAU: In men d' un ora
Tu poi contar su nostri amici ancora.
(Escono.)
Valentina comparisce alla porta della Capella.

VAL: O terror! mi spaventa l' eco de' miei piè.
Perd to ho la ragione!
E vaneggia il mio cor!
A ognun nascosta dietro a quell' altare,
Sentii tremando, aimè!
Quella trama crudele!
Sottrar lo deo dalle nemiche squadre.
Non per lui solo, o Ciel?
Ma per l' onor d'un padre.
Come mai prevenir potrò Raul!
Entra Marcello.

MAR: L' aspetterò, anch' io combatterò;
E s' egli muore, io pure morirò.

MAR: Nella notte io sol quì veglio—
Ah! mi par che alcun quì viene;
Ma prudenza mi trattiene—
Da lontano osserverò.

VAL: Ciel, pietà del mio dolore!
Quest' è il loco, e incalzan l' ore,
Come mai, con qual destrezza
Dal periglio il salverò?

MAR: Chi va là?

VAL: L, lieta sorte!
Di Marcel la voce essa è.

MAR: A quest' ora, in questo loco,
Chi mi chiama, chi va là?

VAL: Di quà vieni!

MAR: Chi va là?
La parola, o sei tu morto!

VAL: Raul.
(Avvanzando.)

MAR: Ah, questo basta! Una donna e velata!

VAL: Tremi tu?

bell is heard.—Various Citizens traverse the stage.—An Officer, followed by the Night Watch, comes on guard.)

OFF: Retire, citizens of Paris,
Shut yourselves within your houses,
Let all noise cease, depart in peace:
The curfew hour has come.

CHO: Retire, etc.
(The crowd disperses—Soldiers enter one inn, the Citizens, the Women, and the Students, the other.)
(Enter St. Bris and Maurevert, from the Chapel.)

ST. BRIS: (mysteriously to Maurevert.) It is agreed then—you well understand me?

MAU: In one hour from this time
Your friends will all be here assembled.
(Exeunt.)
(Enter Valentina, from the porch of the Chapel.)

VAL: Oh, Heaven! at my own footfall I tremble!
My brain is sore distraught!
Have I heard them aright?
Behind yon sainted shrine, concealed from view,
Each word fell on my ear:
A horrid plot to take away his life!
I seek to save him from their treachery,
Not for his sake alone, oh Heaven!
But to preserve a father's honor.
How can I warn Raoul of his peril?
(Enter Marcel.)

MAR: I'll wait for him here—I too, will fight;
If he falls, I will die with him!

MAR: Here by night I wander alone—
Ah! what sound?—footsteps come this way!
Prudence counsels to conceal me.
Yes, I'll watch, and still be near.

VAL: Oh, great Heaven! pity my anguish!
The dread moment fast approaches!
How, ah! how shall I inform him
Of all I know; and all I fear?

MAR: Who goes there?

VAL: Oh, how fortunate!
It is the voice of good Marcel.

MAR: At this hour, in this place,
Who calls on me?—who goes there?

VAL: Pray, come here!

MAR: Who goes there?
Give the word, quickly, or you die!

VAL: Raoul.
(Advancing.)

MAR: Ah, all is well! What! a woman, veiled?

VAL: Are you afraid?

MAR: Che? io timor! No, son Marcel Son la spada d'Israel, E 'l terror dell' infedel.	MAR: Who? I afraid! No, I am Marcel! The old sword of Israel, As the vile infidels know full well.
VAL: Or m' odi ben, Raul, Or dovrà quì recarsi.	VAL: Now hearken, pray; Raoul has here an assignation?
MAR: È ver.	MAR: It is true.
VAL: Per un duello.	VAL: For a duel.
MAR: È ver: contro un profano,— A vendicar verrà L' onor e i dritti suoi.	MAR: True: with a man of sin,— Which, by the aid of his good sword, Fear not, he'll bravely win.
VAL: Ch' ei non venga quì solo, Ma forte scorta il segua. (Esce Marcello.) Ah! l' ingrato d' offesa mortale Ha ferito un cor puro e fedele! Ed ancor quell' immagin crudele Cerco invan cancellar dal mio cor. Voglio dunque salvar la sua vita Come un giorno ei salvava il mio onor;— Se poi deggio scordarlo, morrò. Rientra Marcello.	VAL: Let him not venture here, Unless his friends are near. (Exit Marcel.) Victim of unrequited love, My heart for ever dead! Yet, spite of all, this bosom throbs For him I never must wed. I'll watch over his life and honor, As he did over mine; And oh, to save him, life resign. (Re-enter Marcel.)
MAR: Io volea prevenirlo e salvarlo, Ma scordai che di casa egli uscì; Egli quì m' ordinò d' aspettarlo. Ove adesso trovarlo potrò Come adesso poterlo avvisar? Giusto Ciel! se di quà m' allontan Può quell' orda assalirlo ad un tratto, Cercherà di difendersi invano Domandando Marcello ei morrà. Ah, restiam! ma quì sol che potrò? Qual fedel servitore morire Sul suo corpo, tu, o Ciel, mi concedi; Tu l' angoscia del core che vedi, A miei voti pietà non negar.	MAR: How, oh, how can I warn him? He has left his abode, And at this spot we are to meet, This fated place I must not leave, For where to find him I know not,— No guide have I to direct my steps. The assassins may fall upon him— Then his servant should be near to him. He shall never vainly call upon me; No, no, I will wait for him here. Oh, Heaven! at least this concede, That I freely may share his peril; To the anguish of one faithful heart, Oh, listen, and grant his sad prayer.
VAL: Intesi siamo;—addio!	VAL: You know enough:—farewell!
MAR: No, chi sei tu, pria dimmi.	MAR: No, say first, who are you?
VAL: Io son—	VAL: I am—
MAR: Ebben!	MAR: Proceed!
VAL: Io sono— Una donna, o Marcello, che l'adora, E che morrà ma per salvar suoi dì.	VAL: I am— A woman, Marcel, who loves him,— Who would give my life away for him.
MAR: E fia vero?	MAR: Can this be true?
VAL: Tu comprender non puoi ne sapere, Qual m' affanna indicibil tormento Se la fede, l' amore, il dovere A vicenda mi straziano il cuor. Per salvare una vita si cara, Padre, onore, tradisco ed oblio! Ma il perdono che spero de Dio Mi sostiene, m' infonde vigor.	VAL: Ah! my bosom is tortured with anguish, To which no tongue can give expression! In torments unceasing I languish, In the conflict between duty and love! To preserve one whose life I must cherish, I betray both a parent and honor! Every hope upon earth now perishes— All I ask for is pardon above!
MARCEL: Non pentirtio giovinetta, Dell' affetto a lui mostrato; Deh non pianger, ed accetta il tributo del mio cor! La preghiera del vegliardo, paria un ben dal ciel bramato: Di pietà per te un sguardo; Si, otterrà dal tuo signor.	MARCEL: Grieve not, grieve not, noble child! Marcel is confessing his wrongs, Here gives you now an old man's blessing, Yes, his blessing and his love! Weep not, weep not, I implore you, Heaven may yet restore you to peace: It shall be my humble prayer; For, whatever your creed. It is from above!
Dir intesi che la donna Ha lo sguardo e il cor fallace, Ma costei non è mendace Quì venir sembra dal Ciel. (Esce Valentina, e prende rifugio nella Capella.) Grave danno il minaccia, Ed io ignoro qual sia. Eh! voi mie vecchie gambe all' erta state, Per sottrarre il meschin dal suo periglio Ciela! è lui, e San Bris! Entrano San Bris, Raul e quattro Testimonii.	I have ever been led to believe, That all women were born to deceive; But on her face sweet truth is impressed, And with Heaven's own goodness seems blessed. (Exit Valentina, taking refuge in the Chapel.) Some great danger hovers over him, Though what it is I cannot tell. You must be watchful now, old soldier, To save his life you love so well. Ah! he comes, and with him St. Bris! (Enter St. Bris, Raoul, and four Seconds.)
SAN BRIS: (A Raul.) Ah! nel medesmo tempo Ambo esser quì. Va ben.	ST. BRIS: (To Raoul.) Ah! both are here met At the appointed hour. It is well.
RAU: Che dubitaste forse dell' esatezza mia.	RAO: Doubted you that I should keep my word?
MAR: (Da se.) Or come mai del tradimento infame Sventar le trame?	MAR: (Aside.) How can I frustrate their treachery, And impart to him their designs?
RAU: (A Marcello.) Sei tu, mio buon Marcello?	RAO: (To Marcel.) You here, my good Marcel?
MAR: Sì, dal Ciel scese un angelo, Che annunziò la tempesta. Signor, quì ascoso nu tradimento v' è.	MAR: Yes, an angel appeared to me, Foretelling the coming danger. Treason lurks beneath your feet.
RAU: Deliri tu, Marcel? I patti del certame, or a fissar io lascio a voi. Signori, m' affido al vostro onor. (Indirizzandosi a' quattro Testimonii.)	RAO: You're surely mad, Marcel! These gentlemen fix the rules of our combat. I have confidence in their honor. (Turning to the Seconds.)
TUTTI: (Meno Marcello.) De dritti miei ho l' alma accesa— Per vendicarmi dall' offesa Il ferro sol gindicar de'. Voglio ragione del vile oltraggio, Temprato acciaro, e buon coraggio, Per tutti il Cielo, ciascun per sè.	ALL: (Except Marcel.) In a good cause relying, In death the foe defying, Content to stand or fall, While this quarrel just defending, On the sword alone depending, Each for himself, and Heaven for all.
MAR: (Da se.) Oh, qual dolore il ciel mi dona! Piangi, Marcel, Dio n' abbandona! Povero amico, tradito egli è! Pietà Signore, per lui mercè!	MAR: (Aside.) Oh, what a sight for these old eyes! Weep, oh Marcel! God hears you not! For him, my master, heed my cries! Look down in mercy from the skies!
MAR. E SAN BRIS: La tema in lor già si palesa, La spada in mano or già lor pesa, Ma dell' assalto si vegga il fin.	MAR. & ST. BRIS: With fear their faces now turn pale, Their swords are trembling in their hands. Let us now the attack begin.
TUTTI GLI ALTRI: Sì, noi sprezziamo un tale oltraggio, Felloni or su, presto in difesa,— Già del pugnar desio la fin! Andiam, Signori, la spada in man A uostri piè cader dovran; In guardia, in guardia, felloni in guardia! Si alfine esangui al suol cadran! (Mentre stanno per azzufarsi, Marcello, osservando infondo vede avvanzar qualcuno, e tosto	ALL THE OTHERS: We all despise your base conduct,— Come on, let each himself defend,— Let's hasten to the combat's end! Proceed; let each with steel against steel, Fight on until his foeman fall;— Soon our deep vengeance you shall feel; Come on, though death may grasp us all!

si precipita fra i combattenti.)	(Just as they are on the point of fighting, Marcel sees some one approaching, and throws himself between the combatants.)
MAR: Arrestatevi olà! alcun quì giunge. (Rau., i suoi Testimonii, e Marcello, vengosi circondati dai Seguaci di Maurevert.) Un tradimento è questo—il Ciel vi mira! (S' ode nell' interno dell' osteria il canto dei Soldati Ugonotti.)	MAR: Hold, hold! some one approaches. (Raoul, his Seconds, and Marcel, are surrounded by the followers of Maurevert.) Ah, what treachery—Heaven sees you! (From the inn on the right is heard the song of the Huguenot Soldiers.)
CORO INTERNO: Rataplan, viva la guerra, etc.	CHO: (inside.) Rataplan, upon the foe, etc.
MAR: (Forte battendo alla porta dell' osteria.) Coligny!—difensor della fede! Tutto il nemico è sorto— Reca il Ciel la vittoria alle nostr' armi.	MAR: (Knocking loudly at the door of the inn.) Coligny!—defend your faith! Hasten, the foe is rising— May Heaven crown us with victory!
SAN BRIS: A me, studenti miei, quivi accorrete; Quest' è un vil tradimento—ormai venite! Cattolici escono in folla dall' osteria a manca; da quella a destra escono gli Ugonotti. Ambo i partiti si guardano con aria minacciosa.	ST. BRIS: Students, come out— haste to our aid; Help, help! for we are betrayed! (The Catholics come out from the inn on the left, the Huguenots from that on the right. They look at each other in threatening attitudes.)
TUTTI: Siam quì, felloni—indietro!	ALL: We are here—begone, varlets!
CAT: Facitor di preghiero, Turba di fantucchiere!	CAT: You regiment of hypocrites, Mutterers of Prayers!
UG: Riponete le spade, Pinzocheri guerrier!	HUG: Put up your swords, You cowards' heirs!
CAT: Onor di Calvinisti!	CAT: You honor to Calvin!
UG: Beì fregi di Papisti!	HUG: You jewels of Rome!
CAT: Si abbruci l' infedel!	CAT: The infidels let us destroy!
UG: A morte l' impostor!	HUG: By our hands the impostors shall die!
DONNE CAT: Cenare alla caserna, A miscredenti insiem!	CAT. WOMEN: Supping in the barracks there With unbelievers vile!
DONNE UG: Danzare alla taverna, Agli studenti insiem!	HUG. WOMEN: While you in public-houses Have been reveling the while!
CAT: Quetatevi, sfrontate!	CAT: Away, degraded ones!
UG: Tacete, svergognate!	HUG: Hypocrites, hold your tongues!
CAT: Gioielle d' Ugonotti!	CAT: Chaste dames of the Huguenots!
UG: Amiche de bigotti!	HUG: Pure mistresses of bigots!
TUTTI: Scaldata abbiam la testa; Zitto, lontan di quà! La morte a chi resiste; Tacete, zitto là! In questo momento entrano alcune Guardie reale con torce, schiarando la via alla Regina, che entra in scena a cavallo. I disputanti si arrestano.	ALL: Our brains are on fire,— Hence, be silent, away! Death to all who resist, Or who dare disobey! (At this moment enter the Royal Guards, bearing torches, and preceding the Queen, who enters on horseback. The disputants desist.)
MAR: Alto là! ognun rispetti la Regina.	MAR: Desist! the Queen approaches!
MARG: Come, in Parigi ancora, Del fratel mio in presenza, Gli eccessi de' partiti Si denno paventar? Entrar non posso In seno a lari miei Senza udire, ò trovar, discordie e guerra?	MARG: What, even here in Paris, Beneath the eyes of my brother, Still the excess of your party spirit Have I to fear? My palace, even, I cannot enter in tranquility; But sounds of strife, instead, greet my ear.
SAN BRIS: E chi dessi accusar? Colui che ne tradiva, (Mostrando Raul.) E ne sforzava a domandar giustizia.	ST. BRIS: And who is to be blamed? With him was the fault; (Pointing to Raoul.) I'm forced to insist on justice.
RAU: (Mostrando San Bris.) La colpa è di lui so lo, Che contro ogni ragione Del più vile attentato Quì colpevol s' è reso.	RAO: (Pointing to St. Bris.) The fault must rest with him, Who did begin the assault Against treachery, and in defense, I but pursue what they commence.
MARG: O ciel! chi creder deggio! Chi d'un sospetto tal mi puo dar prova?	MARG: Oh Heaven! whom shall I believe? Who can give me proof of this suspicion?
MAR: La prova io dar vi posso! Essi han voluto assassinare il mio padron.	MAR: I've proof that none can ever gainsay, They basely would slay my master.
SAN BRIS: Menzogna!	ST. BRIS: It is false!
MAR: Del tradimento infame, Quivi una donna mi svelò l'arcano. E tal donna è costei! (Indicando Valentina ch' esce dalla Capella.) Entra Valentina.	MAR: A lady appeared upon this spot And disclosed to me their treachery, That is the lady approaching! (Pointing to Valentina, who is seen leaving the Chapel.) (Enter Valentina.)
SAN BRIS: Mia figlia!	ST. BRIS: My daughter!
CORO: O Cielo!	CHO: Oh Heaven!
SAN BRIS: Quale audacia! è credibil? oh, perfidia!	ST. BRIS: What audacity! can I believe it? oh, perfidy!
RAU: Come esser può?	RAO: Can this be true?
MARG: Raul, tutto saprete!	MARG: The truth must be disclosed!
VAL: Signora, per pietà!	VAL: Oh, my Queen, have pity on me!
RAU: E quel reo tradimento Di cui fui testimone Al castel di Nevers?	RAO: But her breach of faith, her perfidy, To which I myself was witness, In the house of De Nevers?
MARG: Ella v' andava Per ispezzar un odiato imene.	MARG: She went to supplicate That her hated marriage might be broken off.
SAN BRIS: E da questo mattin D' un altro ella è la sposa!	ST. BRIS: Before the morn shall dawn, She will be the bride of another!
CORO: D' un altra? oh, sommo Ciel! (Odesi lontano suono.)	CHO: Another? oh, great Heaven! (Distant music is heard.)
SAN BRIS: Ma che! ascoltate del trionfante sposo Il corteggio s' avvia. Sì, lo sento esultar d' alta allegria. Tal pompa è degna in ver De' San Bris, de' Nevers. Vedesi approdare una scialuppa, riccamente addobbata ed illuminata. Essa è occupata da Musici, Paggi, Cavalieri, e Dame, che formano il corteggio delle nozze di Nevers che sbarca il primo.	ST. BRIS: Hark! even now the bridegroom comes! The escort approaches with speed; Yes, I hear its exulting tones. And well such splendor suits, indeed, The Saint Bris and De Nevers. (A boat, richly decorated, is seen to approach, occupied by Musicians, Pages, Knights and ladies of Nevers' brilliant nuptial suite. Nevers steps first from the boat.)
NEV: (A Valentina.) Nobil donzella, Deh vieni, ove l' amore d' uno sposo ti chiama. Soddisfatti i tuoi voti, or rispondi a misi? Venite a celebrar si lieto giorno.	NEV: (To Valentina.) Noble lady, Come where joy and hope await you; True to your vow, accept of mine! And make my happiness encompass you.

(A Signori.)
Ove amistà v' aspette,
Al festin d' Imeneo.
Schiavo ognor ti sarò,
(A Valentina.)
Orgoglioso e altero
De' miei lacci d' amore.
(Tutti fanno onore agli Sposi. Nevers prende Valentina per le mano, e la guida alla barca, seguiti da San Bris e tutto il corteggio.)

GRAND CHORUS: Il destin che dal ciel lor s' appresta; Di piacer i lor dì colmerà; Il castel che risuon dalla festa, Di fortuna il soggiorno or sarà!

CHO: S' unirà delle danze all' incanto
Il fragor degli evviva e del canto;
Per lodare in lor metro la bella,
La gentil che piegava all' amor.

SOL: Non più pace all' acciaro,—oramaì
Noi dobbiam nostra sorte affidare;
E il meschin più non sappia trovare
Che di nostra vendetta il furor.
(Il corteggio si scosta dalla riva, ansiosamente guardato dalla moltitudine—Raul sostenuto da Marcello mostrasi in preda al dolore—I soldati de' due partiti si ritirano da opposti lati et con aria minacciosa.)

FINE DELL' ATTO SECONDO.

ATTO III

SCENA I

Sala nel Castello di Nevers, ornata di ritratti di famiglia.—Gran porta in fondo—A sinistra una porta che conduce agli appartamenti di Valentina.—A destra una porta segreta, e una finestra che guarda sulla strada.

Valentina uscendo da' suoi appartamenti, immersa in profondi pensieri.

VAL: Eccomi sola ormai, sola sel mio dolore!
A pianti senza fine condannar mi voleste,
O padre mio, Raul ebbe il mio core,
E a un altro voi lo prometteste! E Tu,
Che supplica invan ne' miei martiri,
Tu che permesso l' hai quest' imeneo funesto—
Gran Dio! tu raddolcir degna almeno il mio mal,
Disperdi un sovvenir al viver mio fatal!
In preda al duol, un sogno ancor mi bea
Che per lui sol in sen mi batte il cor.

(To the Suite.)
Before our friends who here await
To join our Hymeneal fête,
I'll pledge my life to you.
(To Valentina.)
I ever shall prize, all joys above,
The silken bonds of your sweet love!
(All pay their homage to the bride. Nevers takes Valentina by the hand, and leads her to the boat, followed by St. Bris and the cortege.)

GRAND CHORUS: May kind Heaven ever shed blessings over them: May content, peace, and joy, gird them round; May no care ever annoy: but, before them, In their path, oh may love still be found!

CHO: Loved and happy, now we hail you!
May no sorrows ever assail ye!
But joy be ever, ever yours,
Such as true love alone ensures.

SOLDIERS: No more peace, no more quiet,—
Nothing but revelry and riot;
Nothing but battle's fell disquiet,
Till our latest breath.
(The boat leaves the shores, anxiously observed by the crowd. Raoul, supported by Marcel, seems a prey to grief. The Soldiers of both parties, from opposite sides, regard each other with threatening attitudes.)

END OF THE SECOND ACT.

ACT III

SCENE I

A Room in the Castle of De Nevers, decorated with family portraits.—A large door at the further end.—On the left a door leading to Valentina's apartments.—On the right a door covered with tapestry, and a window overlooking the street.

Enter Valentina from her apartment, with an air of profound pensiveness.

VAL: At length I am alone,—alone with my sorrows!
To eternal woe my father has condemned me;
Raoul alone can ever possess my heart,
While you have given my hand to another!
Oh, You whom I in vain have supplicated,—
You who has allowed this fatal marriage—
High Heaven! deign at least to aid me now,
And shed sweet oblivion over dark memory!
A prey to grief which I can never Crudo pensier! Ah, non mi far più rea,

Fuggirlo vò, ed a lui penso ognor!
Da lunge ancor sua voce cara
L' amor del ciel fa in me tacer.
L' imagin sua, a piè dell' ara,
Fin sull' altar parmi veder!
Entra Raul, dalla porta in fondo.
(Vendendo comparir Raul.)
Giusto cielo? e sei tu? tu il cui temuto aspetto
Qual rimorso crudel m' insegue ognora!

RAU: Si, sì, son io che vengo, dell' ombre fra l' orrore,
A colpevole eguale sotto pena mortale,
Che dell' afflitto cor soccombe al gran dolor!

VAL: Ma che vuoi tu da me?

RAU: Nulla: vederti sol pria di morire.

VAL: (Spaventata.) Che sento? e ver pur fia?
E mio padre? e Nevers?

RAU: (Freddamente.) Sì, quì incontrarli posso.
E vero,—io lo sapea.

VAL: Di cor feroci entrambi,
T' uccideran. Ah! vanne!

RAU: Io quì li attendo.

VAL: Alcun quì viene; ah! vanne!

RAU: No, quì resto,—è per te non paventare.

VAL: (Tutta tremante.) Il padre, il mio consorte!
(Vendendoli venire.)
Per me, pel mio onor,
Deh! ne schiva il furora!
Entrano San Bris, Nevers, Tavannes, con altri Signori, Cattolici, e detta.

SAN BRIS: (A' Signori.) Un cenno della corte ora quì vi raduna,
È giunta l' ora alfine, in cui debbo ad ognuno
Un progretto svelare che già protegge il cielo,
Ch' è da gran tempo in cor della Regina!*
*Caterina de' Medici.

VAL: Io tremo!

SAN BRIS: (A Valentina.) Tu, mia figlia, or esci.

VAL: Ah, padre!

banish,
My love the only thought I ponder over;
And though I know to love him is a crime,
The more I would forget, I love the more!
Alas! powers who know my inmost thought,
Vain is the succor I implore;
For while in prayer I kneel at the altar,
The while I pray, I do but love him more!
(Enter Raoul, from the door in the centre.)
(On discovering Raoul.)
Gracious Heaven! is it he? or is it a vision
That ever haunts my every thought!

RAO: Yes, is it I, who come in the darkness of night,
Gliding like a criminal, borne down with sorrow,
Yet still living on, overwhelmed in despair!

VAL: But what would you with me?

RAO: Nothing: I hoped to see you before I die.

VAL: (Alarmed.) What do I hear?—impossible!
But my father? My husband?

RAO: (Coldly.) Yes, that I may meet them here
I know but too well.

VAL: They are still inflexible—
They will kill you. Ah, fly!

RAO: I will await them here.

VAL: Hear you not footsteps? Ah, fly!

RAO: No, I will remain; fear not for me.

VAL: (Trembling.) My father! My husband!
(Seeing them coming.)
For my sake, for my honor's sake,
Avoid them; oh, hasten and conceal yourself!
(Raoul hides himself behind the tapestry.
(Enter St. Bris, Nevers, Tavannes, followed by Noblemen, Catholics, etc.)

ST. BRIS: (To the Nobles.)
By order of the Queen, we assemble in this place;
The time has arrived when the plot must be known.
For the project which brings us salvation forever,
Is worthy the lady who sits on the throne!*
*Catherine de Medici.

VAL: I tremble!

ST. BRIS: (To Valentina.) Leave us, my daughter.

VAL: Ah, my father!

NEV: Perchè? Lo zel ch' ella ha di nostra fede
Lascia che senza rischio lei presente si possa
Del ciel, della regina le brame disvelar.

SAN BRIS: Di guai crescenti ognor e d' un empio conflitto
Volete insieme a me liberar questo suol?

I SIG: Sì, lo vogliam!

SAN BRIS: Del nostro eccelso Rè, del cielo e della patria, Volete voi con me colpire i traditor?

I SIG: Sì, lo vogliam!

SAN BRIS: Ebben! del Nume che noi tutta ainta
Il minaccioso acciar su lor sta per piombar:
Degli Ugonotti l' empia setta e ria
Fra poco sparirà.

NEV: Chi li condanna?

SAN BRIS: Il ciel?

I SIG: Il ciel!

NEV: E chi li colpirà?

SAN BRIS: Voi!

I SIG: Noi?

NEV: Io?
(Con orrore.)

SAN BRIS: D' un sacro zel l' ardore
Vi elevi e scaldi l' alma,
A voi dan forza e palma
Il Ciel, l' onore, e il Rè.
V' accenda un pio furore
Contro quel popol rio;
V' infiammi l' ardir mio,
L' amor di vostra fè.

NEV: Tradir degg' io l' onore?
Sì vil no non son io,
Ne può incolparmi il Rè.

VAL: Chi frena il suo furore?
(Indicando San Bris.)
Tu mi sostieni, o Dio?
Abbi piètà di me!

TAV: Eguale al tuo furore,
Sarà lo giuro il mio,
In sostenar le fé,

CORO: Salviam la nostra fè,
Obbediamo al Rè.

SAN BRIS: (A' Signori che lo circondano.) Può il Rè su voi contar?

I SIG: (Meno Nevers.) Sì, lo giuriam!

SAN BRIS: Io duce a voi sarò.

I SIG: (Meno Nevers.) Noi vi seguiamo.

VAL. E SAN BRIS: Ma che? Nevers solo è rimasto muto?

VAL: (Da se.) Che pensa ei mai? O Ciel! io gelo e tremo.

NEV: Why? Her virtues and zeal for the faith
Give assurance that she is worthy our confidence
And to receive the orders of our Queen.

ST. BRIS: From growing troubles, and this impious war,
You will, like me, your country still deliver?

NOBLES: We will!

ST. BRIS: Of the King, of Heaven, and our country,
You will, like me, annihilate the enemies?

NOBLES: We will!

ST. BRIS: It is well! the sword on high is swung,
Threatening vengeance on their heads;
And every Huguenot shall fall,
While far and near our fury spreads.

NEV: Who condemns them?

ST. BRIS: Heaven!

NOBLES: Heaven!

NEV: Who shall strike the blow?

ST. BRIS: You!

NOBLES: We?

NEV: I?
(With horror.)

ST. BRIS: To your country, for her honor,
You must your help afford;
And you will be victorious,
For Heaven will guide your sword.
Justice, in its vengeance
Against that impious band,
Inspires our hearts and guides our arms
To slay them from the land.

NEV: Can I my honor stain?
Disgrace it would on me bring,
Though prompted by my King.

VAL: Who can his fury now restrain?
(Pointing to St. Bris.)
Oh Heaven, I call on you!
Have mercy—pity me!

TAV: Like you I boldly swear,
Whatever, may chance, despite
To fight for our true faith.

CHO: Our faith we will defend,
Our King's command attend.

ST. BRIS: (to the Noblemen who surround him.) May the King on you depend?

ALL: (Except Nevers.) We swear it.

ST. BRIS: And I will be your leader.

ALL: (Except Nevers.) And we your followers.

VAL. & ST. BRIS: What! is Nevers alone silent!

VAL: (Aside.) What does he think? Heaven! I tremble.

NEV: I traditor feriamo, ma non senza difesa:
Non è il pugnal del vile che noi brandir dobbiamo.

SAN BRIS: Quand' il Rè tel comanda?

NEV: Ei mel comanda invan;
Del mio nome macchiar, non vola fama antica,
Fra gli antenati miei, che quì mi fanno onore,
Prodi guerrier tu vedi, non un solo assassin.

SAN BRIS: E per te la sant' opra dunque fallita audrà?

NEV: No; ma dal disonore io salvo la mia spada.
Tieni; eccola! tra noi giudichi il cielo.
(Spezzando la spada, e gettandogliela a piedi.)

VAL: Ah d' ora in poi tutto confido in voi.
Andiam, più non tardare; vi voglio far palese.
In questo momento s' aprono le porte in fondo, e compariscono Eschiorini e Capi del San Bris armati.

SAN BRIS: (Indirizzandosi a loro, e indicando Nevers.) Sia fatto prigioniere,—a noi mostrossi avverso,— Fin a doman vegliato sia da voi.

VAL: (Da se.) Possa il ciel disarmar gli sdegni suoi.

NEV: Ragion è meco e onore,
Non preme il cor timore,
Contrastar devo al Rè.

TAV: M' accende un pio furore,
Dover mi sprona e onore,
Obbedir devo al Rè.

SAN BRIS: V' accenda un pio furora,
Dover vi sprona e onore,
Obbedir dessi al Rè.

VAL: Ah! d' un mortal timore
Tutto ho compreso il core;
O Ciel, pietà di me!

CORO: M' accende un pio furora,
Dover mi sprona e onore,
Obbedir de si al Rè.
(Parte degli armati conducon via Nevers.)

SAN BRIS: E voi fedeli al Rè, e al ciel, che in sen vi vede, Nobili cor, sostegni della fede,
Cittadini e guerrieri, udite i miei pensieri.
Per la città la schiera sparsa sia
Tetra e silente, occupi ogni via.
Indi al date segnal tutti a ferir corriamo!

NEV: Strike down our foes, but bravely, face to face;
The soldier's, not the assassin's, wreath we'd claim.

ST. BRIS: But should the King command?

NEV: He would command in vain;
For, though in honor's cause my blood may flow,
Amongst my ancestors, I'd have you know,
Were heroes brave, but no assassins vile.

ST. BRIS: Through you may our purpose be betrayed?

NEV: For murder was my good sword never made.
Take it; and Heaven my judge must be.
(Unsheathing his sword, and throwing it at his feet.)

VAL: From this day forth I will confide in thee!
You must know all—a secret I would tell—
(At this moment the doors in the background open, and Officers and Soldiers of the St. Bris faction enter.)

ST. BRIS: (Addressing them, and pointing to Nevers.) I cannot trust him,—see you guard him well,—
Give him no liberty till morning dawns.

VAL: (Aside.) May Heaven their angry feelings soothe.

NEV: Honor is on my side.
Although I have denied
Obedience to my King.

TAV: My heart's inflamed within me
By honor, faith, and duty,—
Let us obey the King.

ST. BRIS: Honor now combines with duty,
Inflames your hearts and guides your minds
In fealty to your King.

VAL: A mortal fear seizes my mind
With terror's chill my heart freezes—
Will Heaven bring no comfort?

CHO: Our hearts are on fire with fury,—
In faith and duty we desire
To serve our King with zeal.
(Soldiers surround Nevers and lead him off.)

ST. BRIS: And you who listen to the call of Heaven,
Devoted to the cause with fearless zeal,
Citizens and soldiers, attend to my command:
In every quarter where the rebels meet,
Cautious and silent fill each neighboring street;
And at the signal given, strike on every hand!

CORO: Sì, corriamo a ferir!	ALL: Yes, we'll strike on every hand!
SAN BRIS: ((Indirizzandosi ad uno de' Signori.) Tu, De Bresme, co' tuoi cingi l' albergo Di Coligny, fa che primiero ei mora!	ST. BRIS: (Addressing some of the Officers.) De Bresme, with your friends, fly to the Admiral's For Coligny must be the first to die!
CORO: Sì, mora pel primier!	ALL: Yes, he first shall die!
SAN BRIS: (Indirizzandosi a varii altri.) Voi alla Torre di Nesle, Ove de traditori I condottieri infidi uniti sono, Preparando la festa a Margarita Ed al Re di Navarra.	ST. BRIS: (Addressing others of the Officers.) You repair to the Tour de Nesle Where, mingling in the throng, You'll find our deadliest foe, At a fête which they prepare For Margaret and the King of Navarre.
CORO: Noi alla Torre di Nesle!	ALL: We'll to the Tour de Nesle!
SAN BRIS: Ascoltate! Allorchè di San Germano La prima volta udrete, a rimbombar la squilla, Attenti e muti a quel segnal d' allarme Sia pronto il cor, pronta a ferir sia l' arme. A quel funebre suon tu ovunque corri E raddoppia il furor. M' affido al tuo coraggio. E quando alfin dell' Auxerrois voi udrete, Squillare il sacro bronzo, per la volta seconda, Del ciel vendicatore nunziator di rigore;— Ciascun l' acciaro altor dovrà brandire! Ciuscuno allor de' rei dovrà perire! Quel Dio, che qui v' ascolta o benedice, Fidi guerrieri, a voi sarà di scorta!	ST. BRIS: Now, mark me well! When first from St. Germain, The solemn peal pours forth over hill and plain Telling in accents loud of dire alarms, Summon in silent night your men to arms; Inspire their minds with zeal to act their part, And by your own example fire each heart; And when at length from Auxerrois The sacred bell a second time shall peal, Then, sword in hand, arise! let all the accursed fall! It is Heaven's holy cause: nerve every arm—slay all! Servants of Heaven! the path lays well before you, It is Heaven that calls! respond, then, we implore, And God will be your guide, whom we adore!
VAL: O Cielo! o Ciel, come salvarlo posso? Ei tutto sente ne fuggir gli è dato. A lui correr vorrei, ma pur non oso! Pietoso Ciel, in tal periglio estremo Salva Raul,—per me, per me non temo! La porte in fondo sischiudono, e compariscono tre Monaci, con un paniere di ciarpe bianche.	VAL: Oh Heaven, direct me how to save him! He hears their plot, and yet cannot escape. If I only knew how my troubled course to shape! Merciful Heaven, save him from danger near! O save Raoul—for him alone I fear! (The door in front opens, and three Monks approach, carrying a basket of white scarfs.)
I MONACI: Sia gloria eterna e onore Al buon guerrier fedel Ch' oggi l'acciar brandisce Per obbedire al Ciel. (Tutti snudano la spada,—I Monaci la benedicono.)	MONKS: Honor and glory to the brave! Glory to them our cause who save— Who draw the sword in Heaven's just cause, And thus uphold its sacred laws. (They all draw their swords,—the Monks bless them.)
SAN BRIS. E MONACI: Nobili acciari e santi, che d' un reo sangue impuro Or, or vi bagnerete, O voi per cui d' Eterno Strugge un culto infedel, O santi acciar, voi benedice il Ciel!	ST. BRIS AND THE MONKS: Swords of the faithful, consecrated arms, Soon in their faithless blood you steeped shall be; Now the Most High shall strike the impious race, Be blessed, Heaven pour its blessings on you!
SAN BRIS: (Mostrando la ciarpa e la croce.) A questa bianca benda, a questa doppia croce, Sian distinti gli eletti.	ST. BRIS: (Pointing to the scarf and the white cross.) By this white cross, surmounted by the scarf, Heaven's messengers be ever known.
SAN BRIS ED I MONACI: Nè grazia, nè pietade! ferite senza tregna, Chi pugna ò si dilegua,—lo chiede il ciel, lo vuol.	ST. BRIS AND THE MONKS: No pardon, no pity! strike all and spare none, Though they meet us with valor, or like cowards run.
CORO: Corriam, corriam; feriamo! Dal fuoco e dalla spada, Imune alcun non vada, il guerriero invano Domandi a voi pietà. Cada il fanciul, la madre Non si risparmi età;—Il ciel lo vuol, l' impone! Così de' nostri falli la grazia s' otterà.	CHO: Though humble and suppliant before us they fall, No pity, no mercy, slay all—yes, slay all! Be they bowed down with age, be it child or a mother, Let our curses descend on the one and the other! For this will Heaven pardon whatever may befall.
SAN GRIS ED UN MONACO: Silenzio, amici! un detto Svegliar potria sospetto; Nessun rumor ci scopra Sia muto il labbro e il piè.	ST. BRIS AND ONE OF THE MONKS: Silence, lest we raise suspicion By some incautious act or word; Still each rumor, move in secret, Let not even your step be heard!
CORO: D' un sacro zel l' ardore Ci elevi e scaldi l' alma, A noi già dan la palma Il ciel, l' onore e il Rè.	CHO: May honor, faith and duty, Our minds and hearts inflame, And we shall be victorious, Who fight in our king's name.
SAN BRIS: V' accenda un pio furore Contro del popol rio, V' infiammi l' ardir mio Il ciel, l' onore e il Rè.	ST. BRIS: May honor, faith, and duty, Incite to strike the blow, Then you will be victorious, Against an impious foe.
CORO: Niun avvisar lor possa, Nessun rumor ci scopra; Andiamo alla sant' opra Il ciel lo vuole, e il Rè. (Escono in silenzio.) Raul soleva lentamente la cortina, si assicura che tutti sono partiti, e si slancia verso la porta in fondo, ma s' arresta sentendendo la chiudere al di fuori. Allora se dirigge verso la porta a manca, a ne vede uscir Valentina.	CHO: Let every rumor cease, Lest we may warn the foe; Such is the will of Heaven— To this great deed we go! (Exeunt all in silence.) (Raoul slowly raises the tapestry, and when he perceives that they are all gone rushes to the door in the center, but finds it fastened on the other side.—He then runs to the door on the left, and meets Valentina coming out of it.)
VAL: O Ciel, dove vai tu? Raul, a me rispondi!	VAL: Oh, Heaven, where are you going? Raoul, reply to me!
RAU: Vado a salvar gli amici, Un delitto inumano ad impedire. A pugnare, a ferire, Di si rei traditoria a sventare il furor!	RAO: I would now fly to save my friends, And cheat these plotters of their deadly ends. I'd have them take revenge, and, sword in hand, Hew down these desecrators of the land!
VAL: Ma v' è fra lor mio padre, e v' è lo sposo, Ch' or reverir degg' io. Vuoi tu punir costoro?	VAL: But amongst these enemies are some most dear— A father whom I love, a husband I revere! And would you see them slain?
RAU: Gl' infidi punirò!	RAO: I would punish their treason!
VAL: Lor spinge all' opra il ciel!	VAL: It is Heaven's high mandate they obey!

RAU: (Con ironia.) Lor spinge all' opra il ciel!
Or ecco il nume che il tuo altar consacra,
Un dio, che tra fratelli cruda strage comanda.

VAL: Ah, non parlar così.
Egli è per sua pietà
Ch' or vuol serbare in te
Un alma pura e forte,
Deh! non uscir.

RAU: Mio dover!

VAL: Tu corri a certa morte.

RAU: Se quì resto io tradisco
L' onore e l' amistà, giammai, giammai.
Stringe il periglio, il tempo,
Ai! rapido s' invola, ah! lasciami partir!

VAL: Così inerme cadresti,
Per pietà non partir, Raul!

RAU: Aimè!

VAL.: Tu mio cospir, tu l' amor mio, Abbandonarti saria marir! Io ben saprò salvar tuoi dì! salvar tuoi dì, Ah, per pietà! ascolta almen, ascolta al ciel, tu l' amormio, io ben saprò salvar.

RAU.: I mei fratei morir vegg'iso! Me lascia, oimè, da te partir; m' impon l' onor da te fuggir; Mi lascia oimè, mi lascia oimè! m'impon l' onor,— da te fuggir, Mi lascia oimè, partir m' impon l' onor!

VAL: No, Raul, questa soglia
Tu varcar non potrai!
Non mi stacco da te!

RAU: L' udirti è colpa.

VAL: E colpa è pur la mia?

RAU: Ciel!

VAL: Ma t' ascolto però! in quest' ora suprema,
Non veggo altri che te, già vicino a perir!
Resta, o Raul, se non mi spregi ancora,
Io t' imploro per me!
Sappi,—se muori,—oimè! io pur morrò.
Ah! resta, resta—io t' amo!

RAU: Tu m' ami?—O, qual brillò
Raggio d' amor celeste!
Qual suon si fece udir!
Il fato mio cambiò!
Fia ver! troppo è gioire!
Venga or la morte a me,—
Dolce sarà il morir!

VAL: O terror! che diss' io?

RAU: Ah, dillo ancor tu m' ami!
Nel fosco orro qual stella
In Ciel per me brillò!
Per sempre tuo se il brami,

RAO: (Ironically.) Heaven's high mandate!
Is this the creed of which you vainly boast?
Those are most virtuous who destroy the most!

VAL: Condemn them not,
But spare them pity's tear;
And, if you'd save your life,
Oh, stay you here!
Go not away!

RAO: I must not stay!

VAL: You run to certain death.

RAO: Longer to remain were treason,
When friendship, duty, honor call.
Now danger threats from deadly foe,
I cannot stay—ah, let me go!

VAL: Without your arms you'd surely fall!
For pity's sake, Raoul remain!

RAO: Alas!

VAL.: You are my only hope on earth now, And can you leave me here to die? I will save you—You shall not fly! I will save you! For pity's sake, for pity's sake, will you leave me, here to die . . . here to die!

RAU.: It is my brethren whom they'd murder! Detain me not, but let me fly;— honor calls; Even if I die, I must fly, I must fly! honor calls, I must fly: honor calls, I must fly!

(Raoul runs towards the door, but is followed by Valentina, who stops him.)

VAL: No, Raoul, this threshold
Your foot shall never pass!
In death I'll cling to you!

RAO: It is sin to listen or to hesitate.

VAL: And do I not sin also?

RAO: Heaven!

VAL: Yet still I remain here, and in this dreadful hour
Think of nothing but you, for you are all to me!
Stay, then, Raoul, if I'm still dear to you;
If you still love me, stay here!
If you should die, I cannot live.
Stay, I implore—oh, stay—I love you!

RAO: Oh, rapture entrancing!
Oh, transport divine!
Your words, how they change me!
What joy is now mine!
Sweet airs greet my senses!
Come, death, I'd meet your blow,
Here at the loved one's feet!

VAL: O, spare me! what have I said?

RAO: That you love me—repeat it again!
Now all clouds disappear,
While the rays of love shine!

Per sempre tuo sarà!
(S' ode il suono di lontana squilla.)

VAL: Eccò l' ora! che faccio? o mio terror!

RAU: Ah! parla ancor; prolunga
L' ineffabile sogno del mio core;
S' è un sogno il ben ch' io provo,
Fa che in eterno duri il dolce errore!

VAL: Che faccio? O, mio periglio!

RAU: Ah! parla ancor; prolunga
Di questo cor l' ebbrezza!
S' è un soguo tal dolcezza
Non resti a me avvenir!

VAL: È l' ora, or con la morte
Svanisce l' avvenir!

RAU: Notte lieta d' amor!

VAL: Notte funesta!

RAU: Vieni, fuggiam!

VAL: Ah, no!

RAU: Tu lo dicesti m' ami;—
Vieni, fuggiam!

VAL: T' arresta!

RAU: Odi quel suon funebre?
(Odesi in distanza suonar la campana.)

VAL: Ei m' agghiaccia di terror!

RAU: Dal sen di cupe tenebre qui giunge,
Un grido di furor!—
Dov' era io dunque?

VAL: Vicino a me, Raul.

RAU: Ah, sovvenir fatal!
Della strage dei miei
E l' orribil segnal!
Non più amor, non più amor!
O, rimorso! o, dolor!
Io li vedo perir!
Invano or tu mi parli,—
Io volo a salvarli,
O con essi a morir!

VAL: Che Raul, il mio dolor dunque non può toccarti il core? Dunque vuoi, vuoi, tradir, l' amor tuo, l' amor, la mia fè? E fuggire, fuggire da me, Per volare, per volare a morir! Ah, tu lo puoi, Ah, si! lo puoi Ma col veder . . . mi a tuoi piedi, a tuoi piedi spirar! E puoi nel tuo dolore? Obbliar tanto amore, aimè! aimè!

RAOUL: Non piu lai, non amore! O rimorso, o terrore!

RAU: Ah corriam,—quest' è l' ora.

VAL: No!

RAU: Il Ciel vuol or ch' io mora!

VAL: No!

RAU: Io saprò seguitarli!

VAL: No!

RAU: Io volo a salvarli!

VAL: No!

Oh, forever, at your bidding,
For ever I'll be yours.
(The sound of a distant bell is heard.)

VAL: This is the hour!—I shake with terror!

RAO: You have said you have loved me
Through darkness and night,
But a bright star has risen
And lent us its light!

VAL: Oh, how shall I save him? Oh, terror!

RAO: Oh, repeat the sweet words
That brought balm to my heart!
And should all be a dream,
Let it never depart!

VAL: What dreadful hour is this?
Now all must end in death!

RAO: Oh, night of love!

VAL: Oh, fatal night!

RAO: Let us fly, love!

VAL: Ah, no!

RAO: You have said that you love me—
Come, let us away!

VAL: Ah, stay!

RAO: Do you hear the fatal bell?
(The bell is heard in the distance.)

VAL: It chills me with terror!

RAO: Ah those cries too plainly tell
What follows that sad knell!
Where am I?

VAL: By my side, Raoul.

RAO: Ah, fatal remembrance!
They murder my friends—
It is the signal of death!
Oh, remorse fills my heart
As for aid from my brethren
Resounds the shrill cry!
It is I who betray them—
I cannot defend them,
But with them will die!

VAL.: Ah! Raoul, my despair has no power to touch your heart! And you will even here, now consent to part from me? From my arms, from my arms you may fly, With your friend, with your friend, now to die; Yes, you may—yes, you may; But, before . . . you do this, my course you'll pass over! Can you part from me? From these arms will you fly? Alas! alas!

RAOUL: Oh, despair fills my heart!
Fell remorse overwhelms me!

RAO: I must away,—the hour is come!

VAL: No!

RAO: My blood must also be shed!

VAL: No!

RAO: I must fly to my friends!

VAL: No!

RAO: I'll speed to their rescue.

VAL: No!

RAU: Ah, mi trattieni invan'

VAL: Io non ti lascio—ah, no!
Crudel mi squarcia il seu,—
Sii tu il mio uccisor!

RAU: Ciel reggi il mio coraggio!
(Raul mostrando a Valentina dalla finestra ciò che succede nella strada.)
Vedi di sangue piena e d' estinti è la Senna!

VAL: Ah, mia ragion s' invola! o, delitto esecrando!
Raul, t' uccideranno!
Pietà, pietade—io moro, ah!
(Cade svenuta.)

RAU: (Nel più grande affanno.)
Ritorna in te! che fare?
O, terribil momento!
Potrei così obbliarla?
(In disperazione.)
Aimè! fuggiam, fuggiamo!
Tu veglia a giorni suoi, O Ciel, che imploro!
(Parte per la finestra.)

FINNE DELL' ATTO TERZO.

■ ATTO IV

SCENA I

Sala di Ballo nell' Hotel de Nesle, ove molte Dame e Cavalieri Protestanti si sono riuniti per festeggiare il matrimonio di Margarita con Enrico di Navarra. La danza viene di tratto in tratto interotta dal suono della Campana di San Germano, finchè tutti spaventati escono precipitosamente.

SCENA II

Cimetero. Da un lato chiesa con porta praticabile. Da un altro lato cancello che mette a una piazza.

Traversano la scena, Donne, Uomini, Fanciulli, che corrano a rifuggiarsi nella chiesa.

RAU: (Entrando da uno lato.) Sei tu, mio buon Marcello?
Non credea rivederti.

MAR: (Entrando dall' altro.) Ah! mio Signore, io vi ritrovo ancora?

RAU: Ferito sei?

MAR: L' ignoro.

RAU: Vendetta?

RAO: It is in vain you would detain me!

VAL: You shall not go—ah, no!
Cruel!—sooner than from you to part,
Oh, pierce this bosom to the heart!

RAO: Heaven, grant me courage!
(Raoul shows from the window, to Valentina, what happens in the street.)
The river's waves with gory streams are red!

VAL: Ah, fearful deed!—my senses fail!
Raoul, they will kill you!
Oh, in pity stay! Alas! I die!
(She swoons.)]

RAO: (In the utmost affright.)
What shall I do? how see you die!
Oh! terrible moment!
How can I leave her thus?
(In despair.)
But go I must at honor's call!
Heaven, spare her life, though I may fall!
(Exit from the window.)

END OF THE THIRD ACT.

■ ACT IV

SCENE I

A Ballroom in the Tour de Nesle, where many Ladies and Gentlemen are assembled to celebrate the Marriage of Margaret with Henry, King of Navarre.—The dance is often interrupted by the sound of the great bell of St. Germaine, until all, in alarm, hurry out of the room.

SCENE II

A Cemetery.—On one side a Church, with a practicable door; on the other a gate opening into a square.

Men, Women, and Children cross the stage, and take refuge in the Church.

RAO: (Entering from one side.) Is it you, my faithful Marcel?
I had no thought to see you again.

MAR: (Entering from the other side.) Ah! dear master, are you living still?

RAO: You are wounded?

MAR: I know it not.

RAO: Vengeance!

MAR: Che mai dite?
De' codardi assassini resto ancora
Cingon d' eroi, per ogni lato;
Entro quel tempio or mai, rifugio estremo
Di donne e di fanciulli,
La folla in pianti accorre
Santamente a morir. Andiam; l'unica sorte
Che a noi rimane è d' incontrar la morte!
Entra Valentina scapigliata e tutt' anelante.

VAL: Ove correte?

RAU: Alla gloria!

MAR: Al martirio?

VAL: No, no, tu non morrai;
Or che senza delitto, amarti posso.

RAU: E Nevers?

MAR: Generoso guerrier!—
Fu lui che mi salvò da morte!
E del suo zelo vittima, i ribaldi l' assassinar!

RAU: Nevers morì?

VAL: Ah, vieni, partiamo.

RAU: No: presso a lui rimango per morir.

VAL: E così dunque io ti vedrò perire?
Io senza te n' andrò raminga sulla terra,
In cui sofferto abbiam, in cui ci stringe amor?
E tu pensarlo puoi?
Ah! sì, dell' uom ben rado un fido amore
Pon radice nel core: ebben, conoscerai
Or l' amor d' una donna.
Or che tutto noi arride, tu vuoi da me fuggir.
Il crudele contrasto di quest' alma.
Di ragion mi privò!
Tu la mia fè disprezzi;—
Io mi arrendo alla tuo!

RAU: O, delir!

MAR: Il Signor del fuoco suo l' accende e irraggia.

VAL: O Cielo, la mia fede sei tu!
L' uom mi maledrià, mio buon Marcel, mio padre,
Accogli i voti miei, consacra il nostro amor!

RAU: (A Marcello.) Niun ministro del ciel avvi con noi:
Questo nodo tu sol puoi benedir.

MAR: What say you?
Bands of soldiers and assassins on every side
Surround our few remaining friends;
In that sacred edifice, their last and only refuge,
Women and children crowd around in tears;
And, praying, seek to die at peace with Heaven!
Let us join them: all hope is vain;
Nothing remains for us but to partake their doom!
(Enter Valentina, with hair disheveled, and breathless.)

VAL: Where are you going?

RAO: To glory!

MAR: To martyrdom!

VAL: No, no, you must not die;
I now may love you, and commit no crime.

RAO: But De Nevers?

MAR: That generous warrior!—
He bravely fought to save my life;
But found, in doing so, a hero's grave!

RAO: Is Nevers dead?

VAL: Come; do not stay here.

RAO: No; I must remain, and die with him.

VAL: Now that my pride may be to live,
Now that I dare sweet hope to cherish,
Now that I give my heart to you,
Can you desert and see me perish?
Alas! but you have yet to learn,
In woman's heart, how love may burn.
How true affection there may glow
And only cease with life to flow!
Since life and love are smiling now on you,
In Heaven or earth we'll be no more parted!
Listen, Raoul, and judge this heart of mine;
You have abjured my faith, I'll welcome yours!

RAO: Oh, rapture!

MAR: Heaven has enlightened her mind!

VAL: Yes, Heaven smiles upon my new-born faith.
Guide my steps, that I may act aright.
Marcel, my father, here give your blessing!

RAO: (To Marcel.) No minister can press his hand on us,
Consecrate our union and bless.

MAR: Io, con trasporto accetto il sacro incarco,— Il servo tuo fedel Sia il ministro del ciel.	MAR: With joy do I accept the sacred office; Your old and faithful servant will at once fulfil The holy rite.
CORE: (Di donne nella Chiesa.) Signor che ognor proteggi Il giusto che t' adora, Il tentator ne preme, Deh salva chi t' implora!	CHO: (Of Women in the Church.) Oh you, who protect The just who you adore, Oh, shield us from the foe, Your servants now implore!
MAR: L' innocenza e la fè Alzan lor preci al Ciel; E del Signor fan risuonar le lodi, Nell' aspettar la morte, In questo tristo asilo. Rispondi il vostro cor come innanzi al Signor, Nell' unir vostre mani in tai fosche tenebre. Io consacro il festin d' un tristo addio Ed un nodo funebre.	MAR: Now innocence and faith To Heaven their prayers raise, And, while awaiting death, They render praise to God. May He, amidst this scene, Direct your hearts aright, While thus, before high Heaven, I do unite your hands, By this blessed rite again you'll be United in eternity.
RAU. E VAL: Noi sappiam che il Ciel sol Le nostr' alme unirà.	RAO. & VAL: Ah yes, we know we soon shall be United in eternity.
MAR: E vigore avrai tu i tormenti a sfidar? E la fè d' un sol dì Non saprai più negar, A fronte del martir?	MAR: And will your courage you sustain All torture to defy, And in the faith you now have sworn Persist, till both shall die!
RAU. E VAL: A noi diede il Ciel vigor Quando in noi sveglio l' amor.	RAO. & VAL: Yes, Heaven will its strength impart When love devoted fills the heart.
CORE: (Di donne nella Chiesa.) Signor, tu che proteggi, etc. (Qui il cantico viene ad un tratto interrotto da rumor d' armi e alte grida.)	CHO: (Of Women in the Church.) Oh you, who protects, etc. (Here the Chorus is interrupted by a loud din of arms and cries.)
CORO DEGLI ASSASSINI NELL' INTERNO DELLA CHIESA: Abbiurate, Ugonotti, il Ciel l' impone! Abbiurate, o morrete!	CHORUS OF ASSASSINS WHO HAVE ENTERED THE CHURCH: Huguenots, abjure—your faith deny, Or Heaven commands that you must die!
VAL: (Guardando dalla finestra.) Ah, crudeli! son donne,— Ah, pietade, malvagi!	VAL: (Looking through the window.) Hold, murderers, hold,— They are women and children!
CORO D' ASSASSINI: Non v' ha scampo,—il Ciel l' impone!	CHORUS OF ASSASSINS: No! It is Heaven's command—they die!
CORO DI DONNE: Signor ne reggi ancor! (S' Ode una scarica di archibugi nella chiesa.)	CHORUS OF WOMEN: Oh Heaven, do you protect us! (Firing heard from within the Church.)
VAL. E MAR: Cantano ancor?	VAL. & MAR: Still does their song resound?
RAU: Ora non cantan più! (Tutti i tre restano in un silenzio funebre, celandosi il volta nelle mani, poi Marcello, come sorpresi da improvvisa visione e guardando al Cielo.)	RAO: They sing no more! (They all remain in profound silence, burying their faces in their hands; then Marcel, as if inspired, looks towards heaven.)
MAR: Ah, vedete! il Ciel s' apre e sfavilla! Gloria a Dio! l' eterea tromba squilla. E degli angioli il cauto risuona Che il stuol guida de' martiri al Ciel!	MAR: Ah, see! the effulgent Heavens open wide! The clarion sounds Hosanna from on high! And music from the angel choir resounds, Now welcoming the martyrs to their side!
RAU. E VAL: Vedi come lo sguardo gli brilla! E di folgori il capo incorona; La sua voce nell' aura risuona, Come un angiol disceso dal Ciel!	RAO. & VAL: Ah! see upon his face a heavenly ray! His brow is crowned with the eternal light; And, with his voice inspired, the vaults resound; Hosanna! the archangel leads the way!
TUTTI: L' ammiro, l' ascolto? M' addita il sentiere. Che al cielo si ascende, Supremo piacere! O morte ti segno. O terra un addio! (S' apre il cancello e varii assassini si precipitano in scena.)	ALL: His harp's gentle sound Tells where rest may be found; Where the wretched may fly To a home in the sky! For the faith that is true, Earth, we bid you adieu! (The gate flies open, and a crowd of Assassins rush upon the stage.)
CORO: Abbiurate, Ugonotti, il Ciel l' impone; Abbiurate, o morrete, il Ciel lo vuol!	CHO: Huguenots, abjure—deny your faith, Or Heaven commands that you must die!
RAU. E VAL: No, no: timor no ho,— Nè mi resto desio, Venite, ormai ferite! Osanna—terra—addio! (Tutti partono a destra, mentre a sinistra s' odono scariche di fucile.)	RAO. & VAL: No! Heaven is our guide— We fear nothing from you! Advance, this bosom strike! Hosanna!—earth, adieu! (All rush off on the right, at the same time firing is heard on the left.)

Le Prophète (1849)

The Prophet

MUSIC BY GIACOMO MEYERBEER ■ LIBRETTO BY AUGUSTIN EUGÈNE SCRIBE

This four-act opera, set to a libretto by Eugène Scribe, premiered at the Paris Opéra on April 16, 1849. In Holland during the time of the Anabaptists, Berthe and Jean of Leyden are in love and ask Count Oberthal to give them permission to wed. But the Count himself falls in love with Berthe and refuses, ordering Berthe to his castle. Berthe obeys but does not go alone—Fides, Jean's mother, goes with her. The Anabaptists hear about the Count's abuse of his powerful position and invite Jean to join them. They foresee that he will be crowned. Berthe escapes from the Count's castle and attempts to rejoin Jean, but the Count forces her to return to him as he still has Fides in his clutches. At the Anabaptists' camp, Jean is now their prophet. They decide to launch an attack on the Count's castle. Oberthal's son is there, hiding in the crowd. He is discovered and is about to be killed when Jean saves him. Jean finds out that Berthe has escaped yet again; Fides has also successfully escaped, and the women curse the Anabaptists. Berthe swears to kill their prophet. Three of the Anabaptists betray their prophet, who is now under siege. Berthe commits suicide when she finds out the Jean and the prophet are the same man. Jean blows up the castle rather than surrender, killing himself and Fides (who has forgiven him) as well as the enemies seeking his capture.

■ ACTE I.	■ ACT I.
(Le théâtre représente les campagnes de la Hollande, aux environs de Dordrecht. Au fond on aperçoit la Meuse: à droite un château-fort avec point-levis et tourelles: à gauche, fermes et moulins dépendant du château. Du même côté, sur le premier plan, des sacs de blé, des tables rustiques, des bancs, etc.)	(A rural scene in Holland, in the vicinity of Dordrecht. At the back the Meuse may be seen. On the right a fortress with drawbridges and towers; on the left, farms and mills connected with the castle. On the same side, in the foreground, sacks of wheat, rustic tables, benches, etc.)
SCÈNE I.	SCENE I.
Paysans, Paysannes, Ouvriers, Etc. (Au lever du rideau le théâtre est vide. Un berger arrive, et avec son chalumeau, donne l'éveil. Un autre berger (censé dans les coulisses) lui répond de loin, alors les portes des cabanes s'ouvrent, les paysans sortent avec leurs outils, les meuniers avec des sacs de farine sur le dos, etc., etc.)	Peasants and Laborers. (When the curtain rises the stage is empty. A shepherd enters and on his reed-pipe sounds the matinal. Another shepherd answers him from the distance; then the doors of the cottages open; the peasants come out with their tools, the millers with their sacks of meal on their backs, etc.)
CHOEUR PASTORAL: La brise est muette, Le jour est serein! D'échos en échos, Sonne la clochette, Sonne nos gais troupeaux!	PASTORAL CHORUS: The wind is hushed, The day is still! Echo to echo answering, Ring the bell, Summon our gay flocks.
UNE PAYSANNE: Trop souvent l'orage, Attriste nos coeurs!	A PEASANT GIRL: Too often the storm Saddens our hearts.
CHOEUR: Attriste nos coeurs.	CHORUS: Saddens our hearts.
UNE PAYSANNE: D'un jour, d'un jour sans nuages, Goûtons tous les douceurs, La brise est muette, Le jour est serein! D'un jour heureux, Goûtons le bonheur, Le jour, oui, le jour est serein! Oui, Le vent qui s'arrête Arrête le moulin. Qu'ici pour nous s'apprête, Le repas du matin! qui, Le vent qui s'arrête, Arrête le moulin. Qu'ici pour nous s'apprête, Le repas du matin.	A PEASANT GIRL: Of this day, of this cloudless day, Let us sup the pleasures, The wind is hushed, The day is still, Of one happy day Let us take the treasures. The day, yes, the day is still! Yes, no longer blows the wind, No longer moves the mill, Which now prepares for us The morning meal.
SCÈNE II.	SCENE II.
Les mêmes, Fidès. (Berthe voit arriver de loin Fidès. Elle court à sa rencontre, prend son bras, et la conduit doucement jusque sur le devant de la scène. Fidès est fatiguée de la route et marche pesamment. Quand elle est arrivée sur l'avant-scène, elle embrasse Berthe, la bénit et met à son doigt un anneau de fiancée, envoyé par Jean.)	The same, Fides. (Bertha sees Fides in the distance. She runs to meet her, takes her arm, and leads her gently to the foreground. Fides is tired from the journey and walks heavily. When she reaches the forestage she embraces Bertha, blesses her and places on her finger an engagement ring sent by Jean.)
BERTHE: Fidès, ma bonne mère, enfin donc vous voilà!	BERTHA: Fides, my dear mother, at last you are here!
FIDÈS: Tu m'attendais?	FIDES: You were waiting for me?
BERTHE: Depuis l'aurore!	BERTHA: Since the dawn!
FIDÈS: Et Jean, mon fils, attend plus ardemment encore Sa fiancée! "Allez, allez, bonne mère, Allez-allez, amenez là," A-t-il dit, et je viens!	FIDES: And Jean, my son, even more ardently Awaits his bride! "Go, dear mother, go, Go, bring her to me!" Said he, and here I am!
BERTHE: Ainsi moi, pauvre fille, Orpheline et sans biens, Il m'a daigné choisir?	BERTHA: But me, a poor girl, An orphan and dowerless, Me, he has deigned to choose?

FIDÈS: (babillant avec bonhomie). Des filles de Dordrecht
Berthe est le plus gentille,
Et le plus sage, et je veux vous unir,
(S'animant toujours davantage.)
Et je veux dès demain,
Que Berthe me succède,
Dans mon hotellerie
Et dans mon beau comptoir;
Le plus beau, vois-tu bien,
De toute la ville de Leyde!
Partons, partons, partons!
Hâtons-nous, hâtons-nous,
Car mon fils nous attend pour ce soir, partons!

BERTHE: Non pas vraiment!
Vassale, je ne puis
Me marier, ni quitter ce pays,
Sans la volonté souveraine
Du comte d'Oberthal, seigneur de ce domaine,
Dont vous voyez d'ici les créneaux redoutés!

FIDÈS: Auprès de lui courons!

SCÈNE III.

Les mêmes, Zacharie, Jonas, Mathisen.
Le Prêche Anabaptiste.
(Les trois Anabaptistes sur la colline, etendent les mains sur le peuple comme pour le bénir.)

JONAS: Ad nos, ad salutarem undam,
Iterum venite miseri!
Ad nos, ad nos, venite populi!

LES PAYSANS: Ecoutons le ciel qui les inspire, qui les inspire!
(Les trois Anabaptistes descendent l'escalier et s'approchent des paysans.)

ZACHARIE: (montant sur une borne pour haranguer le peuple). De ces champs fécondés longtemps par vos sueurs, Voulez-vous, voulez-vous être enfin les maîtres et seigneurs?
Le voulez-vous, le voulez-vous?
Ad nos salutarem undam,
Iterum venite miseri.

LES TROIS ANABAPTISTES: Ad nos salutarem undam,
Iterum venite miseri.

MATHISEN: Esclaves et vassaux trop longtemps à genoux,
Ce qui fut abaissé s'élève.
Levez-vous!

FIDES: (gossiping good naturedly). Of all the girls in Dordrecht
The finest is Bertha,
And the wisest! I wish to unite you,
(Getting more excited.)
And that from tomorrow,
Bertha succeed me
At the counter, in my inn,
The best, Bertha, you well know,
In all the village of Leyden!
Come, come, let us go!
Let us hasten, let us hasten,
For my son expects us this evening,
Let us go!

BERTHA: No, indeed no!
I—a vassal—
Cannot marry, nor leave this country,
Without the sovereign will
Of the Count of Oberthal, Lord of this domain,
Whose dread battlements you now behold.

FIDES: Let us hasten to him!
(Fides wishes to drag Bertha to the castle on the right. Just as the two women mount the steps of the stairway which leads to the castle, three Anabaptists appear at the top. They advance quietly, while the peasants approach them and examine them with curiosity. Fides descends the steps in fear.)

SCENE III.

The same, Zacharia, Jonas and Mathisen.
The Anabaptists' Sermon.
(The three Anabaptists on the hill, stretching their hands over the people as if to bless them.)

JONAS: Ad nos, ad salutarem undam,
Iterum venite miseri!
Ad nos, ad nos, venite populi!

THE PEASANTS: Let us listen to Heaven who inspires them!
(The three Anabaptists descend the stairway and approach the peasants.)

ZACHARIA: (mounting a stone to harangue the people). Of these fair fields, fertile by your long labors,
Do you wish to be at last the masters and lords?
Do you, do you?
Ad nos salutarem undam,
Iterum venite miseri.

THE THREE ANABAPTISTS: Ad nos salutarem undam,
Iterum venite, miseri.

MATHISEN: Slaves and vassals kneeling too long,
What was abased, arises.
Rise!

LES TROIS ANABAPTISTES: Levez-vous, Levez-vous, Levez-vous!
(Les paysans commencent à s'émouvoir, et se consultent entre eux. Ils engagent un des leurs à parler aux prêcheurs. Le paysan ne veut pas d'abord, mais ses compagnons le poussent en avant.)

SIX CORYPHÉES: (timidement). Ainsi ces beaux châteaux?

JONAS: Ils vous appartiendront.

SIX CORYPHÉES: (timidement). La dime et la couvée?

JONAS: Elles disparaîtront.

SIX CORYPHÉES: Et nous serfs et vassaux?

MATHISEN ET ZACHARIE: Libres en ce séjour.

SIX CORYPHÉES: Et nos anciens seigneurs?

MATHISEN ET ZACHARIE: Esclaves à leur tour.

LE PREMIER ET LE DEUXIÈME PAYSANS: (avec les basses du Choeur entr'eux se consultant). Oui!

CHOEUR: Ils ont raison, écoutez-les!
Oui!
Ils disent vrai, Dieu parle ainsi!
Nous les suivrons, point de retard!
Allons!
Et nous aussi!
Point de merci!
Venez!
(Aux paysans.)
Vous êtes forts!
Vous êtes grands!
Vous êtes forts, puissants, grands!
Allez!
(Les Anabaptistes parcourent les différents groupes de Paysans pour les exciter.)

LES TROIS ANABAPTISTES: Ad nos!
Ad nos!
Ad nos!
Ad nos!

LES PAYSANS: Ces vils, ces vils tyrans!
Cruels ces appresseurs indignes, seigneurs!
Ah!
Vengeons-nous sur nos tyrans!
Vengeons-nous sur nos tyrans!
Qu'ils meurent tous!
Qu'ils meurent tous!

LES TROIS ANABAPTISTES: Ad nos!
Ad nos!
Ad nos!
Ad nos!

THE THREE ANABAPTISTS:
Arise, arise, arise!
(The peasants begin to move about and to consult each other. They select one of their number to speak to the preachers. The peasant does not wish to at first, but his companions push him forward.)

SIX CORYPHÉES: (timidly). Then these beautiful castles?

JONAS: They will belong to you.

THE SIX CORYPHÉES: (timidly). Tithes and feudal labor?

JONAS: They will disappear.

THE SIX CORYPHÉES: And we serfs and vassals?

MATHISEN AND ZACHARIA:
Free in this abode.

THE SIX CORYPHÉES: And our former lords?

MATHISEN AND ZACHARIA:
Slaves in their turn.

FIRST AND SECOND PEASANTS: (and some of the chorus consulting each other). Yes, they are right,
Let us listen to them!
God speaks thus!
We shall follow them!
No delay! Come!

CHORUS: We too!
No delay!
Come!
(To the peasants).
You are strong!
You are mighty!
You are strong, powerful, mighty!
Go!
(The Anabaptists run among the different groups of peasants to excite them.)

THE THREE ANABAPTISTS: Ad nos!
Ad nos!
Ad nos!
Ad nos!

THE PEASANTS: These unworthy oppressors,
These vile tyrants!
Cruel lords!
Ah! let us have revenge on our tyrants!
Let them die!
Let them die!

THE THREE ANABAPTISTS: Ad nos!
Ad nos!
Ad nos!
Ad nos!

LES PAYSANS: Levons-nous!
Levons-nous!
Levons-nous!
Levons-nous!
Malheur á qui nous combattrait, malheur!

LES TROIS ANABAPTISTES: Ad nos salutarem undam,
Iterum venite!

LES PAYSANS: Son supplice est tout prêt,
Dieu signe l'arrêt.
(Les Paysans courent au fond du théâtre où sont déposé les fourches à fâner, les faux et les pioches: ils les brandissent, s'alignent et marchent en ordre militaire, en promenant les trois Anabaptistes en triomphe.)

MATHISEN ET ZACHARIE: (avec enthusiasme). O roi des cieux, c'est la victoire, Dieu des combats, veille sur nous, sur nous!
Les nations verront ta gloire,
Ta sainte loi luira pour tous, pour tous!
Suivez nous, amis, Dieu le veut, Dieu le veut!
C'est le grand jour
Que la liberté, que la liberté soit notre amour,
Et du monde entier, Dieu le veut!
Son drapeau fera le tour!

LES TROIS ANABAPTISTES: Dieu le veut!
Dieu le veut!
Suivez-nous, chers compagnons!
Aux armes! aux armes!

LES PAYSANS: Ah! viens!
Ah! viens! viens! viens! viens!
(Tous les paysans se sont armés de fourches, de pioches et de bâtons, et se sonts élancés sur les marches de l'escalier qui conduit au château.)

SCÈNE IV.

Les Mêmes, Oberthal, Seigneurs, Gardes, Etc.
(Les portes due château s'ouvrent. Oberthal sort; il est entouré de seigneurs, ses amis avec lesquels il cause en riant. À sa vue les paysans s'arrêtent, ceux qui avaient déjà gravi les marches de l'escalier, les redescendent avec effroi, et cachent les bâtons dont ils étaient armés, Oberthal s'avance tranquillement au milieu des paysans qui le saluent.)

BERTHE: Le Comte d'Oberthal, le seigneur châtelain!

OBERTHAL: De quels cris menaçants, ces visages si tristes,
Troublent-ils dans nos murs la gaité du festin?
(Rappelant ses souvenirs.)
Ah!
Ceux là ne sont-ils pas de ces Anabaptistes,

THE PEASANTS: Let us rise, rise, rise, rise!
He is doomed who opposes us,
Doomed!

THE THREE ANABAPTISTS: Ad nos salutarem undam,
Iterum venite!

THE PEASANTS: His punishment is all prepared,
God signs the warrant!
(The peasants run to the background where pitchforks, scythes and spades are piled; they brandish them, form into lines and march in military order, parading the three Anabaptists in front.)

MATHISEN AND ZACHARIA: (enthusiastically). O heavenly king, this foretells victory!
God of combats, guard over us!
The nations will observe your glory!
Your sacred law will shine for all!
Follow us, comrades, God wishes it,
It is the day of days!
Let liberty be our love,
And through the whole world, as God wishes,
His flag shall be unfurled!

THE THREE ANABAPTISTS: God wishes it!
Follow us, dear comrades!
To arms!
To arms!

THE PEASANTS: Ah! come,
Ah! come, come, come!
(All the peasants arm themselves with the pitchforks, spades and cudgels, and rush up the steps of the stairway leading to the castle.)

SCENE IV.

The same, Oberthal, Nobles and Guards.
(The doors of the castle open, Oberthal comes out; he is surrounded by nobles, his friends, with whom he chats and laughs. Upon his appearance the peasants stop, those who have already ascended the stairs, return in terror, and hide the cudgels with which they are armed. Oberthal advances calmly into the midst of the peasants, who greet him.)

BERTHA: Count of Oberthal, Lord of this domain,—

OBERTHAL: Whose menacing cries and somber faces,
Disturb the gaiety of our festival?
(Recollecting.)
Ah!
Are these not the Anabaptists,
These pernicious Puritans, those boring preachers,

Ces fougueux puritains, ces ennuyeux prêcheurs,
Semant partout, dit-on, leurs dogmes imposteurs?
Eh! mais vraiment, vraiment, je crois le reconnaître.
Oui, c'est maître Jonas, mon ancien sommeiller;
Il me volait mon vin, dont il se disait maître!
(Aux soldats.)
Que le fourreau du sabre aide à le chatier
Soldats qu'on le chasse!
Eloignez sa figure infernale!
(Les soldats emmènent les trois Anabaptistes.) (Apercevant Berthe.) Ah! celle-ci vaut mieux!
Que veux-tu, ma vassale?
Avance et parle sans frayeur!

BERTHE: (à part). Ma mere, ma mere, helas!
J'ai bien peur!

FIDÈS: (rassurant Berthe). Sois sans crainte.
Sois sans crainte;
Je suis là, je suis là, pour te donner du coeur!

BERTHE: (doux). Un jour dans les flots de la Meuse, J'allais périr, j'allais périr,
Jean me sauva!

FIDÈS: (faisant la révérence).
Jean, Jean la sauva!

BERTHE: Orpheline et bien malheureuse,
Depuis ce jour,
Jean me protegea!

FIDÈS: (faisant la révérence). Jean la protegea!

BERTHE: Je connais votre droit, je connais votre droit supreme!
Mais Jean m'aime de tout son coeur, de tout son coeur!
Ah! mon seigneur, mon doux seigneur!
Permettez-moi d'être sa femme!
Permettez-le!
Permettez-le, mon doux seigneur.

OBERTHAL: (regardant Berthe avec amour). Eh quoi! tant de candeur, D'attraits et d'innocence,
Seraient perdus pour nous
Et quitteraient ces lieux!
Non, non, non, non, je refuse!

BERTHE: (se jetant dans les bras de Fidès). Ah! quel malheur!

FIDÈS: (se jetant au milieu des paysans). Ah! ah! quel malheur!

BERTHE: (poussant un cri d'indignation). O nouvelle infamie!
O mortelles alarmes!
Faut-il, hélas! se soumettre à ce sceptre d'airain?
Fuyons!
(Fidès à gauche, au milieu des paysans leur fait honte de leur la-

Sowing everywhere their heretical creed?
But, truly, I think I recognize him,
Yes, it is Jonas, my former cellar-keeper;
He used to steal my wine, which he said was his!
(To the soldiers.)
Let the scabbard aid in punishing him!
Let the soldiers beat him!
Remove his infernal face!
(The soldiers take the three Anabaptists away.)
(Noticing Bertha.)
Ah! here is a more welcome sight!
What do you wish, my vassal?
Approach and speak without fear!

BERTHA: (aside). Mother, mother, alas, I am afraid!

FIDES: (assuring Bertha). Have no fear!
Have no fear!
I am here, to give you courage!

BERTHA: (softly). One day in the waves of the Meuse
I was about to perish,
When Jean rescued me!

FIDES: (bowing). Jean, Jean saved her!

BERTHA: An orphan most unhappy,
Since that day
Jean protected me!

FIDES: (curtsying). Jean protected her!

BERTHA: I knew your law, I knew your law supreme!
But Jean loved me with all his heart!
Ah! my lord, my sovereign, my gracious sovereign,
Allow me to become his wife, do, do!

OBERTHAL: (looking at Bertha tenderly). Ah! truly that such candor,
Such beauty and such innocence,
Should be lost for us
And should leave this place!
No, no, no, no!
I refuse!

BERTHA: (throwing herself into Fides' arms). Oh! What an affliction!

FIDES: (rushing among the peasants). Oh! What an affliction!

BERTHA: (uttering a cry of indignation). Oh! new misfortune!
Oh! mortal terror!
Alas! must we submit, submit to this scepter of iron!
Let us flee!
(Fides on the left, in the midst of the peasants, shames them for their cowardice, begs them to de- cheté, les supplie de defendre Berthe, et de réclamer justice pour elle. Les paysans excités par ces reproches s'avancent d'un air résolu et menaçant vers Oberthal, qui sans les voir cause avec les autres seigneurs, à leur approche Oberthal se retourne, les vassaux s'arrêtent interdits et tremblants.)

OBERTHAL: Je l'ai dit, je le veux, moi seigneur châtelain
Cedez tous, cedez tous aux desirs du seigneur châtelain
Cedez tous, cedez tous, cedez tous, ou si non, soldats!
(Pendant ces derniers vers, des gardes de la suite d'Oberthal ont entouré Berthe et Fidès, qu'ils entraînent dans le château. Oberthal et ses amis les suivent, et les portes se referment derrière eux. Les paysans muets de surprise et de frayeur, se retirent en silence et tête baissée. A ce moment on entend dans le lointain le psaume des Anabaptistes.)

LES ANABAPTISTES: (dans les coulisses). Ad nos, ad salutarem undam, Iterum venite, Miseri!
Venite!
(Le peuple entendant le chant des Anabaptistes court au devant eux.)
(Les trois Anabaptistes reparaissent sur les marches de l'escalier du château, étandant leur mains sur le peuple (qui s'agenouille devant eux) et menaçant du geste et du regard le château d'Oberthal.)

RIDEAU.

ACTE II.

SCÈNE I.

Jean, puis paysans et paysannes, puis Jonas, Mathisen, Zacharie.
(Le théâtre représente l'auberge de Jean et de sa mère dans les faubourgs de Leyde. Portes au fonds, et croisée donnant sur la campagne. On entend au dehors un air de valse. Jean tenant des broc qu'il pose sur une table sort de la chambre de la droite et va ouvrir les portes du fond; il aperçoit devant les portes et devant les croisées des paysans et des paysannes qui s'amusent à valser, et qui toujours en valsant entrent dans l'interieur de l'auberge, plusieurs se mettent à table et chantent le choeur suivant, tandis que les autres continuent leur danse.) fend Bertha and to demand justice for her. The peasants, incited by these reproaches, advance resolutely and menacingly against Oberthal, who without noticing them chats with the other nobles. At their approach Oberthal turns; the vassals cease, confused and trembling.)

OBERTHAL: I have said it; I wish it, I, your sovereign.
Yield everything, yield everything to the desires of your lord!
Yield everything, everything, everything!
If not!—soldiers!
(During this last speech, the guards of Oberthal's train have surrounded Bertha and Fides, whom they are dragging to the castle. Oberthal and his friends follow them and the door closes behind them. The peasants, speechless from surprise and fright, retire in silence and with bowed heads. Just then the psalm of the Anabaptists is heard in the distance.)

THE ANABAPTISTS: (in the wings). Ad nos, ad salutarem undam, Iterum venite, Miseri! Venite!
(The people hearing the song of the Anabaptists run to meet them.)
(The three Anabaptists reappear on the steps of the stairway of the castle, extending their hands over the people (who are kneeling before them) and threatening the castle by look and gesture.)

CURTAIN.

ACT II.

SCENE I.

Jean, then some peasants, then Jonas, Mathisen and Zacharia.
(The inn of Jean and his mother in the suburbs of Leyden. Door at the back and a casement with a view of the fields. Outside a waltz tune is heard. Jean, carrying some flasks which he sets on a table, enters from a room on the right and opens the doors at the back. In front of the door and the casement he sees peasants who are enjoying a waltz, and who enter the inn, without stopping their dance. Several sit down at the tables and sing the following chorus, while other continue their dance.)

VALSE VILLAGEOISE: Valsons toujours,
Oui, la valse a mes amours;
Valsons, chantons, chers amis!
Valsons toujours.
Oui, la valse a mes amours;
Valsons, chantons, chers amis!
Vive, vive, vive Jean!

JEAN: (à part). Le jour baisse, et ma mère bientôt sera de retour Avec ma fiancée, ma Berthe, mon amour,
Ma Berthe, mon amour, ma Berthe, mon amour.

JONAS: (regardant Jean). O ciel!

ZACHARIE: Qu'as-tu donc?

JONAS: (à voix basse). Regarde ce jeune homme!

ZACHARIE: (à voix basse). En effet!

MATHISEN: (à voix basse). Oui, ces traits et cet air.

ZACHARIE: La ressemblance est inouie.

JONAS: Et, devant moi, vivant, j'ai cru voir à son air,
David, le roi David, qu'on adore à Munster!

MATHISEN: Ce tableau qu'on admire en notre Westphalie,
Et qui fait tous les jours des miracles!

JONAS: Silence!

CHOEUR: Allons, verse, viens ici!

UN SOLDAT: Jean!

JONAS: (à un paysan). Ami, quel est cet homme?

UN PAYSAN: Jean, le maître du logis!
Son coeur est excellent
Et son bras est terrible!

JONAS: Tête ardente?

UN PAYSAN: Oui, vraiment.

JONAS: Il est brave?

UN PAYSAN: Et dévot!
Il sait par coeur toute la Bible!

ZACHARIE: (à part à ses compagnons). Chers amis, n'est-ce pas la l'apôtre qu'il nous faut?

MATHISEN: Celui qu'à nous aider appelle le Très Haut!

JEAN: La nuit couvre la terre
Et le repos est doux;
J'attends Berthe et ma mère,
Allez, allez, amis, retirez-vous!

LES PAYSANS: Partons, partons, il songe à sa belle!
Partons, le ciel est noir!
Partons!
(Dans les coulisses.)
Bonsoir!
Bonsoir!
Bonsoir!
(Les paysans sortent en valsant

VILLAGER'S WALTZ: Let us dance forever,
Yes, dancing is our delight;
Let us dance, let us sing; comrades!
Let us dance forever.
Yes, dancing is our delight;
Let us dance, let us sing, comrades!
Long live Jean, long live Jean!

JEAN: (aside). The day dies, and soon my mother will return
With my bride, Bertha, my love,
My Bertha, my love, my Bertha, my love!

JONAS: (looking at Jean). Heavens!

ZACHARIA: What's the matter now?

JONAS: (aside). Look at that youth!

ZACHARIA: (aside). Indeed!

MATHISEN: (aside). Yes, the very features and that air.

ZACHARIA: The resemblance is unheard of.

JONAS: Yes, before me I fancy I see alive,
David, the King David whom Munster adores!

MATHISEN: That picture worshipped in our Westphalia,
And which performs miracles every day!

JONAS: Silence!

CHORUS: Come, fill up, come here!

A SOLDIER: Jean!

JONAS: (to a peasant). Friend, who is that man?

A PEASANT: Jean, our most worthy host!
Of excellent good heart
And most powerful arm.

JONAS: An ardent spirit?

A PEASANT: Yes, truly.

JONAS: Is he brave?

A PEASANT: And devout.
He knows the whole Bible by heart.

ZACHARIA: (aside to his companions). Comrades dear, is he not the apostle whom we need?

MATHISEN: The very one whom the Lord has called to aid us!

JEAN: Night covers the earth
And sweet is repose;
I am waiting for Bertha and my mother,
Go, friends, go, depart!

THE PEASANTS: Let us depart, let us depart, he is dreaming of his beloved!
Let us go, the sky is dark!
Let us go!
(In the wings.)
Good night!
Good night!
(The peasants withdraw dancing.

après leur depart restent en scène les trois Anabaptistes et Jean, qui va s'asseoir rêveur près de la table à droite.)

SCÈNE II.

Jonas, Mathisen, Zacharie, Jean.
(Les Anabaptistes se lèvent et s'approchent de Jean.)
Le songe.

ZACHARIE: (à Jean lui frappant sur l'épaule). Ami, quel nuage obscurcit ta pensée?

JEAN: J'attends ma mère avec ma fiancée,
Leur retard m'inquiète; déjà l'autre nuit,
Un sinistre présage a troublé mon esprit!

ZACHARIE: Qu'est-ce donc?
Parle ami!

JEAN: Qu'ici votre science
Eclaire par pitié ma faible intelligence,
Sur mille objets bizarres et confus,
Et que deux fois en dormant j'air revus!
Sous les vastes arceaux un temple magnifique,
J'etais debout, le peuple à mes pieds prosterné,
Et du bandeau royal, mon front était orné!
Et pendant qu'ils disaient dans un pieux cantique:
C'est l'élu le Messie!
C'est le fils de Dieu!
Je lisais sur le marbre écrit en traits de feu:
Malheur a toi!
Malheur a toi!
Ma main voulait tirer le glaive,
Mais un fleuve de sang, et m'entoure et s'élève,
Pour le fuir sur un trône, en vain j'etais monté;
Et le trône et moi-même, il à tout emporté,
Au milieu des eclairs, au milieu de la flame,
Pendant qu'aux pieds de Dieu, Satan trainait mon âme,
S'élèvait de la terre une clameur:
Qu'il soit maudit!
maudit!
maudit!
Mais vers le ciel et dans l'abîme immense,
Une voix s'éléva, qui répéta:
Clémence!
Clémence!
Clémence!
Ici je me réveillai . . .
Muet . . . anéanti d'épouvante et d'horreur.

LES TROIS ANABAPTISTES: Sur ce songe prophetique,
Le ciel même à nous s'explique,
L'avenir s'offre à nos yeux!
Jean tu règneras!

After their departure the three Anabaptists and Jean, who sits in reverie at a table on the right, remain on the stage.)

SCENE II.

Jonas, Zacharia, Mathisen and Jean.
The dream.

ZACHARIA: (to Jean, slapping him on the shoulder). What cloud hangs over your thoughts?

JEAN: I am waiting for my mother and my bride,
Their delay disturbs me; the other night
A sinister vision troubled my soul!

ZACHARIA: What was it?
Speak, friend!

JEAN: For pity's sake, with your wisdom,
Enlighten my weak intelligence,
A thousand confused mysteries
Twice have I dreamed!
Beneath the vast arches of a magnificent temple,
I was standing; the people prostrate at my feet,
With an imperial diadem my brow was crowned!
And while they chanted a sacred strain:
"The Messiah has come!
Behold the son of God!"
I read upon the marble walls inscribed in blazing characters:
"Woe to you!
Woe to you!"
My hand was about to draw my sword,
But a river of blood arose and surrounded me,
To escape it, I tried in vain to ascend a throne;
But the throne and I were entirely swept away,
Amid lightning, amid flame,
While to the feet of God, Satan was dragging my soul,
There arose from the earth a clamor:
"Perdition unto him!
Perdition!
Perdition!"
But to Heaven and into the vast abyss,
A voice arose repeating: "Mercy,
Mercy!
Mercy!
Mercy!"
Then I awakened . . .
Speechless, filled with fear and horror.

THE THREE ANABAPTISTS: This dream prophetic Heaven itself
Has explained to us,
The future is revealed to our eyes,
Jean, you shall reign!

JEAN: Moi! mes amis, ah! vous n'y pensez pas!
Pour Berthe moi je soupire,
Je me veux pas d'autre empire;
Oui, son coeur est tout pour moi,
Son amour, son amour m'à fait Roi!
Pour moi le plus beau royaume, le plus beau royaume,
Ne vaut pas ce toit de chaume,
Humble empire, doux sejours,
De la paix et de l'amour!
Où Berthe sera toujours,
Mes seuls amours, toujours,
Toujours mes seuls amour.

LES TROIS ANABAPTISTES: Ah, quelle folie extrême!
Dédaigner le rang suprême!
Et bientôt tu régneras!

JEAN: Loin de moi portez vos pas!
(Les trois Anabaptistes sortent.)

SCÈNE III.

Jean seul.

JEAN: Ils partent, grâce au ciel!
Leur funeste présence,
M'empêchait d'être heureux!
Oui, demain quant j'y pense,
Demain mon mariage, ô riant avenir!

SCÈNE IV.

Jean, puis Berthe.

JEAN: Quel bruit retentit à cette heure?
N'entends je pas le galop des coursiers? les armes des soldats?
(Berthe entre en courant, pâle, nupieds et échevelée elle court se jeter dans les bras de Jean.)
Ah, Berthe, ma bien aimée!
Et d'où vient cet effroi?

BERTHE: (hors d'haleine). Des fureurs d'un tyran . . . sauve moi . . .
Comment fuir ces regards?
Juste ciel!
(Jean lui montre sous l'escalier un enfoncement caché par un rideau.)

JEAN: Là! là!
(Berthe près de l'escalier pendant que Jean regard avec crainte au dehors.)

BERTHE: (avec une expression douleureuse). Ah! d'effroi je tremble encore!
Au trépas, viens m'arracher!
Dieu puissant, toi que je implore,
À leurs yeux viens me cacher, Mon Dieu!

SCÈNE V.

Les mêmes, Oberthal, des Gardes.
(Berthe se cache dans l'enfoncement à droite.)

JEAN: I! dear friends, do not think of it!
I am sighing for Bertha,
I want no other kingdom;
Yes, her heart is all mine,
Her love, her love has made me a king.
For me the most beautiful kingdom
Needs not even this roof of thatch,
Humble empire, sweet retreat,
Of peace and of love,
Where Bertha will be forever
My only love, forever,
Forever my only love, forever!

THE THREE ANABAPTISTS: Oh, what absurd folly!
To refuse the highest rank!
For soon you shall reign!

JEAN: Away from me!
Away!
(The three Anabaptists go out.)

SCENE III.

Jean (alone).

JEAN: They are gone, thank Heaven!
Their solemn appearance
Banished my happiness!
Yes, when I think of tomorrow
Of my marriage, tomorrow, of smiling future!

SCENE IV.

Jean, then Bertha.

JEAN: What does that noise at this hour mean?
Do I not hear the gallop of horsemen? the arms of soldiers?
(Bertha, pale, barefooted, and dishevelled runs in and throws herself into Jean's arms.)
Ah! Bertha, my beloved!
Why this terror?

BERTHA: (out of breath). From the fury of a tyrant . . . save me . . .
How can I escape his glances?
Merciful Heaven!
(Jean shows her a recess hidden by a curtain under the stairway.)

JEAN: There!
There!
(Bertha, near the stairway, while Jean looks outside in fear.)

BERTHA: (with a sorrowful expression). Ah! with fright I am still trembling!
From this fate, come rescue me!
God Almighty, I implore you,
Come hide me from their eyes,
Oh, my God!

SCENE V.

The same, Oberthal and Guards.
(Bertha hides in the recess on the right.)

OBERTHAL: Loin de ces rives, au château de Harlem
Je menais deux captives, deux captives,
Quand près de ta chaumière, et dans un bois épais,
Dont les sombres détours l'ont cachée à ma vue,
L'une d'elles a fui, qu'est elle devenue?
Réponds! réponds! Tu vas me la livrer,
Ou ta mère à l'instant, à tes yeux va perir
Si tu ne parles pas!

JEAN: (poussant un cri, et étendant ses mains suppliantes).
Ma mère!
Ah! grâce!

OBERTHAL: (souriant). Ah! le moyen est bon!
Vois!
Choisis!

JEAN: (d'une voix entrecoupée par les sanglots). Ah! cruels, prenez ma vie!
Tout mon sang, oui, le voilà!
Mais, ma mère, tant cherie,
Ah! de grâce épargnez la!
Ah! Cruels, grâce, grâce, grâce,
Prends pitié de mes alarmes,
Ah! suspends l'arrêt cruel!
Laisse un fils, un fils en larmes,
T'implorer comme le ciel,
T'implorer, hélas, comme le ciel!

OBERTHAL: Te voilà reduit aux larmes
M'implorant comme le ciel,
Prends conseil de tes alarmes,
Et préviens l'arrêt mortel, Eh, bien?

JEAN: (avec fureur). Qu'entre nous deux le ciel juge et decide,
Qu'il fasse sur toi seul tomber le parricide!
(Oberthal remonte le théâtre, ouvre la porte et fait signe à ses soldats d'amener Fidès. Pendant ce temps Berthe, pâle et tremblante, entr'ouvre le rideau. Jean fait un pas vers elle, mais en ce moment on a trainé Fidès à la porte du fond. Elle tombe à genoux en étendant les bras vers son fils, des soldats lèvent la hache sur sa tête, Jean se retourne, l'aperçoit; il pousse un cri, s'élance vers Berthe et le fait passer devant lui, aù moment où Oberthal redescend le théâtre.)

JEAN: (avec fureur en jetant Berthe aux mains des soldats).
Ah! Va-t'en, va-t'en!
Tu le vois,
Il le faut!
Va-t'en!
(Les soldats entraînent Berthe; Jean tombe hors de lui sur une chaise, ne regardant pas sa mère et se cachant le visage dans ses mains.)

OBERTHAL: Far from these shores, to my Harlem castle,
Two captives I was leading, two captives,
When near your hut, and in a thick wood
Whose dark paths hid her from my sight
One of them escaped. What has become of her?
Reply! Reply! You must deliver her to me,
Or your mother straight away will perish before your eyes,
If you do not speak.

JEAN: (uttering a cry, and extending his hands in supplication). My mother!
Ah! Mercy!

OBERTHAL: (smiling). Ah! it was a good means!
See!
Choose!

JEAN: (sobbing). Cruel man, take my life, yes, here,
But my mother, so dear,
For pity's sake spare her!
Ah! Cruel one, mercy, mercy, mercy!
Take pity on my fright,
Suspend this cruel arrest.
Let a son's tears
Implore you as Heaven,
Implore you, alas, as Heaven.

OBERTHAL: Ah! At last I see you weeping,
Imploring me as the Heaven,
Take counsel from your fright,
And prevent the mortal arrest,
Well, then?

JEAN: (furiously). Between us two let Heaven judge and decide,
That the guilt of parricide may fall on you alone.
(Oberthal crosses the stage, opens the door and gives the signal to his soldiers to bring Fides in. Meanwhile Bertha, pale and trembling, draws the curtain back. Jean motions to her, but at that moment Fides is dragged to the door at the back. She falls on her knees stretching her arms toward her son. The soldiers raise an axe over her head. Jean turns around and sees this; he utters a cry, rushes toward Bertha, lets her pass in front of him, just as Oberthal crosses the stage again.)

JEAN: (throwing Bertha furiously into the hands of the soldiers). Ah!
Go! Go!
You see!
It is our fate!
Go!
(The soldiers take Bertha away. Jean falls distractedly on a chair without noticing his mother and hiding his face in his hands.)

SCÈNE VI.

Jean, Fidès.

FIDÈS: (d'une voix timide, et pleurant). Ah! mon fils, sois beni,
Ta pauvre mère, toi plus chère,
Que ta Berthe, que ton amour!
Ah! mon fils!
Ah! mon fils!
Tu viens, hélas! de donner pour ta mère,
Plus que la vie, en donnant ton bonheur, ton bonheur!
Ah! mon fils!
Ah! mon fils!
Que vers le ciel s'élève ma prière,
Et sois beni dans le Seigneur, mon fils,
Sois beni, dans le Seigneur! sois beni!
(Elle embrasse Jean avec transport.)
Jean! ah! sois beni!
(Jean par un geste indique à sa mère qu'il est calme, et l'invite à se retirer dans sa chambre pour se reposer. Fidès inquiète, hésite, puis obéit, en se retirant lentement.)

SCÈNE VII.

Jean, puis Jonas, Mathisen et Zacharie.

JEAN: (cessant de se contraindre et éclatant). O fureur!
Le ciel ne tonne pas sur ces têtes impies!

LES TROIS ANABAPTISTES: (dans les coulisses, de très loin).
Ad nos, ad salutarem undam!

JEAN: (à voix basse). Ah! c'est Dieu qui m'entends!
Dieu qui me les envoie!
(D'une voix etouffée.)
Venez! venez!
Entrez, nous sommes seuls!
Dans mes rêves tantôt lisant le rang suprême,
Ne m'avez-vous dit pas: suis nous, tu régneras?

LES TROIS ANABAPTISTES: Et nous t'offrons encor un diadême, Sois roi!
Sois roi!

JEAN: Que faut-il faire alors? parlez, et je vous suis!

ZACHARIE: (à demi voix).
Gémissant sous le joug et sous la tyrannie,
Nos frères d'Allemagne attendent le Messie,
Qui doit briser leurs fers! prêts à se soulever
Au seul nom de Prophète
Que Dieu leur a promis et que j'ai su trouver!

JEAN: Que dites-vous?

SCENE VI.

Jean, Fides.

FIDES: (timidly and weeping).
Ah! my son, God bless you!
Your poor mother, more dear to you,
Than your Bertha, your love.
Ah! my son!
Ah! my son!
Alas!
You have just given for your mother,
In giving your happiness, more than life.
Ah! my son! ah, my son!
To Heaven, to Heaven let my prayer rise,
And blessed be my son, blessed!
(She embraces Jean in a transport.)
Jean!
Ah! God bless you!
(Jean shows his mother by a gesture that he is calm, and invites her to withdraw to her room to rest. Fides, anxious, hesitates, then obeys, withdrawing gently.)

SCENE VII.

Jean, then Jonas, Mathisen and Zacharia.

JEAN: (bursting out). Oh!
Fury!
And Heaven does not burst upon these impious heads!

THE THREE ANABAPTISTS: (in the wings; from afar). Ad nos, ad salutarem undam!

JEAN: (softly). Ah! God hears me!
He sends them to me!
(Choking.)
Come, come!
Enter!
We are alone!
Interpreting my dreams the highest rank
Have you not said to me: Follow us and you shall reign?

THE THREE ANABAPTISTS: And we still offer you a crown,
Be king!
Be king!

JEAN: What must I do then!
Speak! and I follow you.

ZACHARIA: (whispering). Groaning beneath the yoke of tyranny,
Our brothers in Germany await the Messiah,
Ready to raise himself
To the name of Prophet alone,
Who will shatter their fetters!
Whom God has promised them and whom I know I have found!

JEAN: What do you say?

JONAS: Le ciel dont il est l'interprète,
Le ciel nous a lui-même,
À des signes certains,
Révélé cet élu marqué par les destins!

LES TROIS ANABAPTISTES: Jean,
Dieu t'appelle!
Ah! viens, viens avec nous, mon frère!
(À demi voix.)
Oui, c'est Dieu qui t'appelle,qui t'éclaire,
À tes yeux a brillé sainte lumière,
En tes mains sa bannière,
Avec elle apparais dans nos rangs,
Et des grands cette foule si fière,
Va par toi se reduire en poussière,
Car le ciel t'a choisi sur la tèrre,
Oui, j'irai sous ta sainte bannière,
À ta voix les reduire en poussière,
Car ton bras m'a choisi sur la tèrre,
Pour frapper et punir les tyrans!
Ne sais-tu pas qu'en France, une chaste héroïne,
Qu'inspiraient comme toi de saintes visions,
Jeanne d'Arc, a sauvé son pays?

JEAN: Oui, partons!

ZACHARIE: Mais envoyé du ciel, songe bien desormais
Que tout lien terrestre est brisé pour jamais!
Que tu ne verras plus ton pays, ni ta mère!

JEAN: Partir sans voir ma mère?

ZACHARIE: Il le faut!
Dieu le veut!

JEAN: (s'approche la chambre de Fidès). Silence, elle dort . . .
Et pendant son sommeil murmure une prière!
(Ecoutant et répétant à mesure les paroles de sa mère.)
C'est pour moi qu'elle prie!
Dieu veillez sur mon enfant!
Et son enfant la fuit et la délaisse!
Non, non, non, partez sans moi,
Je reste!
Je reste à sa veillesse!
Ma mère est le seul bein qui me reste à present!

ZACHARIE: (s'approche mystérieusement de Jean d'une voix étouffée). Et le vengeance?

MATHISEN: (s'approchant de l'autre côté de Jean). Et l'éspérance . . .
De voir tomber nos oppresseurs?

JONAS: Et la couronne,
Que le Ciel donne,
A ses élus, à ses vengeurs!
O sainte extase,
Qui nous embrâse,
Viens le guider dans les combats!

JONAS: Heaven whose interpreter he is,
Heaven has revealed itself to us
By certain signs,
This chosen one designated by destiny!

THE THREE ANABAPTISTS: Jean,
God calls you!
Ah! come, come with us, my brother!
(Whispering.)
Yes, it is God who calls you!
Ah! who calls you, who instructs you,
For your eyes sacred light shines,
In your hands His banner;
With it appear in our ranks,
And all the vast host so arrogant,
Will be reduced by you to dust,
For Heaven has chosen you
To punish the tyrants on earth.
Yes, I am going to bear your sacred banner,
At your command to reduce them to dust,
For your arm has chosen me
To punish the tyrants on earth.
Do you know that in France, a virgin,
Who, inspired as you were by sacred visions,
Joan of Arc, saved her country?

JEAN: Yes, let us go!

ZACHARIA: But since you have been sent by Heaven,
Consider all earthly ties forever broken!
You shall never more see your native land, nor your mother!

JEAN: Go away without seeing my mother?

ZACHARIA: Your fate is so decreed!
God desires it!

JEAN: (going to Fides' room). Silence!
She sleeps!
And sleeping murmurs a prayer!
(Listening and repeating the words of his mother.)
She prays for me!
"God guard my child!"
And her child is fleeing and forsaking her!
No, no, go without me!
I shall remain to watch over her old age!
My mother is the only treasure I have left!

ZACHARIA: (approaching Jean mysteriously). And your vengeance?

MATHISEN: (from the other side).
And the hope of seeing our oppressors fall?

JONAS: And the crown,
Which heaven gives
To her elect, to her avengers!
Oh sacred ecstasy
Which enfolds us,
Come, guide him in the combats!

JEAN: Non, non, non!
Si je l'embrassais
Je ne partirais pas!
Allons!
Partons!
Partons!
(Tous les quatre sortent.)

RIDEAU.

ACTE III.

(Le camp des Anabaptistes dans une forêt de Westphalie. En face du spectateur un étang glacé qui s'étend à l'horizon et qui se perd dans les brouillards et dans les nuages. À droite et à gauche une antique forêt dont les arbres bordent un côté de l'étang. Du l'autre côté de cet étang les tentes des Anabaptistes. Le jour est sur son déclin, on entend dans le lontain un bruit de combat qui augmente et se rapproche. Des soldats Anabaptistes se précipitent sur le théâtre par la droite. Des femmes et des enfants sortant du camp, accourent à leur rencontre, au moment où un autre groupe de soldats entre par la gauche traînant enchaînés plusiers prisonniers, hommes et femmes, richement vêtus, hauts barons et dames châtelaines, un moine, des enfants, etc.)

SCÈNE I.

MATHISEN: (prenant Zacharie à part). Voici la fin du jour, nos fidèles soldats, Depuis l'aurore ont tous combattu!

ZACHARIE: Pour la gloire!

MATHISEN: Aux estomac à jeun elle ne suffit pas!

ZACHARIE: Voici venir pour eux les fruits de la victoire!
Sur cet étang glacé de tous les environs,
De nombreux pourvoyeurs, le front haut, le pied leste,
Accourent vers le camp!

MATHISEN: (se frappant joyeusement les mains). C'est la manne céleste!
Qui vient reconforter nos pieux bataillons.

ZACHARIE: (en riant). C'est la manne celeste!

(L'arrivée des patineurs.) (Pendant ce choeur on voit dans le fond du théâtre défiler sur l'étang glacé, des traineaux attelés de chevaux, de petites voitures à quatre roues, chargées de provisions. La fermière est assise sur la banquette de devant, et un homme, debout derrière elle, pousse le traineau en patinant. Des hommes, des femmes et des enfants, portant sur leur têtes des

JEAN: No, no, no, no!
If I should kiss her
I would not go!
Come!
Let us go!
Let us go!
(The four go out.)

CURTAIN.

ACT III.

(The Anabaptist camp in a Westphalian forest. A frozen lake extends to the horizon and disappears in the mist and clouds. To the right and left an ancient forest whose trees border one side of the lake. On the other side of this lake are the tents of the Anabaptists. It is near the close of day. In the distance a noise of fighting which increases and comes nearer is heard. The Anabaptist soldiers rush in on the right. Women and children coming out of the camp, run to meet them, just as another group of soldiers enters on the left dragging several prisoners in chains, men, women richly dressed, lords and ladies, a monk, some children, etc.)

SCENE I.

MATHISEN: (taking Zacharia aside). Behold the day's decline!
Our faithful soldiers have fought
Since the dawn!

ZACHARIA: For glory!

MATHISEN: That does not appease the call of hunger.

ZACHARIA: Behold!
The fruits of victory are coming for them
Over this icy lake from every side, Purveyors are coming, heads high and light of foot.

MATHISEN: (clapping his hands in glee). It is manna from Heaven!
Sent to comfort our pious battalions!

ZACHARIA: (smiling). It is manna from Heaven.

(The arrival of the skaters.)
(During this chorus, in the background, passing over the frozen lake, are horses and wagons, small four-wheeled carriages, laden with provisions. A farmer's wife sits on the front seat, and men, women and children, carrying baskets or bowls of milk on their heads, skate in all directions over the lake, and stop near the camp.) paniers ou des pots du lait, sillonnent l'étang glacé dans tous les sens en patinant, et abordent auprès du camp.)

CHOEUR: Voici les fermières,
Lestes et légères,
Sur leurs têtes fières,
Portant leur fardeaux;
Leur pieds sur la glace,
Courant avec grâce,
Sans laisser de trâce
Glissent sur les flots.

SCÈNE II.

ZACHARIE: (allant à Mathisen).
Tu reviens de Munster?

MATHISEN: J'ai sommé de se rendre
Son gouverneur, le vieil Oberthal!

ZACHARIE: Qu'a-t-il dit?

MATHISEN: Le château de son fils par nous réduit en cendres,
L'a rendu furieux;
Il ne veut rien entendre, l'impie!

ZACHARIE: Il a beau faire, il cèdera bientôt!

MATHISEN: Oui, mais en attendant, si Munster nous résiste,
C'en est fait dès demain du dogme.
Anabaptiste,
Car l'empereur accourt!

SCÈNE III.

Zacharie, Jonas, et Oberthal amené par plusieurs soldats.

ZACHARIE: Qui marche là?
Qui vive?

JONAS: Un voyageur errant,
Que je viens de surprendre
Aux environs du camp!

OBERTHAL: (avec embarras).
Egaré dans la nuit et dans ce bois immense . . .

JONAS: Il venait, m'a-t-il dit, se joindre à nous.

ZACHARIE: (s'adressant à Oberthal puis à Jonas). Avance!
Tu dis donc qu'en nos rangs il venait s'engager?

OBERTHAL: (à part). Laissons-lui son erreur, seul moyen, je pense!
De pénétrer plus tard à Munster sans danger!

JONAS: Mais pourquoi dans l'ombre, demeurer ainsi?
Chassons la nuit sombre, qui nous couvre ici.
(Battant le briquet.)
La flamme scintille, scintille,
Et grâce à ce fer,
Du caillou pétille, pétille,
Et jaillit l'éclair!

CHORUS: The maidens are coming,
So swiftly and lightly,
With heads held high,
Carrying their burdens;
Over the ice, over the ice,
Sliding with grace,
Without leaving a trace,
They glide over the paths!

SCENE II.

ZACHARIA: (going over to Mathisen). You return from Munster?

MATHISEN: To surrender have I ordered its governor,
The old count Oberthal.

ZACHARIA: What did he say?

MATHISEN: His breast was filled with rage, for we had Reduced his son's castle to ashes;
He would have nothing to do with us.

ZACHARIA: That was beautifully done!
He will soon yield.

MATHISEN: Yes, but if Munster still holds out, after tomorrow
Nothing will be left of our Anabaptist creed.
The Emperor is making all haste to go there.

SCENE III.

Zacharia, Jonas and Oberthal led by several soldiers.

ZACHARIA: Who is approaching?
Who goes there?

JONAS: This traveler loitering,
I have just found
Within our lines.

OBERTHAL: (hesitating). Lost in this vast forest at night . . .

JONAS: He was coming, he told me, to join our ranks.

ZACHARIA: (addressing Oberthal first, then Jonas). Come forward!
You say then that he was coming to ally himself with us?

OBERTHAL: (aside). I must let him have it so!
The only way, I fear,
Of later reaching Munster without peril.

JONAS: Buy why in the darkness do you remain this way?
(Striking light with flint and steel.)
The flame scintillates,
And thanks to this steel,
Gives sparks, sparks,
And bursts into light!

JONAS, OBERTHAL ET ZACHARIE: O douce rencontre,
Qui sans doute ici
L'un à l'autre nous montre,
Les traits d'un ami, d'un ami!
(Il bat de nouveau le briquet.)
La flamme scintille, etc.

JONAS: (reconnaissant Oberthal). O ciel! cet infame!

OBERTHAL: (reconnaissant Jonas). C'est lui!
Brigand!

ZACHARIE: Oberthal.

OBERTHAL: Mon sommelier, fils de satan!

JONAS: Mon ancien maître! ah! mon tyran!
Toi qui fis couler notre sang!

ZACHARIE: Le ciel nous éclaire, frère,
A notre bannière sainte,
Tu sera pendu, j'espère,
Pendu, mon cher frère,
O destin prospère,
A notre bannière,
Tu seras, j'espère,
Pendu par un frère, par un ami.

OBERTHAL: Vous qui tous deux l'enfer reclâme,
L'enfer reclâme tous deux!
Grand Dieu, ta juste colère,
Aneantira, j'espère,
Cette race sanguinaire!
Soyez tous maudits!
Ta juste colère
Chatiera, j'espère,
Ces bandits maudits!
(Les soldats qui étaient en sentinelles à la porte de la tente sont accourus au bruit et entourent Oberthal.)

ZACHARIE: (à Jonas lui montrant Oberthal). Qu'on le mene au supplice!
Ah! qu'un moine l'escorte!

JONAS: (s'arrêtant et reflechissant). Sans consulter le Prophète!

ZACHARIE: Il m'importe!
C'est lui . . . va-t'en!
(Jonas sort par la gauche avec Oberthal et les soldats.)

SCÈNE IV.

Zacharie et Jean.
(Jean entre par la droite, l'air pensif et la tête baissée.)

ZACHARIE: (s'approchant de Jean). Quel air pensif et soucieux, Quand le guerrier prophète, inspiré par les cieux,
Apparait dans sa gloire à l'Allemagne entière,
Comme l'ange vengeur que la France revère.

JONAS, OBERTHAL AND ZACHARIA: Oh, happy meeting,
Which doubtless will reveal
To one another
The features of a friend!
(Strikes the light again.) The flame scintillates!

JONAS: (recognizing Oberthal).
O Heaven!
That wretch!

OBERTHAL: (recognizing Jonas). It is he!
The robber!

ZACHARIA: Oberthal.

OBERTHAL: My butler, the son of Satan!

JONAS: My former master!
My tyrant!
You who have shed so much of our blood!

ZACHARIA: Heaven clears for us, brother,
From our sacred banner,
You will hang, I hope,
Hang, dear brother!
O happy fate,
From our banner,
You will hang, I hope!
Hung by a brother, by a friend!

OBERTHAL: May perdition reclaim both of you!
Great God, your just wrath
Will destroy, I hope,
This bloodthirsty race
Cursed be all!
Your just wrath,
Will punish, I hope,
These accursed bandits!
(The sentinels at the door of the tent on hearing the noise run in and surround Oberthal.)

ZACHARIA: (to Jonas, pointing to Oberthal). Have him led to the gallows!
Let a monk escort him!

JONAS: (stopping to reflect).
Without consulting the Prophet?

ZACHARIA: It is my affair!
It is he . . . Away!
(Jonas goes out left with Oberthal and the soldiers.)

SCENE IV.

Zacharia and Jean.
(Jean enters on the right, with pensive air and bowed head.)

ZACHARIA: (going up to Jean).
What a pensive and worried air,
When the warrior Prophet, inspired by Heaven,
Appears in his glory to all Germans
Like the avenging angel whom France reveres.

JEAN: Jeanne d'Arc, sur ses pas, fit naître des héros,
Et je n'ai sur les miens trainé que des bourreaux!
Je n'irai pas plus loin!

ZACHARIE: Qu'oses tu dire?

JEAN: Que je veux voir ma mère, ma mère chérie!

ZACHARIE: Où plustôt son trépas,
Car si tu la revois,
Ne t'en souvient-il pas?
Dans l'interêt du ciel elle expire!

JEAN: (se levant et jetant son épée). Pour m'immoler d'abord reprenez donc ce fer,
Je vous le rend, adieu!
L'Allemagne enchainée
Est libre par mon bras!
Ma tâche est terminée!
Je n'irai pas plus loin!
Non! non!

ZACHARIE: (portant la main à son poignard). Par l'enfer! par mort!

SCÈNE V.

Les mêmes, Oberthal.
(Oberthal, la tête baissée, conduit par Jonas et des soldats traverse le fond de théâtre, en dehors de la tente. Le moine qui a paru à la première scène est à côté d'Oberthal et l'exhorte. Deux soldats portent des torches.)

JEAN: (se retournant). Ou va ce prisonnier?

OBERTHAL: Il est juste,
Mon crime a merité la mort!
Du haut de mes créneaux,
Berthe, pure et chaste victime,
Pour sauver son honneur,
S'élance dans les flots!

JEAN: Morte!
Morte!
Et comment?
Parle!

OBERTHAL: Hier un avis sûr m'apprend
Qu'on l'a vue à Munster.

JEAN: À Munster?

OBERTHAL: J'aillais implorer d'elle,
Et du ciel, mon pardon,
Et en tes mains me voilà!
J'ai tout dit. Frappe!

JEAN: (aux soldats qui s'avance la hache levée). Epargnez l'infidèle, Berthe sur lui prononcera!
(Les soldats emmènent Oberthal.)

SCÈNE VI.

Jean seul.

JEAN: Joan of Arc, in her steps,
Made heroes spring up, and I
Have dragged in mine only butchers!
I will go no further!

ZACHARIA: What do you dare say?

JEAN: How I long to see my dear mother!

ZACHARIA: Or rather her doom,
For if you see her again,
Do you not recall?
She will die in Heaven's cause!

JEAN: (rising and brandishing his sword). To slay me first take back this blade,
I return it to you, farewell!
Germany, enslaved,
Is freed by my arm!
My task is over!
No further will I go!
No!
No!

ZACHARIA: (putting his hand on his poniard). Through Hell!
Through death!

SCENE V.

The same, Oberthal.
(Oberthal, with head bowed, led by Jonas and some soldiers, crosses the back of the stage outside of the tent. The monk seen in the first scene is at Oberthal's side and exhorts him. Soldiers bear torches.)

JEAN: (turning around). Where is this prisoner going?

OBERTHAL: Heaven is just!
My crime deserves death!
From my highest towers,
Bertha, pure and chaste victim,
To preserve her honor,
Plunged into the waves.

JEAN: To death?
To death?
But how?
Speak!

OBERTHAL: Yesterday a trustworthy spy informed me
He had seen her at Munster.

JEAN: At Munster?

OBERTHAL: I was bound there to beg her pardon
And also Heaven, and behold I am in your hands!
I have told all.
Strike!

JEAN: (to the soldiers who advance with raised axes). Spare the infidel!
Bertha will pronounce his sentence!
(The soldiers lead Oberthal away.)

SCENE VI.

Jean (alone).

JEAN: Remparts, que ma pitié
N'osait réduire en cendre,
Vous qui me cache Berthe,
Il faudra me la rendre!
Fidèles compagnons, vous me suivrez!

SCÈNE VII.

Jean, Mathisen.

MATHISEN: (accourant éffrayé).
O terreur!
Toi seul peux desarmer ces cohortes rebelles;
Des portes de Munster, des guerriers sont sortis
Et les notres par eux mis en fuite!

JEAN: (suivi de Mathisen. Il se précipite par la gauche hors de la tente). Courons!
Courons!

SCÈNE VIII.

Jean, Mathisen, Jonas, Zacharie.

JEAN: (aux soldats d'un ton sevère). Qui, vous a, sans mon ordre, Entrainés aux combats?

PREMIER ANABAPTISTE: (montrant Mathisen). C'est lui!

MATHISEN: (éffrayé montrant Zacharie). C'est lui!

DEUXIÈME ANABAPTISTE: C'est lui!

JEAN: Perfides, que mon bras devrait punir!
Et vous insensés que vous êtes,
Depuis quand au trépas ai-je voué vos têtes,
Sans y marcher devant vous?
Du Dieu qui dans ses mains tenait les palmes prêtes,
Votre rebellion excita le courroux!
L'éternel dites-vous, à l'ennemi vous livre:
C'est que l'impiété règne encor dans vos coeurs!
Ils n'avaient pas la foi, ces tièdes serviteurs,
Que Dieu dans ses décrets juge indignes de vivre!
Craignez plutôt comme eux le celeste courroux,
Et pour le calmer, peuple impie,
Peuple à genoux! à genoux! à genoux!
Et sous son bras vengeur—coupables, courbez-vous!

CHOEUR: À ses accents d'un saint effroi,
J'ai tressailli
Car l'Eternel, car Dieu,
Est encor avec lui!
(On entend du loin un bruit de clairons et de trompettes.)

JEAN: Battlements, which my pity
Dared not reduce to ashes,
You that hid from me
My Bertha, ought to return her to me!
Faithful companions, you will follow me!

SCENE VII.

Jean, Mathisen.

MATHISEN: (running in fright).
O terror!
You alone can disarm these rebel cohorts;
From the gates of Munster, warriors have come
And have put ours to flight!

JEAN: (followed by Mathisen. He rushes out of the tent, on the left).
Run!
Run!

SCENE VIII.

Jean, Mathisen, Jonas, Zacharia.

JEAN: (to the soldiers severely).
Who, without command from me,
Who has dared lead you into battle?

FIRST ANABAPTIST: (pointing to Mathisen). It was he!

MATHISEN: (frightened, pointing to Zacharia). It was he!

SECOND ANABAPTIST: It was he!

JEAN: Faithless ones, whom my arm
Should punish!
And you senseless ones,
Since when to death
Have I dedicated you,
Without marching before you?
Of God who in His hands was holding in readiness
The palms, your rebellion will excite the wrath!
The Eternal One delivers you to the enemy, you say:
It is because impiety still reigns in your hearts!
They have no faith, these indifferent servants,
Whom God in His decrees judges unworthy to live!
Fear rather like them the celestial wrath,
And to appease it, impious people,
On your knees!
Fall on your knees!
And beneath His arm revenging Guilty ones, bow!

CHORUS: At his words I tremble with fright,
For the Eternal One, for God is with him, still with him!
(In the distance a sound of clarions and trumpets is heard.)

JEAN: Écoutez!
Écoutez! quels sons se font entendre?
Les clairons de Munster, reveillent nos clairons!
Dieu m'inspire! ah! venez, et demain sur vos fronts
La victoire sainte va descendre!
Et la grâce du Seigneur va s'étendre.

MATHISEN: (accourt suivi d'une foule de paysans armée). Grand prophète, ton peuple se rélève, er tu regnes,
Oui, tous les paysans, en agitant leurs fers,
Courent se ranger sous tes saintes enseignes!

PREMIER ANABAPTISTE: Maître, un seul cri s'élève: l'assaut à Munster!

JEAN: (sans écouter Mathisen et comme frappé d'une vision). Que vois-je? le ciel est ouverte!
(D'une voix mystérieuse.)
Sur les harpes les voix des anges,
Chantent en cheour:
À Munster!
À Munster!

TOUS: À Munster!

JEAN: (avec exaltation). Roi du ciel et des anges, je dirai tes louanges,
Comme David ton serviteur!

CHOEUR: En marche, en marche, en marche!

JEAN: Car Dieu nous suit de ses regards.

CHOEUR: Vous clairons, répétez notre chant triomphant, Marchons!
À Munster! oui! oui!
En marche!
Dieu nous suit!
(Dans ce moment le brouillard qui couvrait l'étang et la forêt se dissipe. Le soleil brille et laisse apercevoir dans le lointain, audelà de l'étang glacé, la ville et les remparts de Munster, que Jean montre de la main. L'armée pousse des cris de joie, et incline devant lui les bannières. La toile tombe.)

RIDEAU.

ACTE IV.

(Le théâtre représente une place publique de la ville de Munster. À droite la porte de l'Hôtel de la ville; plusieurs marches y conduisent. Plusieurs rues aboutissent à la place publique. Au lever du rideau plusieurs bourgeois, portant des sacs d'argent où des vases précieux, montent les marches de l'Hôtel de ville; d'autre descendent les mains vides. Plusieurs arrivent par les différentes rues, s'avancent au bord du théâtre et forment des groupes. Ils regardent autour d'eux avec inquiétude et se parlent à voix basse.)

SCÈNE I.

BOURGEOIS DE MUNSTER: Courbons notre tête,
Craignons les mechants!
Voici la tempête,
Voici la tempête,
Et tous les noirs autans!
(Voyant venir une patrouille de soldats anabaptistes ils crient à haute voix:)
Vive le prophète,
Vivent ses soldats, ses soldats!
(À voix basse entr'eux.)
À bas ses soldats!
À bas le prophète!
À bas!

SCÈNE II.

Les mêmes, Fidès.

LE TROISIÈME BOURGEOIS: (seul, voyant Fidès assise). Assise sur cette pierre, Femme, que fais-tu là?
(Quelques bourgeois conduisent Fidès qui parait épuisée de fatigue, sur l'avant scène.)

FIDÈS: (d'une voix plaintive). Donnez, donnez, pour une pauvre âme, Ouvrez-lui le paradis, le paradis!
Donnez, donnez à la pauvre femme,
Qui prie, hélas! pour son fils!
Donnez! donnez! nobles seigneurs,
Donnez de grâce,
Au sein de votre richesse,
Pitié, seigneur opulent!
Donnez, pour dire une messe,
Hélas! à mon pauvre enfant!
(Sanglottant.) Pitié!
Donnez!
Ah! ah! ah!
Hélas! Pitié!

DEUXIÈME BOURGEOIS: (à demi voix). C'est l'heure!
(On entend le son d'un crecelle dans une des cours interieures du palais.)

CHOEUR: On nous attend!

DEUXIÈME BOURGEOIS: Et si nous differons—

PREMIER BOURGEOIS: Il y va de nos jours!

TROISIÈME BOURGEOIS: (il donne de l'argent à Fidès). Tiens! Tiens!

FIDÈS: Merci!
(Ils reprennent leurs sacs d'argent et rentrent tous dans l'interieur du palais.)

JEAN: Listen!
Listen!
What sounds do we hear?
The trumpets of Munster, awakening our clarions!
O God, inspire me!
Ah!
Come, and tomorrow, on our heads
The blessed victory will descend!
And the grace of the Lord will fall on us!

MATHISEN: (running in followed by a crowd of armed peasants). Great Prophet, your people awaken and you reign,
Yes, all the peasants, unsheathing their swords,
Hasten to gather under your sacred ensigns!

FIRST ANABAPTIST: Master, one cry alone arises: Down with Munster!

JEAN: (without hearing Mathisen and as if entranced). What do I see?
Heaven opens up!
(Mysteriously.)
Above the harps the voices of angels,
Sing in chorus: On to Munster!
On to Munster!

ALL: On to Munster!

JEAN: (exalted). Ruler of Heaven and the Angels,
I will sound your praises,
As David thy servant!

CHORUS: March, march, march, march!

JEAN: For God follows us with His eyes.

CHORUS: You, clarions, repeat our song triumphant,
March!
To Munster!
Yes, yes!
March!
God follows us!
(Just then the fog begins to disappear. The sun shines and in the distance above the frozen lake the battlements of Munster appear. Jean points to them. The army utters cries of joy and lowers its banners. The curtain falls.)

CURTAIN.

ACT IV.

(A square in Munster. On the right the gates of the Town Hall; several steps leading to it. Various streets meet at the square. When the curtain rises a number of citizens carrying sacks of gold or precious vases, ascend the steps of the Town Hall: others descend with empty hands. Many arrive by different streets and form groups at the front of the stage. They look about them anxiously and whisper to each other.)

SCENE I.

CITIZENS OF MUNSTER: Let us bend our heads,
Let us fear the wicked!
Look! here comes the storm
With all its dark blasts.
(Seeing a troop of Anabaptist soldiers coming, they exclaim:)
Long live the Prophet,
Long live his soldiers!
(Aside to each other.)
Down with his soldiers!
Down with the Prophet!
Down!

SCENE II.

The same, Fides.

THIRD CITIZEN: (seeing Fides). Seated upon that stone, Woman, what do you want here?
(Some of the citizens lead Fides, who seems overwhelmed with fatigue, to the front of the stage.)

FIDES: (plaintively). Give, oh, give, to save a poor soul,
Open for her paradise, paradise!
Give, oh, give, to save a poor soul
Who prays, alas, for her son,
Give, oh, give, noble lords,
A portion of your wealth.
Pity! oh, opulent master!
Give for one mass
For my son, alas!
(Sobbing.)
Pity!
Give an alms!
Pity!

SECOND CITIZEN: (in a low tone). The hour has come!
(The sound of a racket in one of the interior courts of the palace is heard.)

SOME: They now await our coming!

SECOND CITIZEN: And if we delay!

FIRST CITIZEN: That will be the end of our days.

THIRD CITIZEN: (giving Fides money). Here!
Here!

FIDES: Thanks!
(They take up their sacks again and all return to go back into the palace.)

LES TROIS BOURGEOIS: Et courons!

SCÈNE III.

Fidès, un jeune pélerin.
(Il sort de la rue à droite et marche avec peine.)

FIDÈS: Un pauvre pélerin
De fatigue, mon frère,
Vous semble accablé!

BERTHE: Dieu, quelle est cette voix?

FIDÈS: Berthe, Berthe!
Ces traits!

BERTHE: Fidès, ma bonne mère!

FIDÈS: Sous ces habits, c'est toi que je revois.
(Elles se jettent dans les bras l'une de l'autre, et semblent s'interroger.)

BERTHE: Pour garder à ton fils le serment qui m'engage.
J'ai cherché vainement le trépas dans les flots;
Un pêcheur m'a portée expirante au rivage,
Où des soins généreux l'ont cachée aux bourreaux!
Et plus tard j'ai couru.
J'ai revu ta chaumière!
Où sont-ils?
Où sont-ils? disparus pour jamais!
Loin d'ici, disaient-ils, et le fils et la mère,
Pour Munster sont partis!
Suivons-les! ai-je dit,
Vers Munster, j'ai tourné mon espoir!
La naguère
Mon aieul, vieux soldat, fut guardien du palais,
Et j'accours!
Je te vois, mon amie et ma mère,
Guide moi vers ton fils! conduis-moi dans ses bras!
O bonheur!
O transport!
O bonheur!
O transport!
Je te vois!
Ah! conduis-moi vers ton fils! viens!
J'accours, je te vois, conduis-moi dans ses bras!
O mon bonheur!
Conduis-moi dans ses bras!
Hatons-nous!
Dans quels lieux est il donc?

FIDÈS: (à part). Pauvre fille!
Si joyeuse, comment faire,
Pour t'apprendre ta misère,
Pour te dire ici, moi, sa mère, moi, sa mère,
De Jean, hélas le trépas!
(Avec embarras et contenant à peine ses larmes.)
Mon fils!
Mon fils!
Il est mort!
Il est mort!

THE THREE CITIZENS: Let us hurry!

SCENE III.

Fides, a young pilgrim.
(He comes from the street on the right and walks with difficulty.)

FIDES: A poor pilgrim
You seem weighed down
With fatigue, brother!

BERTHA: Heavens!
Whose voice is that?

FIDES: Ah, Bertha, Bertha!
Those features!

BERTHA: Fides, my mother!

FIDES: In this attire, it is you whom I see again.
(They embrace each other, and seem to ask each other questions.)

BERTHA: To keep the vow which bound me to your son,
I sought in vain death amid the waves;
A fisherman bore me, dying to the shore,
Where generous care hid me from the tyrant.
Later while searching about, I saw once more your cot!
"Where are they?
Where?"
"Gone forever,
Far from here," they said,
"Both the son and the mother
Have departed to Munster."
"Let us follow them," I said.
I turned my hope to Munster.
The swimmer,
My god-father, an old soldier, is warden of the palace,
And I hastened here.
I now behold you, my beloved mother.
Take me to your son!
Lead me to his arms!
O happiness!
O transport!
I am seeing you!
Lead me to your son.
Come!
I hurried here; I am here!
Oh, lead me to his arms!
O happiness!
Lead me to his arms!
Hurry!
Where is he now?

FIDES: (aside). Poor girl, full of joy,
How can I acquaint you of your misery?
How can I tell you here, I, his mother,
Of Jean, alas, of his fate.
(Embarrassed and restraining her tears with difficulty.)
My son!
My son!
He is dead!

BERTHE: Il est mort! il est mort!
Dernier espoir, lueur dernière!
Qui pour jamais, qui pour jamais, ont disparu,
Que faire encor sur cette terre?
Mon bien-aimé, mon bien-aimé, je t'ai perdu! je t'ai perdu!

FIDÈS: Hélas! non, plus d'espoir, plus d'espoir, mon bonheur
Tout mon bonheur a disparu!
Que faire encor sur cette terre?
Mon pauvre enfant, je t'ai perdu!

FIDÈS ET BERTHE: Non plus d'espoir en ma misère,
Tout mon bonheur n'est plus!

FIDÈS: Un matin j'ai trouvai dans mon humble logis,
Des habits teints de sang, c'étaient ceux de mon fils!
Une voix s'écriait:
Le ciel voulait sa tête;
Tu ne le verras plus,
C'est l'arrêt du prophète!

BERTHE: Qui? lui? ce tyran!
Qui remplit l'Allemagne de sang!

FIDÈS: Il a tué mon fils!

BERTHE: Punissons ses forfaits!

FIDÈS: Hélas! tu ne peut rien!

BERTHE: Peut-être!
Si je puis seulement entrer dans son palais!

FIDÈS: Et que veux-tu?

BERTHE: Ce que je veux?
Frapper! frapper ce traitre!
Dieu me guidera!
Dieu m'inspirera!

FIDÈS: O vièrge, o vièrge immortelle,
À toi ma plainte fidèle,
Mon esperance,
Est dans ta présence,
Ah! mon fils, près de toi!
Mon fils, rappelle-moi!
(Berthe se précipite vers une des rues à gauche qui conduit au Palais. Fidès qui ne peut courir aussi vite la suit de loin en tendant ses bras vers elle.)

BERTHA: He is dead!
He is dead!
My last gleam of hope,
Which has disappeared forever.
What shall I now do on this earth?
My beloved, my beloved, I have lost you forever.

FIDES: Alas! No more hope!
My happiness!
All my happiness has gone!
What shall I now do on this earth?
My poor child, I have lost you.

FIDES AND BERTHA: No more hope in my misery!
All my happiness is no more!

FIDES: One morning I found in my humble cottage,
Garments stained with blood, those of my son!
A voice cried out: Heaven desired his head;
You shall never see him again;
It is the Prophet's will!

BERTHA: Whose? His? That tyrant?
Who has spilled all Germany's blood?

FIDES: And killed my son.

BERTHA: Let us punish his misdeeds.

FIDES: Alas, you can do nothing.

BERTHA: Perhaps!
If I could but enter his palace!

FIDES: What would you do?

BERTHA: What would I do?
Kill!
Kill this traitor!
God will guide me!
God will inspire me!

FIDES: To you my faithful lament,
My hope is in your presence.
Jean, my son near to you,
My son remember me!
(Bertha rushes up one of the streets leading to the Palace. Fides, who cannot run as fast, follows her at a distance, extending her arms toward her.)

SCÈNE IV.

(Le théâtre change et représente la Cathédrale de Munster. Une partie du cortège est censée déjà entrée; l'autre moitié continue à defiler; au fond de l'Eglise des trabans de la garde du prophète forment la haie. Marche des grands électeurs portant l'un la couronne, l'autre le sceptre, l'autre la main de justice, celui-ci le sceau de l'État, et l'autres les ornements impériaux. Jean parait après eux, la tête nue et habillé en blanc. Il traverse la nef principale et se rend dans le Choeur au maître-autel qui est dans le fond à droite et qu'on ne voit pas.

SCENE IV.

(The Cathedral of Munster. A part of the procession has already entered; the other is still filing in; at the back of the church the halberds of the Prophet's guard form a railing. The electors enter bearing the crown, the sceptre, the hand of justice, the state seal, and other imperial insignia. Jean, clothed in white and with uncovered head, follows them. He crosses the principal aisle and enters the cloister on the right which is not seen. The people in the front rush after him. They are kept back by the railing of the side chapel. All go out. Fides who has just en-Le peuple qui est sur le devant du Théâtre, veut se prècipiter sur ses pas. Il est repoussé par les trabans dans les chapelles latérales. Tous disparaissent, Fidès qui vient d'entrer est seule, à gauche, à genoux, sur le devant du théâtre, ne s'occupant pas de ce qui se passe autour d'elle, et plongée dans la rêverie et la prière. Tout à coup on entend un grand bruit d'orgues, de clairons et de trompettes, c'est la marche du couronnement.)

LES TROIS ANABAPTISTES ET LE CHOEUR: (dans les coulisses). Domine salvum fac regem nostrum, Et exaudi nos in die qua invocaverimus te!

FIDÈS: Que Dieu sauve le roi prophète, disent-ils?
(Avec force.)
Grand Dieu, exaucez ma prière!
Et qu'errant, miserable et proscrit,
Il soit chatié sur la terre,
Et que dans le ciel il soit maudit!

LES ANABAPTISTES: Domine, salvum fac regem! Domine!

FIDÈS: (avec exaltation). Ah! ma fille, o Judith nouvelle, Que Dieu protège ton dessein!
Va!
Qu'en ta main le glaive étincelle!
Et de leur roi frappe le sein!
Dieu lui-même, permet son trépas!
Va!
Va!
Le Seigneur conduira ton bras!

LES ANABAPTISTES: Domine salvum, salvum fac regem, salvum fac!

CHOEUR D'ENFANTS: (pendant ce choeur a lieu une marche religieuse. Les enfants de choeur l'encensoir à la main, ouvrent la marche; d'autres frappent sur des timbres, par lesquels ils invitent le peuple à s'agenouiller; puis viennent les jeunes filles jetant des fleurs sur la route où doit passer le Prophète; dans le fond du théâtre on voit passer les grands dignitaires, qui portent les objets du couronnement que l'on passe alternativement aux enfants de choeur qui les encensent). Le voilà, le roi prophète!
Le voilà le fils de Dieu!
À genoux! courbez la tête,
À genoux! à genoux! à genoux,
Devant son sceptre de feu,
C'est le sceptre de feu.

JEAN: Jean, tu règneras!
Ah!
C'est donc vrai! oui je suis
L'élu, je suis le fils de Dieu!
(En ce moment Fidès qui est en prière sur le devant du théâtre à droite, vient de se relever. Elle seule et Jean sont debout dans l'Eglise. Elle regarde le nouveau roi et pousse un cri.) tered is alone on her knees, in the front of the theatre on the left, not paying any attention to what is going on about her, plunged in reverie and praying. Suddenly sounds of clarions and of trumpets, and the organ are heard. The crowning is taking place.)

THE THREE ANABAPTISTS: (and the chorus in the wings). Domine salvum fac regem nostrum,
Et exaudi nos in die qua invocaverimus te!

FIDES: God save the Prophet King, do they say?
(Forcefully.)
God in Heaven, answer my prayer!
May he alone, in misery and shunned,
Be scourged on the earth
And in Heaven be cursed!

THE ANABAPTISTS: Domine salvum fac regem! Domine!

FIDES: (exalted). Oh, my daughter, a second Judith,
May God protect you in your task!
Go!
May the blade flash in your hand!
And strike the bosom of their king!
God himself permits his death!
The Lord will guide your arm!

THE ANABAPTISTS: Domine salvum fac regem, salvum fac!

CHORUS OF CHILDREN: (during this chorus a religious march is played. The children of the chorus with censors in their hands, start the procession; others ring bells which call the people to kneel; then girls throw flowers in the Prophet's path. In the front of the stage pass grand dignitaries carrying the insignia of the coronation which they hand to the children who perfume them). Behold the Prophet King!
Behold the son of God!
Let every head incline,
Let every knee be bent.
Before his sceptre of fire!

JEAN: Jean, you will reign!
Ah!
It is true! Yes, I am
The chosen one, the son of God.
(At this moment Fides who was praying in the front on the right has arisen. Jean and she are the only ones standing in the church. She looks at the new King and utters a cry.)

FIDÈS: Mon fils!
(Jean à la voix de sa mère veut courir vers elle, mais Mathisen qui est près de lui l'arrête et lui dit à voix basse.)

MATHISEN: Si tu parle, sa mort!

CHOEUR: Son fils?

JEAN: (avec effroi et modérant son émotion se retourne vers sa mère et dit froidement). Quelle est cette femme?
(Fidès hors d'elle-même se frappe les mains; elle veut parler mais le saisissement lui coupe la parole.)

FIDÈS: (d'une voix tremblante). Qui je suis?
(Avec indignation.)
Moi, qui je suis?
(Avec une douloureuse tendresse et en pleurant.)
Moi! qui je suis!
Ce que je voudrait, hélas! la pauvre femme?
Elle voudrait pardonner à l'ingrat,
Elle voudrait même au prix de son âme,
Un seul instant, une seul instant te presser dans ses bras!
(Avec force.)
Hélas!
L'ingrat ne me reçonnaît pas!

LES ANABAPTISTES: O Ciel!

JEAN: Blasphême affreux!

MATHISEN ET ZACHARIE: C'est trop souffrir, divin Prophète!
Et son blasphême et son erreur!

CHOEUR: Qu'entends-je? o Ciel! et quel aveu!

MATHISEN ET ZACHARIE: Éclate enfin notre fureur!

JONAS: Livrez-la donc à nous, à nous, à nous.

CHOEUR: Quoi le saint prophète
Serait-il donc un imposteur?
Malheur à lui!
Malheur à lui!
(Entr'eux menaçant Jean.)
L'élu du ciel, le saint prophète, ne serait-il qu'un imposteur?
Juste ciel!
Malheur à lui!
(Jonas et les Anabaptistes qui ont entouré Fidès lèvent leurs poignards sur sa tête.)

JEAN: (avec effort). Arretez!

FIDÈS: (avec joie). Il prend ma dèfense.

JEAN: Qu'on respecte ses jours!
Ne voyez vous donc pas,
Que cette femme est en dèmence?
(Fidès s'éloigne avec indignation.)
Un miracle seul lui rendre la raison!

LES TROIS ANABAPTISTES ET LE CHOEUR: Tout est possible au roi prophète, Tout est possible au fils de Dieu!

FIDES: My son!
(Jean at the sound of his mother's voice is about to run to her, but Mathisen who is near him stops him and whispers to him.)

MATHISEN: One word and your mother dies!

CHORUS: Her son?

JEAN: (frightened and restraining his emotion he turns to his mother and says coldly). Who is this woman?
(Fides beside herself strikes her hands; she wants to say something but a chill prevents her.)

FIDES: (trembling). Who am I?
(Indignantly.)
Who am I?
(With pitiful tenderness and weeping.)
What do I want, I, a poor soul?
I wish to pardon the ingrate,
I wish even at the risk of my life,
To press you for one moment in my arms!
(Forcefully.)
Alas!
The ungrateful one did not recognize me.

THE ANABAPTISTS: Heavens!

JEAN: Outrageous blasphemy!

MATHISEN AND ZACHARIA: It is too much to stand, Prophet!
Her blasphemy and her delusion.

CHORUS: What do we hear?
O Heaven!
What a fraud!

MATHISEN AND ZACHARIA: Our fury may burst!

JONAS: Give her to us, to us!

CHORUS: Can the sacred Prophet
A base imposter, be?
Woe to him!
Woe!
(To each other, threatening Jean.)
The elect of Heaven, sacred Prophet,
Can it be that he is an imposter?
Merciful Heaven!
May our fury burst!
(Jonas and the other Anabaptists who have surrounded Fides raise their swords over her head.)

JEAN: (with an effort). Cease!

FIDES: (joyfully). He takes my part!

JEAN: You must respect her age!
Do you not see,
This woman is demented?
(Fides withdraws indignantly.)
A miracle alone can cure her mind.

THE THREE ANABAPTISTS AND THE CHORUS: The Prophet King can all achieve!
The son of God can all achieve!

JEAN: Que Dieu m'inspire donc!
(Il s'avance lentement vers Fidès. Avec solennité.)
Que la sainte lumière
Descende sur ton front,
Pauvre insensée, et t'éclaire!
(À Fidès.)
Femme, à genoux!
(Fidès fait un geste d'indignation.)
(Jean s'approche de Fidès, étend les mains sur sa tête et la fascine tellement de son regard qu'involontairement elle tombe à genoux.)

JEAN: (avec intention à Fidès). Tu cherissais ce fils,
Dont je t'offre les traits?

FIDÈS: (ému). Si je l'aimais!

JEAN: Eh! bien! que maintenant
Vers moi ton oeil se lève!

FIDÈS: (d'une voix tremblante).
Mon Dieu!
Mon Dieu!

JEAN: (au peuple). Et vous qui m'écoutez, peuple, tirez le glaive!
(Tous tirent leurs épées et leurs poignards.)

FIDÈS: Ah! je frémis!

JEAN: Eh bien!
Eh bien!
Si je suis son enfant,
Si je vous ai trompés,
Punissez l'imposteur!
Frappez!
Voici mon sein!
Frappez!
Voici mon sein!
(Sur un signe de Jean plusieurs Anabaptistes mettent la pointe de leurs poignards sur sa poitrine.)
(À Fidès.)
Suis-je ton fils?
Suis-je ton fils?

CHOEUR: Parlez!
Parlez!

FIDÈS: (d'une voix entrecoupée pouvant à peine parler). Ah! Peuple! . . . je vous trompais . . .
C'est ne pas mon fils!
Non, non!
(Avec effort.)
Je n'ai plus de fils, hélas!

CHOEUR: Miracle! miracle du grand Prophète!
Miracle!
Miracle!
Miracle!

FIDÈS: (à part). O doûleur!
Il faut donc pour le sauver,
À jamais le quitter!
Mon Dieu! veillez sur lui!
(Il encensent Jean qui part avec sa suite.)

LES TROIS ANABAPTISTES: Domine salvum fac regem!
Salvum fac prophetam nostrum.

CHOEUR: Sublime spectacle!
Oui, sa voix rend la raison,
Oui, sa voix rend la raison, aux insensés!

JEAN: Inspire me, Heaven!
(He advances slowly toward Fides. Solemnly.)
May the sacred light
Descend on your forehead
And illumine you, poor senseless one!
On your knees, woman!
(Fides show her indignation.)
(Jean approaches Fides, extends his hands over her head, and so fascinates her with his look that she involuntarily falls on her knees.)

JEAN: (pointedly to Fides). You loved this son, whom I resemble?

FIDES: (moved). Did I love him?

JEAN: Well, then,
Turn your eyes to me now!

FIDES: (trembling). My God!
My God!

JEAN: (to the people). You who hear me, unsheath your swords!
(All unsheathe their swords and their poniards.)

FIDES: Ah! I tremble!

JEAN: Now, if I am her child,
If I have deceived you,
Punish the impostor!
Strike
Here on my bosom!
Strike!
(At a sign from Jean several Anabaptists place their sword points on his chest.)
(To Fides.)
Am I your son?
Am I?

CHORUS: Answer!

FIDES: (sobbing and scarcely able to speak). Ah! people . . . I have deceived you . . .
He is not my son!
No, no!
(With an effort.)
I have no son anymore, alas!

CHORUS: A miracle!
The Great Prophet's miracle.
A miracle!
A miracle!

FIDES: (aside). O grief!
To save you, I must Forever leave you!
My God, watch over him!
(Jean and his retinue depart perfumed with incense.)

THE THREE ANABAPTISTS: Domine salvum fac regem!
Salvum fac prophetam nostrum.

CHORUS: Sublime spectacle!
Yes, his word restores reason,
Yes, his word restores reason to the insane.

Ah! quel miracle du prophète, fils du Dieu!
Miracle!
Miracle!
Miracle!

FIDÈS: Et Berthe, o ciel!
Qui veut l'assasiner!
Courons!
(Elle veut se précipiter sur les pas de Jean. Les Anabaptistes lui présentent la pointe de leurs lances, et l'empèchent de passer. Elle voit Jean qui s'éloigne sans pouvoir le réjoindre.)

RIDEAU.

ACTE V.

(Le théâtre représente un caveau vouté dans le palais de Munster. À gauche un escalier de pièrre par lequel on descend dans le caveau. Au fond au milieu du mur une dalle saillante sur laquelle des caractères sont tracés. À droite une porte de fer donnant sur la campagne.)

SCÈNE I.

Fidès seule.
(Apparraissent sur les marches de l'escalier à gauche plusieurs soldats; l'un tient un flambeau, les autres entrainent Fidès. Les soldats montrent à Fidès un banc de pièrre, lui font signe de s'asseoir, et remontent l'escalier par où ils partent.)

FIDÈS: O prêtres de Baal,
Où m'avez vous conduite?
Quoi! les murs d'un cachot!
Ah! l'on retient mes pas,
Quand de mon fils Berthe veut le trépas!
Mon fils! il ne plus!
Il renia sa mère!
Que sur son front coupable éclate ta colère!
Frappe!
Frappe!
Toi qui
Punis tous les enfants ingrats!
Non, non, non, grâce pour lui!
O toi qui m'abandonnes,
Mon coeur, mon coeur, est désarmé,
Ta mère te pardonne,
(Pleurant.)
Adieu, adieu, adieu, adieu!
Mon pauvre enfant.
Mon bien-aimé! sois pardonnez!
Je t'ai donnez mon coeur,
Je t'ai donnez mes voeux,
Et maintenant pourque tu sois heureux,
Je te donne ma vie,
Et mon âme ravie,
T'attendra dans les Cieux!
Adieu!

Unheard of deed of the Prophet, the son of God!
A miracle!
A miracle!

FIDES: And Bertha, O Heaven!
Wishes to assassinate him! Haste!
(She rushes after Jean. The Anabaptists present the points of their lances to prevent her from passing. She sees Jean going off without being able to join him.)

CURTAIN.

ACT V.

(A vaulted cavern in the Palace of Munster. On the left a stone stairway. At the back in the center of the wall a slab on which various characters are traced. On the right an iron door leading to the open country.)

SCENE I.

Fides, alone.
(Several soldiers appear at the top of the stairway on the left; one holds a torch, the others lead Fides. The soldiers show Fides a stone bench, tell her to sit down and return by way of the stairway.)

FIDES: O priests of Baal,
Where have you brought me?
What! the walls of a dungeon!
Oh!
Why were my steps hindered
When Bertha wished my son's death!
My son!
No longer mine!
He has renounced his mother.
May your wrath burst on his guilty Forehead!
Strike!
You who punish all ungrateful children!
No, no, no mercy for him!
Ah!
You who abandoned me,
My heart is appeased,
Your mother pardons you.
(Weeping.)
Farewell, farewell, farewell!
Farewell, my poor child!
My beloved, I pardon you!
I have given you my heart
I have given you my vows,
And now that you may be happy
I have given you my life!
And my soul at ease,
I will await you in Heaven!
Farewell!

SCÈNE II.

(L'officier descendant par l'escalier à gauche.)

UN OFFICIER: Femme, prosterne-toi, prosterne toi
Devant ton divin maître!
Le Roi prophète à tes yeux va paraître!
(Il sort.)

FIDÈS: (d'une voix suffoquée par l'émotion). Il va venir! je vais le voir!
Hélas!
Bien coupable peut-être!
Dieu!
Dieu!
(Avec exaltation.)
Comme un éclair précipité,
Dans son âme,
Frappé mon fils, ô vérité!
De ta flamme!
Frappé mon fils, o vérité!
De ta flamme!
Qu'il soit dompté!
Comme l'airain par le feu!
Céleste flamme,
Touche enfin son âme!
Sainte phalange,
Rends lui son ange,
Esprit divin, descends vainqueur,
De tes rayons, perce son coeur,
Et du crime, sous ses pas
L'abime ne s'ouvre pas!
Je ramène mon enfant,
Mon enfant au Dieu sauveur!

SCÈNE III.

Fidès, Jean, un Officier.
(Jean est habillé comme au quatrième acte, mais enveloppé d'un manteau et la couronne sur la tête, il fait un signe à l'officier qui s'éloigne.)

JEAN: Ma mère!
Ma mère!
Ma mère!

FIDÈS: (d'un ton sévère et solennel). Arrière
Prophète et fils de Dieu,
Tu n'est plus dans ce temple,
Où debout tu m'osais braver!
Et maintenant que Dieu seul nous contemple,
À genoux, à genoux!

JEAN: Ah! Pardons pour un fils égaré!

FIDÈS: Mon fils! je n'en ai plus!
Ce fils tant pleuré,
Était pur, pur devant Dieu!
Mais toi! mais toi!

JEAN: De honte je rougis!

FIDÈS: Mais toi qu'on déteste,
Tyran, sous la colère céleste,
Tremblant, toi dont les mains
Sont teintes de sang,
Va-t'en, va-t'en!
Tu n'est

SCENE II.

(An officer descends the stairway on the left.)

AN OFFICER: Woman, kneel, yes, kneel
Before your divine master
The Prophet King will appear before you!
(Exit.)

FIDES: (in a voice choking with emotion). He is coming!
I shall see him!
Alas!
Guilty perhaps!
O God!
(Exalted.)
Like a bolt of lightning
Strike my son
In his soul, O Truth!
With your flame
Strike my son, O Truth!
May he be softened
As bronze by fire!
Celestial flame,
Warm at last his soul!
Sacred band
Restore his guardian angel!
Spirit divine, conquering come,
Pierce his heart with your beams!
And for his crime,
Let no dark abyss open beneath his steps!
I will restore my son to God,
My son to God, our Savior!

SCENE III.

Fides, Jean, an officer.
(Jean is dressed as in the fourth act, but wrapped in a mantle, and with the crown on his head. He motions to the officer to withdraw.)

JEAN: My mother!
My mother!

FIDES: (severely and solemnly).
Away!
Prophet and son of God!
You are no longer in that temple
Where you dared stand and brave me!
Now where God alone beholds us,
Kneel, kneel!

JEAN: Ah! Pardon an erring son!

FIDES: My son!
I have none anymore!
That son for whom I wept,
Was pure, pure in the eyes of God!
But you! But you!

JEAN: I blush with shame!

FIDES: But you whom they detest,
Tyrant, beneath the celestial wrath,
Trembling, you whose hands
Are stained with blood,
Away!
Away!

Plus rien pour moi, va-t'en!
Tu n'est plus rien pour moi!

JEAN: Ma mère, me maudit, me déteste,
Quand j'allais la presser dans mes bras!
Et son courroux est le courroux céleste!
Hélas!
(Avec égarement.)
Autour de moi cachez ces flots de sang!
Image horrible, éloigne-toi, va-t'en!
Ah! mon coeur, éloigne-toi,
Va-t'en, remords vengeur,
Éloigne-toi, va-t'en!

FIDÈS: Va-t'en, tyran, va-t'en,
Tu n'est plus rien pour moi!
Eh bien! si le remords
S'eveille dans ton âme,
Et si tu peux encor
Être digne de moi,
Renonce à ton pouvoir,
À ceux qui t'ont fait roi!

JEAN: (d'une voix suffoquée, presque parlé). Deserter mes soldats.

FIDÈS: C'est Dieu qui te réclâme!

JEAN: Par eux je fus vainqueur!

FIDÈS: Par eux tu fus infâme!

JEAN: Ils diront que j'ai fui!

FIDÈS: Vers le ciel!
Vers l'honneur!
(Elle conduit Jean sur le devant du théâtre lui montrant le ciel.)
À la voix de ta mère,
Le ciel peut se rouvrir!
Dieu n'a plus de colère,
Devant le repentir,
Le ciel peut se rouvrir!
À la voix de ta mere,
Le ciel peut se rouvrir,
Ah! les jours d'innocence
À ma voix renaîtront.
Et le pardon céleste
Descendra sur ton front!

JEAN: En moi quels combats!

FIDÈS: Viens, mon fils!

JEAN: Quoi! se pourrait-il?

FIDÈS: Oui, mon fils!

JEAN: Mais mon crime?

FIDÈS: S'effacera!

JEAN: Le pardon?

FIDÈS: Descendra!

JEAN: Le ciel pourrait me pardonner!

FIDÈS: Viens à ta mère, viens!
(Elle ouvre les bras à son fils qui s'y jette avec transport.)

You are no longer
Anything to me!
Away!
You are nothing to me!

JEAN: My mother detests and curses me
When I was about to embrace her!
Both her wrath and the wrath of God!
(Wildly.)
Hide these rivers of blood from me!
Hateful image!
Away!
Away!
Ah! from my heart, remove yourself,
Vengeful remorse!
Away!
Remove yourself!
Away!

FIDES: Go, tyrant, go!
You are nothing to me!
Ah, if remorse really
Awakens in your soul,
And if you wish once more
To be worthy of me,
Renounce your power,
To those who made you King!

JEAN: (scarcely able to speak).
Desert my soldiers?

FIDES: It is God who reclaims you!

JEAN: Through them I conquered!

FIDES: Through them you grew infamous!

JEAN: They will say that I have deserted them!

FIDES: For Heaven!
For honor!
(She leads Jean to the front of the stage and points to the sky.)
Your mother's prayer
Can open the Heavens!
God has no anger
Against the penitent!
The Heavens can open!
Your mother's prayer
Can open the Heavens,
Ah! Your days of innocence,
Will come back at my word,
And the forgiveness of Heaven
Will descend on your head.

JEAN: Ah! the strife within me!

FIDES: Come, my son!

JEAN: What!
Can it really be?

FIDES: Yes, my son!

JEAN: But my crime?

FIDES: Will be effaced.

JEAN: And the pardon?

FIDES: Will be granted.

JEAN: Heaven can pardon me?

FIDES: Come, my son, to your mother!
(She opens her arms to her son who rushes into them in a transport.)

JEAN: Ma mère! Ma mère!	JEAN: My mother! My mother!
FIDÈS: Mons fils! Mon fils! Ah! Il en est temps encor, Sois à l'honneur fidèle, Le Dieu t'appelle! Et bientôt le pardon céleste Descendra sur toi!	FIDES: My son! My son! There is still time! Be true to honor! God calls you! And soon the pardon of the Lord Will descend on your head.
JEAN: Oui, je le veux, Il en est temps encor, Et trop longtemps rebèlle! Changeons enfin mon sort! Le Dieu du ciel m'appelle! Et bientôt du Seigneur Le pardon descendra, Et bientôt le pardon céleste Descendra sur moi!	JEAN: Yes, it is my desire, and There is still time. Too long rebellious, Let me change my destiny! God in Heaven calls me! And soon the pardon of Heaven Will be granted! And soon the celestial pardon Will descend on me!
SCÈNE IV.	SCENE IV.
(Les mêmes, Berthe, habillée du blanc et vanant un flambeau à la main. Elle entre par la porte de droite.)	(The same, Bertha, dressed in white and bearing a torch in her hand. She enters by a door on the right.)
BERTHE: (s'avançant vers le mur du fond et touchant la dalle de pièrre qui s'ouvre). Voici le souterrain . . . et la dalle de pièrre! Fidès!	BERTHA: (advances along the wall at the back, touching a slab of stone which opens). Here is the cavern and the stone! Fides!
FIDÈS: (courant vers Berthe). Berthe! Ici que viens-tu faire?	FIDES: (running toward Bertha). Bertha, what are you doing here?
JEAN: O ciel!	JEAN: Heavens!
BERTHE: Par mon aieul, gardien Du palais de Munster, Je savais les amas De salpetre de fer, (Montrant le flambeau qu'elle tient.) Caches dans ce caveau. Cette flamme propice Peut en quelques instants Embrâser l'édifice! Ce Prophète et les siens, Et moi-même, et moi-même avec eux!	BERTHA: From my god-father, guardian Of the palace of Munster, I knew of the store of sulphur, Hidden in this cavern. (Holding out the torch.) This propitious flame, In a few moments can Envelop this palace; The Prophet and his friends, and Myself, and myself with them.
FIDÈS: (à Jean). Que dit-elle? grand Dieu! Mon fils!	FIDES: (to Jean). What is she saying? Great God! My son!
BERTHE: (aperçevant Jean). Ah! qu'ai-je vu! Toi, mon bien-aimé! C'est toi qui m'es rendu!	BERTHA: (seeing Jean). Whom do I see? You, my beloved! You are returned to me!
SCÈNE V.	SCENE V.
(Les mêmes, un officier, suivi de plusieurs soldats, descend precipitamment l'escalier à gauche.)	(The same, and officer, followed by several soldiers, descends the stairway on the left in baste.)
UN OFFICIER: (à Jean). On t'a trahi! Par ruse en ce palais s'est glissé l'ennemi!	AN OFFICER: (to Jean). You are betrayed! By a ruse The enemy has stolen into this palace!
JEAN: L'ennemi!	JEAN: The enemy!
UN OFFICIER: (s'adressant toujours à Jean). Ils veulent t'immoler au milieu de la fête De ton couronnement . . . Viens les punir, Prophète!	AN OFFICER: (addressing Jean all the time). They wish to kill you in the midst of the feast Of the coronation . . . Come, punish them, Prophet!
BERTHE: (avec un cri d'épouvanté. D'une voix suffoquée presque parlé). Prophète! Prophète! Non! Non!	BERTHA: (with a cry of terror. Scarcely able to speak). Prophet! No, No! Prophet!
FIDÈS: Grâce!	FIDES: Mercy!
JEAN: Grâce! Grâce!	JEAN: Mercy! Mercy!
BERTHE: Va! Va! Je t'aimais, toi que je maudis . . . Je t'aimais encor Peut-être et m'en punis! (Berthe se frappe d'un poignard et tombe dans les bras de Fidès.)	BERTHA: Away! Away! But I love you, even when I cursed you! I love you even yet, perhaps, And punish myself! (Bertha stabs herself with a poignard and falls into Fides' arms.)
JEAN: Ah! Morte! morte! (Jean fait signe aux soldats d'enmener sa mère et Berthe, puis il reprend la couronne qui était restée sur la table de pièrre et la remet sur son front.) Veillez sur ma mère! Moi je reste en ces lieux Pour punir les coupables!	JEAN: Dead! Dead! (Jean motions to the soldiers to take his mother away, and Bertha also. Then he takes his crown which had been lying on a stone table and puts it on his forehead.) Take care of my mother! I will remain in this palace To punish the guilty!
FIDÈS: Mon fils! Mon fils! Mon fils! (Silence pendant lequel Jean regarde si Fidès est assez éloignée.)	FIDES: My son! My son! (Silence, while Jean watches to see that his mother is far enough away.)
JEAN: Et maintenant, vous qui m'avez perdu, Tous vous serez punis! (Il remonte vivement l'escalier à gauche après avoir regardé le caveau que Berthe a montré au commencement de la scène.)	JEAN: And now you who have betrayed me, You shall all be punished! (He quietly ascends the stairway on the left after looking into the cavern that Bertha had revealed at the beginning of the scene.)
SCÈNE VI.	SCENE VI.
(Le théâtre représente la grande salle du palais de Munster. Une table placée sur une estrade s'élève au milieu du théâtre. On monte de chaque côté par des degrés. Autour de l'estrade circulent des pages, des valets portant des vins et des corbeilles chargées de fruits. Au fond à droite et à gauche de grandes grilles en fer conduisant en dehors du palais. Jean est assis seul, pâle et triste devant une table couverte de mets où étincellent des vases d'or. De jeunes filles le servent, d'autres dansent autour de la table, pendant que des anabaptistes celèbrent les louanges du Prophète. De tous côtés les flambeau étincellent, des lustres brillent au plafond.)	(The banquet hall of the palace of Munster. In the center a raised table. About the platform are pages, and footmen carrying wines, and baskets of fruit. At the back, on the right, high gates of iron leading out of the hall. Jean is seated alone, pale, sad, before a table covered with meats and sparkling with vases of gold. Young girls serve him; others dance about the table, while the Anabaptists sing the praises of the Prophet. On all sides torches gleam and candles shine on the ceiling.)
CHOEUR: Hourra!	CHORUS: Hurrah!

JEAN: (à part et à voix basse à deux de ses officiers). . . .
Quand vous verrez entrer nos ennemis,
Que ces grilles d'airain
Se ferment sur ce gouffre,
D'où vont jaillir
Le salpetre et le souffre!
Puis, hâtez-vous de fuir,
Loin de ces lieux maudits,
Vous mes seuls, mes derniers amis!
(Les officiers sortent.)
(Jean se retourne avec un air riant vers les convives invitant du geste les jeunes filles à lui présenter la coupe et le vin.)
(Dans des jeunes filles, lesquelles, sur un geste de Jonas, viennent offrir à genoux à Jean une coupe dorée que d'autres femmes se hâtent de remplir.)

JEAN: (avec force et une gaité sauvage). Versez que tout respire, L'ivresse et le délire.
Que tout cède à l'empire
De ce nectar brûlant!
O la céleste fête,
O triomphe si brillant!
Compagnons du prophète,
La recompense vous attend!
Venez!
Venez!
Venez!
Versez que tout respire,

JEAN: (aside to two of the officers). When you see the enemy enter,
Close the gates of iron
Over this whirlpool,
From which the flames of sulphur
Are going to pour.
Then with all haste fly,
Far from this cursed place,
You, my only, my last friends.
(The officers go out.)
(Jean, smiling, turns around to the banquetters and invites the young girls to bring him refreshment.)
(A dance by the young girls who have just offered Jean a golden cup which others hasten to refill.)

JEAN: (forcefully and with savage gaiety). Let us drink that all may breathe
Frenzy and delirium,
That all may yield to the sway
Of this burning nectar.
Oh heavenly fête,
O brilliant triumph!
Companions of the Prophet,
You will be rewarded!
(The dances begin again.)

L'ivresse et le délire!
Versez que tout cède
A ce nectar brûluant!
(Les danses recommencent.)

CHOEUR: Vive, vive, vive, le prophète!
(Dans ce moment les portes s'ouvrent avec fracas, Oberthal à la tête des troupes imperiales s'élance dans la salle.)

LES TROIS ANABAPTISTES: La mort, la mort, la mort au faux prophète!

JEAN: Versez que tout respire,
L'ivresse et le délire,
Que resonne la lyre et . . . .
(On entend fermer en dehors les grilles du fond.) Que ces portes d'airain
Soient celles du tombeau!
Qu'on les ferme sur eux!

JONAS: Le tyran est à nous!

JEAN: À Dieu seul j'appartiens!

OBERTHAL: Il est en mon pouvoir!
(Bruit souterrain, la fumée se fait jour par le plancher.)

JEAN: Vous êtes tous au mien!
(L'estrade élevée sur laquelle Jean et sa mère se tiennent, s'écroule au milieu des flammes qui penetrent de toute part. Tout s'embrâse, le palais s'écroule.)

RIDEAU.

CHORUS: Long live, long live the Prophet!
(At that moment the doors gates open with a crash; Oberthal at the head of the imperial troops rushes into the hall.)

THE THREE ANABAPTISTS: Death to the Prophet!

JEAN: Let us drink that all may breathe
Frenzy and delirium,
Sound the lyre and . . .
(Outside the gates at the back may be heard closing.)
That these gates of bronze
May prove to be our tombs!

JONAS: The tyrant is in our power!

JEAN: I belong to God alone!

OBERTHAL: He is in my power!
(A noise from below, and smoke appears through the floor.)

JEAN: You are all mine!
(The platform on which Jean and his mother were standing crumbles in the flames which penetrate the whole building. All embrace each other and the palace falls.)

CURTAIN.

L'Africana (1865)

The African Maid

MUSIC BY GIACOMO MEYERBEER ■ LIBRETTO BY AUGUSTIN EUGÈNE SCRIBE

This five-act opera, set to a libretto by Eugène Scribe, was first performed at the Paris Opéra on April 28, 1865. The story opens in Lisbon at the King's Council Chamber. Ines is told by her father, Don Diego, that the King has decided that she will marry Don Pedro, President of the Royal Council. Vasco da Gama, with whom she is in love, is presumed to have drowned in a shipwreck during a voyage. The Council meets in order to decide whether to send assistance to the survivors. Vasco himself arrives and speaks of his adventures. He presents a petition which demonstrates the possibility of sailing around the Cape of Storms, beyond which lie unknown territories. He brings two prisoners from a strange race of that region and presents them to the Council—they are Selika and Nelusko. The Grand Inquisitor accuses him of heresy and imprisons him along with the slaves. Vasco, in prison, dreams about his voyages and Ines. Selika wakes him and protects him from Nelusko, who wants to kill him as he is in love with Selika. Selika shows Vasco a secret way to reach her country beyond the Cape. Vasco hugs her in appreciation just as Ines and Don Pedro enter with a pardon. Ines, who no longer believes that Vasco still lovers her, has obtained the pardon by promising to marry Don Pedro. Vasco learns that Don Pedro has been chosen to lead the next voyage. Ines, Selika and several other women are on board Don Pedro's flagship. He is consulting his charts as Nelusko, who is piloting and has already wrecked two ships, steers perilously close to a reef. Vasco, sailing aboard an unknown ship bearing the Portuguese flag, boards Don Pedro's ship to warn of the impending danger. Don Pedro does not heed his warning and orders his execution, but a storm arises. Members of Selika's tribe take over the ship, killing the Portuguese. Now on the island of Madagascar, where Selika is the queen, celebrations are taking place to honor her and Nelusko's return. She invokes the law of the ancestors which calls for death to any stranger who sets foot on the island. She pretends that Vasco is her husband in order to spare his life, and the High Priest calls for the gods to bless them. Vasco promises to stay with her forever, but as he does so he hears Ines mourning for him. Ines and Vasco are discovered together in Selika's garden, but he assuages her by promising that he will keep his promise and that Ines can never marry him as he is already married and she is Catholic. Selika, however, can feel the strength of their love, and frees them. She orders them to return to the ship. She then goes to a place where the manchineel tree grows, a tree whose smell is poison to all who breathe it. She hears the firing of the guns announcing the departure of the ship. She refuses to be saved by Nelusko, and they die together as a choir sings that everyone is equal when they die.

■ ATTO I	■ ACT I
SCENA I	SCENE I
Sala di consiglio del Rè di Portogallo. Porte al fondo. Porte laterali. Al diritta, il seggiolone del Presidente, a diritta ed a sinistra le sedie dei Consiglieri.	The Council Chamber of the King of Portugal. Doors at back and at each side. To the right is seen the President's chair, on either side of which are the seats destined for the Councillors.
(Inez e Anna entra)	(Enter Ines and Anna.)
INEZ: Che intesiamica . . . al consiglio m'attendon E comparirvi debbo alla voce del padre?	INES: What do I hear? I am expected at the council chamber, Where, at my father's summons I must appear?
ANNA: E question mi fu detto, d'un importante affare.	ANNA: He would speak with you, it would seem on matters of grave importance.
INEZ: Che mai si vuol? Io temo e spero al tempo stesso; Che si sa della flotta; e del mio caro Vasco?	INES: What can he wish to tell me? I vainly struggle between fear and hope. What tidings have we of the fleet, and of my much loved Vasco?
ANNA: Voi l'aspettate ancor, dopo due anni?	ANNA: And do you still expect him, though twice twelve months have flown?
INEZ: Si Vasco vincera. Lo sento là in fondo all' alma. La sua canzon d'addio. Nel core risuonar, Mi sento come allor Che sotto al mio verron, La notte che parti Cosi cantò. Del Tago sponde addio, Addio mio sol' amore, O patrio suol addio Addio mio solo amor! Per quella che m'e cara, I voti miei saran. Addio! Addio! Voi zeffiri leggieri. Portate i miei sospir Amor dell' infanzia Si caro al mio core, Bei sogni di speme, Con voi morro. Addio mio sol natal Addio mio sol' amor!	INES: Vasco will triumph yet. My inmost soul tells me so! His farewell song Even now resounds within my heart. As on the night, When beneath my balcony He thus, in tender accents, sang. Farewell, fair shores of Tagus. Farewell my only love, Farewell land of my dear fathers, My mistress sweet adieu! For her my prayers to heaven shall be forever dear to me! Farewell! You playful zephyrs Waft her my sighs, You visions of infancy, So dear to my heart. Bright day-dream of hope, With you will I die! Land of my fathers, farewell! Farewell, my only love!

SCENA II	SCENE II
(I suddetti, Don Diego, poi Don Pedro.)	(The above, Don Diego, and afterwards Don Pedro.)
INEZ: O padre, a' tuoi cenni . . .	INES: Father, at your bidding I have come—
DON DIEGO: Inez, tu dei saper Pria che il consiglio qui venga ad unirsi, Quale sposo glorioso in sua bontà suprema, Sceglier degnò per te il monarca lui stesso.. E Don Pedro!	DON DIEGO: Ines, it is time that you learn, Before the members of the council that have come here, The noble spouse our monarch, in his sovereign goodness, Has deigned to choose for you; None other than Don Pedro!
INEZ: Chi lui! giammai, giammai mio padre!	INES: He! O father, this must never be!
DON DIEGO: Il Rè lo vuol . . . lo voglio io pur . . . l'ira mia temi. (Abbassando la voce.) A quest' illustre imen, immola un folle amor Per quel garzon oscur!	DON DIEGO: The King has willed it, and I myself approve the royal choice, (lowering his voice.) If you would escape thy father's wrath, You'll sacrifice your senseless love for an ignoble youth To nuptials glorious as those that are now offered you!
INEZ: Ei sara grande un di! Il suo nobile ardir . . .	INES: The youth you scorn will one day become great! His dauntless courage—
DON DIEGO: ha condotto a perire! (Volgendosi a Don Pedro.) Vera forse e la nuova che correa questa man, E che Bernardo Diaz perito mai sarebbe.	DON DIEGO: Has lured him to his doom! turning to Don Pedro. Is it true, as was this morning noised abroad, That Bernard Diaz has perished?
DON PEDRO: I piani suoi fallir . . . la tempesta in cammin, Le sue navi scagliò contro rive deserte, Si! il ciel lo colpì! ei fu breda del mar!	DON PEDRO: It is most true; his every plan has failed; A fearful storm has thrown his ships upon rude barren coasts. Yes! heaven has stricken him; the sea has claimed him as its prey!
INEZ: E lui stesso perì?	INES: And he himself—has perished?
DON PEDRO: E si teme . . . e s'ignora.	DON PEDRO: It is feared so! but his fate is shrouded in uncertainty.
INEZ: (tremante.) E l' ufficiale . . . Vasco di Gama . . . vive egli ancora.	INES: (trembling.) And the young officer—Vasco di Gama— Does he live still?
DON DIEGO: Vasco di Gama! e chi mai di tal gente ignota, Si cal . . . chi mai . . . Vediam fra i morti . . . Si, guardate . . . spento è pur! (Dando a Inez una carta.)	DON PEDRO: (scornfully.) Vasco di Gama! Tush! who ever thinks him of anything so obscure? Wait, we'll look among the list of perished— Yes, see here, he too is dead. (hands document to Ines.)
INEZ: (Guardando la carta.) Egli e spento! (Inez e Anna escono.)	INES: (glancing at the document.) Alas! he is no more (exeunt Ines and Anna.)
DON PEDRO: La novella che qui ne giunge Perchè turbar cotanto puotè i sensi suoi! Crudel sospetto or m'entra nel cor.	DON PEDRO: Why does this sudden news so disturb and agitate her senses? What dread suspicion assails my heart?
DON DIEGO: Che importa, si teme il sovvenir d'un estinto rival!	DON DIEGO: It matters not, you surely cannot fear The memory of a rival now no more. (Enter an Usher.)
UN USIERE: I membri del consiglio Entran in seduta!	USHER: (announcing.) The members of the council The sitting now commence!

SCENA III	SCENE III
Don Diego, Don Pedro, il Grande Inquisitore vescovi, Don Alvar e gli altri Consiglieri.	Don Diego, Don Pedro, the Grand Inquisitor, several Bishops, Don Alvar, and other members of the Council.
CORO: Tu che la terra adora Pace ne infonda in sen, Colla tua santà face Tu ci rischiara ognor, Che la tua grazia immensa Mite ci renda il cor Ah signor del ciel, Sii nostro appoggio in vita Sii nostra guida ognor!	CHORUS: You whom the universe adores, Infuse peace into our souls, May your celestial beams Forever light us on our way. O may your boundless mercy Teach clemency to our hearts, O gracious Lord of Heaven, Be our stay in life, Our guide for evermore!
DON PEDRO: (levandosi.) Dal di ch'allo spagnuol, mortal nostro rival, Colombo un nuovo mondo e suoi tesori apri, Con qualche audace impresa o qualche gran scoperta, Il grande Emmanuel, nostro Rè nostro signor Vuol segnalar il regno . . .	DON PEDRO: (rising.) Ever since Columbus did reveal to the haughty Spaniard. A new world with all its untold treasures, The great Emanuel, our sovereign lord and king With some bold enterprise or great discovery, Has also wished to signalize his reign—
L'INQUISITORE: (conseverità.) O cernar il suo danno!	GRAND INQUISITOR: (angrily.) Or bring about his ruin!
DON PEDRO: Il Portoghese, gia ardito navigante. D'una strada novella presentendo il fato, Ove il turbin ruggiva fondò la speranza!	DON PEDRO: The hardy Portuguese, in bold navigation, had already long foreseen the existence of a new route, And near the Cape of storms, where the dread tempest Does ever loudest roar, his fondest hopes had Centered of success.
L'INQUISITORE: Qual fatale speranza!
ARCH: Qual fatale speranza.
L'INQUISITORE: Ben presto egli credè Di passare gli scogli del Cape temuto Voce corre che Diaz negli abissi furiosi, Ha visto sugli scogli la sua squadra ingojata!	GRAND INQUISITOR: Rash, fatal hopes were those! He fondly thought right soon to pass the rocks Of that dread Cape—but it is said that Diaz' ships, Tossed by the furious waves—were dashed to pieces!
CORO: Ingojata!	CHORUS: Were dashed to pieces!
DON PEDRO: Per conoscer sua sorte, e a lui reca soccorso, Ci riunisce il Rè, Signori l' avviso a dar.	DON PEDRO: To ascertain his fate, or lend him succour, The king has summoned you this day That each may express his separate opinion.
L'INQUISITORE: Invochiamo l' Eterno!	GRAND INQUISITOR: We'll first invoke the aid of heaven!
CORO: Colla tua santa face, Tu ci rischiara ognor Sii nostro appoggio in vità, Sii nostro guido ognor!	CHORUS: May your holy beams Forever light us on our way— Be our stay in life, Our guide for evermore!
DON PEDRO: Don Alvar, qual avviso è il vostro?	DON PEDRO: Say, Don Alvar, what plan would you recommend?

DON ALVAR: Per Diaz preghiam!
Dio disponea dei suoi di!

DON PEDRO: Chi lo sa?

DON ALVAR: Un marinar quasi solo sfuggito
Al naufragio fatal, dell' intero equipaggio
Ed in premio dei di disputato alla morte,
Non chiede che l' onor di potervi parlar.

DON PEDRO: S' appressi . . . il suo nome.
(Due uscieri escono.)

DON ALVAR: Vasco di Gama.

DON PIEDRO e DON DIEGO: Desso o ciel!

SCENA IV

E suddetti, e Vasco Di Gama. (Vasco Di Gama saluta con rispetto i membri del consiglio. Don Pedro gli fa cenno di parlare.)

VASCO DI GAMA: Io vidi . . . miei signori, sfondare negli abissi,
Ed il capo ed i soldati . . . vidi quei valorosi,
In cui nessun d'Europa giammai non penetrò
Quante volte quei luoghi deserti e selvaggi,
Quei torrenti furiosi e quelle nuove spiagge . . .

DON ALVAR: Da voi esul afflitto ah! maladette fur!

VASCO DI GAMA: (con esaltazione.) No! ma conquistati saran, si saran da noi, Credo in Dio chi m' ispira!
Che questo scritto sia da voi consultato
E che il Rè per favor mi confidi un vascello,
Pronto allor varchero quello scoglio fatal,
Del commercio e dei mar io vi prometto l'impero,
A voi, a voi novelli climi a voi ricchi tesor,
A voi prosperita!

L'INQUISITORE: E voi . . . qual parte avrete?

VASCO DI GAMA:
Io! . . . l'immortalita!
A costo pur del sangue mio,
Io vi prometto di riuscir,
E pel mio Rè . . . per la mia terra,
Signori udir . . . degnate accettar!

DON ALVAR: Pray for the soul of Diaz—it has pleased heaven to end His days.

DON PEDRO: What proof have we of this?

DON ALVAR: A mariner waits without—
The sole survivor of that fatal wreck;
As guerdon for the deadly strife which he has waged against the elements,
He craves the honor of addressing you.

DON PEDRO: Bid him approach. (exeunt ushers.)
His name, I pray you!

DON ALVAR: Vasco di Gama!

DON PEDRO AND DON DIEGO: (aside.) He! O heaven!

SCENE IV

The above, and Vasco Di Gama. (Vasco Di Gama bows respectfully to the members of the Council. Don Pedro motions to him to speak.)

VASCO DI GAMA: Noble sirs! these eyes have seen our chief and his stout warriors Struggling in the ocean's yawning gulf!
Where none, born in Europe, have ever set foot before,
How often when wandering amid those pathless wastes,
Those raging torrents, those wild thickets,
How often

DON ALVAR: How often luckless exile, they were cursed by you—

VASCO DI GAMA: (enthusiastically). Not so! but often I swore they soon should own our sway—
It is heaven, I feel, that inspires me;
Consult this scroll, I pray you
If our King will but entrust a ship to me,
I'll undertake to pass the dreaded rocks.
And promise increase of commerce,
No, the empire of the seas—new climes,
Rich treasures—boundless fortune!

GRAND INQUISITOR: And for your own share what will you claim?

VASCO DI GAMA: (enthusiastically.) Why—immortality! I swear to you I will succeed,
Even should it cost me my own life:
Hear me, great sirs, for our King's sake,
For our own dear native land, vouch-safe to grant my prayer.

L'INQUISITORE, DIE: (ecc.) Per tanto ardir e tal follia
Al la pieta m' assale già,
E non si può con seria mente,
Prestar orecchio al suo desir

DON ALVAR: (i giovani consigliere, ecc.) A tanto ardir . . . a tanto genio
Mi sento in sen il cor tremar
E per l' onore della patria
Si deva udirlo
Sicuro egli e di riuscir!

VASCO DI GAMA: Un motto ancor in pria che voi deliberate . . .
E che il mio re mi confidi un vascello;
Senza danno ei la può. Certo sono di me,
Due schiavi di razza ignota fin ora,
Dei neri sul mercato m' avean colpito gli occi,
In Africo! Sono là!

L'INQUISITORE: E che pretendi tu?

VASCO DI GAMA: Di gente ignota ancor, ei provan l' esistenza, Sotto l' ardente sol, dell' Asia non son nati!
Ne pur nel nuovo suol, allo Spagnuol sommesso!
Li vedete!

DON DIEGO: Sì! entrar si faccian.
(Ad un cenno di Don Pedro l' usciere fa entrare Selika e Nelusko.)
I suddetti, Selika e Nelusko.

SCENE V

DON PEDRO: O schiavi v' appressate . . .

DON DIEGO: Qual è la patria vostra?
(Nelusko. crolla ferocemente la testa. Selika rifiuto con un gesto altiero.)

DON PEDRO: Quì fra noi chi guidati v' ha!

DON DIEGO: Tu risponder non vuoi?

NELUSKO: No! no!

DON PEDRO: Donna . . . à tè a parlar.

SELIKA: Fatti fummo prigioni sopra l' immenso mar,
Un dì che da feroce tempesta sorpresi,
Ben lungi errammo, ohime! dall' isola natal!

GRAND INQUISITOR, DON DIEGO, ETC: For so much courage joined to such madness
I can feel nothing but pity,
No one of serious mind, I think
Can listen such rash designs!

DON ALVAR: the younger counsellors, etc. Such dauntless courage mated with such genius Causes my heart to throb within my breast,
For our own country's honor
We even must listen to his prayer,
Right sure are we that he'll succeed.

VASCO DI GAMA: Another word I pray, before you commence your deliberations.
I again even solicit that the King entrust to me a ship,
This he may safely do. No doubt, my errand!
In Africa, two slaves, of race till now unknown,
While in the slave mart, met my eye!
They wait without!

GRAND INQUISITOR: And where would all this tend?

VASCO DI GAMA: It tends to prove the existence of a race to us unknown,
Who never beneath Africa's sun drew breath,
Nor in the new world by the Spaniards conquered—
Judge for yourselves, I pray you!

DON DIEGO: Let them be brought before us!
(At a sign from Don Pedro the usher leads in Selika and Nelusko.)

SCENE V

The above, Selika and Nelusko.

DON PEDRO: Slaves! draw near!

DON DIEGO: Of what country are you?
(Nelusko shakes his head with an air of fierce denial. Selika refuses with a haughty gesture.)

DON PEDRO: Who brought you here! (to Nel.)

DON DIEGO: Will you not answer?

NELUSKO: No!

DON PEDRO: Woman, yours be it then to speak.

SELIKA: We were prisoners taken upon the open seas,
One day—when surprised by a fearful storm,
Our bark, alas! had drifted far from our dear native isle.

VASCO DI GAMA: Ah di grazia mirate le linee di quel volto, (accenando Nelusko.) Quei vestimenti e quel color Palesan un popolo ignoto.	VASCO DI GAMA: I pray you note the contour of those features. (pointing to Nelika.) That garb—that hue—all indicate A race till now unheard of.
DON ALVAR: E ver . . . è ver! (tutti fanno segno di assenso.)	DON ALVAR: It is true—most true! (Counsellors, etc., interchange signs of assent.)
DON DIEGO: La patria vostra dite!	DON DIEGO: Reveal to us your country!
VASCO DI GAMA: Ma parla dunque o Selika, Son io che te ne prego!	VASCO DI GAMA: Selika, speak! It is I who now implore you!
SELIKA: La voce sua mi prega Ah! resistere no posso!	SELIKA: Ah! It is his voice that now beseeches, I can resist no longer!
NELUSKO: (piano a Selika.) Regina . . . die giuri tuoi mantien la fè! La schiava incatenata da un tiranno Per essere nei ferri è men sovrano? Di? Per gli dei che la patria adora, pel gran Brama tuo signor. Ah! il popol tuo, Regina, ah! il popol non tradire! Ah! per pietà deh taci!	NELUSKO: (aside to Selika). O Queen, preserve your oath inviolate, Remember, though you now wear a tyrant's fetters, You're none the less a queen! By all the gods your countrymen adore, By the great Brahma's self,—I conjure you, Do not betray people!
DON PEDRO: La tua patria, odi tu? Donna, io quì commando, Bisogno al fin la tua patria far nota . . .	DON PEDRO: Your country—do you hear? Know, woman, that it is I who here command, I now do bid you to reveal your country.
SELIKA: Nomarla a te non so! non la conobbi mai, Lo schiavo non e ha!	SELIKA: Alas! I cannot–I never knew my country, No country has the slave!
NELUSKO: (con mal celata rabbia.) Ma quando voi mercate Un bue per il lavor, purchè sia di misura, E fortemente sempre esso lavori, Del suo paese mai non vi curate giá! Che cosa importa allor da dove vien un uomo, Che sol sara una bestia di soma?	NELUSKO: (with difficulty mastering his rage.) When you have purchased an ox for the plough, If he be of fitting stature, and strong enough To bear the yoke, what do you care of his country? Why ask then where the man comes from, Who will merely be a beast of burthen?
DON PEDRO: Qual indomito orgoglio!	DON PEDRO: Unconquerable pride!
VASCO DI GAMA: Vani i' sforzi saran. Non parleranno, no! e pur tutto dice, Che d' Affrica nativi non sono, ma d'un suo Dove mai l'ocean portò le nostre vele, Quei remote paesi io voglio discoprir, Deh! li mezzi mi date per veli conquistar.	VASCO DI GAMA: Your efforts are vain, They never will speak, and yet all tends to prove That they were not born in Africa, But in a clime to which the ocean Never has wafted our sails; Those climes, I say, however remote, I will discover If you'll but grant the means.
DON PEDRO: Va ben! ora attendete . . . Il consiglio s'apre!	DON PEDRO: It is well; await the decision of the council, Which even now commences its deliberations
L'INQUISITORE: (ed otto Vescove.) Dio che la terra adora. Pace ci enfondi in sen!	GRAND INQUISITOR AND BISHOPS: O you whom the universe adores, Infuse peace into our breasts!
CORO: Che la tua grazia immensa Mite ci renda il cor!	CHORUS: O may your boundless mercies Teach clemency to our hearts.
DON PEDRO: (dopo di aver consultato da parte coi consiglieri, etc.) Il consiglio sovran che per il rè comanda, In nome dei vantaggi in poter suo fidati Respinto ha l' inchiesta vostra E gl' insensati progetti vostri.	DON PEDRO: (after having consulted aside with the council, etc.) The sovereign council now acting for the king, In virtue of the high prerogative conceded it, Now refuses your request, And rejects your insensate projects!
VASCO DI GAMA: (con indegnazione.) Insensati voi dite! Fu così non ha guari, Che dal suolo natal, come il son, fu Colombe respinto, Sì egli pur, quel Genovese illustre oggi alfin venerato, I sapienti d' allor insensato gridar.	VASCO DI GAMA: (indignantly). Insensate, you call them! Even the great Columbus Was spurned by his own native land. The immortal Genoese, whom now all men revere, Was even by the wise of those days, treated as a madman!
DON PEDRO: Silenzio tèmerario!	DON PEDRO: Rash youth, be silent.
DON DIEGO, L'INQUISITORE E CORO: Silenzio temerario!	DON DIEGO, GRAND INQUISITOR, AND CHORUS: Peace, we pray you.
VASCO DI GAMA: No! Io parlerò! Or a me di giudicarvi, e vi diffamerò! Ah! che l' onta della patria Da voi tradita Su voi ricada tutti un dì Voi tribunal cièco, invidioso, e geloso!	VASCO DI GAMA: No, I'll be heard! Mine be it now to judge,—and to expose you, May the shame you now inflict upon your much wronged country, One day recoil upon yourselves. Blind, partial judges, that you are!
DON PEDRO, DON DIEGO, L'INQUISITORE, e CORO: La morte a lui per tanto ardir!	DON PEDRO, DON DIEGO, GRAND INQUISITOR, AND CHORUS: His life shall pay the forfeit of this overweening boldness!
DON ALVAR: No! indulgenza e perdon!	DON ALVAR: No—rather extend pardon to his fault!
L'INQUISITORE: Per simile insolenza, un' eterna prigion.	GRAND INQUISITOR: Such insolence as his, richly merits eternal imprisonment
VASCO DI GAMA: Si, giusto è quel furor, miei carnefici siate, Ah! voi ch' abborrite la luce In ria prigion la racchiudete, Guai, se ad onta vostra, a rischiararvi giunge!	VASCO DI GAMA: (bitterly) No, check not your wrath, become my executioners! Ah! You who abhor the light of truth, And would forever immure her in a gloomy cell, Woe, woe, to you, should she ever shine in spite of you!
CORO: Ribelle . . . insolente, Tua sorte e in nostra man Gui dicarti saprem! Iniquo ribelle Da noi dipende il tuo destin! Il ciel sia vendicato, E in una la maestà Del dritto, dell' onor!	CHORUS: Insolent rebel! Impious slave! Your fate is in our hands; Your sentence we'll at once pronounce, Your fate depends on us. This outrage against heaven shall be revenged, We vindicate the eternal majesty Of right and honor!
VASCO DI GAMA: Da iniquo . . . da ribelle, Io son trattato in van Da ora n' ho appellato Alla posterita, E per domar l'invidia La patria e l' avvenire E il vano suo furor! Sapranmi vendicare!	VASCO DI GAMA: (indignantly). Of rebellion, of impiety; You would vainly accuse me. From the injustice of the present hour I appeal to posterity; To mar rash envy And her malicious train, My country will suffice me, And the avenging future!

DON ALVAR: Da iniquo . . . da ribelle Egli e tratto in van.
Per lui ne appello,
Alla posterità
E il vano suo furor
E per domar l' invidia
La patria e l' avvenire
Sapran lo vendicar!

L'INQUISITORE: Per mia voce . . . Dio lui stesso
Nel suo giusto rigor
Sull' empio capo tuo
Anatemà scagliò!

CORO: Al ribelle scagliam l' anatemà!

FINE DELL' ATTO PRIMO.

ATTO II

Prigione dell' Inquisizione à Lisbona. Al fondo una panca, nel centro della scena una colonna massiccia, sul quale si vede una carta geografica.

SCENA I

Vasco Di Gama addormentato sulla panca, Selika.

SELIKA: In grembo a me del sol figliuol,
Glorioso in campo aperto,
In grembo a me vieni a cercar,
Il sonno ed il riposo
Tutto intorno a te
Pace spirà e amor'
La stella brilla
In puro cielo
Canta il Bengallin.
Ah si, della notte in sen!
Riposa in pace in questa selva oscura.
Vieni a goder, ah vien! ah vien!
(Contemplando Vasco.)
Tranquillo e già.
Ah gia succombo al duol
Io soffro, in se vaccilla il cor.
Dolor mortale, ah!
Presso di te pia go appena
La dolce terra mia natal
La reggia avita, il popol mio!
I numi che il cor tradè
Ah! io t' amo!
Mio ben supremo
Ah si! sei tu, sei tu!
(S'inchina versa di lui ed è sul punto di baciarlo sul fronte, quando ella osserva Nelusko che entra dal diritta. Selika si rileva con prestezza, e si nasconde dietro della colonna.)

DON ALVAR: Of rebellion, of impiety;
You would vainly accuse him,
In his name I appeal
Unto posterity!
To mar rash envy
And her malicious train,
His country will suffice him,
And the avenging future!

GRAND INQUISITOR: Heaven itself in righteous wrath.
Now speaks through my lips;
And on your impious head launches Eternal Malediction!

CHORUS: Malediction—Eternal Malediction on his head!

END OF THE FIRST ACT.

ACT II

The prison of the Inquisition at Lisbon. At the back of the stage is a bench. In the centre is a massive column, on which is seen a map.

SCENE I

Vasco Di Gama asleep on bench, Selika.

SELIKA: Lulled in my arms, bright sun's child,
Right valiant in the tented field,
Lulled in my arms, enjoy in peace
Sweet slumber and repose.
There's nothing around but breathes of tranquil peace and love;
The bright star shines
In the pure sky above,
The Bengalli trills its liquid note,
Yes, shrouded in the night's dark bosom
Sleep secure amid waving woods around,
Lulled in my arms, bright sun's child,
Enjoy sweet rest!
O, come! O, come!
(Contemplating Vasco Di Gama.)
He is tranquil now.
Alas! my grief overcomes me.
What suffering is mine!
My heart wildly throbs within my bosom
And yet, when near to you I scarce regret
My own sweet native land,
My ancestral palace, my devoted subjects,
Nor even the deities I've so forsworn!
Yes, I dearly love you,
My heart's own idol fond
Is you!
(She bends over Vasco Di Gama and is about to press her lips to his forehead, when she perceives Nelusko, who has meanwhile entered from the right; she hastily rises and conceals herself behind the column.)

SCENA II

Nelusko, Selika nascosta, Vasco dormente.

NELUSKO: (pensoso cogli occhi abbassati) L' oltraggiato onor della sovrana lo vuol,
L' onor suo lo vuole, e l' odio mio!
(Esitando.)
O ciel che miro, egli dorme, malè stà!
Ferir rìpugna a me uno rival che dorme,
Si compia, morir dè!

SELIKA: (slanciandosi verso di Nelusko.) Ciel, che far mai tenti, Egli è al par di noi prigionier.

NELUSKO: Egli è christian, io gli detesto tutti!

SELIKA: Fu nostro salvator ed inerme egli giace.

NELUSKO: Sul mercato a lui fummo venduti a prezzo d' or!
Davver! fu gran bontà. Al comprator giammai,
La merce riconoscenza non deve!

SELIKA: Ei ti comprò e ver! ma generoso e buon,
Allor che lo pregava cogli occhi lagrimosi,
Di non mai separar, almen nel lor dolor,
Color che uniti fur dall' ira del destin
Per me vendettè allor, le gioje e l' arme sue,
A lui solo degg' io, in mezzo a tanto duol,
Di trovar presso a te, la mia patria adorata!
Senza lui da te divisa, sola in terra sarei.
Sarei più trista ancor!
E tu, nobil guerriero macchiando un ferro illustre,
Tu vuoi ferir quel cor si generoso!

NELUSKO: Io lo vo!..io lo devo, abborro quel christian!

SELIKA: E senza altra ragion . . .

NELUSKO: Oh, forse.

SELIKA: Ti spiega.

NELUSKO: Io nol posso.

SELIKA: Io tel comando. Io lo voglio!

NELUSKO: Figlia dei Rè a tè l' omaggio,
Che ti deve mia fedelta.
Tu la sventura o schiavitude
Non tolgan nulla alla tua maestà!
Ma per lui per quel uom, quel christian,
Odio . . . rabbia . . . pensaci

SCENE II

Nelusko, Selika concealed, Vasco Di Gama sleeping.

NELUSKO: (advancing thoughtfully, his eyes bent on the ground). The honor of my sovereign Queen wills it.
Her honor and my hate both demand it!
O Heaven! what is it I see! he sleeps!
(Hesitating). No, this may not be!
I scorn to strike a sleeping rival!
And yet it must be so—he dies!

SELIKA: (rushing toward Nelusko). Heavens! what would you do?
Is he not, like us, a prisoner?

NELUSKO: He is a Christian, and I loathe the hateful race!

SELIKA: It was he who saved us, and he now lies defenseless.

NELUSKO: Yes! in the slave-mart we were sold to him
For price of gold—his great kindness!
Mere merchandize like me can owe but slender thanks
Unto its purchaser!

SELIKA: He purchased you, it's true, but he was generous and kind,
For when I did beseech him with tearful eye,
Not to part those whose fate had been linked together,
He at once sold his jewels, no his arms,
That he might buy me too!
To him alone I owe, amidst all my woes,
That you're still by my side, and that I find in you
Some vestige of my much loved country!
But for his timely aid, torn from your side, I should have been Friendless and alone, and even more wretched still Than I am now! And you, brave warrior that you are,
Would stain your noble blade with the heart's blood
Of one so kind, so generous?

NELUSKO: It must—it shall be done.
I abhor yon Christian!

SELIKA: Have you no other reason?

NELUSKO: Perchance I have.

SELIKA: Explain, I pray you.

NELUSKO: I cannot.

SELIKA: I entreat, no, I insist that you tell me!

NELUSKO: Daughter of kings, the homage
Which your faithful subject swore to you,
Nor slavery, nor misfortune's frowns,
Can affect your queenly state,
But for him, hateful Christian, ben.

Quando amor m' infiamma
Oppur quando l' odio,
Improvviso, ardente
Si sveglia, nel cor,
Nel mio sen s' accende
Fiamma disperato,
Che da noi s' aumenta
Al fuoco del sol!
Un fatale segreto io credei scoprir,
E se pur fosse vana mia tema,
Non l' ho giurato in van che costui deve perir!

SELIKA: Nelusko!

NELUSKO: L'ira mia paventando
Ch' ei tremi quel pagan . . .

SELIKA: Per pietà!

NELUSKO: Ah per lui! più funesto
E il tuo pregar!
(S' avvicina di Vasco Di Gama per colpirlo.)

SELIKA: (slanciandosi verso di Vasco Di Gama.) Mio signor ti desta!
Sorgi signor!

VASCO DI GAMA: (svegliandosi.)
Che si vuol!
(Nelusko nasconde il suo pugnal.)

SELIKA: Il tuo pasto!
Che te recò il tuo schiavò!

VASCO DI GAMA: Va ben . . . ci lascia!
(Vedendo che Nelusko sta immobile.
M'odi tu?
(Nelusko esce gettando un ultimo sguardo su Selika.)

VASCO DI GAMA: (guardando la carta geografica.) Terribil, fatal promontorio
Che niun ancor potè passar,
Avrò la gloria di varcarti.
Il varco è qui,

SELIKA: (avvicinadosi e guardando la carta.) No!

VASCO DI GAMA: (altonito.)
Perchè.

SELIKA: Sarebbe perir!

VASCO DI GAMA: Che dite?

SELIKA: Sulla dritta.

VASCO DI GAMA: Sulla dritta?

SELIKA: V' è una terra!

VASCO DI GAMA: Qual terra?

SELIKA: Isola immensa . . . .

VASCO DI GAMA: O ciel!

SELIKA: A Brama caro suol . . .

nothing else save deadly detestation can I feel!
You know me well, when love or hatred fierce and burning,
Takes possession of my soul, a raging desperate fire
Is kindled in my heart, which the sun's warmth
Irritates even unto madness!
A fatal secret methinks I have discovered.
And even should my dread presentment prove vain.
I have sworn, and may not vainly swear,
That he shall perish!

SELIKA: Nelusko!

NELUSKO: Yes, let yon accursed Christian
Beware my hate!

SELIKA: I entreat you.

NELUSKO: Entreat me not for him.
Each prayer you breathe
Just insures his doom.
(Approaches Vasco to strike the blow.)

SELIKA: (rushing toward Vasco.)
Good master, wake up!
Wake, I pray!

VASCO DI GAMA: (waking).
What would you?
(Nelusko conceals his dagger.)

SELIKA: Your slave has brought Your morning meal.

VASCO DI GAMA: It is well; now leave me.
(Perceiving that Nelusko remains motionless.)
Do you hear?
(Nelusko exit, glancing passionately at Selika.)

VASCO DI GAMA: (contemplating the map). You fatal promontory
Whom none as yet has ever rounded.
The glory of first doubling you shall yet be mine!
The passage must lie here!

SELIKA: (who has meanwhile approached him, looking at map).
Not so!

VASCO DI GAMA: (surprised).
And why not?

SELIKA: To venture there would be to seek death!

VASCO DI GAMA: What did you say?

SELIKA: To the right

VASCO DI GAMA: (eagerly). To the right—proceed!

SELIKA: There lies a land—

VASCO DI GAMA: (eagerly).
What land, I pray you?

SELIKA: A vast island—

VASCO DI GAMA: O heaven!

SELIKA: A land dear to Brahma!

VASCO DI GAMA: Prosegui . . .

SELIKA: Ei fù la che la mia fragil barca,
Sorpreso in cheto mar da repentina tromba,
Battuta senzo fiu da procella fatal,
Strascinata fu al fin verso rive nemiche.

VASCO DI GAMA: Trionfo! io dett'o l' ho . . .
Trionfo il varco e là.
Non mi illudeva dunque . . . è là!
Ah per te or certo ne son!
Alfin ha il ciel di me pieta!

VASCO DI GAMA: (Abbracciando Selika.) Ah! quanto m' è caro, Quest' angel custode
Pel qualo la luce,
Intera si fè.
Immenso favore,
O gioja inattesa,
Ah per sempre il mio core
Memoria ne avra!

SELIKA: (Tutta commossa.) Ciel io gli son cara,
O qual dolce raggio
L' alma mia rischiara
E m' inebria il sen,
I moti costanti
Di speme, d' amore,
Deh! frena pietosa
O madre d' amor!
(Verso la fine del ensemble la porta del prigione si apre. Don Pedro e Inez entrano al momento quando Vasco Di Gama tiene Selika nelle sue braccia.)

SCENA III

I suddetti, Don Pedro, Inez, e Nelusko.

DON PEDRO: (à Inez, accenando Vasco Di Gama e Selika.) E la fortuna amica, Avevan detto il ver!
Or ven offre la prova.

VASCO DI GAMA: (accorgendosi di Inez.) Guisto ciel . . . è fia ver!
Inez amato bene!

SELIKA: (con un sgrido di dolore.) Dessa . . . o ciel, che sarà!
(Traversando il tèatro e avvicinandosi di Inez con un aria minacciosa.)
Com' e bianca . . . e qual gel nelle vene mie si scorre.
(Selika contempla Inez con un sentimento d' invidia.)

INEZ: (a Vasco Di Gama.)
Udii..ohime . . . che nel orror
Di questo carcer cupo,
Gemevi tu . . . ma il tuo perdon
E compro al fin
E rèco a te la libertà!

VASCO DI GAMA: La libertà!

VASCO DI GAMA: Proceed, I pray you.

SELIKA: It was there that my frail bark
While sailing on the calm, unruffled sea,
Was suddenly overtaken by the typhoon,
And driven onward by the fatal storm,
Thrown on hostile shores!

VASCO DI GAMA: (eagerly). Ah! I triumph, it is even as I predicted!
The passage does lie there!
I was not mistaken! it is there!
Yes, thanks to you, I now am sure of it!
Heaven at length has granted my fondest wish!

VASCO DI GAMA: (embracing Selika). O guardian angel,
By whom the light of truth
So clearly is revealed,
The service you have rendered me,
Shall ever be treasured
In this most grateful heart!

SELIKA: (in great agitation). O heaven! am I then dear to him!
What bright ray of happiness
Illumes my soul—intoxicates my sense
Restrain fond goddess of love these ceaseless emotions
Of hope and affection,
In mercy.
(Towards the end of the ensemble the prison door is opened, Don Pedro and Ines enter just as Vasco di Gama is clasping Selika in his arms.)

SCENE III

The above, Don Pedro, Ines, Nelusko.

PEDRO: (to Ines, pointing to Vasco and Selika.) The tale was true, it would seem,
Fortune most kindly offers you the proof!

VASCO DI GAMA: (perceiving Ines). Great heaven! do I see aright!
Ines! my beloved!

SELIKA: (with a cry of anguish).
She! Ines—here!
(Crossing the stage and approaching Ines with a threatening air.)
How fair she is—what icy thrill pervades my veins.
(She contemplates Ines with evident envy.)

INES: (to Vasco.) I heard, alas! that amid this dreary prison's gloom,
You were languishing—but I have obtained your pardon at last:
I bring you liberty!

VASCO DI GAMA: Liberty!

INEZ: Si! leggio quel foglio . . . pago sei tu. (Rimettendo gli una pergamena che porta il sigillo reale.) Deh! ed or dividerci dobbiamo. Dividerci per sempre Fuggir mi dee, Addio! (a Don Pedro) Andiam, signora, andiam! Sortiamo!	INES: Yes, read this document,—you are free. (Handing him a parchment scroll bearing the royal seal.) And now we must part,— Yes, forever part! Henceforth you must shun me. Farewell! (To Don Pedro.) Come, sir, let us leave this place.
VASCO DI GAMA: (ritenendolo.) No! i tuoi sospetti il mio core scopre, Accennando Selika. Quella schiava . . .	VASCO DI GAMA: (detaining her.) No! no! my heart has divined your suspicions. (pointing to Selika.) Yon slave—
INEZ: Da voi la nell' Affrica presa.	INES: Purchased by you in Africa!
VASCO DI GAMA: Non è che la mia schiava . . . Un sol cenno mi basta Per calmar il vostro cor, Inez io ve la dono!	VASCO DI GAMA: Is nothing else than my slave! One sign, one word of mine, will prove this To your doubting heart—Ines, I give her to you!
SELIKA: (con indegnazione.) Ah crudel! ah crudel!	SELIKA: (indignantly). Ah! cruel one!
VASCO DI GAMA: Io ve la cedo . . . io ve la dono.	VASCO DI GAMA: She's yours, I say—I give her to you!
NELUSKO: Ed io?	NELUSKO: And I?
VASCO DI GAMA: Si! la segui il mio cor . . . Ah il mio sangue il mio cor Tutto quel che possiedo per un suo sguardo!	VASCO DI GAMA: (to Ines). You even may follow her. My life, my heart's best blood, All would I give for one sole glance From those loved eyes.
SELIKA: (da parte.) Ah! il crudel.	SELIKA: (aside). Ah! cruel one!
INEZ: Ah! sventurato . . .	INES: (aside). Unhappy man!
DON PEDRO: Noi accettiam . . . Entrambi ve li pago . . . (Accennando Selika e Nelusko.) Ed or non più (a Inez.) partiam!	DON PEDRO: (to Vas.) It is well! we accept your offer. (pointing to Selika and Nelusko.) I'll purchase both the slaves from you. And now (to Ines) we will set out!
VASCO DI GAMA: (sorpreso.) Che dite voi?	VASCO DI GAMA: (surprised.) What did you say?
DON PEDRO: Del Rè la bontade paterno A miei lumi confido, o se vuoi al mio zelo, La gloria di tentar quel passaggio fatal Che più d' un folle orgoglio in van tentò.	DON PEDRO: The King, of his sovereign goodness, Has been pleased to trust to my skill, Or rather to my zealous care, The glory of attempting the dread passage; A feat which more than one proud boaster has already tried, But has never yet accomplished!
VASCO DI GAMA: Voi! a chi dato avea con intera fiducia, Dei mie perigli i frutti, le mie veglie, i pensieri.	VASCO DI GAMA: (astounded.) You! to whom I I had confidingly entrusted The results of all my perilous escapes, my wakeful nights, My hours of thought—
DON PEDRO: Di quei sogni la fiamma guistizia fè . . .	DON PEDRO: Mere senseless dreams! which Have long since been committed to the flames!
VASCO DI GAMA: Gloria che m'appartien e che strappate a me!	VASCO DI GAMA: Not so! The glory of this discovery belongs to me, And you would wrest it from me!
NELUSKO: (piano a Don Pedro.) Tu l' otterrai per me, se teco, bordo io son, Signor, ti servirò da guida e da pilota.	NELUSKO: (aside to D. Ped.) That glory you'll obtain through me, On board your ship if you'll take me, As guide and pilot I will serve you.

DON PEDRO: (osservandolo.) Io vi contavo ben allor che ti comprai. Il Rè, dei paesi scoperti da me, Concessa m' ha il governo.	DON PEDRO: (scrutinizing him, aside to Nelusko.) It was my intention, when I purchased you. (aloud.) The King already has proclaimed me governor Of the new lands I discovered.
VASCO DI GAMA: Che sento!	VASCO DI GAMA: Do I hear right?
DON PEDRO: Quest' oggi stesso Sulpera la mia squadra; (a Inez.) Andiam la vostra man . . . Tempo è gia . . .	DON PEDRO: This very day will My squadron set sail. (to Ines.) Madam, the hour draws near—your hand.
VASCO DI GAMA: Di quel dritto.	VASCO DI GAMA: And by what right, do you address this lady thus?
DON PEDRO: Di quel dritto che a piè degli altar Ricevei di Dio stesso . . .	DON PEDRO: By the right, which at the altar's foot, I have received from heaven itself!
VASCO DI GAMA: Che mai dice?	VASCO DI GAMA: (surprised.) What is it he says?
INEZ: (piano a Vasco Di Gama.) Per voi che dicean infidele E per sottrarvi all' orror d' una prigion eternal Mia man io l' ho sacrata . . .	INES: (aside to Vas.) They told me you were faithless, To save you from the wretchedness of an eternal prison, To him I sacrificed my hand.—
VASCO DI GAMA: Ah!	VASCO DI GAMA: Great heaven!
INEZ: E da voi lungi io muojo.
VASCO DI GAMA: Anatemà sull' infame, Maledetto è il mio destin!	INES: And I go far from you—to die!
VASCO DI GAMA: Stupefatto da sorpresa Dal dolor ho il cor straziato Come creder che l' onore, Del suo giuro infranto essa ha. E per tanto egli proclama Egli dice che è sua moglie, Anatema sull' infame, Maledetto e il mio destin.	VASCO DI GAMA: I'm overcome with mute surprise, My heart is wrung with cruel grief; Can I believe that she has forsworn her plighted faith And yet he loudly proclaims, That she's his wife, and calls her by that sacred name! Accursed be such base treachery And thrice accursed my wretched fate!
DON PEDRO: Stupefatto da sorpresa, Dal dolor ha il cor straziato A mie leggi essa è sommessa Vincitor io son alfin. Tremo in van . . . esa e mia moglie Più rival il cor non teme E sfidare posso altero, La vendetta, il suo furor.	DON PEDRO: He is overcome by mute surprise, His heart is wrung with cruel grief; But she is mine,—my word is law, I am the victor after all! My fears were in vain, she is my bride No rival need this heart ever fear, With head erect, I laugh to scorn His vengeful threats—his wild fury.
NELUSKO: Stupefatto da sorpresa. Dal dolor ha il cor straziato, Quel cristiano che detesto E mi pasco dal suo duol! E quest' altro . . . quest' infame Che l' orgoglio già consuma, Sì paventi del mio core, La vendetta ed il furor!	NELUSKO: He is overcome by mute surprise, His heart is wrung with cruel grief; The pangs of him whom I so hate, Do fill my soul with wild delight, And he too (glancing at Don Pedro.) That haughty wretch, Whom pride even now consumes, Let him beware the vengeful hate My heart feels for all his race!
INEZ: Stupefatto da sorpresa, Dal dolor ha il cor straziato, Ho tradito i giuri miei Maledetto è il mio destin Ma l' onor ed il decoro,	INES: He is overcome by mute surprise, His heart is wrung with cruel grief; I have betrayed my plighted faith, Accursed is my luckless faith.

Tutto grida che son moglie,
Anatema sul mio capo,
Maledetto è il mio destin!

SELIKA: Stupefatto da sorpresa
Dal dolor ha il cor straziato
E l' ingrato che mi spezza
Non si cura del mio duol,
Ma d' un altro ella è sposa!
E la rabbia che lo rode . . .
Ma sua rabbia fa rinascer
E la speme ed il piacer.

INEZ: (à Vasco Di Gama.) M' ascolta per pieta!

SELIKA: Seguirlo tenta!

NELUSKO: Egli cede!

INEZ: Ebben per me sei libero . . .
La gloria a se ti chiama
E sul mio sasso o cor fedele,
Deh vien al tuo ritorno . . .
Ah! nei sospir del mar che geme
Ascolta lar del mio core,
D' un cor che langue e muor
Addio! lassù ti rivedro,
Lassù ci rivedrem!
Godremo eterno amor!

SELIKA: L' esiglio e il disprezzo
O ciel qual colpo . . . qual martir.
Si m' abbandona il barbaro,
Lasciar mio solo ben,
Men crudo fià il morir!
Addio! Addio!

VASCO DI GAMA: Destin fatal . . . ci la perdè
Qual colpo . . . qual martir,
Ah, si! perduta ci l' ha,
Per me fia men crudo il morir!
Inez, addio! addio!

NELUSKO: Quel vil Chrisitan spietato
Convinto al fin sarà
Lode a te, o Brama!
Di sua fronto il pallor,
Già tradisce il suo duol
E salva alfin . . . addio!

DON PEDRO: Trionfo alfin di quel rival,
Ei vinto è già,
Si vendicato io sono appiena
Di sua fronte il pallor.
Già tradisce il suo duol
Trionfo alfin . . . addio!
(Don Pedro parte con Inez. Vasco Di Gama cade mezzomorto sopra una sedia. Selika vuol slanciarse verso di lui, ma Nelusko ritiene e la stringe a seguire i passi Don Pedro. Selika getta su Vasco Di Gama un ultimo sguardo di dolore d' amore.)

FINE DELL' ATTO SECONDO.

ATTO III

La scena rappresenta il ponte a parte del interiore d' un gran vascello. colle entrate dei camerini principali.

SCENA I

(Si vede sul ponte diversi marinari ed ufficiali di marina. Inez è stesa sopra d' un lettuccio, circondata dalle sue donne.)

CORO DEI MARINARI: Su, su marinar,
L'equipaggio è in piè,
La ridente aurora,
Sorge e gia colora,
I campi del mar!
Su, su marinari!
Si torni al lavor!
(Si ode la campana che annunzia la preghiera della mattina . . . i marinari. gli ufficiali. Inez e le sue donne s' inginocchiano.)

PREGHIERA DEI MARINAR: O gran' San Domènico,
Dell' infedel terrore
Ci proteggi e guida ognor!
Ogni di l'inno tuo vogliam dire,
Gran' San Domenico!

SELIKA, INEZ, E LE SUE DONNE:
O celeste providenza,
O ricorso nostro sol
Signor, ci assisti ognora,
Ci proteggi e guida ognor!

NELUSKO: (parendo sul primo ponte.) Olà! marinar!
Muta il vento . . . pronti alle vele
Tutti correte . . . il vento muta
Volgete al nord . . . Vedete in fondo là
I segni precursor del terribil uragan,
Volgete al nord . . . oppur persi siam!
(Scende dal primo ponte.)

ALVAR: (à Don Pedro, accennando Nelusko.) Siete ben sicuro che non è un traditor?

NELUSKO: (à Don Pedro con finta dolcezza.) Io che v' ho guidati . . . io che interi vi svélai,
I progetti ed i piani di Vasco di Gama.

DON PEDRO: Ha detto il ver . . . io son ancor suo debitor.

But honor's voice alone proclaims,
That I am now another's bride;
I must subdue this guilty love,
What wretched destiny is mine!

SELIKA: I am overcome by mute surprise,
My heart is wrung with cruel grief;
While he who tortures me,
Heeds not the pain I feel.
But she's another's bride,
His heart is wrung with vengeful hate,
Alas! his torments are to me
A source of joy and gladness.

INES: (to Vasco.) Hear me, in mercy hear me!

SELIKA: (aside.) Even now he fain would follow her.

NELUSKO: (aside.) He yields!

INES: (to Vasco.) Yes, through my efforts you are free
The voice of glory now calls you here,
But when, O faithful one! you shall return
You will not pass by my grave unheeded.
Ah! let the murmurs of the surging sea,
Convey to you the yearnings of my heart,
A heart that's languishing and soon will cease to throb.
Farewell! in heaven above we'll meet again,
And never know separation more!

SELIKA: Exile and contempt!
O heaven! what fearful martyrdom is this.
The ruthless one abandons me
I am severed from him I love,
Ah! death itself were far less fearful.
Farewell! Farewell!

VASCO DI GAMA: O cruel fate, he has destroyed her happiness,
What fearful martyrdom is this.
Ah, yes! her peace of mind has flown forever.
Ah! death itself were far less terrible.
Ines, farewell! Farewell

NELUSKO: This thrice-accursed Christian will meet;
His punishment right soon;
Thanks be to you, O Brahma!
The ashy paleness of his brow reveals,
The bitterness of his grief.
But she is safe at last. Farewell!

DON PEDRO: Over my rival now I triumph,
Yes, my victory is complete;
Revenged am I and that right fully
The ashy paleness of his brow reveals.
The bitterness of his grief.
Yes, yes,—I triumph. Farewell!
(Exeunt Don Pedro and Ines. Vasco falls half fainting on a seat. Selika is about to rush towards him, but Nelusko withholds her, and compels her to follow Don Pedro. As Selika departs she bends on Vasco a last lingering look of love and anguish.)

END OF THE SECOND ACT.

ACT III

The scene represents the 'between decks' of a large ship with entrances to the principal Cabins.

SCENE I

(Several sailors and naval officers are discovered. Ines is reclining on a couch, surrounded by her attendants.)

CHORUS OF SAILORS: Up, up, mariners,
The crew is now astir,
The smiling morn looks forth,
And paints in gay colors
The vast expanse of ocean.
Up, up, mariners,
To work with right good will!
(The bell is heard announcing the morning prayer. The sailors, officers, Ines, and her ladies kneel.)

PRAYER OF MARINERS: O great Saint Dominic,
Terror of the infidel,
Protect and guide us evermore!
Daily we will repeat your hymn,
O great Saint Dominic!

SELIKA, INES, AND ATTENDANTS: O, Providence benign,
Our only hope in trouble,
Assist us when we call on you,
Guide and protect us evermore!

NELUSKO: (appearing on main deck.) What ho, mariners!
The wind has changed, quickly man the yards!
Keep well round to the north,
Do you not see, afar, the dread precursors of the fearful hurricane?
Keep to the north, I say, or we are lost!
(He descends from main deck; during the above Don Pedro and Don Alvar have entered from their cabins.)

ALVAR: (to Don Pedro, pointing to Nelusko.) Are you sure that fellow does not play us false?

NELUSKO: (to Don Pedro with assumed meekness.) I play you false!
I, who of my own accord, revealed to you
The whole of Vasco's plans and projects!

DON PEDRO: He speaks the truth—I'm much indebted to him.

DON ALVAR: (à Don Pedro.) E fede aver potete in quel perfido schiavo, Che il suo primier signor tradì, E tradir vi pur ei saprà, Gia, sua mercè, due navi perdute abbiam.	DON ALVAR: (to Don Pedro.) And can you trust the treacherous slave, Who betrayed his former master? He'll soon betray you to, I expect, Through him you know we have lost two ships already.
NELUSKO: Il gigante delle tempesta, Adamastor, Condannate le avea . . . ed il suo sdegno fatal, Cadrà sul capo vostro si di cammino non cambiate,	NELUSKO: Adamastor, the Giant of the Tempest, had pronounced their doom, His dread wrath will soon overtake even you And you change not soon your course, By steering quickly towards the north.
DON ALVAR: E non vuoi tu guidarci . . .	DON ALVAR: (to Nelusko.) Where would you guide us?
NELUSKO: Qual tema avete in cor?	NELUSKO: What fear has taken possession of your heart?
DON PEDRO: Ebben . . . sia. Si dirigga sul nord . . .	DON PEDRO: Well, be it so! steer northward!
NELUSKO: (contando.) Tra, la, la, la, la.	NELUSKO: (singing.) Tra, la, la, la, la.
UN MARINAR. Ehi Nelusko! che cosa canti la?	A SAILOR: Why, Nelusko—what are you singing, man?
NELUSKO: (solennamente.) Io canto la canzone del Rè di questo mari, Del tremendo Adamastor che su voi la morte tien.	NELUSKO: (gloomily.) I sing the song of the king of the seas, It is the legend of the dread Adamastor, Whose mighty hand is even now suspended over your heads.
MARINARI: Ascoltiamo la leggenda del tremendo Adamastor.	SAILORS: Let's hear the legend of the dread Adamastor!
NELUSKO: Adamastor . . . rè dell' onde profonde, Al suon del vento sull' acque s' avanza E se col piè urta il mar Guai a voi! Guai a voi, Se col piè urta il mar! Guardate . . . è le. Al chiaror cupo dei lampi, del fuoco, Ei gia s' inoltra . . . gia regna sul mar, Fino al ciel l' onde nere solleva Scampo non v' ha . . . non v' ha tomba por l' empio!	NELUSKO: Adamastor, monarch of the pathless deep, Rides over the waves to the wild wind's sound. Beware, beware, for should he draw near, Woe, woe to the wretch who crosses his path! See, he is there! how swiftly he glides. Illumed by the lightning's lurid glare, High up to the skies, he piles the dark waters, All hope now is lost, for the doomed wretch no tomb, None, none, but a watery grave!
CORO: Ne scampo ne tomba per voi non v' ha.	CHORUS: All hope is lost, for the doomed wretch no tomb, None, none, but a watery grave.
NELUSKO: No per voi non v' ha! E vano il tremar! e vano il pregar! (Con un riso studente.) Ha! ha! ha! Corragio . . . alle vele Fin che n' è tempo ancora, Su gli alberi sospesi, Prevenite l' Uragan fatal Ei gia minacciosa s' avanza, Ed apre ad inghiottirvi Gli abissi profondi del mar!	NELUSKO: For you, none but a watery grave. Neither trembling nor prayers will avail. (with a demoniac laugh.) Ha! ha! ha! Come, courage! up, up with the sails While yet there be time, Quick, man the masts, and prepare For the storm which darkly advances, And bids the vast depths of the sea Yawn wide to engulf you!
CORO: E già minaccioso s' avanza, Ed apre ad inghiottirci Gli abissi profondi del mar!	CHORUS: Yes, prepare for the storm which darkly advances, And bids the vast depths of the sea Yawn wide to engulf us!
UN MARINARO: (dalla poppa.) Un vascello che porta la nostra bandierà, Spiccato ha verso noi una barca leggiera, Essa avanza . . . giunta è già,	A SAILOR: (from the poop of the vessel.) A ship sailing under our own colors, Has just put forth a boat, Which pulls rapidly towards us, It nears us quickly—it is already alongside!
NELUSKO: (da parte.) Ohimè! se fosse mai Qualche avviso importuno che per salvarli Vien in quest' ora fatal.	NELUSKO: (aside, anxiously.) Should this be some ill-timed message, Sent forth to save them in this fatal hour!

SCENE II

SCENE II

I suddetti . . . Vasco Di Gama.	The above, and Vasco Di Gama.
DON ALVAR: Ah che vedo! Vasco! su questo ignoti mar, In un con voi venir? Chi mai potè condurvi?	DON ALVAR: What is it I see? Vasco! You, a fellow traveler On these remote sequestered seas? What can have brought you here?
VASCO DI GAMA: E Dio che m inspiri le sue mire a compir Ei giudò i passi miei. e gonfiò le mie vele.	VASCO DI GAMA: Inspired by heaven, I am here come A holy mission to fulfil; It is heaven my steps that guides, and swells my flowing sail!
DON PEDRO: Per seguirci costi?	DON PEDRO: Have you then followed us here!
VASCO DI GAMA: Per precedervi dite!	VASCO DI GAMA: Not followed, but preceded!
DON PEDRO: E dunque allor per disfidarci!	DON PEDRO: (angrily.) Is then your objective to defy us?
VASCO DI GAMA: No! s' e v' è tempo ancor, signor ti vo salvar! (Don Pedro fa cenno a tutti di ritirarsi.)	VASCO DI GAMA: Not so—if there be yet time, I have come here To save you! (Don Pedro motions to the bystanders to withdraw.)

SCENA III

SCENE III

Vasco Di Gama, Don Pedro.	Vasco Di Gama. Don Pedro.
VASCO DI GAMA: Qual destin, o piu tosto qual cieco delirio Vi conduce allo scoglio fatal, Ove Don Bernard Diaz mio fido ammiraglio, Ha infranto il suo vascello. Non bastan le insidie del mar Tu vedrai contro tè, di mille e mille schifi, Ricoprarsi il mar, da cui guerrier selvaggi, Gli avanzi del vascel a saccheggiare verran.	VASCO DI GAMA: What fatality, or rather what blind delirium Brings you to the fatal promontory, Where Don Bernard Diaz, my trusty admiral Was lost with all his crew? It is not alone the ocean's treachery you have to fear, The sea will soon be covered with a thousand barks, Each with wild savage warriors filled, And bent on ravaging your hapless ship!

SCENA IV

SCENE IV

I suddetti, Don Alvar, Nelusko, Marinari e Soldati, poi Inez, Selika e donne.	The above, Don Alvar, Nelusko, Soldiers and Sailors, and afterwards Ines, Selika, and Women.
(I Marinari ed i Soldato accorrono, si precipitano se Vasco Di Gama, e lo desarmono.)	(The Soldiers and Sailors who have hastened to obey Don Pedro's summons, rush hastily upon Vasco, whom they disarm.)

DON PEDRO: (ai Soldati che ritengo Vasco Di Gama.) Si leghi al grand albero tosto: E che il fuoco dell' arme vostra Giustizia ne faccia . . .	DON PEDRO: (to the soldiers who have hold of Vasco.) Bind him fast unto the mainmast, And let your bullets dispatch him!
SELIKA: Giusto ciel! e desso!	SELIKA: Heavens! it is he—it is Vasco.
INEZ: Vasco! e desso . . . o ciel!	INES: Vasco! it is he, O heaven!
VASCO DI GAMA: Vile!	VASCO DI GAMA: (to Don Pedro.) Coward!
DON PEDRO: (ai Soldati accennarde Vasco Di Gama.) Tosto a morte sia tratto!	DON PEDRO: (to his soldiers, pointing to Vasco Di Gama.) Quick, to death with him!
INEZ e SELIKA: (inginocciandosi.) Ah! per pietade mio signor Mitigate un tal rigor, Signor pietà, signor pietà.	INES AND SELIKA: (kneeling.) In mercy's name, great sir, we beseech you Restrain this fearful wrath. Mercy mercy, we implore!
DON PEDRO: No! Ola! obbedite! (Il temporale, che fin adesso è stato sentito da lontano, s' avvicina.)	DON PEDRO: No mercy, will I show, what ho! obey there! (The storm which has for some time been gathering in the distance gradually approaches.)
SELIKA: Ah! se non m' ode il ciel L' averno al men m' ajùti. (A. Don Pedro con rabbia.) Tosto Vasco fia salvo, oppur Inez io sveno, Velo giuro per Brama che m' ascolto nel cielo. Pronunziar spetta a voi la lor grazia O lor morte!	SELIKA: Ah! heaven heeds not my prayer, Ye powers of ill assist me! (To Don Pedro, angrily approaching Ines.) Set Vasco free at once, or Ines straight I kill! I swear it by Brahma, who now in heaven hears me! Pronounce at once their sentence—their pardon or their death!
CORO: O ciel da terror il suo cor e colpito, Muto e titubante già freme quel cor!	CHORUS: O heaven! He is overcome with fear! Mute and irresolute—he tremblingly stands!
DON PEDRO: Strascinato egli sia al fondo del vascel.	DON PEDRO: Drag him to the vessel's lowest recesses!
DON ALVAR: La sua nave l' aspetta . . .	DON ALVAR: But, by your leave, his ship awaits him.
DON PEDRO: S' allontani! è mio prigioniero costui.	DON PEDRO: Let her proceed on her course, this man's my prisoner!
DON ALVAR: Ma promesso l' hai ei vivra!	DON ALVAR: Did you not promise he should live!
DON PEDRO: Si ma nulla io non promisi a Selika, E mia giustizia ben punir sapra, La schiava che sulla signora, Il ferro alzar osò Ch' essa sia sino al sangue al instante sferzata, In presenza di tutti!	DON PEDRO: I gave no promise to Selika, And I'll soon find a right punishment For the rebellious slave, who Dared to raise the dagger's point over her mistress! Let her be bound, and straight severely scourged, In presence of the crew!
INEZ, SELIKA, e NELUSKO: (con un fremito d' indegnazione.) Ah!	INES, SELIKA, AND NELUSKO: (with a shudder of indignation.) Ah!
NELUSKO: La maesta suprema in essa ingiuriata, Chi l' osera tentar? (Il temporale diviene ad un tratto violentissim.)	NELUSKO: (menacingly.) This fearful outrage injured majesty, Who here will dare inflict? The storm suddenly increases in violence.
DON ALVAR: Alle velle, all sarte! . . . Il turbin giunge. (Ad un tràtto il vascello è assalito da Indiani, che abbordano a traverso le cannoniere. I marinari, soldati, Ec. cercano di rispingerli, ma sono sopraffatti dai loro numerosi assalitori.)	DON ALVAR: (hastily.) Reef the sails, man the yards, the hurricane is at hand! (The ship is suddenly invaded by Indians, who board it through the port holes. The crew endeavor to drive them back, but are overpowered by the overwhelming numbers of their assailants.)
TUTTI: Oh ciel;	ALL: (in terror). O heaven!
CORO: Oh cielo tu da forza ai figli tuoi, Proteggi lor dallo stranier, Infondi nel cor d' ognun la pace E da tregua al fier dolor!	CHORUS: (kneeling). O heaven! grant strength your prostrate sons, Protect them from the foeman's ire, Restore peace unto our hearts, Vouchsafe to end our grievous woes!
FINE DELL' ATTO TERZO.	END OF THE THIRD ACT.

■ ATTO IV

■ ACT IV

La Scena rappresenta (à sinistra) l' entrata d' un tempio Indiano . . . a diritta un palazzo. Al fondo altri monumenti sontuosi.	The scene represents, on the left hand, the entrance of an Indian temple; on the right, a palace; at back, other sumptuous monuments.

SCENA I

SCENE I

(Selika, Nelusko, il Gran Prete Di Brama, ed Indiani di varie. Marzia, Cortège, Ballo.)	(Selika, Nelusko, the High Priest of Brahma, Indians of various Castes. March, Procession, Ballet.)
NELUSKO: Noi giuriamo per Brama E per Vischiù, per Schiva, Onnipotente Dei che l' Indostan adora, Non giuriamo obbedienza, Al rampol dei nostri Rè!	NELUSKO: We swear by Brahma By Vishnu, too, and Siva, All powerful deities whom Hindostan reveres— We swear, I say, obedience to the daughter Of our ancient kings!
CORO: Noi giuriam obbedienza, Al rampol dei nostri Rè!	CHORUS: Obedience we here swear Unto the daughter of our ancient kings!
NELUSKO: Selika pur . . . or da noi coronata, Giura di mantener, delle legge il vigor, Sopra il libro divin, la nel tempio! Altre volte affidato da Brama!	NELUSKO: And you, Selika, whom we now do crown, Swear to maintain inviolate our laws Swear it on the book divine, in yonder temple formerly enshrined by Brahma!
SELIKA: (estendendo la mano sopra il libro d' oro.) Si . . . lo giuro! (da parte.) Il tuo destin, O Vasco, (Guardando il Gran Prete e Nelusko.) Qual' è? Io tremo, non oso interrogar! (S' ode un colpo del tem-tam sequito da un grido stridente.)	SELIKA: (advancing her hand towards the Golden Book.) I swear it! (aside.) O Vasco! what dreadful fate May have overtaken you? (Looking towards the High Priest and Nelusko.) Alas! I tremble—I dare not question them. (A stroke of the tam-tam is heard, followed by a piercing shriek.)
GRAN PRETE: (a Selika.) Giammai nessun stranier, rammenta il giuro tuo Non lordera di sua presenza impura, Il sacro suol del Indostano!	HIGH PRIEST: (to Selika.) Remember your oath–no stranger, whoever he is, Shall with defiling presence stain The sacred soil of Hindostan!
NELUSKO: Regina, il sacro ferro tutti gia gl' immolava!	NELUSKO: O Queen! the sacred weapon is even now. Destroyed them all!
SELIKA: Ciel! tutti!	SELIKA: O heaven! all! Did you say All?

UN PRETE: (piano a Nelusko.)
Tranne un sol, che avean incatenato.
Della nave al fondo . . . ei sol respira ancora.

NELUSKO: (a parte, con rabbia.)
E Vasco forse. (piano al Prète.) Va!
Che sia spento egli pur—
(Il Prète esce.)

GRAN PRETE: La corona t' aspetta, al piè degli altar, Andiam!
(Entra nel tempio insieme Selika ed i Prèti.)

NELUSKO: (agli Indiani.) Noi seguiam la regina!
(S' ode un rumore.)
Ma qual rumor.

UN PRETE: Dei pagani le donne al supplizio son guidate.
Verso il mancennillier, del nero e folto aspetto.

NELUSKO: Nel sacro limitar guidate i passi lor,
Là, sotto l' ombre chete, le lor stanche membra,
Il sonno troveran e in un . . . la morte! (Esce.)

CORO DI SACRIFICATORI: O sol che nel ciel cocente t' innalzi,
Tu vittime chiedi cruenti,
Che a fèrir s' appresti il ferro,
E che l' eco ancor ripeti.
La morte! la morte!
O Schiva su noi discendi,
La vittima e pronta discendi!

SCENA II

Vasco (seguiti da Soldati.)

VASCO DI GAMA: (guardando il sito con admirazione.) O ridente suol . . . vago e bel giardin, Salute a voi, O Paradiso in terra,
Ciel azzur senza equal . . . che incantate mio cor,
Tu m' appartieni o nuovo mondo,
Dono feci di tè, all' amato mio suolo natal
A noi queste apriche campagne!
A noi quest' incanto divin;
Ricchi tesori! O meraviglie!
Ah salute a voi! O bel paese!
Alfine mio sei tu . . . si nuovo sol.
Si mio sei. O bel paese
Alfine mio sei tu!

SCENA III

VASCO DI GAMA: Bramini, e Soldati.

A PRIEST: (aside to Nelusko.) All, but one Whom we found chained in the vessel's hold,
He alone is left alive!

NELUSKO: (aside, angrily.) Perchance it is Vasco! (aside to Priest.) Go!
See that he too be dealt with speedily. Exit Priest.

HIGH PRIEST: The crown awaits you at the altar's foot.
On, then, to the temple!
(Enters temple, together with Selika, Priests, etc.)

NELUSKO: (to Indians.) We follow our Queen.
(A noise is heard without.)
What do these sounds mean?

A PRIEST: The stranger women are even now conducted to the slaughter,
Where the mancanilla tree frowns dark and gloomy!

NELUSKO: (to soldiers.) Guide their steps to the sacred groves,
Beneath the tranquil shade their weary limbs will seek repose,
And find—the sleep of death!
(Exit.)

CHORUS OF SACRIFICERS: O sun that now rise with beams red and angry.
You call for victims and blood.
Prepare we the steel then! make ready the glaive,
And let the loud echo resound with wild shriek.
Death! death!
O Siva! descend among us!
The victims are ready—descend! descend!

SCENE II

Vasco, followed by Soldiers.

VASCO: (contemplating the prospect with evident admiration.)
Hail! fruitful land of plenty, beauteous garden, hail!
Indeed an earthly paradise you are!
That sky of matchless azure,
All—all enchants my soul!
O New World, you are mine; you belong to me,
And as a gift I will present you to my dear native land!
These sunny plains are ours!
Ours these matchless scenes!
Hail! priceless treasures! wondrous marvels, hail!
O beauteous country—you are mine at last!
Yes—land till now unknown, you're mine!
Mine! yes, mine!

SCENE III

Vasco, Brahmins, and Soldiers

CORO.: Si la morte allo stranier!
Pietà . . . pietà non v' ha!

VASCO DI GAMA: Ebben! moriam da eroe, da Cristian,
Oh Dio . . . tu m' accogli nel ciel,
Ah! marciam!

CORO: Sol che t' innalzi cocente nel ciel,
Pronto sia il ferro e la mano a ferir!
E ripeti l' eco morte il suon!
(Tutti hanno levato lor scure e sono sul punto di amazzare, Vasco Di Gama.)

SCENA IV

I suddetti, Selika, seguita da Nelusko, Il Grande Prete, Ec., Ec.

SELIKA: (vedendo Vasco Di Gama.) V' arrestate!

VASCO DI GAMA: Selika!
(Alla voce di Selika i soldati stanno immobili, Selika corre a Vasco Di Gama.)

NELUSKO: (piano à Selika.) Volerlo sottrarre al supplizio!

GRAN PRETE: E per uno stranier, le legge qui violar, Che ai piè degli altar
Il labbro tuo giurò.

CORO: Si! morte agli stranier
E che la legge si compia!

GRAN PRETE: La legge eseguita gia fu,
Sino alla donne tutti immolati gia son.

VASCO DI GAMA: (disperato.)
Inez, non sei più?

SELIKA: (a parte con dolore.) Ah crudele!

GRAN PRETE ED IL CORO: La morte à quel stranier!

SELIKA: (prendendo la mano di Vasco Di Gama.) E se costui non fosse uno stranier!

VASCO DI GAMA: Che sento?

SELIKA: Silenzio . . . io voglio ancor . . . la vita à te salvar . . .
Indi m' obblia se vuoi.
(Volgendosi al popolo ed ai prèti.)
Se per prodigio strano
Fratel nostro ei fosse?

CORO: O ciel!

SELIKA: E se il destin,
Con sacri nodi unita a lui m' avesse,
Che far dovreste allor!

NELUSKO: (piano.) Ciel! quanto tentar osa!

CHORUS: Death—death to the stranger!
We will show no mercy!

VASCO DI GAMA: It is well—at least I'll meet my death
As becomes a hero and a Christian!
On then!

CHORUS: O sun that now rises with beams red and angry,
You call for victims and blood,
Prepare we the steel then, make ready the glaive,
And let the loud echoes with wild shrieks resound,
Death! death!
(The soliders have all raised their axes, and are on the point of despatching Vasco di Gama.)

SCENE IV

The above—Selika followed by Nelusko, The High Priest, Ec., Ec.

SELIKA: (perceiving Vasco Di Gama.) Hold!

VASCO DI GAMA: Selika!
(At Selika's voice the soldiers remain motionless. Selika rushes eagerly to Vasco Di Gama.)

NELUSKO: Would you then save him from his impending doom?

HIGH PRIEST: And, for an unknown stranger, violate the laws.
Which at the altar's foot even now you swore Forever to preserve?

CHORUS: Death—death to the stranger,
Let our laws be fulfilled!

HIGH PRIEST: The decree already has been put in force.
Even the women have all met their fate!

VASCO DI GAMA: (despairingly.)
Ines, are you no more?

SELIKA: (aside, in tones of anguish.) Ah, cruel one!

HIGH PRIEST AND CHORUS:
Death to the stranger!

SELIKA: (taking Vasco's hand.)
And should he not prove a stranger!

VASCO DI GAMA: What is it I hear?

SELIKA: Hush—not a word—I yet would save your life
Anon you may forget me, and your will!
(Turning to the bystanders, priests, Ec.)
Should he, by a marvel strange, be Our brother!

CHORUS: O heaven!

SELIKA: (continuing.) Should fate have linked my fate with his with sacred ties indissoluble?
What course would ye pursue then?

NELUSKO: Heavens! and would she dare—

SELIKA: Si! quando schiavo gemea in lontane contrade, (Accennando Vasco Di Gama.)
Quel prode mi salvò la vita e insiem l'onor!
(à Nelusko.)
È mia man, lo sai tu, fu sua ricompensa.

NELUSKO: Chi . . . io?

SELIKA: Tu sol smentirmi puoi . . .
Ma tu ben sai che s' egli muor . . . io pur morro! (Dirigendosi verso i prèti ed il popolo.)
In tua presenza attestarlo può Nelusko ancor.

GRAN PRETE: Attestarlo dè innanzi agli dei,
E sopra il libro d' or.
(Ad un cenno del Gran Prete un Bramino cerca il libro consecrato.)

NELUSKO: (esitando e guardando Selika.) Averla tanto amata
E in questo di fatal,
Doverla dar io stesso,
In braccio al mio rival?

CORO: Vedete si turba . . . ei trema, vacilla.

SELIKA: Ah! tu sol giurando
Puoi finir mia pena,
L' affianno mio tu vedi,
Il mio duolo . . . il mio pianto,
Pietà! favella!
(piano.)
Ei piange!

NELUSKO: (ad un sguardo supplichevole di Selika.) Ancor un sacrifizio
Il cor perisca
Insieme col' onor!

CORO: (à Nelusko.) Ti spiega . . . favella.

NELUSKO: Ah! vo calmar sua gioja
Contenta alfin mi vegga morir! . . .
Morir ah! del suo piacer!

CORO: Potresti giurando
Calmare sua pena,
Giura!

NELUSKO: (con sforzo.) Ebben! innanzi a voi io giuro,
Ch' essa l' ama, e ch' egli e sposo suo!

CORO: Sposo suo!
(Tutti s' inchinano dinanzi a Vasco Di Gama.)

NELUSKO: (da parte.) Al mio penar da fine
Ciel, coi strazii tuoi!
Ma che l' infame che l' ha rapita,
Sia meco fulminato ancor!
Averlo tanto amato
E l' idol mio veder rapito
A questo cor . . . o dolor!
Al mio penar da fine
O ciel coi strazzii tuoi!
Son io che l' abbandono,
Si! in braccio al mio rival!
Su me . . . su lui . . . l' ira del ciel cadi!
(Esce.)

GRAN PRETE: Popol . . . Odi il mio parlar
Gli Dei dell' Indostan . . . di cui seguiam le leggi,
Vogliono che l' union sotto altro ciel giurata,
Sia, dell' ara innanzi, per sempre consacrata.
O Brama! O Vichnou! O Siva!
(Tutti escono, eccetti Vasco Di Gama e Selika.)

SCENE V

VASCO DI GAMA: (da parte.)
Dove son . . . e qual gioja m' inonda di piacer?
Dei mali che soffrì . . . io perdo il sovvenir,
Mi par veder un mar di fuoco e di splendor,
E da cocente ardor il cor s' agita in sen.

SELIKA: Ebben? fuggi da me crudel . . . colla tua gloria,

VASCO DI GAMA: Me lasciar il dolor!

SELIKA: Non comprendesti mai,
Che si può amar, soffrir e morir di dolor!

VASCO DI GAMA: Che sento . . . e qual error fu il mio, Qual velo?—ti nascose a me?

SELIKA: Qual velo . . . lo spreggo . . .

VASCO DI GAMA: Deh taci! non bestemmiar! giammai mortal imago
Al rapito sguardo mio, non s' offerse si bella,
E del tuo ciglio o ciel il divorante ardor
Come di fiamma un raggio passò nel mio seno!
Ah! lasciarti ora mai è impossibile al mio cor!
No! giammai!

SELIKA: Fatale errore, non m' hai tu forse già venduta alla rivale!

VASCO DI GAMA: Ah! vedi il mio rossor, Regina io son ai piedi tuoi!
O Selika pel sposo tuo perdon!

SELIKA: (continuing.) Yes, when I languished, a slave in far off lands (pointing to Vas.)
Yon hero did preserve my life and honor. (to Nel.)
And as you well know, my hand was his reward!

NELUSKO: (astounded.) I! Do you appeal then to me?

SELIKA: (aside to Nelusko.) You alone can contradict the tale;
But, mark me well, should he be doomed to death,
I, too, will die!
(turning to priests, etc.)
Before all, Nelusko will attest to the truth
Of what I've said

HIGH PRIEST: That must he then straightway before our gods,
And over the Golden Book!
(At a sign from the High Priest a Brahmin fetches the consecrated book.)

NELUSKO: (hesitating and glancing anxiously at Selika.) And have I then so fondly loved her,
And yet must on this fatal day,
By my own act, resign her to a rival's arms!

CHORUS: Observe him! he's troubled—he hesitates, trembles!

SELIKA: (to Nelusko.) Take the oath, for this way alone,
Can you assuage my woes,
You see my grief, my bitter tears,
Have mercy, mercy—speak, I pray!
(aside, anxiously.)
He weeps—he's moved!

NELUSKO: (overcome by Selika's suppliant glance.) One more struggle!
Nelusko's honor and his heart's fond dream,
Must now perish together!

CHORUS: (to Nelusko.) Speak then! explain.

NELUSKO: (aside.) I will be no barrier to her bliss;
She shall see me die contented
Yes, die! to make her happy!

CHORUS: Swear! swear!
By swearing, you may lessen her grief. Swear!

NELUSKO: (with a violent effort.) Then here in presence of all, I swear
That she does love him, and that he is her husband!

CHORUS: Her husband!
(All incline themselves respectfully before Vasco di Gama.)

NELUSKO: (aside.) O heaven! let thunderbolts end
My fearful sufferings,
But let the miscreant who has won her love,
Share your vengeance with me!
I have loved her—ah how fondly!
And yet must see my heart's sole idol,
Thus cruelly torn from me.
Ah woe is me!
O heaven, let thunderbolts
End My fearful sufferings,
But let the miscreant who has won her love,
Share your vengeance with me!
It is I—I who now yields her
To a rival's arms.
Accursed fate,—on me—on him.
May heaven's indignation fall!
(Exit.)

HIGH PRIEST: O people, listen to my words.
The gods of Hindostan, whose righteous laws we obey
Have willed it that a tie contracted beneath other skies
Must over the altar of our sacred faith again be solemnized!
Brahma; Vichnu! Siva!
(At the conclusion of chorus, all withdraw, except Vasco and Selika.)

SCENE V

VASCO DI GAMA: (aside as though in in a dream.) Where am I? What unknown joy is this that steeps my soul in wild delight?
I've lost the memory of past sufferings,
A brilliant sea of dazzling brightness rolls before mine eyes.
While my rapt heart throbs fast with glowing ecstacy!

SELIKA: O cruel one, heedless of anything save glory would you fly me?
And leave me then to mourn!

VASCO DI GAMA: Leave me, pain!

SELIKA: Do you not understand that one may love and suffer,
And of that suffering—die?

VASCO DI GAMA: What is it I hear?
How mistaken was I
What veil did shroud you from me!

SELIKA: The dark veil of—scorn!

VASCO DI GAMA: Ah say it's not so! Ah do not blaspheme!
Never did mortal form
Appear so beauteous to my ravished sense!
The all devouring brightness of your eyes,
Even like a ray of flame penetrates my breast.
What leave you now? No, no, it is impossible!
My heart would never consent—
No! never.

SELIKA: O fatar error,—did you not sell me to your rival?

VASCO DI GAMA: You see my shame! O Queen, behold me at your feet!
Selika, pardon, for your husband, pardon!

SELIKA: Tu! sposo mio!

SELIKA e VASCO DI GAMA: O trasporto . . . o dolce ebbrezza,
Che commove il cor amante,
Diva fiamma che allegrezza,
Nel mio cor infonde amor.
Suprema gioja, piacer del ciel
Ah! io mi sento in' ciel rapita,
Ah! sul tuo cor amare è la vita,
Oh trasporto o dolce ebbrezza
Che commuove il cor amante!
Diva fiamma che allegrezza
Nel mio cor infonde amor!

VASCO DI GAMA: Selika mio ben . . . ah tu regni sul mio core!

SELIKA: Non proferir dolci accenti,
Vaneggiare non farmi . . .

VASCO DI GAMA: Inanzi al tuo ed al mio Dio
Sei mia sposa . . .

SELIKA: Tua sposa!
Ma rifletti ben . . . foss' io sposa tuo
Io geloso sarei tutto. Ah, si!
Anche del sovvenir di quella che non è più . . .
E che bandir dovrai . . .
Di! ne avrai tu la forza.

VASCO DI GAMA: Presso a te,
Tutto scordo o Selika!

SELIKA: Tu lo giuri . . . davanti a Dio!

VASCO DI GAMA: Io lo giuro . . . davanti a Dio!

ELIKA: A me . . . ognor a me!

VASCO DI GAMA: A te . . . ognor a te!

VASCO DI GAMA e SELIKA: O trasporto o dolce ebbrezza,
Che commuove il cor amante
Diva fiamma che allegrezza
Nel mio cor infonde amor
Il ciel ci dona sulla terra,
L' amór che sola inebria i sensi,
E sul mio cor quando ti stringo,
Felice io son . . . si son rapito in ciel!
Ah! sul tuo cor amare è la vita!

SCENA VI

I suddetti. I prèti ed il popolo.

GRAN PRETE: (alzando le mani sopra di Vasco Di Gama e Selika che s' inchinano dinanzi à lui.) Divina Trinità! ai spergiuri tremen-

SELIKA: You, my husband?

SELIKA AND VASCO DI GAMA: What transport wild, what sweet delight,
My fond heart now feels
A Godlike flame that joy inspires,
And teaches us to love!
Bliss supreme—bright gift of heaven,
To worlds above I seem to soar
Pressed to your heart, ah, love is life indeed.
What transport wild, what sweet delight,
My fond heart now feels
A Godlike flame that joy inspires,
And teaches us to love.

VASCO DI GAMA: Beloved Selika, you are sole mistress of my heart.

SELIKA: Ah, utter not these accents fond,
They drive me to the verge of madness!

VASCO DI GAMA: Before your god, before my own, I ask you.
Will you be my wife—

SELIKA: Your wife! Think, if I, were your wife,
I should be jealous of all—Ah, yes!
Even of the memory of her who is no more,
And whose very image I would have you strive
To banish from your mind. Say, has it the strength to do this?

VASCO DI GAMA: When at your side,
All, all, do I forget, save you, Selika!

SELIKA: Will you swear it—before heaven—will you swear it?

VASCO DI GAMA: I swear it—before heaven—I swear it!

SELIKA: (fervently.) Yours, then, forever yours!

VASCO DI GAMA: Yours, forever yours!

VASCO DI GAMA AND SELIKA: What transport wild, what sweet delight,
My loving heart feels
A godlike flame that joy inspires,
And teaches us to love!
Heaven has given to mortals on this earth,
This bliss divine, that exalts the senses.
Yes to my heart, when I press you,
I am thrice blessed! I soar towards heaven.
Ah! love like this is life indeed!

SCENE VI

The above, the priests, populace, etc.

HIGH PRIEST: (raising his hands over Vasco Di Gama and Selika who kneel before him.) Mystic deities! of perjurors the dread da,

Di questi sposi accogli i voti,
Uniti . . . siate felici ognor!

CORO: Uniti . . . siate felici ognor!
(Le donne circondano Selika sulla sua testa esse pongono una corona di fiori, e la coprono d' un velo . . . altre donne formano coi loro veli intorno à Selika una siepe diafana.)

CORO: Siepe leggiera
L' estasi cela,
Che gli circonda,
In si bel dì!
Dolce speranza
Infiamma i cori,
Della costanza,
D' eterno amore.
(Vasco Di Game contempla la regina con amore; ad un tratto un canto lontano gli giunge al orecchio.)

INEZ E CORO DI DONNE: (di dentro.) Addio sponde del Tago, Io più non vi vedrò,
Addio mio suol natale
Addio! Addio!

VASCO DI GAMA: O qual prodigio,
O qual magia!
O Inez! L' ombra tua
Là dal ciel . . . ancor m' invia Un estremo addio!
(Non potendo resistere alla sua emozione, tenta di slanciarsi dal lato dove si ode il còro di donne, ma un gruppo di fanciulle lo circonda e lo strascina verso di Selika, chi in questo punto si dirige verso del suo palazzo, insotto alle volte di tocca, formate dar veli delle bayadères.)

CORO: Siepe leggiera
L' estasi cela,
Che gli circonda,
In si bel dì.
Dolce speranza
Infiamma i cori,
Della costanza
D' eterno amore!

FINE DELL' ATTO QUARTO.

ATTO V

Giardini della Regina. Alberi tropici, fiori, frutti, Ec. A sinistra l' entrata del palazzo.

SCENA I

Selika, Inez (circondata di Soldati).

SELIKA: Ah, che intesi mai!
Son io già tradita ed ingannata?
Cosi tu serbasti la fè.

Receive now the vows of this fond pair
United,—be happy ever more!

CHORUS: United,—be happy ever more!
(Indian maidens surround Selika, they place a crown of flowers on her head, and cover her with a veil. The others surround Selika with their veils, thereby forming round her a transparent rampart of gauze.)

CHORUS: Light fluttering veil,
The ecstasies conceal,
Of the fond pair,
On this auspicious day!
Sweet hopes of happiness
Now fill their hearts,
With vows of constancy
And love eternal.
(Vasco gazes on the Queen with looks of ardent affection, when of a sudden a mournful strain from afar meets his ear.)

INES AND CHORUS OF WOMEN: (off the stage.) Oh shores of Tagus, farewell!
I never shall see you again;
My own sweet native land, farewell!
Forever—farewell!

VASCO DI GAMA: What strange marvel is this?
It is magic sure!
O Inez—your dear shade sends me
From heaven itself,
A last sorrowing farewell!
(Vasco, unable to control his emotion, attempts to rush towards the side whence the strains proceed, but a group of maidens now surround him, and drag him towards Selika, who is at this moment bending her steps towards the palace, beneath the archway of gauze formed by the veils of the bayaderes.)

CHORUS: Light fluttering veil,
The ecstacies conceal,
Of the fond pair,
On this auspicious day!
Sweet hopes of happiness
Now fill their hearts
With vows of constancy,
And love eternal.

END OF THE FOURTH ACT.

ACT V

The Queen's gardens. Tropical trees, flowers, fruits, etc. On the left side is the entrance to the palace.

SCENE I

Selika, Ines. (surrounded by soldiers.)

SELIKA: What do I hear?
Deceived—betrayed already!
Is it thus you keep faith?

INEZ: Deh tu m' ascolta.

SELIKA: No, un istante avvilito ho ripreso i miei dritti,
Or la Regina vedi, non la sposa,
L' oltraggiata Regina che giudice diventa,
E ti sapra punire.

INEZ: Ah, Selika, perdon!

SELIKA: Chi dunque tanto osa la voce d' innalzar, Innanzi alle sovrana? Tu paventa lo sdegno,
Che gia raffreno appena!
In pria che mia vendetta, comandi il tuo supplizio,
T' appressa o schiava e rispondi a me!
Per quale tradimento e per qual' artifizio,
Quell' indegno era egli in questo luogo
Presso à te?

INEZ: Il caso sol venne ad offrirmi a sua vista.

SELIKA: E che uniti, diceva tremante e l' alma scossa?

INEZ: Ei diceva che l' Imen i vostri giorni unì,
Che vostra sol è la sua vita,
La sua fe . . . sua riconoscenza.

SELIKA: E per tanto ei t' ama ancor!

INEZ: No, No! Che il vostro cor gli perdoni,
Si fedel all' onor! Ohime! ei m' abbandona,
E da me fuggira.

SELIKA: Ma per tanto ognor ei t' amerà!

INEZ: Se per te, quest' e un delitto
Cada su me lo sdegno vostro,
Egli e giusto il riconosco,
Sol mio pregare e questo,
E l' imploro al vostro piè,
Quando più gioja non v' ha su questa terra
Di dolor senza fin quando i dì pieni son,
Venga la morte . . .
Su me il tuo rigor ricada . . . ferisci!
(riguardando Selika che fin adesso è stata immobile.)
Piangi tu?

SELIKA: Ah giovinetta sventurata,
Come mai colpevol far la,
Del mio martir . . . del mio crudel dolor,
E questo sol il mio penar!

INEZ: E questo sol il mio penar,
Si queto sol è il mio delitto,
Si mi punite . . . mi ferisci . . .
Ah! che la morte é un ben per me!

INES: Ah, would you just listen—

SELIKA: No! for a brief space I did forget my queenly state,
But now resume my rights. The wife no more,
The Queen alone you see in me.
An outraged Queen, who now becomes your judge
And straight will punish you!

INES: Selika, I implore forgiveness!

SELIKA: (angrily). Who is it that dares to raise her voice,
While in her sovereign's presence.
Beware the wrath
Which I can scarcely control!
Before mine indignation just your death ordains,
Draw near, O slave, and answer me
By what base treachery—what subtle artifice,
Did Vasco just now gain access to you,
Here—on this very spot?

INES: It was chance alone that brought about our meeting!

SELIKA: (bitterly.) And what did he say to you, all trembling with emotion?

INES: He said you two were now united in wedlock's holy bonds.
And that his life, his faith, his gratitude,
Are henceforth yours alone

SELIKA: And yet he loves you still?

INES: No, no. Your heart may freely pardon him,
For being faithful honor's law.
Alas! he has forsaken me—-he'll spurn me evermore!

SELIKA: But still he'll love you, none the less.

INES: Ah! if you deem that love a crime,
Then let your indignation fall on me
Just is your anger—I avow it;
This only do I wish, and
I do implore you at your feet,
Grant my prayer. When in this world all joy has fled
And nothing but bitter grief remains,
Then welcome death. Let then, I say, your anger falls on me
Strike! (watching Selika, who until now has remained motionless.)
I think you weep!

SELIKA: Hapless maiden,
How could I ever accuse you
Of this my grief—my direful woe;
The fault, alas, is mine alone!

INES: I've told you now my torments cause,
You know my only crime;
Quick, punish me,—no, quickly strike,
No greater boon than death is there to me!

SELIKA: Provi dunque pensando all' amato tuo ben . . .

INEZ: E l' amor e lo sdegno nel cor indeciso.

SELIKA: E senti là come una ferrea man.

INEZ: Si . . . che tormenta e spezza.

SELIKA: Ah! giovinetta sventurata
Come mai colpevol farla,
Del mio martir . . . del mio crudel dolor,
E questo sol il mio penar.
Io stesso provo il suo martir,
Il suo dolor mi fa pietà.

INEZ: E questo sol il mio penar,
E questo sol il mio delitto,
Si mi punite . . . mi ferisci.
Ah! che la morte è un ben per me.
Ah si . . . io vo morir!
Del mio martir . . . alfin pietà!
Ebben non tardar! ambidue tu ne svena.

SELIKA: Lui svenar! la suora sua!
Io, sua amicà, che data avrei per lui
Il torno e la mia vita . . .
Ma se, per sua piacer, lo potessi seguir.

INEZ: Io lo respingerei . . . perche sposo egli t' è
La morte sol, fra noi e sceglier tai nodi può.

SELIKA: Desiarla ei vorra . . . eccesso di dolore!
Ohimè! Lungo dolore
Che di già comincia
Ed il cor vacilla
Ad abandonnar.
Dio che vedi il duolo
Per spezzar miei lacci
D' ispirarmi degni almen.

INEZ: Lungo dolore
Che di già comincia
Ed il cor vacilla
Ad abandonnar.
Dio che vedi il duolo,
Per spezzar miei lacci
D' ispirarmi degni al fino.

SELIKA: Ah già dell' odio gl' impeti furenti,
Non turban più il mio sen.
E già succede à mia febbre cocente,
Un repentin stupor.

INEZ: Si . . . un ripentino stupor.

SELIKA: Il riposo torna
E l' afflitto core,
Più dolce vendetta,
Libero fara.

SELIKA: What do you feel then when thinking of your love?

INES: Fierce hate and love within my doubting breast
Do struggle for the mastery.

SELIKA: (eagerly pressing her hand to her heart.) And do you feel here as it were an iron hand?

INES: Yes—that tortures and oppresses me!

SELIKA: Hapless maiden,
How could I ever accuse you
Of this my grief—my dreadful woe!
The fault, alas, is mine alone!
Her very torments I experience,
Her grief itself excites my pity!

INES: I've told you now my torment's cause,
You know my only crime.
Ah! punish me—no—quickly strike,
No greater boon than death could you concede.
Yes, yes, I'll gladly die,
You then will feel some pity for my woes!
Why do you tarry? Slay both me and him!

SELIKA: Slay him! I, his loving mate who would have sacrificed
Both life and throne for him
But tell me, were it granted you to follow him?

INES: Even then I'd spurn him—for he is your husband,
And, in our land, it is death alone can rend such ties asunder.

SELIKA: And even my death he will desire.
O bitter grief! Ah! woe is me!
O misery unceasing,
Your bitter pang I feel
And yet my heart hesitates
To set itself free.
O heaven, you see my grief,
Inspire me, I pray you,
Teach me how to end my woes.

INES: O unceasing misery,
I feel your bitter pangs,
And yet my heart hesitates.
To set itself free.
O heaven, you see my deep grief,
Inspire me I pray you,
Teach me how to end my woes.

SELIKA: The furious dictates of relentless hate.
No longer agitate my tortured breast:
A sudden stupor already has succeeded
The all-consuming fever which but now possesed me.

INES: Yes!—a sudden stupor!

SELIKA: Yes! my peace of mind returns,
A sweeter vengeance far
Will rid my tortured heart
Of its dread load.

INEZ: Il suo cor vacilla,
Fra l' odio ed il pieta,
Il dio de, miei padri,
Ha visto il mio duolo,
E ad ispirarla la vien!

SCENA II

I suddetti . . . Nelusko (seguito da soldati.)

SELIKA: Via . . . sia tratta colei!
(i soldati escono con Inez.)
(a Nelusko.)
E tu, da qui lontan
Conduci Vasco.

NELUSKO: Con essa?

SELIKA: (scivendo sulle tarolette.) Si . . . ambedue
Tu devi all' istante condurli
Su quel vascel.
Che ancor si vede la sul mar.

NELUSKO: O ciel!

SELIKA: E poi . . . m' ascolta ben; quando à bordo ei sarà.
E partira . . . questi noti gli porgi,
Ma non prima . . . m' intendi tu!

NELUSKO: Ah! li credete in man di chi fu ognor discreto,
O fausto dì chea ai tormenti miei da fin,
Regina, ei rendi a te la possanza e la gloria!

SELIKA: E quando tu verdrai dai nostri lidi,
Uscir per sempre il lor vascello
Vien à trovarmi allor, alla punta del capo,
E se quel promontorio che s' erge sul mar!

NELUSKO: (con terrore.) Ah! non ve n' appressate!
Là, se vene sovvien si stende la grand ombra,
Del ner mancenillier, dell' albero mortal.

SELIKA: Io lo so.

NELUSKO: Sciagura all' imprudente
Che respira quei fior. Dall' odor fatal
Per poco egli si crede in ciel rapito,
Quel estasi così menzognera e fatal
Lo conduce pian pian dal delirio al morir!

SELIKA: Io lo so . . . ma di quei luoghi si scopre il mar,
Ed è quel che vogl' io!
(Nelusko esce e Selika entra nel Palazzo.)
(Cambiamento di scena, che rappresenta adesso un promontorio dominando il mare. Un albero sta nel centro della scena.)

INES: Between hate and pity
Her heart wavers still;
God of my fathers, you have seen my suffering,
Now inspire her with mercy!

SCENE II

The above. Nelusko. (followed by soldiers.)

SELIKA: (to soldiers.) At once remove that woman!
(soldiers remove Ines.)
(to Nelusko.) And you conduct Vasco Far, far away!

NELUSKO: With her?

SELIKA: (writing on her tablets.)
Yes, conduct them both
To yonder ship, which still remains in sight.

NELUSKO: O heaven!

SELIKA: And then—now mark me well—when Vasco is on board,
And even about to sail—no sooner,—mind—
Give him these tablets—do you understand?

NELUSKO: (taking tablets.) You may safely entrust them to the hand of one.
Who never has proved indiscreet;
Thrice happy day that puts an end to my torments,
And to you, O Queen, restores your power and glory!

SELIKA: And when you see that bark depart
For ever, from these shores, rejoin me at the Cape's remotest point,
You'll find me on the promontory which steeply rises over the sea!

NELUSKO: (in terror.) Beware! approach not that dread spot.
Remember, it is there the fatal trees,
The lowering mancanilla readily unfolds his leaves

SELIKA: I know it well.

NELUSKO: Woe to the luckless wretch who inhales
The fragrance of its blossoms; their fatal perfume
At first seems to waft the soul to regions of celestial bliss,
But soon this false and fleeting ecstacy subsides.
And wild delirium gives place to—death

SELIKA: I know all this; but this dread spot overlooks the vast expanse of ocean.
And it is this spectacle I would enjoy.
(exit Nelusko, Selika enters palace.)
(The scene changes to a view of the promontory overlooking the sea, a large tree occupying the center of the stage.)

SCENA III

Selika sola, s'inoltra lenta fin al margine del mare ch' ella contempla in silenzio.

SELIKA: Da qui io veda il mar immenso e senza fine,
Al par del mio dolor,
E il suo flutto in fluror che si rompe e si muove,
Ohime! come il mio cor!
(appressandosi del mancenillier.)
O tempio sontuoso, o volta di fogliame,
Che ondeggiate ognor i letali vostre rami,
Io vengo a voi cercar dopo il tumulto
La calma ed il riposo e l' oblio del dolor,
L' ombra vostra eterna è l' ombra del sepolcro,
(cogliendo i fiori che cadono dai rami del mancenillier.)
Già l' odio m' abbandona . . . nel cor non ho livor
Ricevi il mio perdono . . . addio mio caro ben,
Addio mio Vasco caro . . . io ti perdono, Addio!
O ridente color . . . o firo vermiglio e
Vie sopra il sen della sposa novella,
Vieni . . . tu sei la mia corona nuzial,
Si dice che il tuo odor fatale gioja da,
Che un instante del ciel egil aprir sa le porte,
E poi d'un lungo sonno fa per sempre dormir,
Come l' amor esso v' inebbria,
E come luivi fa morir.
Ah! dicon ver; i sensi sopiti già vacilan,
Il mio cor di piacer e di gioja bolzò.
Qual celeste suon . . . non è un prodigio.
Quanto splendor . . . al mio sguardo s'aprono le porte del ciel,
Brama sul mio passaggio risplendente m' appar
E lui! è la sua imago! ah si! ei mi riceve in ciel!
Dal dolce canto un cigno sopra bianca nube,
Trae leggiero un carro; le Uri sorridenti
Presso lui dansando e vezzegiando volano,
Vien egli quel che adoro, ei m' ama egli ancora.
No! non m' obliò!
Ah ch' io respiro appena, O qual trasporto è il mio,
Desso egli é! si Vasco egli è!
Ei vien! colui ch' adore,
Su bianca nuo vien,
A miei piedi già s' arresta,
Poi risale ah! egli è la!
(Selika sul punto di dormire é caduto al piè del mancenillier. S'ode un colpo di canone. A questo ro-

SCENE III

Selika enters and slowly advances to the edge of the sea, which she silently contemplates.

SELIKA: Yes! here I look upon the mighty sea—boundless—infinite
As is my woe!
Its waves break in angry fury and then anon their course renew,
As my sorrowing heart!
(advancing towards the mancanilla tree.)
Oh leafy temple, vault of dark foliage,
That waves your deadly branches in the wind ceaselessly,
After life's weary tumult I now come
To seek repose, and find oblivion from my woes,
Yes! your shade eternal is like the darkness of the tomb!
(gathering flowers which have fallen from the branches of the mancanilla tree.)
All thought of hate now forsakes me!
No envious wish now racks my heart.
Loved one, farewell! my pardon I now waft to you;
Farewell, my Vasco, I forgive you.
Ah! farewell!
(contemplating flowers.)
Glittering hues! Oh beauteous crimson flowers
Rest on the bosom of the new-made bride,—
Come,—you are my nuptial crown!
It is said your dread perfume inspires a joy,
Which for a moment yields unearthly joy,
And then causes an eternal sleep.
Even like love which first intoxicates,
And then, like you kills!
Yes the tale was true, my sense is lulled and seems to wander,
My heart wildly bounds with pleasure.
What heavenly sounds now meet my ear,
It is enchantment sure! To my ravished eyes
The gates of heaven are opened;
Brahma, in all his mystic splendor appears,
It is he! it is he! to heaven he welcomes me,
A graceful swan lightly draws his chariot
Over that white cloud; the smiling Houris dance
Round him with luring wiles.
See, my Vasco comes, he loves me still.
No! he has not forgotten me!
With joy's excess I scarce can breathe, what fond transport is mine!
It is he! it is Vasco's self,
My loved one comes, more Selika apre gli occhi, guarda verso il mare, e vedendo il vascello che s' allontana, proferisce un grido di dolore.)

SELIKA: Ah! son svegliata ancor!
Io sono in terra!

SCENA ULTIMA

Selika e Nelusko.

NELUSKO: O trasporti di gioja! alfin partiti son!
Già sparir le lor navi vedete . . .

SELIKA: Ah! mi rendete il ciel!

On yon white cloud he comes,—
He stops, and he kneels at my feet.—
He rises now,—Ah! see, he's there!
(Selika, overcome by sleep, falls at the foot of the mancanilla tree. The report of a cannon is now heard, at the sound of which Selika opens her eyes, looks toward the sea, and perceiving the ship, now pursuing its homeward course, she utters a cry of grief.)

SELIKA: Ah! it was a dream! I am awake once more!
Ah yes, it is earth indeed I tread!

SCENE IV

Selika and Nelusko.

NELUSKO: O boundless joy! at length they're gone, for ever gone!
See, see! even now their vessel disappears.

SELIKA: Ah! the heavenly vision restore to me!

NELUSKO: (avvendendosi di Selika, proferisce un grido e si getta ai suoi piedi.) Ritorna in te, o mia giovin sovrana,
Ma già sua mano è fredda e gelata,
O terror! è la morte . . .

SELIKA: No! è il piacer!
(Essa muore cogli occhi volti al cielo. Nelusko s' inginocchia vicino a' Selika ch' egli solleva nelle sue braccia.)

NELUSKO: Giusto ciel, O mio dolor!
Vicino a te restar io vò
Con te vogl' io morir!

CORO: Questo sol è il soggiorno d' eterno amor,
Sol qui regna eterno amor!
(Nelusko cade, morendo ai piedi di Selika.)

FINE.

NELUSKO: (suddenly perceiving Selika, he utters a cry and throws himself at her feet.) Ah! Your senses wander, be yourself once more, O youthful Queen!
Alas! her hand is icy cold.—
O horror, it is death!

SELIKA: No! it is bliss eternal!
(She dies with her eyes fervently turned toward heaven. Nelusko kneels by the side of Selika, whom he raises in his arms.)

NELUSKO: Great heaven! she is dead! O bitter woe!
Selika! I will remain at your side.
With you—with you I'll die!

CHORUS: Of Love eternal, the abode is this!
Here Love reigns eternal!
(Nelusko falls lifeless at Selika's feet.)

THE END.

L'Amore Dei Tre Re (1913)

The Love of Three Kings

MUSIC BY ITALO MONTEMEZZI ■ LIBRETTO BY SEM BENELLI

This three-act tragic opera, set to a libretto by Sem Benelli, was first performed at the Teatro alla Scala in Milan on April 10, 1913. The story begins at a remote castle in Italy in the tenth century, forty years after barbarians have invaded. An Italian princess, Fiora, is betrothed to an Italian prince, Avito, when she is forced to marry Manfredo, son of King Archibaldo, Italy's barbarian conqueror. Manfredo is out on a campaign and his father suspects Fiora of being unfaithful to his son. As the old King is blind, Flaminio, one of his guards, guides him through the castle. Fiora and Avito rendezvous on the night that Manfredo returns, but Avito escapes just before Archibaldo enters. Fiora is unable to convince the king of her innocence, but she uses Manfredo's arrival as a way to pretend that she was walking around in her desire to see him again. Manfredo is going out on yet another campaign and requests that Fiora wave to him from the castle battlements until he is out of view. Fiora is touched by his request, but even as she waves goodbye Avito comes to her. They sing of their love for one another and Archibaldo overhears them. Flaminio stops Avito from killing the king and urges him to escape. Flaminio then meets Manfredo, who sees that Fiora has ceased waving and decides to return home as he feels that something is wrong. Fiora and Archibaldo are left together, and she teases him, not revealing Avito's name, until Archibaldo strangles her to death. Manfredo hears about this but forgives Fiora; she is laid out in the castle crypt and is mourned by those who loved her. Avito enters and kisses her, and he dies from the poison which Archibaldo has spread on her lips in order to find out her lover's identity. Manfredo also kisses her lips and dies. Archibaldo finds Manfredo's body, which he at first assumes is that of Fiora's lover, and discovers his own dead son.

■ ATTO PRIMO	■ ACT I
Spaziosa sala del Castello. Due archi ben misurati aprone le belle curve alla vista di una terrazza a colonne, e della notte poco innanzi l'alba. Una lanterna, come un segnale, rossastramente splende rivolta verso la campagna. Nel buio della sala rilucono i mosaici del colonne e i capitelli medioevali, incroci bizzarri me armoniosi di stili, s'intrecciano e s'incontrano paurosamente.	Spacious hall in the castle. Through the fine curves of two well proportioned arches a view of a terrace with pillars, and of the night, just before dawn, is obtained. A lantern, employed as a signal, sheds its reddish light across the country. The mosaics on the ceiling above the arches, and above the doors on the right and left, shine out through the gloom of the hall. The pillars and their mediæval capitals, twisted in a curious but harmonious style, intersect and cross one another gloomily.
(Un po' silenzio; quindi entra da sinistra Archibaldo vecchio e cieco barone; è condotto da Flaminio sua guida, che indossa il vestito delle guardie del castello.)	(A short silence; then there enters from the left Archibaldo, an old and blind baron; he is led by his guide, Flaminio, who wears the dress of the castle-guards.)
(Le vesti di ognuno, ampie e lunghe, hanno linee pure, ieratiche.)	(The garments of both men are full and long, with pure, priestly lines.)
ARCHIBALDO: Grazie, Flaminio: guarda quella porta. E chusa bene?	ARCHIBALDO: Thanks, good Flaminio: look at that door. Is it quite shut?
FLAMINIO: Accostata; signore . . .	FLAMINIO: Not quite, my Lord . . .
ARCHIBALDO: Chiudila bene, ma senza rumore . . .	ARCHIBALDO: Then shut it quite, but make no noise . . .
FLAMINIO : (attraversa la stanza, s'avvicina alla porta di faccia)	FLAMINIO: (crosses the room and approaches the door opposite).
ARCHIBALDO: (pentito; con premura) No; lasciala! Che credí tu? Che senta?	ARCHIBALDO: (changing his mind; hastily) No; leave it so! What do you think? or hear?
FLEMINIO: Chi, mio signore?	FLAMINIO: Who, my lord?
ARCHIBALDO: (amaro) Ma che sei? Stordito dal sonno? Chi ci dorme mai, di là?	ARCHIBALDO: (bitterly) But what are you? Are you dazed With slumber? Who is it that sleeps in there?
FLAMINIO: Fiora! La sposa del figliuolo vostro!	FLAMINIO: Fiora! your son's wife sleeps there!
ARCHIBALDO: Dorma; dorma: che giovinezza è sogno . . . Non altro! A me negato ora è sognare Chè il sonno mi tradisce e come un'ape molesta scherza con le mie palpebŕe, poi che lo sorte m'ha seccato gli occhi . . . (Dolorosamente) Flaminio, guarda il cielo; tu che puoi . . .	ARCHIBALDO: Well, let her sleep: since youth is but a dream . . . Nothing else! Dreams are denied me since sleep betrays me and like a buzzing bee Plays with my eyelids; Since fate has sealed my eyes . . . (mournfully) Flaminio, look at the sky; you that can see . . .
FLAMINIO: E notte ancora; ma l'alba è vicina . . .	FLAMINIO: It is dark still, but the dawn is near . . .
ARCHIBALDO: Flaminio, guarda, indaga nella valle. Io sento che Manfredo tornerà	ARCHIBALDO: Flaminio, look beyond, and scan the valley. I feel that Manfred will return
FLAMINIO: Non può darsi, se ancora egli combatte i castelli dei nostri oltre qué monti . . .	FLAMINIO: That cannot be if he still fights the castles Of our men beyond these mountains.
ARCHIBALDO: Che dici tu: dei nostri?	ARCHIBALDO: What are you saying? Our men?

FLAMINIO: Si; dei miei che voi già soggiogaste . . . Io sono nato sulle cime del colle là d'Altura, dove nacque la nostra principessa . . .
Per aver pace vi donammo
Fiora . . .
Avito il giovane
principe nostro l'avrebbe sposata . . .

ARCHIBALDO: (con insistenza)
Guarda, Flaminio; guarda nella valle . . .

FLAMINIO: Nessuno, mio signore!
Tutto è pace!

ARCHIBALDO: Sono stanco ed il sonno che mi fugge mi lascia ancora più sperso nel buio . . .

FLAMINIO: (distrattamente) Chi non dorme di notte o smania o prega . . .

ARCHIBALDO: O ricorda! . . .
Il pensiero mio stanotte ripercorre solingo la pianura sconfinata del viver mio trascorso . . .

FLAMINIO: Ricordate la vostra giovinezza . . .

ARCHIBALDO: Italia! Italia . . . è tutto il mio ricordo! . . . (Maestoso) Son quarant'anni che discesi in questa
bella serra di fiori; e sento ancora le mie narici dilatarsi al fiero ricordo . . .
Era la nostra gioventù ardente, esercitata alla conquista . . .
Ed in noi tutti era la volantà possente come una mazza di ferro.
Tornavano da questra terra alcuni die nostri e, nella lingua scalpitante metallica di nostra gente, ai cieli esaltavano questa preziosa gemma; ed il bel nome d'Italia a noi squillava forte come la lusinga d'una marcia di guerra . . .
Finalmente il re nostro di noi scelse
i migliori;
e movemmo: masnada scintillante argentea verde e d'oro come serpe immane che si desta e si divincola dall'ombra e muove, risuonando, al sole.
Tesi nell'acceso impeto i cavalli;
e gli uomini, su loro, i menti aguzzi:
tutti sentimmo ai primi aliti italici il caldo aroma della bella preda!
E questa Dea, natante fra due mari, ci parve sola . . .
. . . E qui con lei sedemmo e qui giacemmo e qui l'amammo e mai nessun di noi la lascerà, l'amante novella, tutta fresca, tutta verde, tutta d'oro; ed amandola si piange ch'ella ci sia la schiava e non la madre,

FLAMINIO: Yes; of my men Whom, long ago, you conquered . . . I was born
Upon the hilltops, yonder, of Altura,
Where our princess was born . . .
For sake of peace we gave you
Fiora . . .
. . . Avito, our young prince
Was to have wedded her . . .

ARCHIBALDO: (insistently) Look out, Flaminio, look into the valley.

FLAMINIO: No one, my lord! All is quiet!

ARCHIBALDO: I'm weary, and the sleep that shuns me Leaves me yet more distracted in the gloom . . .

FLAMINIO: (absently) He who does not sleep at night must either rave or pray . . .

ARCHIBALDO: . . . Or else remember! . . . My thoughts tonight Are wandering lonely over the boundless plain
Of my past life . . .

FLAMINIO: Remember your young days . . .

ARCHIBALDO: Italy! Italy! is all I can remember!
(majestically)
It has been forty years since first I came into
This lovely park of flowers; and still
I draw
My breath more quickly at the proud Remembrance
Our youth was ardent
And all intent on conquest . . .
And deep in every breast there was
A will of iron . . .
Some of our kinsmen came back from this land,
And in the strident tongue that marks our race
They praised its wonderous beauties to the skies;
Until the name of Italy rang out
As loud and luring as a war march . . . At last
The king picked out the best among us;
And forth we rode, our cohort glittering Silvery green and golden, like a snake
That, being roused, uncoils its monster lengths
And drags them from the shadow to the sun.
Keen were the horses on the eager charge;
And keen were the minds of them that rode them:
With the first balmy breeze from Italy
We all inhaled the stirring breath of conquest!
And this fair goddess, swimming chè, se ci fosse madre, allora si, c'insegnerebbe a dominare il mondo.

(Pausa. A Flaminio)
Taci? . . . con odio forse tu mi guardi! . . .

FLAMINIO: (guardando il vecchio cieco ipocritamente) Io vi son servo; e voi siete mio re!
(volendo sviare il suo pensiero)
Ma . . . il cielo imbianca e la lanterna cede
al giorno la sua luce.

ARCHIBALDO: Adunque, spengila . . . inutile segnale! Egli non giunge! . . .

FLAMINIO: (spegne la lanterna sulla terrazza e poi:) Andiamo, allora, mio signore . . .
(Lontano il suono di un flauto campestre) (Turbato) Andiamo! . . .
(Quasi lo trascina verso le sue stanze, à sinistra)

ARCHIBALDO: Torniamo, si; torniamo nella notte . . .
(Esce guidato da Flaminio.)
(Avito ravvolto in un mantello esce dalla porta di destra. Muove due o tre passi verso la terrazza. Indaga fuori; scruta il cielo; ascolta, esita un po'. Si riavvicina alla porta d'onde è uscito, ma sulla soglia è apparsa la bianca figura di Fiora: i bei capelli corti inanellati, vivi intorno alla testa. Sul suo corpo snello una toga sottilissima bianca e avorio.)

AVITO: È ancora notte fonda. Troppo presto
Geronte ha dato il segno.

FIORA: Ritorniamo . . .

AVITO: No: restiamo cosi sul limitare della notte d'amore a dirci addio.

FIORA: Si; restiamo cosi . . .
(Avvincendosi a lui)
Come chi appena si sveglia . . .
e teme il giorno e aborre il sole.

AVITO: (tremante; accenna a sinistra) È chiusa quella porta?

FIORA: È chiusa; è chiusa.
Tu tremi, Avito! E una infinita pace è nel mio petto . . .

between two seas,
Appeared alone to us . . .
And here we sat with her;
And here we lay; and here we loved her; and never Will one of us forsake her, our fair new mistress
So fresh, so green, so golden;
And as we love her, so we weep
That she should be the slave and not the mother,
Since, if she were the mother, she in truth
Would teach us how to dominate the world.
(Pause. To Flaminio)
You're silent? Perchance you look on me with hatred?

FLAMINIO: (looking at the blind man hypocritically) I am your servant; and you are my King!
(wishing to turn his thoughts)
But now . . . the sky grows light;
our lantern pales
Before the daylight . . .

ARCHIBALDO: Put out the lantern then . . . A useless signal! He comes not! . . .

FLAMINIO: (extinguishes the lantern on the terrace; then:) Then let us go, my lord . . .
(In the distance the sound of a rustic flute.)
(Uneasily)
Let us go!
(He almost drags him to his apartments on the left.)

ARCHIBALDO: Let us go back, then; back into the night . . .
(Exit, led by Flaminio.)
(Avito, wrapt in a mantle, comes out from the door on the R. He takes two or three steps towards the terrace. He looks about; examines the sky; listens; hesitates a little. Again he approaches the door whence he came; but on its threshold has appeared the white figure of Fiora: her lovely short hair hangs in disorder 'round her face. Her slender figure is draped in a very fine ivory-white garment.)

AVITO: The night is still profound.
Geronte has given the signal too early.

FIORA: Let us go back . . .

AVITO: No: let us remain like this, upon the threshold of this night of love, bidding each other adieu.

FIORA: Yes; let us stay like this . . .
(clinging to him)
Like one who scarcely
Has walked . . . and fears the day and loathes the sun.

AVITO: (shuddering; points to the left) Is that door closed?

FIORA: It is closed; it is closed.
You're trembling, Avito! Infinite peace
Is in my breast . . .

AVITO: Fiora sì; lo sento, ed ho paura di quella tua pace . . .	AVITO: Yes, Fiora, I can feel it, And I am frightened at such peace . . .
FIORA: Dammi le labbra e tanta ti darò di questa pace! . . . E poi la rivorrò implorandola dispertamente, chè senza le tue labbra non ho pace . . .	FIORA: Give me your lips and I will give you Of this peace! . . . And then I'll want it back, Beseeching, in despair, That there's no peace for me without your lips . . .
AVITO: Se poi mi renderai tanta dolcezza quanta è quella che dare ti vorrei, struggimi tutto con il fuoco tuo, perchè rinascerò.	AVITO: If you then gave me your sweetness, As much as I should wish to give to you, Consume me wholly with your fire That I may come to life again.
FIORA: Sì, mio diletto! Mio cuore ardente! la tua bocca è un fiore d'ongi momento . . . Sì; perch'io lo colgo ad ogni istante e sempre rifiorisce . . .	FIORA: Yes, my belovèd! My glowing heart! Your mouth is as a flower That never can die . . . Yes, though I pluck it Every instant, it always flowers afresh.
AVITO: (perdutamente, come un fanciullo ammalato) Sì . . . rifiorisce . . . Senza te patisce . . .	AVITO: (passionately — like a sick child) Yes . . . it flowers afresh . . . and droops without you . . .
FIORA: (con lo stesso smarrimento) E se lo bacio aulisce . . . E il languidisce l'anima che stacurva su quel fiore . . . Avito; molle sogno . . .	FIORA: (in the same rapt manner) And if I kiss you, it revives . . . The soul that's bending Over that flower, is languishing. Avito; sweetest dream . . .
AVITO: (c. s.) Eterna febbre! . . .	AVITO: (as above) Eternal ecstasy!
FIORA: Incanto lungo . . . senza fine! . . . (Si stringono perdutamente e si smarriscono nel bacio)	FIORA: Divine enchantment! . . . without end! (They embrace passionately and are strained, lip to lip, in a long kiss.)
AVITO: (come svegliandosi, si scioglie da lei) Ahimè! Guarda; la luce già comincia, il cielo imbianca . . .	AVITO: (as though awaking, frees himself from her) Alas! See there, the light begins to dawn, The sky grows paler . . .
FIORA: Tu mi vuoi lasciare . . .	FIORA: You want to leave me . . .
AVITO: (per fuggire) È tardi! (Scorge la lanterna spenta . . . Atterrito) Fiora! Guarda! La lanterna è stata spenta . . . Qualcuno è venuto qui, nella notte . . .	AVITO: (about to fly) It is late! (He perceives the lantern is extinguished. Terrorstruck) Fiora! look! The light has been Extinguished . . . Someone has been here In the night . . .
FIORA: Il vento è stato . . .	FIORA: The wind has done it . . .
AVITO: No; che la notte era cheta! . . . Non rammenti?	AVITO: No: The night has been quite calm, have you forgotten?
FIORA: Ascolta! . . . Corri! . . .	FIORA: Listen! Fly!
AVITO: (fugge dalla terrazza verso destra. Fiora lo guarda, lo segue come a proteggerlo, poi corre verso le sue stanze. Ma s'è aperta la porta di sinistra ed è apparso Archibaldo solo).	AVITO: (escapes from the terrace towards the right. Fiora watches him, follows him as if to protect him, then runs towards her rooms. But the door on the left has opened and Archibaldo has appeared by himself).
ARCHIBALDO: Fiora! Fiora! Fiora! (Celando agli orecchi del vecchio ogni suo movimento, Fiora cerca sparire silenziosa)	ARCHIBALDO: Fiora! Fiora! Fiora! (concealing every movement from the old man's ears, Fiora tries to escape silently).
ARCHIBALDO: (pertinace) Tue sei costà . . . Ti sento rifiatare! . . . Affanni? Affanni? O Fiora, di': con chi parlavi, tu?	ARCHIBALDO: (persisting) You're close at hand . . . I hear you breathing! . . . You're breathless! and excited! O Fiora say: with whom have you been speaking?
FIORA: (con fermezza nuova) Con me stessa parlavo! . . .	FIORA: (with new firmness) I have been speaking to myself!
ARCHIBALDO: (lentamente s'avvicina a lei) Non fuggire! Resta! Voglio sapere! (Ghermisce lei che s'è appoggiata ad una colonna. L'attira a sè: con la mano le indaga il volto, la sente fra le sue grandi braccia di vecchio eroe. Con voce placata e con maraviglia:) Non può darsi! Tu mentire così! Così tradire! . . . (Più amoroso, con la gola quasi stretta da una mascente bontà paterna, senile) Tu sei come una bimba . . . Se mentisci . . . È per nulla . . . Chi, adunque, era con te?	ARCHIBALDO: (slowly approaching her) Do not escape! Stay! I wish to know! (He seizes her as she leans against a pillar. He draws her to him, he touches her face with his hand, he feels her within his fine old arms. In pacified tones and with amazement:) That you should lie so! should deceive so! (More lovingly, almost choked with a growing fatherly and protective kindness) You're like a baby . . . if you lie . . . it is for nothing . . . Who, then was with you?
FIORA: (con risolutezza continua; senza piegarsi; rigidamente; ma con lieve tremito) Nessuno, mio signore!	FIORA: (with unfaltering resoluteness; without bending; rigidly but with a slight tremor) No one, my lord!
ARCHIBALDO: (indagando) Perchè tremi, se dici il vero? . . .	ARCHIBALDO: (feeling her) Why do you tremble, If what you say is true? . . .
FIORA: (subitamente pungendolo) Ed anche voi tremate e non mentite . . .	FIORA: (suddenly touching him) You also are atremble And are not lying . . .
ARCHIBALDO: (impetuoso) Fiora! (Lieve pausa) E vero! Tremo . . . Ma tremo . . . tremo per la tua menzonga!	ARCHIBALDO: Fiora! (slight pause) It is true! I'm trembling . . . But I am trembling . . . trembling for your lie!
FIORO: (con ingenuità feroce) Io son venuta, qua, sulla terrazza . . . Non potevo dormire . . . col pensiero . . .	FIORA: (with fierce ingenuity) I came out here, on the terrace . . . I could not sleep . . . for thinking . . .
ARCHIBALDO: (improvviso, urlando) Di chi? Di chi? . . .	ARCHIBALDO: (shouting, suddenly) Of whom? of whom?
FIORO: (con semplicità) Del mio sposo Manfredo! . . .	FIORA: (simply) Of my husband, Manfred . . .
ARCHIBALDO: Orrore! Orrore! Oh, buio senza fine! Tu sei di ferro; tu sei di catene intorno alla mia testa!	ARCHIBALDO: O horror! horror! Oh, unending night! You're made of iron; You're made of chains Inside my head!
FIORA: (riaccostandosi a lui con inganno) Mio signore!	FIORA: (approaching him deceitfully) My lord!
ARCHIBALDO: No! Ferma! Non avvicinarti più! Ho per te come il terrore d'un bimbo . . . E la persona tua, che dentro l'ombra sentivo sorvolare come un'ala	ARCHIBALDO: No! stay where you are! and come no nearer! I have an almost childish terror of you . . . And your person, which I heard gliding Through the shadows like a snowy di candore, mi par soffio di gelo, brivido accusatore; . . . si che ancora, mentre sento che tu qui, qui tradivi, io mi debbro abbracciar la tua menzogna, e per non arrossire giudicandoti debbo gridare: "No . . .

No . . . Non tradiva!

FIORA: Signore!

ARCHIBALDO: Va: non ti potrei toccarre altro che per ucciderti!

FLAMINIO: (di dentro)
Signore!
(Comparendo dalla terrazza)
Monsignore! Un drappello se'è fermato sul ponte e m'è sembrato che vi fosse il barone Manfredo . . .
(Giungono dal basso del castello squilli di trombe. La luce del giorno è molto cresciuta) . . .
Udite! Udite! Lo salutano!

ARCHIBALDO: (tremante) È lui!
Flaminio, va! . . .
Corrigli incontro . . .
(Col pianto nella voce)
Io . . . sono cieco . . . Va!

FLAMINIO: (esce correndo)

ARCHIBALDO: (a Fiora dopo una lunga pausa) Tu non gli puo; correie incontro . . . No!

FIORA: (tace)

ARCHIBALDO: No! . . . Tu dormivi . . . Torna nel tuo letto . . .

FIORA: (s'avvia lentamente verso le sue stanze. Un lieve sorriso crudele di vittoria è sul suo giovane viso bello . . . Sparisce).

ARCHIBALDO: (aspetta il figlio dolorosamente immobile . . .)

MANFREDO: (ài dentro) Padre!
(Apparisce dalla terrazza)

ARCHIBALDO: Figliuolo mio! Giunge la luce con te!
(Si abbaracciano)

MANFREDO: Troppo era lungo e tedioso l'assedio per la mia brama ardentissima . . .
E son fuggito: e resterò con te qualche giorno.

ARCHIBALDO: Potessi tu restare sempre!

MANFREDO: Oh, sì; presto finirà la guerra.
(Lieve pausa)
E Fiora; dorme? . . .

ARCHIBALDO: Dorme.

wing,
Seems like a frosty breath to me,
Coldly accusing . . . To that extent, that While I feel that you were here deceiving,
I must myself embrace your lie,
And, so as not to blush while judging you,
I have to cry; No, she did not deceive me!

FIORA: My lord! . . .

ARCHIBALDO: Go: for I could not touch you.
Unless it were to slay you!

FLAMINIO: (from within) My lord!
(appearing on the terrace)
My liege! a troop of soldiers has drawn up
Upon the bridge and I do think the Baron Manfred is among them! (Trumpet blasts sound from the foot of the castle. Daylight has grown much stronger).
Listen! listen!
They are saluting!

ARCHIBALDO: (trembling) It is he! Flaminio, go!
Run forth to meet him . . .
(with tears in his voice)
I-am-blind-go!

FLAMINIO: (runs out).

ARCHIBALDO: (to Fiora after a long pause) You . . . can not run to meet him - No!

FIORA: (is silent).

ARCHIBALDO: No! You were sleeping . . . Go back to bed . . .

FIORA: (goes off slowly towards her rooms. A faint cruel smile of victory is on her beautiful young face . . . She disappears.)

ARCHIBALDO: (awaits his son, sadly motionless)

MANFREDO: (from within) Father!
(He appears on the terrace)

ARCHIBALDO: My dearest son!
You bring light
With you!
(They embrace.)

MANFREDO: Too long and wearisome
Was the siege for my impatient longing . . .
So I escaped; and shall remain with you
Some days.

ARCHIBALDO: If only you could stay here Always!

MANFREDO: Oh yes! the war will soon be over.
(slight pause)
And Fiora? Is she asleep?

ARCHIBALDO: Asleep.

MANFREDO: Oh, padre mio, questo ritorno m'e caro siccome un premio lungamente atteso Nelle guerre
combattute, nel sangue, nella strage, nell'orgia di vittoria, io sono stato ferma colonna di virtù, si come tu m'hai insegnato, padre! . . . E Fiora, Fiora amare mi sprà; chè tu educata l'avrai come un'agnella di candore . . .

ARCHIBALDO: Godi la giogia tua! . . . Fiora ti aspetta . . .
Anzi, ella giunge; . . . sento i passi suoi . . .

MANFREDO: Io non sento: ella vola . . .
(Si rivolge alla porta di destra. Apparisce Fiora)
Fiora! Fiora!

FIORA: (con freddezza crudele, ma simile a bontà) Siete tornato, signor mio?! Stamani, prima dell'alba mi sono destata
e son venuta qui sulla terrazza;
ed ho guardato tanto nella valle . . .
Ero certa che voi sareste giunto . . .
(Ad Archibaldo)
È vero, padre mio?

ARCHIBALDO: (tace)

MANFREDO: È vero, padre moi?

ARCHIBALDO: Si, si; l'ho colta . . .
(Riprendendosi) mentr'ella ti aspettava . . .

MANFREDO: Oh; Fiora! Fiora!
Piccolo fiore, vieni sul mio petto;
qui, qui tra le mie braccia, ch'io ti rechi, come agnella sperduta e manuseta, all'ovile dal mio cuore intessuto.
Oh; come tremi! . . .
(Avviandosi)
Cosi ti porterò nel tuo bel letto d'avorio . . .
(Al padre)
Padre mio, certo tu vedi, ora, che il figlio ha trovato il suo bene! . . .
Certo tu vedi, perchè troppa luce esce dal cuore mio che si confonde e si mischia e moltiplica con questa luce odorosa che dal mio tesoro si libera, dal mio tesoro aulente.
(Entra nelle stanze di destra con Fiora abbracciata)

MANFREDO: O dearest father,
This return is dear to me as a reward
That's long expected
Throughout the war,
The fights, the bloodshed and the slaughter,
The revelries of victory, untarnished
Have I kept my virtue, as you
Have taught me, father! And Fiora, Fiora,
Will learn to love me: since you have Brought her up as spotless as a lamb..

ARCHIBALDO: Enjoy your happiness! Fiora awaits you
Hark, she is coming . . . I hear her footsteps . . .

MANFREDO: I do not hear: she flies . . .
(He turns toward the door on the R. Fiora appears)
Fiora! Fiora!

FIORA: (with cruel coldness, but with a semblance of kindness)
Have you returned, my lord? This morning
I awoke before the dawn
And came onto this terrace . . .
And looked so long for you down in the valley . . .
I was so certain you would come . . .
(to Archibaldo)
It is true–father . . . you . . . heard me.

ARCHIBALDO: (remains silent).

MANFREDO: Is it true, my father?

ARCHIBALDO: Yes, yes–I caught her..
(correcting himself)
While she was waiting for you.

MANFREDO: Oh, Fiora, Fiora!
Come to my breast, my little flower;
Here, here, within my arms, that I may bear you
Like to a lost and gentle lamb,
Unto the fold and shelter of my heart.
Oh, how you tremble! . . .
(approaching her)
Thus let me bear you to your soft
White bed . . .
(to his father)
Now, Father mine, you needs must see
Your son has found his happiness!..
You needs must see, because too strong a light
Streams from my heart and flashes
And multiplies and mingles with this perfumed light,
Which flows forth from my treasure,
From this my fragrant treasure.
(With his arm around her he goes into the room on the right.)

ARCHIBALDO: (solo, Pausa)
Signore mio, se tu m'hai tolto gli occhi, fa ch'io non veda . . . che sia cieco . . . cieco!
(Cala la tela.)

■ ATTO SECONDO

Terrazza sulle alte mura del castello; una terrazza tondeggiante. In cima al muro che la cinge, smerlato, più alto d'un uomo, si giunge con una scaletta a metà del fondo. Una panchina di pietra larga un metro, altra fino al ginocchio, gira torno torno, accosto al muro. Si giunge per due porte laterali. Pomeriggio: il cielo scoperto è corso da nubi cangianti, estive. Squilli di tromba chiamano a raccolta.

(Etrano da sinistra Manfredo e Fiora abbracciati. — Fiora è adorna semplicemente e mirabilmente.)

MANFREDO: (a Fiora) Dimmi, Fiora, perchè ti veggo ancora cosi chiusa dinanzi al mio dolore? . . .
Io parto, Fiora, io parto ancora, . . . ancora, . . .
e sono cosi scosso che mi pare per un viaggio eterno, di partire . . .

FIORA: Mio signore, v'ho detto che la vostra partenza cosi prossima turbò la gioia ch'ebbi dal vostro ritorno . . .
E perciò son cosi, senza parole . . .
Io poco vi conosco, chè voi siete sempre lontano; e quando ritornate pur mi dite: fra poco partirò . . .

MANFREDO: No; Fiora, Fiora: tu mi parli come ad un nemico che ti chiede pace.
Intendi, Fiora? Intendi il mio dolore?
O dimmi tu: che cosa t'addolora?

FIORA: Nulla, signore, m'addolora; solo che voi partiate; . . .

MANFREDO: Tornerò per te, per te, per te, per la tua cara vita che voglio tutta cingere d'amore . . .
(Con altro modo)
Oh, Fiora: dammi alcuna cosa tua che mi possa tenere presso al cuore, mentre sarò lontano.

FIORA: Che volete?

MANFREDO: Che scegli tu?

ARCHIBALDO: (Alone. Pause) O Lord my God, since you have taken my eyes,
Let me not see . . . let me be blind . . . be blind!

■ ACT II

A circular terrace on the high castle-walls. On the top of the wall which surrounds it, battlemented higher than a man's stature, is a single staircase halfway from the back. A little stone bench, about a yard wide and knee-high, winds around the wall. Two side-doors give access to the terrace. It is afternoon: the sky is covered with changing fleeting clouds. Trumpet blasts sound a retreat.

(Enter from the left Manfredo, his arms around Fiora. Fiora is beautifully and simply attired.)

MANFREDO: (to Fioro) Tell me, Fiora, why do I see you Still so reserved before my sorrow?
I leave you, Fiora, once more — once more . . .
And I am moved like this because it seems to me
As if I left you for an eternal journey . . .

FIORA: My lord, have I not told you how your Speedy parting has cast a gloom
Upon the joy your coming brought me . . .
And therefore I am thus, bereft of words . . .
I do not know you well, since you are Always distant; and yet when you return
You always say: soon I must leave you . . .

MANFREDO: No; Fiora, Fiora: You speak to me
As to an enemy that sues for peace.
Do you hear me, Fiora? Do you grasp my grief?
O tell me: what is it that grieves you?

FIORA: Nothing, my lord, is grieving me; only
That you are going . . .

MANfREDO: For you, for you, for that dear life of yours
That I am longing to surround with love . . .
(In different tones)
Oh, Fiora mine, give me some little token
That I can keep close to my heart
While I am far away.

FIORA: What do you want?

MANFREDO: What will you choose?

FIORA: (con arcado dolore traboccetto) Volete la mia vita! . . .

MANFREDO: (con pietosa mansuetodise) Fanciulla, tu non puoi mulla donarmi, per placare il mio cuore che per ora.
t'è ignoto! Solamente lo posso chiederti un dono che mi dia per poco pace;
e te lo chieggo.

FIORA: Che?

MANFREDO: (dopo una pausa dolorosamente) Suonata è l'ora della partenza. I miei prodi compagni m'aspettano sul ponte: impazienti sono i cavalli; un fremito di vita e di conquista tremola nell'aria rossa. Si parte. I miei compagni fidi sono lieti. Si Giù giù per l'ampia valle si scende. Si divincolano i sogni d'ebbrezza dalle loro menti giovani.
In mezzo a loro io sono cupo e solo . . .
Dentro mi piange lacrime dogliose tutta l'umanità, perch'io mi dolgo dell'amor mio lasciato e vado solo, senza conforto . . . Ho perso ogni mio bene, sono forse cacciato dalla gioia
Perchè, se tanto amore è dentro me? . . .
E mi volto e riguardo sopra il colle questo castello che rosseggia al sole . . .
Giù si scende disperatamente . . .
E la valle si snoda e incontra il fiume che piange e piange e mormora e rimproverta;
e il castello si perde, . . . trascolora fra gli alberi . . . Soltanto questa torre si vede, questa dove siamo . . .
Ora, ti prego.
anima mia, mia consolazione,
resta qui un poco, monta qui sul muro,
e col tuo velo manda il tuo saluto allo sposo che parte e mi parra, ti giuro, anima mia, che tu m'asciughi le lacrime sul mio cuore scoperto
Questo ti chiedo, anima mia non più! (pause)

FIORA: (finalmente commossa, con sincere pietá.) E questo sarà fatto . . .

MANFREDO: Ora ti lascio . . . E volerò, perche qua si m'è caro partire, per vederti salutarmi . . .
Addio, Fiora . . .

FIORA: (overflowing with secret grief) You want my life?

MANFREDO: (with compassionate gentleness) My child, there's nothing you can give me,
That will appease my heart which is as yet Unknown to you! There's only one gift I can ask
Of you, to give me peace awhile;
And I do ask it.

FIORA: What?

MANFREDO: (after a pause, sorrowfully) The hour has struck
Of my departure. My brave companions
Await me on the bridge: the horses
Champ their bits; a thrill of life
And conquest pulses through the air.
We're going. My trusty companions
Are joyful.
Down through the open valley
We descend. Their youthful minds
Are drunk with dreams of prowess.
I only in their midst am sad and alone . . .
Within me all humanity weeps tears
Of grief, because I'm racked with bitter grief
At my abandoned love, and go alone . . .
Uncomforted . . . For I have lost my joy,
And am bereft of all my happiness . . .
But why, if so much love is in me?
And then I turn and look where on the hill
This castle crimsons in the evening sun . . .
Down, down we travel, swift and strenuous . . .
The valley twists and meets the river
Which weeps and weeps and murmures and reproves;
The castle's lost to sight . . . fading
Among the trees. Only this tower
Where now we stand, can still be seen
Now, I entreat you,
My dearest love, my consolation,
Stay here a little longer, climb on the wall
And wave a greeting with your scarf
To your departing husband; and I swear
It will seem to me, that you are drying
The tears upon my heart . . .
I ask you this, my love, no more!
(Pause.)

FIORA: (moved at last with sincere pity) And this shall be done . . .

MANFREDO: Now I must leave you . . .
And I shall fly, for almost do I love our Parting, to see you wave your greet-

(La bacia; si stacca subito dal bacio; fugge quasi voli, perchì lo punge.)	ing . . . Farewell, my Fiora . . . (He kisses her; then wrenches himself from her, and rushes off, shaken by sobs.)
FIORA: (pur liberata da lui cerca come sciogliersi da quell'abbraccio che le da rimasto alla persona . . . Si avvicina poi al muro smerlato; monte il gradini della scaletta; si aporge . . . Ma ecco cautamente e como un sogno Avito, da destra. E vestito come Flaminio, come la guardia del castello).	FIORA: (Freed from him, she tries to shake off the sensation of his embrace . . . Then she approaches the battlemented wall, ascends the steps of the staircase; stands forth there . . . But suddenly Avito appears on the R, cautiously and as in a dream. He is dressed like Flaminio, as a castle-guard).
AVITO: (si guarda attorno, scorge Fiora lassù . . .) Oh! . . . Fiora! Fiora! (Ella si volta; prima non lo riconosce con quelle sue vesti.) Sono Avito! Avito!	AVITO: (looks about him and sees Fiora up there) Oh! Fiora! Fiora! (She turns; at first she does not recognize him in that garb) I am Avito! Avito!
FIORA: Ma che?! che?! Forse da quella notte . . .	FIORA: Why, how is this? Can it be, since that night . . .
AVITO: Fui qui, fui qui, sempre vicino a te con l'anima e la mente mia che perdesi . . . Flaminio m'ha vestito ora cosi per potermi nascondere . . . e vederti . . .	AVITO: I have been here, here, close to you, Close with my soul and my tourmented mind . . . Flaminio dressed me thus that I might Hide . . . and watch you . . .
FIORA: (con improvvisa disperazione). Non posso più vederti . . . Non ti debbo amar più . . . La tua voce, oh, non risuoni più nell'orecchie mie . . . Ti prego; va . . .	FIORA: (in sudden desperation) I cannot see you any more . . . I must not Love you . . . Your voice must never Sound on my ears again . . . I beseech you . . . go . . .
AVITO: Io non intendo, Fiora! Sei tu, Fiora, Fiora, che parli a me?	AVITO: I am bewildered, Fiora! Can it be you, You, Fiora, who are speaking to me?
FIORA: Si; mille volte; sì, mille, mille: disperatamente.	FIORA: Yes—a thousand times: Yes, a thousand, thousand, desparately.
AVITO: Sei mille volte mia? Che dici?	AVITO: Your're mine a thousand times? Is that it?
FIORA: No! Silenzio fosco è dentro la mia vita e terrore d'intorno . . . Vinta, vinta sono dalla pietà . . . dalla bontà . . . Ohimè: non senti il mio sposo che parte? . . .	FIORA: No! A gloomy silence is within my life And terror all around me . . . I'm conquered, Conquered by kindness . . . by compassion . . . Alas: do you not hear my husband going?
AVITO: Perchè non dici, il mio sposo che giunge?	AVITO: Wherefore not say: my husband coming?
FIORA: Lasciami in pace. Lasciami al mio pianto . . .	FIORA: Leave me in peace. Leave me to my sorrow . . .
AVITO: Lasciarti, Fiora! E dove andare, Fiora? Dove vo? Dove cerco la mia vita? . . .	AVITO: Leave you, Fiora! and where should I go? Where can I go? Where seek my life?
FIORA: Nasconditi. Qualcuno deve giungere.	FIORA: Conceal yourself. Someone is coming.
AVITO: (sempre come trasognato) Andrò; si: fuggirò . . . (S'avvia)	AVITO: (as if in a dream) Yes, I will go . . . I will escape . . . (He goes.)
FIORA: Fuggi: ti prego!	FIORA: Escape! I beg you!
AVITO: (fugge da destra) (Fiora scende la scaletta. Entra dopo un istante l'Ancella da sinistra).	AVITO: (escapes on the R.) (Fiora comes down the staircase. A moment after the handmaid comes in from the L.)
ANCELLA: (recando un cofanetto intarsiato) Il barone Manfredo questo dono vi manda, baronessa . . .	HANDMAID: (handing her an inlaid casket) Baron Manfredo sends you this offering Madam . . .
FIORA: (con infinita malinconia) Metti là! (Addita la panchina di pietra)	FIORA: (with intense melancholy) Place it there! (The maid places the casket on the bench and goes off.)
ANCELLA: (posa il cofanetto sulla panchina. Esce)
FIORA: (si approssima al cofano; lo apre lentamente; trae fuori lentissimamente un velo bianco lungo . . . Le braccia le cadono giù come morte; e con esse il velo . . . Resta un poco immobile, muta, senza pianto e senza vita. Poi si ricorda della promessa e s'accosta, recando il velo, al muro. Monta sulla scaletta; guarda giù; vede nella valle i cavalieri che si allontanano ed agita per la prima volta il velo . . . per la seconda ancora; e per la terza; e sempre il braccio le cade giù stanco . . . . Ma ritorna Avito).	FIORA: (approaches the casket; opens it slowly, and very slowly draws forth a long white scarf. Her arms hang down like dead; and the scarf with them . . . She remains motionless, without tears and life, for awhile. Then she remembers her promise and approaches the wall, with the veil. She ascends the staircase; looks down, sees the horsemen disappearing in the valley and waves the veil for the first time; then the second; then the third; and each time her hand drops wearily; . . . But Avito returns).
AVITO: Addio, Fiora; ho voluto rivederti . . . Debbo partire; ma senza ritorno . . . Addio, Fiora; se non vuoi dareme un bacio che sarebbe principio della vita. fammi toccare quel tuo velo blanco che certo sa la tua molle fragranza . . . (Cerca prendere il velo di Fiore)	AVITO: Farewell, Fiora . . . I wished to see you once again . . . For I must go, but I shall not return . . . Farewell, Fiora . . . if you refuse me The kiss which is the source of life, Let me at least caress your snowy scarf Which has been nestling in your fragrance . . . (Tries to take her scarf.)
FIORA: (che ha ascoltate le sua parole) . . . Non toccarlo!	FIORA: (who has been listening to his words wearily, drawing back) No, do not touch it!
AVITO: Nulla di te più, dunque m'appartiene? . . .	AVITO: Is nothing of you then, belonging to me still?
FIORA: (guardandolo compassione volmente e e tutte dimentirando all'improvvisa . . . con altra voce!) Come sei bianco . . . Come sei disfatto . . . Sembri un giglio, amorosa creatura . . .	FIORA: (looking at him compassionately and forgetting all, suddenly, in different tones:) How white you are . . . and how distraught . . . Your're like a lily, amorous creature.
AVITO: Il veleno d'amore è assai più forte del sonno e della fame; ed ormai più forte della vita . . .	AVITO: Love's poison is by far more strong Than sleep and hunger, and now indeed More strong than life . . .
FIORA: Vita tua. è vita mia! Ma che pietà, che arcano gorgo di bene ora m'invade! . . . Avito, ahimè . . . Tu sei come una frasca troppo esposta ai venti; il male t'ha stremato. il male ch'io t'ho dato.	FIORA: Your life Is my life! But what compassion, what mysterious Wave of kindness has engulfed me! . . . Avito, Woe is me! . . . Your're like a branch that's too Exposed unto the winds; the evil has destroyed you, The evil I have done you.

AVITO: (avidamente) E tutto il bene rendimi senza indugio con un bacio! Oh, Fiora, scendi, scendi . . .

FIORA: No: non debbo! (Si ricorda dolorosamente del voto e agita il velo.)

AVITO: (si avvicina a lei)

FIORA: Non salire quassù!

AVITO: Fiora; perchè?

FIORA: Non domandarmi . . .
(Agita Il vela.)

AVITO: Allora fuggirò . . . Io sono cosi stanco che non posso quasi più transcinarmi . . .

FIORA: Avito! Resta . . .
Non domandare . . .
Avvicinati . . . Bacia la mia veste . . .
giù sulla balza d'oro . . . Io l'ho trapunta!

AVITO: (corre subito. Stringe la sua veste: la bacia). Ah! Sento le tue dita ancora sopra,- accarezzanti il bel ricamo! Io bacio le tue mani, cosi . . . Ma stranamente:
aspri sono i miei baci, quasi che l'ago tu avessi qui lasciato infisso . . .
(Le sue labbra avidamente si dissetano.)

FIORA: (vuole ancora agitare il velo; ma non può: le braccia cadono: Il capo si piega). Ah; tortura! indicibile contrasto!

AVITO: (come un fanciullo) Io non ascolto più! Dentro il rosaio ho immerso la mia testa . . .
Nelle orcchie
sento i fuchi ronzarmi i loro incanti di vecchi maghi, e il petto mi si piena di liquori olezzanti (La stringe a' ginocchi.)
I tuoi ginocchi!
A quale scoglio morbido di musco m'aggrappo, dopo tanto navigare, dopo tanto morire! . . .

FIORA: (accasciata, attratta) Avito, ahimè; tu pesi come piombo! . . .
Tu mi trascini!

AVITO: Ah! La tua fresca voce ch'io sento costassu, come m'incanta! . . .

FIORA: Avito! Avito!

AVITO: Io stringo al petto mio un gran fascio di fiori soavissimi!
Ma i lunghi steli solamente stringo!
Non vorrò, dunque, immergere la testa nelle corolle?!

FIORA: Avito! ahimè, non sai!

AVITO: (eagerly) Then give me back The good without delaying, in a kiss! Come down, O Fiora, come . . .

FIORA: No I must not! (She sadly remembers her vow, and waves the scarf.)

AVITO: (approaches her).

FIORA: You must not come up here!

AVITO: Fiora, why not?

FIORA: No, do not ask me . . .
(waves the scarf)

AVITO: Then I will fly from here . . .
I am so weary that I can hardly Drag myself away . . .

FIORA: Avito! stay.. No — do not ask . . .
Come closer . . .
Kiss my garment . . .
Down on the golden fringe . . . I embroidered it!

AVITO: (runs hastily to her. Seizes her dress and kisses it) Ah! still I feel your fingers on it,
Lingering on the broidery. I kiss
Your hands, like this . . . But strangely stinging
Are my kisses, almost as though
Your needle you has left inserted.
(His lips drink kisses greedily)

FIORA: (wants to wave her scarf again, but cannot; her arms drop; her head droops) Oh agony! the dreadful contrast!

AVITO: (like a child) I will no longer listen! I've thrust
My head into the rosebush . . .
And in my ears
The drones are humming their spells
Of ancient magic, my breast is full
Of fragrant balm
(Seizes her knees)
Your knees!
I cling to them, as to a kindly Mossgrown reef, after so much journying,
So much dying!

FIORA: (weakening, fascinated)
Avito, woe is me, you are like lead!
You drag me down!

AVITO: Ah! Your fresh voice
That's souding there above, how it enthralls me!

FIORA: Avito! Avito!

AVITO: Unto my breast I strain
A bunch of sweetest flowers!
But it is the long stems only that I grasp!
May I not, dearest, plunge my head
Into the petals?

FIORA: Avito! woe is me, you know not!

AVITO: Fossi tu pure, non un fascio bello di fiori; ma una ruvida forcata di spini, che bruciassero lassù, vorrei tuffar nel fuoco la mia vita per trovarvi la morte e la tua boccal! . . .

FIORA: Avito, no!

AVITO: La bocca tua! La bocca tua, Fiora! Fiora! Disperatamente io chieggo la tua bocca!

FIORA: (abbandonandosi, vinta)
Ahimè! Si peiga il voto mio, com'albero pietoso a chi muroe di sete . . .

AVITO: Ho sete! Ho sete!
(Accoglie lei che, scendendo i gradini, cade nelle sue braccia. Si baciane come fossero moribondi d'amore. Muovono quindi la panchina. Fiora si abbandona appoggiando la testa sul petto di Avito.)

FIORA: (dopo una pausa) Come tremi, diletto! . . .

AVITO: L'amor tuo, che mi ricopre tutto, ora mi fa sentire il gelo della solitudine . . .

FIORA: (carezzosa: tutto dimenticando) Pensando a Fiora, non dormivi più . . .

AVITO: (quasi imitanda la sus voce) Pensando a Fiora, non vivevo più . . .

FIORA: Mio diletto! . . .

AVITO: . . . Guarda in sù . . .
siamo in cielo . . . Si naviga nel cielo; . . .
si molleggia sull'etere . . .

FIORA: (come in sogno)
Nel cielo . . .

AVITO: Oh, Fiora, dove siamo? Io mi smarrisco . . .
Il viso tuo; che piu non lo rammento! . . .
(Le prende il volto con dolce furore e lo contempla follemente)
Oh; bello; oh, bello! Oh; piccola stelluccia!
O firmamento, tu che me l'hai data, grazie! . . .

FIORA: (con estasi) . . . Incatenami, dunque
In un occhio si può chiudere il cielo . . . Tu potrai con la tua bocca chiudere la mia vita . . . Prendi . . .
Prendila . . .

AVITO: Eccoti, Fiora, un bacio bello, . . . l'ultimo, l'ultimo d'un'infinità di baci, . . .
liprimo, il primo
d'un'eternità . . .

AVITO: Oh would to heaven you were, not a fair bunch
Of flowers; but a rough clump of thorns,
That I might burn upon it,
And plunge my life into the fire
To find death and your lips there! . . .

FIORA: Avito! No!

AVITO: Your lips! Your lips, my Fiora!
Fiora! Fiora! Desparately
I crave your lips!

FIORA: (yielding to him, conquered) Alas! my will Bows down to yours as does a kindly tree
To one who dies of thirst . . .

AVITO: I'm thirsting — thirsting —
(He receives her, as she, coming down the steps, falls into his arms. They kiss each other as if dying of love. Then they move to the bench. Fiora drops onto it, leaning her head on Avito's breast).

FIORA: (after a pause) How you are trembling, dearest!

AVITO: Your love
Which wraps me round completely, now lets me
Feel the cold of solitude . . .

FIORA: (caressingly — oblivious of all) Thinking of Fiora, he no longer slept . . .

AVITO: (almost imitating her voice) Thinking of Fiora, I no longer lived . . .

FIORA: My dearest . . .

AVITO: We are in heaven . . .
We float in heaven . . .
We drift upon the ether . . .

FIORA: (as in a dream) In heaven

AVITO: Fiora, where are we? I have lost my way . . .
Show me your face; for I cannot recall it! . . .
(Takes her face in a gentle ecstasy and gazes at it madly)
Oh, fair, most fair! Oh, little star of mine!
I thank you firmament, for this your gift
To me!

FIORA: (ecstatically) Enchain me, then
The whole of heaven
Can be held within an eye . . .
And you can hold my life
With your dear lips . . .
Take . . . take it . . .

AVITO: Here, Fiora, is a glorious kiss . . . the last,
The last of an infinity of kisses, . . .
The first, the first of an eternity . . .

(baciano e restano avvinti perdutamente aboliti nella loro nube amorosa . . .)

ARCHIBALDO: (di dentro) Fiora!
(Subito fuori seguito da Flaminio).
Fiora!
(Gli due amanti che non hanno sentito il primo grido del vecchio, si svegliono ora come da un sogno).

AVITO: (riacquistata la pienezza delle sue forze, si slancia contro il vecchio, avendo levato il pugnale).

FLAMINIO: (che segue Archibaldo lo fermo col gesto).

FIORA: (rispondendo al vecchio col gesto scongiuza Avito di faggire). Son qua!

ARCHIBALDO: (con anala e sospetta à Flamino) Guarda, Flaminio, chi c'è? . . .

FLAMINO: . . . Non c'è nessuno! . . .

AVITO: (esce).

ARCHIBALDO: (che ha sentito il suo passo, amaramente dice:) Sta bene! . . . Fiora, dove sei?

FIORA: Son qua! . . . (Ella resta più indietro a destra. Archibaldo ha la prova del vero: ha udito: ha visto.)

ARCHIBALDO: (violento). Va via, Flaminio!

FLAMINIO: (quasi balbettando). Udite, Monsignore . . .
Il Barone ritorna: ha rivoltato il cavallo . . .
(Salta sulla panchina e guarda nella valle).

ARCHIBALDO: (fremente). Ritorna certamente!

FIORA: (ricordando il suo voto). Ritorna?!

ARCHIBALDO: Su: Flaminio; vagli incontro . . .

FLAMINIO: (insistendo) Signore! . . .

ARCHIBALDO: Va!

FLAMINIO: (esce correndo).

ARCHIBALDO: Fiora, dove sei tu?

FIORA: Signore! . . .

ARCHIBALDO: (tremante d'ira e di giustizia). La tua voce menzognera ancora mi ferisce?!

FIORA: Monsignore! . . .

ARCHIBALDO: Chi era qui con te? chi ci tradiva? . . .

FIORA: Nessuno!

ARCHIBALDO: Fiora!

(They kiss, and remain locked in each other's arms, and lost to everything, in their love-trance.)

ARCHIBALDO: (from within)
Fiora!
(He comes out quickly, followed by Flaminio.)
Fiora!
(The two lovers, who did not hear the old man's first call, now start asunder, as if roused from a dream.)

AVITO: (who has hardly recovered his full consciousness, hurls himself on to the old man, with his drawn dagger.)

FLAMINIO: (who is following Archibaldo, stops him with a gesture)

FIORA: (replying to the old man, entreats Avito by a gesture to escape) I am here!

ARCHIBALDO: (anxiously and suspiciously, to Flaminio) Look, Flaminio,
Who is there?

FLAMINIO: No one is there! (Avito goes out.)

ARCHIBALDO: (who has heard his footsteps, says bitterly) It is well! . . . Fiora, where are you?

FIORA: I am here! . . . (She remains a little behind on the right. Archibaldo has proof of the truth; he has heard; he has seen.)

ARCHIBALDO: (with violence)
Be gone, Flaminio!

FLAMINIO: (almost stammering)
Listen, my Lord . . . The Baron is returning: he has turned back
His horse . . .
(He jumps onto the bench and looks into the valley.)

ARCHIBALDO: (trembling) In truth, he is returning! . . .

FIORA: (remembering her vow)
Returning? . . . . .

ARCHIBALDO: Quick! Flaminio, go to meet him . . .

FLAMINIO: (urgently) My lord!

ARCHIBALDO: Go!

FLAMINIO: (runs off).

ARCHIBALDO: Fiora, where are you?

FIORA: Sire!

ARCHIBALDO: (trembling with anger and loyalty) Your lying voice
Once more offends me?!

FIORA: My lord! . . .

ARCHIBALDO: Who has been here with you? Who Betrayed us?

FIORA: No one!

ARCHIBALDO: Fiora!

FIORA: (accovacciandosi, come per isparire, sulla panchina, accosta al muro). Nessuno! Nessuno!

ARCHIBALDO: . . . Ho udito il passo suo . . .
(La ghermisce).

FIORA: (improvvisamente ergendosi come la serpe). Allora . . .
Allora . . . Quello ch'è fuggito era l'amore mio; era il mio bene . . .
E voi, tremendo vecchio, che mi siete adosso come la vendetta, come la morte, . . . non mi fate più terrore, ora che penso a lui!

ARCHIBALDO: Dimmi il suo nome!
Fa ch'io lo conosca . . .

FIORA: Ch'io parli con Manfredo, che ritorna . . .
La sua bontà!

ARCHIBALDO: (buttandola, con violenza, distesa sulla panchina)
No! No! Perdonerebbe,
e gli ho insegnato io questa virtù senza gioia!
(Ha preso la sua gola)
Il suo nome! Il nome suo!

FIORA: (è distesa sulla panca; il vecchio la ricopre con la sua vasta persona. Si sente la sua voce ferma). Ei non ha nome, poi ch'è più di tutto . . .

ARCHIBALDO: Traditrice . . .
La tua gola i oserra questo nome . . . La mano mia lo stringe . . .
Dillo! . . . Bada: Manfredo s'avvicina
e perdona . . . Non io, se tu non parli . . .
Dillo; dillo!

FIORA: (chiaramente) Si chiama: dolce morte! . . .

ARCHIBALDO: Ma se tu muori, io lo saprò ghermire l'amor tuo . . .

FIORA: (ergendosi improvvisamente). No! No! Allora, fammi vivere per difenderlo: non per accusarlo . . .

ARCHIBALDO: (stringendo la sua gola).
Ah! gola audace! Gola menzognera! . . .
(Il vecchio si stacca dal corpo di lei atterito.)
(Pausa orrenda)
Silenzio! Notte fonda!
La ferocia del sangue mio soltanto alita intorno
(Con terrore e disperazione.)
Ecco! . . . Giunge Manfredo! . . . S'avvicina . . .
E non sa . . . Teme, il figlio mio perduto . . .
Lo sento . . . giunge . . .

FIORA: (cowering down on the seat close to the wall, and if to disappear) No one! No one!

ARCHIBALDO: I heard his footsteps. (He seizes hold of her.)

FIORA: (suddenly rearing like a serpent) Well then . . . well then . . . He who has fled
Was my true lover — my beloved . . .
And you, you dread old man, who dog my Steps like vengeance, or like death,
You can no longer fright me,
Now that I think of him!

ARCHIBALDO: Tell me his name!
Tell me, that I may know
him . . .

FIORA: Nay, let me speak to Manfred, who's returning . . .
He is so kind!

ARCHIBALDO: (striking her violently, as she lies on the beach)
No! no! He would forgive you;
And I myself have trained him to this joyless Virtue!
(He seizes her by the throat.)
His name! his name!

FIORA: (lying full length on the seat; the old man covers her with his huge person. Her voice is heard, firm and steady) He has no name, since he is more than all . . .

ARCHIBALDO: Traitress . . .
Tis lurking in your throat
This name . . . My hand is clutching it . . .
Say it! . . . Listen: Manfred is nearing And will pardon . . . Not so I, if you don't speak . . .
Say it; say it!

FIORA: (clearly) His name is: welcome death!

ARCHIBALDO: But if you die, I shall know how to track him . . . Your love . . .

FIORA: (suddenly raising herself)
No! No! Then let me live
To defend him—not to accuse him.

ARCHIBALDO: (throttling her)
Ah! wicked throat! ah lying throat!
(The old man recoils from her body in horrow.)
(A gruesome pause.)
Silence around me! Night is falling!
The fury
Of my blood alone is breathing . . .
(In terror and despair)
And here . . . Manfred is coming
He nears . . .
And does not know . . . He fears, my poor unhappy son,
I feel it . . . he draws near . . . he runs to his de-

Corre alla sua gioia . . . (Ritorna presso il corpo di Fiora come a nasconderlo dietro la sua persona: così attende il figlio). (S'avvicina il tramonto. Nel cielo nubi rossastre.)	light . . . (He goes back near to Fiora's body as if to hide it behind his person—thus he awaits his son.) (The dawn approaches. Pale pink clouds in the sky.)
MANFREDO: (di dentro, a pena, con voce anelante). Fiora! Mia Fiora! Sei caduta, sei? . . . (Eccolo.) Padre! È caduta forse giù dal muro. mentre col velo suo m'accarezzava da lontano? Chè più non l'ho veduta . . .	MANFREDO: (from within, panting and calling with difficulty) Fiora! my Fiora! Have you fallen? (He appears.) Father! Has she perchance fallen from the wall. While she was waving her long veil to me From far? when I no longer saw her . . .
ARCHIBALDO: (disperatamente) La tua spada, perch'io me la conficchi nel peto e cada sopra lei ch'è morta! . . .	ARCHIBALDO: (desperately) Your sword, that I may plunge it In my breast and fall on her that's died!
MANFREDO: Morta! Morta!	MANFREDO: Dead! Dead!
ARCHIBALDO: Deh! Non avvicinarti! Io l'ho uccisa!	ARCHIBALDO: Alas! Do not come nearer! I have slain her!
MANFREDO: Che dici tu? Che dici? Morta ella?! Non più esistere?! Non più?! C'è cosi grande orrore che pareggi quest'orrore della mancanza di lei per il mondo? . . .	MANFREDO: What are you saying? What? . . . That she is dead? Exists No longer?! No longer?! Is there another horror In the world so great as this one, that she is gone?
ARCHIBALDO: Impura ell'era sì come la notte!	ARCHIBALDO: She was impure as she was fair!
MANFREDO: Impura?! Che di' tu? Come ragioni?	MANFREDO: Impure?! What are you saying? Are you raving?
ARCHIBALDO: Impura! Ti tradiva in casa tua, qui, qui, mentre la mano sua mendace agitava quel velo che le desti, la vampata d'amore le lambiva la veste e nella colpa più crudele la trancinava ancora: io l'ho sorpresa! . . .	ARCHIBALDO: Impure! Betraying you in your own house, Here, here, the while her treachirous hand Waved the long veil you gave her; The blaze of love enveloped her, And dragged her down into the cruellest guilt, I caught her in the act!
MANFREDO: (a sè stesso, profondamente) Di tanto amore era dunque capace quel suo cuore fanciullo: e non per me?	MANFREDO: (to himself, in profound thought.) Of such great love that child-heart Then was capable, and not for me?
ARCHIBALDO: Figlio, il tuo cuore è più freddo di lei! . . .	ARCHIBALDO: My son, the heart is colder still than she!
MANFREDO: (con disperazione) Ed ama tanto! Ed ama oltre la vita! Lascia ch'io pianga sopra il petto suo!	MANFREDO: (brokenly) And she could love so much!.. Even beyond her life!.. Then let me weep upon her breast! . . .
ARCHIBALDO: Tu puoi; tu puoi sposare la tua bocca a quella dell'ignoto predatore? . . .	ARCHIBALDO: You can't: you can't unite your lips To those of the unknown betrayer!
MANFREDO: (disperatamente) Ma dimmi, dunque! Dimmi tu: chi era?	MANFREDO: (brokenhearted) But tell me then! tell me, who was he?
ARCHIBALDO: (dolorosamente) Ahime ch'io sono cieco, e non l'ho scorio! Ma, illuminato dalla mia vendetta. io frugherò nell'ombra dove il male s'annida e lo vedrò e ferocemente. lo ghermirò per la tua gioia! . . .	ARCHIBALDO: (dolorously) Alack that I am blind and could not see him! But, lighted by my vengeance, Amoung the shadows will I grope; and where the traitor's Hiding will I see him, and fiercely will I seize him For your pleasure!
MANFREDO: (ripreso dal pensiero di Fiora, implorando) . . . Padre mio!	MANFREDO: (thinking of Fiora again, entreatingly) . . . My father!
ARCHIBALDO: No! Fermati. Vedresti alla sua gola la collana di morte delle mie dita paterne . . .	ARCHIBALDO: No! stay where you are! For you would see the collar of death, Around her neck, wrought by your father's fingers.
MANFREDO: (indietreggia).	MANFREDO: (draws back)
ARCHIBALDO: Additami la strada con il suono dei tuoi passi, che poi ti seguirò	ARCHIBALDO: Show me the way by the sound Of your footsteps and I will follow you
MANFREDO: (esce lentamente da sinistra, muto nell'immenso dolore).	MANFREDO: (goes out slowly on the left, mute in his intense grief)
ARCHIBALDO: (si carica sul petto la morta e s'avvia seguendo il figlio). (Cala la tela.)	ARCHIBALDO: (hoists the dead body across his chest and follows his son out). (The curtain falls.)

ATTO TERZO

ACT III

CORO: Morte in gelido stupore; vita in orrida paura giaceranno quel dì che il Creatore trarrà dal buio la sua creatura. Ogni affetto è cosa vana ogni luce ottenebrata . . . L'amore nascerà come fontana dal seno della terra liberata il dì che il Creatore darà la luce alla sua creatura. (Finita la muta preghiera, le donne rialzano le teste addolorate.)	CHOIR: In leaden stupor Death shall lie; And life shall shrink in fright, The day that the creator calls His creatures from the night. Desire is but an empty thing, All light must clouded be . . . Love like a fountain forth shall spring From out a world set free, The day that the Creator lifts His creatures to the light. (After a silent prayer the women raise their sorrowful heads.)
UNA GIOVINETTA: (si leva di mezzo al gruppo delle donne:) Venni piangendo in questa strana terra a rivederti, o nostra principessa! Ho trovato di pianto il mondo pieno . . . Mi vedi? Io torno per la terzavolta.	A YOUNG GIRL: (rises from amongst the group of women) I have come weeping to this foreign land To see you O our princess, once again! And I have found the whole world weeping . . . Do you see me? For the third time I'm returning.
UOMINI: (dal fondo con voci soavi). Fiora, Fiora, non dài tu la risposta? . . .	MEN: (from the back, with stubbued voices) Fiora, Fiora, will you not answer us?
UN GIOVANETTO: (levandosi di mezzo al gruppo). Ella par viva . . . Stanca, pare . . .	A YOUTH: (rising from the center of the group) She seems alive . . . she seems weary.
DONNE: Siamo tutte per la gran doglia persc e morte! . . .	WOMEN: We are distraught And almost dead with such great sorrow!
IL GIOVANETTO: Anche prima era un sogno ed era viva! . . .	THE YOUTH: At first it was a dream and she was living! . . .
UOMINI: Lamento senza fine! . . . Chi ci rende il giglio, che venuto è ormai l'autunno . . . La primavera fu uccisa tra' fiori! . . .	MEN: Oh, endless lamentation! Who will restore to us The lily, who came among us in the autumn . . . And in the spring was slain among the flowers! . . .

UNA VECCHIA: (che si sarà accostata a Fiora indagando) (Improvvisa e furibonda). Alzate, tutti, gli occhi in volto a lei . . .
Ella ha sul volto scritta la vendetta!

LE DONNE: (si accostano a Fiora, si fermano a due passi dalla bara e scrutano la morta). La vendetta? Si Si
Parla con gli occhi . . .
Ci vuol dire che il vecchio . . .
Il vecchio forse . . .
Il vecchio certo . . .
Prima che tornasse
Manfredo . . .
Era già morta al suo ritorno!
Nefanda impressa!
Orribile delitto!
Reliquia violata!
Cuore infranto!
Vendicata ella sia!
Si Fiore! Fiora . . . (Si riode improvvisamente il coro sacro dentro la chiesa. Le donue si inginocchiano ancora.)

UOMINI: Silenzio. Siamo in chiesa . . .

DONNE: Oriamo . . .
(Suon di campane.)

LA VECCHIA: E l'ora!

UOMINI: (alzandosi) Andiamo . . .

DONNE: Si fa notte . . .

TUTTI: Fiora, addio! . . .

LA VECCHIA: (che ha scorto Avito che s'avvicina lentamente dalla scala di sinistra: con sorpresa) Cè il principe d'Altura . . .

DONNE: Avito!

UOMINI: Andiamo . . . Andiamo. Si fa notte . . .
(escono salendo la scala che mette in chiesa).

AVITO: (rimane impietrato presso l'arco d'entrata e, come se nel mausoleo non fosse che una gran fiamma abbagliante, il suo capo è ripiegato, quasi nascosto. Resta immobile, fino a che tutti non sono usciti. Indi s'inoltra. Quando giunge presso la morta;) Fiora, Fiora . . . E silenzio: siamo soli . . .
E tu, parlami. Aspetto, Io non ti voglio guardare, prima che tu parli, amata, eletta, sempre viva, anima mia . . .
(Con improvviso pianto).
Ahimè, no, no! Tu sei morta! Tu sei spenta! . . .
Inganno! Ed ora toccherò le tue mani che paion morbide di vita;
saranno fredde; baccerò la tua:
bocca che sembra custodirmi il bacio

AN OLD WOMAN: (who has groped her way to Fiora's side) (suddenly and frenziedly)
Raise, all of you your eyes to Fiora's face . . .
For on her face "revenge" is written clearly!

THE WOMEN: (approach Fiora, stand two steps from the bier and examine the dead woman) Revenge?
Yes! . . . Yes! . . .
Her eyes are sparkling . . .
She wants to tell us that the old man . . .
Perhaps the old man . . .
Undoubtedly the old man . . .
Before Manfred returned . . .
That she was dead ever he returned . . .
Oh wicked deed!
Abhorrent crime!
Atrocious desperation!
Oh broken heart!
We will revenge her!
Yes! Fiora! Fiora! . . .
(Suddenly the sacred choir is heard again from the church. The woman grow calmer and kneel down once more.)

MEN: Silence. We are in church . . .

WOMAN: Let us pray . . .
(Tolling of bells.)

THE OLD WOMAN: It is the hour!

MEN: (rising) Let us go . . .

WOMEN: The night is falling.

ALL: Fiora, farewell!

THE OLD WOMAN: (has caught sight of Avito, who is approaching slowly from the steps on the left: with surprise) It is the Prince of Altura . . .

WOMEN: Avito!

MEN: Let us go . . . Let us go.
Night is falling . . .
(They go off, mounting the steps leading to the church.)

AVITO: (remains rigid near the vaulted entrance, and, as if the Mausoleum held nothing but a huge dazzling flame, his head remains bowed, almost hidden. Thus he stands motionless till all have gone out. Then he comes forward. When he has come close to the body:) Fiora, Fiora . . . Silence surrounds us: we are alone . . .
Speak to me, then. I'm waiting. I will not Look at you, beloved, before you speak to me,
My soul, my chosen, ever-living . . .
(with sudden tears)
Alas! No, no! you're dead! you are
No more! — . . .
Delusion! And now I'll touch your hands
Which seem to throb with life;

che tanto tanto sopra v'ho cercato:
anch'ella sarà fredda, irrigidita . . . (con altra voce:) Povera vita mia! Quanto travaglio, per non avere mai tutto per me quel ch'era mio! Si, mia! Dunque, si cara sempre, anche spenta! Un ultimo sospiro dell'anima tua bella è certo in te . . .
Fiora lo voglio! E sopra la tua bocca:
ed è la bocca tua che più rammenta . . . (Piangendo si getta follemente sulla bocca di lei. Dopo un breve istante si rialza.) Qual effluvio! Oh, miracolo! Mi perdo dunque con te?! Si; si: perch'io mi sento torcere il cuore! Ahimè!, che più di tutto il dolore è possente.
(Si leva improvviso e fa qualche passo verso l'uscita vacillando, come colpito.) Oh, giovinezza, sei attaccata forte alla tua roccia!
(Ode qualcuno avvicinarsi.)
Qualcuno giunge?! Ed io sarò scoperto!
(Ecco simile ad un'ombra Manfredo! Giunge da destra, si avvicina ad Avito che non può fuggire. Lentamente lo scorge.)
(Si avvicina il tramonto.)

MANFREDO: Eccoti alfine, si: t'abbiamo colto!
(Riconoscendolo.)
Sei tu, Avito? Tu? Tu, ch'ella adorava?

AVITO: Che vuoi tu? Ma non vedi ch'io non dosso quasi parlare? . . .

MANFREDO: E bene! . . . E bene! E bene!
Tu sei già morto! Sopra alla sua bocca. per poterti ghermire, fu disteo un veleno possente . . .

AVITO: (atterrito) . . . No! NO! NO!
Sulla sua bocca . . .

MANFREDO: Tu l'hai baciata: tu l'hai profanata;
e muori! . . .

AVITO: Questo facesti, tu
Tu potesti in questo modo macchiare la sua bocca sacra?

MANFREDO: Io, no!
Ma fu mio padre che volle sapere chi tu fossi! . . . Per me . . .
per la mia gioia! . . .

AVITO: E giusto: godi della morte mia . . .

They will be cold; and I will kiss your lips
Which seem to guard the kiss I sought
On them so often, ah so often:
And those, too, will be cold and stark . . .
(in different tones)
Oh my poor life! What agony,
No more to have and hold as mine,
All that was mine! Yes mine! For you are Ever dear, even dead! One last sigh
Of your fair soul is surely still within you . . .
Fiora, I want it! It lingers over your mouth;
And it is your mouth that recalls most clearly . . .
(Weeping, he throws himself beside her desperately and presses his lips on hers. After a brief instant he raises himself again.)
What curious exhalation! Oh miracle! Do I then Perish with you? Yes, yes: I feel my heart
Is being wrund! Ah me! How far more powerful Than all is pain! (He rises suddenly and takes a few tottering steps towards the exit, as if struck)
Oh youth,
How strongly are you fettered to your rock!
(He hears some one approach.)
Some one approaches?! I shall be discovered!
(Manfred appears like a shadow. He advances from the R. and approaches Avito, who is unable to escape. Slowly he perceives him.)
(Sunset approaches.)

MANFREDO: Yes, here you are at last then: we have caught you!
(recognizing him)
Is it you, Avito? You? You, whom she adored?

AVITO: What do you want? Can you not see that I can scarcely speak? . . .

MANFREDO: It is well . . . it is well! it is well!
You are already dead! Upon her lips,
To track and snare you, there was spread
A powerful poison . . .

AVITO: (terrorstruck) No! No! No!
Upon her lips . . .

MANFREDO: Yes, you have kissed her, have profaned her
And you shall die!

AVITO: And you have done this?
you could in this wise
Sully her sacred lips?

MANFREDO: No, not I!
It was my father, who would know
Who you were! For me . . . and for my pleasure!

AVITO: It is just: rejoice then in my death . . .

MANFREDO: (con disperazione) Ma dimmi quello, quello ch'io non so!
Dimmi: t'amava ella?

AVITO Come la vita
che le fu tolta . . . No . . . di più; . . . di più . . .
Ma se vuoi vendicarti, non tardare che presto io muoio; vendicati, uccidimi . . .
(Vacilla, è per cadere.)

MANFREDO: (le sorregge e lo aiuta fino in terra. Poi levando le braccia al cielo:) Dio mio! Dio mio! Perchè non posso odiare!
(Si rivolge verso il cadavere di Fiora)
Ma tu, ma tu non mi lasciare al mio squallore, alla mia fonda solidudine!
Fa ch'io torni con te, ch'io ti raggiunga! . . .
Fiora, sorreggi me, nell'ora estrema! . . .
Ch'io torni a te; ch'io torni a te per sempre! (Si getta su lei e la bacia anch'egli sulla bocca e quivi rimane sussultando per la morte che si spande nelle sue vene. Ma ecco Archibaldo a tastoni nella sua ombra perpetua.)

ARCHIBALDO: Un gemito! T'ho colto predatore!
(Si avvicina alla bara, cerca e sente il corpo di Manfredo. Subito lo abbranca) Predatore! . . . Il tuo cuore vo' sentire nella morte!

MANFREDO: (con voce morebonda) No, padre! Tu t'inganni!

ARCHIBALDO: (alzandosi improvviso con tutta la persoua) Ah! Manfredo! Manfredo! Anche tu, dunque, senza rimedio sei con me nell'ombra! . . .
(Cala la tela.).

MANFREDO: (in desperation) But tell me this, this that I do not know!
Tell me: did she love you?

AVITO: She loved me as the life
That they took from her . . . No, more, far more . . .
But if you thirst for vengeance, do not delay.
For I am nearly dying; avenge yourself and kill me . . .
(He totters and nearly falls.)

MANFREDO: (supports him and then lays him on the ground. Then, raising his arms to the sky:) My God! My God! Why can't I hate!
(He turns to Fiora's corpse.)
But you, you cannot leave me in my Misery, my utter loneliness!
Let me come back to you and join you once again!
Fiora, help me in my hour of need! . . .
Let me come back to you, come back to you, for ever!
(He throws himself on her and also kisses her on her lips and remains there, quivering, while death slowly creeps through his veins. Archibaldo now comes groping through his eternal darkness.)

ARCHIBALDO: A groan! Now I have caught you, thief!
(He approaches the bier, feels for and finds Manfredo's body. He catches hold of it quickly.)
Thief! I want to feel your heart
In death!

MANFREDO: (with dying voice) No Father! You're mistaken!

ARCHIBALDO: (suddenly rising to his full height) Ah! Manfredo! Manfredo! You also, then,
Are with me past salvation in the shadows!
(The curtain falls.)

L'Incoronazione di Poppea (1642)

MUSIC BY CLAUDIO MONTEVERDI ■ LIBRETTO BY FRANCESCO BUSENELLO

This three-act opera, set to a libretto by Giovanni Francesco Busenello, was premiered in Venice at the Teatro SS. Giovanni e Paolo in 1642. It opens with a prologue—the goddesses of Fortune and Virtue are arguing over which one of them has greater power over man. However, the goddess of Love claims to have the greatest power as evidenced by the story of Nerone and Poppea. The actual story begins as Ottone returns from war, looking forward to a reunion with his mistress, Poppea. He sees two imperial guards outside her home and realizes that the Emperor Nerone has become her lover in Ottone's absence. Nerone almost promises Poppea the throne, and Poppea rejoices in her success. Her nurse, Arnalta, warns her of the jealousy of the Empress Ottavia. Ottavia seeks vengeance from the gods against Nerone which the Senator Seneca urges her not to do. Seneca also tries to persuade Nerone to see reason, but Nerone angrily states that he will marry Poppea. Poppea is overjoyed and convinces Nerone that Seneca is a threat; Nerone sentences him to death. Ottone seeks comfort in Drusilla, a court lady. Seneca is executed; Ottavia convinces Ottone to kill Poppea, which Ottone attempts to do with Drusilla's willing assistance. Poppea is protected by Venere, goddess of Love, from being murdered; Drusilla is arrested for the crime. Despite her pleas of her innocence, she is about to be executed when Ottone confesses his guilt. The Emperor banishes him, and Drusilla shares his exile. Ottavia is also banished for instigating the plot, and Nerone and Poppea celebrate the triumph of their love.

■ ATTO I	■ ACT I
The Palace of Poppea Two guards are asleep at the gate	The Palace of Poppea Two guards are asleep at the gate
OTTONE: E pure io torno qui Qual linea al centro qual foco a sfera e qual ruscello al mare . . . E, se ben luce alcuna non appare, se ben io che sta il mio sol qui dentro . . . E pur io torno qui qual linea al centro. Caro tetto amoroso albergo di mia vita e del mio bene il passo l'cor ad inclinarti viene! Apri un balcon, Poppea! Con bel viso, in cui son le sorti mie, previeni, anima mia, precorri il die. Sorgi e disgombra homai da questo ciel caligini e tenebre con il beato aprir di tue palpebre! Sogni, portate a volo su l'ali vostre, in dolce fantasia questi sospir alla diletta mia! Ma che veggio, infelice? Non già fantasmi o pur notturne larve . . . Son questi i servi di Nerone. Ahi! Dunque a l'insensati versi io diffondo i lamenti necessito le pietre a deplorarmi, adoro questi marmi, amoreggio con lagrime un balcone e, in grembo di Poppea dorme Nerone! Ah! Perfida Poppea! Son queste le promesse ed i guiramenti che accesero il cor mio? Questa è la fede, o Dio! Io son quell'Ottone che ti seguì che ti bramò che ti servi! quell'Ottone che t'adorò che, per peigarti ed intenerirti il core di lagrime imperlò prieghi devoti gli spirti a te sacrificando in voti. M'assiscurasti al fine ch'abbracciate haverei nel tuo bel seno le mie beatitudini amorose; io di credula speme il seme sparsi ma l'aria e'l ciel a danni miei rivolto tempestò di ruine il mio raccolto.	OTTONE: (Poppea's husband) I am drawn here Like a line to the center, Like fire to the sphere, Or the river to the sea. And though there is No light, I know My sun is here. Like the line, I am drawn to the center, Beloved dwelling, Home of my life And my possessions, I come here With a trembling heart. Open your window, Poppea! And show your face, My fate is there Forerunner of light, My love, my life. Come forth and dispel The darkness, Open your eyes, and Fill the sky with light. O dreams, carry My tears and my sighs On your wings In sweet fantasy To my beloved. What do I see? Phantoms, or shadows Of the night? No! They are Nero's servants. O, so I lament In passionate verse That move the stones to pity And but address The balcony While Nero sleeps In happiness In Poppea's arms. O, treacherous Poppea! Where are the promises And the oath That fired my heart? This is fidelity? I am you Ottone who has followed you Loved and adored you. Ottone who worshipped you, Who, to win your heart prayed in tears with pious sacrifice and vows. You promised me That I would hold you In my arms In amorous bliss. I sowed the seeds of hope but the heavens destroyed my harvest of happiness.
PRIMO SOLDATO: Chi parla?	1ST SOLDIER: Who speaks?
SECONDO SOLDATO: Chi parla?	2ND SOLDIER: Who speaks?
PRIMO SOLDATO: Chi va lì?	1ST SOLDIER: Who goes there?
SECONDO SOLDATO: Camerata, che fai? Perchè parli sognando?	2ND SOLDIER: Friend, what are you doing? Why do you talk in your sleep?
PRIMO SOLDATO: Sorgono pur dell'alba i primi rai . . . Non ho dormito in questa notte mai.	1ST SOLDIER: I see the first rays of dawn . . . I haven't slept all night.
SECONDO SOLDATO: Su, risvegliati tosto, guardiamo il nostro posto.	2ND SOLDIER: Let us get up and keep watch.
PRIMO SOLDATO: Sia maledetto amor, Poppea e Roma, maledetto Nerone e la milizia, soddisfar io non posso la pigrizia un giorno un hora sola.	1ST SOLDIER: Cursed be love Poppea and Rome. Cursed Nero and the army. Not one hour a day Can be given to sloth.
SECONDO SOLDATO: La nostra imperatrice stilla se stessa in pianti e Neron per Poppea la vilipende. L'Armenia si ribella ed egli non ci pensa, la Pannonia da all'armi ed ei se ne ride. Impariamo da gl'occhi a non trattar da sciocchi.	2ND SOLDIER: Our empress weeps, Nero insults her Forsakes her For Poppea. Armenia is in revolt, Nero is unmoved. Pannonia is in arms, And Nero laughs. We must learn to see Without speaking.
PRIMO SOLDATO: Ma già s'imbianca l'alba e viene il dì.	1ST SOLDIER: It is getting light, Day is coming.
SECONDO SOLDATO: Tacciam! Nerone è qui. (Nero comes out of the palace.)	2ND SOLDIER: Silence! Nero is coming. (Nero comes out of the palace.)

POPPEA: Signor, deh, non partire. Sostien che queste braccia ti circondino il collo come le tue bellezze circondano il cor mio.	POPPEA: Do not go My Lord. Let my arms Enfold you again As your beauty Envelopes my heart.
NERONE: Poppea, lascia ch'io parta.	NERO: Let me go, Poppea.
POPPEA: Non partire signor! Appena spunta l'alba e tu, che sei l'incarnato mio sole, la mia palpabil luce e l'amoroso dì della mia vita vuoi si repente far da me partita? Deh! Non dir di partir che di voce si amara al solo accento, ahi, spirar quest'alma io sento.	POPPEA: Do not go! It is hardly dawn, And you who are My sun, The blinding light of day, Of my love's life, Must you think Of departing so soon? Do not speak of departure, My whole being changes As I hear This bitter word.
NERONE: La nobiltà de' nascimento túoi non permette che Roma sappia che siamo uniti infin' ch'Ottavia . . .	NERO: The nobility Of your birth Forbids that Rome Should know of our union Before Octavia . . .
POPPEA: Infin che . . .	POPPEA: Before . . .
NERONE: Infin che Ottavia non rimane esclusa col ripudio da me.	NERO: Before Octavia Is banished And repudiated.
POPPEA: Vanne, ben mio. (She throws herself into Nero's arms)	POPPEA: Then leave, my love. (She throws herself into Nero's arms)
NERONE: In un sospir che vien dal profondo del cor includo un bacio, o cara, ed un a Dio. Si rivedrem bien tosto idolo mio.	NERO: With a sigh From the depth of my heart I kiss you, my love And say farewell. My idol, we shall meet Soon again.
POPPEA: Signor, sempre me vedi anzi mai non mi vedi perchè s'è ver che nel tou cor io sia entra l'tuo sen celata non posso da tuoi lumi esser mirata . . . Tornerai? (Nero draws away gently)	POPPEA: My Lord, you see me always Though I am invisible For how can your eyes See me if I am hidden In your heart. You will return? (Nero draws away gently)
NERONE: Se ben io vò pur teco io stò	NERO: As I go, I promise you.
POPPEA: Tornerai?	POPPEA: You will return?
NERONE: Il cor dalle tue stelle mai non si disvelle.	NERO: My heart will never Forsake you.
POPPEA: Tornerai?	POPPEA: You will return?
NERONE: Io non posso da te viver disgiunto se non si smembra l'unità dal punto.	NERO: I cannot live Far from you Without your filling My whole being.
POPPEA: Tornerai?	POPPEA: You will return?
NERONE: Tornerò.	NERO: I shall.
POPPEA: Quando?	POPPEA: When?
NERONE: Ben tosto.	NERO: Soon.
POPPEA: Ben tosto . . . me l'prometti?	POPPEA: Soon, you promise?
NERONE: Te l'giuro.	NERO: I swear it.
POPPEA: E me l'osserverai?	POPPEA: Will you keep your word?
NERONE: E se a te non verrò tu a me verrai.	NERO: And if I do not come to you, You will come to me.
POPPEA: A dio, Nerone	POPPEA: Farewell, Nero.
NERONE: A Dio, Poppea (exit Nero)	NERO: Farewell, Poppea. (exit Nero)
POPPEA: Speranza, tu mi vai il cor accarezzando, speranza tu mi vai il genio lusingando e mi cirondi intanto di regio si ma imaginario manto. No! Non temo di noia alcuna; per me guerreggia Amor e la Fortuna!	POPPEA: Hope caresses My heart, Hope flatters My mind; I feel the royal mantle On my shoulders. I fear no hindrance, Love and Fortune Are fighting for me.
ARNALDA: (enters preoccupied) Ahi, figlia, voglia il cielo, che questi abbracciamenti non siano un giorno i precipizi tuoi.	ARNALTA: (enters preoccupied) O, my daughter Pray to the heavens That this love May not be Ill-fated.
POPPEA: No! Non temo di noia alcuna . . .	POPPEA: No! I fear nothing.
ARNALDA: L'imperatrice Ottavia ha penetrati di Neron gli amori onde temo e pavento ch'ogni giorno, ogni punto sia di tua vita il punto estremo.	ARNALTA: The Empress Octavia Has discovered Nero's love. I fear that each day May be your last.
POPPEA: Per me guerreggia Amor e la Fortuna!	POPPEA: Love and Fortune Are with me.
ARNALDA: Mira, Poppea, dove il prato è più ameno e dilettoso stassi il serpente ascoso; dei casi le vicende son funeste la calma è profezìa de le tempeste	ARNALTA: Reflect, Poppea, Where the grass is greenest There the serpent hides. Fate is often solemn And calm predicts the storm.
POPPEA: No! Non temo di noia alcuna . . . Per me guerriggia Amor e la Fortuna.	POPPEA: I fear No hindrance Love and Fortune Are fighting for me.
ARNALDA: Ben sei pazza se credi che ti possano far contenta e salva un garzon cieco ed una cieca calva.	ARNALTA: You are mad If you believe In a blind boy Or in a despoiled blind woman.
OTTAVIA: Disprezzata regina! del monarca romano! Afflitta moglie, che fô, ove son, che penso? O delle donne miserabil sesso. Se la natura e 'l cielo libere ci produce il matrimonio c'incatena serve. Se concepiamo l'huomo al nostro empio tiranno formiam le membra, allattiamo il carnefice crudele che ci scanna e ci svena e siam costrette per indegna sorte a noi medesme fabbricar la morte. Nerone empio, o Dio, marito bestemmiato, per sempre maledetto dai cordogli miei dove, hoimè, dove sei? In braccio di Poppea tu dimori felice e godi e intanto il fraquente cader de' pianti miei pur va quasi formando un diluvio di specchi in cui tu miri dentro alle tue delizie i miei martiri! Destin che stai lassù Giove, ascoltami tu. Se, per punir Nerone, Fulmini tu non hai d'impotenza t'accuso d'ingiustizia t'incolpo. Ahi! Trapasso trop'oltre e me ne pento . . . sopprimo e seppellisco in taciturne angoscie il mio tormento. (she sinks onto a bench)	OCTAVIA: (concealed by a cloak) Despised queen! Unhappy wife of Rome's sovereign. Where then am I? What shall I do? O, the misery Of women! Nature Makes us free But marriage Enslaves us. Our own sons Become our Masters; We suckle our Own executioneers. By giving birth, Such is our fate, We bring about Our own deaths. Nero, Ungodly And cursed husband, Source of all my misery, Where are you? In the arms of Poppea In happiness While I am Washed by the Tears of my Unhappiness. In the midst of your joy, You can see, As in a mirror, My heart breaking. O Destiny above, Jupiter harken: If you have no thunderbolts To punish Nero, I accuse you of weakness and injustice! Woe! I blaspheme. I repent it. I shall suppress My sufferings In silent anguish. (she sinks onto a bench)
SENECA: Ecco la sconsolata donna assunta all'imperio! per patir il servaggio! O gloriosa del mondo imperatrice, sovra i titoli eccelsi de l'insigni avi tuoi cospicua e grande la vanità del pianto de gl'occhi imperiali è ufficio indegno. Ringrazia la Fortuna che, con i colpi suoi t'accresce gli ornamenti. La cote non percossa non può mandar faville. Tu, dal destin colpita, produci a te medesma alti splendori di vigor, di	SENECA: There is the unhappy woman, Raised to authority To suffer slavery. O glorious empress Of the world, You are great By ancestry. The hopelessness Of your tears Is unworthy Of your regal eyes. Give thanks to Fortune Who, through your sufferings Increases your virtue. Steel which is not tempered Does not shine. Stricken by Destiny Your strength And your dignity Surpass even Your fortezza, glorie maggiori assai che la bellezza! La vaghezza del volto e i lineamenti che, in apparenza illustre, risplendon coloriti e delicati da pochi ladri di ci son rubati, ma la virtù costante il fato e 'l caso giammai non vede accaso.	beauty. The grace of your body, Your perfect features, The passing of time Can destroy them, But no misfortune Can touch Your constant virtue.

OTTAVIA: Tu mi vai promettendo balsamo dal veleno e gloria da tormenti. Scusami! Questi son, Seneca mio, vanità speziose, studiati artifizi, inutili rimedi agl' infelici! Neron tenta il ripudio de la persona mia per isposar Poppea. Si divertisca se divertir si può si indegno esempio . . . Tu per me prega il popol e 'l senato ch'io mi riduco a porger voti al tempio.	OCTAVIA: You offer balm For poison And glory for torment. Forgive me, Seneca, But this is specious And artificial, Useless remedies For the miserable. Nero wishes to reject me To marry Poppea. Were it amusing I would be amused By his disgraceful example. Speak for me To the senate and the people While I take refuge In the temple.
SENECA: Le porpore regali e le grandezze d'acute spine e triboli conteste, sotto forma, di veste sono martirio a principi infelici: le corone eminenti servono solo a indiademar tormenti. Delle regie grandezze si veggono le pompe e gli splendori ma stan sempre invisibili i dolori. (Octavia exits rapidly)	SENECA: The royal purple And its trappings Is woven with thorns And torments. Under the guise of dress It strikes torment To an unhappy prince. Crowns serve only To bruise heads. We see the pomp, The royal grandeur And the splendour, But the sufferings Remain concealed. (Octavia exits rapidly)
NERONE: (enters, followed by a group of courtiers and goes over to Seneca) Son risoluto alfine o Seneca, o maestro, di rimover Ottavia dal posto di consorte e di sposar Poppea.	NERO: (enters, followed by a group of courtiers and goes over to Seneca) I have decided, Seneca, To remove Octavia From her position as my wife And to install Poppea.
SENECA: Signor, nel fondo alla maggior dolcezza spesso giace nascosto il pentimento. Consiglier scellerato è il sentimento ch'odia le leggi a la ragion disprezza.	SENECA: My Lord, the greatest joy Often conceals Remorse. Any feeling That hates law And despises reason Is wicked.
NERONE: La legge è per chi serve e, se voglio, posso abolir l'antica e indur la nova. E partito l'imperio: è il ciel di Giove ma del mondo terren lo scettro è mio.	NERO: Laws are made for the user! If I wish, I can abolish an old one And proclaim a new law. The empire is divided: The heavens belong to Jupiter But the sceptre of earthly Power is mine.
SENECA: Sregolare voler Non è volere. Ma dirò con tua pace, egli è furore.	SENECA: An irrational wish Is no wish at all. With your permission I call this folly.
NERONE: La ragione è misura rigorosa per chi ubbidisce e non per chi comanda.	NERO: Reason is compulsory For those who obey, Not for him who commands.
SENECA: Anzi, l'irragionevole comando distrugge l'obbedienza.	SENECA: Unreasonable orders Destroy obedience.
NERONE: Lascia i discorsi. Io voglio a modo mio.	NERO: Enough speechmaking. I rule in my own way.
SENECA: Non irritar il popolo e 'l senato.	SENECA: Do not annoy The people and the senate.
NERONE: Del senato e del popolo non curo.	NERO: I take no account of The people and the senate.
SENECA: Cura almeno te stesso e la tua fama.	SENECA: At least, consider Yourself and your honor.
NERONE: Trarrò la lingua a chi vorrà biasmarmi.	NERO: I shall cut out the tongue Of anyone who finds fault.
SENECA: Più muti che farai Più parleranno.	SENECA: The more the mutes, The more will talk.
NERONE: Ottavia è infrigidita e infeconda.	NERO: Octavia is frigid and sterile.
SENECA: Chi ragione non ha cerca pretesti.	SENECA: When one is in the wrong One looks for excuses.
NERONE: Tu mi sforzi allo sdegno . . . Al tuo dispetto e del popolo in onta e del senato e d'Ottavia e del cielo e dell'abisso, siansi giuste od ingiuste le mie voglie hoggi Poppea sarà mia moglie. (exit Nero and courtiers)	NERO: You incite me to anger! In spite of you, The people The senate and Octavia, Of heaven and hell, Be my wishes just Or unjust, Today I shall marry Poppea. (exit Nero and courtiers)
SENECA: Il partito peggior sempre sovrasta quando la forza alla ragion contrasta.	SENECA: When force apposes reason, One may always expect Unworthy actions.

ATTO II

ACT II

POPPEA: Come dolci, come soavi riuscirono a te, la notte andata, di questa bocca i baci!	POPPEA: How fresh and sweet Were your kisses Last night.
NERONE: Più cari i piò mordaci.	NERO: Most sweet and passionate.
POPPEA: Di questo seno i pomi?	POPPEA: And my breasts?
NERONE: Mertan le mamme tue più dolci nomi.	NERO: They deserve The sweetest names.
POPPEA: Di queste braccia i dolci amplessi?	POPPEA: The caresses of my arms?
NERONE: Idolo mio, deh, in braccio ancor t'havessi. Poppea, respiro appena, miro le labbra tue e, mirando recupero con gli occhi quello spirto infiammato che nel baciarti, o cara, in te diffussi. Non è più in cielo il mio destino, ma sta dei labbri tuoi nel bel rubino.	NERO: Your lover Desires always, My idol . . . I can hardly breathe, I look at your lips And as I look, My soul becomes fire As before, when Loving you. My Destiny is not In heaven. But in the rubies Of your lips.
POPPEA: Signor, le tue parole son si dolci ch'io nell'anima mia le ridico à ma stessa e l'interno ridirle necessita al deliquio il cor amante. Come parole le odo, come baci io li godo . . . son de' tuoi cari detti i sensi si soavi e si vivaci che, non contenti di blandir l'undito mi passano al stampar sul cor i baci . . . Ma troppo attraversa ed impedisce di si regie promesse il fin sovrano. Seneca, il tuo maestro, quello stoico sagace, quel filosofo astuto che sempre tenta perturbar altrui . . . Che il tuo scettro dipenda da lui . . .	POPPEA: Your words Are so sweet That I repeat them Within my soul. The words I hear, The kisses I accept . . . My whole being Is caressed And you plant Your kisses only On my heart. But there is nevertheless Something in the way Which hinders the fulfillment Of your promises. Seneca, your teacher, The wise Stoic, The astute philosopher Who always attempts To worry others . . . Does your crown Depend on him?
NERONE: Che? Quel decrepito pazzo ha tanto ardire? Olà! Vada un di voi a Seneca volando e imponga a lui che in questa sera ei mora. Poppea, sta di buon coro, hoggi vedrai ciò che può far Amore.	NERO: What? On that old fool? Is he so rash? Here! Let one of you go To Seneca And order him to kill Himself this night. Poppea, be of good cheer. Today you will see What love can achieve.
OTTONE: Ad altri tocca in sorta ber il licor e a me guardar il vaso. aperte son le porte a Neron ed Otton fuori è rimaso.	OTTONE: It is the fortune of others To drink the wine, I am merely the cupbearer. The doors are open to Nero But I re-

POPPEA: Chi nasce sfortunato di se stesso si dolga e non d'altrui; del tuo penoso stato l'aspra cagion Otton, non son nè fui. Il destin getta i dadi e i punti attende; l'evento buono o reo da lui dipende.	POPPEA: Those born unfortunate Can only lament that They are not otherwise; I am not responsible for your pitiful condition. Fate throws the dice And waits for the score. Events depend On that.
OTTONE: La messe sospirata delle speranze mie de' miei desiri in altra mano è andata e non consente Amor ch'io più v'aspiri. Neron, felice, i dolci pomi tocca e il solo pianto a me bagna la bocca.	OTTONE: The harvest of my wishes, My hopes and my desires Has fallen into other hands, Amor did not consent. Happy Nero gathers the fruit And I am left With tears.
POPPEA: A te le calve tempia ad altri il crine la Fortuna diede S'altri i desiri adempie hebbe di te più fortunato il piede. La disventura tua non è mia colpa te solo dunque il tuo voler incolpa.	POPPEA: Fortune has made you bald To others she gave hair. Those who achieve Their desire Are more adept Than you. Your misfortune Is not my fault. I can do nothing Against your unhappiness.
OTTONE: Sperai che quel macigno, bella Poppea, che ti circonda il core fosse d'amor benigno intenerito a prò del mio dolore. Hor del tuo bianco sen la selce dura di mie morte speranze è sepoltura.	OTTONE: I had hoped, beautiful Poppea, That the stone Which surrounds your heart Could be softened By a worthy love. But the stone Of your heart Is the grave Of my dead hopes.
POPPEA: Deh, più non rinfacciarmi, porta il martellino in pace, cessa di più tentarmi. Al cenno imperial Poppea soggiace. Ammorza il fuoco homai, tempra gli sdegni, io lascio te per arrivar ai regni.	POPPEA: Trouble me no more And calm yourself, I accept and I bow Before the supreme will. You must now quench Your fire and your fury, I leave you To ascend a throne.
OTTONE: E così l'ambizione sopra ogni vitio tien la monarchia.	OTTONE: So ambition is The strongest vice In the kingdom.
POPPEA: Così la mia ragione. Incolpa i tuoi capricci Di pazzia.	POPPEA: It is my wish. Accuse yourself Of stupidity.
OTTONE: È questo del mio amore il guiderdone?	OTTONE: Such is the reward Of my sincere love?
POPPEA: Non più, non più, son di Nerone!	POPPEA: Enough, enough. I belong to Nero.
OTTONE: Otton, torna in te stesso. Il più imperfetto sesso non ha, per sua natura, altro d'human in se che la figura. Costei pensa al comando e, sè ci arriva, la mia vita è perduta. Ella temendo che risappia Nerone i miei passati amori ordirà insidie all'innocenza mia, indurrà colla forza un che m'accusi di lesa maestà, di fellonia . . . La calumnia, da grandi favorita, idstrugge agl'innocenti honor e vita. Vo' prevenir costei col ferro o col veleno. Non min vuò più nutrir il serpe in seno. A questo fine dunque arrivar dovea l'amor tuo, perfidissima Poppea!	OTTONE: Ottone, be calm The weaker sex Is inhuman, but for Their appearance. Poppea thinks of ruling And if she wins, My life is lost. And if she deceives Nero to conceal Her past, If by force she obliges A base villain to accuse me Of high treason, Slander, favored By the great Destroys the honor Of the innocent. I must destroy That cunning serpent With the sword Or with poison. To such and end Our love has come, Treacherous Poppea!
DRUSILLA: Pur sempre con Poppea o con la lingua o col pensier discorri?	DRUSILLA: (the former mistress of Ottone) Are your thoughts And your words Still concerned with Poppea?
OTTONE: A te di quanto son, bellissima donzella, hor fo libero don. Ad altri io mi ritolgo e solo tou sarò. Drusilla mia, perdona, o Dio, al passato scortese mio costume. Finchè io vivrò t'amerà sempre, o bella, quest'alma che ti fu cruda e rubella. Già pentito dell'errore antico, mi ti consacro homai servo ed amico.	OTTONE: I make a gift of Myself to you, O beauty. I shall withdraw from others And be yours alone. Drusilla, Forgive my Former negligence. I shall love you As long as I live. I repent my fickleness I am your servant And your friend.
DRUSILLA: Già l'oblio seppelli gli andati amori? E ver, Otton, che questo fido cor al suo s'uni?	DRUSILLA: The old passion Is therefore gone? Can my faithful heart Be united with yours?
OTTONE: È ver, Drusilla.	OTTONE: It is true.
DRUSILLA: Temo che tu mi dica la bugìa.	DRUSILLA: I fear that you lie.
OTTONE: No, no! Drusilla, no!	OTTONE: No, no Drusilla!
DRUSILLA: Otton, Otton, no so.	DRUSILLA: I don't know, Ottone.
OTTONE: Teco non poù mentir la fede mia.	OTTONE: My honor cannot lie.
DRUSILLA: M'ami?	DRUSILLA: Do you love me?
OTTONE: Ti bramo.	OTTONE: I desire you.
DRUSILLA: E come? In un momemto?	DRUSILLA: How so? In a moment?
OTTONE: Amore è foco e subito s'accende.	OTTONE: Love is a fierce Fire.
DRUSILLA: Lieta men vado, Otton resta felice. M'indirizzo a riveder l'imperatrice. (exit Drusilla)	DRUSILLA: I leave happy. Ottone, stay happy. I go to see the Empress. (exit Drusilla)
OTTONE: Le tempeste del cor tutto tranquilla. D'altri Otton non sarà che di Drusilla. Eppure, a mio dispetto, iniquo Amore, Drusilla ho in bocca e ho Poppea nel core. (The house of Seneca)	OTTONE: The storm in my heart Is calling itself. I shall belong to none But Drusilla. But still, though I speak Of Drusilla, I have Poppea in my heart. (The house of Seneca)
SENECA: Solitudine amata eremo della mente, romitaggio a pensieri, delitia all'intelletto, che contempla l'imagini celesti sotto le forme ignobili e terrene a te l'anima mia lieta sen viene. E lunge dalla corte ch'insolente e superbe fa della mia patienza anatomia qui tra le frondi e l'erbe m'assido in grembo della pace mia.	SENECA: Beloved solitude Sanctuary of mind And thought, Contemplation Which looks toward heaven, My soul longs for you. Here I am in peace Far from the pride And pomp of the court, Seated amoung the flowers And the grass.
LIBERTO: Il comando tiranno esclude ogni ragione e tratta solo o violenza o morte. Io devo riferirlo e nondimeno relatore innocente mi par esser partecipe del male che a riferire io vado. Seneca, assai m'increscede di trovarti mentre pur ti ricerco. Deh, non mi riguardar con occhio torvo se a te sarò d'infausto annunzio il corvo.	OFFICER: The tyrant's order Is quite without reason, It deals of violence And death. I must communicate the order, Yet nevertheless Though an innocent messenger, I feel an accomplice Of evil. Seneca, although I seek you, I am sorry To have found you. Do not look at me So sad, Though I am the bearer Of ill news.
SENECA: Rido mentre mi rechi un si bel dono.	SENECA: I laugh while you Bring me such a great gift.
LIBERTO: Nerone a te mi manda . . .	OFFICER: I am sent by Nero . . .
SENECA: Non più. Ho inteso e obbedisco hor, hora. Vanne homai; e se parli a Nerone avanti sera, ch'io son morte e sepolte gli dirai. Amici, è giunta l'hora di praticar in	SENECA: Enough. Death is merely A slight breath, Leaving the heart Where it stayed many years As a stranger Who found shelter To fly up to Olympus, The true abode Of happiness.
FAMIGLIARI: Non morir, Seneca.	ATTENDANTS: Do not die, Seneca.
UNO: Io per me morir non vò . . .	ONE ATTENDANT: I do not want to die . . .
TUTTI: Questa vita è dolce troppo. Questo ciel troppo è sereno. Ogni amar, ogni veleno finalmente è lieve intoppo. Se mi corco al sonno lieve mi risveglio in sul mattino ma un avel di marmo fino mai non dà quel che riceve.	ALL TOGETHER: Life is beautiful and sweet, The sky is clear, Every love and every poison In the end passes away. When I sleep in my bed, In the morning I awake; But the tomb in finest marble Brings an end to destiny.
SENECA: Itene tutti a prepararmi il bagno chè se la vita corre come rivo fluente, in un tepido rivo questo sangue innocente io vò che vada a imporporarmi del morir la strada.	SENECA: Go all, Prepare my bath. Life passes Like a river. May my innocent blood Redden the noble course Of death.
NERONE: Idolo mio, celebrarti io vorrei ma son minute fiaccole cadenti dirimpetto al tuo sole i detti miei. Son rubini amorosi i tuoi labbri preziosi, il mio core costante di saldo amante. Così le tue bellezze ed il mio core di care gemme ha fabbricato amore.	NERO: My idol, I wish to praise you, But my words Are as sparks Compared with your light. Your precious lips Are like rubies. Love has made Priceless jewels Of your heart And your beauty.
OTTONE: I miei subiti sdegni, la politica mia già poco d'hora m'indussero a pensare d'uccidere Poppea. O mente maledetta, come sei tu mortale ond'io non possa svenarti e castigarti? Sprezzami quanto sai, odiami quanto puoi voglio esser Clizia al sol degli occhi tuoi. Amerò senza speme al dispetto del fato fia mia delizia l'amarti disperato. Blandirò i miei tormenti nati del tuo bel volto, sarò dannato sì, ma in paradiso.	OTTONE: A short while ago My violent rage Had made me want To kill Poppea. O cursed mind Of mortals, How can I kill And punish you? Despise me as you will, Hate me as you can, I wish to be a fury In your eyes. I shall love without hope, Regardless of fate It will be my pleasure To love hopelessly. Finally I will calm The torments that you caused, I shall be damned But be in paradise.
OTTAVIA: Tu che dagli avi miei avesti la grandezze se memoria conservi dei benefici avuti hor dammi aita.	OCTAVIA: (taking him unawares) If you recall My great ancestors, Help me now.
OTTONE: Maestà che prega è destin che necessita, son pronto ad obbedirti, o regina, quando anche bisognasse sacrificare a te la mia ruina.	OTTONE: When a queen begs, Destiny commands. I am ready to obey, Even if it causes My ruin.
OTTAVIA: Voglio che la tua spada scriva gli obblighi miei col sangue di Poppea. Vuò che l'uccida.	OCTAVIA: I want your sword To write my orders In Poppea's blood. I want you to kill her.
OTTONE: Che uccida chi?	OTTONE: To kill . . . ?
OTTAVAIA: Poppea!	OCTAVIA: Poppea!
OTTONE: Che uccida Poppea? O ciel, o Dei! In questro punto estremo ritoglietemi i giorni e i spirti miei.	OTTONE: That I kill Poppea? O, gods in heaven, Take my life This instant.
OTTAVIA: Se tu non m'ubbidisci, t'accuserò a Nerone ch'abbi voluto usarmi violenza inhoneste e farò che ti si stancheranno intorno il tormento e la morte in questo giorno.	OCTAVIA: If you do not obey me, I shall accuse you of violating me And you will die This very day.
OTTONE: Ad obbedirti, o imperatrice, io vado. O ciel, etc.	OTTONE: Empress, I obey. Ye gods, Take my life, etc.
DRUSILLA: Felice cuor mio festeggiami in seno. Dopo i nembi e l'horror godrò il sereno. Hoggi spero che Ottone mi riconfermi il suo primiero amore.	DRUSILLA: Be happy, My heart. After so much misery, I shall be happy. I hope that today Ottone will return To his first love.
OTTONE: Io non so dov'io vada; il palpitar del core il moto del piè non van del pari. L'aria che mentra in seno quando io respiro trova il mio cor si afflitto ch'ella si cangia in subitaneo pianto. E così mentre io peno l'aria per compassion mi piange in seno.	OTTONE: My heart throbs, my feet do not obey. I know not where to hide. The very air I breathe, As it enters my body Is transformed Into tears.
DRUSILLA: E dove, signor mio?	DRUSILLA: How so?
OTTONE: Te sola cerco.	OTTONE: I seek only you.
DRUSILLA: Eccomi ai tuoi piaceri.	DRUSILLA: I am devoted to you.
OTTONE: Io vò fidarti un secreto gravissimo. Prometti e silenzio e concorso.	OTTONE: I will tell you My secret. Promise silence And you help.
DRUSILLA: Ciò che del sangue mio più che dell-oro può giovarti e servirti è già tuo più che mio. Palesami il secreto che del silenzio mio ti do l'anima in pegno e la mia fede.	DRUSILLA: Whatever I can do To please and To serve you, Is all yours. Tell me your secret And I shall pledge My silence.
OTTONE: Non esser più gelosa di Poppea.	OTTONE: Be jealous of Poppea No more.
DRUSILLA: Felice cor mio, festeggiami in seno.	DRUSILLA: My heart is Joyful.
OTTONE: Senti! Io devo hor, hora per terribile comando immergerli nel sen questo mio brando. Per coprir me stesso in misfatto si grande io vorrei le tue vesti.	OTTONE: Listen! I have been ordered To plunge my sword Into her heart. To conceal myself I want your clothes.
DRUSILLA: E le vesti e le vene io ti darò.	DRUSILLA: I will give you the clothes And my blood as well.
OTTONE: Se occultarmi potrò viveremo più uniti sempre in dilettosi amori, se morir converrammi ne l'idiomo d'un pietoso pianto dammi essequie o Drusilla, se dovrò fuggitivo scampar l'ire mortal di chi comanda socorri a mie fortune.	OTTONE: If I could hide, We would live together Happily forever. And if I die, You will weep Over me. If I have to flee From the tyrant's wrath, Look after my Possessions.
DRUSILLA: Andiam pur ch'io mi spoglio e di mia man travestirti io voglio. Ma vò saper da te più addentro e a fondo di così horrenda impresa la cagione.	DRUSILLA: I shall take off my gown And disguise you With my own hands. But I want to know The precise reason For your decision.
OTTONE: Andiam homai che con alto stupore il tutto udrai.	OTTONE: Let us go. You shall hear all. It will surprise you.
POPPEA: Hor che Seneca è morto Amor, ricorro a te. Guida mia speme in porto e fammi sposa al mio re.	POPPEA: Now that Seneca is dead I pray you, Love, That I may marry The Emperor.
ARNALTA: Pur sempre sulle nozze canzoneggiando vai.	ARNALDA: You think always Still of marriage.

POPPEA: Ad altro, Arnalta mia, non penso mai.
Perchè il sonno m'alletti a chiuder gli occhi alla quiete in grembo, qui nel giardin, Arnalta, fammi apprestar del riposare il modo ch'alla fresc'aria addormentarmi godo.

ARNALTA: Adagiati, Poppea, acquetati, anima mia, sarai ben custodita.
Oblivion soave, i dolci sentimenti in te, figlia, addormenti.
Posatevi, occhi ladri aperti, deh, che fate se, chiusi, ancor rubate?
Poppea, rimanti in pace, luci care e gradite, dormite, homai, dormite.
Amanti vagheggiate il miracol nuovo.
E luminoso il dì si come suole, e pur vedete addormentato il sole.

LOVE: Dorme l'incauta.
Ella non sa ch'hor verrà il punto micidiale.
Così l'umanità vive all'oscuro e quando ha chiusi gli occhi crede essersi dal mal posta in sicuro.
O sciocchi, o frali sensi mortali; mentre cadete in sonnacchioso oblio sul vostro sonno è vigilante Dio.
Siete rimasi gioco de casi oggetti al rischio e del periglio prede se Amor, genio del mondo, non provedde.
Dormi, Poppea, terrena dea.
Ti salverà dall'armi altrui rubelle Amor che move il sol a l'altre stelle.
Già s'avvicina la tua ruina ma non ti nuocerà strano accidente ch'Amor picciolo è, sì, ma omnipotente.

OTTONE: Eccomi trasformato non d'Ottone in Drusilla ma d'huomo in serpe il cui veleno è rabbia.
Non vide il mondo e non vedrà simile . . .
Ma che veggio, infelice?
Tu dormi, anima mia, chiudesti gli occhi per non aprirli più.
Care pupille al sonno in seno acciò che non vediate questi prodigi strani; la vostra morte uscir dalle mie mani.
Ma che tardo?
Costei m'aborre e sprezza e ancor io l'amo?
Ho promesso ad Ottavia e se mi pente accelero a miei dì funesto il fine.
Esca di corte chi vuol esser pio.
Colui chi ad'altra guarda che all'interesse suo merta d'esser cieco
Il fatto resta occulto la macchiata coscienza si lava con l'oblio.
Poppea, io t'uccido.
Amor, rispetto, a Dio.

AMOR: Forsennato!
Inimico del mio nume.
Tanto dunque si presume?
Fulminarti io dovrei, ma non merti di morire per la mano degli dei.

POPPEA: I think of nothing else.
Bring my bed Into this garden.
I must relax in sleep And I like To fall asleep In the open air.

ARNALDA: Lie down, Poppea,
And rest.
You will be well Protected.
Rest your enchanting eyes. Why are they still open If even closed they enchant?
Poppea, rest in peace.
Dear child, rest quietly, Sleep now, sleep. Behold the miracle!
The day is bright As it should be And yet the sun Is asleep.

LOVE: Regardless, she sleeps, Unaware that soon The fatal moment Is coming.
Thus is humanity In the dark, and by Closing their eyes They think themselves Safe.
O weak mortals!
While you sink Into obliviion A god watches Over your sleep.
You are in the Clutches of chance, The prey of danger, If Love, the spirit Of the world, Does not protect you.
Sleep, Poppea Earthly Goddess.
Love will save you From the treacherous attack, Love that moves the sun And the stars.
Your ruin approaches, But will not harm you.
Love is small But all powerful .

OTTONE: I am transformed, Not from Ottone into Drusilla But from a human being Into a serpent full of venom.
The world has never seen Such crime.
But what do I see?
You are asleep, beloved, Your eyes are closed, Closed forever.
You will never see The death-bringing Hand.
But why do I wait?
She despise me, And I still love her?
I have promised Octavia And If I stay, I seal my fate.
Anyone who wishes to remain Honest should leave the court.
Anyone who considers other Than his own interest Ought to be blind.
The crime remains secret, A stained conscience Is washed by time's passing.
Poppea, I kill you!
Farewell, love.

AMOR: Miserable creature!
Enemy of my realm.
I should kill you But you do not deserve To die by the hand Of a god.
You may go free From my sharp ar-

Libero va da questi strali acuti . . .
Non tolgo ai manigoldi i lor tributi.

POPPEA: Drusilla in questro modo con l'armi ignude in mano mentre nel giardin dorma soletta?

ARNALTA: Accorete, o servi, o damigelle!
Inseguite Drusilla.
Dalli, dalli!
Tanto mostro a ferir non sia chi falli.

AMOR: Ho difeso Poppea.
Vò farla imperatrice.

■ ATTO III

DRUSILLA: O felice Drusilla!
O che sper'io?
Corre adesso per me l'hora fatale.
Perirà la mia rivale e Otton finalmente sarà mio.
Se le mie vesti havran servito a ben coprirlo, con vostra pace, o dei, adorar io vorrò gli arnesi miei.

ARNALTA: Ecco la scellerata che, pensando occultarsi, di vesti s'è mutata.

LITTORE: Fermati!
Morta sei!

DRUSILLA: Qual peccato mi conduce a morte?

LITTORE: Ancor t'infingi sanguinaria indegna?
A Poppea dormiente macchinasti la morte.

DRUSILLA: Ahi, caro amico, sorte, sorte, Ahi, mie vesti innocenti.
Di me dolermi deggio e non d'altrui.
Credula troppo e troppo incauta fui.

ARNALTA: Signor, ecco la rea che trafigger tentò la matrona Poppea.
Dormiva l'innocente nel suo proprio giardino, sopragiunse costei col ferro ignudo; se non si risvegliava la tua devota ancella sopra di lei scendava il colpo crudo.

NERONE: Onde tanto ardimento?
E chi t'indusse, rubella, al tradimento?

DRUSILLA: Innocente son io, Lo sa la mia coscienza e lo sa Dio.

NERONE: No!
Confessa homai s'attendesti per odio o se ti spinse autoritade o l'oro al gran misfatto.
Flagelli, funi e fuochi cavino da costei il mandante e i correi.
Prima ch'aspri tormenti ti facciano sentir il mio disdegno or persuadi all'ostinato ingegno di confessar gli orditi tradimenti.

DRUSILLA: Signor, io fui la rea che uccider volli l'innocente Poppea.

rows . . .
You will be killed By unclean hands.

POPPEA: Drusilla, in such guise, Sword in hand, While I sleep alone In the garden?

ARNALDA: Run, servants, Ladies, run!
Follow Drusilla.
There, there!
Arrest the terrible monster Without fail.

AMOR: I have saved Poppea.
I shall make her empress.

■ ACT III

DRUSILLA: Fortunate Drusilla!
How I hope.
Now is the fatal hour When my rival dies And Ottone will be mine.
If my garments Have helped him In his undertaking I shall worship them.

ARNALDA: Here is the villain.
She changed her clothes To flee and hide.

OFFICER: Stay! you shall die!

DRUSILLA: For what crime Am I to die?

OFFICER: Miserable girl, You dare pretend?
You tried to kill Poppea.

DRUSILLA: O dear friend!
I have been given away by my clothes.
I must blame nobody But myself.
I lack cunning.

ARNALDA: There is the criminal Who tried to kill The innocent Poppea.
She was sleeping In the garden, When this woman Suddenly entered.
If she had not a awoken She would have died By this sword.

NERO: Whence this courage?
Who has driven you To such treason?

DRUSILLA: I am innocent, As God and my Conscience know.

NERO: No! Confess If you thought of the crime Either by hate or for money Or were driven by some power.
Extract from her with Whips, ropes and fire The name of her accomplice.
Confess before You feel my rage By torture.
Do not be stubborn.

DRUSILLA: I am the criminal Who wished to kill Innocent Poppea.

NERONE: Conducete costei alcarnefice homai. Fate ch'ei ritrovi con una morte a tempo qualche lunga amarissima agonia, ch'in difficile forme insprisca la morte a questa rea.	NERO: Take her to the scaffold. Discover a refined way Of killing her, To make the criminal's Death more terrible.
DRUSILLA: Adorato mio bene! Amami anche sepolta e sul sepolcro mio mandino gli occhi tuoi una sol volta, do le fonti del core, lagrime die pietà se non d'amore. Ch'io vada, fida amica e vera amante, fra i manigoldi irati a coprir col mio sangue i tuoi peccati.	DRUSILLA: O my beloved! Love me still When I am dead. May your tears Fall on my grave If only once, Tears of pity If not remorse. As your true and faithful love I will cover your sins With my blood, at the hands Of the torturers.
NERONE: Che si tarda, o ministri? Con una atroce fine provi costei mille morti hoggimai, mille ruine.	NERO: What are you waiting for? Take her to her death, To ruin and a thousand Deaths.
OTTONE: No, no! Questra sentenza cada sopre di me che ne son degno.	OTTONE: No Thus fury fall on me Who deserves it.
DRUSILLA: Io fui la rea ch' uccider volli l'innocente Poppea.	DRUSILLA: I am guilty. I wanted to kill Poppea.
OTTONE: Innocente è costei Io, con le vesti di Drusilla andai, per ordine d'Ottavia l'imperatrice, ad attentar la morte di Poppea. Dammi, o signor, con la tua man la morte.	OTTONE: She is innocent. It is I, with these clothes, Who went to kill Poppea At the order of the Empress Octavia. Sire, Kill me with your own hands.
DRUSILLA: Io fui la rea.	DRUSILLA: I am guilty.
OTTONE: Giove, Nemesi, Astrea fulminate il mio capo chè per guista vendetta il patibolo a me s'aspetta.	OTTONE: Jupiter, Nemesi, Astra, Strike me down. Because for just vengeance The gallows await me.
DRUSILLA: A me.	DRUSILLA: No, I.
OTTONE: A me.	OTTONE: No, I.
DRUSILLA: A me s'aspetta.	DRUSILLA: They wait for me.
OTTONE: Dammi, o signor, con la tuo man la morte.	OTTONE: Kill me, my lord, With your own hands.
NERONE: Vivi! Ma va ne' più remoti deserti di titoli spogliato e di fortuna e serva a te mendico e derelitto di flagella e spelonca il tuo delitto. (To Drusilla) E tu che ardisti tanto, o nobile matrona, per ricoprir costui d'apportar salutifere bugie, vivi alla fama della mia clemenza, vivi alla gloria della tua fortezza, e sia del sesso tuo nel secol nostro la tua costanza un adorabil mostro.	NERO: Then live! But hence To distant deserts, Shorn of your titles. A lonely beggar, that is Your punishment. (to Drusilla) And you, noble matron, Who dared so much To shield and free him, Live also, in memory Of my clemency And may your loyalty Be proof of the nobility Of the women Of this century
DRUSILLA: In esilio con lui, deh, signor, consenti ch'io tragga i giorni ridenti.	DRUSILLA: Allow me to live With him in exile, Allow me those happy days.
NERONE: Vanne, come ti piace.	NERO: Go then, as you wish.
DRUSILLA: Ch'io viva o mora teco; altro non voglio. Dono alla mia fortuna tutto ciò che mi diede pur che tu riconosca in cor di donna una costante fede.	DRUSILLA: With you to live or die Is all I ask for. I give back to Fortune All she has given me. If only you admit The constancy of my heart.
NERONE: Delibero e rosolvo con editto solenne il ripudio d'Ottavia e, con perpetuo esilio de Roma io la proscrivo. Mandisi Ottavia al più vincino lido, le si appresti in un momento qualche spalmato legno e sia commessa al bersaglio dei venti. Convengo giustamente risentirmi. Volate ad ubbidirmi. (The Palace of Nero)	NERO: I decree and resolve, With solemn edict That Octavia is repudiated And banished forever From Rome. May she be taken To the nearest shore, A boat be prepared And set adrift At the mercy of the winds. My sentiments are justified, Hasten to obey me. (The Palace of Nero)
POPPEA: Signor, hoggi rinasco ad primi fiori di questa nova vita. Voglio che sian sospiri che ti faccian sicuro che, rinata, per te languisco e moro e, vivendo e morendo ogn'hor t'adoro.	POPPEA: My lord, today I am reborn With the first flowers Of this new life. I want my sighs To assure you that being Reborn for you, I languish and die and That living and dying I adore you.
NERONE: Hoggi, come promisi, mia sposa tu sarai.	NERO: As I promised, Today you will be my wife.
POPPEA: Si caro dì veder non spervo mai. giunto è pur l'hora che del mio ben godrò.	POPPEA: I did not expect To see so great a day. Idol of my heart, The moment is come When I shall really live.
NERONE: Non più s'interporrà noia o dimora.	NERO: We must wait no longer.
A DUE: Cor nel petto non ho. me l'rubasti Dal cor me lo rapi de'tuoi begli occhi un lucido sereno. Per te, ben mio, non ho più core in seno. Stringimi fra le braccia innamorate, Non interotte havrai l'hore beate.	BOTH: I have no more heart In my breast. You have stolen it. The serenity of your Eyes has taken it From me. Take me in your arms My love, The time of happiness Will never end.
POPPEA: Se ben in te perduta, in te mi troverò.	POPPEA: I shall always be lost In love for you.
NERONE: E tornerò riperdermi, ben mio, che sempre in te perduto mi troverò.	NERO: And I shall always, O my dear, be lost In love for you.
OTTAVIA: A Dio, Roma! A Dio, partia! Innocente, da voi partir conviene, Vado a patir l'esilio, in pianti amari. navigo disperata i sordi mari. L'aria che, d'hora in hora, riceverà i miei fiati, li porterà per nome del cor mio a veder, a baciar le pattie mura ed iio starò solinga alternando le mosse ai pianti, ai passi insegnando pietade ai freddi sassi. Denigrate hoggimai, perverse genti allontanandomi dagli amati lidi. Ahi! Sacrilego duol, tu m'interdici il pianto quando lascio la partia. Ne stillar una lagrime poss'io mentre dico a parenti a Roma A Dio!	OCTAVIA: Farewell, Rome! Farewell, my country! Innocent I take my leave In bitter tears, To wander hopelessly On the boundless Sea. The wind which every hour Will catch my sighs, Will carry them back To the walls of my city. And I shall be alone In sadness and wandering Even the stones Will take pity on me. Wretched creatures, To drive me From my own Beloved land. Sacrilegious grief Prevents my weeping. I cannot shed a single tear In taking leave of my family And of Rome. O Rome, farewell!
NERONE: Ascendi, mia diletta alla suprema altezza, all'apice sublime! Blandita dalle glorie ch'ambiscono servirti come ancelle, acclamata dal mondo e dalle stelle. Siano del tuo trionfo tra i più cari trofei, adorata Poppea, gli affetti miei.	NERO: (ascending the throne) Ascend, my love, To the greatest height. Protected by glory, Eager to serve you And acclaimed by the earth And the stars. May my love be The dearest prize Of your triumph, Beloved poppea.
POPPEA: Il mio genio confuso al non usato lume quasi perde il costume, signor, di ringraziarti. Su quest'eccelse cime ove mi collocasti per venerarti appieno io non ho cor che basti. Doveva la natura al soprapiù degli eccessivi affetti un core a parte fabbricar ne' petti.	POPPEA: My mind, confused By the brilliance of the light Knows not how to thank you. At the height To which you have raised me I am too abashed To express my devotion. Nature should have Given us a special heart To answer so great a joy.

NERONE: Per capirti negli occhi Il sol s'impiccioli per albergarti in seno l'alba dal ciel partì e, per farti sovrana a donne e dee, Giove nel tuo bel volto stillò le stelle e consumò l'dee.

POPPEA: Dà licenza a mio spirto ch'esca dall'amoroso labirinto di tanta lodi e tante e che s'umilii a te come conviene, mio re, mio sposo, mio signor, mio beno.

NERONE: Ecco vengono i consoli e tribuni a riverirti, o cara.
Nel solo rimirarti, il popolo e 'l senato homai comincia a divenir beato.

CONSOLI E TRIBUNI: Te sovrana augusta, con il consenso universal di Roma indiademiam la chioma.
A te l'Asia e l'Africa s'atterrra,

NERO: The sun has left the sky To enter into your eyes, The dawn has left heaven To whiten your breasts. And to make you queen Of women and goddesses, Jupiter has awarded you The ideal of beauty.

POPPEA: Let me emerge From the labyrinth Of your praise, To prostrate myself At your feet, My king, my spouse.

NERO: Here come the consuls And the tribunes To praise you.
The people and the senate Consider themselves blessed Just by seeing you.

CONSULS AND TRIBUNES: August sovereign, With the universal Consent of Rome We crown you. Asia and Africa Bow before you.

A te l'Europa e il mar che cinge e serra quest'imperio felice hora consacra e dona questa del mondo imperial corona.

POPPEA: Pur ti miro!

NERONE: Pur ti godo!

POPPEA: Pur ti stringo!

NERONE: Pur t'annodo!

POPPEA: Più non peno!

NERONE: Più non moro!

POPPEA: O mia vita!

NERONE: O mio tesoro!

POPPEA: Io son tua!

NERONE: Tuo son io!

A DUE: O mia vita, mio tesoro!

FINE

Europe and the sea That surrounds This happy empire Award you The imperial crown.

POPPEA: I gaze at you.

NERO: I rejoice in you.

POPPEA: I hold you.

NERO: I bind myself to you.

POPPEA: No more suffering.

NERO: No more death.

POPPEA: My love.

NERO: My treasure.

POPPEA: I am yours.

NERO: And I yours.

TOGETHER: O life, o love.

Le Nozze di Figaro (1786)

The Marriage of Figaro

MUSIC BY WOLFGANG AMADEUS MOZART ■ LIBRETTO BY LORENZO DA PONTE

Le Nozze di Figaro, set to a libretto by Lorenzo Dan Ponte, is based on the second play in a trilogy by Pierre Augustin Caron de Beaumarchais. Mozart himself conducted the premiere of this masterpiece of opera buffo on May 1, 1786, at the Burgtheatre in Vienna. The opera, in four acts, opens on Figaro (formerly a barber — see II Barbiere di Siviglia) and his bride-to-be Susanna, both servants of Count Almaviva and his wife Rosina, who are measuring the room the Count has given them. The Count flirts with Susanna; meanwhile, Dr. Bartolo, who bears a grudge against Figaro, discovers that Figaro has promised to marry the elderly Marcellina in repayment for a debt. Cherubino, an adolescent page (performed by a soprano or mezzo-soprano) is in love with the Countess, who laments the loss of her husband's love. Susanna and the Countess lament together, and Figaro lets them in on his plot to help the Countess win back the Count's affections—by letting the Count think that Cherubino is the Countess' lover! Figaro and Susanna are preparing to get married when, amongst other twists and turns in this marvelous plot, Marcellina and her lawyer enter and demand that Figaro marry her! Later it is discovered that Figaro, who has a particular birthmark, is Marcellina's and Bartolo's long-lost son. The never-ending intrigue continues throughout this beautiful opera, which concludes with the Countess forgiving the Count (and all of the couples back together with their rightful partners).

■ ATTO I	■ ACT I
SCENA I	SCENE I
Oumera quasi smobiliata con un seggiolone nel mezzo.)	A half-furnished room, with a large arm-chair in the middle.
Figaro sta misurando con una canna il pavimento per lungo e per largo. Susanna si aggiusta davanti uno specchio un cappellino in testa.	(Figaro measuring the length and breadth of the floor with a rod; Susanna is putting on a little hat before a glass.)
FIG: Cinque—dieci-venti—trenta— Trantasei—quarantatre—	FIG: Five—ten—twenty—thirty— Thirty-six, and forty-three—
SUS: Ora sì ch' io son contenta, Sembra fatto inver per me.	SUS: Now, indeed, I feel quite happy, It seems truly made for me
FIG: Cinque—dieci—&c. (come sopra.)	FIG: Five—ten, etc. (as above.)
SUS: Guarda un po', mio caro Figaro, Guarda adesso il mio cappello.	SUS: Just look, my dearest Figaro, Look at this new hat of mine.
FIG: Sì, mio core, ora è più bello, Sembra fatto inver per te.	FIG: Yes, my love, it is now finer: It seems truly made for you.
FIG & SUS: Ah! il mattino alle nozze vicino, Quanto è dole al mio, tuo tenero sposo Questo bel cappellino vezzoso, Che Suanna ella stessa si fe!	FIG & SUS: Ah! how nice on the morn of the marriage, Ah! how nice for (my/your) tender sweet love This charming and pretty little hat, Which was made by Susanna herself.
SUS: Cosa stai misurando, Caro il mi mio Figaretto?	SUS: My dear little Figaro, what are you measuring?
FIG: Io guardo se quel lettò, Che ci destina il Conte, Farà buona figura in questo loco,	FIG: I am looking whether the bed the Count intends for us will look well here.
SUS: In questa stanza!	SUS: In this room?
FIG: Certo! a noi la cede Generoso il padrone.	FIG: Certainly! our master generously gives it up to us.
SUS: Io per me te la dono.	SUS: I don't care for it.
FIG: Io non capisco Perchè tanto ti spiace La più comoda stanza del palazzo.	FIG: I do not understand why you dislike the most convenient room in the castle.
SUS: Perch' io son la Susanna, e tu sei pazzo.	SUS: Because I am Susanna, and you are mad.
FIG: Grazie!—non tanti elogi! Guarda un poco Se potria meglio stare in altro loco. Se a caso Madama La notte ti chiama: Din—din—in due passi Da quella quoi gir. Vien poi l' occasione, Che vuolmi il padrone: Don—don—in tre alti Io vado a servir.	FIG: Thanks! not so many compliments! See then if it could be better somewhere else. If Madame by chance Calls you in the night— Ding—ding—in two steps, You may go that way. Should master require me, Dong—dong—in three jumps, I wait upon him.
SUS: Così se il mattino (tronica.) Il caro Contino Din—din—din—ti manda Tre miglia lontan, Don—don—allo porta Il diavol lo porta, Ed ecco in tre salti—	SUS: So, if in the morning (ironically) The dear charming Count, Ding, ding, ding, sends you Three miles far away, Dong, dong, and the devil Brings him at the door, And then in three jumps—
SUS: Ascolta—	SUS: Hear me—
FIG: Fa presto.	FIG: Hurry.
SUS: Se udir brami il resto, Discaccia i sospetti Che torto mi fan.	SUS: The rest you would hear, Drive away your suspicions, For they wrong me.
FIG: Udir bramo il resto, I dubbj, i sospetti Gelare mi fan.	FIG: I wish to hear the rest; The doubts and suspicions, They chill my blood.
SUS: Or bene, ascolta, e taci.	SUS: Well, then, listen, and be silent.

FIG: Parla, che c' è di nuovo?

SUS: Il signor Conte,
Stanco d' andar cacciando
Le straniere bellezze,
Vuole ancor nel castello
Ritentar la sua sorte;
Ne già di sua consorte, bada bene,
Appetito gli viene.

SUS: Della tua Susannetta.

FIG: Di te?

SUS: Di me medesma. E tu credevi,
Che fosse la mia dote
Merto del tuo bel viso?

FIG: Me n' ero lusingato,
(suona un campanello.)
Chi suona!—la Contessa.

SUS: Addio, Figaro bello.

FIG: Coraggio, mio tesoro.

SUS: E tu cervello!
(parte.)

FIG: Bravo, signor padrone! Ora incomincio
A capire il mistero, e vede schietto
Tutto il vostro progetto—A Londra, è vero?
Voi ministro, io corriero; e la Susanna
Secreta ambasciatrice!—
Non sarà—non sarà, Figaro il dice.
Se vuol ballare, signor Contino,
Il chitarrino le suonerò.
Se vuol venire nella mia scuola,
La capriolo le insegnerò.
Saprò ma piano—meglio ogni arcano
Dissimulando scoprir potrò.
L' arte schermendo, l' arte adoprando,
Di quà pusando, di là scherzando,
Tuttu le macchine rovescero.
(parte.)

SCENA II

Bartolo e Marcellina con un contratto in mano.

BAR: Ed aspettate i giorno
Fissato per le nozze
A parlarmi di questo?

MAR: Io non mi perdo,
Dottor mio, di coraggio.
Per romper dei sponsali
Più avanzati di questo
Bastò spesso un pretesto. Ed egli ha meco,
Oltre questo contratto,
Certi impegni—so io —basta—conviene
La Susanna atterrir, convien con arte
Impuntigliarla a riflutare il Conte.
Egli, per vendicarsi,
Prenderà il mio partito,
E Figaro così fia mio marito.

BAR: Bene, io tutto farò: senza riserva
Tutto a me palesate. (Avrei pur gusto
Di dare in moglie la mia serva antica

FIG: Speak, what is the matter?

SUS: My lord Count, tired with seeking strange beauties, wishes again to try his chance in the castle; but mind well, he does not feel inclined toward his wife.

FIG: Towards whom, then?

SUS: Towards your dear Susanna.

FIG: Towards you?

SUS: Me! And you thought that my portion was for your sweet sake.

FIG: I flattered myself so.
(a bell rings.)
Who rings? the Countess.

SUS: Adieu, my pretty Figaro.

FIG: Cheer up, my lovely.

SUS: And you have sense!
(exit.)

FIG: Well done, my Lord! now I begin to understand the mystery, and see too plainly all your schemes. To London, it is true? You minister, I messenger; and Susanna secret ambassadress.
It shan't be; Figaro says so.
If my dear Count wishes to dance,
I shall play the guitar for you.
If you will come to learn about me,
I will teach you to caper about.
I shall know—softly; better shall learn
Dissimulating every secret.
Foiling art, by using art,
Now in right earnest, then in joking;
I shall surely spoil their plans.
(exit.)

SCENE II

Bartolo and Marcellina with a written agreement in her hand.

BAR: And you waited until the day appointed for the wedding, to speak to me about this?

MAR: My dear doctor, I do not lose courage. Often a mere pretense has been enough to break off matches in a more forward state than this. And he has with me, besides this agreement, certain engagements. I know—well—we must terrify Susanna; we must cleverly pique her, that she may refuse the Count; then, in order to be revenged, he will take my part, and so Figaro will be my husband.

BAR: Well, I shall do all: let me know every thing without reserve. (I should be delighted if I could give my old servant in marriage to one who has made me lose my

A chi mi fece un dì rapir l' amica.)
(La vendetta—oh! la vendetta
E un piacer serbato ai saggi
L' obbliar l' onte, gli oltraggi
È bassezza, è ognor viltà.)
Coll' astuzia, coll' arguzia,
Col giudizio, col criterio
Si potrebbe—il fatto è serio!
Ma credete si farà.
Se tutto il codice dovessi volgere,
Se tutto l' indice dovessi leggere,
Con un equivoco, con un sinonimo
Qualche garbuglio si troverà.
Tutta Siviglia conosce Bartolo,
Il furbo Figaro vinto sara.

SCENA III

Marcellina; indi Susannna, con una cuffia da notee, ed un nastro in mano, ed una vesta da camera sul braccio.

MAR: Tutto ancor non ho perso,
Mi resta la speranza;
Ma Susanna s' avanza—io vo' provarmi—
Fingiam di non vederla.
E quella buona perloa
La vorrebbe sposar.

SUS: (Di me favella.)

MAR: Ma da Figaro, alfine,
Non può meglio sperarsi: argent fait tout!

SUS: Che lingua! manco male
Che ognun sa quanto vale!

MAR: Brava! questo è giudizio!
Con quegli occi modesti,
Con quell' arla pietosa!
E poi—

SUS: Meglio è partir.

MAR: Che cara sposa!
(ironiche a chi parte la prima)
Via resti servita, madama brillante.

SUS: Non sono sì ardita, madama piccante.

MAR: No, prima a lei tocca.

SUS: No, no, tocc' a lei

MAR & SUS: Io so i dover miel non fo incivilità.

MAR: La sposa novella,
Del Conte ia bella,
I meriti, il posto—
Per Bacco! precipito
Se ancor resto quà.

SUS: La donna d' onore,
Di Spagna l' amore,
Stimabile età!
Sibilla decrepita
Da rider mi fa!
(Marc. parte)

SCENA IV

Susanna, poi Cherubino.

sweetheart.)
(Oh! revenge! Oh! yes; revenge
Is a pleasure for the wise;
To forget affronts and insults,
Is both cowardly and base:
With both pleasantry and cunning,
With good sense and judgment too.
One might do it. The affair is serious
But, believe me, I'll succeed.
If all the code I ought to turn,
If all the index I ought to read
With an equivoque or synonym;
I'll create some great confusion.
Well all Seviglia Don Bartolo knows;
The cunning Figaro shall be quite foiled.
(exit.)

SCENE III

Marcellina; then Susanna, with a night-cap and a ribbon in her hand, and a dressing-gown on her arm.

MAR: I have not lost all, I still have hopes left; but Susanna is coming—I will try—let me pretend not to see her. To think my sweet creature wishes to marry her.

SUS: (She speaks of me.)

MAR: However, nothing better can be expected from Figaro—"Money does everything."

SUS: What a tongue! luckily every one knows what it is worth!

MAR: Well said! that is sensible! with those modest eyes, that pious look! And then—

SUS: I had better go.

MAR: What a charming bride!
(ironically, both watching who goes first.)
Pray walk ahead, my grand lady.

SUS: I am not so bold, my pert lady.

MAR: No, you, madam, must go first.

SUS: No, no, you, madam.

MAR & SUS: I know good breeding, and never commit an incivility!

MAR: The young new-made bride,
The Count's own fair choice,
The great worth and station,
By Jove I shall lose,
If I stay here any longer.

SUS: The woman of honor,
The love of all Spain!
O respectable age!
The stupid old sybil!
I must indeed laugh!
(exit Mar.)

SCENE IV

Susanna, then Cherubino.

SUS: Va là vecchia pedante, Dottoressa arrogante. (Vien Cherubino.)	SUS: Go along, pedantic old woman, proud prattler! (Enter Cherubino.)
CHE: Susannetta sei tu?	CHE: My pretty Susanna, is it you?
SUS: Son io, coa volete?	SUS: Yes, what do you want?
CHE: Ah! cor mio, che accidente!	CHE: O my dear! what an accident!
SUS: Cor vostro! cos' avvenne?	SUS: Your dear? what has happened?
CHE: Il Conte ieri, Perchè trovommi sol con Barberina Il congedo mi diede: E se la Contessina, La mia bella comare, Grazia non mi intercede, io vado via, Io nen ti vedo più, Susanna mia.	CHE: Because yesterday the Count found me alone with Barberina, he gave me warning; and if the dear Countess, my pretty godmother, does not obtain my pardon, I must go; I shall see you no more, my Susan.
SUS: Non vedete più me? Bravo! ma dunque Non più per la Contessa Segretamente il vostro cor sospira? (Cher. sospira.)	SUS: You see me no more! well done. Then you no longer sigh secretly for the Countess? (Cher. sighs.)
CHE: Cos, hai lì? dimmi un poco.	CHE: What have you got there? tell me now.
SUS: Ah! il vago nastro, e la notturna cuffia Di comare sì bella!	SUS: Ah! the beautiful ribbon and night-cap of such a pretty godmother. (mimicking him.)
CHE: Deh dammelo, sorella— (vuol prenderle il nastro, Sus. si schermisce.) Dammelo per pietà. (la raggiunge, e glielo strappa di mano.)	CHE: Pray, sister, give it me! (tries to take the ribbon from her. Sus. defends herself.) Give it to me for mercy's sake? (overtakes her, and snatches it out of her hand.)
SUS: Presto quel nastro.	SUS: Quick, here, that ribbon.
CHE: Eh via, via! sta cheta; In ricompensa poi Questa mia canzonetta io ti va dare. (cava di tasca un foglio.)	CHE: Come, come, be quiet. In return I will give you my little song that you see here. (pulls a paper from his pocket.)
SUS: E che ne debbo fare? (glielo strappa di mano.)	SUS: Well, what am I to do with it? (snatches it from him.)
CHE: Leggila alla padrona, Leggila tu medesma, Leggila a Barberina, a Marcellina, Leggila ad ogni donna del Palazzo.	CHE: Read it to my lady, read it yourself, read it to Barberina, to Marcellina, read it to all the women in the castle.
SUS: Povero Cherubin, siete vio pazzo?	SUS: Poor Cherubino, are you mad?
CHE: Non so più cosa son, cosa faccio, Or di fuocco, ora son ghiaccio; Ogni donna cangiar di colore, Ogni donna mi fa palpitar. Solo ai nomi di' amore, e diletto, Mi si turba, mi s' altera il petto, E a parlare mi forza d' amore Un desio che non posso spiegar. Parlo d' amor vegliando, Parlo d' amor dormendo, All' acqua, all ombra, ai monti, Ai fiori, all' erbe, ai fonti, All' eco, ail' aria, ai venti, Che il suon de' miei lamenti Portano via con se. E se non ho chi m' oda, Parlo d' amor con me.	CHE: Who I am, what I do, I know not, I am now all on fire, then all ice; Every woman I see makes me blush, Every woman quite makes my heart throb, The mere mention of love or delight Both disturbs and unsettles my heart. A desire that I can not explain Of affection compels me to speak. I speak of love awake, I speak of love in sleep, To water, shades, and hills, To flowers, herbs, and fountains, To echo, air, and winds, Which bear along with them The sounds of my laments. And if no one hears me, I speak of love to myself.

SCENA V	SCENE V
Detti: poi Il Conte; indi Basilio.	The same, then The Count; afterwards Basilio.
SUS: Taci, vien gente—il Conte! oh! me meschina! (Cher. si nasconde nietro il seggiolone; e viene Il Conte.)	SUS: Hush! some body comes—the Count! O wretched me! (Che. conceals himself behind the great chair, and the Count enters.)
IL C: Susanna, tu mi sembri Agitata e confusa. (siede sul seggiolone.)	COUNT: Susanna, you seem agitated and confused. (sits down in the great chair.)
SUS: Signor—io chiedo scusa— Ma se mai quì sorpresa— Per carità partite	SUS: Sir—I beg pardon—but if I should be surprised here? For mercy's sake, go!
IL C: Un momento e ti lascio: Odi.	COUNT: One moment and I quit you—hear me.
SUS: Non odo nulla.	SUS: I will hear nothing.
IL C: Due parole: tu sai, Che ambasciatore a Londra Il Re mi dischiarò; di condur meco Figaro destinai—	COUNT: Two words—You know that the King has named me for ambassador at London; I intend to take Figaro with me.
SUS: Signor—se osassi—	SUS: Sir—if—
IL C: Parla parla, mia cara; e con quel dritto, Ch' oggi prendi su me, fin che tu vivi, Chiedi, imponi, prescrivi— (Bas. di dentro.)	COUNT: Speak, speak, my dear; and with the right which you take over me, as long as you live. ask, order, direct.
BAS: È uscito poco fa.	BAS: (from within.) He has just gone out.
IL C: Chi parla?	COUNT: Who speaks?
SUS: O Dei! (Il Con. si alza.)	SUS: O gods! (Count. rises.)
IL C: Esci, ed alcun non enri.	COUNT: Go, and let no one come in.
SUS: Ch' io vi lasci quì—solo? (turbata)	SUS: What! Leave you here—alone? (troubled.)
BAS: Da madama sarà; vado a cercarlo. (di dentro.)	BAS: Perhaps he is with my Lady, I will go and look for him. (from within.)
IL C: Quì dietro mi porrò.	COUNT: I will put myself here, behind.
SUS: Non vi celate.	SUS: Do not conceal yourself.
IL C: Taci, e cerca ch' ei parta.	COUNT: Hush! and try to send him away.
SUS: Ohimè! che fate?	SUS: Alas! what are you doing?
Il Con. va a celarsi dietro il seggiolone; ma Sus. sì pone destramente avanti di lui; e fa cenni a Cher. il quale gira lestamente quasi carpone, e si getta rannicchiato nel seggiolone. Sus. lo copre colla vesta, che ha recata. Vien Bas..	Count goes to conceal himself behind the great chair, but Sus. places herself adroitly before him; makes signs to Cher. who goes cleverly round, almost on all fours, and squats down in the great chair. Sus. covers him with the gown she brought. Enter Bas.
BAS: Susanna, il ciel vi salvi; avreste a caso Veduto il Conte?	BAS: Susanna, heavens preserve you! have you any chance seen the Count?
SUS: E cosa (arrabbiata.) Deve far meco il Conte? Animo, uscite.	SUS: And what (vexed) has the Count to do with me? Come, march. (pushes him out.)
BAS: Aspettate, sentite— (lo spinge fuori.) Figaro di lui cerca.	BAS: Stay, hear me—Figaro wants him.

SUS: O cielo! ei cerca Chi, dopo voi, più l' odia.	SUS: O heavens! he is looking for one who hates him most, after you.
IL C: (Vediam come mi servo.)	COUNT: (Let me see how she serves me.)
BAS: Io non ho mai Nella moral sontito, Che uno ch' ami la moglie odii il marito.	BAS: I never heard in morality, that one who loved the wife, hated the husband.
SUS: Uomo maligno, un' impostura è questa.	SUS: Wicked man, this is a falsehood.
BAS: È un maligno con voi chi ha gli occhi in testa. E quella consonetta (confidente.) Ditemi in confidenze, io sono amico, Ad altrui nulla dico, È per voi? per madama?	BAS: According to your opinion, a man who is not stupid, is wicked. And that little song (with an air of confidence)—tell me as a friend, trust to me, I shall tell it to nobody—is it for you? for Madame?
SUS: (Chi davol gliel' ha detto!)	SUS: (Who the deuce told it him?)
BAS: Aproposito figlia Cherubino si regoli; Guarda madama a tavola sì spesso, E con tale immodestia, Che se il Conte s' accorage—e sul tal punto Sapete, egli è una bestia.	BAS: Now I think on it, my dear Cherubino must mind; he looks so often at Madame when at table, and with such impudence, that if the Count perceives it—and upon such a subject you know he is inexorable.
SUS: O scellerato! perchè andate voi Tai menzogne spargendo?	SUS: O the wicked man! and why do you go about spreading such reports?
BAS: Io! ehe ingiustiza! Io quel che compro vendo: A quel che tutti dicono Io non aggiungo un pelo. (Il Con. si leva turbato.)	BAS: I! how you wrong me! I only say what I heard I do not add a syllable to what every body says. (Count rises with a troubled look.)
IL C: Come! che dicon tutti?	COUNT: How! what does every body say?
BAS: (O bello!)	BAS: (This is a fine one.)
SUS: (O cielo!)	SUS: (O heavens!)
IL C: Cosa sento? tosto andate (a Bas.) F scacciate il traditor.	COUNT: What do I hear? Go quickly away, and dismiss the scoundrel!
BAS: (In qual punto son quì giunto!) Perdonate, mio signor.	BAS: (At what a moment am I arrived!) Pray forgive me, my good sir.
SUS: (Che ruina! me meschina!) Sono oppressa dal dolor! (vaccilla fingendo.)	SUS: (What disaster! woe is me!) I am overwhelmed by grief. (staggers, dissembling.)
IL C, BAS: Ah! già svien la poverina! Come, oh Dio! le batte il cor! (la sostengone.)	COUNT, BAS: Ah! the poor creature is fainting! Heavens, how her heart is beating. (they support her.)
BAS: Pian pianin su questo seggio— (la vuol porre a sedere, Sus. lo rispinge con forza.)	BAS: Slowly and gently on this chair. (tries to place her on the chair, Sus. pushes him vigorously away.)
SUS: Dove sono?—cosa veggio? Che insolensa! andate fuor.	SUS: Where am I? what do I see? What impertinence! go away
IL C, BAS: Siamo quì per aiutarvi, È sicuro il vostro onor.	COUNT, BAS: We are here to give you help; Your honor is in safety.
BAS: Ah! del paggio quel che ho detto Era solo un mio sospetto.	BAS: Now, what I said of the page Was no more than my suspicion.
SUS: È un' insidia, una perfidia. Non credete, è un impostor.	SUS: It is a falsehood, and a scandal; Do not believe him, he is a cheat.
IL C: Parta parta il damerino.	COUNT: Let the coxcomb soon depart.
SUS, BAS: Poverino! poverino!	SUS, BAS: Ah! poor fellow! Ah! poor fellow!
IL C: Poverino! poverino! (ironico.) Ma da me sorpreso ancor. (serio.)	COUNT: Ah! poor fellow! Ah! poor fellow! (ironically.) But surprised by me, too. (seriously.)
SUS: Come?	SUS: How?
BAS: Che?	BAS: What?
IL C: Da tua cugina L' uscio ier trovai rinchiuso Picchio; m' apre Barberina Paurosa fuor dell' uso Io dal muso insospettito Guardo, cerco in ogni sito, Ed alzando pian pianino Il tappeto al tavolino, Vedo il paggio— (alsa, in imitazione, la vesta che copre il seggilone, e scorpre Cherubino.) Ah! cosa veggio?	COUNT: I found the door shut at your cousin's I knock, Barberina opens, And appears quite frightened; Filled with suspicion at her looks, I search and examine everywhere: Then lifting the cloth from the table, I see the young man— (he lifts, as he describes, the gown that covers the great chair, and discovers Cherubino.) Ha! what do I see?
SUS: (rude stelle!)	SUS: (Cruel stars!)
BAS: (Ah! meglio ancora!)	BAS: (Better still!)
IL C: Onestissima signora! (a Sus.) Or capisco come va!	COUNT: Most honest lady! Now I see how it is!
SUS: (Accader non può di peggio! Giusti Dei! che mai sarà!)	SUS: (Nothing worse can happen! Good gods, what will it be!)
BAS: Così fan tutte le belle, Non c' è alcuna muovità. (Cher, ch' è fin qui rimaso rannichiate nel seggiolone si leva su quasi a sedere.)	BAS: All the fair do so; This is nothing new. (Cher. who till now remained squatted in the great chair, rises and is almost seated.)

SCENA VI

SCENE VI

Detti.	The same.
IL C: Basilio, in traccia tosto Di Figaro volate; io vo' che veda—	COUNT: Fly, Basilio, immediately, To fetch Figaro; I will have him see—
SUS: Ed io che senta; andate. (con sicurezza.)	SUS: And I, that he may hear; go. (with a confident air.)
IL C: Restate: che baldanza! E quale scusa Se la colpa è evidente?	COUNT: Stay! What assurance! and what excuse can you make, if the guilt is evident?
SUS: Non ha d' uopo di scusa un' innocente.	SUS: Innocence wants no excuse.
IL C: (O ciel!) dunque he sentito (a Sus.) Quello chi' io ti dicea?	COUNT: (O heavens! Then he has heard all that I was saying to you?) (To Sus.)
CHE: Feci, per non sentir, quante potea.	CHE: I did all that I could do not to hear.
IL C: O perfidia!	COUNT: O treachery!
BAS: Frenatevi, vien gente.	BAS: Check your passion; some body is coming.
IL C: E voi restate quì piccol serpente? (prende per un braccio Cher. e lo mette in piedi.)	COUNT: And you stay here, you little serpent? (takes Cher. by the arm, and makes him stand up.)

SCENA VII

Detti. Figaro, Barberina che porta in mano un cappallino ornato di piume, e nastri bianchi. Contadini, e Contadine.

CORÒ: Giovanni lieti, firio spargete
Davinti al nobile nostro Signor;
Il suo gran core vi serba intatto
D' un più bel fiore l' almo candor.

TUTTI: Evviva?

FIG: E voi non applaudite?
(a Cher, che sta affitto.)

SUS: È affitto poveretta,
Perchè il padron lo scaccia dal castello

FIG: Ah! in un giorno sì bello!
(al Con)

SUS: In un giorno di nozze.

FIG: Quando ognuno vi ammira!

CHE: Perdono, mio signor!
(s' inginocchia)

IL C: Nol meritate.

SUS: Egli è ancora fanciullo.

IL C: Men di quel che tu credi.

CHE: È ver mancai; ma dal mio labbro alfine—

IL C: Bene ben, vi perdono;
Anzi farò di più—vacante è un posto
D' ufizial nel reggimento mio;
Io scelgo voi; partite tosto: addio.

SUS, FIG: Ah! fin domani sol—

IL C: No, parta tosto.

CHE: A ubbidirvi, signor, son già disposto.

IL C: Via per l' ultima volti
(con ironia a Cher.)
La Susanna abbracciate.
(Inaspettato è il colpo.)
(parte con Sus.)

FIG: Ehi, Capitano,
A me pure la mano. (Io vo' parlarti,
(basso a Cher.)
Pria che tu parta;) addio,
Piccolo Cherubino;
Come cangia in un punto il tuo destino!
Non più andrai, farfallone amoroso,
Notte e giorno d' intorno girando,
Delle belle turbando il riposo,
Narcisetto, Adoncino d' amor.
Non più avrai, questi bei pennacchini,
Quel cappello leggero e galante,
Quella chioma, quell' aria brillante.
Quel vermiglio donnesco color.
Fra guerrieri, poffarbacco!
Gran mustacchi, stretto sacco,
Schioppo in spalla, spada al fianco,
Collo dritto, musco franco;
Un gran casco, un gran turbante,

SCENE VII

The same, then Figaro; Barberina brings a hat in her hand, ornamented with white feathers and ribbons. Countrymen and women.

CHORUS: My merry youths, strew flowers about,
Before our noble and gentle lord;
His heart for you preserves the bloom,
The rarest flower of sincerity.

ALL: Huzza!

FIG: And you, don't you applaud?
(to Che. who, looks sad.)

SUS: Poor fellow! he is grieved because my lord turned him out of the castle.

FIG: What! on such a happy day?
(to the Count.)

SUS: On a wedding-day!

FIG: When every one admires you!

CHE: Pardon, my lord!
(kneels.)

COUNT: You do not deserve it.

SUS: He is yet a boy.

COUNT: Less than you think.

CHE: I erred, it is true; but at last, from my lips—

COUNT: Well, well, I forgive you; no, I will do more. an officer's commission is vacant in my regiment; I appoint you—set out immediately, adieu.

SUS, FIG: Oh! pray, only till tomorrow!

COUNT: No, let him set out without delay.

CHE: I am ready to obey you, my lord.

COUNT: Come, for the last time,
(ironically to Che.) embrace Susanna. (The blow is unexpected.)
(exit with Sus.)

FIG: Halloo, Captain; shake hands with me too. (I want to speak to you (softly to Che.) before you go.) Adieu, my little Cherubino—how in a moment your destiny changes!
You, amorous butterfly, shall no longer go
Fluttering about, day and night,
Troubling the repose of beauties—
Pretty Narcissus, little Adonis of love.
No longer will you have those pretty feathers,
That light and graceful hat,
That head of hair, that lively look,
Nor those rosy girlish cheeks.
Among warriors, by Jupiter!
Bushy whiskers and small jackets;
On your shoulder a heavy gun;
A stiff neck and bold face;
A big helmet, a large turban.
Much honor, little cash;
And, instead of the fandango,

Molto onor, poco contante;
Ed invece del fandango
Una morcia in mezzo al fiango.
Per montagne e per valloni
Colle nevi, e i solleoni,
Al concerto di tromboni
Di bombarde, e di canoni,
Che le palle in tutti i tuoni
Alle orecchie fan fischiar.
Cherubino, allo vittoria,
Alla gloria militar.
(partono tutti.)

FINE DELL' ATTO PRIMO

ATTO II

SCENA I

Magnifica Camera con alcova da letto in fondo Allato all alcova, alla sinistra degli attori porta practicabile di un gabinetto; dalla parte opposta finestra practicabile. A sinistra, alla quinta di mezzo, porta di entrata; dal lato opposto, all' ultima quinta, porta di un gabinetto. Varie sedia.

La Contessa; poi Susanna; indi Figaro.

LA C: Porgi, amor, qualche ristoro
Al mia duolo, ai miei sospir:
O mi rendi il mio tesoro,
O mi lascia, almen morir!
(siede)
(Vien Susanna.)

LA C: Vieni, cara Susanna, Finiscimi la storia.

SUS: È già finata.

LA C: 'Dunque volea sedurti?
(Fig. di dentro, poi esce.)

FIG: Là ra, là, là

SUS: Eccolo: vieni, amico,
Madame è impaziente—

FIG: A voi non tocca.
Stare in pena per questo,
Alfin di che si tratta? Al Signor Conte
Piace la sposa mia.

SUS: Ed hai coraggio di trattar scherzando
Un negozio sì serio?

FIG: Non vi basta
Che scherzando io ci pensi! Ecco il progetto:
Per Basilio un biglietto
Io gli fo capitar, che l' avvertisca
Di certo appuntamento,
Che per l' ora dell ballo
A un amante voi deste.

LA C: O ciel! che sento?
Ad un uom sì geloso?

FIG: Ancora meglio!
Empiendol di sospetti,
Rovesceremo tutti i suoi progetti.

A nice march all through the mud
Climbing mountains, crossing valleys;
Now through snow, then under heat;
To the sound of blunderbusses,
Of howitzers, and of cannon,
Which send hissing and whizzing shot
In variety about your ears.
Cherubino, haste to victory,
To the glory of the soldier.
(exeunt all.)

END OF ACT I.

ACT II

SCENE I

A magnificent Room, with an alcove for a bed at the bottom; close to the alcove, on the left of the Actors, a door which leads into a Closet: on the opposite side, a window that opens. On the middle side-scene, on the left, a door to come in at: opposite, at the last side-scene, the door of a Closet. Several chairs.

The Countess, then Susanna; afterwards Figaro.

COUN: King Cupid, some consolation
To my grief and sorrows send Ah! restore to me my love,
Or at least take away my life.
(takes a seat.)
(Enter Susanna.)

COUN: Come, dear Susanna, finish the story.

SUS: It is already finished.

COUN: "Then he wanted to seduce you?"
(Fig. from within then enters.)

FIG: Larà, larà.

SUS: Here he is; come, friend,
Madame is impatient.

FIG: You need not be uneasy for that:
At last, what is this about?
The Count likes my bride.

SUS: And have you the courage to treat
Such a serious affair as a joke?

FIG: Is it not enough
That I think on it joking?
Here is my scheme;
Basilio shall take a note to him from me,
To warn him of a certain appointment made by you
With some admirer for the ball.

COUN: Heavens! what do I hear?
To such a jealous man?

FIG: So much the better!
In filling him with suspicion,
We shall overthrow all his projects.

SUS: È ver, ma, in di lui vece Si opporrà Marcellina.	SUS: It is true, But Marcellina will oppose it.
FIG: Aspetta! Al Conte Farai subito dir, che verso sera Attendati in giardino; Il picciol Chuerubino, Per mio consiglio, non ancor partito. Da femmina vestito Faremo che in sua vece ivi sen vada; Questa è il unica strada Onde monsù sorpreso de madama Sia constretto a far poi quel che si brama.	FIG: Stay! send word to the Count, That towards evening He may expect you in the garden: Little Cherubino Has delayed his departure by my advice, We shall dress him in woman's clothes, And make him go instead; This is the only way to get Monsieur to be surprised by Madame, And then compel him to do what we want.
LA C: Che ti par? (a Sus.)	COUN: What do you think of it? (to Sus.)
SUS: Non c' è mal.	SUS: Not bad.
LA C: Nel nostro caso—	COUN: In our case—
SUS: Quand' egli è persuaso—E dov' è il tempo?	SUS: If he is persuaded— But where's the time?
FIG: Il Conte è andato a caccia, e per qualche ora Non sarà di ritorno. Io vado, e tosto Cherubino vi mando. Lascio a voi La cura di vestirlo.	FIG: The Count has gone a hunting, And for some hours he will not be back. I shall go, and send Cherubino to you soon. I leave you to dress him.
LA C: E poi?	COUN: And then?
FIG: E poi— Se vuol ballare, Signor Contino, Il chitarrino (parte.) Le suonerò.	FIG: And then— If my dear lord Wishes to dance, I will Play the guitar for you. (exit.)
SCENA II	SCENE II
La Contessa, e Susanna, poi Cherubino.	The Countess and Susanna, then Cherubino.
LA C: Quanto duolmi, Susanna, Che questo giovinetto abbia del Conte Le stravaganze udite!—ah! tu non sai Ma per qual cosa mai Da me stessa non venne? Dov' è la canzonnetta?	COUN: How sorry I am, Susanna, That this youth has heard The foolish things the Count said! Ah! you do not know— But why then did he not come to me? Where is the little song?
SUS: Eccola appunto, Facciam che la canti. (Vien Cherubino.) Zitto! vien gente—è desso. Avanti, avanti, Signor uffziale.	SUS: Here, Let us make him sing it. (Enter Cherubino. Hush! some body is coming— It is he. Come on, come on, Mr. Officer.
CHE: Ah! non chiamarmi Con nome sì fatale; ei mi rammenta Che abbandonar degg' io.	CHE: Ah! do not call me by so fatal a name; It puts me in mind that I must quit A godmother that is so good—
SUS: E tanto bella.	SUS: And so beautiful!
CHE: Ah! sì certo! (sospirande)	CHE: Ah! (sighing.) Yes, certainly!
SUS: Ah! si certo! (contraffacendolo.) Ipocritone! Via presto la canzone, Che stamane a me deste, A madama cantate.	SUS: Ah! (mimicking him.) Yes, certainly! Great hypocrite! Come, be quick, Sing the song to Madame Which you gave me this morning.
LA C: Chi n' è l' autor?	COUN: Who wrote it?
SUS: Guardate, egli ha due braccia Di rossor sulla faccia.	SUS: Look! the red is two feet deep on his cheeks with blushing.
LA C: Prendi la mia chittarra, e l' accompagna.	COUN: Take my guitar, and accompany him.
CHE: Io sono sì tremante— Ma se madama vuole—	CHE: I am trembling all over; But if Madame chooses—
SUS: Io canterò per te, poche parole. Voi che sapete—che cos' è amor, Donne vedete—s' io l' ho nel cor. Quello ch' io provo—a voi dirò, E per me nuovo—capir nol so. Sento un affetto—pien di desir, Ch' ora è diletto—ora è martir, Gelo, e poi sento—l' alma avvampar, E in un momento—torno a gelar. Ricerco un bene—fuori di me, Non so ch' il tiene—non so cos' è. Sospiro, e gemo—senza voler. Palpito e tremo—senza saper. Mon trovo pace—notte nè dì; Eppur mi piace—languir così.	SUS: I shall sing for you, that's enough. You who know what is love, Ladies, see if it is in my heart. What I feel I shall now tell, It is new to me, I can not understand it. I feel a passion, full of desire, Which now delights and then torments. Now I am frozen and then all flame And in an instant am frozen again. I seek for happiness which is not in me, I know not who possesses it; I sigh, lament without desire; My heart does beat, I know not why. I find no peace by night nor day, Yet I am pleased to languish thus.
LA C: Bravo! che bella cosa! io non sapea Che scrivesse sì bene.	COUN: Well done! What a pretty thing! I did not know he could write so well.
SUS: Oh! in verità Egli fa bege tutto quel che fa. Presto, a noi, bel soldato: Figaro v' informò—	SUS: Oh! indeed, he does well all that he does. Quick, come here my pretty soldier. Figaro told you—
CHE: Tutto mi disse.	CHE: All.
SUS: Lasciatemi vedere—andrà benissimo; (osservando Cher.) Siamo d' egual strature. Giù quel manto. (gli leva il manto.)	SUS: Let me see—it will go very right. (observing Che.) We are of the same height. Down with that cloak. (takes his cloak off.)
LA C: Che fai?	COUN: What are you doing?
SUS: Niente paura.	SUS: Fear nothing.
LA C: E se qualcuno entrasse?—	COUN: And if some body were to come in?—
SUS: Entri, che mal facciamo? (va a chiuder la porta.) La porta chiuderò; ma come poi Acconciargli la testa?	SUS: Well, what harm? (goes to shut the door.) I shall shut the door; But how shall his hair be dressed?
LA C: Una mia cuffia, Presto—che carta è quella?	COUN: One of my caps; Quick—what paper is that?
CHE: La patente, (Sus. entra nel gabinetto; La Cont. prende la cara, e la guarda.)	CHE: The commission. (Sus. goes to the closet; the Coun. takes the paper and looks at it.)
LA C: Che sollecita gente!	COUN: How active they have been!
CHE: L' ebbi or or da Basilio.	CHE: I just now had it from Basilio.
LA C: Dalla fratta obbliato hanno il sigillo. (torna Sus. con una cuffia; La Cont. rende le la patente a Cher.)	COUN: In their haste they forgot the seal. (Sus. returns with a cap; the Coun. gives back Che. his commission.)
SUS: Il sigillo di che?	SUS: The seal of what?
LA C: Della patente.	COUN: Of the commission.
SUS: Cospetto, che premura! Ecco la cuffia.	SUS: Indeed! what haste! Here is the cap.

LA C: Spicciati—va bene;
Oh! disgraziati noi se il Conte viene.
(Sus. siede vicino alla Cont.; Che. se le inginocchia davanti, e Sus. gli mette la cuffia.)

SUS: Venite, inginocchiatevi,
Restate fermo lì:
Pian piano or via giratevi;
Brave! va ben così.
La faccia rivolgetemi—
Olà quelgi occhi a me.
Dritissimo guardatemi,
Madama quì non è
Sù alto quel colletto;
Quel ciglio un po' più basso,
Le mani sotto il petto,
Vendromo poscia il passo
Quanto sarete in piè.
Mirate il bricconcello,
(alla Cont.)
Vedete quanto è bello!
Che furba guardatura!
Che vezzo, che figura!
Se l' amano le femmine
Han certo il lor perchè.

LA C: Finiana io raggazzate! or quelle maniche
Oltre il gomita gli alza,
Onde più agiatamente
L' abito gli si adatti.
(Sus. eseguisce.)

SUS: Ecco.

LA C: Più indietro.
Così—Che nastro è quello?
(Che. lo ha legato al braccio.)
Chi picchia alla mia porta?

COUN: Hurry—it is right;
Oh! woe be to us if the Count comes!
(Sus. sits by the Coun.; Cher. kneels before her. Sus. puts the cap on his head.)

SUS: Come now, I pray, kneel down,
And remain there, tranquil,
And now turn gently round;
That's well, it is right so.
Now turn your face to me;
Your eyes do fix on me.
Look straight upon my face;
Madame, he is not here.
Hold up your necks still higher,
Cast down those wicked eyes!
Your hands under your breast.
And when you stand up,
We shall see how you walk.
Look at the little rogue,
(to the Coun.)
See how pretty he is!
What cunning looks he has!
What charms! and what a figure
If women do love him,
They surely have good reason.

COUN: Let us leave off such ridiculous language:
Tuck up those sleeves above the elbow,
That the dress may sit easier.
(Sus. does as she is bid.)

SUS: There!

COUN: Farther back.
So—what ribbon is that?
(Che. has one tied round his arm.)
Who knocks at my door?
(a knocking is heard at the principal door.)

SCENA III

Il Conti di fuori, e detti poi Susanna, che torna portando una vesta di mussolino.

LA C: Perchè chiusa?

LA C: Il mio sposo—
O Dei! son morta!
(si alzano agitati.)
Voi quì senza mantello!
In questo stato—un ricevuto foglio—
La sua gran gelosia!—

IL C: Cosa indugiate?

LA C: Son sola—sì, son sola.

IL C: E a chi parlate?

LA C: A voi—certo a voi stesso—(confusa.)

CHE: Dopo quel ch' è successo—
Il suo furor—non trovo altro consiglio.
(corre a celarsi nel gabinetto.)

LA C: Ah! mi difena il Cielo in tal periglio!
(leva la chiave dal gabinetto, e corre ad aprire al Conte che entra.)

SCENE III

The Count without, and the same, then Susanna who returns, bringing a muslin dress.

COUNT: Why locked in?

COUN: My husband—
O God! I am dead!
(they rise flurried.)
You here without a cloak—
In this condition—
A letter received—
His great jealousy—

COUNT: Why do you delay?

COUN: I am alone—Yes, I am alone.

COUNT: Then, who are you speaking to?

COUN: To you—certainly to you.
(confused.)

CHE: After what has happened—his rage—I find no other means.
(runs to conceal himself in the closet.)

COUN: Ah! May Heaven defend me in so great a danger!
(takes the key from the closet, and runs to open the door to the Count, who comes in.)

IL C: Che nuovità? Non fu mai vostra usanza
Di rinchiudervi in stanza.

LA C: È ver—ma io—
Io stava quì mettendo—

IL C: Via mettendo—

LA C: Certe robe—era meco la Susanna,
Che in sua camera è andata.

IL C: Ad ogni modo
Voi non siete tranquilla.
(esaminandola, e mostrandole una lettera.) Guardate questo foglio.

LA C: (Numi! è il foglio, Che Figaro gli scrisse.)
(si fa rumore nel gabinetto dov' è Cher.)

IL C: Cos' è cotesto strepito?
Là dentro al gabinetto
Qualche cosa è caduto.

LA C: Io non intesi niente.
(più confusa.)

IL C: Convien che abbiate gran pensieri in mente.

LA C: Di che?

IL C: Là v' è qualcuno.

LA C: Chi volete che sia?

IL C: Lo chiedo a voi;
Io vengo in questo punto.

LA C: Ah! sì—Susanna—appunto—

IL C: Che passò, mi diceste alla sua stanza—

LA C: Alla sua stanza, o là, non vidi bene.

IL C: S' ò Susanna, onde viene,
Che siete sì turbata?

LA C: Per la mia cameriera?

IL C: Io non so nulla;
Ma turbata senz' altro.

LA C: Ah quella serva
Più che non turba me, turba vio stesso.

IL C: È vero, è vero e lo vedrete adesso.
(va al gabinetto)
Susanna, or via sortite,
Sortite, io così vo'.

LA C: Fermatevi—sentite—
Sortire ella non può.
(Susanna, esce dalla sua camera con una vesto ed ascolta indietro.)

SUS: (Cos' è codesta lite—Il paggio dove andò?)
(entra nell' alcova)

IL C: E chi vietario or osa?

LA C: Lo vieta l' onestà.
Un abito di sposa
Provando ella si sta.
a 3.

IL C: (Chiarissima è la cosa,
L' amante quì sarà!)

COUNT: What novelty is this?
You never used to lock yourself in the room.

COUN: It is true—but I—
I was putting here—

COUNT: Well putting—

COUN: Some things—
Susanna was here with me,
And is now gone to her room.

COUNT: At all events, you are not composed.
(examining her, and showing her a letter.)
Look at this paper.

COUN: (Gods! It is the letter Figaro wrote to him!)
(a noise is heard in the closet where Che. is.)

COUNT: What noise is that?
Something fell down in that closet.

COUN: I heard nothing.
(more confused.)

COUNT: You must have some great thoughts in your head.

COUN: About what?

COUNT: Some body is there.

COUN: Who will you have it to be?

COUNT: I ask you? I am only just come.

COUN: O yes—Susanna—Precisely.

COUNT: Who, as you told me,
Is gone to her room.

COUN: To her room, or there,
I did not see well.

COUNT: If it is Susanna,
From where does your confusion arise?

COUN: For my maid.

COUNT: I know nothing;
But undoubtedly you are confused.

COUN: Ah! that maid confuses
You much more than me.

COUNT: It is true, it is true, you will see it now.
(goes to the closet.)
Susanna, now come out,
Come out; I will have it so.

COUN: Remain, hear what I say,
Susanna can come out.
(Sus. comes out of her chamber with a gown, keeps back and listens.)

SUS: (What does this quarrel mean—
Where has the page now gone?
(goes into the alcove.)

COUNT: Who dares prevent it now?

COUN: Modesty prevents it.
She is now trying on a wedding-dress in her room.

COUNT: (It is a clear affair the lover must be here!)

LA C: (Bruttissima è la cosa, Veggiamo come va!)	COUN: (It is an ugly affair; Let us see how it will end!)
SUS: (Capisco qualche cosa, Chi sa cosa sarà!)	SUS: (I have made something out; Who knows how this shall turn out!)
IL C: Dunque parlate almeno, (alla porta) Sussanna se quì siete?	COUNT: At least then speak, Susanna, (towards the closet door.) If you are in the room.
LA C: Questo non vo' nemmeno, (alla porta) Io v' ordino, tacete.	COUN: No, I will not, neither; (towards the closet door.) I order you to be silent.
IL C: Consorte mio, giudizio!	COUNT: My wife, be prudent!
LA C, SUS: Un scandalo, un disordine, Schiviam per carità!	COUN, SUS: For Heaven's sake, let us avoid an exposure and quarrel.
SUS: Quì certo nascerà.	SUS: Here certainly will happen—
IL C: Dunque, vio non aprite?	COUNT: Then you do not open?
LA C: E perchè deggio Le mie camere aprir?	COUN: And why must I open my rooms?
IL C: Ebben, lasciate, L' aprirem senza chiavi: Ehi? gente?	COUNT: Well, never mind; We shall open without keys: Who is there?—people?
LA C: Come? Porreste a repentaglie D'una dama l' onor?	COUN: How? would you expose the honor of a lady of rank to danger?
IL C: È vero, io sbaglio. Voi la condiscendenza Di venir meco avrete: Madama, eccovi il braccio; andiamo.	COUNT: It is true, I am wrong. You will have the goodness to come with me. Madame, here is my arm; let us go.
LA C: Andiamo. (alzando la voce.)	COUN: Let us go. (raising her voice.)
IL C: Susanna starà là finchè torniamo. (Sus. esce in fretta dall' alcova, e va alla porta del gabinetto.)	COUNT: Susanna will stay there till we return. (Sus. runs out of the alcove, and goes to the closet door.
SUS: Aprite, presto aprite, Aprite, è la Susanna Sortite via, sortite, Andate via di quà. (Che. esce fuori.)	SUS: Open, be quick, open; Open—'tis Susanna; come out, Now then come out; Get quick away from here. (Che. comes out.)
CHE: Ahimè! che scena orribile! Che gran fatalità!	CHE: Mercy on me! what a horrible scene. What a sad fatality!
SUS: Partite, non tardate.	SUS: Go, do not delay.
CHE: Ahimè! che scena orribile!	CHE: Mercy on me! what a horrible scene
SUS: Di quà—di là—di quà—	SUS: This way—that way—this way.
CHE: Che gran fatalità!	CHE: What a sad fatality!
SUS, CHE: Le porte son serrate; O ceil! che mai sarà?	SUS, CHE: The doors are locked; O heavens! How will it end?
CHE, SUS: M' uccide se mi trova. V' uccide se vi trova. (Che. guarda fuori della finestro)	SUS, CHE: He will kill (me/you), if he finds (me/you). (Che. looks out of the window.)
CHE: Veggiamo un po' quì fuori, Dà proprio nel giardino. (accena di saltar giù Sus. lo tiene.)	CHE: Let me look a little here; it is just over the garden. (prepares to jump down, Sus. stops him.)
SUS: Fermate Cherubino, Fermate per pietà.	SUS: Stop, Cherubino; stop, for mercy's sake.
CHE: Un vaso o due di fiori Più mal non avverrà. (come sopra.)	CHE: A flower-pot or two, that is all the mischief. (as above.)
SUS: Tropp; alto è per un salto Fermate per pietà!	SUS: It is too high for a leap! Pray stop for mercy's sake.
CHE: Lasciami, pria dinuocerle, Nel fuoco volerei. Abbraccio te per lei; (baccia Sus.) Addio—così si fa. (salta nel giardino. Sus. spaurita, si getta un momento sopra una sedia; poi s' alza, e guarda dalla finestra.)	CHE: Leave me, before hurting her, I would fly into the fire. I salute you for her; (kisses Sus.) Adieu! This is the way. (leaps into the garden. Sus., frightened, throws herself for a moment on a chair; then rises, and looks through the window.)
SUS: Oh! guarda il demonietto, 'come fugge!' Entriam nel gabinnetto; Venga poscia il Gradasso, io quì l' aspetto. (entra nel gabinetto.)	SUS: O see, the little devil, "how he runs." I now shall go into the closet; then let the fury come, I am ready for him here. (goes into the closet.)

SCENA IV

SCENE IV

La Conte, Il Conte, poi gli altri a loro tempo. Il Conte porta in mano una leva per aprir l' uscio del gabinetto, che posa sopra la tavola, mentre esamina intorno la stanza.)	The Countess, the Count, then the others in their turn. The Count brings an iron crow to break the closet-door open; he lays it on the table, then searches the room.
IL C: Tutto è come il lasciai—volete dunque Aprir voi stessa, o deggio—	COUNT: Every thing is as when I went away; will you then open the door yourself, or must I—
LA C: Ahimè! fermate, E ascoltatemi un poco: Mi credete capace Di mancare al dover?	COUN: Alas! stop and hear me a little: do you think me capable of failing in my duty?
IL C: Come vi piace, Entro a quel gabinetto; Chi sta chiuso vedrò.	COUNT: As you like. I will see who is shut up in that closet.
LA C: Sì lo vedrete— Ma uditemi tranquillo. (turbata.)	COUN: Yes, you shall—but hear me coolly. (confused.)
IL C: Non è, danque, Susanna? (alterato.)	COUNT: Then it is not Susanna? (angrily.)
LA C: È un fanciullo.	COUN: It is a boy.
IL C: Un fanciul.	COUNT: A boy!
LA C: Sì Cherubino.	COUN: Yes, Cherubino.
IL C: (E mi farà il destino Ritrovar questo paggio in ogni loco?) Come? Non è partito?—Scellerati! Ecco i dubbi spiegati; ecco l' imbroglio, Ecco il raggiro, onde m' avverte il foglio. Esci ormai, garzon malnato; (al gabinetto.) Sciagurato, non tardar!	COUNT: (And will my unlucky stars make me find this page everywhere?) How? Is he not sent out?—Wretches!—Here are my suspicions verified; this is the scheme, this is the plot, that I am warned of by the letter. Come out, wicked boy, (towards the closet.) wretched fellow, do not delay!
LA C: Ah! signore, quel furore, Per lui fammi il cor tremar!	COUN: Ah! sir! that rage makes me tremble for him!
IL C: E d' opporvi ancora osate?	COUNT: And do you still dare oppose?
LA C: No, sentite!	COUN: No, hear me.
IL C: Via parlate.	COUNT: Come, speak.
LA C: Giuro al ciel che ogni sospetto—(tremando.) E lo stato, in che il trovate— Sciolto il collo, nudo il petto—	COUN: I swear by Heaven that any suspicion—(trembling) and the condition you will find him in—his neck and breast bare—
IL C: Sciolto il collo, nudo il petto!	COUNT: His neck and breast bare!
LA C: Per vestir feminee spoglie—	COUN: To put on woman's clothes.
IL C: Ah! comprendo, indegna moglie, Mi vo' tosto vendicar. (prende infuriato la leva.)	COUNT: Oh! I understand—worthless wife! I will be revenged immediately. (takes the crow in a rage.)

LA C: Mi fa torto quel trasporto, M' oltraggiate a dubitar.	COUN: That passion wrongs me; you offend me by your doubts.
IL C: Quà la chiave.	COUNT: Give here the key.
LA C: Egli è innocente— Voi sapete—	COUN: He is innocent. You know—
IL C: Non so niente. Va lontan dagli occhi miei, Un' infida, un' empia sei, E mi cereni d' infamar.	COUNT: I know nothing. Go far from my sight; You are a faithless and false woman, and seek my dishonor.
LA C: Vao sì—ma—	COUN: Yes, I go—but—
IL C: Non ascolto.	COUNT: I will not hear.
LA C: Non so rea—	COUN: I am not guilty.
IL C: Vel leggo in volto. (gli dà la chiave.) Mora mora, e più non sia Rea cagion del mio penar.	COUNT: I read it in your face; (she gives him the key.) Let him die, and be no longer The sad cause of all my sufferings.
LA C: (Ah! la ceca gelosia Qualche eccesso gli fa far.) (Il Conte apre la porta; La Contessa si getto afiannosa sopra una sedia, coprendosi gli occhi. Susanna esce dal gabinetto con aria grave, ed ironica.)	COUN: (Ah! his jealousy, too blind, Will urge him to some catastrophe.) (the Count opens the door; the Countess throws herself on a chair, overwhelmed with grief, covering her eyes. Susanna comes out of the closet with a grave and ironical air.)
LA C, IL C: Susanna!	COUN, COUNT: Susanna!
SUS: Signore Perchè tal stupore? Il brando prendete, Il paggio uccidete, Vedetelo quà.	SUS: Sir—why such astonishment? Take up your sword, and kill the boy; See—he is here.
LA C: (Che storia è mai questa! Susanna era là!)	COUN: (What can this mean? Susanna now there!)
IL C: Che scuola! la testa, Girando mi va!	COUNT: (How great is this school! My head turns giddy!)
SUS: Confusa han la testa, Non san come va.	SUS: (Their heads are confused, They know not how it ended.)
IL C: Sei sola?	COUNT: Are you alone?
SUS: Guardate, Là ascoso sarà.	SUS: Look, he may be concealed there.
IL C: Guardiamo, guardiamo, Quì ascoso sarà. (entra nel gabinetto. La C. si alza)	COUNT: Let us look, let us look; He may be concealed here, (goes into the closet; the Coun. rises.)
LA C: Susanna, son morta, Il flato mi manca.	COUN: Susanna, I am dead! My breath is quite gone!
SUS: Più lieta, più franca; In salvo è di già. (Il. C ese confuso)	SUS: More cheerful, more frank; Take courage, he is safe. (The Count comes out, composed.)
IL C: (Che sbaglio mai presi Appena la credo!) Se a torto vi offesi Perdono vi chiedo, (alla C.) Ma far burla simile È pio crudelta.	COUNT: (What a mistake I made! I can hardly believe it!) If I have wronged you. I beg your pardon; (to the Coun.) But such foolish jokes indeed are too cruel.
LA C, SUS: le vostre follie Non mertan pietà.	COUN: Your follies deserve no pity at all.
IL C: Io v' amo.	COUNT: I love you.
LA C: Nol dite.	COUN: Do not say so.
IL C: Vel giuro.	COUNT: I swear it.
LA C: Mentite. Son l' empia, l' intida, Che ognora v' inganna.	COUN: It is false! I am the false, faithless woman, that always deceives you.
IL C: Quell' ira, Susanna, M' adjuta a calmar!	COUNT: Susanna, help me to appease this anger!
SUS: Così si condanna Chi può sospettar.	SUS: Who is capable of suspicion, Must be punished so.
LA C: Ah! dunque la fede D' un' anima amante Sì fiera mercede Doveva sperar! (Sus. e Il Con. pregano La Cont.)	COUN: Ah! then the faith Of one who loves Was to expect such cruel return.
SUS: Signora!	SUS: Madam!
IL C: Rosina!	COUNT: Rosina!
LA C: Consorte crudele! Più quella non sono, Ma il misero oggetto Del vostro abbandona, Che avete diletto Di far disperar.	COUN: Oh husband most cruel! No more I am the same, But am the unfortunate Object of your contempt, Which you delight In driving to madness.
SUS: (Confuso, pentito. (piano alla Cont.) E troppo punito, Abbiate pietà!	SUS: (Confused and repenting, (in a low voice to Coun.) He is punished too much Have pity upon him.)
LA C: Soffrir sì gran torto Quest' alma non sa!	COUN: My soul can not bear So great an insult.
IL C: Ma il paggio rinchiuso?	COUNT: But the page locked up?
LA C: Fu sol per provarvi.	COUN: It was only to try you.
IL C: Ma i tremiti, i palpiti?	COUNT: But the trembling, the agitation?
LA C: Fu soi per bularvi. (Il Con. mostra la lettera.)	COUN: Only to laugh at you. (the Count shows the letter.)
IL C: Ma un foglio sì barbaro!	COUNT: But so cruel a letter?
LA C: Dí Figaro è il foglio. E a voi, per Basilio—	COUN: It is by Figaro, and to you by Basilio.
IL C: Ah! perfidi! io voglio—	COUNT: Wretches! I will—
LA C: Perdono non merita Chi agli altri nol dà.	COUN: He is undeserving of pardon that will not grant it to others.
IL C: Ebben se vi piace, Commune è la pace, Rosina inflessibile Con me non sarà.	COUNT: Well if you like, the peace shall be general; Rosina will not be inexorable with me.
LA C: Oh! quanto Susanna, Son dolce di core! (dà la mano al Conte.) Di donna al furore, Ch più crederà!	COUN: O Susanna! how tenderhearted I am! (gives her hand to the Count.) Who will believe any more the anger of a woman?
SUS: Cogli uomin, Signora, Girate, volgete, Vedrete, che ognora Si cade poi là.	SUS: Madam, with the men, turn and twist the business as you please, you will see that always ends so.
IL C: Guardatemi!	COUNT: Look at me!
LA C: Ingrato!	COUN: Ungrateful man!
IL C: Ho torto; mi pento Da questo momento.	COUNT: I am in the wrong! I repent from this moment!
COUN, COUNT, SUS: Quest' alma a conoscer la, mi, vi Apprender potrà. (Vien Figaro.)	COUN, COUNT, SUS: This soul will now learn to know (her/me/you) quite well. (Enter Figaro.)
FIG: Signore, di fuori Son già i suonatori; Le trombe sentite, I piferi udite; Tra canti, tra balli De' vostri vassalli Corriamo, voliamo Le nozze a compir. (partendo Il C. lo ferma.)	FIG: The musicians, dear sir, have already arrived; Hear how the trumpets; Hark! list to the fifes! Let us run, let us fly To celebrate the wedding In singing and dancing With your vassals. (as he goes the Count stops him.)
IL C: Pian piano, men fretta.	COUNT: Gently, gently; do not be in haste.
FIG: La turba m' aspetta.	FIG: The people expect me.

IL C: Un dubbio toglietemi In pria di partir.	COUNT: Before you go, rid me of a doubt.
LA C, SUS, FIG: (La cosa è scabrosa, Com' è da finir?)	COUN, SUS, FIG: (It is a knotty point; how is it to end?)
IL C: (Con arte le carte Convien quì scoprir.) (mostra la lettera a Fig.) Conoscete, signor Figaro, Questo foglio chi vergo?	COUNT: (With skill I must play my cards.) (shows the letter to Fig.) Do you know, Mr. Figaro, who wrote this letter?
FIG: Nol conosco.	FIG: I do not.
SUS, IL C: Nol conosci?	SUS, COUNT: You do not?
FIG: Nol conosco, no, no, no.	FIG: I do not know it, no, no, no.
SUS: E nol desti a Don Basilio?	SUS: And did you not give it to Don Basilio?
LA C: Per recarlo—tu c' intendi.	COUN: To deliver it—you understand us.
FIG: Non v' intendo; oibò! oibò!	FIG: I do not understand you, no, no! no, no!
SUS: E non sai del damerino, Che stasera nel giardino—	SUS: And do you not know of the young spark who was in the garden tonight
IL C: Già capisci—	COUNT: You make out now—
FIG: Io nulla so!	FIG: I know nothing!
IL C: Corichi invan difesa, e scusa, Il tuo ceffo già t' accuse, Vedo ben, che vuoi mentir.	COUNT: It is in vain for you to defend yourself and seek excuses; your face accuses you already; see you want to lie.
FIG: Mente il ceffo, io già non mento.	FIG: My face lies, not I.
LA C, SUS: Il talento anguizzi invano Palesato abbiam l' arcano, Non v' è nulla da ridir.	COUN, SUS: It is in vain for you to sharpen your wit; we have discovered the secret; there is no reply.
IL C: Che respondi?	COUNT: What do you answer?
FIG: Niente, niente.	FIG: Nothing, nothing.
IL C: Dunque accordi?	COUNT: Then you agree?
FIG: Non accordo.	FIG: I do not agree.
LA C, SUS: Eh! vi chetati, balordo, La burletta hai da finir.	COUN, SUS: Come, have done, mad fellow; you must finish the farce.
FIG: Per finirla lietamente All' usanza teatrale, Un' azoin matrimoniale Noi faremo ora seguir.	FIG: To finish it joyfully according to theatrical custom, we shall have a matrimonial entertainment follow now.
LA C, SUS: Deh! signor, nol contrastate, Consolate i miei desir!	COUN, SUS: Pray, sir, do not oppose it. Make me happy—grant my wishes!
IL C: Marcellina, Marcellina, Quanto tardi a comparir! (viene Ant., mezzo ubriaco, portando un vas di viole co' steli schiacciati.)	COUNT: Marcellina, Marcellina, Oh! how long you are a coming! (enter Ant., half drunk, bringing a pot of violets with the stalks broken.)
ANT: Ah! signore, signor.	ANT: Ah! sir, sir!
IL C: Cos' è stato?	COUNT: What is the matter?
ANT: Che insolenza! chi il fece? chi fu?	ANT: What impudence! who did it? who was it?
LA C, IL C, FIG, SUS: Cosa dici? cos' hai? cos' è nato?	COUN, COUNT, FIG, SUS: What do you say? what is the matter with you? what has happened?
ANT: Ascoltate.	ANT: Hear me.
LAC, IL C, FIG, SUS: Via parla, dì su.	COUN, COUNT, FIG, SUS: Come, speak out.
ANT: Dal balcone che guarda in guardino, (al Con) Mille cose ogni dì gettar veggio, E poc' anzi, può darsi di peggio! Vidi un uom, signor mio, gettar giù.	ANT: From the balcony that looks into the garden, (to the Count.) I see a thousand things thrown down; and not long ago (can they do worse?) I saw a man, sir, thrown out.
IL C, LA C, SUS: Dal balcone?	COUNT, COUN, SUS: From the balcony?
ANT: Vedete i garofani.	ANT: See the pinks.
IL C: In giardino?	COUNT: In the garden?
LA C, SUS: (Su, Figaro all' erta.)	COUN, SUS: (Now, Figaro, look sharp.)
IL C: (Cosa sento?)	COUNT: What do I hear?
LA C, SUS: (Costui ci sconerta!)	COUN, SUS: (This fellow puts us out!)
LA C, SUS, FIG: (Quel briaco che venne a far quì!)	COUN, SUS, FIG: (What is that drunken man come to do here?)
IL C: Dunque un uomo?—ma dov' è egli gite? (ad Ant.)	COUNT: Then a man—but where is he gone? (to Ant.)
ANT: Ratto ratto il birbone è fuggito, E ad un tratto di vista m' usci. (Sus. piano a Fig.)	ANT: The scoundrel ran away full speed, and I lost sight of him in a moment. (Sus. whispers to Fig.)
SUS: (Sai che il paggio?—)	SUS: (You know that the page?)
FIG: (So tutto!) Ah!—ah!— (ridendo.)	FIG: I know all; ha! ha! (laughing.)
IL C: Taci là, taci là!	COUNT: Silence there, silence there!
ANT: Cosi rida?	ANT: Why do you laugh?
FIG: Ah! ah! ah! ah! ah! ah!	FIG: Ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha!
IL C: Taci lì.	COUNT: Silence there!
FIG: Tu sei cotto dal sorger del dì. (ad Ant.)	FIG: You are half seas over by daybreak. (to Ant.)
IL C: Or ripetimi: un uom dal balcone?— (ad Ant.)	COUNT: Now tell me again—a man from the balcony? (to Ant.)
ANT: Dal balcone.	ANT: From the balcony—
IL C: In giardino?	COUNT: In the garden?
ANT: In giardino.	ANT: In the garden.
LA C, SUS, FIG: Ma, signore, se in iui parla il vino!	COUN, SUS, FIG: But, sir, if it is the wine that speaks in him!
IL C: Segui pur: nè tu in volto il vedesti?	COUNT: Go on, then;—and did you not see his face?
ANT: No, nol vidi.	ANT: No I did not.
LA C, SUS: (Olà, Figaro all erta!)	COUN, SUS: (Mind, Figaro, look sharp!)
FIG: Via, piagnone, sta zitto una volta, (ad Ant.) Per tre soldi far tanto tumulto! (accennando i fiori.) Giacchè il fatto non può stare occulto, Son io stesso saltato di lì.	FIG: Come, crying booby, hold your tongue; (to Ant.) To make such a noise for threepence! (pointing to the flowers.) Since it can no longer be concealed, it was I who jumped down from there.
IL C, ANT: Chi? voi stesso?	COUNT, ANT: Who? You yourself?
LA C, SUS: (Che testa! che ingegno!)	COUN, SUS: (What a head! How clever!)
FIG: Che stupore?	FIG: Why wonder?
IL C: (Ah! creder nol posso!)	COUNT: (Oh! I can not believe it!)

ANT: Come mai diventaste sì grosso? Dopo il salto non eri così.	ANT: What has made you become so big? You were not so after the jump.
FIG: A chi salta succede così.	FIG: It happens so to people who jump.
ANT: Chi il direbbe?	ANT: Who would suppose it?
LA C, SUS: Ed insisti? che pazzo! (ad Ant.)	COUN, SUS: And you insist?—how stupid! (to Ant.)
IL C: Tu che dici?
ANT: A me parve il ragazzo—	ANT: I thought it was the boy—
IL C: Cherubin?	COUNT: Cherubino!
LA C, SUS: (Maledetto!)	COUN, SUS: (Curse him!)
FIG: Esso appunto Per la posta a cavallo quì giunto Da Saviglia, egli forsi sarà!	FIG: He is just come from Seville, and is arrived here—perhaps it is he!
ANT: Questo no, questo no, che il cavallo Io non vidi saltare di là.	ANT: Not so, not so, for I did not see the horse jump down.
IL C: Che pazienza! Finiam questo ballo.	COUNT: What patience! Let us finish this dance.
LA C, SUS: (Come mai, giusto ciel, finirà;)	COUN, SUS: (Good heavens! how will it end?)
IL C: Dunque tu?—	COUNT: Then you?
FIG: Saltai giù.	FIG: I jumped down.
IL C: Ma perchè?	COUNT: Why then?
FIG: Il timor—	FIG: Fear.
IL C: Che timor?	COUNT: Of what.
FIG: Là rinchiuso; Aspettando quel caro visetto— Tippe—tappe—un susurro fuor d' uso— Voi gridaste—lo scritto biglietto— Saltai giù dal balcone confuso, E stravolto m' ho un nervo del piè. (stropicciandosi il piede; Ant. cava fuori delle carte.)	FIG: Shut up there, Waiting for that dear pretty face— Knock, knock—an unusual noise I hear. You cried out—The note that was written— I leaped down from the balcony confused, And have sprained my foot. (rubs his foot; Ant. pulls out some papers.)
ANT: Vostre dunque saran queste carte, Che perdeste?	ANT: Then these papers are yours, which you dropped?
IL C: Olà porgile a me. (Ant. gliele dà.)	COUNT: Here! Give them to me. (Ant. gives them to him.)
FIG: (Sono in trappola!)	FIG: (I am caught!)
LA C, SUS: (Figaro all' èrta!)	COUN, SUS: (Figaro, mind!)
IL C: Dite un po' questo foglio cos' è? (mostrandoglielo da lontano.)	COUNT: Tell me a little what is this paper? (showing it him at a distance.)
FIG: Tosto il dico—ne ho tanti, aspettate. (cava di tasca molte carte, e le esamina.)	FIG: I shall tell it immediately—I have so many—stay. (pulls many papers out of his pocket and examines them.)
ANT: Sarà forse il sommario de debiti.	ANT: Perhaps it is the list of his debts.
FIG: No, la lista degli osti.	FIG: No, it is that of the guests.
IL C: Parlate! (a Fig.) E tu lascialo. (ad Ant.)	COUNT: Speak! (to Fig.) And you leave him. (to Ant.)
LA C, SUS: Lascialo, e parti.	COUN, SUS: Leave him and go.
ANT: Parto sì, ma se torno a trovarti—	ANT: I go, yes, but if I find you again—
FIG: Vanne, vanne, non temo di te. (Ant. parte: Il Conte mostra ancor il foglio; e La Contessa vede ch' Lè la patente.)	FIG: Go, go, I do not fear you. (exit Ant., the Count shows the paper, and the Countess sees it is the commission.)
IL C: Dunque?	COUNT: Then.
LA C: (O ceil! la patente.) (piano a Sus.)	COUN: (O heavens! the commission!) (whispering to Sus.)
SUS: (Giusti Dei! la patente!) (a Fig.)	SUS: (Just heavens! the commission!) (to Fig.)
IL C: Coraggio. (a Fig.)	COUNT: Cheer up. (to Fig.)
FIG: Oh che testa! quell' è la patente Che poc' anzi il fanciullo mi diò.	FIG: O what a head! That is the commission which that boy gave me not long ago.
IL C: Perchè fare?	COUNT: To do what?
FIG: Vi manca—	FIG: It wants—
IL C: Vi manca?	COUNT: It wants?
LA C: (Il suggello.)	COUN: (The seal.)
SUS: (Il suggello, il suggello.) (piano a Fig.)	SUS: (The seal, the seal.) (softly to Fig.)
FIG: E l' usanza di porvi il suggello.	FIG: It is usual to put the seal to it.
IL C: (Questo birbo mi toglie il cervello! Tutto, tutto è mistero per me! (guaicisce il foglio)	COUNT: This rogue turns my brain! All, all is mystery for me! (he twists and rumples the paper about.)
LA C, SUS: (Se mi solve da questa tempesta, Più non havvi naufragio per me!)	COUN, SUS: (If I save myself from this storm, I shall never be wrecked!)
FIG: (Sbuffa invano, la terra calpesta, Poverino! ne sa men di me.) (vengono Bar., Mar., e Bas.)	FIG: (In vain the poor fellow raves and stamps, he knows less about it than I.) (Enter Bar., Mar., and Bas.)
MAR, BAR, BAS: Voi, signor, che giuto siete, Ci dovete ora ascoltar.	MAR., BAR., BAS: You, sir, who are just, must hear us now.
IL C: (Son venuti a vendicarmi, E mi sento consolar!)	COUNT: They are come to revenge me, and I feel myself comforted!)
LA C, SUS, FIG: Son venuti a sconcertarmi, Qual rimedio ritrovar!	COUN, SUS, FIG: They are come to put me out; what remedy can I find!
FIG: Son tre stolidi, tre pazzi, al Con.) Cosa mai vengono a far?	FIG: They are three stupid ones, three madmen. (to the Count.) What can they be coming about?
IL C: Pian pianin, senza schiamazzi Dica ognun quel che gli par.	COUNT: Softly and gently, without confusion, let every one say what he likes.
MAR: Un impegno nuziale (al Con. parlando di Fig.) Ha costui con me contratto, E pretendo che il contratto Deva meco effettuar.	MAR: This man has signed articles of marriage with me: (to the Count, speaking of Fig.) And I demand the performance of it.
LA C, SUS: Come! come!	COUN, SUS: How! how!
IL C: Olà! silenzio! Io son quì per giudicar.	COUNT: Mind there! be silent! I am here to judge.
BAR: Io com' uomo al mondo cognite Vengo quì per testimonio, Del promesso matrimonio Con prestanza di danar.	BAS: I, as a man known to the world, come here as a witness of the promise of marriage, and money lent.
LA C, SUS, FIG: Son tre matti, son tre matti!	COUN, SUS, FIG: They are all three mad, they are all three mad.
IL C: Ehi! silenzio, lo vedremo, Il contratto leggeremo, Tutto in ordin deve andar.	COUNT: Mind! be silent! We shall see it, we shall read the articles, all must proceed regularly.

LA C, SUS, FIG: (Son confusa, o, son stordita!, o!
Disperata, o, sbalordita!, o!
Certo un diavol del inferno
Quì gli ha fatti capitar!)

IL C, MAR, BAR, BAS: (Che bel colpo! che bel caso! È cresciuto a tutti il naso! Qualche Nume a noi propizio Quì ci ha fatti capitar!)

FINE DELL' ATTO SECONDO

■ ATTO III

SCENA I

Gran Sala, ornata per una Festa Nuziale. Il Conte, che passeggia turbato, e riflessivo; poi La Contessa, e Susanna in fondo.

IL C: Che imbarazzo è mai questo!
Un foglio anonimo—
La cameriera in gabinetto chiusa—
La padrona confusa—un uom che salta
Dal balcone in giardino—
Non so cosa pensare!
(vengono La Cont. e Sus.)

LA C: Via fatti core, digli
Che t' attenda in giardino.

IL C: Saprò se Cherubino
Era giunto a Siviglia; e a tale oggetto
Ho mandato Basilio.

SUS: O Dio! non oso!

LA C: Pensa che sta in tua mano il mio riposo.
(si ritira.)

IL C: È Susanna! Chi sa ch' ella tradito
Abbia il segreto mio—
Oh! se à parlato, a Figaro
Farò sposar la vecchia.

SUS: (Marcellina!)
(Sus. si avanza.)
Signor?

IL C: Cosa bramate?

SUS: Mi par che siate in collera?

IL C: Volete qualche cosa?

SUS: Signor, la vostra sposa
Ha i soliti vapori,
E vi chiede il vasetto degli odori.

IL C: Prendete.

SUS: Or vel riporto.

IL C: Ah no! potente

IL C: Riternelo per voi.

SUS: Per me, signore? Questi non son mali
Da donne triviali.

IL C: Un' amante che perde il caro sposo, (ironico.)
Sul punto d' ottenerlo—

COUN, SUS, FIG: I am confused, I am astonished! in despair and confounded!
Certainly some devil from Tartarus sent them here.

COUNT, MAR., BAR., BAS: What a fine blow! what a fine case!
They are all out of countenance!
Some propitious deity has sent us here.

END OF ACT II.

■ ACT III

SCENE I

A large Room fitted up for a Wedding. The Count walks up and down with an air of trouble and reflection; then the Countess and Susanna at the farther end.

COUNT: What perplexity is this! An anonymous letter—the maid locked up in the closet—the mistress in confusion—a man jumps from the balcony into the garden—I know not what to think!
(the Coun. and Sus. come forward.)

COUN: Come, take courage, tell him to wait for you in the garden.

COUNT: I shall know if Cherubino had arrived at Seville for that purpose I sent Basilio.

SUS: O gods! I do not dare!

COUN: Remember that my peace of mind is in your hands.
(withdraws.)

COUNT: It is Susanna! Who knows whether she has betrayed my secret?—Oh! if she has spoken, I will make the old woman marry Figaro.

SUS: (Marcellina!) (SUS. comes forward.) Sir?

COUNT: What do you want?

SUS: You seem angry?

COUNT: Do you want any thing?

SUS: Your lady has her usual vapors, and begs for the smelling-bottle.

COUNT: Take it.

SUS: I shall bring it back immediately.

COUNT: Oh! no, you may keep it for yourself.

SUS: For me, sir? those are not complaints for women of low estate.

COUNT: An affectionate girl, who loses her beloved promised husband, (ironically,) on the point of having him—

SUS: Pagando Marcellina colla dote
Che voi mi prometteste—

IL C: Ch' io vi promisi! quando?

SUS: Credea d' averlo—inteso—

IL C: Sì—se —aveste voluto
Intendermi voi stessa.

SUS: È mio—dovere—
E quel di sua Eccellenza—è mie volero.

IL C: Crudel! perchè finora
Farmi languir così?

SUS: Signor, la donna ognora
Tempo à di dir di sì.

IL C: Dunque, in giardin verrai?

SUS: Se piace a voi, verrò.

IL C: È non mi mancherai?

SUS: No, non vi mancherò.

IL C: Mi sento dal contento
Pieno di gioja il cor!

SUS: (Scusatemi se mento, Voi che intendete amor.)

IL C: Ma la Contessa attenderà il vasetto.

SUS: Eh, fu solo un pretesto,
Parlato non avrei senza di questo.

IL C: Carissima!

SUS: Vien gente.

IL C: (È mia senz' altro!)
(parte)

SUS: Forbitevi la bocca, signor scaltro.
(parte, ma Fig. l' incontra)

FIG: Ehi, Susanna, ove vai?

SUS: Taci; senz' avvocato
Hai già vinta la causa.

FIG: Cos' è nato?
(Sus. fugge; Fig. la seque; Il Con. che ha sentito dal fondo le ultime parole, torna.)

IL C: Hai già vinta la cause!—Cosa sento?
In qual laccio cadea!—Perfidi! io voglio
In tal modo punirvi—Ma piacer mio
La sentenza sarà—Ma se pagasse
La vecchia pretendente?
Pagarla? in qual maniera?—E poi v' è Antonio,
Che all' incognito Figaro ricusa
Di dare una nipote in matrimonio—
Coltivando l' orgoglio
Di questo mentecatto—
Tutto giova a un raggiro: il colpo è fatto.
Vedrò, mentr' io sospiro,
Felice un servo mio?
E un ben che invan desio,
Ei posseder dovrà!
Vedrò per man d' amore

SUS: Paying Marcellina with the portion that you promised me—

COUNT: That I promised you? when?

SUS: I thought I heard it—

COUNT: Yes—if—you would have listened to me yourself.

SUS: It is my—duty—and your lordship's pleasure—is mine.

COUNT: Cruel maid! why make you me to languish like this until now?

SUS: Sir, a woman always has time to say yes.

COUNT: Then you will come to the garden?

SUS: If it pleases you, I will come.

COUNT: And you will not disappoint me?

SUS: No, I will not disappoint you.

COUNT: I feel my heart delighted, and filled with joy.

SUS: (You who know what love is, pardon me if I deceive.)

COUNT: But the Countess is waiting for the box.

SUS: Oh! it was only a pretense; without this I could not have spoken.

COUNT: You are quite certain!

SUS: Some body is coming.

COUNT: (She is mine without a doubt!)
(exit.)

SUS: You'll lose your trouble, Mr. Fox.
(exit, but is met by Fig.)

FIG: Here, Susanna, where are you going?

SUS: Hush! without an attorney, you have already won your cause.

FIG: What has happened?
(Sus. runs; Fig. follows her; the Count, who heard the last words from a distance, comes back.)

COUNT: You have already won your cause!—What do I hear? In what snare was I falling? You two are both false-hearted! I will punish you in such a manner—the sentence shall be according to my pleasure—But if he paid the old pretender, I pay her? how?—besides, there is Antonio, who refuses to give a niece in marriage to the unknown Figaro.—In feeding the pride of this booby—All is useful in a scheme; the blow is struck.
Shall I behold my happy servant while I sigh?
And is he to possess
A treasure I wish for in vain?
Shall I see joined by love
To an unworthy object
One who has raised a passion
She does not feel for me?
Oh no! I will not leave

Unita a un vile oggetto Chi in me destò un affetto, Che per me poi non ha! Ah no! lasciarti in pace Non vo' questo contento: Tu non nascesti, audace, Per dare a me tormento, E forse ancor per ridere Di mia infelicità! Già la speranza sola Della vendetta mia Quest' anima consola, E giubbilar mi fa!	You so much bliss in peace: Bold man, you were not born To give me this torment, And afterwards, perhaps, To laugh at my misfortune. Already the mere hope That I shall have revenge, gives my soul content, And fills my heart with joy.
SCENA II	SCENE II
Mentre Il Conte sta per partire, vede arrivar Don Curzio, che parla con Figaro, Marcellina, Bartolo; indi Susanna.	While the Count is going he sees Don Curzio coming, who is speaking with Figaro, Marcellina, and Bartolo; then Susanna.

SUS: Alto alto, signor Conte, Mille doppie son quì pronte, A pagar vengo per Figaro, Ed a porlo in libertà.	SUS: Stop, stop, Count; a thousand pistoles are ready here, and I am come to pay for Figaro, and restore him his liberty.
IL C, D. C: Non sappiam com' è la cosa, Osservate un poco là. (accennando Fig. abbracciato con Mar.)	COUNT, DON C: We do not know how the business goes on; look there a bit. (pointing to Fig. who is embracing Mar.)
SUS: Già d' accordo con la sposa! Giusti Dei! che infedeltà! (vuol partire; Fig. la trattiene.) Lascia, iniquo!	SUS: Already agreed with the bride! Just gods! what infidelity! (going, Fig. stops her.) Leave me, villain!
FIG: No, t' arresta Senti, o cara—	FIG: No, stay; hear me, my love— (gives him a slap.)
SUS: Senti questa. (gli da uno schiaffo.) (Fremo! smanio di furore Una vecchia me la fa!)	SUS: Hear this one. (I fret, I rave with fury, An old woman plays me a trick!)
IL C: (Fremo! smanio dal furore Il destino me la fa!)	COUNT: (I fret, I rave with fury, Fate plays me a trick!)
D. C: Fre-eme-sma-nia da-al fu-uro-ore, Il destino, gliela fa!	DON C: (He fre-ets, he ra-aves with fu-ury, Fate plays him a fine trick.)
MAR, FIG, BAR: È un effetto di buon cuore, Tutto amore è quel che fa.	MAR, FIG, BAR: It arises from goodness of heart; Whatever he does in from love.
MAR: Lo sdegno calmate (a Sus.) Mia cara figliuola, Sua madre abbracciate, Che or vostra sarà.	MAR: Your anger appease; (to Sus.) My daughter so dear, His mother embrace, Who now will be yours.
SUS: Sua madre?	SUS: His mother?
IL C., D.C.: Sua madre?	COUNT, DON C.: His mother?
SUS: Tua madre?	SUS: Your mother?
FIG: Mia madre, E questo è mio padre, (di Bar.) Che a te lo dirà.	FIG: My mother, and this is my father Who will tell it you. (pointing to Bar.)
SUS, MAR, FIG, BAR: Al dolce contento—di questo momento Quest' anima appena—resistere or sa!	SUS, MAR, FIG, BAR: The unusual content of this happy moment My mind can hardly sustain with firmness.
IL C, D. C: Al fiero tormento—di questo momento Quest' Quell' anima appena—resistere or sa (Il Cont. e D. C. partono.)	COUNT, DON C: The cruel torment of this fatal moment (My/His) mind can hardly sustain with firmness. (exeunt the Count. and Don C.)

SCENA IV

Susanna, Marcellina, Figaro, e Barberina.

MAR: Prendi questo biglietto
Del denar che a me devi, ed è tua dote.
(lo dà, e gli altri)

SUS: Prendi ancor questa borsa.

BAR: E questa ancora.

FIG: Bravi! gettate pur, ch' io piglio ognora.

SUS: Voliamo ad informar di ogni avventura
(a Fig.)
Madama e nostro zio.
Chi al par di me contento?

FIG: Io.

BAR: Io.

MAR: Io.

SUS, MAR, BAR, FIG: E schiatti il signor Conte al gusto mio!
(partono.)

SCENA V

Bar. che tira per la mano Cherubino.

BAR: Andiamo, andiam, bel paggio; in casa mia
Tutte ritroverai
Le più belle ragazze del Castello.

CHE: Ah! se il Conte mi trova,
Misero me! tu sai;
Che partito mi crede per Siviglia.

BAR: Odi: vogliamo adesso
Vestirti come noi;
Tutti insieme andsem poi
A presentar de' fiori a madamina;
Fidati, Cherubino a Barberina.
(partono.)

SCENA VI

LA CONTESSA: (sola). E Susanna non viene! Sono onsiosa
Di saper come il Conte
Accolse la proposta; alquanto ardito
Il progetto mi par—Ad uno sposo
Sì vivace, e geloso
Ma che mal c' è? Cangiando i miei vestiti
Con quelli di Susanna, e i suoi co' miei—
Al favor della notte—O cielo! e a quale
Umil stato fatale io son ridotta
Da un consorte crudel, che dopo avermi
Con un misto inaudito
D' infedeltà, di gelosia, di sdegno—
Prima amata indi offesa, e alfin tradita.
Fammi or cercar da una mia serva aita!
Dove sono i bei momenti
Di dolcezza e di piacer?

SCENE IV

Susanna, Marcellina, Figaro and Bartolo.

MAR: Take this note for the money you owe me; it will be your portion.
(gives it and the others.)

SUS: Take this purse too.

BAR: And this one also.

FIG: Well done all! throw and welcome, I shall always take.

SUS: Let us fly (to Fig.) to inform Madame and our uncle of all that has happened. Who can be as happy as I?

FIG: I.

BAR: I.

MAR: I.

SUS, MAR, BAR, FIG: And may the Count go mad with rage at hearing of my happiness!
(exeunt.)

SCENE V

Barberina, pulling Cherubino by the hand.

BAR: Come, come, by pretty page: you will find at my house all the prettiest girls of the castle.

CHE: Oh! if the Count finds me, I am finished! You know he thinks I've gone to Seville.

BAR: Hear me; we want to dress you like one of us: we then shall all go to present some flowers to my lady. Cherubino, trust Barberina.
(exeunt.)

SCENE VI

COUN: (alone). And Susanna does not come! I am anxious to know how the Count received the proposal: the plan seems to me a bold one—to a husband so quick and jealous—but what harm is it? In changing my dress with Susanna, and she putting on mine—Favored by night—O Heavens! To what state of humiliation am I reduced by a cruel husband! who after having with an unheard-of mixture of infidelity, of jealousy, of anger—first beloved, then offended, and at last betrayed. I am now compelled to employ the assistance of a servant of mine!
Where have those charming moments fled
Of great sweetness and delight?
Where have those frequent oaths flown
Of that false deceitful mouth?
Why, if all is changed to sorrows
And to tears, for my poor heart,

Dove andaro i giuramenti
Di quel labbro menzogner?
Perchè mai, se in pianto e in peno
Per me tutto si cangiò
La memoria del mio bene
Dal mio sen non trespassò!
Ah! se almen la mia costanza
Nel languire amando ognor.
Mi portasse una speranza
Dan cangiar l' ingrato cor!
(parte)

SCENA VII

Il Conte, ed Antonio col cappello da uffiziale di Cherubino in mano.

ANT: Io vi dico, signor, che Cherubino
È ancora nel castello,
E vedete per prova il suo capello.

IL C: Ma come se a quest' ora
Esser giunto a Seviglia egli dovria?

ANT: Scusate, oggi Seviglia è in casa mia.
Là vestissi da donna, e là lasciati
Ha gli altri abiti suoi.

IL C: (Perfidi!)

ANT: Andiamo, e gli vedrete voi.
(partono.)

SCENA VIII

La Contessa, e Susanna, che vengono insieme.

LA C: Cosa mi narri? E che ne disse il Conte?

SUS: Gli si leggeva in fronte
Il dispetto e la rabbia.

LA C: Piano, chè meglio or lo porremo in gabbia.
Dov' è l' appuntamento
Che tu gli proponesti?

SUS: In giardino.

LA C: Fissiamogli ora un loco.
Scrivi, scrivi—

SUS: Ch' io scriva? ma signora—

LA C: Eh, scrivi, dico; tutto
Io prendo su me stessa.
(Sus. siede.)

LA C: Canzonetta sull' aria—

SUS: —sull' aria.

LA C: Che soave zefiretto—

SUS: Zefiretto.

LA C: Questa sera spirera—

SUS: Questa, etc.

LA C: Sotto i pini del boschetto.

SUS: Sotto, etc.

LA C, SUS: Ei già, certo il reso capirà. (Sus. piega il biglietto.)

SUS: Piegato è il foglio; or come si sigilla?

The remembrance of my happiness
Is not flown away with them!
Ah! my constancy in loving,
And in suffering such pains,
Could at least afford me a hope
To change that ungrateful heart.
(exit.)

SCENE VII

The Count, and Antonio with Cherubino's regimental hat in his hand.

ANT: I tell you, sir, that Cherubino is still in the castle. and, as proof, here is his hat.

COUNT: How then, if by this time he ought to have arrived at Seville?

ANT: Pardon me, today Seville is in my house. He put on a female dress, and has left his own clothes in my house.

COUNT: (Deceivers!)

ANT: Let us go, and you may see them yourself.
(exeunt.)

SCENE VIII

Enter the Countess and Susanna together.

COUN: What do you tell me? And what did the Count say about it?

SUS: One could read on his face vexation and rage.

COUN: Gently, we will catch him better now.
Where did you propose to meet him?

SUS: In the garden.

COUN: Let us now give him a place. Write—

SUS: I write? but, madam—

COUN: Come, write, I say; I take all upon myself.
(Sus. takes a chair.)

COUN: A song to the tune—

SUS: —To the tune.

COUN: Of sweet Zephyr—

SUS: Sweet Zephyr?

COUN: This night will marry—

SUS: —Will marry,

COUN: Under the pines in the grove—

SUS: —The grove.

COUN, SUS: (Of course/Certainly), he will understand the remainder.
(Sus. folds up the note.)

SUS: It is folded; now how is it to be sealed?

LA C: Ecco prendi una spilla,
Servirà di sigillo—attendi—scrivi—
Sul rovescio del foglio:
Rimandate il sigillo.
(Sus. scrive.)

SUS: È più bizzarro
Di quel della patente.

LA C: Presto nascondi, io sento venir gente.

SCENA IX

La Contessa e Susanna. Viene Cherubino in abiti di contadinella; e Barberina con varie altre contadine, che portano dei mazzetti di fiori; poi Il Conte, ed Antonio in fondo; indi Figaro)

Cherubino e Barberina: Ricevete, padroncina,
Queste rose e questi fior,
Che abbiam colti stammattina
Per mostrarvi il nostro amor
Siamo tante contadine,
E siam tutte poverine,
Ma quel poco che rechiamo
Ve diamo di buon cuor.

BAR: Queste sono. Madama,
Le ragazze del loco,
Che il poco ch' han vi vengono ad offrire,
E vi chiedon perdon del loro ardire.

LA C: Venite quà, datemi i vostri fiori.
(prende il mazzetto di Cher. e lo bacia in fronte. Il Con. e Ant. entrano, ed Ant. esamina le ragazze.)
Come arrossì! Susanna, non ti pare
Che somigli ad alcuno?

SUS: Al naturale!
(Ant. scuopre Cher. gli leva la cuffia, gli pone il cappelo da uffiziale in testa, e dice al Con.)

ANT: Eh! cospettaccio, quest' è l uffiziale.

LA C: (O stelle!)

SUS: (Malandrino!)

IL C: Ebben, madama?—
(alla Cont.) E perchè non partiste?
(a Cher. che si cava il cappello.)

CHE: Signor—

IL C: Saprò punire
La tua disubbidienza.
(Vien Figaro.)

FIG: Signor, se trattenete
Tutte queste ragazze,
Addio festa addio danza.

IL C: E che! vorresti
Ballar col piè stravolto?
(ironica)

FIG: Eh, non mi duol più molto.
Andiam, belle faniculle.

LA C: (Come si caverà dall' imbarazzo?)
(a Sus.)

COUN: Here, take a pin, it will serve for a seal—
Mind—write on the back, send back the seal.
(Sus. writes.)

SUS: It is more odd than that of the commission—

COUN: Be quick, hide it; I hear some body coming.

SCENE IX

The Countess and Susanna. Enter Cherubino, dressed as a Country girl; and Barberina, with several Country Lasses, bringing nosegays; then the Count and Antonio at the farther end; afterwards Figaro.

CHERUBINO and BARBERINA:
Receive, my dear mistress,
These roses and flowers,
Which we gathered this morning
To show you our love.
We are country girls,
And we are all poor;
But what little we offer,
We give with good heart.

BAR: Madam, these are the girls of this place, who come to offer you what little they have, and beg your pardon for their presumption.

COUN: Come here, give me your flowers.
(takes Cher.'s nosegay, and kisses his forehead. Enter the COUNT and Ant.; he examines the girls.)
What blushes! Susanna, do not you think there is a great resemblance to some body?

SUS: To the life.
(Ant. discovers Cher., pulls his cap off, claps his regimental hat on, and says to the Count,)

ANT: Ha! by Jupiter, this is the officer.

COUN: (O heavens!)

SUS: (Wicked dog!)

COUNT: Well, madam?
(to the Coun.)
And why didn't you set out?
(to Cher., who pulls off his hat.)

CHE: Sir—

COUNT: I shall know how to punish your disobedience.
(Enter Figaro.)

FIG: Sir, if you stop all these girls, there is an end of the entertainments and the dance.

COUNT: Would you dance with a sprain in your foot?
(ironically.)

FIG: Oh! it does not give me much pain now. Come, my pretty girls.

COUN: (How will he get through the scrape?)
(whispering to Sus.)

SUS: Lasciate fare a lui.

IL C: Per buona sorte,
(a Fig.)
I vasi eran di creta.

SUS: Senza fallo!
Andiamo, dunque, andiamo.

ANT: Ed intanto a cavallo
Di galoppo a Siviglia andava il paggio.

FIG: Di galoppo o di passo, buon viaggio.
Venite belle giovani.
(si sente la marcia in lontano.)
Ecco la marcia, andiamo,
Ai vostri posti, o belle;
(Susanna, dammi il braccio!

SUS: Eccolo.

IL C: (Temerarj! io son di ghiaccio!)
(partono tutti; eccetio Il Con. e La Cont.)

IL C: Contessa!

LA C: Or non parliamo,
Ecco quì le due nozze,
Riceverle dobbiamo: alfin si tratta
D' una vostra protetta. ironica.)
Sediam.

IL C: Sediamo; (e meditiam vendetta!)

SCENA X

Il Conte e La Contessa seduti sul sofà; Susanna a braccio con Figaro, e Marcellina con Bartolo; Basilio ed Antonio; Contadini e Contadine, Servi e Guardie.

Varie Contadinelle portano il cappellino verginale, ornato di piume bianche, il velo, i guanti, ed il mazzetto per Sus. e per Mar. Bart. e Fig. vengono insieme. Ant. conduce Sus. dinanzi al Conte, ed ella s' inginocchia. Mentre Il Conte le pone in testa il cappellino, ed il velo, e la da i guanti ed il mazzetto, si canti il Coro. Sus. dà al Conte, furtivamente un biglietto, ed egli se lo pone in seno con desirezza. Fig. viene a ricever Sus. dalle mani del Conte e si ritira dall' altra parte vicino a Mar. Segue intanto una lieta danza.

CORO: Amanti costanti—seguaci d' onor,
Cantate, lodate—sì saggio signor.
A un dritto cedendo—che—oltraggia, che offende,
Ei caste vi rendo—ai vostri amator.

TUTTI: Cantiamo, lodiamo, sì saggio signor.
(Il Con. nell' aprire il biglietto si punge, e getta via lo spillo.)

IL C: È già solita usanza;
Le donne ficcan gli aghi in ogni loco
Ah! ah! capisco il giuoco!
(cerca lo spillo.)

SUS: (Let him alone.)

COUNT: Luckily the pots were of clay.

FIG: Without doubt! let us go then, let us go.

ANT: And in the mean time the page was galloping away to Seville.

FIG: Galloping or cantering a good journey. Come, my pretty damsels.
(a March is heard at a distance.)
Here is the march, let us go; take your places, my beauties. (Susanna, give me your arm.)

SUS: Here it is.

COUNT: (Impudent ones, I am frozen!)
(exeunt all, except the Count and Coun.)

COUNT: Countess!

COUN: Let us not speak now; here are the two weddings, we must receive them: mind, it is a protégé of yours that is in question.
(ironically.)

COUNT: Let us sit down and think of revenge!

SCENE X

The Count and Countess seated on a sofa. Enter Sus. and Fig. arm in arm, and Mar. with Bart., Basillo and Ant. Country people, Servants, and Guards.

Some country girls bring the little virginal hat adorned with white feathers, the veil, the gloves, the nosegays, for Sus. and Mar. Enter Bart. and Fig. together. Ant. leads Sus. before the Count, and she kneels. While the Count puts the little hat on her head, and the veil, and gives her the gloves and nosegay, the Chorus is sung. Sus. gives slyly the Count a note, and he puts it dexterously into his waistcoat. Fig. comes to receive Sus. from the hands of the Count, and withdraws on the other side, near Mar. Then follows a merry dance.

Chorus: You constant lovers, who follow honor,
Do sing, do praise so good a lord;
Who gives up a right, insulting, degrading,
And return chastely to your lovers.

ALL: Let us sing, let us praise so good a lord,
(the Count on opening the note pricks himself, and throws away the pin.)

COUNT: (It is the usual custom, women thrust pins everywhere.)
Oh! oh! I understand the trick now!
(looks for the pin.)

FIG: (Un biglietto amoroso!
(a Mar. e Sus.)
Che gli diè nel passar qualche galante,
Ed era sigillato d' uno spillo
Ond' ei si punse il dito;
Il Narciso or lo cerca: oh, che stordito!)
(Il Con. trova lo spillo, e lo prende. Finisce il ballo.)

IL C: Andate amici, e sia per questa sera
Disposto l' apparato nuziale,
Colla più ricca pompa; io vo' che sia
Magnifica la festa; e canti, e fuochi,
E gran cena, e gran ballo; ognuno impari
Com' io tratto color che a me son cari.
(partono tutti.)

FINE DELL' ATTO TERZO

FIG: (A love letter? (to MAR. and SUS.) which some lover's friend gave him in passing, and it was sealed with a pin, which pricked his finger. The Adonis is now looking for it: oh! what a foolish fellow!)
(the Count finds the pin, and takes it; the dance ends.)

COUNT: Go, my friends, and let the nuptial preparations be ready for to-night, with the richest pomp: I will have the entertainment be magnificent; singing, fire-works, a great supper, and a grand ball; let all learn how I treat those who are dear to me.
(exeunt all.)

END OF ACT III.

ATTO IV

Gran Viale del Giardino, che conduce al Castello.

Barberina, che tiene in mano un' arancia, una ciambella, ed un lanternino nell' altra, cercando qualche cosa per terra con ansietà. Indi Fig. e Mar. Notte.

BAR: L' ho perduta—me meschina!
Ah! chi sa dove sarà?
La mia povera cugina,
Il padron cosa dirà?
(piango.)
(Vengono Fig. e Mar.)

FIG: Barberina, cos' hai?

BAR: L' ho perduta cugino.

FIG: Cosa?

MAR: Cosa?

BAR: La spilla,
Che a me dette il padrone
Per recare a Susanna.

FIG: A Susanna la spilla?

BAR: A te già niente, preme?

FIG: Oh! niente, niente?

BAR: Addio, mio bel cugino;
Vo' da Susanna, e poi da Cherubino!
(parte.)

FIG: Madre?

MAR: Figlio?

FIG: Son morto!
Ah! quella spilla, o madre, è quella stessa
Che poc' anzi raccoiso.

MAR: È ver, ma questo,
Al più, ti porge un dritto
Solo di stare in guardia.

FIG: All' arte dunque, il loco del congresso
So dov' è stabilito.

ACT IV

A great Alley in the Garden, leading to the Castle.

Barb. with an orange and a cake in one hand, and a little lantern in the other, looking uneasily for something on the ground. Then Fig. and Mar. Night.

BAR: I have lost it—how unlucky? Oh! who know where it is? my poor cousin, my master, what will he say?
(cries.)
(enter Fig. and Mar.)

FIG: Barberina, what is the matter?

BAR: I have lost it, cousin.

FIG: What?

MAR: What?

BAR: The pin my master gave me to carry to Susanna.

FIG: A pin to Susanna.

BAR: It is of no consequence to you?

FIG: Oh! none, none!

BAR: Adieu, my pretty cousin; I shall go to Susanna, then to Cherubino.
(exit.)

FIG: Mother?

MAR: Son?

FIG: I am dead!
Oh! that pin, my mother, is the very same which not long ago he picked up.

MAR: It is true; but this gives you, at most, a right to be upon your guard.

FIG: I must look sharp then; I know where the meeting place is.

MAR: Dove vai, figlio mio?

FIG: A vendicar tutti i mariti, addio!
(parte.)

MAR: Presto avvertiam Susanna;
Io la credo innocente: quella faccia,
Quell' aria di modestia.
Ah! quando il cor non ci arma
Personale interesse,
Ogni donna è portala alla difesa
Del suo povero sesso,
Da questi uomini ingrati a torto oppresso.
Il capro e la capretta
Son sempre in amistà;
L' agnello, all' agnelletta
La guerra mai non fa.
Le più feroci belve
Per selve e per campagne
Lascian le lor campagne
In pace e libertà.
Sol noi povere femmine,
Che tanto amiam questi uomini,
Trattate siam dai perfidi
Ognor con crudeltà.
(parte.)

SCENA XII

Giardino. In fondo un Viale di Pini. Dai lati due Padiglioni chiusi praticabili.

Barberina, Figaro, Bartolo, e Basilio, con alcuni sgherri.

BAR: Nel padiglione a manca, ei così disse:
È questo, è questo—e poi se non venisse?
Ebben che cosa importa?
Sempre avrò fatto ben—oh Dio! son morta.
(vede venir gente, ed entra nel padiglioni a sinistra. Vengono da una parte Fig. e Bar. dall' altra Bas. e varj sgherri.)

FIG: È Barberina—chi va là?

BAS: Son quelli, che invistaste a venir.

BAR: Che brutto ceffo!
Sembri un conspirator; (che diamin sono Quegli infausti apparati?)

BAS: (Ora capisco come Accordati si son senza di me.)

FIG: Voi da questi contorni
(agli sgherri.)
Non vi scostate: intanto
Io vado a dar certi ordini,
E torno in pochi istanti;
A un fischio mio, correte tutti quanti.
(si ritira con ossi.)

BAS: Ha i diavoli nel corpo!

BAR: Ma cosa pensi?

MAR: Where are you going, son?

FIG: To revenge all the husbands; adieu!
(exit.)

MAR: Quick, I must let Susanna know; I believe she is innocent; her face, her modest air. Ah! when personal interest does not harden our hearts, every women is inclined to defend those of her poor sex, wronged and oppressed by men.
The goat and his dear mate
Are ever tender friends;
The lamb never molests
His gentler companion.
The most ferocious beasts
Grant their partners
In peace and liberty to live,
Through forests and through fields.
It is only we poor women,
Who love these men so much,
That are so cruelly treated
By these treacherous men.
(exit.)

SCENE XII

A Garden. At the bottom, an Alley of Pines. On the sides, two Pavilions, with the doors shut.

Barberina, Figaro, Bartolo, and Basilio, with some Ruffians.

BAR: In the pavilion on the left as he said; it is this, it is this—and then, if he doesn't come—Well, what does that signify? I shall always have done right—O gods! I am dead!
(sees people coming, goes into the Pavilion on the left. Enter from one side, Fig. and Bar.; from the other side, Bas. and some Ruffians.)

FIG: It is Barberina—Who goes there?

BAS: The men you invited to come.

BAR: What an ugly face! you look like a conspirator. (What the deuce are those ill-looking appearances?)

BAS: (Now I understand how they have agreed without me.)

FIG: Do not go (to the ruffians) far from here; mean while I shall go to give certain orders, and shall be back in a few moments; when I whistle all of you, run!
(withdraws with them.)

BAS: He has the devil in his body!

BAR: But what are you thinking about?

BAS: Nulla;
Susanna piace al Conte, ella d' accordo
Gli diè un appuntamento,
Che a Figaro non piace.

BAR: E che? Dunque dovria soffrirlo in pace?

BAS: Nel mondo, amico mio,
L' accozzarlo co' grandi,
Fu pericolo ognora;
Da novanta per cento, e han vinto ancora.
In quegli anni, in cui val poco
La mal pratica ragion,
Ebbi anch' io lo stesso fuoco,
Fui quel pazzo che or non son.
Che col tempo, co' perigli
Donna Flemma capitò,
E i capricci, ed i puntigli
Dalla testa mi cavò.
Presso un piccolo abituro
Seco lei mi trase un giorno,
E togliendo giù dal muro
Del pacifico soggiorno
Una pelle di somaro,
Prendi, disse, o figlio caro,
Poi disparve, e mi lasciò.
Mentre ancor tacito, guardo quel dono,
Il ciel si annuvola, rimbomba il tuono,
Mista alla grandine, scroscia la piova;
Ecco le membra coprir mi giova
Col manto d' asino che mi donò.
Finisce il turbine, io fo due passi:
Che fiera orribile innanzi a me fassi;
Già già mi tocca l' ingorda bocca;
Già di difendermi speme non ho.
Ma il fiuto ignobile del mio vestito.
Tolse alle belva sì l' appetito,
Che disprezzandomi si rinselvò.
Così conoscere mi fe la sorte,
Ch' onte, pericoli, vergogna e morte
Col cuoja d' asino fuggir si può.
(si ritirano.)

SCENA XIII

Figaro solo.

FIG: 'Tutto è disposto: l' ora
Dovrebbe esser vicina—io sento gente—
Edessa—non è alcun: buja è la notte,
Ed io comincio amai
A far lo scimunito!
Mestiere di marito!
Ingrata! nel momento
Della mia cerimonia
Ei godeva leggendo, e vederlo,
Io rideva di me senza saperlo!
O Susanna! Susanna!
Quanta pena mi costi!
Con quell' ingenua faccia—
Con quegi occhi innocenti—
Chi creduto l' avria!—
Ah! che il fidarsi a donna è gran follia!

BAS: Nothing; the Count likes Susanna; she consenting, fixed a meeting which Figaro does not like.

BAR: What? Should he bear it patiently?

BAS: My friend, in this world it was always dangerous to oppose the great; if they give ninety points in a hundred, they still win any game.
In those years when inexperienced
Reason is of little avail.
I too had the same great fire;
I was that madman, I am no more.
That time no less than dangers,
Have brought me, madam, patience,
Who drove out of my head
My whims and all punctilios.
One day she took me to
A humble dwelling place,
And took down from the wall
Of the peaceful abode
The skin of an old ass;
Take this, she said, dear son,
Then she left me and disappeared,
while I still beheld the gift.
I saw the clouds come on, I heard the thunder,
And hail and rain flew around the land;
I therefore found it good to cover myself
With the mantle of the skin she gave me.
The storm ceased. I went on a little;
I saw a wild beast rushing near me;
I saw his mouth voracious upon my limbs
All hopes I had to defend myself had fled
But the ignoble scent of my dress
Cured the beast of its appetite,
That, despising me, it went into the wood.
Thus fate made me discover,
That disgrace, danger, shame, and death,
May be avoided with an ass's skin.
(they withdrew.)

SCENE XIII

Figaro alone.

FIG: "All is prepared: the hour ought to be near—I hear some body—it's her—No, it is nobody: the night is dark, and I begin now to play the silly part of a husband! Ungrateful woman! At the moment of my ceremony, he was enjoying what he read, and on seeing him, I was laughing at my own expense without knowing it! O Susanna! Susanna! What anguish you cost me!—With that air of sincerity—with those innocent eyes—who could have believed it!—Ah! trusting to a woman is a great folly! "Open your eyes a little, imprudent and silly men; look at these women—see what they are. These called goddesses by the deceived

Aprite un po' quelgi occhj,
Uomini incauti, e sciocchi,
Guardate queste femmine,
Guardate cosa son.
Queste chiamate Dee
Dagl' ingannati sensi,
A cui tributa incensi
La debole ragion,
Son streghe, che incantano per farci penar;
Sirene che cantano per farci affogar;
Civette che allettano per trarci le piume,
Comete che brillano per toglierci il lume;
Son rose spinose, son volpi vezzose!
Son orse benigne, colombe maligne:
Maestre d' inganni, amiche d' affanni,
Che fingono, mentono,
Amore non sentono,
Non senton pietà.
Il resto nol dico.
Già ogouno la sa'
(si ritiro.)

SCENA XIV

La Contessa, Susanna, Marcellina, Figaro, che passeggia.

SUS: Signora, ella mi disse,
Che Figaro verravvi.

MAR: Anzi venuto,
Abbassa un po' la voce.

SUS: Dunque un ci ascolta, e l' altro
Dee venir a cercarmi:
Incominciam.

MAR: Io voglio quì celarmi.
(si ritira)

SUS: Madama, voi tremate; avreste freddo?
(alla Con.)

LA C: Parmi umida, la notte: io mi ritiro;
(si ritira: comparisce Fig.)

FIG: Eccoci della, crisi al grand' istante!
(passeggia e si ritira, poi subito ricomparisce ed ascolta.)

SUS: Il birbo è in sentinella,
Divertiamci anche noi,
Diamogli la mercè dei dubbj suoi.
Giunse al fine il momento,
(Fig. ascolta.)
Che godrò senza affanno
In braccio all' idol mio: timide cure,
Uscite dal mio petto,
A turbar non venite il mio diletto.
Oh! come par che all' amoroso fuoco
L' amenità del loco,
La terra, il ciel risponda,
Come la notte i furti miei seconda!
Deh! vieni, non tardar, o gioja bella,
Vieni ove Amore per goder t' appella;
Finchè risplende in ciel notturna face,
Finchè l' aria è ancor bruna, e il senses to whom altars are raised by weak reason.

"They are witches that bewitch, to put us to torment; sirens who sing but to drown us; owls to ensnare us, to pick our feathers; comets which shine to dazzle and blind us; they are roses full of thorns, they are beautiful foxes; they are kind bears, wicked doves; skillful in fraud, creatures of sorrow, who dissemble, lie, feel neither love nor pity.
"I say no more, for it is needless."
(withdraws.)

SCENE XIV

The Countess, Susanna, Marcellina, Figaro, walking about.

SUS: Madam, you told me that Figaro would come.

MAR: No, he is here; speak softly.

SUS: Then one hears us, and the other has come to seek me; let me begin.

MAR: I will conceal myself here.
(draws aside.)

SUS: Madame, you tremble; are you cold?
(to the Coun.)

COUN: I think it is a damp night: I withdraw.
(withdraws. Fig. appears.)

FIG: We are now at the moment of the great crisis!
(walks about, withdraws, then immediately reappears.)

SUS: The rogue is upon the watch; I will amuse myself too, and reward him for his suspicions. At last the moment has come (Fig. listens.) that I shall be happy with my love; timid apprehensions, begone from my breast; come not to trouble my happiness. Oh! how it seems that the beauty of the place, the earth, the sky, answer to my amorous wishes! How night favors my secret love!
Then come, do not delay, my dearest jewel.
Ah! come where love invites you to be happy.
Come, while the stars of night shine in the sky.
While darkness reigns, the world is wrapped in silence.
The brook here murmurs, here the mondo tace.

Quì mormora il ruscel, quì scherza l' aura,
Che col dolce susurro il cor ristaura;
Quì ridono i fioretti, e l' erba fresca
Ai piaceri d' amor quì tutto adesca.
Vieni, ben mio, fra queste piante ascose,
To vo' la fronte incoronar di rose.
(si ritira.)

SCENA XVI

Fig., Che. da uffiziale; poi tutti gli altri a loro tempo. La Con. esce subito cogli abiti di Sus.

FIG: Perfida! e in questa forma
Meco mentià!—non so s' io vegli, o dorma!

CHE: Là, là, là, là, là, lerà.

LA C: Il picco! paggio.

CHE: Io sento gente, entriamo
Dove entrò Barberina—
Oh! vedo quì una donna.

LA C: Ahimè meschina!

CHE: M' inganno? a quel cappello,
Che nell' ombra vegg' io, parmi Susanna.

LA C: Ah! se il Conte ora vien!—
sorte tiranna!

CHE: (Pian pianin le andrò più presso;
(si avvicina.)
Tempo perso non sarà.)

LA C: Ah! se il Conte arriva adesso,
Qualche imbroglio accaderà.

CHE: Susannetta? (non risponde;
Or la burlo in verità.)
(la prende per la mano.)

LA C: Arditello!—sfacciatello,
Ite presto via di quà.

CHE: Smorfiosa, maliziosa,
Io già so perchè soi quà.
(Vengono Il Con. e Fig.)

LA C: Ah! se arriva quì il Conte, siam perduti!

CHE: Dunque tu mi rifiuti
Una semplice occhiata, e al Conte poi—

LA C: Partite tosto, o chiamo gente!

CHE: Ingrata!

IL C: Questa mi par Susanna.

LA C: (Ecco quì il Conte.)

FIG: (Teniam le mani pronte.)

CHE: (Il Conte! O Dio! Son morto, La tempesta prevedo, e vado in porto.)
(entra dove è andato Bar.)

zephyrs play,
And their sweet sounds give comfort to the heart.
Here the gay little flowers seem to smile around,
And the fresh grass invites us all to love.
Ah! come, my love, in these sequestered bowers;
And I encircle your head with roses.
(withdraws.)

SCENE XVI

Fig., Che. in an Officer's regimentals; then all the others in their turn. The Countess comes out immediately, in Susanna's dress.

FIG: False woman! And in this manner did she impose upon me! I don't know whether I am awake or asleep!

CHE: La, la, la, la, la lera.

COUN: The little page.

CHE: I hear people about, I'll go where Barberina went! Oh! I see a woman here.

COUN: Alas! I am undone!

CHE: Do I mistake? By the hat I perceive in the dark, I think it is Susanna.

COUN: Ah! if the Count should come now! Cruel fate.

CHE: (I will go softly nearer to her. It will not be lost time.)
(approaches her.)

COUN: Oh! If the Count should come now, something bad will happen.

CHE: Dear Susanna? (She gives no answer; I shall now catch her indeed.)
(takes her by the hand.)

COUN: Little bold fellow!—Little impudent fellow, begone quickly from here.

CHE: Madame affectation, madame deep-one, I know why you are here.
(Enter the Count and Figaro.)

COUN: If the Count should happen to come now, we are undone!

CHE: Then, you wicked creature, you deny me a single glance, and with the Count—

COUN: Begone, or I will cry out for help!

CHE: You ungrateful hussy!

COUNT: 'Tis Susanna, I think.

COUN: (Here is the Count.)

FIG: (Let us be prepared for blows.)

CHE: (Oh! I see the Count, I am undone; the storm is at hand, let us take shelter here.)
(enters where Barb. went.)

IL C: Son quì, dammi la mano,
Amabile Susanna—ah! vieni—

FIG: (Indegni!)

LA C: O ciel! di là vien gente!

IL C: Chi va là?

FIG: Un galantuom.

IL C: Figaro parmi
Precedimi, verrò; voglio celarmi.
(La Cont. entra nel padiglione a dritta, Il Con. va in fondo.)

FIG: Tutta è tranquillo e placido;
Entrò la bella Venere,
Col vago Marte prendere
Nuovo Vulcan del secolo
In rete la potrò.
(Vien Susanna.)

SUS: Ehi? Figaro, tacete.

FIG: (Oh! questa è la Contessa.)
A tempo quì giungete,
Vedrete da voi stessa
Il Conte, e la mia sposa;
Di propria man la cosa
Toccare vi farò.

SUS: Parlate un po' più basso:
(con voce alterata.)
Di quà non movo il passo,
Ma vendicar mi vo'.

FIG: (Susanna!) Vendicarsi?

SUS: Sì.

FIG: Come potria farsi?

SUS: (L' iniquo io vo' sorprendere, Poi so quel che farò.)

FIG: (La volpe vuol sorprendere,
E secondar la vo'.)
(Sus. vuole schiaffeggiar, Fig. che si difende con grazia.)

FIG: Pace, pace, mio dolce tesoro;
Conosciuto ho la voce che adoro,
E che impressa ognor serbo nel cor.

SUS: La mia voce?

FIG: La voce che adoro.

FIG & SUS: Pace, pace, mio dolce tesoro,
Pace pace, mio tenero amor.
(Viene Il Con.)

IL C: Non la trovo, girai tutto il bosco.

SUS, FIG: (Questi è il Conte, alla voce il conosco.)

IL C: Ehi? Susanna? Sei sorda? Sei muta?

SUS: (Bella! bella! non l' ha conosciuta!)

FIG: (Chi?)

SUS: Madama.

FIG: Che dici! Madama?

SUS, FIG: La commedia, idol mio, terminiamo, Consoliamo il bizzarro amator.
(Fig. s' inginocchia avanti a Sus.)
Sì Madama, voi siete il ben mio.
(a Sus.)

COUNT: Here I am, dear Susy, give me your hand. Come!

FIG: (O you wretched creature!)

COUN: (Heavens! some body is coming!)

COUNT: Who goes there?

FIG: Friends.

COUNT: 'Tis Figaro, I think; go before; I will conceal myself for a moment.
(the Coun. goes into the Pavilion on the right, the Count goes towards the farther end.)

FIG: All here is quiet and tranquil,
The fair Venus has gone
With her beloved Mars,
A Vulcan of this age;
I'll catch her in my net.
(Enter Susanna.)

SUS: Hear me? Figaro, be silent.

FIG: (Oh! this is the Countess.)
You come in the right time,
You will yourself behold
The Count and my bride:
I will you quite convince!
Of it with your own eyes.

SUS: Speak softer;
(changing her voice a little)
I shall not stir a step,
But will be revenged.

FIG: (Susanna!) Revenged?

SUS: Yes.

FIG: How can it be done?

SUS: (I will surprise the villain; then I know what I shall do.)

FIG: (The fox wants to surprise, and I will assist.)
(Sus. goes to box Fig's ears, who defends himself gracefully.)

FIG: Peace, peace, my sweet love;
I discovered the voice I adore,
And which is ever imprinted on my heart.

SUS: My voice?

FIG: The voice I adore.

FIG & SUS: Peace, peace, my sweet treasure;
Peace, peace, my tender love.
(Enter the Count.)

COUNT: I can not find her. I have gone all over the wood.

SUS, FIG: (This is the Count; I know him by his voice.)

COUNT: Here, Susanna, are you deaf? Are you dumb?

SUS: (A fine one, a fine one indeed! He did not know her!)

FIG: (Who?)

SUS: Madame.

FIG: What do you say? Madame?

SUS, FIG: My love, let us finish this farce, let us comfort the whimsical lover.
(Fig. kneels before Sus.)

	FIG: Yes, Madame, you are my love. (to Sus.)
IL C: (La mia sposa, e senz' arme son io!)	COUNT: (My wife! and I unarmed!)
FIG: Un ristoro al mio cor concedete.	FIG: Grant comfort to my heart.
SUS: Io son quì, faccio quel che volete.	SUS: I am here, ready to please you.
IL C: (Ah! ribaldi!)	COUNT: (Villains!)
SUS, FIG: Ah! corriamo, mio bene, E le pene compensi piacer. (Sus. entra nel padiglione a sinistra, Il Cont. chiama gente.)	SUS, FIG: Let us run, my love, that pleasure may compensate pain. (Sus. goes into the Pavilion on the left. The Count calls out for assistance.)
IL C: Gente? all' armi!	COUNT: People? To arms!
FIG: Ohimè il padrone! (finge pauro.)	FIG: Alas! my master! (pretending fear.)
IL C: Gente, ajuto!	COUNT: People! help!
FIG: Son perduto! (vengono in fretta Bart., Basil., Anton., contadini con torce.)	FIG: I am undone. (enter in haste Bart., Basil., Ant., and Countrymen, with torches.)
BAR, BAS, ANT: Cos' avvenne?	BAR., BAS., ANT: What is the matter?
IL C: Il scellerato (dì Fig.) M' ha tradito, mi ha infamato, E con chi, state a veder, (entra nel padiglione a sinistra)	COUNT: The villain (of Fig.) has betrayed me, has disgraced me? and with whom? go and see. (goes into the pavilion on the left.)
BAR, BAS, ANT: Son stordito, sbalordito! Non mi par che ciò si aver.	BAR. BAS. ANT. FIG: I am surprised, I am astonished! It does not seem to me true. I am surprised, I am astonished! (What a scene what a delight!) (the Count pulls Che. along by the arm without looking at him.)
FIG: Son stordito sbalordito! (Oh che scena! che piacer!) (Il Con. tira Cher. per un braccio senza guardarlo.)
IL C: Invan resisti; uscite, Madama, Il premio ora avrete di vostra onestà. (si avanzano Sus., Mar., Barb., sorpressa generale.)	COUNT: In vain you resist; come out, Madame; you shall now receive the reward of your honesty. (Sus., Mar., Bar. come forward; a general surprise ensues.)
IL C: Il paggio!	COUNT: The page!
ANT: Mia figlia!	ANT: My daughter!
FIG: Mia Madre!	FIG: My mother!
FIG, BAR, ANT: Madama!	FIG, BAS, ANT: Madame!
IL C: Scoperta è la trama, la perfida è quà. (Sus. si copre il viso col ventaglio.)	COUNT: The plot is discovered, the traitress is here. (Sus. hides her face with her fan.)
SUS: Perdono! perdono!	SUS: Pardon! Pardon!
IL C: No, no, non vo' darlo.	COUNT: No, no, I will not grant it.
FIG, BAS, ANT, SUS: Perdono!	FIG, BAS, ANT, SUS: Pardon!
IL C: No, no! (La Contessa viene dal padiglione alla destra.)	COUNT: No, no! (the Coun. comes out of the pavilion on the right.)
LA C: Almeno per loro perdono otterrò.	COUN: At least I shall obtain pardon for them.
FIG, BAS, ANT, SUS: O cielo! che veggio, delirio! vaneggio! E creder non so!	FIG, BAS, ANT, SUS: O heavens! What do I see? am I right? am I in my senses? I can not believe it.
IL C: Contessa, perdono!	COUNT: Countess, pardon?
LA C: Più docile io sono, E dico di sì.	COUN: I am more condescending, and say yes.
TUTTI: Ah! tutti contenti saremo così. Questo giorno di tormenti, Di capricci e di follia, In contenti, e in allegria Solo Amor può terminar. Sposi, amici! al ballo, al giuoco Alle mine date fuoco, Ed al suon di lieta marcia Corriam tutti a festeggiar.	ALL: Then we shall be most pleased and happy For this sad day of torments, Of strange whims, and of folly In contentment and in mirth, Love alone will terminate. Bride and bridegroom, friends, advance, Repair to the merry sports, Let us all be merry here To the sound of lively music.

Don Giovanni (1787)

Don Juan

MUSIC BY WOLFGANG AMADEUS MOZART ■ LIBRETTO BY LORENZO DA PONTE

This two-act dramma giocoso, set to a libretto by Lorenzo da Ponte, premiered at the National Theater in Prague on October 29, 1787. It is said that Mozart wrote the overture for this magnificent opera the night before its premiere in 3 hours' time! There is also a story that, at the first rehearsal, Mozart was not satisfied with Zerlina's cry of terror; leaving the orchestra pit, he hid behind the wings and, at her cue, he pinched her. When she shrieked, Mozart said, "that is the way I want it." The opera opens with Leporello, Don Giovanni's servant, declaiming the number of Don Giovanni's conquests—1,003 in Spain. Don Giovanni comes in, followed by Donna Anna and then her father, the Commandant. Don Giovanni murders the Commandant in a duel. Donna Anna, in her grief, swears vengeance. Next enters Donna Elvira, whom Don Giovanni has deserted just as he was eloping with her. The action now moves to a country spot where villagers are singing and dancing in celebration of the upcoming marriage of Zerlina and Masetto. Don Giovanni decides to seduce Zerlina; Leporello invites the merry-makers to the castle and detains Zerlina. Just as Don Giovanni is about to win her over, Donna Elvira denounces him. Donna Anna and Don Ottavio, Donna Anna's fiancé, also enter and it is during this scene that Donna Anna recognizes the voice of her father's murderer. After many dramatic developments, a man in stone appears at a banquet held at Don Giovanni's castle; it is the statue of the Commandant. The statue asks Don Giovanni, I have been your guest. Will you be mine? and, when Don Giovanni wrenches himself free from the statue's grip and refuses to repent, a fiery pit opens and engulfs Don Giovanni in its flames.

■ ATTO I	■ ACT I
SCENA I	SCENE I
Piazza. Da un lato il Palazzo del Commendatore; dall'altro una Locanda.—S'appressa l'alba.	A Square. On one side, the Palace of the Commandant; on the other, an Hotel with a Balcony. Time, Daybreak.
Leporello; indi Don Giovanni e Donna Anna.	Leporello; afterwards Don Juan and Donna Anna.
LEPORELLO: Notte e giorno faticar, Per chi nulla sà gradir; Piòva e vento sopportar, Mangiar male e mal dormir. Voglio far il gentiluomo, E non voglio più servir; Nò, nò, nò, non voglio più servir. Oh che caro galantuomo: Vuol star dentro colla bella, Ed io far la sentinella! Voglio far il gentiluomo, E non voglio più servir, Nò, nò, nò, non voglio più servir. Ma mi par, che venga gente, Non mi voglio far sentir, Ah! (Entra Don Giovanni, e Donna Anna.)	LEPORELLO: I'm tortured night and day, And no thanks I ever get; Now I'm chilled by piercing winds, Now with rain I'm dripping wet. I'm resolved to change my state. And be a gentleman so great; Yes, yes, yes, and be a gentleman so great. I've a precious master truly; While within he woos the ladies, I must sentinel without be! I'm resolved to change my state, And be a gentleman so great. Softly now, there's someone coming, And I must not be seen here. (Enter Don Juan, followed by Donna Anna.)
ANNA: Non sperar, se non m'uccidi, Ch'io ti lascio fuggir mai.	ANNA: Till your name I've learned, you viper, From this spot you shall not go.
GIOVANNI: Donna folle, indarno gridi! Chi son io tu non saprai.	JUAN: Foolish girl, beware my fury! Who I am you shall never know.
LEPORELLO: (Che tumulto! oh, ciel, che gridi) Il padron in nuovi guai!	LEPORELLO: (What a tumult! oh, dear, what screaming). My master's in some new trouble!
GIOVANNI: (Taci, e trema al mio furore.)	JUAN: (Be silent, or my rage you'll rue.).
ANNA: Scelerato!	ANNA: Miscreant!
GIOVANNI: Sconsigliata!	JUAN: Imprudent woman!
ANNA: Genti, servi! traditore! Come furia disperata Ti saprò perseguitar.	ANNA: Villain, tremble! Help! what, ho! I'm desperate, Any my persecutor fain would know.
GIOVANNI: (Questa furia disperata Mi vuol far precipitar.)	JUAN: (Some fearful act she'll surely Make me do.).
LEPORELLO: (Sta a veder ch'il malandrino Mi farà precipitar.) (Esce Donna Anna).	LEPORELLO: (Some fearful act! and I must share it, too.). (Exit Donna Anna).
SCENA II	SCENE II
Don Giovanni, il Commendatore, Leporello.	Don Juan, the Commandant, and Leporello.
COMMENDATORE: Lasciala, indegno; Battiti meco.	COMMANDANT: Unhand her, villain; Turn and defend yourself.
GIOVANNI: Va, non mi degno Di pugnar teco.	JUAN: Hence, fool! I deign not to fight with you.
COMMENDATORE: Così pretendi Da me fuggir?	COMMANDANT: Do you fear me? Do you from me fly?
LEPORELLO: (Potessi almeno Di quà partir.)	LEPORELLO: (I wish I could— I think I'll try.).
COMMENDATORE: Batti!	COMMANDANT: Coward!

GIOVANNI: Misero! attendi,
Se vuoi morir.
(Si battono—il Commendatore cade)

COMMENDATORE: Ah soccorso! son tradito.
L'assassino m'ha ferito,
E dal seno palpitante
Sento l'anima partir.

GIOVANNI: Ah! già cade il sciagurato,
Affannoso e agonizzante;
Già dal seno palpitante
Veggo l'anima partir.

LEPORELLO: (Qual misfatto! qual eccesso!
Entro il sen dallo spavento
Palpitar il cor mi sento—
Io non so che far, che dir!)

GIOVANNI: (Sotto voce). Leporello, ove sei?

LEPORELLO: Son quì mia disgrazia, e voi—

GIOVANNI: Son quì.

LEPORELLO: Chi è morto—voi, o il vecchio?

GIOVANNI: Che domanda da bestia! il vecchio!

LEPORELLO: Bravo! due imprese leggiadre: sforzai la figlia, ed ammazzar il padre!

GIOVANNI: L'ha voluto suo danno.

LEPORELLO: Ma Donn'Anna cos'ha voluto?

GIOVANNI: Taci! Non mi seccar, vien meco; —se non vuoi qualche cosa ancor tu—
(Minacciandolo.)

LEPORELLO: Non vo' nulla, Signor! non parlo più.
(Partono).

SCENA III

Donna Anna, Don Ottavio, e Servi con fiaccole.

ANNA: Ah, del padre in periglio! in soccorso voliam.

OTTAVIO: Tutto il mio sangue verserò, se bisogna.
Ma dov'è il scelerato!

ANNA: In questo loco (Vedendo il corpo del suo Padre.) Ma qual mai s'offre, oh Dei! spettacolo funesto agli occhi miei! Padre mio! mio caro padre!

OTTAVIO: Signore!

ANNA: Ah, l'assassino mel trucidò! Quel sangue, quella piaga—quel volto tinto e coperto del color di morte! Ei non respira più— fredde le membra! Padre mio! caro padre! padre amato! Io manco—io moro!

JUAN: Tremble! for you must
Most surely die.
(They fight—the Commandant falls).

COMMANDANT: Ah, great Heaven! Powers of Mercy!
'Neath the assassin's hand expiring,
Forth, from out my quivering bosom,
Fast the life-blood wells away.

JUAN: There the meddling fool lies prostrate:
Agony his frame is wringing;
Fast his soul its flight is winging,
As his life-blood wells away.

LEPORELLO: (Horror, horror! deed of darkness!
Terror, dire, my blood congealing,
Through my veins like ice it is stealing—
I know not what to do or to say.).

JUAN: (in a low voice). Leporello, where are you?

LEPORELLO: Here, master, to my disgrace; and you—

JUAN: Here.

LEPORELLO: Oh! which is dead—you or the old man?

JUAN: Fool! what a question!

LEPORELLO: Two pretty exploits, truly, for one night: seduce the daughter, and kill the father!

JUAN: He was bent on his ruin.

LEPORELLO: And was Donna Anna bent on her's?

JUAN: Silence! Question not, but follow me; —breathe not a word, or—(Threatening him.)

LEPORELLO: I won't, I won't, Sir!
I'll never speak again.
(Exeunt).

SCENE III

Donna Anna, Don Octavio, and Servants with torches.

ANNA: Ah, my father is in danger! let us fly to his succor.

OCTAVIO: To the last drop of my blood you may command me. But where is the villian?

ANNA: Here I left him. (Seeing the body of her Father.) But, just Heaven, what sight of horror presents itself! My father! my dear father!

OCTAVIO: My lord!

ANNA: Ah, he is slain! This blood, these wounds—his face covered with the pale hue of death! He no longer breathes—his limbs are cold. My father! my dear, my beloved father! I faint—I die!

OTTAVIO: Ah soccorrete, amici, il mio tesoro! Cercatemi, recatemi qualche odor, qualche spirito. Ah non tardate! Donn'Anna, sposa, amica! Il duolo estremo la meschinella uccide.

ANNA: Ahi!

OTTAVIO: Già riviene! Datele nuovi ajuti.

ANNA: Padre mio!

OTTAVIO: Celate, allontanate agli occhi suoi quell'oggetto d'orrore. Anima mia! consolati, fa core!

ANNA: Fuggi, crudele, fuggi!
Lascia che mora anch'io!
Ora ch'è morto, oh Dio!
Chi a me la vita diè!

OTTAVIO: Senti cor mio, deh senti!
Guardami un solo istante!
Ti parla il caro amante.
Che vive sol per te!

ANNA: Tu sei, perdon! mio bene!
L'affanno mio, le pene!
Ah, il padre mio dov'è?

OTTAVIO: Il padre lascia, o cara!
La rimembranza amara:
Hai sposo e padre in me!

ANNA: Ah, vendicar, s'il puoi,
Giura quel sangue ognor!

OTTAVIO: Lo giuro agli occhi tuoi.
Lo giuro al nostro amor!

A 2: Che giuramenti oh Dei!
Che barbaro momento!
Fra cento affanni e cento
Vammi ondeggiando il cor!
(Partono)

SCENA IV

Strada.—Don Giovanni e Leporello.

GIOVANNI: Orsù spicciati presto—cosa vuoi?

LEPORELLO: L'affar di cui si tratta è importante.

GIOVANNI: Lo credo.

LEPORELLO: Importantissimo.

GIOVANNI: Meglio ancora. Finiscila.

LEPORELLO: Ma giurate di non andar in collera.

GIOVANNI: Lo giuro sul mio onore, purchè non parli del Commendatore.

LEPORELLO: Siamo soli?

GIOVANNI: Lo vedo.

LEPORELLO: Nessun ci sente?

GIOVANNI: Via!

LEPORELLO: Vi posso dire tutto liberamente.

GIOVANNI: Tutto si.

OCTAVIO: Hasten, my friends, to assist your unfortunate mistress! Fetch water, scents—try all means to restore her. Hasten, I entreat you! Donna Anna, beloved mistress! Her grief, I fear, is fatal.

ANNA: Ah, me!

OCTAVIO: She revives! Redouble your efforts.

ANNA: Oh, my father!

OCTAVIO: Quickly remove her from this scene of horror. Console yourself, love! oh, cease this sorrow!

ANNA: Leave me, forever leave me!
Heaven of life bereave me!
With him who being gave me,
Oh, let me perish too!

OCTAVIO: Forbear this wild appealing!
Oh, calm your frantic feeling!
And hear your lover, kneeling,
Who lives alone for you!

ANNA: My love, alas! forgive me!
My maddening mind will leave me!
My father, you I call!

OCTAVIO: Console yourself, soothe your mind, love
Ever in me you'l find, love,
A father, lover, all!

ANNA: Swear for my bleeding sire
You will prove a stern avenger.

OCTAVIO: I swear by your eyes' soft fire!
I swear by all our love!

A 2: Oh, moment full of anguish,
That such on oath makes needful!
Our hearts with grief still languish,—
Our cup's with sorrow full!
(Exeunt).

SCENE IV

A Street.—Don Juan and Leporello.

JUAN: Come, then, out with this mystery—what is it?

LEPORELL: The affair I am about to speak of is of consequence.

JUAN: No doubt.

LEPORELLO: Of great consequence.

JUAN: Better and better. To the point, then.

LEPORELLO: Promise me not be in a passion.

JUAN: I give you my honor, provided it does not relate to the Commandant.

LEPORELLO: We are alone?

JUAN: For aught I see.

LEPORELLO: No one hears us?

JUAN: Away, fool!

LEPORELLO: But may I speak my whole mind freely?

JUAN: You may.

LEPORELLO: Dunque quand'è così, caro signor padro-ne, la vita che menate è da briccone—

GIOVANNI: Temerario! in tal guisa!

LEPORELLO: E il giuramento.

GIOVANNI: Zitto! Non si parli di giuramento, taci, o ch'io— (Minacciandolo).

LEPORELLO: Non parlo più! non fiato, pardon mio.

GIOVANNI: Così saremo amici. Or odi un poco sai tu perchè son qui?

LEPORELLO: Non ne so nulla. Ma essendo l'alba chiara, non sarebbe qualche nuova conquista: io lo devo saper per porla in lista.

GIOVANNI: Va là che sei 'l grand'uom! Sappi ch'io sono innamorato d'una bella dama, e son certo che m'ama. La vidi, le parlai: meco al Casino questa notte verrà; zitto mi pare sentir odor di femina.

LEPORELLO: (aparte). Cospetto! che odorato perfetto!

GIOVANNI: All'aria mi par bella.

LEPORELLO: (aparte). E che occhio, dico!

GIOVANNI: Ritiriamoci un poco, e scopriamo terren.

LEPORELLO: (Già prese foco.)

SCENA V

Donna Elvira; Don Giovanni, e Leporello, in disparte.

ELVIRA: Ah! chi mi dice mai Quel barbaro dov'è?
Che per mio scorno amai, Che mi mancò di fè.
Ah se ritrovo l'empio, E a me non torna ancor,
Vò farne orrendo scempio, Gli vò cavar il cor.

GIOVANNI: (a Leporello). Udisti? Qualche bella del vago abbandonata. Poverina! poverina! cerchiam di consolar il suo tormento.

LEPORELLO: (aparte). Così ne consolò mille e ottocento.

GIOVANNI: Signorina! signorina!

ELVIRA: Chi è là!

GIOVANNI: Stelle! che vedo?

LEPORELLO: (aparte). Oh bella! Donna Elvira!

ELVIRA: Don Giovanni! Sei quì? Mostro, fellon, nido d'inganni!

LEPORELLO: Well, since you give me leave, dear master, I must say that the life you lead is horrible, and the sooner you amend it—

JUAN: What, rascal! do you dare to talk to me thus?

LEPORELLO: No, but your promise.

JUAN: No more, knave! Promise or no promise, be silent or— (Threatening him).

LEPORELLO: I am dumb! I say nothing, dear master.

JUAN: It is the way to keep us friends. Now, hark Leporello: do you know what brings me here?

LEPORELLO: I know nothing, but I guess it's some new love affair: you must tell me the lady's name, that I may put it in my list.

JUAN: Spoken like a clever fellow! Know, then, that I am enamored of a most beautiful woman, and I am sure she returns my love. I have seen her and conversed with her: she is to meet me to-night at the Casino; but hush! a female approaches.

LEPORELLO: (aside). Zooks! what an exquisite ear he has!

JUAN: At the first glance I see she is handsome.

LEPORELLO: (aside). With an eye like a hawk!

JUAN: Let us retire a little, and reconnoitre.

LEPORELLO: (He is on fire already.)

SCENE V

Donna Elvira; Don Juan and Leporello concealed.

ELVIRA: Ah! how shall I discover
Where this barbarian lives?
Though I may not call him mine,
My heart still homage gives.
But should I find the traitor, And find he loves no more,
It will then be mine to torture, And wound his bosom's core.

JUAN: (to Leporello). Do you hear? This fair damsel is complaining of some faithless lover. Poor girl! I must seek to console her.

LEPORELLO: (aside). He has consoled, in this manner one thousand and eight hundred only!

JUAN: Madam, madam!

ELVIRA: Who is there?

JUAN: Heaven! what do I see?

LEPORELLO: (aside). Excellent! It is Donna Elvira!

ELVIRA: What do I see? Don Juan! Monster, robber, mountain of deceit!

LEPORELLO: (aparte). Che titoli cruscanti! Manco male che lo conosce bene.

GIOVANNI: Via, cara Donna Elvira, calmate quella collera! sentite—lasciatemi parlar!

ELVIRA: Cosa puoi dire dopo azion sì nera? In casa mia entra furtivamente, a forma d'arte, di giuramenti e di lusinghe arrivi a sedurre il cor mil! m'innamori, o crudele! Mi dichiari tua sposa, e poi,—mancando della terra e del Ciel al santo dritto,—con enorme delitto, dopo tre dì da Burgos allontani. M'abbandoni, mi fuggi—e lasci in preda al rimorso ed al pianto per pena forse che t'amai cotanto!

LEPORELLO: (aparte). Pare un libro stampato!

GIOVANNI: Oh, in quanto a questo ebbi le mie ragioni. (a Leporello). E vero?

LEPORELLO: È vero (Ironicamente.) E che ragioni forti?

ELVIRA: E quali sono, se non la tua perfidia, la legerezza tua? Ma il giusto Cielo vuole, ch'io ti trovassi per far le sue, le mie vendette.

GIOVANNI: Via, cara Donna Elvira, siate più ragionevole! (Aparte.) Mi pone a cimento costèi. (Forte.) Se non credete al labbro mio, credete a questo galantuomo.

LEPORELLO: Salvo il vero?

GIOVANNI: (forte). Via dille un poco.

LEPORELLO: (piano). E cosa devo dirle?

GIOVANNI: (forte, partendo). Si, si, dille pur tutto.

ELVIRA: (a Leporello). Ebben, fa presto.

LEPORELLO: (esitando). Madama—veramente—in questo mondo conciò—sia cosa—quando—fosse che—il quadro non è tondo—

ELVIRA: Sciagurato! Così del mio dolor gioco ti prendi? Ah voi— (Verso Don Giovanni che non crede partito.) Stelle! l'iniquo fuggì! Misera me! dove? In qual parte.

LEPORELLO: Eh, lasciate che vada! Egli non merita ch'a lui voi più pensiate.

ELVIRA: Il scelerato m'ingannò, mi tradì!

LEPORELLO: Eh consolatevi! Non siete voi, non foste, e non sarete nè la prima, nè l'ultima. Guardate questo non piccolo libro: è tutto pieno dei nomi di sue belle. Ogni LEPORELLO: (aside). What choice epithets! One may see that she is an old acquaintance.

JUAN: Come, dear Elvira, restrain this anger! Hear me—let me speak!

ELVIRA: What can you say in excuse for your black conduct? To enter secretly my house, and, by artifice, by oaths and flattery, to become master of my affections! To make me your wife, and then, defying Heaven and earth, as it were,—denying my sacred right,—and with unheard of treachery departing, in three days, from Burgos. To fly, to abandon me—to leave me a prey to remorse and anguish! A sad return for having loved so well!

LEPORELLO: (aside). This is as true as if it was printed!

JUAN: Yes, I confess it all; but know, Elvira, that I had my strong reasons for this; (to Leporello) had I not, Leporello?

LEPORELLO: Oh, yes, very strong reasons. (Ironically.) But what were they?

ELVIRA: What can they be but levity and want of faith? But heaven has permitted me to discover you, that I may avenge its wrongs, and my own.

JUAN: My dearest Elvira, be a little more rational, I entreat you! (Aside.) This woman embarrasses me. (Aloud.) If you will not believe me, you will at least believe this worthy gentleman.

LEPORELLO: That's me, exactly!

JUAN: (aloud). You will explain the whole to her.

LEPORELLO: (aside to him). And what can I explain?

JUAN: (aloud, and going). Yes, yes, you will explain all.

ELVIRA: (to Leporello). Well, make haste, then.

LEPORELLO: (hesitating). Madam—assuredly—in the strange world in which we live—it may—be safely asserted—that a square is not a circle—and, therefore—

ELVIRA: Abominable villain! is my grief a fit subject for mockery? And you, Don Juan— (Turns, and discovers that he has gone.) Heaven! the reprobate has left me! Unhappy me! what shall I do? Which way did he go?

LEPORELLO: Ah, let him go! He does not deserve that you should bestow a thought upon him.

ELVIRA: He betrays, he abandons me!

LEPORELLO: Do not be unhappy! You are not the first lady he has deserted, neither will you be the last. See, here is a large book: it is filled entirely with the names of his mis-villa, ogni borgo—ogni paese, è testimone di sue donnesche imprese.

Madamina!
Il catalogo è questo,
Delle belle, che anò il padron mio!
Un catalogo egli è ch'ho fatto io:
Osservate, leggete con me!
In Italia seicento e quaranta,
In Alemagna duecento trent'una;
Cento in Francia, in Turchia novant'una,
Ma, ma in Ispagna, son già mille e tre!
V'han fra queste contadine.
Cameriere cittadine;
V'han Contesse, Baronesse,
Marchesane, Principesse,
E v'han donne d'ogni grado,
D'ogni forma d'ogni età.
Nella bionda, egli ha l'usanza
Di lodar la gentilezza,— Nella bruna la costanza,
Nella bianca la dolcezza!
Vuol d'inverno la grassotta
Vuol d'estate la magrotta;
E la grande, maestosa;
La piccina, ognor vezzosa.
Delle vecchie fa conquista
Per piacer di porle in lista:
Sua passion predominante
E la giovin principiante
Non si picca, se sia ricca—
Se sia brutta, se sia bella!
Purchè porti la gonnella,
Voi sapete quel che fa!
(Parte).

ELVIRA: In questa forma dunque mi tradì il scelerato? è questo il premio che quel barbaro rende all'amor mio? Ah vendicar vogl'io l'ingannato mio cor! Pria ch'ei mi fugga, si ricorra—Si vada; io sento in petto sol vendetta parlar, rabbia, e dispetto!
(Parte).

SCENA VI

Il Contado, con una veduta del Palazzo di Don Giovanni.

Zerlina; Masetto; Contadini, e Contadine.

ZERLINA: Giovinette, che fate all'amore,
Non lasciate, che passi l'età;
Se nel seno vi bulica il core,
Il rimedio vedetelo quà!
La la la, la la la!
Che piacer, che sarà.

CORO: Ah, che piacer che sarà,
La la la lera, la la la lera.

tresses. Every country, every city—No, every village, has witnessed his exploits in gallantry!

Pray behold, ma'am!
In this long list I've made, is
An account of my master's fair ladies!
Not Jove so renowned for his trade is:
Pray observe it, and read it with me!
First in Italy, ma'am, seven hundred,
Then in Germany, eight may be numbered;
Then in Turkey and France, one and ninety.
But, but, in Spain, ma'am,
One thousand and three!
Here are chambermaids by dozens.
City dames and country cousins;
Countesses and Baronesses,
Marchionesses and Princesses,
All descriptions, ages, classes,
Not a woman could go free.
First the fair ones he bewitches
By the softness of his speeches,—
Makes the brown ones in a fever,
Warmly vowing love for ever!
With the pale ones he will languish,
Melt and sigh in tender anguish;
The great and tall ones sometimes warm him,
High and low, ma'am, old and young, ma'am.
Own the music of this tongue, ma'am:
Though, if I must tell the truth, ma'am,
I know he'd give the choice to youth, ma'am,
But ugly, pretty, fat, or thin—
Something a petticoat within!
It matters not, for, short or tall,
It is very plain he loves them all!
(Exit).

ELVIRA: Am I thus become the victim of perfidy? and is this the return for all my affection? but my wrongs, shall not go unpunished! Before he escapes me, let the arm of justice—Love sleeps in my breast; I feel but rage and hatred.
I will be revenged!
(Exit).

SCENE VI

The country with a view of Don Juan's Palace.

Zerlina; Masetto. Male and Female Peasants.

ZERLINA: Pretty lasses, love's summer, remember, Ever flies upon gossamer wing; Suffer not, then, life's chilly December To destroy Cupid's bow and his string!
La la la, la la la! But make haste and be happy like me.

CHORUS: Ah, But make haste and be happy, Like you, la la la lira.

MASETTO: Giovinetti leggieri di testa, Non andate girando quà e là Poco dura dei matti la festa, Ma per me cominciata non ha!
Lera, lera la!
Che piacer, che piacer, che sarà!
Lera la, lera la!

CORO: Che piacer! La, la, lera!

ZERLINA E MASETTO: Vieni, vieni, carina godiamo,
E cantiamo, e balliamo, e suoniamo! Che piacer, che piacer, che sarà!

CORO: Che piacer! La, la, lera!

SCENA VII

Don Giovanni; Leporello; e detti.

GIOVANNI: Manco male è partita! Oh guarda, guarda, che bella gioventù! Che belle donne!

LEPORELLO: (Tra tante per mia fe, vi sarà qualche cosa anche per me.)

GIOVANNI: Cari amici, buon giorno! Seguitate a star allegramente;—seguitate a suonar, o buona gente. C'è qualche sposalizio!

ZERLINA: Si, signore; e la sposa son io.

GIOVANNI: Me ne consolo. Lo sposo?

MASETTO: Io per servirla.

GIOVANNI: Oh bravo! per servirmi! Questo è vero parlar da galantuomo.

LEPORELLO: Basta che sia marito.

ZERLINA: Oh, il mio Masetto è un uom d'ottimo core!

GIOVANNI: Oh anch'io, vedete: voglio che siamo amici. Il vostro nome?

ZERLINA: Zerlina.

GIOVANNI: E il tuo?

MASETTO: Masetto.

GIOVANNI: Oh, caro il mio Masetto! cara la mia Zerlina, v'esibisco la mia protezione. Leporello! cosa fai là, birbone?

LEPORELLO: (Chi fa amore a qualcune delle Femmine.) Anch'io caro padrone, esibisco la mia protezione.

GIOVANNI: Presto va con costor, nel mio palazzo conducili sul fatto: ordina ch'abbiano cioccolatte, caffe, vini, presciutti—cerca divertir tutti. Mostra loro il giardin, la galleria, le camere; in effetto fa che resti contento il mio Masetto. Hai capito?

MASETTO: And, you lads who are constantly changing, For a time though It is pleasant to run From this beauty to that, ever ranging, Yet, at last, pray be constant to one! Lira, lira la! And be happy, be happy, like me! Lira la, lira la!

CHORUS: And be happy, be happy like you!

ZERLINA AND MASETTO: Oh, what rapture! the marriage-bells ringing,
To be dancing and playing and singing! Who is so happy, so happy as we!

CHORUS: Lira la, lira la!
Who is so happy, so happy as we!

SCENE VII

Don Juan; Leporello; the same.

JUAN: Heaven be praised, she is gone! But look, look, what a lively group! What pretty girls!

LEPORELLO: (Faith! among so many, one or two may fall to my share.)

JUAN: Friends, good day! Pray go on with your sports, your singing and dancing. Is this a wedding?

ZERLINA: Yes, my lord; and I am the bride.

JUAN: I give you joy. Where is the bridegroom?

MASETTO: Here, my lord, at your service.

JUAN: Very good! at my service! Spoken like a youth of spirit.

LEPORELLO: It is enough to be the husband.

ZERLINA: Oh, my dear Masetto has such an excellent heart!

JUAN: And so have I, be assured; that is why we should be friends. And your name?

ZERLINA: Zerlina.

JUAN: And your's?

MASETTO: Masetto.

JUAN: Ah my dear Masetto! my dear Zerlina! accept my protection. Leporello! what are you doing there, knave?

LEPORELLO: (Who is making love to some of the women.) I too, master, am making an offer of my protection.

JUAN: Instantly conduct these happy people to my palace: give orders to supply them with coffee, chocolate, wine, sweetmeats—do your best to entertain them. Show them the gardens, the gallery, the hall; and above all, pay particular attention to my dear Masetto. Do you understand?

LEPORELLO: Ho capito. Andiam.

MASETTO: Signore!

GIOVANNI: Cosa c'è?

MASETTO: La Zerlina senza me non può star.

LEPORELLO: In vostro loco ci starà sua eccellenza—e saprà bene fare le vostre parti.

GIOVANNI: Oh la Zerlina è in man d'un cavalier. Va pur; fra poco ella meco verrà.

ZERLINA: Va; non temere: nelle mani son io d'un cavaliere.

MASETTO: E per questo—

LEPORELLO: E per questo non c'è da dubitar.

MASETTO: Ed io, sospetto!

GIOVANNI: Olà! Finiam le dispute; se subito senz'altro replicar, non te ne vai, Masetto, guarda ben, ti pentirai.

MASETTO: Ho capito, signor si!
Chino il capo, e me ne vò
Giacchè piace a voi così Altre repliche non fò.
Cavalier voi siete già,
Dubitar non posso affè,
Me lo dice la bontà,
Che volete aver per me.
Bricconaccia! malandrina!
(a Zerlina). Fosti, ognor, la mia ruina!
(a Lep.) Vengo, vengo. (a Zer.).
Resta! resta!
È una cosa molto onesta;
Faccia il nostro cavaliere, Cavaliera ancora te.
(Parte con Leporello, Masetto, e Paesani).

SCENA VIII

Don Giovanni e Zerlina.

GIOVANNI: Alfin siam liberati, Zerlinetta gentile da quel sciocscone. Che ne dite, mio ben, so far pulito?

ZERLINA: Signore, è mio marito.

GIOVANNI: Chi! colui? Vi par ch'un'onest'uomo, un nobil cavalier, qual io mi vanto, possa soffrir che quel visetto d'oro, quel viso inzuccherato da un bifolcaccio vil sia strapazzato.

ZERLINA: Ma, signore, io gli diedi parola di sposarlo.

GIOVANNI: Tal parola non vale un zero, voi non siete fatta per esser paesana. Un'altra sorte vi procuran quegli occhi bricconcelli, quei labretti sì belli, quelle dituccia candide, e odorose, parmi toccar giuncata, e fiutar rose.

ZERLINA: Ah, non vorrei—

GIOVANNI: Che non vorreste?

LEPORELLO: I understand. Friends, let us go.

MASETTO: My lord!

JUAN: What say you?

MASETTO: My Zerlina cannot stay here without me.

LEPORELLO: His lordship will well supply your place—he knows how to play your part to perfection.

JUAN: Fear not, Zerlina is in the care of a nobleman. Go, then; she shall soon follow with me.

ZERLINA: Go; fear nothing: I am in the care of a nobleman.

MASETTO: And for that reason—

LEPORELLO: For that reason you have nothing to fear.

MASETTO: And I, indeed!

JUAN: Oh, reply no more! If without more words, you do not immediately depart, Masetto, you shall repent it.

MASETTO: Yes, my lord, I understand you! and, since you are pleased to command my absence, will go without farther reply. You say you are a nobleman; and I can not doubt your world, but something within tells me that your designs are not honorable. (To Zerlina.) Traitress! viper! you were born to be my ruin!
(To Leporello.) I come, I come.
(To Zerlina.) Ay now! do stay! It is quite prudent in you to trust him; let my lord here make a lady of you.
(Exeunt Leporello, Masetto, and Peasants).

SCENE VIII

Don Juan and Zerlina.

JUAN: At length, my sweet Zerlina, we are rid of this troublesome fellow. Say, then, my angel, have I not well contrived?

ZERLINA: My lord, he is my lover.

JUAN: What! he? Do you think that a nobleman, a man of rank, as I am, can suffer such bewitching beauty to be profaned by a base clown?

ZERLINA: But, my lord, I have promised to marry him.

JUAN: Such a promise is void in itself; you were not born to be the wife of a country booby. Those roguish eyes, those pouting lips, those pretty little fingers, so white and tapering, ensure you a better fortune.

ZERLINA: Ah, but I would not—

JUAN: Would not what?

ZERLINA: Alfine ingannata restar. Io so che rado colle donne voi altri cavalieri siete onseti e sinceri.

GIOVANNI: È un'impostura della gente plebea: la nobilità ha dipinta negli occhi l'onestà. Orsù non perdiamo tempo in quest'istante io vi voglio sposar.

ZERLINA: Voi?

GIOVANNI: Certo io. Quel casinetto è mio: soli saremo: e là giojello mio, ci sposeremo.

GIOVANNI: La ci darem la mano,
La mi dirai di si!
Vedi, non è lontano
Partiam, ben mio, da qui!

ZERLINA: Vorrei, e non vorrei;
Mi trema un poco il cor:
Felice, è ver sarei,
Ma può burlarmi ancor.

GIOVANNI: Vieni nio bel diletto!

ZERLINA: Mi fa pietà Masetto.

GIOVANNI: Io cangierò tua sorte.

ZERLINA: Presto, non son più forte.

GIOVANNI: Vieni! Vieni! La ci darem la mano,
La mi dirai di si!

ZERLINA: Vorrei e non vorrei;
Mi trema un poco il cor.

DUETTO: Andiam, andiam mio bene,
A ristorar le pene
D'un innocente amor.

SCENA IX

Donna Elvira; e detti.

ELVIRA: Fermati, scelerato! Il Ciel mi fece udir le tue perfidie; io sono a tempo di salvar questa misera innocente dal tuo barbaro artiglio.

ZERLINA: Meschina! cosa sento!

GIOVANNI: (aparte). Amor, consiglio! (A Elvira.). Idol mio, non vedete ch'io voglio divertirmi.

ELVIRA: Divertirti, è vero, divertirti? Io so, crudele, come tu diverti.

ZERLINA: Ma, signor cavaliere, è ver quel ch'ella dice?

GIOVANNI: (a Zerlina.) La povera infelice è di me innamorata, e per pietà deggio fingere amore, ch'io son per mia disgrazia uom di buon core.
(Don Giovanni parte).

ZERLINA: Not like to be imposed on. I have heard that nobelmen are seldom frank and sincere with women.

JUAN: It is a vile slander of the vulgar: nobility and honor always go together. But do not let us lose time: this very moment I will marry you.

ZERLINA: You?

JUAN: Certainly. That house you see is mine: there we shall be alone; and there, my angel, we will be married.

JUAN: Then with your hand in mine, dear,
You'll whisper gently yes!
The castle's lord by yours dear,
Come, and lover bless!

ZERLINA: I would, and yet I would not;
My breast with terror heaves:
It would be the happiest lot,
Unless this lord deceives.

JUAN: Come, then, with me, my beauty!

ZERLINA: Masetto claims my duty.

JUAN: I wish to change your state, love.

ZERLINA: I yield myself to fate, love.

JUAN: Come, then! Then with your hand in mine, dear,
You'll whisper gently yes!

ZERLINA: I would, and yet I would not;
My breast with terror heaves.

TOGETHER: Then come, and share with me the pleasure Of innocence and love.

SCENE IX

Donna Elvira, the same.

ELVIRA: Stay, wicked one, stay! Heaven has permitted me to overhear your perfidious design; and I may yet save this poor artless girl from your barbarian grasp.

ZERLINA: Oh, me! what is it I hear?

JUAN: (aside). Cupid befriend me! (To Elvira.) My love, do you not see that I am amusing myself?

ELVIRA: Amusing yourself! Yes, cruel man, I know too well how you amuse yourself.

ZERLINA: But, my lord, does this lady speak truly?

JUAN: (to Zerlina). This poor forlorn damsel almost adores me, and I cannot but seem, out of pity, to return her love, for I am so tenderhearted; that is my only misfortune.
(Exit Don Juan).

ELVIRA: In qual eccessi. oh, Numi! ini quali misfatti orribili, tremendi, è avvolto il sciaguarato! Ah, no! non puote tardar l'ira del Cielo. La giustizia tardar sentir già parmi la fatale saetta, che gli piomba sul capo,—aperto veggio il baratro mortal.
Misera Elvira!
Che contrasto d'affetti in sen ti nasce!
Perchè questi sospiri, e queste ambasce?

Mi tradì quell'alma ingrata,
Infelice oh Dio! mi fa!
Mi tradita abbandonata
Provo ancor per lui pietà
Quando sento il mio tormento,
Di vendetta il cor favella;
Ma se guardo il suo cimento,
Palpitando il cor mi va.
(Partono).

SCENA X

Don Giovanni, Don Ottavio, Donna Anna; indi Donna Elvira.

GIOVANNI: Mi par ch'oggi il demonio si diverta d'opporsi ai miei piacevoli progressi, vanno mal tutti quanti.

OTTAVIO: Ah! ch'ora, idolo mio, son vani i pianti! Di vendetta si parli. Oh, Don Giovanni!

GIOVANNI: (aparte). Mancava questo intoppo!

ANNA: Amico! a tempo vi ritroviam! Avete core, avete anima generosa?

GIOVANNI: (aparte). Sta a vedere ch'il diavolo gli ha detto qualche cosa? (Forte)). Che domanda! perchè?

ANNA: Bisogno abbiamo della vostra amicizia.

GIOVANNI: (aparte). Respiro. (Forte.). Comandate,—i congiunti, i parenti; questa man, questo ferro, i beni, il sangue spenderò per servirvi. Ma voi, bella Donn'Anna, perchè così piangete? Sì crudele chi fu, ch'osò la calma turbar del viver vostro?
(Entra Elvira).

ELVIRA: Ah ti ritrovo ancor, perfido mostro.

ELVIRA: (a Anna). Non ti fidar, o misera!
Di quel ribaldo cor!
Me già tradì queì barbaro—
Ti vuol tradir ancor.

ANNA E OTTAVIO: Cieli! che aspetto mobile!
Che dolce maestà!
Il suo dolor, le lagrime
M'empiono di pietà.

ELVIRA: Oh, Heaven! into what excesses, into what horrible, unheard-of crimes is this wretched man plunged! The wrath of Heaven can no longer be averted. Already I see the fatal bolt launched at his devoted head,—already I see the abyss opened beneath him.
Hapless Elvira!
What contending feelings agitate my bosom!
Why these sighs? what checks my utterance?

Though by him I've been neglected,
Though my peace has fled, alas!
Though his falseness I've detected,
Prayers for him my lips still pass.
When I think on wrongs I'm bearing
Vengeance only steels my heart;
When I see him perils sharing,
I'd avert the poisoned dart.
(Exeunt).

SCENE X

Don Juan, Don Octavio, Donna Anna; afterwards Donna Elvira.

JUAN: My evil genius seems to take pleasure to-day in crossing all my pleasant schemes—everything goes wrong.

OCTAVIO: Dearest Donna Anna, cease these unavailing tears! Let us think only of vengeance. Ah, Don Juan here!

JUAN: (aside). There wanted but this encounter!

ANNA: Ah, at length we have found you! Have you, my friend, a noble, a generous heart!

JUAN: (aside). I wonder whether my ill stars have put any suspicion into her head? (Aloud.) What a question, Madame! Why do you ask it?

ANNA: We have need of all your friendship and advice.

JUAN: (aside). I breathe again. (Aloud.) Pray command me,—command my relations, my friends; this arm, this sword, shall be devoted to your service. But fairest Donna, why these tears? What wretch has dared disturb your bosom's wonted calm?
(Enter Elvira).

ELVIRA: Ha! do I find you again, perfidious monster!

ELVIRA: (to Anna). Oh, do not listen to those witching tones!
They come not from the heart!
On me they fell but to betray—
He'll play on you that part.

ANNA AND OCTAVIO: Oh, Heaven! what beauty's in that form!
What softness and what grace!
Her patient grief, her looks forlorn,
In my fond heart find place.

GIOVANNI: La povera ragazza
È pazza, amici miei:
Lasciatemi con lei!
Forse si calmerà.

ELVIRA: Ah non credete al perfido!

GIOVANNI: È pazza; non badate.

ELVIRA: Restate, oh Dei! restate.

ANNA E OTTAVIO: A chi si crederà?

ANNA, OTTAVIO E GIOVANNI: (Certo moto d'ignoto tormento
Dentro l'alma girare mi sento,
Che mi dice per quella infelice
Cento cose che intender non sa.)

ELVIRA: (Sdegno, rabbia, dispetto, spavento
Dentro l'alma girare mi sento,
Che mi dice di quel traditore
Cento cose che intender non sa.)

OTTAVIO: Io di quà non vado via,
Se non so com'è l'affar.

ANNA: Non ha l'aria di pazzia
Il suo tratto, il suo parlar.

GIOVANNI: (Se men vada, si potria Qualche cosa sospettar.)

ELVIRA: Da quel ceffo si dovria
La ner'alma giudicar.

OTTAVIO: (a Giovanni). Dunque quella?

GIOVANNI: È pazzarella.

ANNA: (a Elvira). Dunque quegli?

ELVIRA: È un traditore.

GIOVANNI: Infelice!

ELVIRA: Mentitore!

ANNA E OTTAVIO: Incomincio a dubitar.

GIOVANNI: Zitto, zitto, che la gente
Si raduna a noi d'intorno:
Siate un poco più prudente—
Vi farete criticar.

ELVIRA: Non speralo, a scelerato!
Ho perduta la prudenza—
Le tue colpe ed il mio stato
Voglio a tutti palesar.

ANNA E OTTAVIO: Quegli accenti sì sommessi!
Quel cangiarsi di colore
Sono indizj troppo espressi
Che mi fan determinar.
(Elvira parte)

GIOVANNI: Povera sventurata! i passi suoi
Voglio seguir, non voglio
Che faccia un precipizio.
Perdonate,
Bellissima Donn'Anna:

JUAN: My friends, this poor young creature
For love of me, raves wildly:
Leave her to me, oh leave her
With her I'll reason mildly.

ELVIRA: Ah do not heed! his words are false!

JUAN: She's frantic; don't believe her.

ELVIRA: Stay, false one! nor deceive her.

ANNA AND OCTAVIO: Oh, which shall we believe?

ANNA, OCTAVIO AND JUAN: (I feel around my heart now stealing
Hopeless love, disdain, revealing
That this fair unhappy lady
Suffers more than words can tell.)

ELVIRA: (Despair around my heart now stealing
Hopeless love, disdain, revealing
That on earth I still shall ever Suffer more than words can tell.)

OCTAVIO: Hence, I will not now depart,
Till I hear the truth of this.

ANNA: There's no madness in her manner,
And her words are not amiss.

JUAN: (If I go now, their blind anger
On me may suspicion turn.)

ELVIRA: From his face malign, now judge how Justly does my fury burn.

OCTAVIO: (to Juan). This poor lady?

JUAN: Reason fails her.

ANNA: (to Elvira). This young signor?

ELVIRA: Is a traitor.

JUAN: Go, unhappy!

ELVIRA: Base deceiver!

ANNA AND OCTAVIO: Already I begin to doubt.

JUAN: Softly, softly, I beseech you!
People see who come this way;
Please have a little prudence—
Keep silence, and go away.

ELVIRA: Hope it not, you perjured traitor!
Prudence certainly has left me—
You have quite bereft me of that I'll expose you, come what may.

ANNA AND OCTAVIO: Ah, how altered, see his manner!
What a change! what calm submission!
This, indeed, the truth disclosing,
Now to me does all betray.
(Exit Elvira).

JUAN: Unhappy lady! I must follow her
And watch her footsteps, lest in evil hour
Some desperate act she dare. Excuse me, then,

Se servirvi poss'io,
In mia casa v'aspetto. Amici, addio!
(Parte).

ANNA: Don Ottavio, son morta.

OTTAVIO: Cos'è stato?

ANNA: Per pietà soccorretemi!

OTTAVIO: Mio ben, fate coraggio.

ANNA: Oh, Dei! quegli è il carnefice del padre mio!

OTTAVIO: Che dite?

ANNA: Non dubitate più. Gli ultimi accenti
Che l'empio proferì, tutta la voce
Richiama nel cor mio di quell'indegno,
Che nel mio appartamento—

OTTAVIO: Oh, Ciel! possibile, Che sotto il sacro manto d'amicizia
Ma come fu?—Narratemi
Lo strano avvenimento.

ANNA: Era già alquanto
Avanzata la notte,
Quando nelle mie stanze, ove, soletta
Mi trovai per sventura, entrar io vidi
In un mantello avvolto
Un uom, ch'al primo istante
Avea preso per voi;
Ma riconobbi poi
Ch'un inganno era il mio.

OTTAVIO: Stelle! Sequite.

ANNA: Tacito a me s'appressa,
E mi vuol abbracciar; sciogliermi cerco,
Ei più mi stringe, io grido;
Non viene alcun; con una mano cerca
D'impedire la voce,
E coll'altra m'afferra
Stretta così, che già mi credo vinta.

OTTAVIO: Perfido! e alfin!

ANNA: Alfine il vuol, l'orrore
Dell'infame attentato accrebbe si
La lena mia; che a forza
Di svincolarmi, torcermi, e piegarmi,
Da lui mi sciolsi.

OTTAVIO: Ohimè! respiro!

ANNA: Allora
Rinforzo i stridi miei, chiamo soccorso—
Fugge il fellon, arditamente il seguo
Fin nella strada per fermarlo; e sono
Assalitrice d'assalita. Il padre
V'accorre, vuol conoscerlo, e l'indegno;
Che del povero vecchio era più forte,
Compiè il misfatto suo col dargli morte.

Most charming Donna Anna:
If there is any service I can render,
I shall be found at home. My friends, farewell! (Exit).

ANNA: Don Octavio, I'm confounded.

OCTAVIO: What has happened?

ANNA: For pity's sake, support me!

OCTAVIO: My love, take courage.

ANNA: Oh, Heaven! he is the murderer of my father!

OCTAVIO: What is it you say?

ANNA: Yes, I can doubt no more.
His last few words—
His voice, form, accent, brought back to my mind
The image of the villain who had dared,
At night, in my apartment—

OCTAVIO: Heavens! can it be,
That, under friendship's sacred guise, the wretch—
But how was this? Relate to me
At once, the fearful tale.

ANNA: Already far advanced was then the night,
When, sitting in my room, and quite alone,
As chance would have it, lo! I saw then enter
Wrapped in a mantle,
A man, whom at the first moment
I took for you;
But soon perceived
That I'd made a mistake.

OCTAVIO: The wretch! Proceed.

ANNA: Silently he came nearer,
And clasped me in his arms: I shrieked
And tried to free myself, the more he pressed me;
But no one came; then with one hand my voice he sought to stifle.
And with the other grasped me
So forcibly, I gave me up for lost.

OCTAVIO: Villain! and then!

ANNA: Grief and despair at last Gave me new strength against
This infamous attempt; after a struggle
I disengaged myself,
And broke away.

OCTAVIO: Again I breathe!

ANNA: Then
My cries I still renewed, I called for help—
The villain fled, and instantly I followed,
Even to the street, to stop him; and I now
Became the assailant, who was once the assailed.
My father ran to aid me and detect him,
But the old man, being weaker than his foe,
Was overpowered, alas! and met his doom.

Or sai chi l'onore rapir a me volse,
Chi fu il traditore, ch'il padre mi tolse.
Vendetta ti chieggo—la chiede il tuo cor.
Rammenta la piaga del misero seno—
Rimira di sangue coperto il terreno,
Se 'l cor in te langue d'un giusto furor.
(Parte).

OTTAVIO: Come mai creder deggio
Di sì nero delitto
Capace un cavaliere!
Ah di scoprire il vero
Ogni mezzo si cerchi, io sento in petto
E di sposo, e d'amico
Il dover che mi parla,
Disingannarla voglio, o vendicarla.

Dalla sua pace la mia dipende—
Quel ch'a lei piace vita mi rende;
Quel che le incresce morte mi da;
S'ella sospira, sospiro anch'io;
È mia quell'ira, quel pianto è mio—
E non ho bene se non l'ha.
(Parte).

SCENA XI

Leporello; indi Don Giovanni.

LEPORELLO: Io deggio ad ogni patto
Per sempre abbandonar questo bel matto.
Eccolo qui: guardate
Con quell'indifferenza se ne viene.

GIOVANNI: Leporellino mio, va tutto bene?

LEPORELLO: Don Giovannino mio, va tutto male.

GIOVANNI: Come? va tutto male?

LEPORELLO: Vado a casa
Come voi m'ordinaste
Con tutta quella gente.

GIOVANNI: Bravo!

LEPORELLO: A forza di chiacchere,—
Di vezzi, e di bugle,
Ch'ho imparato sì bene a star con voi,
Cerco d'intrattenerli.

GIOVANNI: Bravo!

LEPORELLO: Dico Mille cose a Masetto per placarlo.
Per trargli dal pensier la gelosia,

GIOVANNI: Ma bravo, in fede mia!

You know who it was that attempted mine honor,
And who was the traitor my father than slew
It is vengeance I ask for your heart claims it too.
Remember the earth stained with his sacred blood—
Remember his wound, for it calls from the tomb,
If thy zeal should relax; and let death be his doom.
(Exit).

OCTAVIO: Could I ever have believed
That a gallant cavalier
Should be the perpetrator
Of such a crime as now I heard?
Let me leave no means untried
To learn the truth; for, as her lover,
My heart now tells me that I ought
To undeceive or to avenge her.

For on her happiness mine is dependent—
Whatever delights her, to me gives joy:
Were her life misery, mine would destroy;
And to her every sigh mine does reply;
Mine is her vengeance, and mine are her tears—
I share her sorrows, her hopes, and her fears.
(Exit).

SCENE XI

Leporello; afterwards Don Juan.

LEPORELLO: Whatever may be the consequence, I must Leave this wild rake.
Yonder he comes: behold
With what a careless air be moves along.

JUAN: Well, my little Leporello, does all go well?

LEPORELLO: No, my little Don Juan, all goes ill.

JUAN: How? all goes ill?

LEPORELLO: I went to the house
As you directed me.
With all those people.

JUAN: Very well!

LEPORELLO: By chatting with them,—
By leading them to pastimes, and with fibs,
That I have learned so well in serving you,
I tried to amuse them.

JUAN: Very good!

LEPORELLO: I said A thousand things to pacify Masetto,
And lead him from the thought of jealousy.

JUAN: It is well, upon my word.

LEPORELLO: Faccio che bevano e gli uomini e le donne;
Son già mezzo ubbriachi:
Altri canta, altri scherza—
Altri seguita a ber; in sul più bello
Chi credete che capiti?

GIOVANNI: Zerlina.

LEPORELLO: Bravo! E con lei chi venne?

GIOVANNI: Donna Elvira.

LEPORELLO: Bravo! e disse di voi.

GIOVANNI: Tutto quel mal ch'in bocca le venia?

LEPORELLO: Ma bravo, in fede mia.

GIOVANNI: E tu cosa facesti?

LEPORELLO: Tacqui.

GIOVANNI: Ed ella—

LEPORELLO: Seguì a gridar.

GIOVANNI: E tu?

LEPORELLO: Quando mi parve,
Che già fosse sfogata, dolcemente
Fuor dell'orto la trassi, e con bell'arte
Chiusa la porta a chiave io me n'andai,
E sulla via soletta io la lasciai.

GIOVANNI: Bravo! Bravo! arcibravo!
L'affar non può andar meglio; incominciasti,
Io saprò terminar. Troppo mi premono
Queste contadinotte:
Le voglio divertir finchè vien notte.

GIOVANNI: Finch'han del vino
Calda la testa.
Una gran festa,
Fa preparar:
Se trovi in piazza,
Qualche ragazza,
Teco ancor quella
Cerca menar;
Senz'alcun ordine,
La danza sia,
Ch'il minuetto,
Che la follia
Chi l'Alemana,
Farai ballar;
Ed io frattanto,
Dall'altro canto,
Con questa e quella,
Vo' amoreggiar.
Ah la mia lista,
Doman mattina,
D'una decina deve aumentar.

LEPORELLO: I set both men and women drinking;
They were already half inebriate:
Some sung, and other sported—
The rest went drinking on: all was going well,
When, who do you think, arrived?

JUAN: Zerlina.

LEPORELLO: Right!
And with her, who came also?

JUAN: Donna Elvira.

LEPORELLO: Right! and she spoke of you.

JUAN: All the evil that her lips could utter?

LEPORELLO: True, upon my word.

JUAN: And what said you?

LEPORELLO: Nothing.

JUAN: And she—

JUAN: While you?

LEPORELLO: When it appeared to me
That she was almost tired, I gently led her
Out of the garden, and then dexterously
I closed the door and locked it—stealing off,
I left her in the street, standing alone.

JUAN: Excellent! most excellent!
The affair could not go better; you have begun,
And I know how to finish.
These pretty country girls bewitch my heart:
I wish to entertain them till the night.

JUAN: Now that they're merry
With port or with sherry,
A feast, do not tarry,
Go and prepare;
If by-the-by, too
Nice girls you spy, too,
Quick, have an eye to Let them be there;
Trumpets affrighting,
Waltzes inviting,
Minutes delighting,
Frolic and fun here,
French, English, German,
Bring far and near;
Minutes delighting
All who appear.
Frolics and feasting
All hearts to cheer.
While I go prying,
Pretty girls eyeing,
Tenderly sighing
Till they are won.
Many tomorrow,
Not to my sorrow,
You'll add to the list of ladies I've won.

SCENA XII

Campagna. Da un lato, il Palazzo di Don Giovanni; dall'altro, un Padiglione.

Zerlina e Masetto

ZERLINA: Masetto, senti un pò! Masetto, dico!

MASETTO: Non mi toccar.

ZERLINA: Perchè?

MASETTO: Perfida! il tatto soppor-tar dovrei
D'una mano infedele?

ZERLINA: Ah, no! taci, crudele?
Io non merto da te tal trattamento.

MASETTO: Come! ed hai l'ardimento di scusarti?
Star sola con un uom? abbandonarmi
Il dì delle mie nozze—porre in fronte
A nu villano d'onore
Questa marca d'infamia! Ah, se non fosse
Se non fosse lo scandalo, vorrei—

ZERLINA: Ma se colpa io non ho—ma se da lui
Ingannata rimasi? E poi che temi
Tranquillanti, mia, vita!
Non mi toccò la punta delle dita.
Non me lo credi, ingrato?
Vien qui, sfogati, ammazzami—
Fa pur tutto di me quel che ti piace,
Ma poi, Masetto poi, ma poi fa pace.

Batti, batti, o bel Masetto,
La tua povera Zerlina;
Starò qui come agnellina,
Le tue botte ad aspettar.
Lascierò stracciarmi il crine;
Lascierò stracciarmi gli occhi;
E le care tue manine
Lieta poi saprò baciar.
Ah! lo vedo, non hai core!
Pace, pace, o mia!
In contenti, ed allegria,
Notte e dì vogliam passar.

MASETTO: Guarda un pò, come seppe
Questa strega sedurmi!
Siamo pure i deboli di testa.

SCENA XIII

I detti.—Don Giovanni, (di dentro) Servi.

GIOVANNI: Sia preparato tutto a una gran festa.

SCENE XII

A Rural Prospect. On one side, the Palace of Don Juan; on the other, a Pavilion.

Zerlina and Masetto.

ZERLINA: Masetto, listen a moment! Masetto, I say!

MASETTO: Do not come near me.

ZERLINA: And why?

MASETTO: Faithless! could I endure the touch
Of a false hand like yours?

ZERLINA: Ah, me! hush, cruel man!
From you I've not deserved such treatment.

MASETTO: How! are you bold enough to make excuses
To remain alone with a man? and to leave
Even on our wedding day—with infamy
To brand the forehead of an honest man,
And stain his name with shame! Ah, were not
That I consider what the world would say.

ZERLINA: But if I'm not in fault—if he deceived me?
And then what fear you? Nay,
Be calm, my life!
He did not touch me with a finger's tip.
Will you not now believe me, cruel man?
Come here, exhaust your rage, and take my life—
Do with me what you will; but then, Masetto,
Then, I entreat you, let's be friends again!

Beat me, beat me, dear Masetto,
Beat Zerlina at your will;
Like the patient lamb I'll suffer,
Meek and mute, and loving still.
Rend those locks you praised so highly;
From your arms Zerlina cast;
These fond eyes in rage extinguish
Fondly still they'll look their last.
Ah! I see, love, you're relenting—
Pardon, kneeling, I implore you!
Night and day, to you devoted,
here I vow to err no more.

MASETTO: This enchantress fair and shy
Soft persuasion now would try!
Men to be weak in mind have never ceased.

SCENE XIII

The same.—Don Juan (from without) and Servants.

JUAN: Let all be now prepared for a grand feast.

ZERLINA: Ah, Masetto, Masetto! odi la voce Del monsù cavaliere!	ZERLINA: Ah, Masetto, Masetto! that is the voice Of my lord the cavalier!
MASETTO: Ebben, che c'è?	MASETTO: Well, what of that?
ZERLINA: Verrà.	ZERLINA: He will come here.
MASETTO: Lascia che venga.	MASETTO: Well, let him come.
ZERLINA: Ah! se vi fosse Un buco da fuggir—	ZERLINA: Ah! had I but a loophole To escape—
MASETTO: Di cosa temi? Perchè diventi pallida? Ah, capisco! Capisco, bricconcella! Hai timor, ch'io comprenda Com'è tra voi passata la faccenda.	MASETTO: What do you fear? Why do you turn pale? Ah, now I know! I understand, false girl! You are afraid I should discover The secrets that have passed between you.
MASETTO: Presto, presto! pria ch'ei venga Por mi vò da qualche lato: V'è una nicchia, qui celato Cheto, cheto, mi vo' star	MASETTO: Quick, oh quick! before he comes, In this corner I will hide: In this nook I'll stand concealed!— Secret, silent, let me bide.
ZERLINA: Senti, senti! dove vai! Non t'ascondar, o Masetto! Se ti trova, poveretto, Tu non sai quel che può far?	ZERLINA: Hear me, hear me! oh, Masetto! Do not hide yourself, but stay! If he finds you, my poor fellow, Who can tell what he may say?
MASETTO: Faccia, dica quel che vuole.	MASETTO: Let him say or do his worst.
ZERLINA: Ah! non giovan le parole!	ZERLINA: Ah! you heed not what I say!
MASETTO: Parla forte e qui t'arresta.	MASETTO: Speak aloud, and remain here.
ZERLINA: Che capriccio ha nella testa?	ZERLINA: What folly now is in your brain?
MASETTO: (aparte). Capirò se m'è fedele, E in qual modo andò l'affar.	MASETTO: (aside). I shall know if she is faithful, And how went this strange affair.
ZERLINA: Quell'ingrato, quel crudele Oggi vuol precipitar.	OCTAVIO: Oh, how cruel and ungrateful! Thus he tries what I can dare.
GIOVANNI: (ai Contadini). Su svegliatevi da bravi! Su coraggio, o buona gente. Vogliam star allegramente! Vogliam ridere e scherzar. Alla stanza della danza Conducete tutti quante; Ed a tutti in abbondanza Gran rinfreschi fate dar. (Partono i Contadini).	JUAN: (to the Country People). Arise, enjoy yourselves like men! Here we'll laugh and dance a measure. Cast off coyness, oh sweet girls! Here we live for joy and pleasure. In the hall prepared for dancing, Let the ball with joy be crowned; And, amid the scene entrancing, See the sparkling cup go round. (Exeunt Peasants).
CORO: Su, svegliati, etc.	CHORUS: Arise, etc.
ZERLINA: Tra questi alberi celata, Si può dar che non mi veda.	ZERLINA: Concealed among these trees, I, perhaps may pass unseen.
GIOVANNI: Zerlinetta mia garbata! Ti ho già vista—non scappar!	JUAN: My charming, my graceful Zerlina! I see you—you cannot escape!
ZERLINA: Ah! lasciatemi andar via!	ZERLINA: Ah! I entreat you, let me go!
GIOVANNI: No no resta gioja mia.	JUAN: No, my angel, pray remain.
ZERLINA: Se pietade avete in core!	ZERLINA: If you have one spark of pity!
GIOVANNI: Si ben mio, son tutto amore Vieni un poco, in questo loco, Fortunata io ti vò far.	JUAN: Yes, my dearest, I'm all love, Come with me, then, to this bower And I there will make you blessed.
ZERLINA: (aparte). Ah! s'ei vede il sposo mio, So ben io quel che può far.	ZERLINA: (aside). Ah! if my jealous lover saw him Well I know what he could do.
GIOVANNI: Masetto!	JUAN: Masetto!
MASETTO: Si, Masetto!	MASETTO: Yes, Masetto.
GIOVANNI: E chiuso là perchè? La bella tua Zerlina— Non può la poverina Più star senza di te.	JUAN: And why were you concealed there? Your pretty girl, Zerlina— She, poor maid, can no longer Be happy without you.
MASETTO: Capisco, si signore.	MASETTO: My lord, I understand.
GIOVANNI: Adesso fate core; I suonatori udite! Venite omai con me.	JUAN: Come, then, let us merry be; Quickly! the musicians see! Come, dance at once with me.
ZERLINA: Si, si facciamo core, Ed a ballar cogli altri Andiamo tutti tre.	ZERLINA: Yes, let us all merry be, And together go all three, To join the rest, and dance.
MASETTO: Si, si facciamo core, etc. (Partona).	MASETTO: Yes, let us all merry be, etc. (Exeunt).
SCENA XIV	SCENE XIV
Donna Anna, Donna Elvira, e Don Ottavio.	Donna Anna, Donna Elvira, and Don Octavio.
ELVIRA: Bisogna aver coraggio, O cari amici miei; E i suoi misfatti rei Scoprir potremo allor.	ELVIRA: Be firm, be firm, I pray you— My good friends, I implore you; And soon the guilty traitor Shall for his crimes atone.
OTTAVIO: L'amica dice bene— Coraggio aver conviene, (ad Anna). Discaccia, o vita mia! L'affanno ed il timor.	OCTAVIO: Elvira counsels wisely— We must have courage, truly, (to Anna). Then banish, oh my fair one! Your fear and terror soon.
ANNA: Il passo e periglioso, Può nascer qualche imbroglio; Temo pel caro sposo— E per noi temo ancor.	ANNA: The moments full of danger, Some ill may yet befall; I fear for you, beloved one— I fear, indeed, for all.
SCENA XV	SCENE XV
Don Giovanni; Leporello. E detti.	Don Giovanni; Leporello. The same.
LEPORELLO: (dalla finestra). Signor, guardate un poco! Che maschere galanti!	LEPORELLO: (from the Window). My lord, look out a moment! See what gay masks are here!
GIOVANNI: Falle passar avanti, Di che ci fanno onor.	JUAN: Invite them in, and beg them To come and share our cheer.
ANNA, ELVIRA E OTTAVIO: Al volto, ed alla voce Si scopre il traditore.	ANNA, ELVIRA AND OCTAVIO: See, see, that look, that voice, Betray the traitor there!
LEPORELLO: Ps! ps! signore maschere!	LEPORELLO: Hist! hist! oh, maskers, hist.
ANNA E ELIVIRA: Via rispondete.	ANNA AND ELVIRA: Reply to him for us.
OTTAVIO: Cosa chiedete?	OCTAVIO: What is your pleasure, pray?
LEPORELLO: Al ballo, se vi piace V'invita il mio signor.	LEPORELLO: My lord entreats your presence To honor this his home.
OTTAVIO: Grazie di tanto onore. Andiam, compagne belle.	OCTAVIO: We thank him for this favor. My fair companions, come.

LEPORELLO: (aparte). L'amico anche su quelle
Prova farà d'amor.

ANNA E OTTAVIO: Protegga il giusto Cielo
Il zelo del mio cor!

ELVIRA: Vendichi il giusto Cielo
Il mio tradito amor!
(Partono).

SCENA XVI

Sala da Ballo net Palazzo di Don Giovanni.
(Zerlina, Don Giovanni, Leporello, Masetto, Contadini, Contadine; Servi con rinfreschi; Suonatori).

GIOVANNI: Riposate, vezzose ragazze.

LEPORELLO: Rinfrescatevi, bei giovinetti.

GIOVANNI E LEPORELLO:
Tornerete a far presto le pazze,
Tornerete a scherzar e ballar!

GIOVANNI: Ehi caffè!

LEPORELLO: Cioccolatte!

MASETTO: (a Zerlina). Ah, Zerlina, giudizio!

GIOVANNI: Sorbetti!

LEPORELLO: Confetti!

MASETTO: (a Zerlina). Ah, Zerlina, giudizio!

MASETTO E ZERLINA: (aparte).
Troppo dolce comincia la scena;
In amaro potria terminar.

GIOVANNI: Sei pur vaga, brillante Zerlina.

ZERLINA: Sua bontà.

MASETTO: (aparte). La briccona fa festa!

LEPORELLO: Sei pur cara, Giannotta, Sandrina!

MASETTO: (aparte). Tocca pur, che ti cada la testa!

ZERLINA: (aparte). Quel Masetto mi par stralunato.
Brutto, brutto si fa quest'affar.

GIOVANNI E LEPORELLO: (aparte). Quel Masetto mi par stralunato.
Qui bisogna cervello adoprar.

MASETTO: (aparte). La briccona mi fa disperar!

SCENA XVII

Donna Anna, Donna Elvira, Don Ottavio.

I detti.

LEPORELLO: Venite pur avanti,
Vezzose mascherette.

LEPORELLO: (aside). My lord will quickly prove
If these fair dames can love.

ANNA AND OCTAVIO: Just Heaven, our path protecting,
Oh, guide our steps aright!

ELVIRA: Just Heaven on him avenge me
Who all my hopes did blight!

SCENE XVI

A Ball-Room in the Palace of Don Juan. (Zerlina, Don Juan, Leporello, Masetto; Male and Female Peasants; Servants and Musicians.)

JUAN: Rest awhile, pretty maids, from your dancing.

LEPORELLO: Come, refresh yourselves, gentlemen gay.

JUAN AND LEPORELLO: While around us bright eyes are thus glancing,
Who so happy, so happy as we!

JUAN: Bring some coffee!

LEPORELLO: Chocolate, here!

MASETTO: (to Zerlina). Ah, Zerlina, pray take care!

JUAN: Sherbet!

LEPORELLO: Some comfort!

MASETTO: (to Zerlina). Ah, Zerlina, pray beware!

MASETTO AND ZERLINA: (aside). See, the scene has made us glad;
But its end may yet be sad.

JUAN: You are indeed charming, lovely Zerlina!

ZERLINA: Your lordship is very polite.

MASETTO: (aside). The saucy girl makes holiday!

LEPORELLO: How pretty you are, Giannotta, Sadrina!

MASETTO: (aside). Touch her, I'll knock your head off!

ZERLINA: (aside). This Masetto's gone out of his mind.
Sadly, I fear, this affair will end.

JUAN AND LEPORELLO: (aside). This Masetto's gone out of his mind.
And, to win her, I must use all my skill.

MASETTO: (aside). Despair and rage my bosom will fill.

SCENE XVII

Donna Anna, Donna Elvira, Don Octavio.

The same.

LEPORELLO: Fair maskers, I entreat you,
Enter and join our ball.

GIOVANNI: È aperto a tutti quanti,
Viva la libertà.

ANNA, ELVIRA E OTTAVIO: Siam grati a tanti segni
Di generosità.

GIOVANNI: (a Leporello). Ricominciate il suono!
Tu accoppia i ballerini,
Meco tu dei ballare,
Zerlina, vien pur quà.

LEPORELLO: Da bravi via! ballate.

ELVIRA: (aparte). Quell'è la contadina.

ANNA: (aparte). Io moro!

OTTAVIO: (aparte). Simulate.

GIOVANNI E LEPORELLO: (aparte). Va bene in verità!

MASETTO: (aparte). Va bene in verità.

GIOVANNI: (a Leporello). A bada tien Masetto.

LEPORELLO: Non balla il poveretto.

GIOVANNI: Il tuo compagno io sono, Zerlina, vien pur quà.

LEPORELLO: Vien quà, Masetto caro,
Facciam quel ch'altri fa,

MASETTO: No, no ballar non voglio,

LEPORELLO: Eh balla, amico mio.

MASETTO: No.

LEPORELLO: Si, caro Masetto.

MASETTO: Ballare no, non voglio.

LEPORELLO: Eh Balla, amico mio:
Facciam quel ca'altri fa.

ANNA: (aparte). Resister non poss'io.

OTTAVIO E ELVIRA: (aparte). Fingete per pietà!

GIOVANNI: (a Zerlina). Vieni con me, mia vita!

MASETTO: (a Leporello). Lasciami. Ah no! Zerlina!

GIOVANNI: Vieni, vieni.

ZERLINA: Oh, Numi! son tradita!

LEPORELLO: Qui nasce una rovina. (Si nasconde).

ANNA, ELVIRA E OTTAVIO: (aparte). L'iniquo da se stesso, Nel laccio se ne va.

ZERLINA: (di dentro). Gente! ajuto! ajuto gente!

ANNA, ELVIRA E OTTAVIO: Soccorriamo l'innocente.

MASETTO: Ah, Zerlina!

ZERLINA: (di dentro). Scelerato!

JUAN: My house to all is open,
And liberty for all.

ANNA, ELVIRA AND OCTAVIO: We, my lord, most thankfully Receive your hospitality.

JUAN: (to Leporello). Now, recommence the ball!
You marshal forth the dancing.
Come now, the gay throng joining,
Zerlina, dance with me.

LEPORELLO: Excellent! now for dancing.

ELVIRA: (aside). That is the country girl.

ANNA: (aside). Ah, how I tremble!

OCTAVIO: (aside). Conceal your alarm.

JUAN AND LEPORELLO: (aside). Everything goes well!

MASETTO: (aside). Yes, everything goes well.

JUAN: (to Leporello). Take care of friend Masetto.

LEPORELLO: He's jealous and won't dance.

JUAN: Zerlina, I'm your partner;
Come hither, come with me.

LEPORELLO: Come here, my friend Masetto,
And let us do as they.

MASETTO: No, no, I will not dance.

LEPORELLO: Nay, listen to what I say.

MASETTO: I tell you, never—no.

LEPORELLO: Yes, dear Masetto, pray.

MASETTO: I will not dance today.

LEPORELLO: Yet, let us dance, my friend:
With me their joys partake.

ANNA: (aside). I'll pretend no longer.

OCTAVIO AND ELVIRA: (aside). No, feign for pity's sake!

JUAN: (to Zerlina). Come, come with me, my love!

MASETTO: (to Leporello). Leave me alone. Zerlina!

JUAN: Come hither, quick, with me.

ZERLINA: Oh, Heavens! I'm betrayed!

LEPORELLO: Some uproar sure will come. (He hides himself).

ANNA, ELVIRA AND OCTAVIO: (aside). He leads her to her ruin,
And rushes to his doom.

ZERLINA: (from within). Help! help! Oh, aid me, aid me.

ANNA, ELVIRA AND OCTAVIO: Let us aid the helpless girl.

MASETTO: Ah, Zerlina!

ZERLINA: (from within). Villain, leave me!

ANNA E OTTAVIO: Ora grida da quel lato.

ZERLINA: (di dentro). Scelerato!

ANNA E OTTAVIO: Ah gittiamo qui la porta!

ZERLINA: (tornando). Soccorretemi! Son morta!

GLI ALTRI: Siamo qui per tua difesa!

GIOVANNI: (Tornando colla Spada straciata, e verso Leporello).
Ecco il birbo che t'ha offesa;
(Tenendolo).
Ma da me la pena avrà
Mori iniquo!

LEPORELLO: Ah cosa fate?

GIOVANNI: Mori, dico!

LEPORELLO: Ah cosa fate?

OTTAVIO: (a Giovanni). Nol sperate, nol sperate

ANNA, OTTAVIO E ELVIRA:
L'empio crede con tal frode
Di nasconder l'empietà.
(Cavonsi le maschere).

GIOVANNI: Donna Elvira!

ELVIRA: Si, malvagio!

GIOVANNI: Don Ottavio!

OTTAVIO: Si, signore!

GIOVANNI: Ah, credete—

ANNA: Traditore!

ANNA, ELVIRA E OTTAVIO:
Traditore! traditore!
Tutto, tutto già si sa!
Trema, trema! scelerato!

ZERLINA: Saprà tosto il mondo intero
Il misfatto orrendo e nero—
La tua fiera crudeltà.

GIOVANNI E LEPORELLO: È confusa la mia testa:
Non so più quel ch'io mi faccia,
È un'orribile tempesta
Minacciando, oh Dio, mi va! (Si ode il tuono).

TUTTI: (eccetto Giovanni e Leporello). Odi il tuon della vendetta,
Che ti fischia intorno intorno,
Sul tuo capo in questo giorno.
Il suo fulmine cadrà.

GIOVANNI E LEPORELLO: Ma non manca in me coraggio,
Non mi perdo, o mi confondo.
Non si perde, o si confonde;
Se cadesse ancora il mondo—
Nulla mai temer mi fa!

FINE DELL'ATTO PRIMO.

ANNA AND OCTAVIO: Hark! from that side comes the voice.

ZERLINA: (from within). Villain!

ANNA AND OCTAVIO: Let us burst the door!

ZERLINA: (Re-entering). Help me, friends! I faint, I die!

ALL: Here we're ready to defend you!

JUAN: (Re-entering with his Sword drawn, and turning to Leporello). Here's the wretch that did the wrong
But by my hand he shall die!
(Seizing him).
Villain, perish!

LEPORELLO: Why? oh why?

JUAN: You shall die!

LEPORELLO: Yet stay! why should I?

OCTAVIO: (to Juan). Hope not, hope not to escape.

ANNA, ELVIRA AND OCTAVIO:
Vainly seeks he to deceive us—
Hoping the truth to hide.
(They unmask).

JUAN: Donna Elvira!

ELVIRA: Yes, you false one!

JUAN: Don Octavio!

OCTAVIO: Yes, Signor!

JUAN: Ah, believe me—

ANNA: Oh, you traitor.

ANNA, ELVIRA AND OCTAVIO:
Traitor! traitor!
Everything at length is known!
Tremble, traitor! wrath is waking!

ZERLINA: Terror deep your conscience shaking,
Sudden vengeance guilt overtaking.
You, unheard, for aid shall cry.

JUAN AND LEPORELLO: Now my head is quite confounded:
What to do I do not know;
And by storms I am surrounded—
Menacing some sudden blow.
(Thunder is heard).

ALL: (Except Juan and Leporello). Dead to hope, unpityed falling, Wild remorse your heart appalling.
You for mercy vainly calling,
In despairing guilt shall die!

JUAN AND LEPORELLO: Though the lightning's round me flashing,
Though the thunder's over me crashing,
Fiery bolts may on me fall—
Nothing shall appal my courage.

END OF ACT I.

■ ATTO II

SCENA I

Piezza, come nel prim'Atto. A Lato la Casa di Elvira, con finestra, e Porta praticabile.

Don Giovanni; Leporello.

GIOVANNI: Eh via, buffone,
Non mi seccar.

LEPORELLO: No, no, padrone,
Non vò restar.

GIOVANNI: Sentimi, amico.

LEPORELLO: Vò andar, vi dico.

GIOVANNI: Ma che ti ho fatto,
Che vuoi lasciarmi?

LEPORELLO: Oh niente affatto!
Quasi ammazzarmi,
Ed io non burlo,
Ma voglio andar.

GIOVANNI: Va, che sei matto.

LEPORELLO: Non vò restar.

GIOVANNI: Leporello!

LEPORELLO: Signore?

GIOVANNI: Vien qui, facciamo pace.
(Da una borsa).
Prendi.

LEPORELLO: Cosa?

GIOVANNI: Quattro doppie.

LEPORELLO: Oh sentite! Per questa volta ancora
La ceremonia accetto;
Ma non vi ci avvezzate—non credeste;
Di sedurre i miei pari
Come le donne, a forza di denari.

GIOVANNI: Non parliam più di ciò. Ti basta l'animo
Di far quel ch'io ti dico?

LEPORELLO: Purchè lasciam le donne.

GIOVANNI: Lasciar le donne! Pazzo!
Lasciar le donne! Sai ch'esse per me
Son necessarie più del pan che mangio—
Più dell'aria che spiro.

LEPORELLO: E avete core
D'ingannarie poi tutte?

GIOVANNI: È tutto amore
Chi a una sola è fedele
Verso l'altra è crudele. Io, ch'in me serva
Si esteso sentimento,
Vo bene a tutte quante,
Le donne poi, che calcolar non sanno,
Il mio buon natural chiamano inganno.

LEPORELLO: Non ho veduto mai
Naturale più benigno!
Orsù cosa vorreste?

■ ACT II

SCENE I

A Scene, as in Act 1. Elvira's House at the side, with practicable Window and Door.

Don Juan; Leporello.

JUAN: Away, you buffoon, and Torment me no more.

LEPORELLO: I'll quit you now, sir.
For thus I swore.

JUAN: Hear me, I pray you.

LEPORELLO: I'll go; but what say you?

JUAN: What have I done, now,
That you will leave me?

LEPORELLO: Of course nothing!
Only half-killed me;
And I'm not joking,
For now I will go.

JUAN: What are you thinking?

LEPORELLO: No; I will go.

JUAN: Leporello!

LEPORELLO: Signor?

JUAN: No more of this story.
Come here, and take this.
(Gives him a purse).

LEPORELLO: How much?

JUAN: Four guineas.

LEPORELLO: That's not amiss!
For this once I permit—
And to it must submit;
But pray don't repeat it:
It is really not fit
To bribe my honor with money.

JUAN: Oh, speak of that no more.
Have you the courage
To do what I shall tell you?

LEPORELLO: Yes, if you'll leave the women.

JUAN: I leave the women! Fool!
That shall I never do! Know that to me
They're more delightful than the bread I eat—
Yes, or the air I breathe.

LEPORELLO: And have you, then, the heart
Thus to deceive them all?

JUAN: It is my love!
He who is true to only one,
Is harsh to all but her alone.
This liberal view I still maintain,
And I wish well to all I can.
The ladies call my good intention
Without considering, a deception.

LEPORELLO: Never have I seen, then,
Benevolence more vast, nor more extensive!
Now, what is it you want?

GIOVANNI: Odi! Vedesti tu la cameriera Di Donna Elvira?	JUAN: Oh, listen! Have you seen the lady's maid Of Donna Elvira?
LEPORELLO: Io no.	LEPORELLO: No.
GIOVANNI: Non hai veduto Qualche cosa di bello! Caro il mio Leporello: ora io con lei Vò tentar la mia sorte; ed ho pensato, Giacchè siam verso sera, Per aguzzarle meglio l'appetito, Di presentarmi a lei col tuo vestito.	JUAN: Then have you never Seen person so charming! Hear, my friend Leporello: when with her To try my fortune hard I've been thinking, Now that evening's drawing on The more to heighten her enjoyment, To show myself in this your vestment.
LEPORELLO: E perchè non poteste Presentarvi col vostro?	LEPORELLO: And why could you not Appear in yours?
GIOVANNI: Han poco credito Con gente di tal rango Gli abiti signorili Sbrigati via!	JUAN: The dress of a noble With people like her, Would too fine appear. Be quick!
LEPORELLO: Signor, per più ragioni—	LEPORELLO: My lord, hear me, I pray—
GIOVANNI: Finiscila, non soffro opposizioni.	JUAN: Be silent, for I'll have my way.

SCENA II

SCENE II

Donna Elvira, E detti.	Donna Elvira. The same.
ELVIRA: (alla finestra). Ah taci, ingiusto core! Non palpitarmi in seno! È un empio, è un traditore È colpa aver pietà.	ELVIRA: (at the window). Be silent, trembling heart! Beat not, my breast within He's impious, a deceiver; To pity him is sin.
LEPORELLO: Zitto! di Donna Elvira. Signor, la voce io sento.	LEPORELLO: Hush! of Lady Elvira, My lord, the voice I hear.
GIOVANNI: Cogliere io vò il momento! Tu fermati un pò là. Elvira, idolo mio!	JUAN: Ah. let me seize the moment! Remain an instant here. Elvira, my adored one!
ELVIRA: Non è costui l'ingrato?	ELVIRA: Is that not the deceiver?
GIOVANNI: Si vita mia, son io, E chieggo carità.	JUAN: Ah, yes, indeed. It is I, love, Who once to you was dear.
ELVIRA: Numi! che strano affetto Mi si risveglia in petto!	ELVIRA: Heavens! what a strange confusion Now agitates my heart!
LEPORELLO: (aparte). State a veder la pazza! Ch'ancor gli crederà.	LEPORELLO: (aside). Again see her delusion! For she believes him still.
GIOVANNI: Discendi, o gioja bella! Vedrai che tu sei quella, Che adora l'alma mia, Pentito io sono già!	JUAN: Descend, oh beauteous lady! And you again shall feel How much my heart adores you, And now repents its ill!
ELVIRA: No! non ti credo, o barbaro.	ELVIRA: Ah, cruel man! can I believe you?
GIOVANNI: Ah, credimi, o m'uccido!	JUAN: Slay me, my love, if I deceive you!
LEPORELLO: (aparte). Se seguitate, io rido.	LEPORELLO: (aside). My laughter I must smother!
GIOVANNI: Idolo mio, vien quà!	JUAN: My love, oh pray come here!
A 3.	A 3.
ELVIRA: Dei! che cimento è questo? Non so s'io vado, o resto! Ah, proteggete voi La mia credulità?	ELVIRA: Cruel one! can I believe you? I am much too credulous Pitying powers, protect me! Now, shall I go or stay!
GIOVANNI: (aparte). Spero che cada presto— Che bel colpetto è questo; Più fertile talento Del mio no non si dà!	JUAN: (aside). It was well worth the trial— There's none so much can say: And I've a wonderous talent For leading them astray!
LEPORELLO: (aparte). Già quel mendace labbro Torna a sedur costei; Deh proteggete, o Dei! La sua credulità!	LEPORELLO: (aside). Oh, what a smooth deceiver! A second time he'll leave her: Protect her, gracious Heaven! And pity her, I pray!
GIOVANNI: Amico, che ti par!	JUAN: My friend, what think you of it.
LEPORELLO: Mi par ch'abbiate Un'anima di bronzo.	LEPORELLO: A heart you have, I think As hard as any bronze.
GIOVANNI: Va là, che sè il gran gonzo! Ascolta bene; Quando costei qui viene, Tu corri ad abbracciarla— Falle quattro carezze— Fingi la voce mia; poi con bell'arte Cerca teco condurla in altra parte.	JUAN: Ah, what a simpleton are you! Now hear me: When she comes hither, Run and embrace her— Caress her most tenderly— Contrive to feign my voice; and then, with art Seek to conduct her away with you.
LEPORELLO: Ma, signor—	LEPORELLO: But, sir—
GIOVANNI: Non più repliche!	JUAN: No reply!
LEPORELLO: E se poi mi conosce?	LEPORELLO: If she should know me?
GIOVANNI: Non ti conoscerà, se tu non vuoi. Zitto! ell'apre—ehi giudizio.	JUAN: She will not find you out, if you are prudent. Peace! the door opens—now, take care!

SCENA III

SCENE III

E detti.	The same.
ELVIRA: Eccomi a voi!	ELVIRA: Behold, I am here!
GIOVANNI: (aparte). Vediamo che farà.	JUAN: (aside). Let us see what he'll do.
LEPORELLO: (aparte). Che bell'imbroglio!	LEPORELLO: (aside). Here's a position!
ELVIRA: Dunque creder potrò, ch'i pianti miei Abbian vinto quel cor! dunque pentito L'amato Don Giovanni al suo dovere, E all'amor mio ritorna?	ELVIRA: Then could I ever believe that my complaints Would melt a heart like yours! and that, repentant, Don Juan, my beloved, would to his faith, And to my love, return!
LEPORELLO: Si, carina!	LEPORELLO: Ah, yes, beloved!
ELVIRA: Crudele! se sapeste Quante lagrime, e quanti Sospiri voi mi costate!	ELVIRA: Oh, cruel! if you knew How many sighs, and, ah! how many A tear of sorrow, you've cost me!
LEPORELLO: Io, vita mia!	LEPORELLO: I, my loved life!
ELVIRA: Voi.	ELVIRA: Yes, you.
LEPORELLO: Poverina, quanto mi dispiace!	LEPORELLO: Poor lady, ah, how much I grieve!
ELVIRA: Mi fuggirete più?	ELVIRA: Will you never leave me more?
LEPORELLO: No, muso bello!	LEPORELLO: No, angel dear!
ELVIRA: Sarete sempre mio?	ELVIRA: Will you be always mine?
LEPORELLO: Sempre!	LEPORELLO: Always!
ELVIRA: Carissimo!	ELVIRA: My dearest!

LEPORELLO: Carissima!
(Aparte).
La burla mi da gusto!

ELVIRA: Mio tesoro!

LEPORELLO: Mia venere!

ELVIRA: Son per voi tutta foco!

LEPORELLO: Io tutto cenere!

GIOVANNI: (aparte). Il birbo si riscalda.

ELVIRA: E non m'ingannerete?

LEPORELLO: No, sicuro.

ELVIRA: Giuratelo.

LEPORELLO: Lo giuro a questa mano,
Che bacio con trasporto, e a quei bei lumi!

GIOVANNI: Ih, eh, ah, ih! sei morto!

ELVIRA: Oh, Numi!
(Fuggono Elvira e Leporello).

GIOVANNI: Ih, eh, ah, ih! Par che la sorte
Mi secondi. Veggiamo;
Le finestre son queste: ora cantiamo.
Deh vieni alla finestra,
O mio tesoro;
Deh vieni a consolar,
Il pianto mio.
Se neghi a me di dar qualche ristoro;
Davanti agli occhi tuoi, morir vogl'io.
Tu ch'hai la bocca dolce,
Più del miele,
Tu che il zucchero posti in mezzo al core;
Non esser gioja mia con me crudele,
Lasciate almen veder mio bell'amore!

SCENA IV

Don Giovanni; Masetto, con seguito di Contadini armati.

GIOVANNI: V'è gente alla finestra;
Forse è dessa. Ps! ps!

MASETTO: Non ci stanchiamo;—il cor mi dice
Che trovarlo dobbiamo.

GIOVANNI: (aparte). Qualcuno parla.

MASETTO: Fermatevi—mi pare
Ch'alcuno qui si mova.

GIOVANNI: (aparte). Se non fallo, è Masetto.

MASETTO: Chi va là? Non risponde?
Animo, schioppo al muso:
Chi va là?

LEPORELLO: Most loved!
(Aside).
The joke's delightful!

ELVIRA: My life's treasure!

LEPORELLO: Goddess of love!

ELVIRA: Love's soft flame, alas! consumes me!

LEPORELLO: My heart is scorched!

JUAN: (aside). The rogue grows warm.

ELVIRA: And you will not deceive me?

LEPORELLO: No, certainly.

ELVIRA: Swear it.

LEPORELLO: By this fair hand I swear,
That thus I kiss with joy, and by those eyes!

JUAN: Ah, ha, there wretch, you shall die!

ELVIRA: Oh, Heavens!
(Elvira and Leporello run off).

JUAN: Ah, ha, there, run! Fortune, it seems,
Would now befriend me. Let me see:
These are the windows: now, the serenade.
Come shining forth, my dearest,
With looks of warm delight;
Shed joy as you appear,
Like morning beams of light.
Mild shines your azure eye;
Your absence chilling night, love,
In which I droop and die.
O! let me hear that tongue, love,
Whose music thrills my heart.
Like notes by angels sung, love,
When souls in bliss depart;
And to your casement sing,
Illume my ravished sight,
Like day the world surprising
With morning's beam of light.

SCENE IV

Don Juan; Masetto, followed by a crowd of armed Peasants.

JUAN: There's some on at the window:
Perhaps it's she. Hist! hist!

MASETTO: Let us not hesitate;—my heart now tells me
That we ought to find him here.

JUAN: (aside). Some one speaks.

MASETTO: Halt there a moment—listen:
I think that some one moves.

JUAN: (aside). If I mistake not it's Masetto.

MASETTO: Who goes there? Does no one answer?
Level your guns, my friends—be bold:
Who goes there?

GIOVANNI: (aparte). Non è solo,
Ci vuol giudizio. (Forte). Amici, (aparte) Non mi voglio scoprir. Sei tu, Masetto!

MASETTO: Appunto quello; e tu?

GIOVANNI: Non mi conosci? Un servo
Son io di Don Giovanni—

MASETTO: Leporello! Servo di quell'indegno cavaliere?

GIOVANNI: Certo, di quel briccone.

MASETTO: Di quell'uom senz'onore, ah dimmi un poco,
Dove possiam trovarlo;
Lo cerco con costor per trucidarlo.

GIOVANNI: (aparte). Bagatelle!
(Forte). Bravissimo Masetto.
Anch'io con voi m'unisco
Per fargliela a quel birbo di padrone;
Ma udite un pò qual è la mia intenzione
Metà di qua metà là—in tal modo
Ei non potrà fuggir. S'a caso udite
Qualcuno amoreggiar sotto il balcone,
O se vedete passeggiar in piazza
Un damerino accanto a una ragazza,
Ferite pure, è desso; non tardate—
Partite, tutti, andate.
Tu sol resta con me,
Ed a te noto or or sarà il perchè.
(I Contadini partono).

SCENA V

Il Don Giovanni; Masetto.

GIOVANNI: Zitto! lascia ch'io senta. Ottimamente!
Dunque dobbiamo ucciderlo?

MASETTO: Sicuro.

GIOVANNI: E non ti basteria rompergli l'ossa,
Fracassargli le spalle?

MASETTO: No, no! voglio ammazzarlo!
Vò farlo in cento brani.

GIOVANNI: Hai buone arme?

MASETTO: Cospetto!
Ho pria questo moschetto;
(dandola a Giovanni).
E poi questa pistola.
(dandola).

GIOVANNI: E poi?

MASETTO: Non basta?

GIOVANNI: Eh, basta certo. Or prendi
Questa per la pistola, (Battendolo).
Questa per il moschetto.

JUAN: (aside). He's not alone; I must be cautious. (Aloud.) Here, my friends, (Aside.) I wish not to betray myself. Masetto!

MASETTO: It is so; and you?

JUAN: Do you not know me? I am the servant of famed Don Juan—

MASETTO: Servant of that unworthy cavalier?

JUAN: Certainly, of that knave.

MASETTO: Of that man lost to honor, come, tell me now,
Where we may quickly find him:
I and my friends are seeking, and would kill him.

JUAN: (aside). A fine joke this!
(Aloud.) My brave Masetto,
I also will go with you
To help you catch this villain of a master;
But hear a moment what is my intention:
place half your numbers here, the others there—
Then he will not escape. If you should hear
Some person courting underneath the balcony,
Or should you chance to notice in the square
A lady walking with a well-dressed youth,
Strike hard, for that is he; do not delay—
Now, quickly, all begone.
Remain alone with me,
And shortly I'll explain the reason why.
(Exeunt Peasants).

SCENE V

Don Juan; Masetto.

JUAN: Hush! let me listen. Excellent!
Then we must kill him?

MASETTO: Of course.

JUAN: But would it not suffice to break his bones,
And beat him black and blue?

MASETTO: No, no, sir! I will kill him!
I'll tear him all to pieces.

JUAN: Have you good weapons?

MASETTO: Have I not?
See, first I have this musket;
(Giving it to Juan).
And next, see here, this pistol.
(Giving it).

JUAN: And next?

MASETTO: It's not enough?

JUAN: Enough, of course. Now, take
This for your precious pistol,
(Beating him).
And this for your good musket.

MASETTO: Ahi! ahi! La testa mia—	MASETTO: Alas! alas! Oh, my poor head—
GIOVANNI: Taci, o t'uccido. (Battendolo ancora). Questa per l'ammazzarlo, Questa per farlo in brani;— Villano, mascalzon, ceffo da cani! (Parte).	JUAN: Hush, or I'll kill you. (Beating him again). This is for going to kill him, This is for tearing him up;— You villain, you ruffian, you ugly-faced cur!

SCENA VI	SCENE VI
Masetto; indi Zerlina.	Masetto; afterwards Zerlina.
MASETTO: (Gridando forte). Ahi, ahi! La testa mia! Ahi, ahi, le spalle! E il petto!	MASETTO: (crying loudly) Oh, alas! Oh, my poor head. Oh, oh, my shoulders! Oh, my back!
ZERLINA: M'è parso di sentire La voce di Masetto.	ZERLINA: I thought just now I heard The voice of my Masetto.
MASETTO: Oh, Dio! Zerlina! Zerlina mia, soccorso!	MASETTO: Oh, Heavens! Zerlina! Zerlina, come and help me!
ZERLINA: Cose'è stato?	ZERLINA: What has happened?
MASETTO: L'iniquo, il scelerato Mi ruppe l'ossa, e i nervi	MASETTO: The wretch, the wicked villain Has broken all my bones.
ZERLINA: O poveretta me! chi?	ZERLINA: Oh, dear me! who?
MASETTO: Leporello. O qualche diavol che somiglia a lui.	MASETTO: Leporello, Or else some devil that resembles him.
ZERLINA: Crudel! non tel diss'io, Che con questa tua pazza gelosia Ti ridurresti a qualche brutto passo. Dove ti duole?	ZERLINA: How cruel! but I told you, That by your foolish senseless jealousy, You'd bring yourself into some dreadful harm. Where are you hurt?
MASETTO: Qui.	MASETTO: Here.
ZERLINA: E poi?	ZERLINA: Where else?
MASETTO: Qui, e ancora qui.	MASETTO: Here; and here, also.
ZERLINA: E poi non ti duol altro?	ZERLINA: Are you hurt nowhere else?
MASETTO: Duolmi un poco Questo piè, questo braccio, e questa mano.	MASETTO: Ah, yes, a little. Here in this foot, this arm, and in this hand.
ZERLINA: Via via, non è gran mal, s'il resto è sano. Vientene meco a casa. Purchè tu mi prometta D'essere men geloso. Io, io ti guarirò, caro il mio sposo. Vedrai carino, Se, sei buonino, Che bel rimedio, Ti voglio dar. È naturale, Non da disgusto, E lo speziale. Non lo so far, nò. È un certo balsamo, Che porto addosso, Dare tel posso, S'il vuoi provar! Saper vorresti? Dove mi stà? Sentilo battere Toccami quà!	ZERLINA: Well, well, you're not much hurt, if that is all. Come with me to the house. Only now make a promise. Henceforth to be less jealous. And I will heal you soon, my own dear husband. Listen, and I'll find, love, If you are kind, love, Balm for your mind, love, Patient but be. This balm so pure, love, Simple and sure, love, Sweet to endure, love, None knew but me. Thrilling and healing, Over you stealing, Exquisite feeling, Meant but for you! To your entreating I'll yield it, dear! Feel how it's beating! Beating just here!

SCENA VII	SCENE VII
Cortile interno delia casa di Elvira.	An inner Court in the House of Elvira.
Leporello; Donna Elvira.	Leporello; Donna Elvira.
LEPORELLO: Di molte fasi il lume S'avvicina, o mio ben; stiamo qui un poco, Finchè da noi si scosta.	LEPORELLO: The light of many torches Approaches, my beloved: let's stop a moment And give them time to pass.
ELVIRA: Ma che temi, Adorato mio sposo!	ELVIRA: But what fear you, My husband, my adored one?
LEPORELLO: Nulla, nulla. Certi riguardi—Io vò veder, s'il lume È già lontano. (Aparte.) Ah come Da costei liberarmi? (forte). Rimanti, anima bella!	LEPORELLO: Nothing, nothing; Only I thought—I'll see now if the light Is gone yet. (Aside.) But how can I Make my escape from her? (Aloud). Wait here a moment, love.
ELVIRA: Ah, non lasciarmi!	ELVIRA: Ah. leave me not!
ELVIRA: Sola, sola, in bujo loco, Palpitar il cor mi sento! E m'assale un tal spavento, Che mi sembra di morir.	ELVIRA: Here, alone, in this drear darkness, How my heart with fear trembles, My alarm I can't dissemble— I feel as if even death were near.
LEPORELLO: Più che cerco men ritrovo Questa porta sciagurata. Piano, piano—l'ho trovata, Ecco il tempo di fuggir. (Si nasconde).	LEPORELLO: The more I search I still am further From this most infernal door. Softly, softly—now I've found it, And this is the time to fly. (He conceals himself).

SCENA VIII	SCENE VIII
Don Ottavio; Donna Anna. E detti.	Don Octavio; Donna Anna. The same.
OTTAVIO: Tergi il ciglio, o vita mia! E da calma al tuo dolore! L'ombra omai del genitore Pena avrà dè tuoi martir.	OCTAVIO: Dry those tears, they wring my heart, love! Could I comfort now impart, love! Even the shade of your brave father Will mourn at every deep-felt sigh.
ANNA: Lascia almen alla mia pena Questo piccolo ristoro, Sol la morte, o mio tesoro— Il mio pianto può finir!	ANNA: Yet amidst my desolation, Still remains the consolation, Death, my love, will end my suffering— Would that now I here could die!
ELVIRA: Ah, dov'è lo sposo mio?	ELVIRA: Ah, where are you dearest husband?
LEPORELLO: (aparte). Se mi trova, son perduto.	LEPORELLO: (aside). I am lost, if they find me here!
ELVIRA E LEPORELLO: Una porta là vegg'io Cheta cheta io vò partir.	ELVIRA AND LEPORELLO: Here's a door;—now softly open it, Let us try to escape them.

SCENA IX	SCENE IX
Zerlina; Masetto, con lume. E detti.	Zerlina, Masetto, with lights. The same.
MASETTO E ZELINA: (vedendo Leporello). Ferma briccone! dove ten vai.	MASETTO AND ZERLINA: (seeing Leporello). Villain, stop! You may not pass here!
ANNA E OTTAVIO: Ecco il fellone! Com'era qua?	ANNA AND OCTAVIO: See the wretch! How did he come there?
ANNA, OTTAVIO, ZERLINA E MASETTO: Ah! mora il perfido, Che m'ha tradito!	ANNA, OCTAVIO, ZERLINA AND MASETTO: Death to the traitor. That has betrayed you!
ELVIRA: È mio marito! Pietà! pietà!	ELVIRA: Ah, it is my husband! Pity, I pray you.

ANNA, OTTAVIO, ZERLINA E MASETTO: Donna Elvira
Quello ch'io vedo?
Appena il credo?
No; morirà!

LEPORELLO: Perdon, perdono!
Signori miei;
Quell'io non sono,
Sbaglia costei.
Viver lasciatemi
Per carità!

ANNA, OTTAVIO, ZERLINA E MASETTO: È Leporello!
Che inganno è questo!
Stupida resto.
Che mai sarà.

LEPORELLO: Mille torbidi pensieri
Mi s'aggiran per la testa;
Se mi salvo in tal tempesta,
È un prodigio in verità!

ANNA, OTTAVIO, ZERLINA E MASETTO: Mille torbidi pensieri
Mi s'aggiran per la testa;
Che giornata, o stelle, è questa—
Che impensata novità?
(Donna Anna e Leporello partono).

ELVIRA: Ferma, perfido, ferma!

MASETTO: Il birbo ha l'ali ai piedi.

ZERLINA: Con qual arte
Si sottrasse l'iniquo!

OTTAVIO: Amici miei.
Dopo eccessi sì enormi,
Dubitar non possiam, che Don Giovanni
Non sia l'empio uccisore
Del padre di Donn'Anna. In questa casa
Per poche ore fermatevi: un ricorso
Vò far a chi si deve; e in pochi istanti
Vendicarvi prometto
Così vuole dover, pietade, affetto.
Il mio tesoro in canto
Andate, andate a consolar!
E del bel ciglio il pianto.
Cercate di asciugar.
Ditele che i suoi torti
A vendicar io vado.
Che sol di stragi e morti
Nunzio vogl'io tornar.

SCENA X

Recinto murato, in mezzo al quale si vede la Statua del Commendatore.

Don Giovanni, salendo il muro; indi Leporello.

GIOVANNI: Ah! ah! ah! questa è buona!
Or lasciala cercar. Che bella notte!
È più chiara del giorno; sembra fatta

ANNA, OCTAVIO, ZERLINA AND MASETTO: Is is Elvira Whom I decry?
Can I believe it?
No; let him die!

LEPORELLO: Pardon, dear gentlemen!
She does mistake;
And she imagines
I am that rake.
Oh, pray don't kill me,
For mercy's sake!

ANNA, OCTAVIO, ZERLINA AND MASETTO: It is Leporello!
See, some new treachery!
Yet that is he
I cannot deny.

LEPORELLO: Like the roaring foaming ocean,
My brain is in a wild commotion;
If I escape in such a tempest,
It is a miracle indeed!

ANNA, OCTAVIO, ZERLINA AND MASETTO: Like the roaring foaming ocean,
Is my heart in wild commotion;
But just vengeance shall overtake him—
He shall perish, it's decreed!
(Exeunt Donna Anna and Leporello).

ELVIRA: Stay, traitor, stay!

MASETTO: The rogue has wings to his feet.

ZERLINA: How artfully
The wretch has slunk away!

OCTAVIO: My friends,
After offenses so enormous,
We can no longer doubt that this Don Juan
Was the impious murderer
Of Donna Anna's father. In this house,
For a few hours, remain: I'll have recourse
To those whose duty it is; and very soon
I promise to avenge you;
For honor, justice, love my efforts claim.
Fly, then, my love, entreating,
To clam, to calm her anxious fears;
Oh, still her heart's wild beating,
And wipe away her tears.
Tell her I'll take vengeance
On him who slew her sire;
This arm his grave shall make,
Or I'll by his expire.

SCENE X

A walled Cemetery, in the midst of which the Statue of the Commandant is seen.

Don Juan, who leaps over the wall; afterwards Leporello.

JUAN: Ah! ah! ah! this is good!
Now let them seek me. What a lovely night!
It is clearer than the day; and seems to court me

Per gir a zonzo, à caccia di ragazze.
Vediam s'è tardi? Ah, no!
Ancor non son le due di notte. Avrei
Voglia un pò saper com'è finito
L'affar tra Leporello e Donna Elvira;
S'egli ha avuto giudizio.

LEPORELLO: (Senz'alito, dietro il muro). Alfin vuole ch'io faccia un precipizio!

GIOVANNI: È desso! Oh, Leporello!

LEPORELLO: Chi mi chiama?

GIOVANNI: Non conosci il padrone!

LEPORELLO: Così nol conoscessi!

GIOVANNI: Come? birbo!

LEPORELLO: Ah, siete voi? Scusate!

GIOVANNI: Cos'è stato?

LEPORELLO: Per cagion vostra io fui quasi accoppato.

GIOVANNI: Ebben, non era questo
Un onore per te?

LEPORELLO: Signor, vel dono!

GIOVANNI: Via, via, vien qua:
Che belle cose ti deggio dir!

LEPORELLO: Ma cosa fate qui?

GIOVANNI: Vien dentro, e lo saprai
Diverse istorielle,
Che accadute mi son dacchè partisti,
Ti dirò un'altra volta; or la più bella
Ti vò solo narrar.

LEPORELLO: Donnesca, al certo.

GIOVANNI: C'è dubbio! Una fanciulla,
Bella, giovin, galante,
Per la strada incontrai; le vado appresso,
La prendo per la man—figgir mi vuole;
Dico poche parole, ella mi piglia
Sai per chi?

LEPORELLO: Non lo so.

GIOVANNI: Per Leporello!

LEPORELLO: Per me!

GIOVANNI: Per te!

LEPORELLO: Va bene!

GIOVANNI: Per la mano
Essa allora mi prende.

LEPORELLO: Ancora meglio!

GIOVANNI: M'accarezza, m'abbraccia—
'Caro il mio Leporello!
Leporello, mio caro! Allor m'accorse
Ch'era qualche tua bella.

To rove about, and hunt for pretty girls.
Is it yet late? Oh no!
It is not two hours past midnight. I much wish
To know how that affair at length was finished.
Between Leporello and fair Donna Elvira;
And if he played his part discreetly.

LEPORELLO: (Out of breath behind the wall). Surely, he wishes to be death to me!

JUAN: It is he! Oh, Leporello!

LEPORELLO: Who calls me there?

JUAN: Do you not know your master?

LEPORELLO: Would I had never known him!

JUAN: How? you rogue!

LEPORELLO: Ah, is it you! Excuse me!

JUAN: What's the matter?

LEPORELLO: On your account,
I've just been almost murdered.

JUAN: Well, and was not that An honor?

LEPORELLO: Sir, thank you!

JUAN: Come, come, this way:
I've some rare tales to tell you!

LEPORELLO: But what do you do here?

JUAN: Just jump over, and you shall know.
Some pleasant little affairs,
That have befallen me since you went away,
I'll tell you another time; the best of all
I'm going to tell you now.

LEPORELLO: Of the fair ones, I'm certain.

JUAN: You're right! A charming creature,
Beautiful, young, and gay.
I met in the street; and, accosting her,
I took her by the hand—she tried to avoid me:
But after a few words she took me for—
Whom do you think?

LEPORELLO: I know not.

JUAN: For Leporello!

LEPORELLO: For me!

JUAN: For you!

LEPORELLO: Very fine!

JUAN: She then, in turn, took me by the hand.

LEPORELLO: Still better!

JUAN: She smothered me with caresses—
Oh, my dearest Leporello!
Leporello, my dear! Then it struck me
She was some beauty of your's.

LEPORELLO: (aparte). Oh, maledetto!

GIOVANNI: Dell'inganno approfitto; non so come
Mi riconosce, grida, sento gente,—
A fuggire mi metto; e pronto pronto
Per quel muretto in questo loco io monto.

LEPORELLO: E mi dite la cosa
Con tal indifferenza—

GIOVANNI: Perchè no?

LEPORELLO: Ma se fosse costei stata mia moglie?

GIOVANNI: (Ridendo molto forte). Meglio ancora!
(Parla la Statua).

COMMENDATORE: Di rider finirai
Pria dell'Aurora!

GIOVANNI: Chi ha parlato?

LEPORELLO: Ah! qualch'anima
Sarà dall'altro mondo,
Che vi conosce a fondo.

GIOVANNI: Taci, sciocco! Chi va la?

COMMENDATORE: Ribaldo, audace!
Lascia ai morti la pace.

LEPORELLO: Ve l'ho detto.

GIOVANNI: Sarà qualcun di fuori,
Che si burla di noi.
(Con indifferenza e sprezzo).
Ehi! del Commendatore
Non è questa la statua! Leggi un poco Quell'iscrizion.

LEPORELLO: Scusate:
Non ho imparato a leggere
A raggi della luce.

GIOVANNI: Leggi, dico!

LEPORELLO: (legge).
'Dell'empio, chi mi trasse al passo estreme,
'Qui attendo la vendetta.'
Udiste! io tremo!

GIOVANNI: O' vecchio buffonissimo
Digli che questa sera
L'attendo a cena meco.

LEPORELLO: Che pazzia!
Vi par! Oh, Dei! mirate
Che terribili occhiate
Egli ci da! Par vivo—par che senta—
E che voglia parlar.

GIOVANNI: Orsù va là
O qui t'ammazzo! E poi ti seppellisco!

LEPORELLO: Piano, piano, signore—ora ubbidisco.

LEPORELLO: O' statua gentilissima
Del gran Commendatore—
Pardon, mi trema il core;
Non posso terminar.

LEPORELLO: (aside). Oh, cursed chance!

JUAN: I profited by her mistake; unluckily,
She soon discovered me, and cried aloud,—
People approached and then it was time to run
And, quick as light, I jumped here over the wall.

LEPORELLO: And all this you tell me
As lightly and carelessly—

JUAN: Any why not?

LEPORELLO: Suppose that pretty girl should be my wife?

JUAN: (laughing loudly). Then, better still!
(The Statue speaks).

COMMANDANT: Your mirth shall have an end
Before the morning dawns!

JUAN: Who spoke there?

LEPORELLO: Ah! some spirit
Spoke from the other world,
Who knows your inmost soul.

JUAN: Silence, fool! Who goes there?

COMMANDANT: Audacious ribald, cease!
Let the dead sleep in peace.

LEPORELLO: Even so I told you.

JUAN: Some one must be outside,
Who scoffs at us.
(With indifference and contempt)
Ha! is not this the statue
Of the Commandant? Step forward
And read the inscription.

LEPORELLO: Excuse me:
I never learned to read
In light so pale.

JUAN: Read, I say!

LEPORELLO: (reads). On him who slew me, Heaven's Revenge I here Am now awaiting!
I shake with fear!

JUAN: Oh, venerable fool of fools!
Tell him that this evening
With me I hope he'll sup.

LEPORELLO: What madness!
See, see! Oh, Heaven's! behold
What an awful glance he cast
Upon us then! He is alive—he hears—
And is about to speak!

JUAN: At once go—speak,
Or else you die! Go quickly—speak I say!

LEPORELLO: Then softly, softly, master—I'll obey.

LEPORELLO: Oh, most gracious statue
Of the once great Commandant—
My lord, my courage fails me;
I can proceed no further.

GIOVANNI: Finiscila, o nel petto
Ti metto questo acciar.

LEPORELLO: (aparte). Che impiccio! che capriccio!
Io sentomi gelar!

GIOVANNI: (aparte). Che gusto, che spassetto!
Lo voglio far tremar.

LEPORELLO: O' statua gentilissima,
Benchè di marmo siate—
Ah, pardon mio! mirate
Che seguita a guardar.

GIOVANNI: Mori, mori!

LEPORELLO: No, attendete! (alla Statua). Signore, il padron mio—
Badate benn, non io—
Ah! ah! che scena è questa!
Oh, Ciel! chinò la testa!

GIOVANNI: Va là che sei un buffone—

LEPORELLO: Guardate ancor, padrone.

GIOVANNI: E che deggio guardar?

LEPORELLO: Colla marmorea testa
Ei fa così così.

GIOVANNI: Parlate, se potete,
Verrete a cena?

COMMENDATORE: Si!

LEPORELLO: Mover mi posso appena!
Mi manca, oh Dei, la lena!
Per carità partiamo:
Andiamo via di quà!

GIOVANNI: Bizzarra è inver la scena—
Verrà il buon vecchio a cena
A prepararla andiamo,
Partiamo via di quà.
(Partono).

SCENA XII

Camera.

Donna Anna; Don Ottavio.

OTTAVIO: Calmatevi, idol mio, di quel ribaldo
Vedrem puniti in breve i gravi eccessi.
Vendicati sarem.

ANNA: Ma il padre, oh Dio!

OTTAVIO: Convien chinar il ciglio
Al volere del Ciel. Respira, o cara,
Di tua perdita amara
Fia domani, se vuoi, dolce compenso,
Questo cor, questa mano,
Ch'il mio tenero amor!

ANNA: Oh, Dei! che dite,
In sì tristi momenti?

OTTAVIO: E che vorresti
Con indugi novelli
Accrescer le mie pene?
Crudel!

JUAN: Go on, or you shall feel
The sharpness of this steel.

LEPORELLO: (aside). How horrid! his caprice how bold!
Now I feel my blood run cold!

JUAN: (aside). What a jest! oh, what delight!
Greatly I enjoy his fright.

LEPORELLO: Oh, most courteous statue,
Though you of marble be—
Ah, look, my lord! oh, see!
He turns his eyes on me.

JUAN: Perish, villain!

LEPORELLO: Stay, I entreat you! (To the Statue). My lord, my noble master—
My master, and not I—
Ah! ah! with fear I die!
Oh, Heaven! he bows his head!

JUAN: Away, or else this sword—

LEPORELLO: Oh, look again, my lord!

JUAN: And what should I behold?

LEPORELLO: My lord, the marble cold,
Even thus, inclines its head.

JUAN: Speak, if you are able:
To supper will you come?

COMMANDANT: Yes!

LEPORELLO: He has frightened me to death!
Scare can I draw my breath!
I really can't stay here:
For mercy's sake, begone!

JUAN: It ceases to be pleasant—
At supper he'll be present;
Then let us quick prepare,
And hence we will be gone. (Exeunt).

SCENE XII

A Room.

Donna Anna; Don Octavio.

OCTAVIO: Be calm, my love, for soon this libertine
Shall punishment receive for his excesses,
And we shall be avenged.

ANNA: But yet, my father's death!

OCTAVIO: Still we must bow our heads
Before the will of the celestial powers.
For what you've lost, take comfort;
And, my beloved, to-morrow, if you please
Receive this hand and heart,
With my most tender love!

ANNA: Ah, me! what say you.
In moments of such sadness?

OCTAVIO: And why will you, With still-renewed delays
Increase my anxious cares!
It's cruel!

ANNA: Crudele! ah no!
Mio ben, troppo mi spiace
Allontanarti un ben che lungamente
La nostr'alma desia: ma il mondo! oh Dio!
Non sedur la costanza
Del sensibil mio core
Abbastanza per te mi parla amore

ARIA: Non mi dir bell'idol mio,
Che son io crudel con te;
Tu ben sai quan'io t'amai,
Tu conosci la mia fè:
Calma, calma il tuo tormento!
Se di duol non vuoi ch'io mora
Forse un giorno il Cielo ancora
Sentirà pietà di me.
(Parte).

OTTAVIO: Ah! ci segua il suo passo,
Io vo con lei dividere i martiri:
Saran meco men gravi i suoi sospiri.
(Parte).

SCENA XIII

Gran Sala, illuminata, con Tavola imbundita.

Don Giovanni, Leporello.

GIOVANNI: Già la mensa è preparata—
Voi suonate, amici cari;
Già che spendo i miei danari,
Io mi voglio divertir
Leporello, presto in tavola.

LEPORELLO: Son prontissimo a servir.

GIOVANNI: Che ti par del bel concerto?

LEPORELLO: È conforme al vostro merto.

GIOVANNI: Ah che piatto saporito!

LEPORELLO: Ah che barbaro appetito!
Che bocconi di gigante.
Mi par proprio di svenir.

GIOVANNI: Nel veder i miei bocconi
Gli par proprio di svenir
Piatto!

LEPORELLO: Servo, 'Fra i due Litiganti!'

GIOVANNI: Versa il vino. (Beve).
Eccellente marsimino!

LEPORELLO: (aparte). Questo pezzo di fagiano,
Piano piano vò inghiottir.

GIOVANNI: Sta mangiando quel marrano!
Fingerò di non capir.

LEPORELLO: (udendo ancora la musica). Questa poi la canosco pur troppo!

GIOVANNI: Leporello!

ANNA: Cruel! ah, no!
My love, too much I grieve
Thus to delay a hope that long ago
Our hearts desired; and yet, what will the world say?
Do not shake the constancy
Of my heart, so deeply grieved,
But yet love pleads for you too earnestly.

AIR: Say not then, dear love, of me,
That I'm cruel to you;
Since you know my constancy,
And how faithfully I love.
Calm, ah! calm that anxious heart!
Unless with grief you'd see me die.
A day will come, no more to part,
And Heaven to us its grace will prove.
(Exit).

OCTAVIO: Ah! Let me follow her footsteps;
I'll share her griefs, and mingle sighs with hers:
Her sorrow will be less, when shared with mine
(Exit).

SCENE XIII

A large Hall, illuminated, with a Table laid out.

Don Juan, Leporello.

JUAN: All's prepared, the banquet's ready—
Gaily let the music sound;
Here with mirth and joy abounding
Will we pass the night away.
Leporello, wait at table.

LEPORELLO: Sir, your orders I obey.

JUAN: Is that melody not charming?

LEPORELLO: Yes, when wine the heart is warming.

JUAN: And what delicious viands these!

LEPORELLO: Bless me! how he does enjoy it!
My poor mouth, I could employ it,
Very gladly, if he'd please.

JUAN: Ah! the hungry rascal's dying
Now to join in this good cheer,
Plates, here!

LEPORELLO: Yes, sir.
Ah, I know that tune well!

JUAN: Bring me wine.
(Drinks). Excellent! the flavor's fine!

LEPORELLO: (aside). Pheasant's wing! just the thing!
It shall quickly disappear.

JUAN: Ah, the rascal! how he's stuffing!
But I will not interfere.

LEPORELLO: (again listening to the music). Ah, I know that also, well!

JUAN: Leporello!

LEPORELLO: Pardon mio!

GIOVANNI: Parla schietto, mascalzone—

LEPORELLO: Non mi lascia una flessione
Le parole preferir.

GIOVANNI: Mentre io mangio, fischia un poco.

LEPORELLO: Non so far.

GIOVANNI: Cos'è?

LEPORELLO: Scusate! Sì eccellente è il vostro cuoco,
Che lo volli anch'io provar—

GIOVANNI: Si eccellente è il cuoco mio,
Che lo volle anch'ei provar.

SCENA XIV

Donna Elvira. E detti.

ELVIRA: (a Don Giovanni).
L'ultima prova
Dell'amor mio
Ancor vogl'io
Fare con te:
(s'inginocchia)
Più non rammento
Gl'inganni tuoi,
Pietate io sento—

GIOVANNI E LEPORELLO: (aparte). Cos'è? cose'è?

ELVIRA: Da te non chiede
Quest'alma oppressa
Della sua fede
Qualche mercè.

GIOVANNI: Mi maraviglio?
Cosa volete.
Se non sorgete—
Non resto in piè.

ELVIRA: Ah, non deridere
Gli affanni miei!

GIOVANNI: Io ti derido!
Cielo! perchè?

LEPORELLO: Quasi da piangere
Mi fa costei!

GIOVANNI: Che vuoi, mio bene?

ELVIRA: Che vita cangi!

GIOVANNI: Brava!

ELVIRA: Cor perfido!

GIOVANNI: Lascia ch'io mangi;
A se ti piace,
Mangia con me.

ELVIRA: Rimanti, barbaro,
Nel lezzo immondo,
Esempio orribile
D'iniquità.

LEPORELLO: (aparte). Se non si muove
Al suo dolore,
Di sasso ha il core—
O cor non ha.

GIOVANNI: Vivan le femmine!
Viva il buon vino!
Sostegno e gloria D'umanità.

LEPORELLO: Yes, good master!

JUAN: Plainly speak, you knave and tell—

LEPORELLO: Ah, I've got a shocking cold, sir;
And my throat is not quite clear.

JUAN: You can whistle while I'm eating.

LEPORELLO: I don't know how.

JUAN: What's that you say?

LEPORELLO: Pardon me!
But your cook's so very clever,
That I'm making an endeavor—

JUAN: Yes, my cook's so very clever,
You'll eat up everything that's here.

SCENE XIV

Donna Elvira. The same.

ELVIRA: (to Don Juan). The last proof
Of my affection
Still I wish
To give to you:
(She kneels). For no longer
Your deception
Yet even pity—

JUAN AND LEPORELLO: (aside).
What's this to me?

ELVIRA: This injured heart
No more from you
Will claim your faith,
You now are free.

JUAN: What is it you ask?
I am surprised.
I can't permit—
Fair lady, rise.

ELVIRA: Ah, deride not
My misfortunes!

JUAN: I deride you
Heavens! for why?

LEPORELLO: Her sorrow almost Makes me cry!

JUAN: What would you, fair lady?

ELVIRA: Ah, change your life!

JUAN: Very good!

ELVIRA: Oh, faithless heart!

JUAN: Let me be quiet;
Or, if you'll join me,
Sit here by me.

ELVIRA: Remains, then, barbarian,
In crime and despair—
A dreadful example
Of evil and care.

LEPORELLO: (aside). If by her sorrow
She cannot move him,
His heart is of stone—
But heart he has none.

JUAN: Long live the women!
Here's to good wine!
Delight and support
Of all mankind.

ELVIRA: (partendo). Ah! (Parte).	ELVIRA: (going). Ah! (Exit).
GIOVANNI: Che grido è questo mai? Va a veder che cos'è stato.	JUAN: What cry is that, Leporello? Go see what has happened.
LEPORELLO: Ah! (Sorte Leporello, e ritorna spaventato).	LEPORELLO: Ah! (Exit Leporello, and returns affrighted)
GIOVANNI: Che grido indiavolato? Leporello, che cos'è?	JUAN: What means that dreadful cry? Leporello, what is it?
LEPORELLO: Ah, signor, per carità, Non andate fuor di quà! L'uom di sasso, l'uomo bianco— Ah, padrone, io gelo, io manco! Se vedeste che figura. Se sentiste come fa— Ta, ta, ta, ta!	LEPORELLO: Oh, my lord, for mercy's sake, Not a step farther now! The man of stone, the man in white— Ah, my lord, I'm fainting quite! If you'd seen his dreadful figure,— If you'd heard his footstep sound— Ta, ta, ta, ta!
GIOVANNI: Non capisco niente affatto.	JUAN: This I do not understand.
LEPORELLO: Ta, ta, ta, ta!	LEPORELLO: Ta, ta, ta, ta!
GIOVANNI: Tu sei matto in verità.	JUAN: Certainly you are gone mad.
LEPORELLO: Ah sentite!	LEPORELLO: Listen! ah!
GIOVANNI: Qualcun batte: Apri!	JUAN: It is some one knocking: Open!
LEPORELLO: Io tremo!	LEPORELLO: I tremble!
GIOVANNI: Apri, dico!	JUAN: Open, I say!
LEPORELLO: Ah! ah!	LEPORELLO: Ah! ah!
GIOVANNI: Apri!	JUAN: Open!
LEPORELLO: Ah! ah!	LEPORELLO: Ah! ah!
GIOVANNI: Matto! Per togliermi d'intrico Ad aprir io stesso andrò! (Parte).	JUAN: Madman! So, this prodigy to witness, I must myself open the door. (Exit).
LEPORELLO: Non vò più veder l'amico, Pian pianin si m'asconderò.— (Si nasconde sotto la Tavola)	LEPORELLO: I do not wish to see him more, And I'll hide myself at once. (Hides himself under the Table).

SCENA XV

SCENE XV

Il Commendatore. E detti.	The Commandant. The same.
COMMENDATORE: Don Giovanni, a cenar teco M'invitasti—e son venuto!	COMMANDANT: Don Juan, here, at your request, See, I am come—behold your guest!
GIOVANNI: Non l'avrei giammai creduto; Ma farò quel che potrò. Leporello, un'altra cena Fa che subito si porti.	JUAN: Never could I have believed it. But I'll do the best I can. Leporello, another supper Order them at once to bring.
LEPORELLO: Ah, padron, siam tutti morti!	LEPORELLO: Ah my lord, I freeze with horror!
COMMENDATORE: Ferma un pò! Non si pasce di cibo mortale Chi si pasce di cibo celeste; Altre cure più gravi di queste— Altra brama quaggiù mi guidò!	COMMANDANT: Pause an instant! We partake not earthly banquets Who with Heavenly food are fed: By other motives led here— Other cares have brought me here!
LEPORELLO: La terzana d'avere mi sembra. E le membra fermar più non so!	LEPORELLO: My limbs are trembling as with fever, And from head to foot I shake!
GIOVANNI: Parla dunque—che chiedi? che vuoi?	JUAN: Speak—what would you? I attend.
COMMENDATORE: Parlo, ascolta! più tempo non ho!	COMMANDANT: While I speak, listen! my minutes are few!
GIOVANNI: Parla, parla! ascoltandoti sto.	JUAN: Speak, speak! I'm all attention.
COMMENDATORE: Tu m'invitasti a cena, Il tuo dover or sai! Rispondimi: verrai Tu a cenar meco!	COMMANDANT: You did invite me here, And now I invite you! Reply: oh, will you come To be a guest with me?
LEPORELLO: Oibò! oibò! tempo non ha—scusate.	LEPORELLO: Alas! alas! we have no time—excuse me.
GIOVANNI: A torto di viltate Tacciato mai sarò.	JUAN: The stain of coward fear Shall never spot my name.
COMMENDATORE: Risolvi!	COMMANDANT: Decide then!
GIOVANNI: Ho già risolto.	JUAN: Already I've resolved.
COMMENDATORE: Verrai?	COMMANDANT: You will come?
LEPORELLO: Dite di no!	LEPORELLO: Say no!
GIOVANNI: Ho fermo il core in petto; Non ho timor: verrò!	JUAN: No doubt swells in my bosom; I have no fear: I'll come!
COMMENDATORE: Dammi la mano in pagno!	COMMANDANT: Give me your hand, in proof!
GIOVANNI: Eccola:—ohimè. Che gelo è questo mai!	JUAN: Take it;—what sudden chill, That freezes thus my heart!
COMMENDATORE: Pentiti, cangia vita. E l'ultimo momento!	COMMANDANT: Repent, and change your life, Or your last hour is come!
GIOVANNI: No, no—ch'io non mi pento, Vanne lontan da me!	JUAN: No, no—I'll not repent; Far from here! away! begone!
COMMENDATORE: Pentiti! scelerato!	COMMANDANT: Lost man! once more, repent!
GIOVANNI: No, vecchio infatuato!	JUAN: No, obstinate old man!
COMMENDATORE: Ah tempo più non v'è: (Parte).	COMMANDANT: Henceforth it will be too late! (Exit).
GIOVANNI: (disperato). Da qual tremore insolito Sento assalir gli spiriti! Dond'escono quei vortici Di foco pien d'orror?	JUAN: (seized with despair). Through every nerve I tremble,— An icy chill overpowers me! What mean these dreadful gulfs That open to devour me?
CORO: Tutto a tue colpe è poco, Vieni c'è un mal peggior!	CHORUS: Horror more dire awaits you, And dread is your dark doom!
GIOVANNI: Chi l'anima mi lacera,— Chi m'agita le viscere! Che strazio ohimè! che smania Che inferno! che terror!	JUAN: My heart bursts in my bosom, The serpents gnaw my vitals! What tortures! oh, what madness! What horror! what despair!
LEPORELLO: Che ceffo disperato! Che gesti di dannato! Che gridi! che lamenti Come mi fa terror!	LEPORELLO: Alas! what looks of terror! What agonizing gestures! What cries, what lamentations! They pierce my heart with woe!
CORO: Tutto a tue colpe è poco, Vieni, v'è un mal peggior!	CHORUS: Horror more dire awaits you, And dread is your dark doom!

Die Zauberflöte (1791)

The Magic Flute

MUSIC BY WOLFGANG AMADEUS MOZART ■ LIBRETTO BY EMANUEL SCHIKANEDER

This two-act opera, set to a libretto by Emanuel Schikaneder, premiered at the Theater auf der Wieden in Vienna on September 30, 1791. Prince Tamino is saved from a huge serpent by Three Ladies. Papageno, the birdcatcher, enters and tells Tamino that he (Papageno) slew the serpent. The Queen of the Night bursts in and instructs Tamino to save her daughter Pamina from Sarastro's fortress in Egypt. Tamino, seeing Pamina's portrait, falls in love with her on sight. Tamino is given a magic flute to insure his safety; Papageno's mouth was padlocked for lying and is freed but, to his dismay, he must accompany Tamino on his mission. Papageno is given silver bells as his aid. Monostatos, Sarastro's slave, catches Pamina but is frightened by Papageno, who tells Pamina about Tamino's love and his plans to rescue her. Tamino and Papageno are guided by Three Boys to Sarastro's temple. Tamino tries to enter, and a High Priest warns him that it is the Queen who is evil. Pamina is safe, Monostatos and his helpers are stopped by Papageno's bells, the animals are charmed by Tamino's flute, and Sarastro promises Pamina her freedom. Sarastro proclaims that Tamino is a candidate for initiation to the temple but will have to undergo many trials, as will Papageno (though Papageno's are of quite a different nature, including the discovery of Papagena, for whom Papageno must become worthy!). Pamina is about to kill herself when she is saved by the Three Boys and brought to Tamino. At the caves of fire and water, they walk through together, protected by the magic flute. The opera ends as the crowd cheers Sarastro, Pamina and Tamino, repulsing an intended attack upon the temple by the Queen, Monostatos and the Three Ladies. This opera contains many symbols inherent in the Masonic Order, of which both Mozart and Schikaneder were members. It is said that Mozart was killed for revealing their secret rites.

■ ERSTER AUFZUG	■ ACT I
(Tamino, mit einem Bogen aber ohne Pfeil, eilt herbei.)	(Tamino rushes in with a bow but no arrow.)
TAMINO: Zu Hilfe! zu Hilfe! Sonst bin ich verloren, Der Listigen Schlange zum Opfer erkoren! Barmherzige Götter! Schon nahet sie sich! (Eine grosse Schlange verfolgt Tamino.) Ach rettet mich! ach schützet mich! (Er ist bis zu dem Felsenlager links vorn gelangt und sinkt darauf erschöpft und bewusstlos zusammen.) (Tamino auf dem Felsenlager. Die drei Damen, mit silbernen Wurfspiessen, treten ein.)	TAMINO: Help! oh help! or else I am lost, a certain victim of the cunning serpent. Merciful Gods! it even now approaches. (A large serpent follows Tamino.) Oh save, oh protect me! (He reaches the cave and sinks down exhausted and unconscious.) (Tamino at the cave. Three ladies, carrying silver darts, enter.)
DIE DREI DAMEN: Stirb, Ungeheu'r, durch uns're Macht! (Sie durchbohren mit ihren Wurfspiessen die Schlange, die regungslos liegen bleibt.) Triumph! Triumph! Sie ist vollbracht, Die Heldenthat Er ist befreit durch unsers Armes Tapferkeit.	THE LADIES: Die! monster, by our hands. (They pierce the serpent with their darts, and it lies motionless.) Triumph! Triumph! it is accomplished a heroic deed! He is freed by the courage Of our arm.
ERSTE DAME: (Tamino betrachtend) Ein holder Jüngling, sanft und schön!	FIRST LADY: (looking at Tamino) A noble youth, gentle and handsome!
ZWEITE DAME: So schön, als ich noch nie geseh'n!	SECOND LADY: So handsome as I never have seen!
DRITTE DAME: Ja, ja, gewiss zum Malen schön!	THIRD LADY: Yes, yes, handsome enough to be painted!
ALLE DREI: Würd' ich mein Herz der Liebe weih'n, So müsst es dieser Jüngling sein. Lasst uns zu uns'rer Fürstin eilen, Ihr diese Nachricht zu erteilen. Vielleicht, dass dieser schöne Mann Die vor'ge Ruhe ihr geben kann.	ALL THREE: Could I devote my heart to love It would be to this fair youth. Let us hasten to our princess, To impart this news to her. Perhaps this young and handsome man May bring her back her former calm.
ERSTE DAME: So geht und sagt es ihr, Ich bleib' indessen hier.	FIRST LADY: Go then and tell the news And I meanwhile will stay.
ZWEITE DAME: Nein, nein, geht ihr nur hin, Ich wache hier für ihn!	SECOND LADY: No, no, you go yourself, I will watch over him.
DRITTE DAME: Nein, nein, das kann nicht sein, Ich schütze ihn allein.	THIRD LADY: No, no, that cannot be— I will remain to guard him!
ERSTE DAME: Ich blieb indessen hier!	FIRST LADY: I meanwhile will stay.
ZWEITE DAME: Ich wache hier für ihn!	SECOND LADY: I will watch over him!
DRITTE DAME: Ich schütze ihn allein!	THIRD LADY: I will remain to guard him!
ERSTE DAME: Ich bleibe!	FIRST LADY: I remain!
ZWEITE DAME: Ich wache!	SECOND LADY: I watch!
DRITTE DAME: Ich schütze!	THIRD LADY: I guard!
ALLE DREI: Ich! ich! ich!	ALL THREE: I! I! I!

ALLE DREI: (jede für sich.) Ich sollte fort?
Ei, ei!
Wie fein!
Sie wären gern bei ihm allein.
Nein, nein, das kann nicht sein.
(Eine nach der anderen und dann alle drei zugleich.)
Was wollte ich darum nicht geben,
Könnt' ich mit diesem Jüngling leben!
Hätt' ich ihn doch so ganz allein!
Doch keine geht, es kann nicht sein.
Am besten ist es nun, ich geh'.—
Du Jüngling, schön und liebevoll!
Du trauter Jüngling, lebe wohl,
Bis ich dich wieder seh'.
(Sie entfernen sich.)
(Papageno in einem Federkleid, auf dem Rücken einen grossen Vogelbauer, der sich hoch über seinen Kopf erhebt und verschiedene Vögel enthält, eilt von links herbei. In den Händen hält er ein Faunenflötchen.)

PAPAGENO: Der Vogelfänger bin ich ja,
Stets lustig, heisa, hopsasa!
Der Vogelfänger ist bekannt
Bei Alt und Jung im ganzen Land.
Weiss mit dem Locken umzugehn
Und sich auf's Pfeifen zu verstehn.
Drum kann ich froh und lustig sein,
Denn alle Vögel sind ja mein.
(Er pfeift und nimmt dann den Vogelbauer ab.)
Der Vogelfänger bin ich ja,
Stets lustig, heisa, hopsasa!
Der Vogelfänger ist bekannt
Bei Alt und Jung im ganzen Land.
Ein Netz für Mädchen möchte ich,
Ich fing sie dutzendweis für mich;
Dann sperrte ich sie bei mir ein,
Und alle Mädchen wären mein,
Wenn alle mädchen wären mein.
Dann tauschte ich brav Zucker ein,
Die, welche mir am liebsten wär',
Der gäb' ich gleich den Zucker her.
Und küsste sie mich zärtlich dann,
Wär' sie mein Weib und ich ihr Mann.
Sie schlief an meiner Seite ein,
Ich wiegte wie ein Kind sie ein.
(Er pfeift und wendet sich dann zum Abgang nach rechts.)

TAMINO, PAPAGENO:

TAMINO: (er erwacht) He da!

PAPAGENO: Was da?

TAMINO: Sag' mir, du lustiger Freund, wer du bist?

PAPAGENO: Wer ich bin?
(Für sich.)
Dumme Frage!
(Laut.)
Ein Mensch wie du.
—Wenn ich dich nun fragte, wer du bist?

TAMINO: Mein Vater ist Fürst, der über viele Länder und Menschen herrscht; darum nennt man mich Prinz.

ALL THREE: (each to herself) I should away? ha! ha! how good.
They'd gladly be with him alone.
No, no, that cannot be!
(One after the other, then all three together.)
What would I give
If I might live with this youth!
That is, all by myself.
It cannot be, they do not go.
It's best then that I go myself.
You handsome and beloved youth,
You gentle one, farewell,
Until I see you once again!
(Exeunt.)
(Papageno in a dress of feathers, with a large bird cage on his back, which he raises high over his head, and which contains various birds, hastens in. In his hands he holds a fawn-flute.)

PAPAGENO: The fowler merry and gay am I, Ever happy, heigh ho high!
The merry fowler too is known By young and old from zone to zone.
Knows how to whistle every sound,
Knows the bird-calls all around.
Oh, none can be more blithe than I,
For mine are the warblers of the sky.
(He whistles and takes down the bird cage.)
The fowler merry and gay am I, Ever happy, heigh ho high!
The merry fowler too is known, By young and old from zone to zone.
A net for maidens I should like,
Would catch the pretty dears by dozens.
I'd shut them safely up at home And never from me would they roam.
Then I would some sugar buy, And to her who loved me, I Gladly would the sugar give, And if she kissed me tenderly, Man and wife we then would be.
At my side she then would lie, And I'd sing her a lullaby.
(He pipes and goes to the right exit.)

TAMINO AND PAPAGENO:

TAMINO: (he awakes) Holla!

PAPAGENO: What's that?

TAMINO: Tell me, jolly friend, who you are.

PAPAGENO: Who I am?
(Aside)
Foolish question.
(Aloud.)
A man like you.—
And if I should ask who you are?

TAMINO: My father is a King who rules over many lands and peoples; therefore am I called Prince.

PAPAGENO: (für sich) Wie er mich so starr anblickt!
Bald fang' ich an, mich vor ihm zu fürchten.
Bleib zurück, sag' ich, und traue mir nicht, denn ich habe Riesenkraft.

TAMINO: Riesenkraft?
(Er sieht auf die Schlange.)
Also warst du wohl gar mein Erretter, der diese giftige Schlange bekämpfte?

PAPAGENO: Schlange?
(Er sieht sich um, weicht zitternd einige Schritte zurück.)
Ist sie tot oder lebendig?

TAMINO: Aber um alles in der Welt, Freund, wie hast du dieses Ungeheuer bekämpft?
Du bist ohne Waffen!

PAPAGENO: Brauch' keine!
Bei mir ist ein starker Druck mit der Hand mehr als Waffen.

TAMINO: Du hast sie also erdrosselt?

PAPAGENO: Erdrosselt!
(Für sich.)
Bin in meinem Leben nicht so stark gewesen, als heute.
(Die drei Damen erscheinen verschleiert von rechts; die erste Dame trägt ein Gefäss mit Wasser, die zweite Dame einen Stein, die dritte Dame ein Vorhängeschloss und ein Medaillonbildnis.)

DIE DREI DAMEN: (halten sich noch zurück, drohen und rufen zugleich) Papageno!

PAPAGENO: Aha!
Das geht mich an.
(Halblaut zu Tamino.)
Sieh dich um, Freund!

TAMINO: (halblaut) Wer sind diese Damen?

PAPAGENO: (ebenso) Wer sie eigentlich sind, weiss ich selbst nicht.

TAMINO: (ebenso) Sie sind vermutlich sehr schön?

PAPAGENO: (ebenso) Ich denke nicht!
Denn wenn sie schön wären, würden sie ihre Gesichter nicht bedecken.

DIE DREI DAMEN: (näher tretend, drohend) Papageno!

PAPAGENO: (halblaut) Sei still! sie drohen mir schon.
Hier, meine Schönen, übergeb' ich meine Vögel.
(Die drei Damen nehmen die Mitte zwischen Tamino und Papageno)

ERSTE DAME: (reicht Papageno das Gefäss mit Wasser) Dafür schickt dir unsere Fürstin heute zum erstenmal statt Wein reines, helles Wasser.

PAPAGENO: (aside) How he stares at me!
I am beginning now to fear him.
Do not approach, tell you, and do not trust me, for I have gigantic strength.

TAMINO: Gigantic strength?
(He looks at the serpent.)
So you were my deliverer, who conquered this poisonous serpent?

PAPAGENO: Serpent?
(He looks around and trembling, takes a few steps backward.)
Is it dead or alive?

TAMINO: How on earth have you conquered this monster?
You are without weapons!

PAPAGENO: I need none!
My hands serve me better than weapons.

TAMINO: Then you have strangled it?

PAPAGENO: Strangled!
(Aside.)
Never have I been so strong as today!
(The three ladies appear, veiled, from the right; the first lady carries a vase of water, the second a stone, the third a padlock and a protrait for a medallion.)

THE THREE LADIES: (they still keep at a distance, threaten and shout all together.) Papageno!

PAPAGENO: Aha! they call me!
(To Tamino.)
Look around, friend.

TAMINO: (in a low tone) Who are these ladies?

PAPAGENO: (in a low tone) I really do not know who they are.

TAMINO: (in a low tone) They are doubtless very beautiful.

PAPAGENO: (in a low tone) I do not think so.
For were they beautiful they would not thus conceal their faces.

THE THREE LADIES: (drawing nearer, and threatening) Papageno!

PAPAGENO: (in a low tone) Be still!
They chide me now.
Here, my fair ones, here are my birds!
(The three Ladies stand between Tamino and Papageno)

FIRST LADY: (hands Papageno the vase with water) In return our princess sends to-day clear water instead of wine.

ZWEITE DAME: (tritt an deren Stelle) Und mir befahl sie, dass ich, statt Zuckerbrot, diesen Stein dir überbringen soll.
(Sie überreicht Papageno den Stein.)

DRITTE DAME: (an die Stelle der zweiten Dame tretend) Und statt der süssen Feigen hab' ich die Ehre, dir dies goldene Schloss vor den Mund zu legen.
(Zu Tamino.) Wir waren's, Jüngling, die dich befreiten.
Hier, dies Gemälde überschickt dir die grosse Fürstin, es ist das Bildnis ihrer Tochter!
(Sie überreicht es.)
Auf Wiedersehen!

ZWEITE DAME: Adieu, Monsieur Papageno!
(Die zweite und dritte Dame fassen den Vogelbauer und gehen damit rechts ab.)

ERSTE DAME: Fein nicht so hastig getrunken!
(Sie folgt lachend den beiden andern.)
(Papageno eilt in stummer Verlegenheit nach links ab.)
(Tamino hat gleich nach dem Empfang des Bildnisses seine Aufmerksamkeit nur diesem zugewendet.)

TAMINO: Dies Bildnis ist bezaubernd schön, Wie noch kein Auge je gesehn!
Ich fühl' es, wie dies Götterbild
Mein Herz mit neuer Regung füllt.
Dies Etwas kann ich zwar nicht nennen, Doch fühl' ich's hier wie Feuer brennen.
Soll die Empfindung Liebe sein?
Ja, ja! die Liebe ist's allein.—
O, wenn ich sie nur finden könnte!
O, wenn sie doch schon vor mir stände!
Ich würde—würde—warm und rein—
Was würde ich?
—Ich würde sie voll Entzücken An diesen heissen Busen drücken, Und ewig wäre sie dann mein.
(Kurzer, starker Donner.)
(Es wird dunkel.)

TAMINO: Ihr Götter!
Was ist das?

DIE DREI DAMEN: Fasse dich!

ERSTE DAME: Es verkündet die Ankunft unserer Königin.
(Donner.)

DIE DREI DAMEN: Sie kommt!
(Sehr starker Donner.)

OFFENE VERWANDLUNG

(Die Berge teilen sich, man erblickt einen Sternenhimmel und in dessen Mitte den mit Sternen gezierten Thron der Königin der Nacht. Helles, blaues Mondlicht.)

SECOND LADY: (steps into her place) And she commanded me to give you this stone instead of cake.
(She gives him the stone.)

THIRD LADY: (steps into her place) And instead of sweet figs I have the honor to put this golden padlock on your mouth.
(To Tamino.)
It was we, dear youth, who freed you.
Here, our great princess sends to you this picture.
It is the portrait of her daughter!
(She presents it.)
Farewell!

SECOND LADY: Adieu, sir Papageno!
(The second and third take the bird-cage and go with it to the right.)

FIRST LADY: He did not drink that so quickly.
(She follows the two others, laughing.)
(Papageno hastens away in dumb astonishment to the left.)
(Tamino, immediately upon the receipt of the picture, gives his whole attention to it.)

TAMINO: Oh, beautious form with semblance fair,
No mortal may compare with you!
What rapture the sight imparts,
What mingled feelings fill my heart.
I know not how to call this state,
But it fills me all with its fire.
And is it love that wakes in me? It is only love that takes this form!
O could I but behold her now,
Could she but now stand before me!
O, I would then be pure and true,
What would I be? I would woo her,
Press her fair form to my warm heart And she never would depart from me!
(A short, loud clap of thunder.)
(It grows dark.)

TAMINO: Great Gods, what is it?

THE THREE LADIES: Courage!

FIRST LADY: It announces the approach of our Queen.
(Thunder.)

THE THREE LADIES: She comes!
(Very loud thunder.)

CHANGE OF SCENE

(The mountains open up. A starry heaven appears, in the middle of which stands the star-covered throne of the Queen of the Night. Clear, bluish moonlight.)

KÖNIGIN: O zitt're nicht, mein lieber Sohn!
Du bist unschuldig, weise, fromm;
Ein Jüngling, so wie du, vermag am besten,
Das tiefbetrübte Mutterherz zu trösten.
Zum Leiden bin ich auserkoren,
Denn meine Tochter fehlet mir;
Durch sie ging all mein Glück verloren,
Ein Bösewicht entfloh mit ihr.
Noch seh' ich ihr Zittern
Mit bangem Erschüttern,
Ihr ängstliches Beben,
Ihr schüchternes Streben.
Ich musste sie mir rauben sehen,
Ach helft! war alles, was sie sprach;
Allein vergebens war ihr Flehen,
Denn meine Hilfe war zu schwach.
Du wirst sie zu befreien gehen,
Du wirst der Tochter Retter sein;
Und werd' ich dich als Sieger sehen,
So sei sie dann auf ewig dein.
(Sie tritt zurück.)
(Sehr starker Donner.)
(Tamino bleibt bewegt im Vordergrund stehen.)

PAPAGENO: (zeigt traurig auf das Schloss an seinem Mund) Hm! hm! hm! hm! hm! hm! hm! hm!

TAMINO: Der Arme kann von Strafe sagen,
Denn seine Sprache ist dahin.

PAPAGENO: Hm! hm! hm! hm! hm! hm! hm! hm!

TAMINO: Ich kann nichts thun, als dich beklagen,
Weil ich zu schwach zu helfen bin.

PAPAGENO: Hm! hm! hm! hm! hm! hm! hm! hm!
(Die drei Damen erscheinen von rechts; die erste Dame trägt eine Flöte und ein Glockenspiel.)
(Die drei Damen treten zwischen Tamino und Papageno.)

ERSTE DAME: (zu Papageno) Die Königin begnadet dich, (sie nimmt ihm das Schloss vom Mund und übergiebt es der zweiten Dame)
Erlässt die Strafe dir durch mich.

PAPAGENO: Nun plaudert Papageno wieder.

ZWEITE DAME: Ja, plaud're!
Lüge nur nicht wieder.

PAPAGENO: Ich lüge nimmermehr.
Nein! Nein!

DIE DREI DAMEN: Dies Schloss soll deine Warnung sein!

PAPAGENO: Dies Schloss soll meine Warnung sein!

QUEEN: O tremble not, beloved son!
You're innocent, devout and wise.
A youth like you does sure know best how to put a mother's heart at rest.
For I am doomed to mourn and sorrow.
My daughter left me in dismay.
With her my happiness has vanished, a scondrel bore my child away.
I still see her shiver, tremble and quiver, I still hear her shrieking, in vain seeking aid, I had to see her stolen from me, oh, help! was all the poor child said.
Alas in vain was all her pleading, too weak, oh Heaven, was my aid!
You, you alone, my friend, will free her, you will alone be her saviour, and if in your arms I shall see her, she shall be yours forever!
(She steps back.)
(Very loud thunder.)
(Tamino stands in the foreground greatly moved.)

PAPAGENO: (points sadly at the lock on his mouth) Hm, hm, hm, hm, hm, hm.

TAMINO: He was guilty of a falsehood and as penalty he's dumb.

PAPAGENO: Hm! hm! hm! hm! hm! hm! hm!

TAMINO: I can do nothing, except sympathize with you, as I am powerless to help.

PAPAGENO: Hm! hm! hm! hm! hm! hm! hm!
(The three Ladies appear from the right. The first lady carries a flute and chimes.)
(The three ladies step between Tamino and Papageno.)

THE FIRST LADY: (to Papageno)
The Queen is merciful
(She takes the lock off from his mouth, and hands it to the second lady.)
And remits your punishment through me.

PAPAGENO: Now Papageno will chatter again.

SECOND LADY: Yes, chatter, but never lie again.

PAPAGENO: I'll never lie again, no, never, never.

THREE THREE LADIES: Let this lock be your warning!

PAPAGENO: This lock shall be my warning.

ALLE: Bekämen doch die Lügner alle Ein solches Schloss vor ihren Mund: Statt Hass, Verleumdung, schwarzer Galle, Bestünde Lieb' und Bruderbund.	ALL: If every tongue when speaking falsehood, Could have a lock to seal his lips, Instead of seeking grief and scandal, We all would feel love and friendship.
ERSTE DAME: (übergiebt Tamino die goldene Flöte) O Prinz, nimm dies Geschenk von mir! Dies sendet uns're Fürstin dir. Die Zauberflöte wird dich schützen, Im grössten Unglück unterstützen.	FIRST LADY: (gives Tamino the golden flute) O prince, take this rare gift from me Which our fair princess sends to you! This Magic Flute possesses power To guide you safely in danger's hour!
DIE DREI DAMEN: Hiermit kannst du allmächtig handeln, Der Menschen Leidenschaft verwandeln. Der Traurige wird freudig sein, Den Hagestolz nimmt Liebe ein.	THE THREE LADIES: The power lies now in your hand All human passions to command. The sad will ever be happy, The loveless never be free from love.
ALLE: O, so eine Flöte ist mehr als Gold und Kronen wert, Denn durch sie wird Menschenglück und Zufriedenheit vermehrt.	ALL: O such a flute is worth its weight in gold, Bringing both love and happiness untold.
PAPAGENO: Nun, ihr schönen Frauenzimmer, Darf ich—so empfehl' ich mich.	PAPAGENO: And now ladies, With your leave I'll go.
DIE DREI DAMEN: Dich empfehlen kannst du immer, Doch bestimmt die Fürstin dich, Mit dem Prinzen ohn' Verweilen Nach Sarastros Burg zu eilen.	THE THREE LADIES: You can freely go, But the princess fair commands you With the prince to take your way To the castle of Sarastro.
PAPAGENO: Nein, dafür bedank' ich mich! Von Euch selber hörte ich, Dass er wie ein Tigertier! Sicher liess ohn' alle Gnaden Mich Sarastro rupfen, braten, Setzte mich den Hunden für.	PAPAGENO: No, I thank for the honor, But myself I've heard you say That he is a very tiger! And he would without delay, Have me plucked and quickly roasted, A tasty prey for his dogs.
DIE DREI DAMEN: Dich schützt der Prinz, trau' ihm allein! Dafür sollst du sein Diener sein.	THE THREE LADIES: Trust the Prince, for he'll protect you, You'll be his faithful servant.
PAPAGENO: (für sich) Dass doch der Priz beim Teufel wäre! Mein Leben ist mir lieb; Am Ende schleicht bei meiner Ehre, Er von mir wie ein Dieb.	PAPAGENO: (aside) The Prince may risk his royal being, But I value mine more. He may repent when all too late, I'd rather now decline.
ERSTE DAME: (übergiebt Papageno ein Kästchen mit einem Glockenspiel) Hier, nimm dies Kleinod, es ist dein.	FIRST LADY: (presents Papageno with a casket containing chimes.) Pray, take this treasure, it is yours.
PAPAGENO: Ei, ei! was mag darinnen sein?	PAPAGENO: Oh, oh, what can it be?
DIE DREI DAMEN: Darinnen hörst du Glöckchen tönen.	THE THREE LADIES: You can hear the bells ringing within.
PAPAGENO: Werd' ich sie auch wohl spielen können?	PAPAGENO: And will I, too, have power to play them?
DIE DREI DAMEN: O ganz gewiss! ja, ja, gewiss!	THE THREE LADIES: Why certainly, of course, you will.
DIE DREI DAMEN: Silberglöckchen, Zauberflöten Sind zu eurem Schutz vonnöten. Lebet wohl! wir wollen gehn, Lebet wohl! auf Wiedersehn.	THE THREE LADIES: Silver bells and magic flute are attuned to protect you, Fare well, we must away, Now we bid you both good day.
TAMINO UND PAPAGENO: Silberglöckchen, Zauberflöten Sind zu unserm Schutz vonnöten. Lebet wohl! wir wollen gehn, Lebet wohl! auf Wiedersehn. (Die drei Damen wenden sich nach rechts) (Tamino und Papageno wenden sich gleichzeitig nach links; zurückkommend)	PAPAGENO AND TAMINO: Silver bells and magic flute Are attuned to protect. Fare well, we must away, Now we bid you all good day. (The three ladies go to the right.) (Tamino and Papageno go at the same time to the left; coming back.)
TAMINO: Doch, schöne Damen, saget an:	TAMINO: Fair ladies, will you tell us pray—
PAPAGENO: Wie man die Burg wohl finden kann?	PAPAGENO: To this great castle the way?
BEIDE: Wie man die Burg wohl finden kann?	BOTH: How to find the way to this great Castle?
DIE DREI DAMEN: (ebenso) Drei Knäbchen, jung, schön, hold und weise, Umschweben euch auf eurer Reise; Sie werden eure Führer sein, Folgt ihrem Rate ganz allein.	THE THREE LADIES: Three handsome youths will fly before you, And point you out the way; Follow the counsel they may give, Farewell, away, away!
TAMINO UND PAPAGENO: Drei Knäbchen, jung, schön, hold und weise, Umschweben uns auf unsrer Reise.	TAMINO AND PAPAGENO: Three handsome youths will fly before us And point us out the way.
ALLE: So lebet wohl! wir wollen gehn, Lebt wohl, lebt wohl! Auf Wiedersehn! (Die drei Damen ab nach rechts) (Tamino und Papageno gleichzeitig ab nach links)	ALL: Fare well, we must away, Now we bid you both good day. (The three ladies go away to the right.) (Tamino and Papageno go at the same time to the left.)

VERWANDLUNG

CHANGE OF SCENE

(Reich ausgestattetes Zimmer der Pamina in Sarastros Palast.) (Monostatos, Pamina, Sklaven treten ein)	(Sumptuously furnished room of Pamina in Sarastro's palace.) (Monostatos, Pamina, Slaves enter)
MONOSTATOS: (Pamina an der Hand hereinschleudernd) Du feines Täubchen, nur herein!	MONOSTATOS: (patting Pamina's hand) Come in, little dove!
PAMINA: (zu seiner Rechten) O welche Marter! Welche Pein!	PAMINA: Oh, wretched martyrdom, direful pain!
MONOSTATOS: Verloren ist dein Leben.	MONOSTATOS: Your life is lost.
PAMINA: Der Tod macht mich nicht beben, Nur meine Mutter dauert mich; Sie stirbt vor Gram ganz sicherlich.	PAMINA: I fear not the pains of death, But my poor mother dies of grief, With no one to bring her relief!
MONOSTATOS: (zu den im Hintergrund verweilenden Sklaven) He, Sklaven! Legt ihr Fesseln an! Mein Hass soll dich verderben. (Sklaven eilen hinzu, um Pamina zu fesseln)	MONOSTATOS: (to the slaves who are waiting in the back) Hola slaves, let her straight be bound! My hatred will be sated. (Slaves rush up to bind Pamina.)
PAMINA: O lass mich lieber sterben, Weil nichts, Barbar! dich rühren kann. (Sie sinkt ohnmächtig rechts vorn auf eine Ottomane.)	PAMINA: Oh let me, tyrant, rather die, For nothing has abated your rage. (She sinks down unconscious on a couch.)
MONOSTATOS: Nun fort! lasst mich bei ihr allein. (Sklaven eilen mit den Fesseln durch die Mitte ab) (*Papageno erscheint in der Mittel-	MONOSTATOS: Away! Let me alone with her! (The slaves withdraw with the chains.) (*Papageno appears in the middle thür)

(Monostatos im Anschauen Paminas versunken, bemerkt das Erscheinen Papagenos nicht)

PAPAGENO: (noch in der Thür)
Wo bin ich wohl!
Wo mag ich sein?
Aha, da find' ich Leute!
Gewagt, ich geh' herein.
(Er tritt ein und nähert sich der Ottomane rechts vorn.)
Schön Mädchen, jung und fein,
Viel weisser noch als Kreide!
(Monostatos wendet sich.)
(Papageno steht bei Monostatos Anblick erstarrt; einer erschrickt über den andern.)

BEIDE: Hu! Das ist—der Teu—fel si—cherlich!
Hab' Mitleid—und verschone mich!
Hu! hu! hu!
(Sie laufen, indem sie sich gegenseitig verstohlen über die Schulter zu beobachten trachten, nach der Mittelthür; dort stossen sie aufeinander und eilen mit einem Aufschrei durch die Mitte nach verschiedenen Seiten hin davon.)

PAMINA: (allein, erwachend, spricht wie im Traum) Mutter!
Mutter!
Mutter!
(Sie erholt sich, sieht sich um.)
Wie!
Noch schlägt dieses Herz?
Zu neuen Qualen erwacht?
O, das ist hart, sehr hart—mir bitterer als der Tod!
(Papageno mit vorsichtigen Schritten beobachtend durch die Mitte) Pamina. Papageno zu ihrer Linken.

PAPAGENO: Bin ich nicht ein Narr, dass ich mich schrecken liess? Es giebt ja schwarze Vögel in der Welt, warum denn nicht auch schwarze Menschen?
(Er erblickt Pamina.)
Ach, sieh da!
Hier ist das schöne Mädchen noch.
(Zu Pamina.)
Du Tochter der nächtlichen Königin.

PAMINA: O, ich bin es.

PAPAGENO: Das will ich gleich erkennen.
(Er prüft das Porträt, welches der Prinz zuvor empfangen, und das Papageno nun an einem Band am Hals trägt.)
Die Augen blau (schwarz)—richtig blau (schwarz)—die Lippen rot—richtig rot—blonde (braune) Haare—blonde (braune) Haare.
Alles trifft ein.

PAMINA: Erlaube mir—
(Papageno zeigt ihr das Porträt.)

PAMINA: Ja, ich bin's.
Wie kam es in deine Hände?

door.)
(Monostatos absorbed in watching Pamina does not notice Papageno's arrival.)

PAPAGENO: (still in the door)
Where am I now?
Where can I be?
Aha, I see some people,
I'll venture in.
(He comes in and approaches the couch.)
A maiden greets me, pure and white as snow.
(Monostatos turns around.)
(Papageno is terrified by Monostatos's gaze; the one is frightened by the other.)

BOTH: That is the devil sure as fate,
Have mercy and commiserate!
Alas, alas, alas!
(They run away, looking back at each other cautiously over the shoulder. At the middle door they run into each other and rush with a cry through the middle door in different directions.)

PAMINA: (alone, awakening, speaks as in a dream) Mother!
Mother!
Mother!
(She recovers and looks around.)
What?
Does my heart still beat?
Does it awake to new tortures?
O, it is so cruel, so cruel!
It is more bitter than death!
(Papageno with careful steps comes in and watches her.)

PAPAGENO: Am I not a fool that I allowed myself to be frightened? There are black birds in this world, then why not black people?
(He notices Pamina.)
Ah, behold! here is the lovely maiden still!
(To Pamina.)
Oh daughter of the Queen of night!

PAMINA: I am she.

PAPAGENO: I'll know that right away.
(He examines the portrait which the Prince received and which Papageno now wears on a ribbon around his neck.)
Blue eyes (black)—very blue (black)—red lips—very red—blond (brown) hair—blond (brown) hair.
Everything tallies.

PAMINA: Permit me—
(Papageno shows her the portrait.)

PAMINA: Yes, it's I.
How did it come into your hands?

PAPAGENO: Ich muss dir das umständlicher erzählen.
Ich kam heute früh, wie gewöhnlich, zu deiner Mutter Palast meine Vögel abzugeben, dort sah ich einen Menschen vor mir, der sich Prinz nennen lässt.
Dieser Prinz hat deine Mutter so eingenommen, dass sie ihm dein Bildnis schenkte und ihm befahl, dich zu befreien.
Sein Entschluss war so schnell, als seine Liebe zu dir.

PAMINA: Liebe?
(Freudig.)
Er liebt mich also?
O sage mir das noch einmal, ich höre das Wort Liebe gar zu gern.

PAPAGENO: Das glaub' ich dir (ohne zu schwören), du bist ja ein Mädchen.—
Wo blieb ich denn?

PAMINA: Bei der Liebe.

PAPAGENO: Richtig, bei der Liebe.
(Das nenn' ich ein Gedächtnis haben.)
Nun sind wir hier, in den Palast deiner Mutter zu eilen.

PAMINA: Wohl denn, es sei gewagt!
Wenn dieser nun ein böser Geist von Sarastros Gefolge wäre?
(Sie sieht ihn bedenklich an.)

PAPAGENO: Ich ein böser Geist?
Wo denkst du hin. Ich bin der beste Geist von der Welt.

PAMINA: Freund, vergieb, vergieb, wenn ich dich beleidigte.
Du hast ein gefühlvolles Herz.

PAPAGENO: Ach, freilich hab' ich ein gefühlvolles Herz.
Aber was nützt mir das alles?
Ich möchte mir oft alle meine Federn ausrupfen, wenn ich bedenke, dass Papageno noch keine Papagena hat.

PAMINA: Armer Mann!
Du hast also noch kein Weib?

PAPAGENO: Noch nicht einmal ein Mädchen, viel weniger ein Weib!
Und unsereiner hat doch auch bisweilen seine lustigen Stunden, wo man gern gesellschaftliche Unterhaltungen haben möchte.

PAMINA: Geduld, Freund!
Der Himmel wird auch für dich sorgen; er wird dir eine Freundin schicken, ehe du dir's vermutest.

PAPAGENO: Wenn er sie nur bald schickte.

PAMINA: Bei Männern, welche Liebe fühlen, Fehlt auch ein gutes Herze nicht.

PAPAGENO: Die süssen Triebe mitzufühlen, Ist dann der Weiber erste Pflicht.

PAPAGENO: I must relate it to you in very great detail.
I came very early, as is my custom, to your mothers' palace to deliver my birds, when I saw a man before me who is called Prince.
This Prince so charmed your mother that she gave him your portrait, and ordered him to free you.
His resolution was as hasty as his love for you.

PAMINA: Love?
(Joyfully)
Then he loves me?
Tell it to me once again, for I rejoice at the sound of that word.

PAPAGENO: And I believe you (without swearing) for you are a maiden—

ALL THREE: Where was I?

PAMINA: At the word love.

PAPAGENO: Yes, you are right, at the word Love.
(I call that having a fine memory!)
Now we are here to hasten you to your mother's palace.

PAMINA: Well then, let us attempt it.
And if he be a villain in Sarastro's employ?
(She looks attentively at him.)

PAPAGENO: I a villain?
What are you thinking of?
I am the best man on earth.

PAMINA: Dear friend, forgive me if I have offended you.
You have a loving heart.

PAPAGENO: Ah, luckily I have a loving heart. But what is the good of it?
I sometimes want to pluck out all my feathers when I remember that Papageno has no loving mate.

PAMINA: Poor man!
So you have no wife?

PAPAGENO: Not even a fair maiden the less a wife.
And every one of us has his happy moments which he would like to spend in company.

PAMINA: Patience, my friend!
Heaven will reward you.
It will send you a companion before you know it.

PAPAGENO: Would that it did it soon!

PAMINA: The manly breast overflowing with love.
Will never lack a good heart.

PAPAGENO: And the sweet cares of love bestowing will ever be a woman's part.

BEIDE: Wir wollen uns der Liebe freun, Wir leben durch die Lieb' allein.	BOTH: It is Love alone that makes us happy, It is Love alone makes life worth while!
PAMINA: Die Lieb' versüsset jede Plage, Ihr opfert jede Kreatur.	PAMINA: It is Love that sweetens every care, Every creature bends to her.
PAPAGENO: Sie würzet uns're Lebenstage, Sie wirkt im Kreise der Natur.	PAPAGENO: Love perfumes life with rare fragrance And beauty leads to fair Nature.
BEIDE: Ihr hoher Zweck zeigt deutlich an, Nichts edlers sei, als Weib und Mann. Mann und Weib, und Weib und Mann, Reichen an die Gottheit an. (Beide durch die Mitte ab.)	BOTH: Nothing can prove dearer raptures Than two fond hearts that truly love. For man and woman, woman, man, Complete Divinity's fair plan. (Exeunt.)
VERWANDLUNG	CHANGE OF SCENE
(Hain, in dessen Mitte drei Tempel.) (Die drei Knaben mit silbernen Palmzweigen in der Hand von links vorn kommend, geleiten Tamino, der seine Flöte umgehängt trägt.)	(Sacred grove in the middle of which are three temples.) (The three youths with silver palm branches in their hands come out from the left accompanying Tamino. His flute hangs at his side.)
DIE DREI KNABEN: Zum Ziele führt dich diese Bahn, Doch musst du, Jüngling, männlich siegen. Drum höre uns're Lehre an: Sei standhaft, duldsam und verschwiegen.	THE THREE YOUTHS: To the goal this path will lead, But you must be heroic! Therefore to our counsel heed And you'll set the captive free.
TAMINO: Ihr holden Kleinen, sagt mir an, Ob ich Pamina retten kann?	TAMINO: Fair youths, I crave an answer true— Do you think I can save Pamina?
DIE DREI KNABEN: Dies kund zu thun, steht uns nicht an; Sei standhaft, duldsam und verschwiegen. Bedenke dies; kurz, sei ein Mann, Dann, Jüngling, wirst du männlich siegen. (Sie gehen ab.) (Tamino allein. Stimmen.)	THE THREE YOUTHS: To make this known rests not with us Be steadfast, patient and discreet! Think of our words and be a man And this will help you if anything can. (They go out.) (Tamino (alone.) Voices.)
TAMINO: Die Weisheitslehre dieser Knaben Sei ewig mir ins Herz gegraben. Wo bin ich nun? Was wird mit mir? Ist dies der Sitz der Götter hier? Es zeigen die Pforten, es zeigen die Säulen, Dass Klugheit und Arbeit und Künste hier weilen; Wo Tätigkeit thronet und Müssiggang weicht, Erhält seine Herrschaft das Laster nicht leicht. (Er zeigt nach rechts.) Ich wage mich mutig zur Pforte hinein, Die Absicht ist edel und lauter und rein. Erzitt're, feiger Bösewicht! Pamina retten ist mir Pflicht. (Er nähert sich mit einigen Schritten der Tempelpforte rechts.)	TAMINO: The wisdom of these fair youths three, May be engraved in my heart. Where am I now? Where did I roam? Is this perhaps the home of gods? The portals and the gates impart, That it is the home of work and art, Where industry obtains full sway, Vice no more can hold the reins. (He points to the right.) I'll boldly enter the temple door, My purpose is noble and good and pure. Tremble, villain bold. Beware! To save Pamina is my goal! (He approaches the temple door at the right.)
STIMMEN: (Chor) Zurück!	VOICES: (chorus) Back!
TAMINO: Zurück? So wag ich hier mein Glück! (Er wendet sich nach der Tempelpforte links.)	TAMINO: Back! Here must I try my luck. (He goes to the temple door at the left.)
STIMMEN: (Chor) Zurück!	VOICES: Back!
TAMINO: Auch hier ruft man: zurück? (Er wendet sich nach der Tempelpforte in der mitte.) Da sehe ich noch eine Tür, Vielleicht find' ich den Eingang hier. (Indem er sich der Mittelpforte nähert, öffnet sich diese und ein Priester in weissem Haar und Bart tritt heraus.)	TAMINO: Here too they call: back! (He goes to the middle temple door.) There I see another door, Perhaps I'll find one more entrance. (While he goes to the middle door it opens and a priest with white hair and beard comes out.)
PRIESTER: Wo willst du, kühner Fremdling hin? Was suchst du hier im Heiligtum?	PRIEST: Where are you going, daring youth? What do you seek in this sanctuary?
TAMINO: Der Lieb' und Tugend Eigentum.	TAMINO: The home of virtue and of love.
PRIESTER: Die Worte sind von hohem Sinn! Allein wie willst du diese finden? Dich leitet Lieb' und Tugend nicht, Weil Tod und Rache dich entzünden.	PRIEST: Your words are certainly high sounding, But where do you expect to find these? Love and courage do not guide you, Death and vengeance dire inflame you.
TAMINO: Nur Rache für den Bösewicht.	TAMINO: Only for vengeance on the villain.
PRIESTER: Den wirst du wohl bei uns nicht finden.	PRIEST: You surely will not find him here.
TAMINO: Sarastro herrscht in diesen Gründen?	TAMINO: Does Sarastro govern here?
PRIESTER: Ja, ja! Sarastro herrschet hier!	PRIEST: Yes, Sarastro governs here.
TAMINO: Doch in dem Weisheitstempel nicht?	TAMINO: But in the Temple of Wisdom?
PRIESTER: Er herrscht im Weisheitstempel hier.	PRIEST: Yes, in the Temple of Wisdom.
TAMINO: (mit einigen Schritten nach links) So ist denn alles Heuchelei!	TAMINO: (stepping to the left) Then all is but hypocrisy.
PRIESTER: Willst du schon wieder gehn?	PRIEST: Wilt you depart again, then?
TAMINO: Ja, ich will gehn, froh und frei, Nie euren Tempel sehn.	TAMINO: Yes, I will gladly go from here, And never again see your temple.
PRIESTER: Erklär' dich näher mir, Dich täuschet ein Betrug.	PRIEST: Explain yourself to me: a mistake deludes you.
TAMINO: Sarastro wohnet hier, Das ist mir schon genug.	TAMINO: Sarastro governs here, That is enough for me.
PRIESTER: Wenn du dein Leben liebst, So rede, bleibe da! Sarastro hassest du?	PRIEST: If your life you prize, Speak, and here remain! Do you hate Sarastro?
TAMINO: Ich hass' ihn ewig! Ja!	TAMINO: I hate him, yes, and ever shall.
PRIESTER: Nur gieb mir deine Gründe an.	PRIEST: And pray, what are your reasons?
TAMINO: Er ist ein Unmensch, ein Tyrann.	TAMINO: He is a tyrant and a brute.
PRIESTER: Ist das, was du gesagt, erwiesen?	PRIEST: Where is the proof of what you say?
TAMINO: Durch ein unglücklich' Weib bewiesen, Das Gram und Jammer niederdrückt.	TAMINO: By a luckless woman 'tis confessed, Who by great sorrow is oppressed.

PRIESTER: Ein Weib hat also dich berückt?
Ein Weib tut wenig, plaudert viel.
Du, Jüngling, glaubst dem Zungenspiel?
O legte doch Sarastro klar
Die Absicht seiner Handlung dar.

TAMINO: Die Absicht ist nur allzuklar;
Riss nicht der Räuber ohn' Erbarmen
Pamina aus der Mutter Armen?

PRIESTER: Ja, Jüngling!
Was du sagst, ist wahr.

TAMINO: Wo ist sie, die er uns geraubt?
Man opferte vielleicht sie schon?

PRIESTER: Dir dies zu sagen, teurer Sohn,
Ist jetzt und mir noch nicht erlaubt.

TAMINO: Erklär' dies Rätsel, täusch' mich nicht.

PRIESTER: Die Zunge bindet Eid und Pflicht.

TAMINO: Wann also wird die Decke schwinden?

PRIESTER: Sobald dich führt der Freundschaft Hand
Ins Heiligtum zum ew'gen Band.
(Er wendet sich und geht langsam durch die Mittelpforte ab.)

TAMINO allein. STIMMEN.

TAMINO: O ewig Nacht! wann wirst du schwinden?
Wann wird das Licht mein Auge finden?

STIMMEN: (Chor hinter der Mittelpforte) Bald, Jüngling, oder nie!

TAMINO: Bald, sagt ihr, oder nie?
Ihr Unsichtbaren, saget mir,
Lebt denn Pamina noch?

STIMMEN: (Chor) Pamina lebet noch!

TAMINO: (freudig) Sie lebt?
Ich danke euch dafür.
(Er nimmt seine Flöte zur Hand.)
Wenn ich doch nur imstande wäre,
Allmächtige, zu eurer Ehre,
Mit jedem Tone meinen Dank
Zu schildern, wie er hier (aufs Herz zeigend) entsprang!
(Er spielt auf seiner Flöte.)
(Sogleich erscheinen wilde Tiere und Vögel aller Art. Er hört auf und sie fliehen.)
Wie stark ist nicht dein Zauberton,
Weil, holde Flöte, durch dein Spielen
Selbst wilde Tiere Freude fühlen.
Doch nur Pamina bleibt davon.
(Er spielt.)
Pamina! höre, höre mich!
Umsonst!
(Er spielt.)
Wo?
Ach, wo find' ich dich?

PRIEST: 'Tis then a woman who beguiled you?
Women do little and talk much.
Do you give heed to empty talk?
But still Sarastro has explained
The motives of his actions.

TAMINO: His motives are alas too clear,
Did not the robber without pity,
Tear Pamina from her mother's arms?

PRIEST: Yes, youth, all you say is true.

TAMINO: Where is she whom he stole away?
Perhaps by this time sacrificed?

PRIEST: To tell you this, dear friend,
Is not yet permitted.

TAMINO: Explain this riddle—do not deceive me.

PRIEST: My tongue is bound by oath and duty.

TAMINO: When then will it be released?

PRIEST: As soon as friendship's hand shall lead you
Into the sanctuary of immortal union.
(He turns around and goes out slowly through the middle door.)

TAMINO: (alone.) VOICES:

TAMINO: Oh, endless night, how soon will you have vanished?
When will the daylight greet my sight?

VOICES: (chorus behind the middle door)
Soon, youth, or never!

TAMINO: Soon, say you, or never?
Tell me, invisible ones,
Does Pamina still live?

VOICES: Pamina still lives!

TAMINO: (rejoicing) She lives? I thank you all for that.
(He takes his flute in is hand.)
Oh, if I only had the power,
Almighty ones, in praise of you,
To express my thanks with each tone,
To show the feelings in my heart!
(Points to his heart.)
(He plays on his flute. Instantly wild animals and birds of every kind appear. He stops and they flee.)
How strong, flute, is your magic tune,
That by your sweet, melodious playing,
You moved beasts and hearts of stone,
But where, oh where's Pamina staying?
(He plays.)
Pamina! hear, oh hear me!

(Papageno antwortet von links hinten mit seinem Faunen flötchen)

TAMINO: Ha, das ist Papagenos Ton!
(Er spielt.)
(Papageno antwortet wie vorher)

TAMINO: Vielleicht sah er Pamina schon,
Vielleicht eilt sie mit ihm zu mir,
Vielleicht führt mich der Ton zu ihr.
(Er eilt nach links hinten ab.)
(Papageno und Pamina eilen, wenn Tamino verschwunden ist, ohne Fesseln von links vorn herbei)

PAMINA UND PAPAGENO:
Schnelle Füsse, rascher Mut,
Schützt vor Feindes List und Wut.
Fänden wir Tamino doch,
Sonst erwischen sie uns noch.

PAMINA: (mit einigen Schritten nach hinten, rufend) Holder Jüngling!

PAPAGENO: Stille, stille, ich kann's besser.
(Er pfeift.)
(Tamino antwortet links hinten mit seiner Flöte)

BEIDE: Welche Freude ist wohl grösser?
Freund Tamino hört uns schon;
(nach links hinten zeigend)
Hierher kam der Flötenton.
Welch ein Glück, wenn ich ihn finde,
Nur geschwinde! nur geschwinde!
(Sie wollen nach links hinten davoneilen.)
(Monostatos tritt ihnen von dort her entgegen)

MONOSTATOS: (ihrer spottend)
Nur geschwinde! nur geschwinde!
Ha, hab' ich euch noch erwischt?
Nur herbei mit Stahl und Eisen;
Wart, ich will euch Mores weisen.
Den Monostatos berücken!
(Nach links hinten rufend.)
Nur herbei mit Band und Stricken,
He, ihr Sklaven, kommt herbei!
(Sklaven kommen von links hinten mit Fesseln)

PAMINA, PAPAGENO: Ach, nun ist's mit uns vorbei.

PAPAGENO: Wer viel wagt, gewinnt oft viel,
Komm', du schönes Glockenspiel!
Lass' die Glöckchen klingen, klingen,
Dass die Ohren ihnen singen.
(Er spielt sein Glockenspiel.)

MONOSTATOS UND DIE SKLAVEN: (davon besänftigt, singen und tanzen nach dem Takt) Das klinget so herrlich, das klinget so schön!
Tralla lalala trallalalala!
Nie hab' ich so etwas gehört und gesehn!

In vain! (He plays.) Where?
Oh, where can I find you?
(Papageno answers with his fawn-flute.)

TAMINO: Ah, that is Papageno's tone!
(He plays.)
(Papageno answers as before.)

TAMINO: Perhaps he has already seen Pamina,
Perhaps with him she comes to me,
Perhaps these tones will lead me to her.
(He goes out.)
(Papageno and Pamina appear when Tamino has disappeared. They wear no chains.

PAMINA AND PAPAGENO: Nimble feet and dauntless courage may save us from the foe's dread rage.
Could we but find Tamino!
Now, they surely will surprise us.

PAMINA: (takes a few steps back, calling) Handsome youth!

PAPAGENO: Be still, I'll do it better.
(He whistles.)
(Tamino answers with his flute from behind.)

BOTH: Can there be a greater joy?
Friend Tamino hears us now.
(Pointing to the left.)
From here came the sweet tones.
Oh what joy when I shall find him!
Quick, quick, let us hasten to him!
(They run to the left. Monostatos meets them.)

MONOSTATOS: (mocking her)
Quick, quick, let us hasten to him!
Ha, ha, I have caught you then?
Quickly, bind these daring ones!
Wait, I'll teach you manners!
You will never again deceive me!
Slaves, come here and bind them!
Take your ropes and bind them fast.
(Slaves come up with chains.)

PAMINA AND PAPAGENO: Ah, it is all over with us!

PAPAGENO: Who ventures much, much ofttimes wins.
Come, magic set of bells,
Let your soft tones fill the air
And resound in every ear!
(He plays.)

MONOSTATOS AND THE SLAVES: (they are subdued by the sound, sing and dance in time) Its sound is so soothing, its sound is so sweet,
Tralala, lalala, tralalalala!
Oh, never, oh never, did I meet its equal!

Trallalala tralla lalala! (Sie entfernen sich singend und tanzend nach links hinten.)	Tralalala, trala lalala! (they withdraw singing and dancing.)
PAPAGENO AND PAMINA: Könnte jeder brave Mann Solche Glöckchen finden, Seine Feinde würden dann Ohne Mühe schwinden, Und er lebte ohne sie In der besten Harmonie. Nur der Freundschaft Harmonie Mildert die Beschwerden; Ohne diese Sympathie Ist kein Glück auf Erden! (Ein starker Marsch mit Trompeten und Pauken fällt ein.)	PAPAGENO AND PAMINA: If only every one could own Bells of such melodious tone, All our enemies would flee And we would all be happy. Without them each one can live In the greatest harmony. Only friendship's harmony Softens every ill. And without its sympathy, there can Be no happiness on earth. (There is heard a loud march with trumpets and kettle-drums.)
STIMMEN: (Chor von aussen) Es lebe Sarastro! Sarastro lebe!	VOICES: (from without) Long live Sarastro! Long live Sarastro!
PAPAGENO: (mit einigen Schritten nach rechts) Was soll das bedeuten? Ich zittre, ich bebe!	PAPAGENO: (with a few steps to the right) What can this mean? I tremble, I shudder.
PAMINA: (ihm folgend) O Freund, nun ist's um uns gethan! Dies kündigt den Sarastro an.	PAMINA: (following him) O friend, we are lost forever! The great Sarastro is announced.
PAPAGENO: O wär' ich eine Maus, Wie wollt ich mich verstecken! Wär' ich so klein wie Schnecken, So kröch ich in mein Haus. Mein Kind, was werden wir nun sprechen?	PAPAGENO: O were I but a little mouse, I would hide in some dark corner. And were I as a snail, I'd creep into my little house, My child, what words will now avail?
PAMINA: Die Wahrheit, sei sie auch Verbrechen. (Sarastro und Gefolge treten ein. Die Priester durch die Mittelpforte und von links ganz vorn; die Bewaffneten und das Volk von rechts; die Frauen hinter dem Wagen des Sarastro von rechts; die Sklaven von rechts und links.) (Sarastro zuletzt von rechts auf einem Elefanten.)	PAMINA: Let's speak the truth, at any cost. (Enter Sarastro and his suite. The priest goes through the middle door to the left, the soldiers and the people to the right; the women behind the chariot of Sarastro at the right. The slaves at the right and left. Sarastro is borne in on an elephant.)
CHOR: Es lebe Sarastro! Sarastro soll leben! Er ist es, dem wir uns mit Freuden ergeben! Stets mög' er des Lebens als Weiser sich freun, Er ist unser Abgott, dem alle sich weihn.	CHORUS: Long live Sarastro, long live Sarastro! It is he to whom we are all so devoted. May he as a wise man enjoy life forever. Our idol is he whom we worship and love!
PAMINA: (kniet) Herr, ich bin zwar Verbrecherin! Ich wollte deiner Macht entfliehn, Allein die Schuld ist nicht an mir— Der böse Mohr verlangte Liebe; Darum, o Herr! entfloh ich dir.	PAMINA: (kneels) Oh Lord, it is true that I am guilty, That I wished to flee from your power. The guilt rests not only on me— The wicked Moor desired my love, Therefore, oh Sire, I fled from you.
SARASTRO: Steh' auf, erheitere dich, o Liebe! Denn ohne erst in dich zu dringen, Weiss ich von deinem Herzen mehr: Du liebest einen andern sehr. Zur Liebe will ich dich nicht zwingen, Doch geb' ich dir die Freiheit nicht.	SARASTRO: Arise, my love, and be happy. For without further questioning you, I know the secret of your heart. For you already love another. I never will compel you to love, But yet I cannot give you freedom.
PAMINA: Mich rufet ja die Kindespflicht, Denn meine Mutter—	PAMINA: My filial duty calls me, For my mother . . . .
SARASTRO: Steht in meiner Macht. Du würdest um dein Glück gebracht, Wenn ich dich ihren Händen liesse.	SARASTRO: Is in my power. Your happiness would all be ended, Were I to give you up to her.
PAMINA: Mir klingt der Muttername süsse; Sie ist es—	PAMINA: The name of mother sounds so sweet, It is she . . . .
SARASTRO: Und ein stolzes Weib. Ein Mann muss eure Herzen leiten Denn ohne ihn pflegt jedes Weib Aus seinem Wirkungskreis zu schreiten. (Monostatos mit Tamino von links.)	SARASTRO: A haughty woman, Only a man should guide your hearts, Without him, woman is accustomed To wend her way out of her sphere. (Monostatos and Tamino come from the left.)
MONOSTATOS: Nun, stolzer Jüngling, nur hierher, Hier ist Sarastro, unser Herr.	MONOSTATOS: Proud youth, come here—see Sarastro, our dear lord.
PAMINA: Er ist's!	PAMINA: It is he!
TAMINO: Sie ist's!	TAMINO: It is she!
PAMINA: Ich glaub' es kaum!	PAMINA: I scarcely can believe it.
TAMINO: Sie ist's!	TAMINO: It is she!
PAMINA: Er ist's!	PAMINA: It is he!
TAMINO: Es ist kein Traum! (Sie nähern sich beiderseitig.)	TAMINO: It is no dream. (They approach each other.)
PAMINA: Es schling' mein Arm sich um ihn her!	PAMINA: Oh, I would embrace him!
TAMINO: Es schling' mein Arm sich um sie her!	TAMINO: Oh, I would embrace her!
BEIDE: Und wenn es auch mein Ende wär'! (Sie umarmen sich.)	BOTH: Even if it brought death upon me. (They embrace.)
ALLE: Was soll das heissen?	ALL: What does that mean?
MONOSTATOS: Welch' eine Dreistigkeit! (Indem er zwischen Pamina und Tamino tritt und sie trennt.) Gleich auseinander, das geht zu weit! (Er kniet vor Sarastro.) Dein Sklave liegt zu deinen Füssen, Lass den vermess'nen Frevler büssen! Bedenk', wie frech der Knabe ist: Durch dieses selt'nen Vogels List (auf Papageno zeigend) Wollt' er Pamina dir entführen. Allein ich wusst ihn auszuspüren! Du kennst mich! Meine Wachsamkeit—	MONOSTATOS: What strength! (He steps between Pamina and Tamino, and separates them.) Stop it at once. You go too far! (He kneels to Sarastro.) Your slave is kneeling at your feet, Make the presumptuous youth do penance. How impudent the bold youth is! By the tricks of this rare bird (Pointing at Papageno.) He sought to rob you of Pamina. But I alone could track him. You know me and my vigilance—
SARASTRO: (winkt.) Verdient, dass man ihr Lorbeer streut. He! Gebt dem Ehrenmann sogleich—	SARASTRO: (beckons). Deserves the laurel wreath. Here! Give to this gentleman at once—
MONOSTATOS: Schon deine Gnade macht mich reich.	MONOSTATOS: Alone your favor makes me rich.
SARASTRO: Nur siebenundsiebzig Sohlenstreich'.	SARASTRO: But seventy-seven bastinado stripes.
MONOSTATOS: Ach Herr, den Lohn verhofft' ich nicht!	MONOSTATOS: Ah, sir, I did not merit such reward!
SARASTRO: Nicht Dank', es ist ja meine Pflicht! (Monostatos wird von einigen Sklaven, die vortreten, nach rechts abgeführt.)	SARASTRO: Preserve your thanks, it's only my duty. (Monostatos is led away by slaves.)

ALLE: Es lebe Sarastro, der göttliche Weise!
Er lohnet und strafet in ähnlichem Kreise.

SARASTRO: Führt diese beiden Fremdlinge
In unsere Prüfungstempel ein;
Bedecket ihre Häupter dann,
Sie müssen erst gereinigt sein.
(Zwei Priester gehn ab, kommen zurück mit Schleiern und bedecken damit die Häupter von Tamino und Papageno.)

SCHLUSSCHOR: Wenn Tugend und Gerechtigkeit
Den grossen Pfad mit Ruhm bestreut,
Dann ist die Erd' ein Himmelreich,
Und Sterbliche den Göttern gleich.

SARASTRO (reicht Pamina die Hand und geht mit ihr zur Mittelpforte).
(Tamino, Papageno wenden sich an der Hand der beiden Priester nach rechts.)
(Die Priester, die Bewaffneten, die Frauen, das Volk, die Sklaven wenden sich dem Hintergrunde zu.)
(Der Vorhang fällt.)

ZWEITER AUFZUG

(Unterirdischer Tempel.)
(Die Priester treten von rechts und links ein, schreiten nach vorn, begegnen sich in der Mitte; reichen sich die Hand, kreuzen sich, gehen nach rechts und links. Sarastro erscheint zuletzt und nimmt die Mitte; vor ihm die beiden Sprecher, zu seiner Rechten und Linken die Priester.)

SARASTRO: (nach einer Pause).
Ihr in dem Weisheitstempel eingeweihten Diener der grossen Götter Osiris und Isis!
Mit reiner Seele erklär' ich euch, dass unsere heutige Versammlung eine der wichtigsten unserer Zeit ist.
Tamino, ein Königssohn, wandelt an der nördlichen Pforte unseres Tempels.
Diesen Tugendhaften zu bewachen, ihm freundschaftlich die Hand zu bieten sei heute eine unserer wichtigsten Pflichten.
Haltet ihr ihn für würdig, so folgt meinem Beispiel.
(Sarastro und die Priester blasen dreimal in die Hörner.)

SARASTRO: Gerührt über die Einigkeit Eurer Herzen, dankt Sarastro euch im Namen der Menschheit.
Man führe Tamino mit seinem Reisegefährten im Vorhof des Tempels ein.
(Zum Sprecher, der vor ihm niederkniet.)
Und du, Freund, vollziehe dein heiliges Amt und lehre sie die Macht der Götter erkennen
(Die Priester bilden um Sarastro einen Halbkreis.)

SARASTRO: O Isis und Osiris, schenket der Weisheit Geist dem neuen Paar! die ihr der Wand'rer Schritte lenket starkt mit Geduld sie in Gefahr,
starkt mit Geduld sie in Gefahr,

CHORUS: Starkt mit Geduld sie in Gefahr

SARASTRO: Lasst sie der Prüfung Früchte sehen, doch sollten sie su Grabe gehen, so lohnt der Tugend kühnen Lauf, nehmt sie in euren Wohnsitz auf,—nehmt sie in euren Wohnsitz auf.

CHORUS: Nehmt sie in euren Wohnsitz auf.
(Sarastro und die Priester entfernen sich in feierlicher Weise. Tamino rechts vorn, Sprecher zu seiner Linken, Papageno links vorn. Zweiter Priester zu seiner Rechten.)

SPRECHER: Ihr Fremdlinge! was sucht oder fordert ihn von uns?

TAMINO: Freundschaft und Liebe.

SPRECHER: Bist du bereit, es mit deinem Leben zu erkämpfen?

TAMINO: Ja.

SPRECHER: Reiche mir deine Hand!
(Sie reichen sich die Hände.)
So!

ZWEITER PRIESTER: (zu Papageno). Willst auch du dir Weisheitsliebe erkämpfen?

PAPAGENO: Kämpfen ist meine Sache nicht.
Ich bin so ein Naturmensch, der sich mit Schlaf, Speis' und Trank begnügt; und wenn es ja sein könnte, dass ich nur einmal ein schönes Weibchen fänge.

ZWEITER PRIESTER: Die wirst du nie erhalten, wenn du dich nicht unseren Prüfungen unterziehst.

PAPAGENO: Worin besteht diese Prüfung?

ZWEITER PRIESTER: Dich allen unseren Gesetzen zu unterwer fen, selbst den Tod nicht zu scheuen.

PAPAGENO: Ich bleibe ledig.

ZWEITER PRIESTER: Wenn nun aber Sarastro dir ein Mädchen aufbewahrt hätte, das an Farbe und Kleidung dir ganz gleich wäre!

PAPAGENO: Mir gleich?
Ist sie jung?

ZWEITER PRIESTER: Jung und schön.

PAPAGENO: Und heisst?

ALL: Long live Sarastro, the divine sage!
He justly punishes and rewards

SARASTRO: Lead these two strangers
To our temple of probation.
Cover their heads,
For they must first be purified.
(Two priests go out and come back with veils and cover the heads of Tamino and Papageno.)

CHORUS: When virtue joined to justice
Strews the path with fame,
Then earth is indeed heaven,
And mortal men are like gods!
(Sarastro takes Pamina's hand and goes with her to the middle door.)
(Tamino and Papageno go out with the two priests. The priests, soldiers, women, populace, slaves turn toward the background.)
(Curtain.)

ACT II

(A Subterranean Temple.)

SARASTRO: (after a pause) . You, ordained, in the Temple of Wisdom, servants of the great gods, Osiris and Isis!
With a pure heart I declare to you that our meeting of today is the most important of our time.
Tamino, the son of a king, waits before the north door of our temple.
To protect this virtuous youth, to extend a friendly greeting to him, is one of our most urgent duties today. If you hold him worthy then follow my example.
(Sarastro and the priests blow once into the horns.)

SARASTRO: Moved by the unanimity of your hearts, Sarastro thanks you in the name of humanity.
Let Tamino and his companion be led to the vestibule of our temple.
(To the Speaker who kneels before him.)
And you, friend, fulfill your holy office, and teach them to recognize the power of the gods.
(The priests form a semi-circle around Sarastro.)

SARASTRO: Oh Isis and Osiris, lead this faithful pair in wisdom's path! Concede your blessed protection, strengthen their hearts when danger's near, strengthen their hearts when danger's near.

CHORUS: Strengthen their hearts when danger's near.

SARASTRO: Grant that they bravely bear the trial, and that their prayers are not denied, But if you have fated that they succumb, grant them life beyond the tomb, O grant them life beyond the tomb.

CHORUS: Grant them life beyond the tomb.
(Tamino, Speaker, Papageno, Second Priest.)

SPEAKER: Stranger, what do you seek or ask from us?

TAMINO: Friendship and love.

SPEAKER: And are you prepared even if it costs you your life?

TAMINO: I am.

SPEAKER: Give me your hand!
(They shake hands.)
So!

SECOND PRIEST: (to Papageno). Will you, too, struggle for the love of wisdom?

PAPAGENO: Fighting is not my business.
I am a son of nature content with sleep, food, and drink, and were it only possible, I should like to find a pretty little wife.

SECOND PRIEST: But you will never obtain one, if you do not submit to our probation.

PAPAGENO: Of what does it consist?

SECOND PRIEST: To follow all our laws, and not to shrink from death.

PAPAGENO: I'll remain single.

SECOND PRIEST: But if Sarastro has reserved for you a pretty maid who is just like you in dress and color?

PAPAGENO: Just like me?
Is she young?

SECOND PRIEST: Young and beautiful.

PAPAGENO: And her name?

ZWEITER PRIESTER: Papagena.	SECOND PRIEST: Papagena.
PAPAGENO: Wie—Pa—?	PAPAGENO: What?—Pa—?
ZWEITER PRIESTER: Papagena.	SECOND PRIEST: Papagena.
PAPAGENO: Papagena? Die möchte ich aus blosser Neugierde sehen.	PAPAGENO: Papagena? I'd like to see her out of mere curiosity.
ZWEITER PRIESTER: Sehen kannst du sie!	SECOND PRIEST: You can see her.
PAPAGENO: Aber wenn ich sie gesehen habe, hernach muss ich sterben? (Zweiter Priester macht eine zweifelnde Bewegung.) Ja?— Ich bleibe ledig.	PAPAGENO: And when I have seen her, must I die? (Second priest makes a sign of doubt.) If so, then I'll remain single.
ZWEITER PRIESTER: Sehen kannst du sie, aber bis zur verlaufenen Zeit kein Wort mit ihr sprechen.	SECOND PRIEST: You can see her, but you must not speak to her until the appointed hour.
SPRECHER: (zu Tamino.) Auch dir, Prinz, legen die Götter ein heilsames Stillschweigen auf. Du wirst Pamina sehen, aber nicht sie sprechen dürfen; dies ist der Anfang eurer Prüfungszeit.	FIRST SPEAKER: (to Tamino.) And on you too, prince, the gods impose a holy silence. You shall see Pamina, but must not speak to her. The time of your probation now commences.
SPRECHER UND PRIESTER: Bewahret euch vor Weibertücken: Dies ist des Bundes erste Pflicht! Manch' weiser Mann liess sich berücken, Er fehlte und versah sich's nicht. Verlassen sah er sich am Ende, Vergolten seine Treu mit Hohn! Vergebens rang er seine Hände, Tod und Verzweiflung war sein Lohn. (Beide Priester ab nach rechts. Es wird dunkel.)	FIRST SPEAKER AND PRIEST: Beware of woman's treachery, It is the first duty to observe, Many a wise man was ensnared. He failed, and then was led astray. He saw himself at last forsaken, His faithfulness was met with scorn. Alas, he wrung his hands in vain, For his reward was death and pain (Both Priests leave. It grows dark.)
PAPAGENO: He! Lichter her! Lichter her!	PAPAGENO: Here, let us have light! Light!
TAMINO: Ertrag' es mit Geduld und denke, es ist der Götter Wille, (Die drei Damen eilen mit Fackeln von links herbei.) (Es wird heller.)	TAMINO: Come hear it patiently, it is the will of God! (The three Ladies rush in with torches. It grows lighter.)
DIE DREI DAMEN: Wie? Wie? Wie? Ihr an diesem Schreckensort? Nie, nie, nie, Kommt ihr wieder glücklich fort! Tamino, dir ist Tod geschworen! Du, Papageno, bist verloren!	THE THREE LADIES: What? what? what? You are in this place of terror? Never! never! never! Will you come out safely from here. Tamino, you are sworn to death! Papageno, you are lost!
PAPAGENO: Nein, nein, nein! Das wär' zu viel.	PAPAGENO: No, no, no, that is too much!
TAMINO: Papageno, schweig still! Willst du dein Gelübde brechen, Nichts mit Weibern hier zu sprechen!	TAMINO: Papageno, pray be still! Do you want to break your oath Never to speak to women?
PAPAGENO: Du hörst ja, wir sind beide hin.	PAPAGENO: You hear, we both are lost!
TAMINO: Stille, sag' ich! schweige still!	TAMINO: Still! I tell you, pray be still!
PAPAGENO: Immer still und immer still!	PAPAGENO: All you say is "still, still, still"!
DIE DREI DAMEN: Ganz nah' ist euch die Königin! Sie drang im Tempel heimlich ein.	THE THREE LADIES: The Queen is very near you. She stole secretly into the temple.
PAPAGENO: Wie? Was? Sie soll im Tempel sein?	PAPAGENO: What? How? She is in the temple?
TAMINO: Stille, sag' ich! schweige still! Wirst du immer so vermessen Deiner Eidespflicht vergessen?	TAMINO: Silence, I tell you, silence! Will you ever be so bold And forget what you have sworn?
DIE DREI DAMEN: Tamino, hör'! Du bist verloren! Gedenke an die Königin! Man zischelt viel sich in die Ohren Von dieser Priester falschem Sinn.	THE THREE LADIES: Tamino, listen! You are lost! Think of the wretched Queen. Much is whispered in these realms Of the priests' false nature.
TAMINO: (für sich.) Ein Weiser prüft und achtet nicht, Was der gemeine Pöbel spricht.	TAMINO: (aside) A wise man heeds not What by the vulgar crowd has said.
DIE DREI DAMEN: Man sagt, wer ihrem Bunde schwört, Der ist verwünscht mit Haut und Haar	THE THREE LADIES: They say who swears to their union Is doomed for all his life!
PAPAGENO: Das wär' beim Teufel unerhört! Sag' an, Tamino, ist das wahr?	PAPAGENO: One would not even expect it of the devil! Tell me, Tamino, is it true?
TAMINO: Geschwätz, von Weibern nachgesagt, Von Heuchlern aber ausgedacht.	TAMINO: But idle talk, that women have repeated And that bigots have invented!
PAPAGENO: Doch sagt es auch die Königin.	PAPAGENO: Still our Queen has said it too.
TAMINO: Sie ist ein Weib, hat Weibersinn, Sei still, mein Wort sei dir genug, Denk' deiner Pflicht und handle klug.	TAMINO: She is a woman, has but woman's sense, Be silent, let my word be enough. Think of your duty and be prudent!
DIE DREI DAMEN: (zu Tamino.) Warum bist du mit uns so spröde? (Tamino deutet bescheiden an, dass er nicht sprechen darf.)	THE THREE LADIES: (to Tamino). Why are you so shy with us? (Tamino intimates to them that he must not speak.)
DIE DREI DAMEN: Auch Papageno schweigt—so rede!	THE THREE LADIES: And Papageno too is silent—speak!
PAPAGENO: (heimlich zu den Damen.) Ich möchte gern—wohl—	PAPAGENO: (secretly to the Ladies). I'd like to, but—
TAMINO: Still!	TAMINO: Be still!
PAPAGENO: (heimlich.) Ihr seht, dass ich nicht soll.—	PAPAGENO: (aside). You see I must not.
TAMINO: Still! Dass du nicht kannst das Plaudern lassen Ist wahrlich eine Schand für dich!	TAMINO: Still! That you cannot leave off talking Is really a disgrace!
PAPAGENO: Dass ich nicht kann das Plaudern lassen, Ist wahrlich eine Schand' für mich!	PAPAGENO: That I cannot leave off talking Is really a disgrace!
DIE DREI DAMEN: Wir müssen sie mit Scham verlassen, Es plaudert keiner sicherlich; Von festem Geiste ist ein Mann, Er denket, was er sprechen kann.	THE THREE LADIES: We must leave you now with shame, No one speaks with surety, He is a man with judgment sound, Who's not afraid to speak his mind.
TAMINO, PAPAGENO: Sie müssen uns mit Scham verlassen, Es plaudert keiner sicherlich; Vom festen Geiste ist ein Mann, Er denket, was er sprechen kann. (Die drei Damen wollen sich nach links entfernen.)	TAMINO, PAPAGENO: They must leave us now with shame, No one speaks with surety; He is a man with judgment sound Who's not afraid to speak his mind. (The three Ladies are about to go.)
CHOR DER PRIESTER: (von aussen.) Entweiht ist die heilige Schwelle! Hinab mit den Weibern zur Hölle! (Donner.)	CHORUS OF PRIESTS: (from without). The sacred threshold is defiled! Away, away with women! (Thunder.)

DIE DREI DAMEN: (stürzen entsetzt nach links hinaus.) O weh! o weh! o weh!

PAPAGENO: (fällt vor Schrecken zu Boden.) O weh! o weh! o weh!
(Die drei Knaben kommen von links; der eine trägt die Flöte andere das Glockenspiel.)

DIE DREI KNABEN: Seid uns zum zweitenmal willkommen, Ihr Männer in Sarastros Reich.
Er schickt, was man euch abgenommen,
Die Flöte und die Glöckchen euch.
(Ein goldener, mit Speisen und Getränken reich versehener Tisch kommt von rechts.)
Wollt ihr die Speisen nicht verschmähan,
So esset, trinket froh davon.
Wenn wir zum drittenmal uns sehen,
Ist Freude eures Muthes Lohn!
Tamino, Muth! nah' ist das Ziel.
Du, Papageno, schweige still!
(Während des Terzetts überreichen sie Tamino die Flöte, Papageno das Glockenspiel und entfernen sich dann nach links.)

PAPAGENO: Tamino! wollen wir nicht speisen?
(Tamino bläst auf seiner Flöte.)

PAPAGENO: Blase du nur fort auf deiner Flöte, ich will meine Brocken blasen.
(Er tritt hinter den Tisch und isst.)
Herr Sarastro führt eine gute Küche.
Nun, ich will sehen, ob auch der Keller so gut bestellt ist.
(Er schenkt sich ein und trinkt.)
Ha, das ist Götterwein!
(Tamino beendet sein Flötenspiel.)
(Pamina eilt von links herbei.)
(Tamino rechts vorn. Pamina zu seiner Linken. Papageno essend und trinkend hinter dem Mitteltisch.)

PAMINA: (freudig). Du hier?
Gütige Götter!
Dank euch!
Aber du bist traurig?
Sprichst nicht eine
Silbe mit deiner Pamina?
Papageno, sage du mir, was ist meinem Freund?

PAPAGENO: (winkt ihr mit gefülltem Mund, fortzugehen.)
Hm, hm, hm!

PAMINA: Wie?
Auch du?
O das ist mehr als Tod!
Ach, ich fühl's, es ist verschwunden,
Ewig hin der Liebe Glück!
Nimmer kommt ihr, Wonnestunden,
Meinem Herzen mehr zurück!
Sieh' Tamino, diese Thränen,

THE THREE LADIES: (rush out in despair). O woe, O woe, O woe!

PAPAGENO: (falls down in fright). O woe, O woe, O woe!
(The three Youths come in. One carries the flute, the other the bells.)

THE THREE YOUTHS: A second time be welcome here,
Dear friends, in Sarastro's kingdom,
He sends you what he's taken from you,
Your mellow flute and bells.
(A golden table covered with food and drink appears.)
If you do not scorn our table,
Drink and eat freely from it.
When we shall meet a third time,
You'll be rewarded with happiness.
Tamino, courage, your goal is near,
And Papageno, you be still!
(They present the flute to Tamino, the bells to Papageno; exit.)

PAPAGENO: Tamino, shall we eat?
(Tamino plays his flute.)

PAPAGENO: You blow on your flute and I will eat.
(He goes to the table and eats.)
Sir Sarastro has a fine kitchen!
Now I shall see if his cellar is just as good.
(He fills his glass and drinks.)
Ha, this is nectar!
(Tamino stops playing his flute.)
(Pamina rushes in from the left.)
(Tamino, Pamina, Papageno eating and drinking at the table in the middle.)

PAMINA: (happily). Are you here?
Good gods, I thank you!
But you are sad.
Won't you even say a word to your Pamina?
Pagageno, tell me what is the trouble with my friend.

PAPAGENO: (motions to her, with full mouth, to go away). Hm, hm, hm.

PAMINA: What? you too?
That is worse than death.
Oh, I feel that all has vanished,
The happiness of love has flown
From my heart; forever banished
Are the blissful hours I've known.
See my tears, Tamino,
Love, they flow alone for you,
If you do not feel love's longing,
Rest will be in death for me.

Fliessen, Trauter, dir allein.
Fühlst du nicht der Liebe Sehnen,
So wird Ruh' im Tode sein!
(Sie geht traurig ab nach links.)

PAPAGENO: (isst hastig.) Nicht wahr, Tamino, ich kann auch schweigen, wenn's sein muss?
(Er trinkt.)
Der Herr Koch und der Herr Kellermeister sollen leben!
(Dreimaliger Posaunenton.)
(Tamino geht durch die Mitte ab.)

PAPAGENO: Geh' du nur voraus, ich komm schon nach.
Jetzt will ich mir's erst recht wohl sein lassen.
Da ich in meinem besten Appetit bin, soll ich gehen?
Dass lass ich wohl bleiben.
(Papageno, Stimmen, Sprecher.)

PAPAGENO: (von aussen rechts.)
Tamino!
Tamino!
(Er sucht von rechts herein).
Wenn ich nur wenigstens wüsste, wo ich wäre?

STIMME: (ruft ihm entgegen.)
Zurück!
(Donnerschlag, Feuer schlägt zur Thür hinaus.)

PAPAGENO: Barmherzige Götter!
Wo wend' ich mich hin?
Wenn ich nur wüsste, wo ich hereinkam.
(Er kommt zur Thür rechts vorn, durch die er hereinkam.)

STIMME: (ruft ihm entgegen.)
Zurück!
(Donner und Feuer, wie oben.)

PAPAGENO: Nun kann ich weder zurück noch vorwärts, (er weint) muss vielleicht am Ende gar verhungern!
Schon recht!
Warum bin ich mitgereist!

SPRECHER: Mensch, du hättest verdient, auf immer in finsteren Klüften der Erde zu wandern.

PAPAGENO: Je nun, es giebt ja noch mehr Leute meinesgleichen.
Mir wäre jetzt ein gutes Glas Wein das grösste Vergnügen.

SPRECHER: Sonst hast du keinen Wunsch in die Welt?

PAPAGENO: Bis jetzt nicht.

SPRECHER: Man wird dich damit bedienen.
(Ab nach links.)
(Ein grosser mit Wein gefüllter Becher kommit aus der Erde.)

PAPAGENO: Juhe!
Da ist er schon!
(Er trinkt.)
Herrlich!—
Himmlisch!—
Göttlich!
Ha!
Mir wird ganz wunderlich ums Herz; ich möchte—ich wünschte—ja, was denn?
(schlägt dazu das Glockenspiel.)

(She goes out sadly.)

PAPAGENO: (eats hastily). Is it not true, Tamino, that I too can be silent if necessary?
(Drinks.)
Long live the cook and the butler!
(Three trumpet calls.)
(Exit Tamino.)

PAPAGENO: You go first, and I will follow.
Now I can really begin to enjoy it.
I should go when my appetite is at its best?
I'd like to see anyone get me away.
(Papageno, Voices, Speaker.)

PAPAGENO: (from without).
Tamino!
Tamino!
(He looks about him.)
If I only knew where I am!

VOICE: (calls to him). Go back!
(Thunder clap. Fire darts out of the door.)

PAPAGENO: Merciful gods!
Where shall I go?
If I only knew which way I came in!
(Goes to the door through which he came.)

VOICE: (calls to him). Back!
(Thunder and fire as above.)

PAPAGENO: Now I go neither forward nor backward,
(he weeps) and must perhaps die of hunger in the bargain!
Serves me right!
Why did I come along?

SPEAKER: Man, you deserve to wander forever in the dark recesses of the earth!

PAPAGENO: Perhaps; still there are many like me on this earth.
Now I'd enjoy a glass of wine better than anything!

SPEAKER: Have you no other wish at all?

PAPAGENO: So far none other.

SPEAKER: You will be served some.
(Exit.)
(A large jug filled with wine comes up from the ground.)

PAPAGENO: Hurrah! There it comes!
(He drinks.)
Great—Heavenly!
Divine!
My heart feels quite strange; I'd like—I wish—now, what then?
(Plays on the bells.)
For why fair maidens should like me

Ein Mädchen oder Weibchen
Wünscht Papageno sich.
O so ein sanftes Täubchen
Wär' Seligkeit für mich!
Dann schmeckte mir Trinken und Essen
Dann könnt ich mit Fürsten mich messen
Des Lebens als Weiser mich freu'n,
Und wie im Elysium sein.
Ein Mädchen oder Weibchen
Wünscht Papageno sich.
O, so ein sanftes Täubchen
Wär' Seligkeit für mich.
Ach, kann ich denn keiner von allen
Den reizenden Mädchen gefallen?
Helf' eine mir nur aus der Noth,
Sonst gräm' ich mich wahrlich zu Tod.
Ein Mädchen oder Weibchen
Wunscht Papageno sich.
O, so ein sanftes Täubchen
Wär' Seligkeit für mich.
Wird keine mir Liebe gewähren,
So muss mich die Flamme verzehren!
Doch küsst mich ein weiblicher Mund,
So bin ich schon wieder gesund!
(Das alte Weib, tanzend und sich dabei auf einen Stock stützend, kommt von rechts und tritt ihm zur Linken.)

WEIB: Da bin ich schon, mein Engel!

PAPAGENO: (drecht sich un.) Du hast dich meiner erbarmt?

WEIB: Ja, mei Engel!
Komm, reich mir zum Pfand unseres Bundes deine Hand.

PAPAGENO: Nur nicht so hastig, lieber Engel!

WEIB: Papageno, ich rathe dir, zaudre nicht.
Deine Hand, oder du bist auf immer hier eingekerkert.

PAPAGENO: Eingekerkert?

WEIB: Wasser und Brod wird deine tägliche Kost sein.

PAPAGENO: Wasser trinken?
Der Welt entsagen?
Nein, da will ich doch lieber eine Alte nehmen, als gar keine.
Nun, da hast du meine Hand, mit der Versicherung, dass ich dir immer getreu bleibe, (für sich)
solange ich keine Schönere sehe.

WEIB: Das schwörst du?

PAPAGENO: Ja, das schwör' ich dir!
(Weib verwandelt sich in ein junges Weib, welches ebenso gekleidet ist, wie Papageno.)

PAPAGENO: Pa—pa Papagena!
(Er will sie umarmen.)
(Sprecher tritt rasch von links ein und zwischen beide.)

Does Papageno sigh.
O such a gentle turtle-dove
Is a blessing from on high!
Then never while eating nor drinking
Would I envy fair princes, I'm thinking.
Like a wise man I'd find joy in life
If only I got me a wife!
For maiden fair, etc.
For my fair maidens should like me
Far less than others I can't see.
Help me in my misery.
Else I'll be praying for death!
For maiden fair, etc.
If no one grants her love to me,
I'll be consumed by flames of love!
Still if I should receive one kiss,
I would revive—this I believe!
(The old Woman dancing and leaning on her cane, comes to the scene.)

WOMAN: Here I am now, my fair angel!

PAPAGENO: (turns around). Did you take pity on me?

WOMAN: Yes, my angel!
Come, give me your hand as a pledge of our union.

PAPAGENO: Not quite so hasty, dear angel!

WOMAN: Papageno, I advise you, do not hesitate.
Your hand or you will be imprisoned here forever.

PAPAGENO: Imprisoned?

WOMAN: Bread and water will be your daily meal.

PAPAGENO: Bread and water?
To renounce the world?
If that is so, I'd rather take an old one than none at all.
Here is my hand with the assurance that I will always remain true to you,
(aside)
as long as I see no fairer one.

WOMAN: Do you swear that?

PAPAGENO: Yes, I swear it to you.
(The Woman changes into a young woman, who is dressed like Papageno.)

PAPAGENO: Pa-Pa Papagena!
(He tries to embrace her.)
(The Speaker comes in quickly between the two.)

SPRECHER: (nimmt sie hastig bei der Hand.) Fort mit dir, junges Weib, er ist deiner noch nicht würdig.
(Er drängt sie nach links ab.)

VERWANDLUNG

(Garten mit einem See im Hintergrund. Rechts ein von blühenden Rosen überhangener Sitz. Heller Mondschein überfluthet die Gegend.)
(Pamina schlafend auf dem Sitz unter den Rosen. Monostatos von links hinten.)

MONOSTATOS: Ha!
Da find' ich ja die spröde Schöne!
Das Feuer, das in mir glimmt, wird mich noch verzehren.
(Es sieht sich um.)
Wenn ich wüsste—dass ich so ganz allein und unbelauscht wäre!
Ein Küsschen, dächte ich, liesse sich entschuldigen.
Alles fühlt der Liebe Freuden.
Schnäbelt, tändelt, herzt und küsst;
Und ich soll die Liebe meiden,
Weil ein Schwarzer hässlich ist!
Ist mir denn kein Herz gegeben?
Ich bin auch den Mädchen gut!
Immer ohne Weibchen leben,
Wäre wahrlich Höllengluth!
Drum so will ich, weil ich lebe,
Schnäbeln, küssen, zärtlich sein!
Lieber guter Mond. vergebe,
Eine Weisse nahm mich ein,
Weiss ist schön! ich muss sie küssen;
Mond, verstecke dich dazu!
Sollt' es dich zu sehr verdriessen,
O so mach' die Augen zu!
(Er schleicht langsam und leise zu Pamina hin.) (Die Königin eilt von rechts hinten herbei.)

KÖNIGIN: (gebietend zu Monostatos.) Zurück!

MONOSTATOS: O weh!
(Pamina rechts vorn schlafend, die Königin mit drohender Geberde die Mitte nehmend. Monostatos zu ihrer Linken.)

KOCHT IN MEINEM HERZEN—: Air (Queen): Allegro assai

KÖNIGIN DER NACHT: Der Hölle Rache kocht in meinem Herzen, Tod und Verzweiflung, Tod und Verzweiflung, flammet um mich her! Fühlt nicht, durch dich Sarastro Todesschmerzen, Sarastro Todesschmerzen, so bist du meine Tochter nimmermehr, so bist du mein', meine Tochter nimmermehr meine Tochter nimmermehr, so bist du meine Tochter nimmermehr.
Verstossen sei auf ewig und verlassen,
Zertrümmert alle Bande der Natur,
Wenn nicht durch dich Sarastro

SPEAKER: (takes her quickly by the hand). Away with you, young woman, he is not yet worthy of you!
(He takes her away.)

CHANGE OF SCENE

(Garden with a lake in the background. To the right a bench overhung with roses. Clear moonlight floods the scene.)
(Pamina sleeping on the bench under the roses. Monostatos in the back.)

MONOSTATOS: Ah, here I find the timid maiden.
The flame which burns in me will consume me.
(He looks around.)
If I only knew whether I am alone and no one listening.
A little kiss, I should think would be excusable.
Love is reigning in every heart,
Bills and coos, caresses and embraces,
But she is disdaining my love
Just because my skin is brown.
Have I not a heart within me?
Why should maidens frown at me?
Ever to dwell without wife,
Is worse than the fire of hell.
Therefore while I live I will.
Bill and kiss and be tender.
Dead good moon, forgive, forgive,
A white maid has enticed me.
White is lovely, I must kiss.
Moon, oh hide yourself the while,
And if it disturbs your bliss,
Close your eyes, and take it not amiss.
(He creeps up slowly and softly to Pamina.)

QUEEN: (to Monostatos). Back!

MONOSTATOS: Heavens!
(Pamina, the Queen, Monostatos.)

THE PANGS OF HELL ARE RAGING: Air (Queen)

QUEEN OF THE NIGHT: The pangs of hell are raging in my bosom, Death and destruction, Death and destruction, wildly flame around! Go forth, and bear my vengeance to Sarastro, my vengeance to Sarastro, or as my daughter you shall be disowned, be disowned, as my daughter be disowned, as my daughter be disowned, forever as my daughter be disowned.
Be forever rejected and forlorn,
All the ties of nature torn to pieces,
If through you vile Sarastro dies not now, wird erblassen!

Hört!
Rachegötter!
Hört der Mutter Schwur!

PAMINA: (sich erhebend) Mutter! Mutter!
Meine Mutter!
(Sie fällt ihr in die Arme.)

KÖNIGIN: (zieht einen Dolch hervor.) Siehst du hier diesen Stahl?
Er ist für Sarastro geschliffen.
Du wirst ihn tödten und den mächtigen Sonnenkreis mir überliefern.
(Sie dringt ihr den Dolch auf.)

PAMINA: Aber liebste Mutter!

KÖNIGIN: Kein Wort!
(Donner. Sie verschwindet.)

PAMINA: (den Dolch in der Hand, mit einigen Schritten nach links.) Morden soll ich?
Götter!
Das kann ich nicht.
Was soll ich thun?

MONOSTATOS: (nimmt ihr den Dolch weg.) Dich mir anvertrauen.

PAMINA: (erschrickt.) Ha!

MONOSTATOS: Warum zitterst du?
Vor meiner schwarzen Farbe oder vor dem ausgedachten Mord?

PAMINA: (schüchtern.) Du weisst also?

MONOSTATOS: Alles!
Du hast also nur einen Weg, dich und deine Mutter zu retten.

PAMINA: Der wäre?

MONOSTATOS: Mich zu lieben!

PAMINA: (zitternd, für sich.) Götter!

MONOSTATOS: Nun, Mädchen, ja oder nein!

PAMINA: (entschlossen.) Nein!

MONOSTATOS: (voll Zorn.) Nein?
So fahr' hin!

SARASTRO: (tritt gebietend zwischen beide, erhebt drohend den Arm und schleudert Monostatos zurück.) Zurück!

MONOSTATOS: (sich blitzschnell um sich selbst drehend und vor Sarastro auf die Knie fallend.) Herr, ich bin unschuldig!

SARASTRO: Ich weiss, dass deine Seele eben so schwarz als dein Gesicht ist.
Geh!
(Er eilt nach rechts hinten ab.)

PAMINA: Herr!
Strafe meine Mutter nicht!

SARASTRO: Ich weiss alles.
Du sollst sehen, wie ich mich an deiner Mutter räche.

Hear, gods of vengeance, hear a mother's vow!

PAMINA: (arising). Mother, mother, my mother!
(She falls into her arms.)

QUEEN: (draws out a dagger). Do you see this steel
It is sharpened for Sarastro.
You are to kill him and bring the powerful zodiac back to me.
(She forces the dagger on her.)

PAMINA: But, dearest mother!

QUEEN: Not a word!
(Thunder. The Queen disappears.)

PAMINA: (with dagger in hand). I must murder?
Gods!
That I cannot.
What shall I do?

MONOSTATOS: (takes away her dagger). Trust in me.

PAMINA: (frightened). Ha!

MONOSTATOS: Why do you tremble?
Is it because of my black skin or the intended murder?

PAMINA: (timidly). Then you know?

MONOSTATOS: All.
Only one way is left you now to save yourself and your mother.

PAMINA: Which is?

MONOSTATOS: To love me.

PAMINA: (trembling, aside). Heavens!

MONOSTATOS: Now, maiden, yes or no!

PAMINA: (decidedly). No!

MONOSTATOS: (in anger). No? then die!

SARASTRO: (comes between them, raises a threatening arm, and hurls Monostatos back). Back!

MONOSTATOS: (turning around like a flash and falling at Sarastro's feet). Sir, I am not guilty!

SARASTRO: I know that your soul is as black as your face.
Go!
(Exit Monostatos.)

PAMINA: Master, do not punish my mother!

SARASTRO: I know all.
You shall see how I shall take vengeance upon your mother.

SARASTRO: In diesen heil'gen Hallen kennt man die Rache nicht, und ist ein Mensch gefallen, führt Liebe ihn zur Pflicht.
Dann wandelt er an Freundes Hand vergnügt und froh in's bess're Land, dann wandelt er an Freundes Hand vergnügt und froh in's bess're Land dann wandelt er an Freundes Hand vergnügt und froh in's bess're Land, in's bess're bess're Land.
In diesen heil'gen Mauern,
Wo Mensch den Menschen liebt,
Kann kein Verräther lauern,
Weil man dem Feind' vergiebt.
Wen solche Lehren nicht erfreun,
Verdienet nicht ein Mensch zu sein.
(Beide gehen nach links ab.)

VERWANDLUNG

(Tempel der Götter Isis und Osiris.)
(Sprecher, Priester, Sarastro, die Mitte einnehmend)

CHOR DER PRIESTER: (Sarastro im Halbkreis umstehend.) O Isis und Osiris, welche Wonne.
Die düstre Nacht verscheucht der Glanz der Sonne.
Bald fühlt der edle Jüngling neues Leben;
Bald ist er unserm Dienste ganz ergeben.
Sein Geist ist kühn, sein Herz ist rein,
Bald wird er unser würdig sein.

SARASTRO: Prinz!
Dein Betragen war bis hierher männlich und gelassen.
Deine Hand!
(Er giebt einen Wink nach links hin.)
Man bringe Pamina!
(Zwei Priester entfernen sich nach links vorn und kommen sogleich mit Pamina zurück, welche mit dem Schleier der Eingeweihten bedeckt ist.)

PAMINA: Wo bin ich?
Sagt, wo ist mein Jüngling?

SARASTRO: (löst Taminos Schleier.) Hier.

PAMINA: (enzückt.) Tamino!

TAMINO: (sie von sich weisend.) Zurück!

PAMINA: Soll ich dich, Theurer, nicht mehr sehn?

SARASTRO: Ihr werdet froh euch wieder sehn.

PAMINA: Dein warten tödliche Gefahren!

TAMINO: Die Götter mögen mich bewahren!

PAMINA: Dein warten tödliche Gefahren!

SARASTRO: Die Götter mögen ihn bewahren!

SARASTRO: Within this hallowed dwelling,
Revenge and Sorrow cease, Here troubled doubts dispelling The weary heart hath peace. If you have strayed a brother's hand shall guide you toward the better land, If you have strayed, a brothers hand shall guide you toward the better land, the better, the better land.
Within these holy walls
Where man loves brother man,
No traitor can lurk.
The enemy is forgiven.
He whom this teaching does not gladden,
Does not deserve to be a man.
(Exit both.)

CHANGE OF SCENE

(Temple of Isis and Osiris.)
(Speaker, Priests, Sarastro.)

CHORUS OF PRIESTS: (standing around Sarastro in semi-circle).
O Isis and Osiris! O the ray
Of rising Phoebus drives the night away.
The noble youth will soon feel joys of heaven,
When he is fully given to our service.
With courage bold, and heart that's free,
Of us he soon will worthy be.

SARASTRO: Prince, your behavior till now has been manly and composed.
Give me your hand!
(He makes a sign.)
Let Pamina be brought in.
(Two priests go out and come back at once with Pamina, who is wrapped in the veil of the initiated.)

PAMINA: Where am I?
Tell me where is my lover?

SARASTRO: (removes the veil from Tamino). Here!

PAMINA: (in rapture). Tamino!

TAMINO: (beckoning to her). Go back!

PAMINA: May I never see you again?

SARASTRO: You'll surely see each other again.

PAMINA: Deadly dangers await you!

TAMINO: May the gods protect me!

PAMINA: Deadly dangers await you!

SARASTRO: May the gods protect him!

TAMINO: Die Götter mögen mich bewahren!

PAMINA: Du wirst dem Tode nicht entgehen;
Mir flüstert dieses Ahnung ein.

SARASTRO: Der Götter Wille mag geschehen,
Ihr Wink soll ihm Gesetze sein.

TAMINO: Der Götter Wille mag geschehen,
Ihr Wink soll mir Gesetze sein!

PAMINA: O liebtest du, wie ich dich liebe,
Du würdest nicht so ruhig sein.

SARASTRO: Glaub' mir, er fühlet gleiche Triebe,
Wird ewig dein Getreuer sein.

TAMINO: Glaub' mir, ich fühle gleiche Triebe,
Werd' ewig dein Getreuer sein!

SARASTRO: Die Stunde schlägt, nun müsst ihr scheiden!

TAMINO UND PAMINA: Wie bitter sind der Trennung Leiden!

SARASTRO: Die Stunde schlägt, nun müsst ihr scheiden!

TAMINO UND PAMINA: Wie bitter sind der Trennung Leiden!

SARASTRO: Tamino muss nun wieder fort.

TAMINO: Pamina, ich muss wirklich fort!

PAMINA: Tamino muss nun wirklich fort!

SARASTRO: Nun muss er fort!

TAMINO: Nun muss ich fort!

PAMINA: So musst du fort!

TAMINO: Pamina, lebe wohl!

PAMINA: Tamino, lebe wohl!

SARASTRO: Nun eile fort.
Dich ruft dein Wort.
Die Stunde schlägt, wir sehn uns wieder!

TAMINO UND PAMINA: Ach, goldne Ruhe, kehre wieder!
(Sie wird von zwei Priestern nach recht vorn abgeführt.)
(Sarastro entfernt sich mit Tamino an der Hand und allen Priester nach links vorn.)

VERWANDLUNG

(Kurzer Palmengarten. Halbdunkel. Es wird nach und nach ganz hell.)
(Die drei Knaben kommen von links.)

DIE DREI KNABEN: Bald prangt, den Morgen zu verkünden, Die Sonn' auf gold'ner Bahn!
Bald soll der Aberglaube schwinden,
Bald siegt der weise Mann.
O holde Ruhe, steig' hernieder.
Kehr' in der Menschen Herzen

TAMINO: May the gods protect me!

PAMINA: You cannot now escape from death,
My saddened heart forebodes it!

SARASTRO: May the will of the gods be done,
And their desire be law for him.

TAMINO: May the will of the gods be done,
And their desire be law for me.

PAMINA: O if you were to love like me,
You surely would not be so calm!

SARASTRO: Yes, he loves with equal passion,
And will be your lover forever!

TAMINO: Yes, I love with equal passion,
And will be your lover forever!

SARASTRO: The hour has come when you must part!

TAMINO AND PAMINA: How bitter are the pains of parting!

SARASTRO: The hour has come when you must part!

TAMINO AND PAMINA: How bitter are the pains of parting!

SARASTRO: Tamino must at once depart!

TAMINO: Yes, I must at once depart!

PAMINA: Tamino must at once depart!

SARASTRO: He must depart!

TAMINO: I must depart!

PAMINA: He must depart!

TAMINO: Pamina, farewell!

PAMINA: Tamino, farewell!

SARASTRO: Now hasten away,
Your promise calls you!
The time has come! We'll meet again!

TAMINO AND PAMINA: O longed-for calm, return again.
(She is led away by two priests.)
(Sarastro leaves with Tamino; exit the priests.)

CHANGE OF SCENE

(Small palm garden. Twilight. It grows gradually lighter.)
(The three Youths come from the left.)

THE THREE YOUTHS: The sun comes in to banish the night,
And beams upon earth brilliantly.
All superstition must soon vanish,
The wise man goes to victory.
O heavenly quiet, now descend,
Return to the heart of man.
Then the earth be as a heaven

wieder;
Dann wird die Erd' ein Himmelreich,
Und Sterbliche den Göttern gleich.

ERSTER KNABE: Doch seht, Verzweiflung quält Paminen.

ZWEITER UND DRITTER KNABE: Wo ist sie denn?

ERSTER KNABE: Sie ist von Sinnen.

DIE DREI KNABEN: Sie quält verschmähter Liebe Leiden.
Lasst uns der Armen Trost bereiten!
Fürwahr, ihr Schicksal geht mir nah!
O wäre nur ihr Jüngling da!—
Sie kommt, lasst uns beiseite gehn,
Damit wir, was sie mache, sehn.
(Sie ziehen sich nach links hinten zurück.)
(Pamina, halb wahnsinnig, mit dem Dolch, den sie von der Königin empfing, herbeistürzend.)

PAMINA: (zu dem Dolch.) Du also bist mein Bräutigam?
Durch dich vollend' ich meinen Gram!

DIE KNABEN: (beiseite.) Welch' dunkle Worte sprach sie da?
Die Arme ist dem Wahnsinn nah'.

PAMINA: Geduld, mein Trauter, ich bin dein,
Bald werden wir vermählet sein.

DIE KNABEN: (treten näher.) Wahsinn tobt ihr im Gehirne;
Selbstmord steht ihr auf der Stirne.
(Zu Pamina.)
Holdes Mädchen, sieh uns an!

PAMINA: Sterben will ich, weil der Mann,
Den ich nimmermehr kann hassen,
Seine Traute kann verlassen.
(Den Dolch erhebend.)
Dies gab meine Mutter mir.

DIE KNABEN: Selbstmord strafet Gott an dir.

PAMINA: Lieber durch dies Eisen sterben.
Als durch Liebesgram verderben.
Mutter, durch dich leide ich.
Und dein Fluch verfolget mich.

DIE KNABEN: Mädchen, willst du mit uns gehn?

PAMINA: Ha, des Jammers Mass ist voll!
Falscher Jüngling, lebe wohl!
Sieh, Pamina stirbt durch dich:
Dieses Eisen tödte mich.
(Sie will sich erstechen.)

DIE KNABEN: (treten, zwei von rechts, einer von links, zu Pamina vor und entreissen ihr den Dolch.) Ha, Unglückliche! halt ein!
Sollte dies dein Jüngling sehen,
Würde er vor Gram vergehen;
Denn er liebet dich allein.

And mortals like Divinity.

FIRST YOUTH: But see, Pamina's in despair.

SECOND AND THIRD YOUTH: Where is she?

FIRST YOUTH: She is out of her mind.

THE THREE YOUTHS: She suffers pangs of disdained love,
Let us endeavor to console her,
Her fate indeed has greatly moved me,
Would that her lover here would be!
She comes, let us draw aside,
So, that we can observe her better!
(They step to the back of the stage.)
(Pamina rushes in half insane, with the dagger given her by the Queen.)

PAMINA: (to her dagger). Now I see my bridegroom in you,
Through you my grief will be ended!

THE YOUTHS: (aside) Oh, woe! what did Pamina say!
And see, she is near to madness!

PAMINA: Patience, beloved, I am yours.
Soon we shall be united.

THE YOUTHS: (draw nearer).
Madness lurks in her poor brain,
She contemplates suicide.
(To Pamina)
Gracious maiden, behold us here!

PAMINA: I must die, since the man
I can never hate has forsaken the one he loves.
(Raises the dagger.)
My mother gave this to me.

THE THREE YOUTHS: Suicide by God is punished.

PAMINA: Better to die by this steel,
Than to perish through grief and love,
Mother, alas, I suffer through you,
And your curse pursues me!

THE THREE YOUTHS: Maiden, will you go with us?

PAMINA: The measure of my grief is full,
Faithless lover, farewell!
See, Pamina dies through you,
May this dagger destroy me!
(She tries to stab herself.)

THE THREE YOUTHS: (come up and snatch the dagger from her).
Hold, unhappy one, and hear.
Were your lover to see this,
He would expire with sorrow,
For he loves you alone.

PAMINA: (erholt sich.) Was?
Er fühlte Gegenliebe?
Und verbarg mir seine Triebe,
Wandte sein Gesicht von mir?
Warum sprach er nicht mit mir?

DIE KNABEN: Dieses müssen wir verschweigen,
Doch, wir wollen dir ihn zeigen!
Und du wirst mit Staunen sehn,
Dass er dir sein Herz geweiht,
Und den Tod für dich nicht scheut.

PAMINA: Führt mich hin, ich möcht' ihn sehen.

DIE KNABEN: Kommt, wir wollen zu ihm gehen.

ALLE VIER: Zwei Herzen, die von Liebe brennen,
Kann Menschenohnmacht niemals trennen
Verloren ist der Feinde Müh',
Die Götter selbst beschützen sie.
(Sie gehen nach rechts ab.)

VERWANDLUNG

(Wilde Felsengegend mit einem eisernen Mittelthor. Rechts und links eiserne Thore als Eingänge. Im Hintergrund zu beiden Seiten des Mittelthores Felsenhöhlen; in der einen rechts sieht man durch ein eisernes Gitter eine brausende Wasserfluth, in der andern links eine hellflammende Feuergluth,—Es ist halbdunkel.)
(Tamino mit zwei Priestern von links. Pamina's Stimme rechts draussen.)

DIE ZWEI GEHARNISCHTEN:
Der, welcher wandert diese Strasse voll Beschwerden.
Wird rein durch Feuer, Wasser, Luft und Erden;
Wenn er des Todes Schrecken überwinden kann,
Schwingt er sich aus der Erde himmelan
Erleuchtet wird er dann imstande sein,
Sich den Mysterien der Isis ganz zu weihn.

TAMINO: Mich schreckt kein Tod, als Mann zu handeln, Den Weg der Tugend fortzuwandeln.
Schliesst mir die Schreckenspforten auf,
Ich wage froh den kühnen Lauf.

PAMINA: (von rechts draussen.)
Tamino, halt!
Ich muss dich sehen.

TAMINO: Was hör' ich?
Paminens Stimme?

DIE GEHARNISCHTEN: Ja, ja, das ist Paminens Stimme.

PAMINA: (recovers herself).
What?
He, too, felt love?
And concealed his feelings for me?
He turned his face away.
Why did he not speak to me?

THE THREE YOUTHS: This, alas, we must not tell,
But we will now show him to you.
And you will see with surprise,
That he gave his heart to you,
And for you he'd give his life!

PAMINA: Take me where I can see him!

THE THREE YOUTHS: Come to him, we will lead you.

ALL FOUR: Two hearts that are burning with true love
Human weakness can never part.
Vain are the efforts of the enemy,
For they will be protected by the gods!
(Exeunt.)

CHANGE OF SCENE

(Wild mountain spot, with an iron middle gate. To the right and left, iron doors as entrances. In the background, on both sides of the middle door, small caves in the rocks. Within the one to the right, one sees through an iron gate, a roaring stream. In the one to the left, a brightly glowing fire. Twilight.) (Tamino with two priests. Pamina's voice heard without.)

MEN: He who pursues his path full of dangers,
Becomes pure by fire, water, air and earth
If he can overcome the pangs of death,
From out of earth he rises unto heaven.
Thus purified, he then will be able.
To devote himself to Isis' mystery.

TAMINO: I fear not death, for as a man
I'll follow ever virtue's path,
Open the gates of horror wide,
I'll gladly risk the dangerous tide!

PAMINA: (from without). Tamino, wait! for I must see you!

TAMINO: What do I hear? Pamina's voice?

MEN: Yes, yes, it is Pamina's voice.

TAMINO: Wohl mir, nun kann sie mit mir gehn,
Nun trennet uns kein Schicksal mehr,
Wenn auch der Tod beschieden wär'!

DIE GEHARNISCHTEN: Wohl dir, nun kann sie mit dir gehn,
Nun trennet euch kein Schicksal mehr,
Wenn auch der Tod beschieden wär'!

TAMINO: Ist mir erlaubt, mit ihr zu sprechen?

DIE GEHARNISCHTEN: Dir sei erlaubt, mit ihr zu sprechen!
(Die zwei Priester gehen rechts ab.)

TAMINO: Welch' Glück, wenn wir uns wiedersehn.

DIE GEHARNISCHTEN: Welch' Glück, wenn wir euch wiedersehn

TAMINO UND DIE GEHARNISCHTEN: Froh Hand in Hand im Tempel gehn.
Ein Weib, das Nacht und Tod nicht scheut.
Ist würdig und wird eingeweiht.
(Die beiden Priester kommen mit Pamina von rechts zurück.)
(Die Vorigen, Pamina.)

PAMINA: (Tamino unarmend.)
Tamino mein! o welch' ein Glück!

TAMINO: Pamina mein! o welch' ein Glück!
(Er zeigt nach den beiden Felsenhöhlen.)
Hier sind die Schreckenspforten,
Die Noth und Tod mir dräun.

PAMINA: Ich werd' an allen Orten
An deiner Seite sein.
Ich selber führe dich,
Die Liebe leite mich.
(Sie nimmt ihn bei der Hand.)
Sie mag den Weg mit Rosen streun,
Weil Rosen stets bei Dornen sein.
Spiel du die Zauberflöte an,
Sie schütze uns auf unsrer Bahn.
Es schnitt in einer Zauberstunde
Mein Vater sie aus tiefstem Grunde
Der tausendjähr'gen Eiche aus,
Bei Blitz und Donner, Sturm und Braus,
Nun komm' und spiel' die Flöte an,
Sie leite uns auf grauser Bahn.

TAMINO, PAMINA: Wir wandeln durch des Tones Macht,
Froh durch des Todes düst're Nacht!

DIE GEHARNISCHTEN: Ihr wandelt durch des Tones Macht,
Froh durch des Todes düst're Nacht.
(Tamino und Pamina wenden sich, nach links zur Feuerhöhle, die sie durchwandern, indem Pamina ihre Hand auf Tamino's Schulter legt, wobei Tamino seine

TAMINO: Now she can surely go with me,
Nothing can separate us,
Even if death should be our fate.

MEN: Now she can surely go with you,
Nothing can separate you,
Even if death should be your fate.

TAMINO: Am I permitted to speak to her?

MEN: You are permitted to speak to her.
(The two priests exit.)

TAMINO: What happiness if we should meet again!

MEN: What happiness if we should meet again!

TAMINO AND MEN: Joyfully go hand in hand to the temple,
A wife whom neither night nor death dismay
Is worthy, and will be ordained.
(Priests come back with Pamina.)
(Above. Pamina.)

PAMINA: (embracing Tamino).
My Tamino! What happiness is this!

TAMINO: My Pamina! What happiness is this!
(He points to both mountain caverns.)
Here are the gates of horror,
They threaten danger dire and death.

PAMINA: I will always.
Be your true companion.
I lead you myself,
And love guides me on:
(Takes him by the hand.)
Love will deck your thorny way,
And strew the path with roses,
Now you'll play your magic flute,
It will protect us on our way.
My father in a magic hour
Fashioned it himself
Out of a thousand-year old oak,
In thunder, lightning, storm and gale,
Now you'll play your magic flute,
It will protect us on our way.

TAMINO, PAMINA: We wander by the flute's sweet might,
Merrily into death and night.

MEN: They wander by the flute's sweet might,
Merrily into death and night.
(Tamino and Pamina go toward the cavern of fire, through which they pass. Pamina keeping her hand on Tamino's shoulder, and Tamino playing his flute. As soon as they emerge from the purgation Flöte bläst. Sobald sie aus der Feuerprobe heraus kommen, umarmen sie sich und bleiben in der Mitte.)

BEIDE: Wir wandelten durch Feuergluthen,
Bekämpften muthig die Gefahr.
(Zur Flöte)
Dein Ton sei Schutz in Wasserfluthen, So wie er es im Feuer war.
(Tamino und Pamina wenden sich nun ganz wie vorhin nach rechts zur Wasserhöhle. Sobald sie aus der Wasserprobe herauskommen:)
(Die Vorigen, Sarastro, die Priester hoch oben im Tempel.)

TAMINO, PAMINA: Ihr Götter!
Welch' ein Augenblick!
Gewähret ist uns Isis Glück.

CHOR DER PRIESTER: Triumph!
Triumph! du edles Paar!
Besieget hast du die Gefahr,
Der Isis Weihe ist nun dein,
Kommt, tretet in den Tempel ein!
(Tamino und Pamina wenden sich nach hinten zum Tempel.)

VERWANDLUNG

(Kurze Gartendekoration; rechts ein Baum mit einem verdorrten Ast.—Es ist hell.)
(Papageno allein, mit einem Strick umgürtet.)

PAPEGENO: (ruft mit seinem Pfeifchen.) Papagena! Papegena! Papegena!
Weibchen! Täubchen! Meine Schöne!
Vergebens! Ach, sie ist verloren!
Ich bin zum Unglück schon geboren.
Ich plauderte—und das war schlecht,
Darum geschieht es mir schon recht.
Seit ich gekostet diesen Wein.
Seit ich das schöne Weibchen sah,
So brennt's im Herzenskämmerlein,
So zwickt es hier, so zwickt es da.
Papagena! Herzenstäubchen!
Papagena! liebes Weibchen!
's ist umsonst! Es ist vergebens!
Müde bin ich meines Lebens!
Sterben macht der Lieb' ein End',
Wenn's im Herzen noch so brennt.
(Er nimmt den Strick von seiner Mitte.)
Diesen Baum da will ich zieren,
Mir an ihm den Hals zuschnüren,
Weil das Leben mir missfällt;
Gute Nacht, du falsche Welt.
Weil du böse an mir handelst,
Mir kein schönes Kind zubandelst:
So ist's aus, so sterbe ich,
Schöne Mädchen, denkt an mich.
Will sich eine um mich Armen,
Eh' ich hänge, noch erbarmen,
Wohl, so lass ich's diesmal sein!
Rufet nur, ja—oder nein.—
Keine hört mich, alles stille!

by fire, they embrace.)

BOTH: We wandered through the flames,
And bravely met the dangers.
(To the flute.)
May your tones protect us in the flood of waters,
As they did when fire was near.
(Tamino and Pamina proceed into the cave of water. They soon come out of the purgation by water.)
(Above. Sarastro, Priests high up in the temple.)

TAMINO, PAMINA: Oh gods, what a glorious sight!
The joy of Isis is upon us!

CHORUS OF PRIESTS: Triumph, triumph, noble pair,
You have overcome the danger.
We consecrate you to Isis,
Walk now within the temple gate.
(Tamino and Pamina take their way to the temple.)

CHANGE OF SCENE

(Small garden. To the right a tree with a dried up branch. It is daylight.)
(Papageno, alone, with a rope around his waist.)

PAPAGENO: (calls on his pipe).
Papagena, Papagena, Papagena!
Little darling, little dove!
In vain I sigh, she's lost to me.
Oh, I am born to misery!
I talked, I know, and that was wrong.
And so they'll say it served me right.
But since I tasted that wine,
And since her eyes had first met mine,
A constant fire burns in my heart,
And I am tortured day and night!
Papagena, light of life,
Papagena, darling wife!
In vain I sigh for you again,
So nothing is left me but to die!
I'm tired of life, so part from it,
To quench the flame that fires my heart!
(He takes off the rope.)
I will single out this tree,
And swing from its high branches,
For since life has lost its worth,
I will say farewell to earth.
Since you are so cruel to me,
And refuse to grant my prayer,
All is over, I shall die,
Since there's none to mourn or sigh,
Still if only one there be,
Who would love or pity me,
Then I will not end my woe.
Only tell me, yes or no—
No one hears me, all is still.
(Looks around.)
Tell me, then, is it your will?
Papageno, swing on high,

(Er sieht sich um.)
Also ist es euer Wille?
Papageno, frisch hinauf!
Ende deinen Lebenslauf.
(Er sieht sich um.)
Nun, ich warte noch, es sei,
Bis man zählet, eins, zwei, drei.
(Er pfeift.)
Eins!
(Er sieht sich um und pfeift.)
Zwei!
Zwei ist schon vorbei.
(Er pfeift.)
Drei!

(Er sieht sich um.)
Nun wohlan, es bleibt dabei!
Weil mich nichts zurücke hält!
Gute Nacht, du falsche Welt.
(Er will sich aufhängen.)
(Die drei Knaben eilen von links herbei.)

DIE DREI KNABEN: Halt ein, o Papageno, und sei klug;
Man lebt nur einmal, dies sei dir genug.

PAPAGENO: Ihr habt gut reden, habt gut scherzen.
Doch brennt es euch, wie mich im Herzen,
Ihr würdet auch nach Mädchen gehn.

DIE DREI KNABEN: So lasse deine Glöckchen klingen,
Dies wird dein Mädchen zu dir bringen.

PAPAGENO: Ich Narr vergass der Zauberdinge!
Erklinge, Glockenspiel, erklinge!
Ich muss mein liebes Mädchen sehn.
(Er schlägt sein Glockenspiel.)
Klinget, Glöckchen, klinget,
Schafft mein Mädchen her!
Klinget, Glöckchen, klinget,
Bringt mein Weibchen her!
(Die drei Knaben eilen unter diesen Schlagen nach links ab und kehren sogleich mit Papagena zurück.)
Nun, Papageno, sieh' dich um!
(Sie entfernen sich nach links.)
(Papageno sieht sich um, komisches Spiel.)
(Papageno, Papagena zu seiner Linken.)

PAPAGENO: (sie umtanzend.) Pa—Pa—Pa—Pa—Pa—Papagena!

WEIB: (sie umtanzend.) Pa—Pa—Pa—Pa—Pa—Papageno!

BEIDE: Pa—Pa—Pa—Pa–Pa—Papageno!
Papagena!

PAPAGENO: Bist du mir nun ganz gegeben?

WEIB: Nun bin ich dir ganz gegeben

PAPAGENO: Nun, so sei mein liebes Weibchen!

And nobly die like a hero!
(He looks around.)
Now I'm waiting, let it be
While I'm counting, one, two, three!
(He whistles.)
One!
(He looks around and whistles.)
Two!
Two's already past!
(He whistles.)
Three!
(He looks around.)
Now away, and let it be!
There is nothing to keep me!
Good night, false world, farewell!
(He tries to hang himself.)
(The three Youths hurry in.)

THE THREE YOUTHS: Stop, Papageno, and be prudent,
Man lives but once—let this be enough for you!

PAPAGENO: Your talk and joking's very fine,
Still, if your hearts would burn like mine,
You, too, would run after fair maids.

THE THREE YOUTHS: Then let your sweet bells ring,
They will bring your maiden to you.

PAPAGENO: Fool that I am, to forget the magic thing,
Ring, bells, ring, ring, ring!
My little wife I now would see.
(Rings.)
Ring, bells, ring, ring, ring!
My little maiden to me bring!
Ring, bells, ring, ring, ring!
My little maiden to me bring!
(At the sound the three Youths go out and return with Papagena.)
Now, Papageno, look about you!
(Exit the Youths.)
(Papageno looks around—silly dumb show.)
(Papageno, Papagena at his left.)

PAPAGENO: (dancing around her). Pa—Pa—Pa—Pa—Pa—Papagena!

WOMAN: (dancing around him). Pa—Pa—Pa—Pa—Pa—Papageno!

BOTH: Pa—Pa—Pa—Pa—Pa—Papageno!
Papagena!

PAPAGENO: Are you now all my own?

WOMAN: Now I am all your own.

PAPAGENO: Well, then be my little love!

WEIB: Nun, so sei mein Herzenstäubchen!

BEIDE: Welche Freude wird das sein!
Wenn die Götter uns bedenken,
Uns're Liebe Kinder schenken,
So liebe kleine Kinderlein!

PAPAGENO: Erst einen kleinen Papageno!

WEIB: Dann eine kleine Papagena!

PAPAGENO: Dann wieder einen Papageno!

WEIB: Dann wieder eine Papagena!

BEIDE: Papagena!
Papagena!
Papagena!
Es ist das höchste der Gefühle,
Wenn viele, viele, viele, viele
Pa—Pa—Pa—Pa—geno,
Pa—Pa—Pa—Pa—gena,
Der Segen froher Eltern sein.
(Beide eilen Arm in Arm nach links ab.)

VERWANDLUNG

(Kurze Felsengegend. Es ist Nacht.)
(Monostatos, Die Königin mit ihren drei Damen von rechts; sie tragen schwarze, brennende Fackeln in der Hand.)

MONOSTATOS: (der Königin zur Linken.) Nur stille! stille! stille! stille!
Bald dringen wir im Tempel ein.

ALLE DAMEN: (zürückstehend.)
Nur stille! stille! stille! stille!
Bald dringen wir im Tempel ein.

MONOSTATOS: Doch Fürstin, halte Wort!
Erfülle—
Dein Kind muss meine Gattin sein.

KÖNIGIN: Ich halte Wort; es ist mein Wille.

ALLE DAMEN: Ihr Kind soll deine Gattin sein.
(Man hört dumpfen Donner, Geräusch und Wasser.)

WOMAN: Well, then be my turtle-dove!

BOTH: What a joy we now shall feel,
When the gods their gifts reveal,
Little boys and girls galore,
All we want and many more!

PAPAGENO: First a little Papageno.

WOMAN: Then a little Papagena.

PAPAGENO: Then another Papageno.

WOMAN: Then another Papagena.

BOTH: Papagena! Papagena! Papagena!
It is the greatest pleasure,
When many, many, many, many
Pa—Pa—Pa—Pa—geno,
Pa—Pa—Pa—Pa—gena,
Are the blessing of fond parents!
(Both go out arm in arm.)

CHANGE OF SCENE

(Rugged cliffs. It is dark.)
(Monostatos, the Queen with her three Ladies in Waiting; they carry lighted torches.)

Soon we will enter the temple.

ALL THE LADIES: Now silence, silence, silence!
Soon we will enter the temple.

MONOSTATOS: But, princess, you will keep your word—
Your child must be my wife.

QUEEN: I keep my word, it is my will!

ALL THE LADIES: Her child must be his wife.
(Thunder, noise, rushing of water.)

MONOSTATOS: Doch still! ich höre schrecklich Rauschen, Wie Donnerton und Wasserfall.

KÖNIGIN UND DAMEN: Ja, fürchterlich ist dieses Rauschen, Wie fernen Donners Wiederhall.

MONOSTATOS: Nun sind sie in des Tempels Hallen.

ALLE: Dort wollen wir sie überfallen—
Die Frömmler tilgen von der Erd'
Mit Feuersgluth und mächt'gem Schwert

DIE DREI DAMEN UND MONOSTATOS:
Dir grosse Königin der Nacht,
Sei unsrer Rache Opfer gebracht.
(Sie versinken. Man hört starken Donner, Sturm.)

MONOSTATOS, KÖNIGIN UND DIE DAMEN: Zerschmettert, vernichtet ist unsere Macht, Wir alle gestürzet in ewige Nacht.
(Exeunt.)

OFFENE VERWANDLUNG

(Priester und Priesterinnen, Sarastro steht erhöht. Vor ihm Tamino und Pamina, beide in priesterlicher Kleidung, die Priester auf beiden. Seiten, die drei Knaben halten Blumen.)

SARASTRO: Die Strahlen der Sonne vertreiben die Nacht, Zernichten der Heuchler erschlichene Macht.

CHOR DER PRIESTER: Heil sei euch Geweihten! Ihr dranget durch Nacht, Dank sei dir, Osiris und Isis, gebracht!
Es siegte die Stärke und krönet zum Lohn—
Die Schönheit und Weisheit mit ewiger Kron'!

ENDE.

MONOSTATOS: Be still!
I hear a horrid noise,
Like thunder and like water-fall.

QUEEN AND LADIES: Yes, a horrible noise,
Like thunder and like water-fall.

MONOSTATOS: Now we are in the temple hall.

ALL: There we will surprise them,
Remove the hypocrites from the earth,
Destroy them with sword and fire!

LADIES AND MONOSTATOS: To you, Queen of the Night,
We'll bring our sacrifice.
(Thunder, lightning, storm.)

MONOSTATOS, QUEEN, LADIES: Our power is destroyed and demolished
We all will be hurled into darkness.
(They sink into the earth.)

CHANGE OF SCENE

Temple of the Sun.
Priests and Priestesses. Sarastro, elevated, Tamino and Pamina before him, both in priestly garb. Priests on both sides. The Three Youths hold flowers in their hands.

SARASTRO: The rays of the sun chase away the night,
Destroy the sneaking power of the dissembler.

CHORUS OF PRIESTS: Glory to the consecrated!
You passed through darkness,
May thanks be given to you Isis and Osiris,
May the strong conquer!
And bring to wisdom and beauty
The crown eternal!

THE END

Boris Godounov (1874)

Music and Libretto by Modeste Petrovich Moussorgsky

Boris Godounov is in three acts with a prologue. The libretto, written by the composer, is based on Alexandre Pushkin's play and on Nikolay M. Karamzin's History of the Russian Empire. The opera premiered in Russian at the Maryinsky Theatre in St. Petersburg on February 8, 1874, but since has been performed more often in Italian. The year is 1598. Boris Godunov is in retreat at the monastery at Novodieuitchi, where a crowd of peasants gathers outside to pray. The Tsar Feodor is dead, his heir Dimitri died mysteriously many years before, and the people ask Boris to be the Tsar's successor. Boris' coronation takes place in Kremlin Square. In a cell at the Convent of Miracles, Grigori, a novice awakens and tells Pimenn, an old monk, about his dream, which Pimenn interprets to signify tremendous ambition. Pimenn advises Grigori not to yearn for life in the outside world, and he tells him the story of Dimitri's assassination, for which, we later learn, Boris was responsible. Grigori demands divine and human revenge. Two renegade friars Missail and Varlaam, burst into an inn on the Lithuanian border with Grigori on their heels. Grigori has left his order and, dressed in disguise, is trying to cross the border. At the Kremlin, Xenia, the daughter of Boris, cries over the death of her betrothed. Her old nurse tries to cheer her up. Boris enters and is filled with remorse for the murder he committed so long ago. Prince Chouïsky brings Boris news of an uprising invoked by a man who calls himself Dimitri. Boris, terrified, thinks Dimitri is alive. Chouïsky tries to calm him, but Boris has visions of the dead and collapses to the floor, sobbing. At the castle of Sandomir in Poland, Princess Marina intends to win over the pretender Dimitri (who is in fact Grigori) and marry him, thus becoming Tsarina of Russia. Ragoni, her confessor, agrees to this plan on the condition that she reinstates Catholicism in Russia. Dimitri (Grigori) awaits Marina in the garden. Father Rangoni assures him about the Princess' intentions as long as he does as suggested. Marina responds to Dimitri's passion coldly, and he is hurt by her attitude. However, she uses all of her charm to seduce him while Father Rangoni, invisible to Dimitri, enjoys his victory. The rebels capture a Boyar in the Kromy forest and taunt him, while an idiot is robbed of the little money he has as he prays. Missail and Varlaam join the crowd in vilifying Boris, and Dimitri is acclaimed as their new Tsar, promising them protection from oppression. The Duma meets at the Kremlin to discuss Dimitri's uprising. Boris has become delirious and asks for the monk, Pimenn. Close to death, Boris appoints his son, Teodoro, rightful successor and asks that he govern justly, after which he dies.

■ ATTO I.	■ ACT I.
SCENA I	SCENE I.
Il muro del Convento di Novodievitchi, nei dintorni di Mosca. A destra, presso la ribalta, la gran porta del Monastero, riparata da una tettoia.	The wall of Novodievitchi Convent, in the environs of Moscow. To right, near front, the great door of the Monastery, with a shed over it.
All'alzarsi del sipario, il popolo, in piccoli gruppi, penetra nella corte del convento. Movimenti svogliati, forzati; andatura pigra ed indolente. I boiardi attraversano la scena, ed hanno alla testa il Principe Chouisky. Si dirigono verso il convento e scambiano saluti col popolo. Allorquanda i boiardi sono entrati nel convento, i contadini si agitano. Gli uni, specialmente le donne, osservano attraverso la porta del conveto; gli altri parlano fra loro a bassa voce, grattandosi la nuca.	As the curtain goes up, the populace enter the courtyard of the convent in little groups. They move about reluctantly and with awkward, indolent gait. The Boyars cross the stage with Prince Shouisky at their head. They approach the convent and exchange greetings with the crowd. As soon as the Boyars have entered the Convent, the peasants bestir themselves; some, especially the women, peep through the door of the Convent; others converse in low tones, scratching their heads.
Entra l'Ufficiale di Polizia. Il popolo si agglomera e resta immobile. Le donne, col viso appoggiato nel cavo della mano; gli uomini colle mani incrociate alla cintura, facendo girare svogliatamente il berretto fra le loro mani.	Enter the Police Official. The crowd closes together and remains motionless; the women, resting their cheeks on the palms of their hands; the men, with their hands crossed at their waists, twirling their caps awkwardly.
L'UFFIZIALE DELLA POLIZIA: (impugnando un grosso bastone, col quale minaccia il popolo). Ebben! Ma siete di stucco?! . . . Via! . . . in ginocchio! (Minacciando) Presto . . . andiam! . . . (Il popolo striscia i piedi sul selciato, senza però muoversi dal suo posto.) Oh . . . qual razza diabolica! (Minacciando)	POLICE OFFICIAL: (Brandishing a big stick, with which he menaces the crowd). Well! You are like stones! On your knees! (Menacingly) Be quick! (The people shuffle their feet on the cobblestones, but do not move from their position.) Oh! A race of devils! (Menacingly)
IL POPOLO: (in ginocchio, col viso rivolto alla porta del convento). Ma perchè tu ci abbandoni? Oh, padre! . . . Oh, di', a chi affidi il popol tuo? Buon padre! Senza padre or noi restiam, Orfani tristi! Ah, noi t'imploriam . . . O, padre. Deh, vedi il nostro pianto . . .	THE CROWD: (Kneeling, their faces towards the convent door). But why do you abandon us? Oh, Father! Say to whom have you entrusted your people? Good Father! We now remain without a Father! We are sad orphans! Ah, we implore you . . . Oh, Father! Deign to see us weeping . . .

Senti i singhiozzi!
(L'Uffiziale di Polizia, si dirige verso il convento.)
Grazia! grazia!
Grazia, buon padre!
O, padre . . .
Proteggici tu . . .
Ci dei vegliar!
Grazia!
(Voci isolate nel coro. Il popolo rimane in ginocchio.)

LE VOCI ISOLATE: Mitioukhe, di',
Mitioukhe,
Perchè que' lai?

MITIOUKHE: Al diavol, s'io lo so!

VOCI ISOLATE: Noi diam uno zar alla Russia!

QUALCHE DONNA: Non posso più! non ho più fiato!
Vicina . . . per piacer,
Vuoi tu darmi da ber?

SECONDA CONTADINA: Oh, non far la principessa!
Se ti piacque di vociar,
Puoi la lingua or tracannar!

GLI UOMINI: Ehi, laggiù . . . tacete voi! . . .

LE DONNE: Credete spaventar? . . .
È inutil comandar!

MITIOUKHE: Oh, le streghe! . . . non tacete?

LE DONNE (con asprezza). Ah, briccon, non c'insultar!
Incredul! va' pel tuo cammin!
Oh, sta zitto, malandrin!
(S'alzano.)
Oh, Signor, che gente infame!
Via . . . via . . . partiam di qui . . .
Ah, la sventura fuggiam! . . .
S'è possibil l'evitiam! . . .

GLI UOMINI (ridendo). Il nomignolo non vi garba?
È piccante in verità!
V'offende e v'irrita . . .
(Ridono)
Via di qui . . . su . . . vis . . . megère!
Ah, ah, ah, ah, ah, ah, ah!

L'UFFIZIALE DI POLIZIA: (si presenta sul limitare della porta del convento. Le donne ricadono in ginocchio e la folla resta immobile.) (Alla folla) Presto, su . . .
Strillate dunque! . . .
(Minacciando col bastone.) Badate . . .
La vostra schiena, dimenticò il baston? . . .
(Avanzandosi verso gli uomini.)
Guardatelo . . . è qui!

LE DONNE: (all' Uffiziale di Polizia). Mio caro Antonia,
Deh, calma il furor . . .

GLI UOMINI: Ma lasciaci fiatar,
Se vuoi farci gridar!

UOMINI E DONNE: Noi vogliam fiatar, o mostro!

Hear our sobs!
(The Police Official moves towards the convent.) Mercy! Mercy!
Mercy, good Father!
Oh, Father . . .
Protect us . . .
Watch over us! Mercy!
(Single voices in the Chorus. The crowd remain kneeling.)

SINGLE VOICES: Mitioukhe, say,
Mitioukhe!
Why these lamentations?

MITIOUKHE: The deuce I know!

SINGLE VOICES: We a Tzar give to Russia!

ONE OF THE WOMEN: I can endure no more!
My breath is gone!
Give me a drink, my neighbor!

SECOND PEASANT WOMAN: Oh! Do not play the princess!
You did delight in shouting,
Now chew your tongue!

THE MEN: Hey, down there . . . keep still!

THE WOMEN: You think to frighten us?
It is useless to command!

MITIOUKHE: Oh, the hags, will you be quiet?

THE WOMEN: (sharply). Oh, rascal! insult us not.
Cruel one, begone!
Keep silent, brigand!
(They arise.)
Oh, Lord, what knavish folks!
Away! away! Let us be gone from here,
Flee the misfortune!
Let's avoid it, if we can.

THE MEN: (laughing). You dislike the title?
Harshly it sounds, it is true!
Offends and vexes . . .
(They laugh)
Begone from here, witches!
Ah, ah, ah, ah, ah, ah, ah!

THE POLICE OFFICIAL: (appearing on the threshold of the convent door. The women again fall on their knees and the crowd remains motionless.)
(To the crowd)
Quick now . . .
Let's hear you shout!
(Threatening them with his stick.) Beware!
Have your backs forgotten the clout?
(Advancing towards the men)
Behold it . . . it is here!

THE WOMEN: (to the Police Official). My dear Anton, Please calm your rage . . .

THE MEN: But let us breathe,
If you would have us shout!

MEN AND WOMEN: We want to breathe, O monster!

L'UFFIZIALE DI POLIZIA: Orvia!
urlate e vi sgolate!

IL POPOLO: Sta ben!

L'UFFIZIALE DI POLIZIA: (minacciando col bastone).
Eh! . . .

IL POPOLO: (gridando a squarciagola). Ma perchè tu ci abbandoni, O, padre?! . . .
Oh, di', a chi affidi il popol tuo? . . . Buon padre, Noi qui t'imploriam! O, padre . . .
Deh, vedi il nostro pianto!
Senti i singhiozzi! . . .
Grazia! grazia, buon padre . . . O, padre! . . .
(Agli ultimi gridi del Popolo, il Segretario della Duma [Tchelkalov] appare sulla soglia della porta del convento.)

L'UFFIZIALE DI POLIZIA: (corre verso il popolo). Zitti . . . in piè! sentite ben! . . . (La folla si alza.)

TCHELKALOV: (avanzandosi verso il popolo. Si toglie il berretto e saluta). Moscoviti! Boris è inflessibil!
Il caldo appel dei boiardi, del patriarca,
Non bastò, e Boris non vuol il tron.
Grand'è il dolor del popol de la Russia,
Moscoviti!
Tutt'il Regno soffre e piange!
Pregat'il Signor,
l'implorate . . .
Ch'Egli accordi
Alla Russia il favor,
E che rischiari di saggezza
Lo spirito del gran Boris!

LE GUIDE DEI PELLEGRINI: (di fanciulli, fra le quinte). Grand'è tua gloria su la terra, Dio creator!
Gloria! gloria! al celeste poter!
Gloria ai santi eletti! Gloria a la Russia!

IL POPOLO: (mormorando). Gli eletti del Ciel, gli eletti del Ciel!

I PELLEGRINI: (nelle quinte).
L'angel di Dio lo proclamò!
Accorrete, o nubi nere
Verso la Santa Russia!
(I Pellegrini entrano in scena, appoggiandosi alle spalle delle loro guide. Hanno una lunga tonaca con cappuccio, e sono carichi di amuleti. S'appoggiano anche ad un lungo bastone. Il popolo si divide, al loro passaggio, e li saluta con devozione sincera.)

LE GUIDE ED I PELLEGRINI: (con voce sonora). Schiacciate il dragon, L'idra a dodici teste, coll'ali . . .
Bestia difforme del disordin, dell'iniquità!
Proclamatel nel gran regno,

THE POLICE OFFICIAL: Then, shout yourselves hoarse!

PEOPLE: All right!

THE POLICE OFFICIAL: (menacing with his stick). Hey!

THE CROWD: (shouting aloud). But why do you abandon us,
Oh, Father?
Say, to whom have you entrusted your people?
Good Father!
Here, we implore you.
Oh Father!
Deign to see us weeping . . .
Hear our sobs!
Mercy! Mercy! Good Father . . .
Oh, Father!
